Birta Central Library PILANI (Jaipur State) Clars No :- 822 -33 Boo't Not- S 32 N Accession Nto 2 31492

REQUEST

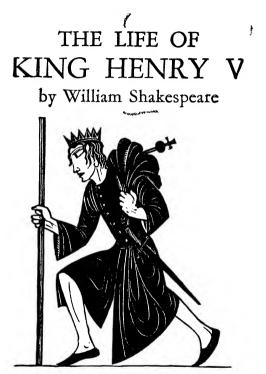

IT IS EARNESTLY DESIRED THAT THE BOOK BE HANDLED WITH CARE AND BE NOT MARKED, UNDERLINED OR DISFIGURED IN ANY OTHER WAY. OTHER WISE IT WILL HAVE TO BE REPLACED OR PAID FOR BY THE BORRO WER IN THE INTEREST OF HE LIBRARY.

LIBRARIAN.

THE NEW TEMPLE SHAKESPEARE

Edited by M. R. Ridley, M.A.

London: J. M. DENT & SONS LTD. New York: E. P. DUTTON & CO. INC.

All rights reserved Printed in Great Britain by Morrison & Gibb Ltd., London and Edinburgb and decorated by Eric Gill for J. M. Dent & Sons Ltd. Aldine House Bedford St. London Toronto Vanconver Melbourne Wellington First Published in this edition 1935 Reprinted 1943, 1947

THE PAPER AND BINDING OF THIS BOOK CONFORM TO THE AUTHORIZED ECONOMY STANDARDS

Editor's General Note

The Text. The editor has kept before him the aim of presenting to the modern reader the nearest possible approximation to what Shakespeare actually wrote. The text is therefore conservative, and is based on the earliest reliable printed text. But to avoid distraction (a) the spelling is modernised, and (b) a limited number of universally accepted emendations is admitted without comment. Where a Quarto text exists as well as the First Folio the passages which occur only in the Quarto are enclosed in square brackets [] and those which occur only in the Folio in brace brackets { }.

Scene Division. The rapid continuity of the Elizabethan curtainless production is lost by the 'traditional' scene divisions. Where there is an essential difference of place these scene divisions are retained. Where on the other hand the change of place is insignificant the scene division is indicated only by a space on the page. For ease of reference, however, the 'traditional' division is retained at the head of the page and in line numbering.

Notes. Passages on which there are notes are indicated by a † in the margin.

Punctuation adheres more closely than has been usual to the 'Elizabethan' punctuation of the early texts. If is often therefore more indicative of the way in which the lines were to be delivered than of their syntactical construction.

Glossaries are arranged on a somewhat novel principle, not alphabetically, but in the order in which the words or phrases occur. The editor is much indebted to Mr J. N. Bryson for his collaboration in the preparation of the glossaries.

.

Preface

The Text. The first record that we have of the play is the famous 'staying order' in the Stationers' Registers of 4th August 1600, in which this play appears, along with As You Like It. Every Man in His Humour, and Much Ado About Nothing, as ' to be staied.' But the only one of the four that was in fact stayed was As You Like It. Every Man in His Humour and Much Ado about Nothing appeared in print in creditable form by the end of 1601, and Henry V, in very imperfect form, in 1600. It looks indeed, from an entry of ten days later than the staying order, which transferred it to Thomas Pavyer as something 'formerlye printed,' as though Its publication must have preceded the staving order. At any rate some time in 1600 a Quarto appeared, with the following titlepage: THE / CRONICLE / History of Henry the fift, / With his battell fought at Agin Court in | France. Togither with Auntient | Pistoll. | As it hath bene sundry times playd by the Right honorable | the Lord Chamberlaine his servants. / LONDON / Printed by Thomas Creede, for Tho. Milling- / ton, and Iohn Busby. And are to be / sold at his house in Carter Lane, next / the Powle head, 1600. The problem of the relations of this Quarto text to that of the First Folio has been canvassed with much vigour and some heat. The one view, formerly a good deal more popular than it is now. is that Q represents a 'first sketch' of the play, which was later worked up into the version represented by F. The other view is that Q represents a version of the play produced by 'cutting' the full (F) text for acting purposes. The evidence so ably marshalled by P. A. Daniel in the introduction to the parallel texts published by the New Shakespeare Society in 1877 seems to me to prove incontrovertibly that the second view is the true one. For a full examination of details the reader must be referred to that introduction, but one instance may be given here which even in isolation puts the matter almost beyond dispute. The scene in Q which corresponds to III. vii. of F, though much shorter, and not so full of wishes for morning as that of F, still contains two specific remarks which imply that it is still night. But it concludes with the last line and a half of F's IV. ii. (the remaining sixty lines of which it omits altogether) which are quite inconsistent :

> Come, come away: The sum is high, and we wear out the day.

This can surely be nothing but the result of the cutter running two of the 'French Lords scenes' into one, and doing it very unskilfully.

The cutting was very drastic. All the choruses and the epilogue disappear, so do I. i., 11I. i., and IV. ii. (except for the incongruous tag mentioned above); many of the long verse speeches are curtailed, and most of the prose scenes are to a greater or less extent compressed (the French Lords suffering particularly heavily, and Macmorris and Jamy not being represented at all). In the upshot Q is less than half the length of F, and, partly by cutting and partly by redistribution of speeches, it dispenses with some ten characters, thus saving, even if one allows for free 'doubling,' at least four actors.

So far the situation seems clear enough. Q represents a version of the play after it had been cut for presentation, perhaps on a particular occasion, or by a particular and reduced company of actors, whereas F represents the play in its full, and in the main¹

¹ I put it in this way, because it is not at all impossible that a few passages (e.g. the Macmorris-Jamy passage) may have been later additions. in its original, form. But it is usually stated as an integral part of this view of the relations of the two texts, that Q does not so much represent a cut version but badly misrepresent a cut version; i.e. that it is a 'bad' quarto in the sense that the first Quartos of Hamlet and The Merry Wives of Windsor are 'bad' quartos. And this position seems to me much less secure, to have, indeed, almost no relation to the observable facts. One can, I think, say quite definitely that, whatever caused the difference, the peculiarities presented by O I of this play are not those presented by the first quartos of the other two. The methods by which the copy for a pirated edition of a play was secured are a matter of dispute. but there is a rough agreement that some process of either stenography or memorisation in the theatre was supplemented by the contributions of some actor. In Hamlet the unhappy agent in the theatre was hopelessly incompetent, and as a result, apart from the contributions of the actor who doubled Marcellus and Voltemand. much of the play is desperately garbled; in The Merry Wives the 'reporter' was rather better, and the actor who played the host, having a larger part, was a much more useful aid; but even so the degree of approximation to the Folio text varies very greatly in different portions of the play. But this is much less true of Henry V. The point is a somewhat difficult one to argue, since nowhere is it clearer than in the discussion of this play that by selecting one's evidence with care one may make a creditable attempt to prove anything; but the facts appear to me to be these. The prose scenes are uniformly further from the Folio than the verse scenes. Apart from cuts they exhibit a good deal of compression, and very frequently considerable change in the order of particular phrases. Pistol, as one would rather expect from the title-page, is moderately complete, and so is Gower. Fluellen is adequate, though somewhat shortened. These scenes, taken in isolation, might well be taken to support the 'first sketch' view. The verse scenes, on the other hand, are, apart again from omissions. as a rule very close to the Folio. To take two instances. First a comparatively brief scene, III, iii. In F this has 58 lines, in O 19 (only 18 as printed, owing to mislineation). For the first 10 lines O follows F with the following variants: parley we'll for parle we will (1, 2), we for I (1, 8), be for lie (1, 9), and the unmetrical are for shall be (1. 10). O then cuts wholesale the long drawn rhetoric of ll. 11-41 and comes at once to business with the conclusion of Henry's speech, given identically as in F, and with the Governor's reply, which has the following divergences : succour for succours (1. 45), word for that (1. 46), dread for great (1. 47), defensive now for defensible. Q then omits altogether the last 8 lines of the scene in F. Secondly, a longer scene, II. ii. F has 193 lines, O 112. O dispenses with one actor altogether (Westmoreland) and replaces Bedford by Gloucester. O's first line is hypermetric, the second is identical. O then omits s lines, and in the next 4 (given to a different speaker) reads Ay for Nay, cloyed and graced with princely for dull'd and cloy'd with gracious, and misprints to for so. It then inserts the comment, absent in F. O the Lord of Masham. Henry's opening speech is identical in the two texts apart from two unimportant verbal differences, and the omission by O of the unmetrical kind, but ll. 16-18 of F are summarised in Q in one straightforward and metrical line. Scroop's rejoinder is identical. O then omits the whole of Henry's next 5 lines (20-24), the last two and a half lines of the next speech (Cambridge's), and the last one and a half of Grey's, though it completes the imperfect line of the latter. In the next 46 lines (down to 1. 78) there are the following differences : Q reads band for bands (33), omits quittance of and reads reward for desert and cause for weight (34, 35), shine for toil and service for services (36, 37), omits We judge no less (39), reads the heat for excess (42), and makes perhaps better sense but certainly worse metre of 45, 46, omits the metrically necessary yet (48) and the unnecessary Sir (49), reads his for much (51), transposes love and care in 52, reads and the rest for Scroop and Grey and loves focare (58), reads state for person (59) and omits And (60), reads me for I (62, 65), sovereign for liege (64), Lord for royal sovereign (65); there are minor differences in the address to the lords, My lord of Westmoreland disappears, two and a half lines (72-74) are cut, and so are the words cowarded and in 75.

The treatment of Henry's long speech (79-144) is interesting. The first five lines maintain the rhythm, but have verbal changes. on the whole for the worse, and one misprint (quit for quick). Then, after identity in two lines, comes a rather bald paraphrase of the next three. 89-99 are almost identical, the chief difference being secrets of my heart for bottom of my soul. The next two and a half lines are compressed, and the next two and a half have doth show for stands off (103) and from for and (rather for the better) in 104. There is then a complete cut to the middle of 142, when the speech is concluded with the identical two and a half lines of F. Exeter's arrest and Scroop's reply are identical, except for the omission of Scroop (148) and the reading of majesty for highness in 153. Cambridge and Grey are then omitted altogether. The first four lines of Henry's speech are identical, except that Q unmetrically adds and fixed after proclaimed; the next three lines are cut. From 173 to 181 Q reads redress for revenge, restores the metrically needed bave in 176 which F omits, and in the same line reads our for ber. reads creatures for wretches and deeds amiss for dear offences. In the last twelve lines of the scene Q cuts 184 and 187-91, reads successively for like glorious, compresses 185 and gives the other four lines identically. I have gone into somewhat minute detail over this scene in an attempt to give a fair picture of the relation of the texts in the verse scenes. The kind of proportion here shown between identity, omission, correspondence with certain verbal differences, and more or less compressed or garbled paraphrase, is about maintained in the other main verse scenes of the play. In some the identity is more extensive, in some, notably the French Lords scenes, it is less. In the prose scenes there is a good deal of cutting, rather more paraphrase, and a great deal more of some often very odd change of order of phrases; but even here not very much bad paraphrase. The point which I am trying to make is that while it would be hard to find in this play any passage at once as long and as 'good' as the Marcellus-Voltemand portions of Q I of Hamlet, there is on the other hand infinitely less bad garbling and dislocation than one finds there, or in the worse parts of Q of The Merry Wives. One may summarise the point by saying that while the acting of Q 1 of Hamlet or even of The Merry Wives seems to be the idlest waste of time, Q I of Henry V could perfectly well be acted and would give the essence of the play, and much of the greatest verse of it. And if even with the thoroughly bad O I of Hamlet one has to keep one's eve on it in preparing a text. a fortiori, it seems to me that one cannot afford to neglect O I of this play. Even the most devoted adherents of the Folio have to admit the aid of the despised Quarto in at least five places, in II. i. 23 where F reads tired name, in II. iv. 107 where F reads privy maidens. in IV. i. 65 where F reads fewer, in IV. v. 12 where F omits bonour, and in line 16 of the same scene where F reads Whilst a base slave. And if Q is to be taken as right here, merely because F is hopeless, it is not surely logical to dismiss the possibility that O is right in other places even where F is tolerable. I have therefore done two things with the text. In the first place I have indicated by brackets the operations of the cutter; but it will be clear from what has been said above that, since, though it is possible to indicate the cuts, it is not possible to indicate either the transpositions of order, or the compressions, or the verbal differences of O, to read this text with the bracketed portions omitted is not to read O, but a slightly expanded and somewhat regularised O. In the second place I have admitted considerably more readings from O than is usual: most, but not all, of these are indicated in the notes. I have to admit that this is a departure from the principles adhered to in the production of the texts of this edition. The text here presented is a conflation, and, what is worse, a conflation dependent to some extent on personal taste. But the () text seems to me so far removed on the one hand from the kind of 'badness' which would render it negligible and on the other from the 'goodness' which would render it the basis for a text, that I am reluctantly driven to a compromise.

Date of Composition. The terminus ad quem is determinable with unusual accuracy, since there can be no reasonable doubt that the expected victorious return of Essex from his Irish expedition is alluded to in the chorus before Act V. And as Essex did not start till March 1599 and returned somewhat ignominiously in September, we can fix July or August as the latest possible date for the play. How much earlier we can put it depends upon whether we consider that this chorus might be a later topical insertion, and upon what importance we attach to Meres' silence in Palladis Tamia. We clearly cannot put it much earlier, since it follows 2 Henry IV.

Sources. The play is founded upon, and draws liberally from, Holinshed's Chronicles. Any reader who is interested will find all the material clearly laid out for this, as for the other plays for which Shakespeare drew on Holinshed, in Mr Boswell-Stone's invaluable Shakespeare's Holinshed. Occasionally also, notably in the tennisball episode and in the wooing scene, Shakespeare clearly drew on the earlier play The Famous Victories of Henry the Fifth.

Duration of Action. The historical time represented is six years, from 1414 to 1420. The dramatic time scheme is of no great importance. Daniel divides into nine days with intervals.

Criticism. Hazlitt writes with a characteristic anti-monarchic and anti-ecclesiastical bias:

"Henry V is a very favourite monarch with the English nation. and he appears to have been also a favourite with Shakespear. who labours hard to apologise for the actions of the king, by showing us the character of the man, as ' the king of good fellows,' He scarcely deserves this honour. He was fond of war and low company :- we know little else of him. He was careless, dissolute, and ambitious :--- idle, or doing mischief. In private, he seemed to have no idea of the common decencies of life, which he subjected to a kind of regal licence; in public affairs, he seemed to have no idea of any rule of right or wrong, but brute force, glossed over with a little religious hypocrisy and archiepiscopal advice. His principles did not change with his situation and professions. His adventure at Gadshill was a prelude to the affair of Agincourt. only a bloodless one; Falstaff was a puny prompter of violence and outrage, compared with the pious and politic Archbishop of Canterbury, who gave the King carte blanche, in a genealogical tree of his family, to rob and murder in circles of latitude and longitude abroad—to save the possessions of the Church at home." And so on ad lib.

Hazlitt no doubt exaggerates, but in fact Henry V is not, except perhaps superficially, one of Shakespeare's more attractive char-The play as a whole is a spirited and stirring piece of drumacters. beating and flag-waving, full of national pride and of rhetoric suitable for recitation. And its central figure is not, so far as one can judge, of a type which much interested Shakespeare. He is a thoroughly 'successful' man. He is undoubtedly gallant : he is a first-rate orator; he has an effective, and possibly genuine, bonhomie, which is in better taste with his soldiers than with the Princess of France. As a man he can be kindly; as a king and as a general he is merciless. He orders the killing of the prisoners and the execution of the traitors with as cool and careless an indifference as he broke Falstaff's heart. All three actions were prudent, perhaps inevitable. He was as hard and politic as his hard and politic father; but he understood better the uses of camouflage.

THE LIFE OF KING HENRY V

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ

KING HENRY the Fifth. Duke of Gloucester, brothers to the King. DUKE OF EXETER, uncle to the King. DUKE OF YORK, cousin to the King. EARLS OF SALISBURY, WESTMORELAND, and WARWICK. ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY. BISHOP OF ELY. EARL OF CAMBRIDGE. LORD SCROOP. SIR THOMAS GREY. SIR THOMAS ERPINGHAM, GOWER, FLUELLEN, MACMORRIS. IAMY, officers in King Henry's army. BATES, COURT, WILLIAMS, soldiers in the same. PISTOL, NYM, BARDOLPH. A Herald. Bov. CHARLES the Sixth. King of France. Lewis, the Dauphin. DUKES OF BURGUNDY, ORLEANS, and BOURBON. The Constable of France. RAMBURES and GRANDPRÉ. French Lords. Governor of Harfleur. MONTION, a French Herald. Ambassadors to the King of England. ISABEL, Queen of France. KATHERINE, daughter to Charles and Isabel. ALICE, a lady attending on her. Hostess of a tavern in Eastcheap, formerly Mistress Ouickly, and now married to Pistol. Lords, Ladies, Officers, Soldiers, Citizens, Messengers, and Attendants. Chorus. SCENE: England: afterwards France.

THE LIFE OF KING HENRY V

{Prologue

Enter Chorus

Chor.O for a Muse of fire, that would ascend The brightest heaven of invention : A kingdom for a stage, princes to act. And monarchs to behold the swelling scene ! Then should the warlike Harry, like himself, Assume the port of Mars, and at his heels (Leash'd in like hounds) should famine, sword, and fire Crouch for employment. But pardon, gentles all, The flat unraised spirits, that hath dared, On this unworthy scaffold, to bring forth 10 So great an object. Can this cockpit hold The vasty fields of France? or may we cram Within this wooden O the very casques That did affright the air at Agincourt? O, pardon ! since a crooked figure may Attest in little place a million, And let us, ciphers to this great accompt,

On your imaginary forces work. Suppose within the girdle of these walls Are now confin'd two mighty monarchies, 20 Whose high, upreared, and abutting fronts The perilous narrow ocean parts asunder. Piece out our imperfections with your thoughts : Into a thousand parts divide one man. And make imaginary puissance. Think, when we talk of horses, that you see them. Printing their proud hoofs i' the receiving earth ; For 'tis your thoughts that now must deck our kings. Carry them here and there; jumping o'er times: Turning the accomplishment of many years 30 Into an hour-glass : for the which supply, Admit me Chorus to this history : Who, prologue-like, your humble patience pray, Gently to hear, kindly to judge our play. Exit}

Act First

{SCENE I

London. An ante-chamber in the King's palace

Enter the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Bishop of Ely

- Arc. My lord, I'll tell you, that self bill is urg'd,
 Which in the eleventh year of the last king's reign
 Was like, and had indeed against us pass'd,
 But that the scambling and unquiet time
 Did push it out of farther question.
- Ely. But how, my lord, shall we resist it now? Arc. It must be thought on : if it pass against us,
 - We lose the better half of our possession : For all the temporal lands, which men devout By testament have given to the church, IO Would they strip from us ; being valued thus, As much as would maintain, to the king's honour, Full fifteen earls, and fifteen hundred knights, Six thousand and two hundred good esquires ; And, to relief of lazars, and weak age, Of indigent faint souls, past corporal toil, A hundred almshouses, right well supplied ;

And to the coffers of the king beside,

A thousand pounds by the year. Thus runs the bill. Ely. This would drink deep. 'Twould drink the cup and all. 20 Arc Ely. But what prevention ? Arc. The king is full of grace, and fair regard. Ely. And a true lover of the holy church. Arc. The courses of his youth promis'd it not. The breath no sooner left his father's body. But that his wildness, mortified in him, Seem'd to die too; yea, at that very moment, Consideration like an angel came, And whipp'd the offending Adam out of him : Leaving his body as a paradise, 30 To envelope and contain celestial spirits. Never was such a sudden scholar made : Never came reformation in a flood, With such a heady currance scouring faults : Nor never Hydra-headed wilfulness So soon did lose his seat-and all at once-As in this king. We are blessed in the change. Ely. Arc. Hear him but reason in divinity; And all-admiring, with an inward wish

You would desire the king were made a prelate : 40

Act I Sc. i

60

Hear him debate of commonwealth affairs : You would say, it hath been all in all his study: List his discourse of war; and you shall hear A fearful battle render'd you in music. Turn him to any cause of policy. The Gordian knot of it he will unloose, Familiar as his garter : that, when he speaks, The air, a charter'd libertine, is still, And the mute wonder lurketh in men's ears, To steal his sweet and honey'd sentences : 50 So that the art and practic part of life Must be the mistress to this theoric : Which is a wonder how his grace should glean it, Since his addiction was to courses vain. His companies unletter'd, rude, and shallow, His hours fill'd up with riots, banquets, sports, And never noted in him any study, Any retirement, any sequestration, From open haunts and popularity.

Ely. The strawberry grows underneath the nettle, And wholesome berries thrive and ripen best Neighbour'd by fruit of baser quality : And so the prince obscur'd his contemplation Under the veil of wildness, which, no doubt, Grew like the summer grass, fastest by night,

5

Unseen, yet crescive in his faculty. Are. It must be so : for miracles are ceas'd : And therefore we must needs admit the means How things are perfected. But, my good lord ; Elv. How now for mitigation of this bill 70 Urg'd by the commons? Doth his majesty Incline to it. or no? He seems indifferent : Arc. Or rather swaying more upon our part Than cherishing the exhibiters against us ; For I have made an offer to his majesty. Upon our spiritual convocation And in regard of causes now in hand, Which I have open'd to his grace at large, As touching France, to give a greater sum Than ever at one time the clergy vet 80 Did to his predecessors part withal. Elv. How did this offer seem receiv'd, my lord? Arc. With good acceptance of his majesty; Save that there was not time enough to hear, As I perceiv'd his grace would fain have done. The severals and unhidden passages Of his true titles to some certain dukedoms. And generally to the crown and seat of France.

Deriv'd from Edward, his great-grandfather.
Ely. What was the impediment that broke this off?
90
Arc. The French ambassador upon that instant Crav'd audience; and the hour I think is come To give him hearing: is it four o'clock?
Ely. It is.
Arc. Then go we in, to know his embassy; Which I could with a ready guess declare, Before the Frenchman speak a word of it.
Ely. I'll wait upon you, and I long to hear it. Exeant}

SCENE II

The same. The Presence chamber

Enter King Henry, Gloucester, Bedford, Exeter, Warwick, Westmoreland, and Attendants

{Hen.Where is my gracious Lord of Canterbury? $E_{xe.Not}$ here in presence.

Hen. Send for him, good uncle.}
Wes.Shall we call in the ambassador, my liege ?
Hen. Not yet, my cousin : we would be resolv'd, Before we hear him, of some things of weight That task our thoughts, concerning us and France. Enter the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Bishop of Ely Arc. God and his angels guard your sacred throne.

And make you long become it ! Hen. Sure, we thank you. My learned lord, we pray you to proceed {And justly and religiously unfold} 10 Why the law Salique, that they have in France, Or should or should not bar us in our claim : And God forbid, my wise and learned lord, That you should fashion, wrest, or bow your reading, {Or nicely charge your understanding soul, With opening titles miscreate, whose right Suits not in native colours with the truth ;} For God doth know, how many now in health Shall drop their blood, in approbation Of what your reverence shall incite us to. 20 Therefore take heed how you impawn our person, How you awake the sleeping sword of war: We charge you in the name of God take heed ; {For never two such kingdoms did contend Without much fall of blood, whose guiltless drops Are every one a woe, a sore complaint, 'Gainst him whose wrongs gives edge unto the swords. That makes such waste in brief mortality.} Under this conjuration, speak, my lord ; For we will hear, note, and believe in heart, 30

That what you speak is {in your conscience} wash'd, As pure as sin with baptism.

Arc. Then hear me, gracious sovereign, and you peers, That owe your lives, your faith, and services To this imperial throne. There is no bar To make against your highness' claim to France. But this, which they produce from Pharamond, {' In terram Salicam mulieres ne succedant : '} 'No woman shall succeed in Salique land :' Which Salique land the French unjustly gloze 40 To be the realm of France, and Pharamond The founder of this law, and female bar. Yet their own authors faithfully affirm That the land Salique lies in Germany. Between the floods of Sala and of Elve : Where Charles the Great, having subdued the Saxons. There left behind and settled certain French : Who, holding in disdain the German women For some dishonest manners of their life. Establish'd there this law : to wit, no female 50 Should be inheritrix in Salique land : Which Salique (as I said) 'twixt Elve and Sala, Is at this day in Germany, call'd Meisen. Then doth it well appear, the Salique law Was not devised for the realm of France :

Nor did the French possess the Salique land. Until four hundred one and twenty years After defunction of King Pharamond, Idly suppos'd the founder of this law, {Who died within the year of our redemption 60 Four hundred twenty-six : and Charles the Great Subdued the Saxons, and did seat the French Beyond the river Sala, in the year Eight hundred five. Besides, their writers say, King Pepin, which deposed Childeric, Did, as heir general, being descended Of Blithild, which was daughter to King Clothair, Make claim and title to the crown of France.} Hugh Capet also, who usurp'd the crown Of Charles the duke of Lorraine, sole heir male 70 Of the true line and stock of Charles the Great. To line his title with some shows of truth. t Though in pure truth it was corrupt and naught. Convey'd himself as heir to the Lady Lingare, {Daughter to Charlemain, who was the son To Lewis the emperor, and Lewis the son Of Charles the Great : also King Lewis the tenth, Who was sole heir to the usurper Capet. Could not keep quiet in his conscience, Wearing the crown of France, till satisfied 80

That fair Queen Isabel, his grandmother, Was lineal of the Lady Ermengare, } Daughter to Charles the foresaid duke of Lorraine : By the which marriage the line of Charles the Great Was re-united to the crown of France.} So that, as clear as is the summer's sun, King Pepin's title, and Hugh Capet's claim, King Lewis his satisfaction, all appear t To hold in right and title of the female : So do the kings of France unto this day. 90 Howbeit, they would hold up this Salique law, To bar your highness claiming from the female, And rather choose to hide them in a net Than amply to unbar their crooked titles, t Usurp'd from you and your progenitors. Hen. May I with right and conscience make this claim ? Arc. The sin upon my head, dread sovereign l For in the book of Numbers is it writ, When the son dies, let the inheritance Descend unto the daughter. Gracious lord, 100 Stand for your own, unwind your bloody flag, {Look back into your mighty ancestors :} Go, my dread lord, to your great-grandsire's tomb, + From whom you claim ; {invoke his warlike spirit.} And your great-uncle's, Edward the Black Prince,

Who on the French ground play'd a tragedy, Making defeat on the full power of France. Whiles his most mighty father on a hill Stood smiling, to behold his lion's whelp Forage in blood of French nobility. 110 O noble English, that could entertain, With half their forces, the full pride of France, And let another half stand laughing by. All out of work, and cold for action ! (Ely.Awake remembrance of these valiant dead, And with your puissant arm renew their feats : You are their heir, you sit upon their throne ; The blood and courage that renowned them Runs in your veins; and my thrice-puissant liege Is in the very May-morn of his youth, 120 Ripe for exploits and mighty enterprises. Exe. Your brother kings and monarchs of the earth Do all expect that you should rouse yourself, As did the former lions of your blood. Wes. They know your grace hath cause, and means, and might; So hath your highness; never king of England Had nobles richer, and more loyal subjects, Whose hearts have left their bodies here in England, And lie pavilion'd in the fields of France.

Arc. O let their bodies follow my dear liege,	130
With bloods and sword and fire, to win your right;
In aid whereof, we of the spiritualty
Will raise your highness such a mighty sum
As never did the clergy at one time
Bring in to any of your ancestors.}
Hen. We must not only arm to invade the French,
But lay down our proportions to defend Against the Scot, who will make road upon us,
With all advantages.
Arc. They of those marches, gracious sovereign,	140
Shall be a wall sufficient to defend	•
Your England from the pilfering borderers.
Hen. We do not mean the coursing sneakers only,
But fear the main intendment of the Scot,
{Who hath been still a giddy neighbour to us ;}
For you shall read, never my great-grandfather	†
Unmask'd his power for France,
But that the Scot, on his unfurnish'd kingdom,
Came pouring like the tide into a breach,
{With ample and brim fulness of his force,	150
Galling the gleaned land with hot assays,
Girding with grievous siege castles and towns ;}
That England, being empty of defence,
Hath shook and trembled at the bruit hereof.	†

Arc. She hath been then more fear'd than harm'd, my liege : For hear her but exampled by herself. When all her chivalry hath been in France. And she a mourning widow of her nobles. She hath herself not only well defended. But taken and impounded as a stray 160 The King of Scots ; whom she did send to France. {To fill King Edward's fame with prisoner kings.} And make her chronicle as rich with praise, As is the ooze and bottom of the sea With sunken wreck, and sumless treasuries. t Wes. But there 's a saying very old and true. ' If that you will France win, Then with Scotland first begin : ' For once the eagle (England) being in prev. To her unguarded nest the weasel (Scot) 170 {Comes sneaking, and so} sucks her {princely} eggs, Playing the mouse in absence of the cat, To spoil and havoc more than she can eat. t Exe. It follows then, the cat must stay at home. Yet that is but a crush'd necessity, Since we have {locks to safeguard necessaries. And pretty } traps to catch the petty thieves. While that the armed hand doth fight abroad, The advised head defends itself at home ;

For government, though high, and low, and lower. 180 Put into parts, doth keep in one consent, t Congreeing in a full and natural close, Like music.

[True :] Therefore doth heaven divide Arc. The state of man in divers functions. {Setting endeavour in continual motion;} To which is fixed, as an aim or butt, Obedience : for so work the honey-bees. Creatures that by a rule in nature teach The act of order to a peopled kingdom. They have a king, and officers of sorts, 190 Where some like magistrates correct at home, Others, like merchants, venture trade abroad Others, like soldiers, armed in their stings, Make boot upon the summer's velvet buds; Which pillage they with merry march bring home To the tent-royal of their emperor; Who, busied in his majesty, surveys The singing masons building roofs of gold, The civil citizens kneading up the honey ; {The poor mechanic porters crowding in 200 Their heavy burdens at his narrow gate ;} The sad-eyed justice with his surly hum, Delivering o'er to executors pale 20 C

The lazy vawning drone. I this infer. That many things, having full reference To one consent, may work contrariously, As many arrows loosed several ways t Come to one mark ; as many ways meet in one town ; As many fresh streams meet in one salt sea ; As many lines close in the dial's centre ; 210 So may a thousand actions, once afoot, End in one purpose, and be all well borne Without defeat. Therefore to France, my liege. Divide your happy England into four, Whereof, take you one quarter into France, And you withal shall make all Gallia shake. If we, with thrice such powers left at home, Cannot defend our own doors from the dog. Let us be worried, and our nation lose The name of hardiness and policy. 220 Hen. Call in the messengers sent from the Dauphin.

Hen. Call in the messengers sent from the Dauphin. Execut some Attendants

Now are we well resolv'd, and, by God's help, And yours, the noble sinews of our power, France being ours, we 'll bend it to our awe, Or break it all to pieces. {Or there we 'll sit, (Ruling in large and ample empery O'er France and all her (almost) kingly dukedoms)

Or lay these bones in an unworthy urn, Tombless, with no remembrance over them : } Either our history shall with full mouth 230 Speak freely of our acts, or else our grave, Like Turkish mute, shall have a tongueless mouth, Not worshipp'd with a waxen epitaph. t Enter Ambassadors of France Now are we well prepar'd to know the pleasure Of our fair cousin Dauphin; for we hear Your greeting is from him, {not from the king.} Am. May 't please your majesty to give us leave Freely to render what we have in charge ; Or shall we sparingly show you far off The Dauphin's meaning, and our embassy? 240 Hen. We are no tyrant, but a Christian king, Unto whose grace our passion is as subject As are our wretches fetter'd in our prisons. Therefore with frank and with uncurbed plainness Tell us the Dauphin's mind. Am. Thus then in few . Your highness, lately sending into France, Did claim some certain dukedoms, in the right Of your great predecessor, King Edward the third. In answer of which claim, the prince our master Says {that you savour too much of your youth, 250

And bids you be advis'd }: there 's nought in France That can be with a nimble galliard won ; You cannot revel into dukedoms there. He therefore sends you, meeter for your study, This tun of treasure : and, in lieu of this, Desires you let the dukedoms that you claim Hear no more of you. This the Dauphin speaks. 'en. What treasure, uncle ? Tennis-balls, my liege. X8. en. We are glad the Dauphin is so pleasant with us, His present, and your pains, we thank you for : 260 When we have match'd our rackets to these balls. We will, in France, by God's grace, play a set Shall strike his father's crown into the hazard. + Tell him, he hath made a match with such a wrangler That all the courts of France will be disturb'd With chases. And we understand him well. How he comes o'er us with our wilder days. Not measuring what use we made of them. We never valued this poor seat of England. And therefore, {living hence, } did give ourself 270 To barbarous license : as 'tis ever common That men are merriest when they are from home. But tell the Dauphin we will keep our state, Be like a king, and show our sail of greatness,

When we do rouse us in our throne of France : For this have we laid by our majesty. And plodded like a man for working-days : But we will rise there with so full a glory That we will dazzle all the eyes of France, Yea, strike the Dauphin blind to look on us, 280 And tell the pleasant prince, this mock of his Hath turn'd his balls to gun-stones, and his soul Shall stand sore charged, for the wasteful vengeance That shall fly with them : for many a thousand widows Shall this his mock mock out of their dear husbands: Mock mothers from their sons, mock castles down : Ay some are yet ungotten and unborn That shall have cause to curse the Dauphin's scorn. But this lies all within the will of God. To whom we do appeal, and in whose name 290 Tell you the Dauphin, we are coming on, To venge us as we may, and to put forth Our rightful hand in a well-hallow'd cause. So get you hence in peace; and tell the Dauphin His jest will savour but of shallow wit, When thousands weep more than did laugh at it. Convey them with safe conduct. Fare you well. Exernt Ambassadors

Exe. This was a merry message.

Hen. We hope to make the sender blush at it.
{Therefore, my lords, omit no happy hour, 300
That may give furtherance to our expedition;
For we have now no thought in us but France,
Save those to God, that run before our business.}
Therefore let our proportions for these wars
Be soon collected, {and all things thought upon
That may with reasonable swiftness add
More feathers to our wings;} for, God before,
We 'll check this Dauphin at his father's door.
Therefore let every man now task his thought,
That this fair action may on foot be brought. Exeunt. Flourisb

Act Second

{PROLOGUE

Enter Chorus

bor.Now all the youth of England are on fire, And silken dalliance in the wardrobe lies : Now thrive the armorers, and honour's thought Reigns solely in the breast of every man :

They sell the pasture now, to buy the horse, Following the mirror of all Christian kings. With winged heels, as English Mercuries, For now sits Expectation in the air. And hides a sword, from hilts unto the point, With crowns imperial, crowns and coronets, 10 Promised to Harry, and his followers. The French, advis'd by good intelligence Of this most dreadful preparation, Shake in their fear, and with pale policy Seek to divert the English purposes. O England | model to thy inward greatness, Like little body with a mighty heart : What mightst thou do, that honour would thee do. Were all thy children kind and natural ! But see, thy fault France hath in thee found out, 20 A nest of hollow bosoms, which he fills With treacherous crowns and three corrupted men: One, Richard Earl of Cambridge, and the second Henry Lord Scroop of Masham, and the third Sir Thomas Grey, knight, of Northumberland, Have, for the gilt of France (O guilt indeed I) Confirm'd conspiracy with fearful France, And by their hands this grace of kings must die, If hell and treason hold their promises,

Ere he take ship for France, and in Southampton. 20 Linger your patience on, and we'll digest The abuse of distance ; force a play : The sum is paid, the traitors are agreed, The king is set from London, and the scene Is now transported, gentles, to Southampton, There is the playhouse now, there must you sit, And thence to France shall we convey you safe. And bring you back; charming the narrow seas To give you gentle pass ; for, if we may, We'll not offend one stomach with our play. 40 But, till the king come forth, and not till then, Unto Southampton do we shift our scene. Exit}

SCENE I

London. A street

Enter Corporal Nym and Lieutenant Bardolph

Bar. Well met, Corporal Nym.

Nym.Good morrow, Lieutenant Bardolph.

Bar. What, are Ancient Pistol and you friends yet?

Nym.For my part, I care not: {I say little; but when time shall serve, there shall be smiles,} but that shall be as it may. I dare not fight, but I will wink and hold out mine iron: it is a simple one, but what though? it will toast cheese, and it will endure cold, as another man's sword will: and there's the † humour of it.

IC.

t

- Bar. I will bestow a breakfast to make you friends, {and we'll be all three sworn brothers to France : let't be so, good Corporal Nym.}
- Nym.Faith, I will live so long as I may, that 's the certain of it; and when I cannot live any longer, I will do as I may: that is my rest, that is the rendezvous of it.
- Bar. It is certain, corporal, that he is married to Nell Quickly, and certainly she did you wrong for you were troth-plight to her.
- Nym.I cannot tell: things must be as they may: men 20 may sleep, and they may have their throats about them at that time, and some say, knives have edges. It must be as it may, though patience be a tired mare, yet she will plod; {there must be conclusions,} well, I cannot tell.

Enter Pistol and Mistress Quickly

- Bar. Here comes ancient Pistol and his wife: good corporal, be patient here. How now, mine host Pistol?
- Pis. Base tike, call'st thou me host? Now by this hand I swear I scorn the title;

Nor shall my Nell keep lodgers.

M.Q.No, by my troth, not long; for we cannot lodge and board a dozen or fourteen gentlewomen that live honestly by the prick of their needles, but it will be thought we keep a bawdy house straight. (Nym and Pistol draw.) O well a day, Lady, if he be not hewn now ! we shall see wilful adultery and murder committed. 31

40

{Bar.Good lieutenant, good corporal, offer nothing here.} Nym.Pish !

- Pis. Pish for thee, Iceland dog 1 thou prick-car'd cur of Iceland 1
- M.Q.Good Corporal Nym, show thy valour, and put up your sword.
- Nym.Will you shog off? I would have you solus.
- Pis. 'Solus,' egregious dog? {O viper vile !} That 'solus' {in thy most mervailous face; The 'solus' in thy teeth, and} in thy throat, And in thy {hateful} lungs, yea, in thy maw, perdy,
 - And, which is worse, within thy nasty mouth 1 50 I do retort that ' solus' in thy bowels.

For I can take, and Pistol's cock is up,

And flashing fire will follow.

Nym.I am not Barbason, you cannot conjure me : I have † an humour to knock you indifferently well. If you grow foul with me, Pistol, I will scour you with my rapier, as I may, in fair terms. If you would walk off, I would prick your guts a little, in good terms, as I may, and that 's the humour of it.

60

70

t

- Pis. O braggart vile, and damned furious wight, The grave doth gape, and doting, death is near, Therefore exhale. They draw
- Bar. Hear me, hear me what I say: he that strikes the first stroke, I'll run him up to the hilts, as I am a soldier. Draws
- Pis. An oath of mickle might, and fury shall abate. {Give me thy fist, thy fore-foot to me give : Thy spirits are most tall.}
- Nym.I will cut thy throat one time or other in fair terms, that is the humour of it.
- Pis. Couple a gorge, that is the word. I thee defy again.O hound of Crete, think'st thou my spouse to get ?No, to {the spital go.

And from} the powdering-tub of infamy Fetch forth the lazar kite of Cressid's kind. Doll Tearsheet she by name, and her espouse : I have, and I will hold, the quondam Quickly For the only she ; and—pauca, there 's enough {too ; Go to.}

Enter the Boy

Boy. Mine host Pistol, you must come to my master, and 80 you hostess: {he is very sick, and would to bed.} Good Bardolph, put thy nose between the sheets, and do the office of a warming-pan. {Faith, he's very ill.}

{Bar.Away, you rogue !}

- M.Q.By my troth, he'll yield the crow a pudding one of these days: {the king has kill'd his heart.} Good husband, come home presently. Exeunt M.Q. and boy
- Bar. Come, shall I make you two friends? We must to France together: why the devil should we keep 90 knives to cut one another's throats?

{Pis.Let floods o'erswell, and fiends for food howl on !}

- Nym.You'll pay me the eight shillings I won of you at betting?
- Pis. Base is the slave that pays.
- Nym. That now I will have : that 's the humour of it.
- Pis. As manhood shall compound: {push home.} They draw
- Bar. By this sword, he that makes the first thrust, I'll kill him; by this sword, I will.
- Pis. Sword is an oath, and oaths must have their course. 100
- Bar. Corporal Nym, an thou wilt be friends, be friends, an thou wilt not, why, then, be enemies with me too. {Prithee, put up.}

- Nym.I shall have my eight shillings I won of you at betting?
- Pis. A noble shalt thou have, and present pay, And liquor likewise will 1 give to thee. And friendship shall combine, and brotherhood.
 I'll live by Nym, and Nym shall live by me, Is not this just? for I shall sutler be Unto the camp, and profits will accrue. {Give me thy hand.}
- Nym.I shall have my noble?
- Pis. In cash, most justly paid.
- Nym.Well, then, that 's the humour of 't.

Re-enter Mistress Quickly

- M.Q.As ever you come of women, come in quickly to Sir John. Ah, poor heart, he is so shak'd of a burning tashan contigian fever, that it is most † lamentable to behold. {Sweet men, come to him.
- Nym. The king hath run bad humours on the knight, 120 that's the even of it.
- Pis. Nym, thou hast spoke the right, His heart is fracted and corroborate.
- Nym. The king is a good king, but it must be as it may; he passes some humours, and careers.}
- Pis. Let us condole the knight, for, lambkins, we will live.

SCENE II

Southampton. A council-chamber

Enter Exeter, Bedford, and Westmoreland

Bed. 'Fore God, his grace is bold to trust these traitors. Exe. They shall be apprehended by and by. {Wes. How smooth and even they do bear themselves. As if allegiance in their bosoms sat. Crowned with faith, and constant lovalty. Bed. The king hath note of all that they intend. By interception, which they dream not of.} Exe. Nay, but the man that was his bedfellow, Whom he hath cloy'd and grac'd with princely favours : That he should, for a foreign purse, so sell 10 His sovereign's life to death and treachery. Trumpets sound. Enter King Henry, Scroop, Cambridge, Grey, and Attendants Hen. Now sits the wind fair, and we will aboard. My Lord of Cambridge, and my kind Lord of Masham. And you, my gentle knight, give me your thoughts : Think you not that the powers we bear with us Will cut their passage through the force of France,

{Doing the execution and the act For which we have in head assembled them ?} Scr. No doubt, my liege, if each man do his best. {Hen. I doubt not that, since we are well persuaded 20 We carry not a heart with us from hence That grows not in a fair consent with ours : Nor leave not one behind, that doth not wish Success and conquest to attend on us.} Cam. Never was monarch better fear'd and lov'd Than is your majesty; {there's not, I think, a subject That sits in heart-grief and uneasiness Under the sweet shade of your government.} Gr. True: those that were your father's enemies Have steep'd their galls in honey, {and do serve you 30 With hearts create of duty, and of zeal.} Hen. We therefore have great cause of thankfulness. And shall forget the office of our hand, Sooner than quittance of desert and merit, According to the weight and worthiness. Scr. So service shall with steeled sinews shine, And labour shall refresh itself with hope, To do your grace incessant services. Hen. {We judge no less.} Uncle of Exeter. Enlarge the man committed yesterday, 40

That rail'd against our person : we consider

It was the heat of wine that set him on, And, on his more advice, we pardon him.

Scr. That 's mercy, but too much security : Let him be punish'd, sovereign, lest example Breed (by his sufferance) more of such a kind.

Hen. O, let us yet be merciful.

Cam.So may your highness, and yet punish too.

Gr. Sir,

You show great mercy, if you give him life, After the taste of much correction. 50

Hen. Alas, your too much love and care of me Are heavy orisons 'gainst this poor wretch ! If little faults, proceeding on distemper, Shall not be wink'd at, how shall we stretch our eye When capital crimes, chew'd, swallow'd and digested, Appear before us ? We'll yet enlarge that man, Though Cambridge, Scroop, and Grey, in their dear care

And tender preservation of our person,

Would have him punish'd. And now to our French causes : 60

Who are the late commissioners?

Cam.I one, my lord :

Your highness bade me ask for it to-day.

Scr. So did you me, my liege.

80

- Gr. And I, my royal sovereign.
- Hen. Then Richard Earl of Cambridge, there is yours;
 There yours Lord Scroop of Masham; and, sir knight,
 Grey of Northumberland, this same is yours:
 Read them, and know we know your worthiness.
 {My Lord of Westmoreland, and} uncle Exeter, 70
 We will aboard to-night. Why, how now, gentlemen?
 What see you in those papers, {that you lose
 So much complexion? Look ye how they change !
 Their cheeks are paper. Why, what read you there,}
 That have so {cowarded and} chas'd your blood
 Out of appearance?

Cam. I do confess my fault,

And do submit me to your highness' mercy.

Gr. {To which we all appeal.

Scr. 1

Hen. The mercy that was quick in us but late, By your own counsel is suppress'd and kill'd: You must not dare (for shame) to talk of mercy, For your own reasons turn into your bosoms, As dogs upon their masters worrying them: See you, my princes, and my noble peers, These English monsters! My Lord of Cambridge here, You know how apt our love was, to accord

To furnish him with all appertinents Belonging to his honour; and this man Hath, for a few light crowns, lightly conspir'd, And sworn unto the practices of France. 90 To kill us here in Hampton : to the which This knight, no less for bounty bound to us Than Cambridge is, hath likewise sworn. But, O. What shall I say to thee, Lord Scroop, thou cruch. Ingrateful, savage, and inhuman creature ? Thou that did'st bear the key of all my counsels. That knew'st the very bottom of my soul, That almost mightst have coin'd me into gold. Wouldst thou have practis'd on me, for thy use. May it be possible, that foreign hire 100 Could out of thee extract one spark of evil That might annoy my finger? 'tis so strange, That though the truth of it stands off as gross As black from white, my eye will scarcely see it. {Treason and murder ever kept together. As two yoke-devils sworn to either's purpose, Working so grossly in a natural cause. That admiration did not hoop at them : But thou ('gainst all proportion), didst bring in Wonder to wait on treason and on murder : ITO And whatsoever cunning fiend it was

That wrought upon thee so preposterously Hath got the voice in hell for excellence : All other devils that suggest by treasons Do botch and bungle up damnation. With patches, colours, and with forms being fetch'd From glistering semblances of piety; But he that temper'd thee bade thee stand up. Gave thee no instance why thou shouldst do treason, Unless to dub thee with the name of traitor. 1 2 C If that same demon that hath gull'd thee thus Should with his lion gait walk the whole world, He might return to vasty Tartar back, And tell the legions 'I can never win A soul so easy as that Englishman's.' O, how hast thou with jealousy infected The sweetness of affiance 1 Show men dutiful? Why, so didst thou : seem they grave and learned ? Why, so didst thou: come they of noble family? Why, so didst thou : seem they religious ? 130 Why, so didst thou : or are they spare in diet, Free from gross passion or of mirth, or anger. Constant in spirit, nor swerving with the blood, Garnish'd and deck'd in modest complement. Not working with the eye, without the car, And but in purged judgement trusting neither ?

Such and so finely bolted didst thou seem : And thus thy fall hath left a kind of blot. To mark the full-fraught man and best indued With some suspicion. I will weep for thee : 140 For this revolt of thine, methinks, is like Another fall of man. } Their faults are open. Arrest them to the answer of the law, And God acquit them of their practices ! Exe. I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Richard Earl of Cambridge. I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Henry Lord Scroop of Masham. I arrest thee of high treason, by the name of Thomas Grey, knight, of Northumberland. 150 Scr. Our purposes God justly hath discover'd, And I repent my fault more than my death, Which I beseech your highness to forgive, Although my body pay the price of it. {Cam.For me, the gold of France did not seduce, Although I did admit it as a motive, The sooner to effect what I intended : But God be thanked for prevention, Which I in sufferance heartily will rejoice, Beseeching God, and you, to pardon me. 160

Gr. Never did faithful subject more rejoice

At the discovery of most dangerous treason Than I do at this hour joy o'er myself. Prevented from a damned enterprise : My fault, but not my body, pardon, sovereign.} Hen. God quit you in his mercy! Hear your sentence. You have conspir'd against our royal person, Join'd with an enemy proclaim'd, and from his coffers Received the golden earnest of our death ; {Wherein you would have sold your king to slaughter, 170 His princes and his peers to servitude, His subjects to oppression, and contempt, And his whole kingdom into desolation.} Touching our person, seek we no revenge, But we our kingdom's safety must so tender, Whose ruin you have sought, that to her laws We do deliver you. Get you therefore hence. (Poor miserable wretches) to your death : The taste whereof, God of his mercy give You patience to endure, and true repentance 180 Of all your dear offences ! Bear them hence.

Execut Cambridge, Scroop, and Grey, guarded Now, lords, for France; the enterprise whercof Shall be to you, as us, like glorious. {We doubt not of a fair and lucky war,} Since God so graciously hath brought to light

This dangerous treason, lurking in our way, {To hinder our beginnings. We doubt not now But every rub is smoothed on our way. Then forth, dear countrymen : let us deliver Our puissance into the hand of God, 190 Putting it straight in expedition.} Cheerly to sea, the signs of war advance, No king of England, if not king of France. Execut

SCENE III

London. Before a tavern

Enter Pistol, Mistress Pistol, Nym, Bardolph, and Boy

- M.P.Prithee, honey-sweet husband, let me bring thee to Staines.
- Pis. No; {for my manly heart doth yearn.Bardolph, be blithe : Nym, rouse thy vaunting veins :Boy, bristle thy courage up ; for Falstaff he is dead,And we must yearn therefore.
- Bar. Would I were with him, wheresome'er he is, either in heaven, or in hell 1}
- [Bar.Well, Sir John is gone, God be with him !]
- M.P. {Nay sure, he's not in hell:} he's in Arthur's 10 bosom, if ever man went to Arthur's bosom. {A'

made a finer end. } and went away an it had been any christom child: a' parted e'en just between twelve † and one, e'en at the turning o' the tide : for after I saw him fumble with the sheets, and play with flowers, and smile upon his fingers' end, I knew there was no way but one; for his nose was as sharp as a pen {and a' babbled of green fields.} † 'How now, Sir John?' quoth I: { what, man? be o' good cheer : '} so a' cried out, 'God, God, 20 God 1' three or four times : now I, to comfort him, bid him a' should not think of God; I hop'd there was no need to trouble himself with any such thoughts yet; so a' bade me lay more clothes on his feet: I put my hand into the bed, and felt them, and they were as cold as any stone: then I felt to his knees. [and they were as cold as any stone,] and so upward and upward, and all was as cold as any stone.

Nym. They say he cried out of sack.

M.P.Ay, that a' did.

Bar. And of women.

M.P.Nay, that a' did not.

Boy. Yes, that a' did; and said they were devils incarnate. M.P.A' could never abide carnation, 'twas a colour he never liked. 30

- Boy. A' said once, the devil would have him about women.
- M.P.A' did in some sort, indeed, handle women; but then he was rheumatic, and talk'd of the whore of 40 Babylon.
- Bey. Do you not remember, a' saw a flea stand upon Bardolph's nose, and a' said it was a black soul burning in hell[-fire ?]
- Bar. {Well, the fuel is gone that maintained that fire :} that 's all the riches I got in his service.
- Nym.Shall we shog? the king will be gone from Southampton.
- Pis. {Come, let's away. My love, give me thy lips.} Look to my chattels and my movables : 50 {Let senses rule ;} the word is ' Pitch and Pay :' Trust none : {For oaths are straws, } men's faiths are wafer-cakes, And hold-fast is the only dog, my duck : Therefore, Caveto be thy counsellor. Go, clear thy crystals. {Yoke-fellows in arms, Let us to France, like horse-leeches, my boys, To suck, to suck, the very blood to suck ! Boy. And that 's but unwholesome food, they say. } Pis. Touch her soft lips, and part. 60 Kissing her Bar. Farewell, hostess.

Nym.I cannot kiss, that is the humour of it; but, adieu.

Pis. {Let housewifery appear :} keep close, I thee command.

{M.P.Farewell; adieu.}

Exeunt

SCENE IV

France. The King's palace

Flourish. Enter the French King, the Dauphin, the Dukes of Berri and Bretagne, the Constable, and others

Cha. Thus comes the English with full power upon us, {And more than carefully it us concerns To answer royally in our defences.} Therefore the Dukes of Berri and of Bretagne Of Brabant and of Orleans, shall make forth, {And you, Prince Dauphin, with all swift dispatch, To line and new repair our towns of war With men of courage, and with means defendant : For England his approaches makes as fierce As waters to the sucking of a gulf. It fits us then to be as provident As fear may teach us, out of late examples Left by the fatal and neglected English Upon our fields.}

Dau My most redoubted father. It is most meet we arm us 'gainst the foe : {For peace itself should not so dull a kingdom, (Though war nor no known quarrel were in question) But that defences, musters, preparations, Should be maintain'd, assembled, and collected. As were a war in expectation. 20 Therefore, } I say, 'tis meet we all go forth, To view the sick and feeble parts of France : And let us do it with no show of fear. No, with no more than if we heard that England Were busied with a {Whitsun} morris-dance : For, my good liege, she is so idly king'd, Her sceptre so fantastically borne, So guided by a shallow humorous youth, That fear attends her not. Con. O peace, Prince Dauphin! You are too much mistaken in this king : 30 Question your grace the late ambassadors, With what great state he heard their embassy, How well supplied with aged counsellors, How modest in exception; and withal, How terrible in constant resolution : And you shall find his vanities forespent Were but the outside of the Roman Brutus,

Covering discretion with a coat of folly : As gardeners do with ordure hide those roots That shall first spring, and be most delicate. 40 Dau, Well, 'tis not so, my lord high constable : But though we think it so, it is no matter: In cases of defence, 'tis best to weigh The enemy more mighty than he seems, So the proportions of defence are fill'd : Which of a weak and niggardly projection Doth like a miser spoil his coat, with scanting A little cloth.} Cha. Think we King Harry strong ; And princes, look you strongly arm to meet him. {The kindred of him hath been flesh'd upon us : 50 And he is bred out of that bloody strain That haunted us in our familiar paths : Witness our too much memorable shame When Cressy battle fatally was struck, And all our princes captiv'd, by the hand Of that black name, Edward, Black Prince of Wales ; Whiles that his mountain sire, on mountain standing, Up in the air, crown'd with the golden sun, Saw his heroical seed, and smil'd to see him, 60 Mangle the work of nature, and deface The patterns that by God and by French fathers

Had twenty years been made. This is a stem Of that victorious stock : and let us fear The native mightiness and fate of him.} Enter a Messenger Mes. Ambassadors from Harry King of England Do crave admittance to your majesty. Cha. We'll give them present audience. Go, and bring Exeunt Messenger and certain Lords them. You see this chase is hotly follow'd, friends. Dau. {Turn head, and stop pursuit : for coward dogs Most spend their mouths when what they seem to threaten 70 Runs far before them.} Good my sovereign. Take up the English short, {and let them know Of what a monarchy you are the head.} Self-love, my liege, is not so vile a sin As self-neglecting. Re-enter Lords, with Exeter and train Cha. From our brother England ? Exe. From him, and thus he greets your majesty : He wills you, in the name of God Almighty, That you divest yourself, and lay apart The borrowed glories, that by gift of heaven, By law of nature, and of nations, 'longs 80 To him and to his heirs, namely, the crown,

国家においた

And all wide-stretched honours, that pertain {By custom, and the ordinance of times, } Unto the crown of France: that you may know 'Tis no sinister, nor no awkward claim, Pick'd from the worm-holes of long-vanish'd days, Nor from the dust of old oblivion rack'd. He sends you this most memorable line, In every branch truly demonstrative; Willing vou overlook this pedigree : 90 And when you find him evenly deriv'd From his most fam'd, of famous ancestors, Edward the third, he bids you then resign Your crown and kingdom, indirectly held From him, the native and true challenger. Cha. If not, what follows? Exe.Bloody constraint : for if you hide the crown Even in your hearts, there will he rake for it. Therefore in fierce tempest is he coming, In thunder and in carthquake, like a love : 100 That, if requiring fail, he will compel. {And bids you, in the bowels of the Lord, Deliver up the crown, and to take mercy On the poor souls, for whom this hungry war Opens his vasty jaws ;} and on your head Turning the widows' tears, the orphans' cries,

The dead men's blood, the pining maidens' groans. For husbands, fathers, and betrothed lovers, That shall be swallow'd in this controversy. This is his claim, his threatening, and my message : 110 Unless the Dauphin be in presence here : To whom expressly I bring greeting too. {Cha.For us, we will consider of this further : To-morrow shall you bear our full intent Back to our brother England.} Dau. For the Dauphin. I stand here for him : what to him from England ? Exe. Scorn and defiance, slight regard, contempt, And any thing that may not misbecome The mighty sender, doth he prize you at. Thus says my king; an if your father's highness t Do not, in grant of all demands at large, 121 Sweeten the bitter mock you sent his majesty. He'll call you to so loud an answer of it. t That caves and womby vaultages of France Shall chide your trespass, and return your mock In second accent of his ordinance. Dau. Say; if my father render fair return, It is against my will; for I desire Nothing but odds with England: to that end, As matching to his youth and vanity, 130

I did present him with the Paris balls. Exe. He'll make your Paris Louvre shake for it, Were it the mistress-court of mighty Europe : And, be assur'd, you 'll find a difference, As we his subjects have in wonder found. Between the promise of his greener days And these he masters now : now he weighs time Even to the latest grain : that you shall find In your own losses, if he stay in France. Cha, To-morrow shall you know our mind at full. I4C {Exe.Dispatch us with all speed, lest that our king Come here himself to question our delay : For he is footed in this land already. Cha. You shall be soon dispatch'd, with fair conditions. A night is but small breath, and little pause To answer matters of this consequence.} Flourish Exeunt

Act Third

{PROLOGUE

Enter Chorus

Chor. Thus with imagin'd wing our swift scene flies. In motion of no less celerity Than that of thought. Suppose that you have seen The well-appointed king at Hampton pier Embark his royalty; and his brave fleet, With silken streamers, the young Phœbus fanning : t Play with your fancies; and in them behold Upon the hempen tackle ship-boys climbing ; Hear the shrill whistle, which doth order give To sounds confus'd; behold the threaden sails. 10 Borne with the invisible and creeping wind, Draw the huge bottoms through the furrow'd sea. Breasting the lofty surge : O, do but think You stand upon the rivage, and behold A city on the inconstant billows dancing ; For so appears this fleet majestical, Holding due course to Harfleur. Follow, follow: Grapple your minds to sternage of this navy,

And leave your England as dead midnight, still, Guarded with grandsires, babies, and old women, 20 Either past, or not arriv'd to pith and puissance ; For who is he, whose chin is but enrich'd With one appearing hair, that will not follow These cull'd and choice-drawn cavaliers to France? Work, work your thoughts, and therein see a siege : Behold the ordnance on their carriages, With fatal mouths gaping on girded Harfleur. Suppose the ambassador from the French comes back : Tells Harry, that the king doth offer him Katherine his daughter, and with her, to dowry, 30 Some petty and unprofitable dukedoms. The offer likes not : and the nimble gunner With linstock now the devilisn cannon touches, Alarum, and chambers go off And down goes all before them. Still be kind, And eke out our performance with your mind.

Exit}

SCENES {I}, II AND III

France. Before Harfleur

Alarum. Enter King Henry, Exeter, Bedford, Gloucester, and Soldiers, with scaling-ladders

Hen. Once more unto the breach, dear friends, once more; Or close the wall up with our English dead. In peace there's nothing so becomes a man As modest stillness, and humility : But when the blast of war blows in our ears. Then imitate the action of the tiger ; Stiffen the sinews, summon up the blood, Disguise fair nature with hard-favour'd rage; Then lend the eye a terrible aspect; Let it pry through the portage of the head 10 Like the brass cannon ; let the brow o'erwhelm it. As fearfully as doth a galled rock O'erhang and jutty his confounded base, Swill'd with the wild and wasteful ocean Now set the teeth, and stretch the nostril wide, Hold hard the breath, and bend up every spirit To his full height. On, on, you noblest English, Whose blood is fet from fathers of war-proof: Fathers, that like so many Alexanders,

Have in these parts from morn till even fought. 20 And sheath'd their swords for lack of argument : Dishonour not your mothers ; now attest That those whom you call'd fathers did beget you. Be copy now to men of grosser blood. And teach them how to war. And you, good ycomen, Whose limbs were made in England ; show us here The mettle of your pasture : let us swear That you are worth your breeding; which I doubt not; For there is none of you so mean and base. That hath not noble lustre in your eyes. 30 I see you stand like greyhounds in the slips, Straining upon the start. The game's afoot : Follow your spirit; and upon this charge Cry 'God for Harry, England, and Saint George !' Exeunt. Alarum, and chambers go off?

Enter Nym, Bardolph, Pistol, and Boy

{Bar.On, on, on, on, on | to the breach, to the breach !}
Nym.{Pray thee, corporal, stay,} the knocks are too hot;
{and, for mine own part, I have not a case of lives:

the humour of it is too hot, that is the very plainsong of it.

Pis. The plain-song is most just; for humours do abound: Knocks go and come; God's vassals drop and die;

- $\{ And \ sword \ and \ shield,$
 - In bloody field,

Doth win immortal fame.}

10

- [Nym.'Tis honour, and there's the humour of it.]
- Boy. Would I were {in an alehouse} in London, I would give all my fame for a pot of ale, {and safety.}

Pis. And I:

If wishes would prevail with me, My purpose should not fail with me, But thither would I hie.

{Boy. As duly,

But not as truly,

As bird doth sing on bough.} Enter Fluellen

- 20
- Flu. [God's plud,] Up to the breach, you dogs | avaunt, you cullions ! Driving them forward
- Pis. {Be merciful, great duke, to men of mould :} Abate thy rage, abate thy manly rage ; {Abate thy rage, great duke ! Good bawcock, bate thy rage ; use lenity, sweet chuck !

Nym. These be good humours ! your honour wins bad humours. }

Exeunt all but Boy

Boy. {As young as I am, I have observ'd these three swashers: I am boy to them all three, but all they 30 three, though they would serve me, could not be man to me; for indeed three such antics do not amount to a man : for Bardolph, he is white-liver'd. and red-fac'd ; by the means whereof, a' faces it out, but fights not: for Pistol, he hath a killing tongue, and a quiet sword ; by the means whereof, a' breaks words, and keeps whole weapons : for Nvm, he hath heard, that men of few words are the best men, and therefore he scorns to say his prayers, lest a' should be thought a coward : but his few bad words are 40 match'd with as few good deeds : for a' never broke any man's head but his own, and that was against a post, when he was drunk.} They will steal any thing, and call it purchase. Bardolph stole a lute-case, bore it twelve leagues, and sold it for three half-pence. Nym {and Bardolph are sworn brothers in filching, and in Calais they} stole a fire-shovel: I knew by that piece of service, they meant to carry coals. They would have me as familiar with men's pockets as their gloves or their handkerchers: {which 50 makes much against my manhood, if I should take from another's pocket, to put into mine; for it is plain pocketing up of wrongs.} I must leave them, {and seek some better service: their villany goes against my weak stomach, and therefore I must cast it up.}

Re-enter Fluellen, Gower following

- Gow.Captain Fluellen, you must come presently to the mines; the Duke of Gloucester would speak with you.
- Flu. To the mines? tell you the duke, it is not so good 60 to come to the mines; {for, look you, the mines is not according to the disciplines of the war:} the concavities of it is not sufficient; for look you, th' athversary, you may discuss unto the duke, look you, is digt himself four yard under the countermines: by Cheshu, I think a' will plow up all, if there is not better directions.
- {Gow. The Duke of Gloucester, to whom the order of the siege is given, is altogether directed by an Irishman, a very valiant gentleman, i' faith.

70

Flu. It is Captain Macmorris, is it not?

Gow.I think it be.

Flu. By Cheshu, he is an ass, as in the world, I will verify as much in his beard : he has no more directions in the true disciplines of the wars, look you, of the Roman disciplines, than is a puppy-dog.

Enter Macmorris and Captain Jamy

- Gow.Here a' comes, and the Scots captain, Captain Jamy, with him.
- Flu. Captain Jamy is a marvellous falorous gentleman, that is certain, and of great expedition and knowledge in th' aunchient wars, upon my particular knowledge of his directions: by Cheshu, he will maintain his argument as well as any military man in the world, in the disciplines of the pristine wars of the Romans.
- Jam. I say gud-day, Captain Fluellen.
- Flu. God-den to your worship, good Captain James.
- Gow. How now, Captain Macmorris, have you quit the mines? have the pioners given o'er?
- Mac. By Chrish, la ! tish ill done : the work ish give over, 90 the trompet sound the retreat. By my hand I swear, and my father's soul, the work ish ill done; it ish give over : I would have blowed up the town, so Chrish save me, la ! in an hour : O, tish ill done, tish ill done; by my hand tish ill done !
- Flu. Captain Macmorris, I beseech you now, will you voutsafe me, look you, a few disputations with you, as partly touching or concerning the disciplines of the war, the Roman wars, in the way of argument, look you, and friendly communication; partly to 100 satisfy my opinion, and partly for the satisfaction, look you, of my mind, as touching the direction of the military discipline, that is the point.

- Jam. It sall be vary gud, gud feith, gud captains bath : and I sall quit you with gud leve, as I may pick occasion ; that sall I, marry.
- Mac. It is no time to discourse, so Chrish save me: the day is hot, and the weather, and the wars, and the king, and the dukes: it is no time to discourse, the town is beseech'd: an the trumpet call us to the 110 breach, and we talk, and, be Chrish, do nothing, 'tis shame for us all: so God sa' me, 'tis shame to stand still, it is shame by my hand: and there is throats to be cut, and works to be done, and there ish nothing done, so Chrish sa' me, la !
- Jam. By the mess, ere theise eyes of mine take themselves to slomber, ay 'll de gud service, or ay 'll lig i' the grund for it; ay, or go to death; and ay 'll pay 't as valorously as I may, that sall I surely do, that is the breff and the long. Marry, I wad full fain hear some 120 guestion 'tween you tway.
- Flu. Captain Macmorris, I think, look you, under your correction, there is not many of your nation—

- Mac. Of my nation? What ish my nation? Ish a villain, and a bastard, and a knave, and a rascal. What is my nation? Who talks of my nation?
- Flu. Look you, if you take the matter otherwise than is meant, Captain Macmorris, peradventure I shall think you do not use me with that affability as in 130 discretion you ought to use me, look you, being as good a man as yourself, both in the disciplines of war, and in the derivation of my birth, and in other particularities.
- Mac. I do not know you so good a man as myself: so Chrish save me, I will cut off your head.
- Gow.Gentlemen both, you will mistake each other.
- Jam. A ! that 's a foul fault. A parley sounded
- Gow. The town sounds a parley.
- Flu. Captain Macmorris, when there is more better oppor-140 tunity to be required, look you, I will be so bold as to tell you I know the disciplines of war; and there is an end. Execut

The Governor and some citizens on the walls ; the English torces below. Enter King Henry and his train Hen. How yet resolves the governor of the town? This is the latest parle we will admit : Therefore to our best mercy give yourselves, Or like to men proud of destruction. Defy us to our worst : for, as I am a soldier, A name that in my thoughts becomes me best. If we begin the battery once again, I will not leave the half-achieved Harfleur Till in her ashes she lie buried. The gates of mercy shall be all shut up, 10 {And the flesh'd soldier, rough and hard of heart, In liberty of bloody hand, shall range With conscience wide as hell, mowing like grass Your fresh fair virgins, and your flowering infants. What is it then to me, if impious war, Array'd in flames like to the prince of fiends, Do, with his smirch'd complexion, all fell feats Enlink'd to waste and desolation ? What is 't to me, when you yourselves are cause,

If your pure maidens fall into the hand 20 Of hot and forcing violation? What rein can hold licentious wickedness, When down the hill he holds his fierce career? We may as bootless spend our vain command Upon the enraged soldiers in their spoil As send precepts to the leviathan To come ashore. Therefore, you men of Harfleur, Take pity of your town and of your people, Whiles yet my soldiers are in my command, Whiles yet the cool and temperate wind of grace 30 O'erblows the filthy and contagious clouds Of heady murder, spoil, and villany. If not; why, in a moment look to see The blind and bloody soldier with foul hand Defile the locks of your shrill-shrieking daughters ; Your fathers taken by the silver beards, And their most reverend heads dash'd to the walls : Your naked infants spitted upon pikes, Whiles the mad mothers, with their howls confus'd, Do break the clouds ; as did the wives of Jewry, 40 At Herod's bloody-hunting slaughtermen.} What say you? will you yield, and this avoid? Or, guilty in defence, be thus destroy'd? Sov. Our expectation hath this day an end :

The Dauphin, whom of succours we entreated. Returns us word his powers are yet not ready To raise so great a siege. Therefore, dread king, We yield our town and lives to thy soft mercy : Enter our gates, dispose of us and ours, For we no longer are defensive now. şΟ {Hen.Open your gates : come, uncle Exeter, Go you and enter Harfleur : there remain, And fortify it strongly 'gainst the French : Use mercy to them all ; for us, dear uncle, The winter coming on, and sickness growing Upon our soldiers, we will retire to Calais. To-night in Harfleur will we be your guest, To-morrow for the march are we addrest.} Flourish. The King and his train enter the town

SCENES IV AND V

The French King's palace

Enter Katherine and an old Gentlewoman

- Kat. Alice, tu as été en Angleterre, et tu bien parles le † langage.
- {Ali.Un peu, madame.
- Kat. Je te prie, m'enseignez; il faut que j'apprenne à parler.} Comment appelez-vous la main en Anglois?

Ali. La main? elle est appelée de hand.

{Kat.De hand. Et les doigts?

- Ali. Les doigts ? ma foi, j'oublic les doigts ; mais je me souviendrai. Les doigts ? je pense qu'ils sont appelés de fingres ; oui, de fingres.
- Kat. La main, de hand ; les doigts, de fingres. Je pense que je suis le bon écolier ; j'ai gagné deux mots d'Anglois vîtement. Comment appelez-vous les ongles ?
- Ali. Les ongles ? nous les appelons de nails.
- Kat. De nails. Ecoutez ; dites-moi, si je parle bien : de hand, de fingres, et de nails.
- Ali. C'est bien dit, madame ; il est fort bon Anglois.}
- Kat. Dites-moi l'Anglois pour le bras.
- Ali. De arm, madame.
- Kat. Et le coude.
- Ali. De elbow.
- Kat. De elbow. Je m'en fais la répétition de tous les mots que vous m'avez appris dès à présent.

{Ali.Il est trop difficile, madame, comme je pense.

Kat. Excusez-moi, Alice ; écoutez : } de hand, {de fingres, de nails,} de arma, de bilbow.

Ali. De elbow, madame.

Kat. O Seigneur Dicu, je m'en oublie ! de elbow. Comment appelez-vous le col ? 10

20

- Ali. De neck, madame.
- Kat. De nick. Et le menton?
- Ali. De chin.
- Kat. De sin. Le col, de nick ; le menton, de sin.
- Ali. Oui. Sauf votre honneur, en vérité, vous prononcez les mots aussi droit que les natifs d'Angleterre.
- Kat. Je ne doute point d'apprendre, par la grace de Dieu, et en peu de temps.
- {Ali. N'avez vous pas déjà oublié ce que je vous ai enseigné?

- Kat. Non, je réciterai à vous promptement : de hand, de fingres, de mails,---
- Ali. De nails, madame.
- Kat. De nails, de arm, de ilbow.
- Ali. Sauf votre honneur, de elbow.
- Kat. Ainsi dis-je; de elbow, de nick, et de sin.} Comment appelez-vous le pied et la robe?
- Ali. Le foot, madame ; et le count.
- Kat. De foot et de count ! {O Seigneur Dieu ! ce sont mots de son mauvais, corruptible, gros, et impudique, 50 et non pour les dames d'honneur d'user :} je ne voudrais prononcer ces mots devant les seigneurs de France pour tout le monde. {Foh ! le foot et le count !} Néanmoins, je réciterai une autre fois ma leçon ensemble : de hand, {de fingres, de nails,} de arm, {de elbow,} de nick, de sin, de foot, de count.

- Ali. Excellent, madame?
- Kat. {C'est assez pour une fois :} allons-nous à dîner.

Exeunt

Enter the King of France, the Dauphin, the Duke of Bourbon, the Constable of France and others

Cha. 'Tis certain he hath pass'd the river Somme

- Con. {And if he be not fought withal, my lord, Let us not live in France ; let us quit all, And give our vineyards to a barbarous people.
- Dau.{O Dieu vivant 1 shall a few sprays of us, The emptying of our father's luxury, {Our scions, put in wild and savage stock, Spirt up so suddenly into the clouds,} And overlook their grafters?
- Bou. Normans, but bastard Normans, Norman bastards | 10 Mort de ma vie | if they march along Unfought withal, but I will sell my dukedom, To buy a slobbery and a dirty farm

In that nook-shotten isle of Albion. Con. Dieu de batailles 1 where have they this mettle ? Is not their climate foggy, raw, and dull, On whom, as in despite, the sun looks pale, {Killing their fruit with frowns ?} Can sodden water, A drench for sur-rein'd jades, their barley-broth, Decoct their cold blood to such valiant heat ? 20 And shall our quick blood, spirited with wine, Seem frosty ? O, for honour of our land, Let us not hang like roping icicles Upon our houses' thatch, whiles a more frosty people Sweat drops of gallant youth {in our rich fields 1— Poor we may call them in their native lords.

Dau. By faith and honour,

Our madams mock at us, and plainly say Our mettle is bred out, and they will give Their bodies to the lust of English youth, To new-store France with bastard warriors.

- Bou. They bid us to the English dancing-schools, And teach lavoltas high, and swift corantos, Saying our grace is only in our heels, And that we are most lofty runaways.
- Cha. Where is Mountjoy the herald? speed him hence, Let him greet England with our sharp defiance. Up, princes, and, with spirit of honour edg'd

More sharper than your swords, hie to the field : Charles Delabreth, high constable of France ; 40 You Dukes of Orleans, Bourbon, and of Berri. Alencon, Brabant, Bar, and Burgundy; Jacques Chatillon, Rambures, Vaudemont, Beaumont, Grandpré, Roussi, and Fauconberg, Foix, Lestrale, Bouciqualt, and Charolois ; High dukes, great princes, barons, lords, and knights. For your great seats now quit you of great shames. Bar Harry England, that sweeps through our land With pennons painted in the blood of Harfleur: Rush on his host, as doth the melted snow so Upon the valleys, whose low vassal seat The Alps doth spit and void his rheum upon ; Go down upon him, you have power enough, And in a captive chariot, into Rouen Bring him our prisoner.

Con.

This becomes the great.

Sorry am I his numbers are so few, His soldiers sick and famish'd in their march; For I am sure, when he shall see our army, He 'll drop his heart into the sink of fear And for achievement offer us his ransom.}

60

Cha. Therefore, lord constable, haste on Montjoy, {And let him say to England, that we send ${}^{30} f$ 63

To know what willing ransom he will give.} Prince Dauphin, you shall stay with us in Rouen. Dau.Not so, I do beseech your majesty. Cha. Be patient, for you shall remain with us. {Now forth, lord constable and princes all, And quickly bring us word of England's fall.} Execut

SCENE VI

The English camp in Picardy Enter Gower and Fluellen, meeting

- Gow. How now, Captain Fluellen! come you from the bridge?
- Flu. By Jesus, there is very excellent services committed at the bridge.
- Gow. Is the Duke of Exeter safe?
- Flu. The Duke of Exeter is {as magnanimous as Agamemnon, and} a man that I love and honour with my soul, and my heart, and my duty, and my life, and my living, and my uttermost power. He is not—God be praised and blessed l—any hurt in the IO world, but keeps the bridge most valiantly, with excellent discipline. There is an aunchient lieutenant there at the pridge, I think in my very conscience he is as valiant a man as Mark Antony, and he is a man of no estimation in the world, but I did see him do as gallant scrvice.

- Gow. What do you call him?
- Flu. He is called Aunchient Pistol.

Gow.I know him not.

Enter Pistol

Flu. Here is the man.

- Pis. Captain, I thee beseech to do me favours: The Duke of Exeter doth love thee well.
- Flu. Ay, I praise God, and I have merited some love at his hands.
- Pis. Bardolph, a soldier, {firm and sound of heart,} And of buxom valour, hath, by cruel fate, And giddy Fortune's furious fickle wheel, That goddess blind,

That stands upon the rolling restless stone-

Flu. By your patience, Aunchient Pistol. Fortune is 30 painted plind, with a muffler afore her eyes, to signify to you that Fortune is plind; and she is painted also with a wheel, {to signify to you,} which is the moral {of it,} that she is turning and inconstant, and mutability, and variation: and her foot, look you, is fixed upon a spherical stone, which rolls, and rolls, and rolls : in good truth, the poet makes a most excellent description of it : Fortune is an excellent moral.

2C

Pis. Fortune is Bardolph's foe, and frowns on him;
For he hath stolen a pax, and hanged must a' be:
A damned death l
Let gallows gape for dog, let man go free,
And let not hemp his wind-pipe suffocate :
But Exeter hath given the doom of death,
For pax of petty price.
Therefore, go speak, the duke will hear thy voice;
And let not Bardolph's vital thread be cut
With edge of penny cord, and vile reproach :
Speak, captain, for his life, and I will thee requite.

- Flu. Aunchient Pistol, I do partly understand your meaning.
- Pis. Why then, rejoice therefore.
- Flu. Certainly, aunchient, it is not a thing to rejoice at: for if, look you, he were my brother, I would desire the duke to use his good pleasure, and put him to execution; for discipline ought to be used.

Pis. Die, and be damn'd ! and figo for thy friendship ! F/u. It is well.

- Pis. The fig of Spain | [within thy jaw.] Exit Flu. Very good.
- Pis. I say the fig within thy bowels and thy dirty maw.

Exit

- Flu. Captain Gower, cannot you hear it lighten and thunder?]
- Gow. Why, this is an arrant counterfeit rascal, I remember him now; a bawd, a cutpurse.
- Flu. By Jesus, a' uttered as prave words at the pridge as you shall see in a summer's day : but it is very well; what he has spoke to me, that is well, I warrant you, {when time is serve.}
- Gow. Why, 'tis a gull, a fool, a rogue, that now and then † goes to the wars, to grace himself at his return into 71 London, {under the form of soldier.} And such fellows are perfect in the great commanders' names and they will learn you by rote where services were done; at such and such a sconce, at such a breach, at such a convoy; who came off bravely, who was shot, who disgrac'd, what terms the enemy stood on ; and this they con perfectly in the phrase of war ; which they trick up with new-tuned oaths: and what a beard of the general's cut, and a horrid suit 8α of the camp, will do among foaming bottles, and alewash'd wits, is wonderful to be thought on : but you must learn to know such slanders of the age, or else you may be marvellously mistook.
- Flu. I tell you what, Captain Gower; I do perceive he is not the man that he would gladly make show to the world he is: if I find a hole in his coat, I will tell him my mind. (Drum beard.) {Hark you, the king is coming, and I must speak with him from the pridge.}

Drum and Colours. Enter King Henry, Gloucester, and his poor Soldiers

{God pless your majesty !}

- Hen. How now, Fluellen, cam'st thou from the bridge ?
- Flu. Ay, so please your majesty. The Duke of Exeter has very gallantly maintain'd the pridge. {The French is gone off, look you; and there is gallant and most prave passages: marry, th' athversary was have possession of the pridge, but he is enforced to retire, and the Duke of Exeter is master of the pridge: I can tell your majesty, the duke is a prave man.}
- 100

90

t

- Hen. What men have you lost, Fluellen?
- Flu. The perdition of th' athversary hath been very great, reasonable great: marry, for my part, I think the duke hath lost never a man, but one that is like to be executed for robbing a church, one Bardolph, if your majesty know the man: his face is all bubukles, and whelks, and knobs, {and flames o' fire, } and his lips blows at his nose, and it is like a coal of fire, sometimes plue and sometimes red, but [God be praised, now] his nose is executed, and his fire's out.

Hen. We would have all such offenders so cut off: and we give express charge, that {in our marches through the country,} there be nothing compell'd from the villages, nothing taken but paid for, none of the French upbraided or abused in disdainful language; for when lenity and crucity play for a kingdom, the gentler gamester is the soonest winner.

Tucket. Enter Montjoy

Mon. You know me by my habit.

Hen. Well then, I know thee : what shall I know of thee ? Mon. My master's mind.

Hen. Unfold it.

Mon. {Thus says my king : } Say thou to Harry of England : Though we seem'd dead, we did but slumber : advantage is a better soldier than rashness. {Tell him, we could have rebuk'd him at Harfleur, but that we thought not good to bruise an injury till it were full ripe.} Now we speak upon our cue, and our voice is imperial : England shall repent his folly, see his weakness, and admire our sufferance. {Bid him therefore consider of his ransom, which must 130 proportion the losses we have borne, the subjects we have lost, the disgrace we have digested ;} which in weight to re-answer, his pettiness would bow under. {For our losess, his exchequer is too poor;} for the effusion of our blood, the muster of his kingdom too faint a number; and for our disgrace, his own person kneeling at our feet, but a weak and worthless satisfaction. To this add defiance : {and tell him for conclusion, he hath betrayed his followers, whose condemnation is pronounc'd.} So far my 140 king and master ; {so much my office.}

Hen. What is thy name? I know thy quality. Mon. Montjoy.

Hen. Thou dost thy office fairly. Turn thee back,
And tell thy king, I do not seek him now;
But could be willing to march on to Calais,
Without impeachment: for, to say the sooth,
Though 'tis no wisdom to confess so much
Unto an enemy of craft and vantage,
My people are with sickness much enfectled,
My numbers lessen'd; and those few I have Almost no better than so many French;
Who when they were in health, I tell thee, herald,
I thought upon one pair of English legs
Did march three Frenchmen. Yet, forgive me, God,
That I do brag thus ! This your air of France
Hath blown this vice in me; I must repent.

Go therefore, tell thy master here I am : My ransom, is this frail and worthless body : My army, but a weak and sickly guard : 160 Yet, God before, tell him we will come on. Though France himself, and such another neighbour, Stood in our way. There's for thy labour, Montjoy. {Go bid thy master well advise himself.} If we may pass, we will ; if we be hinder'd, We shall your tawny ground with your red blood Discolour : and so, Montjoy, fare you well. The sum of all our answer is but this : We would not seek a battle, as we are, Nor, as we are, we say we will not shun it : 170 {So tell your master.} Mon. I shall deliver so. Thanks to your highness. Exit Glo. I hope they will not come upon us now.

Hen. We are in God's hand, brother, not in theirs : {March to the bridge ; it now draws towards night :} Beyond the river we'll encamp ourselves, And on to-morrow bid them march away. Exeunt

SCENE VII

The French camp, near Agincourt

Enter the Constable of France, the Lord Rambures. Orleans, Dauphin, with others

- Con. Tut ! I have the best armour of the world : {would it were day !}
- Orl. You have an excellent armour; but let my horse have his due.
- {Con.It is the best horse of Europe.
- Orl. Will it never be morning?
- Dau. My Lord of Orleans, and my lord high constable, you talk of horse and armour?
- Orl. You are as well provided of both as any prince in the world.

10

Dau. What a long night is this ! I will not change my horse with any that treads but on four pasterns. Ca, ha ! he bounds from the earth, as if his entrails were hairs; le cheval volant, the Pegasus, chez les narines de feu ! When I bestride him, I soar, I am a hawk : he trots the air; the earth sings when he touches it; the basest horn of his hoof is more musical than the pipe of Hermes.}

30

Orl. He's of the colour of the nutmeg.

- Dau. And of the heat of the ginger. It is a beast for 20 Perseus: he is pure air and fire; and the dull elements of earth and water never appear in him, {but only in patient stillness while his rider mounts him: he is indeed a horse, and all other jades you may call beasts.
- Con. Indeed, my lord, it is a most absolute and excellent horse.
- Dau. It is the prince of palfreys, his neigh is like the bidding of a monarch, and his countenance enforces homage.
- Orl. No more, cousin.
- Dau. Nay, the man hath no wit that cannot, from the rising of the lark to the lodging of the lamb, vary deserved praise on my palfry: it is a theme as fluent as the sea: } turn the sands into eloquent tongues, and my horse is argument for them all: {'tis a subject for a sovereign to reason on, and for a sovereign's sovereign to ride on; and for the world, familiar to us, and unknown, to lay apart their particular functions, and wonder at him.} I once writ a sonnet in his praise, and began thus, 'Wonder of nature,'—
- Orl. I have heard a sonnet begin so to one's mistress.

Dau. Then did they imitate that which I compos'd to my courser, for my horse is my mistress.

{Orl.Your mistress bears well.

- Dau. Me well, which is the prescript praise and perfection of a good and particular mistress.}
- Con. Nay, for methought yesterday your mistress shrewdly shook your back.

50

{Dau.So perhaps did yours.

Con. Mine was not bridled.

- Dau. O then belike she was old and gentle, and you rode like a kern of Ireland, your French hose off, and in your strait strossers.
- Con. You have good judgement in horsemanship.
- Dau. Be warn'd by me, then: they that ride so, and ride not warily, fall into foul bogs. I had rather have my horse to my mistress.
- Con. I had as lief have my mistress a jade.}

60

Dau. I tell thee, constable, my mistress wears his own hair.

- Con. I could make as true a boast as that, if I had a sow to my mistress.
- Dau. {'Le chien est retourné à son propre vomissement, † et la truie lavée au bourbier:'} thou mak'st use of any thing.
- Con. Yet do I not use my horse for my mistress, {or any such proverb, so little kin to the purpose.}

- Ram.My lord constable, the armour that I saw in your tent to-night, are those stars or suns upon it? 70 Con. Stars. my lord.
- Dau. Some of them will fall to-morrow, I hope.
- Con. And yet my sky shall not want.
- Dau. That may be, for you bear a many superfluously, and 'twere more honour some were away.
- Con. E'en as your horse bears your praises, who would trot as well, were some of your brags dismounted.
- Dau. {Would I were able to load him with his desert !} Will it never be day? I will trot to-morrow a mile, and my way shall be paved with English faces.
- 80
- Con. I will not say so, for fear I should be fac'd out of my way: {but I would it were morning; for I would fain be about the cars of the English.}

Ram. Who will go hazard with me for twenty prisoners?

- Con. You must first go yourself to hazard, ere you have them.
- Dau. {'Tis midnight ;} I 'll go arm myself. Exit
- Orl. The Dauphin longs for morning.
- Ram.He longs to eat the English.
- Con. I think he will eat all he kills.
- {Orl.By the white hand of my lady, he's a gallant prince.
- Con. Swear by her foot, that she may tread out the oath.}
- Orl. He is simply the most active gentleman of France.

- Con. Doing is activity, and he will still be doing.
- Orl. He never did harm, that I heard of.
- Con. Nor will do none to-morrow: {he will keep that good name still.}
- Orl. I know him to be valiant.
- Con. I was told that, by one that knows him better than you.
- Orl. What 's he?
- Con. Marry, he told me so himself, and he said he car'd not who knew it.
- {Orl.He needs not, it is no hidden virtue in him.
- Con. By my faith, sir, but it is; never any body saw it, but his lockey: 'tis a hooded valour, and when it appears, it will bate.}
- Orl. Ill will never said well.
- Con. I will cap that proverb with 'There is flattery in friendship.'

- Orl. And I will take up that with 'Give the devil his due.'
- Con.{Well plac'd: there stands your friend for the devil:} have at the very eye of that proverb with 'A pox of the devil.'
- {Or/.You are the better at proverbs, by how much 'A fool's bolt is soon shot.'
- Con. You have shot over.
- Orl. 'Tis not the first time you were overshot. }

Enter a Messenger

- Mes. My lord high constable, the English lie within fifteen hundred paces of your tents. 120
- Con. Who hath measur'd the ground ?
- Mes. The Lord Grandpré.
- Con. A valiant and most expert gentleman. {Would it were day! Alas, poor Harry of England! he longs not for the dawning, as we do.
- Orl. What a wretched and peevish fellow is this King of England, to mope with his fat-brain'd followers so far out of his knowledge !
- Con. If the English had any apprehension, they would run away.

- Orl. That they lack ; for if their heads had any intellectual armour, they could never wear such heavy headpieces.
- Ram. That island of England breeds very valiant creatures; their mastiffs are of unmatchable courage.
- Orl. Foolish curs, that run winking into the mouth of a Russian bear, and have their heads crush'd like rotten apples! You may as well say, that 's a valiant flea, that dare eat his breakfast on the lip of a lion.
- Con. Just, just; and the men do sympathize with the 140 mastiffs, in robustious and rough coming on, leaving their wits with their wives: and then give them great meals of beef, and iron and steel, they will eat like wolves, and fight like devils.

Orl. Ay, but these English are shrewdly out of beef.

- Con. Then shall we find to-morrow, they have only stomachs to eat, and none to fight. Now is it time to arm: come, shall we about it?
- Orl. It is now two o'clock : but, let me see, by ten We shall have each a hundred Englishmen. Executi 150

Act Fourth

{PROLOGUE

Enter Chorus

Chor.Now entertain conjecture of a time
When creeping murmur and the poring dark
Fills the wide vessel of the universe.
From camp to camp, through the foul womb of night
The hum of either army stilly sounds ;
That the fix'd sentinels almost receive
The secret whispers of each other's watch.
Fire answers fire, and through their paly flames

Each battle sees the other's umber'd face : Steed threatens steed, in high and boastful neighs 10 Piercing the night's dull ear ; and from the tents The armourers, accomplishing the knights, With busy hammers closing rivets up. Give dreadful note of preparation. The country cocks do crow, the clocks do toll : And the third hour of drowsy morning nam'd, Proud of their numbers and secure in soul. The confident and over-lusty French Do the low-rated English play at dice ; And chide the cripple tardy-gaited night, 20 Who, like a foul and ugly witch, doth limp So tediously away. The poor condemned English, Like sacrifices, by their watchful fires Sit patiently, and inly ruminate The morning's danger: and their gesture sad, Investing lank-lean cheeks, and war-worn coats, Presenteth them unto the gazing moon So many horrid ghosts. O now, who will behold The royal captain of this ruin'd band Walking from watch to watch, from tent to tent; 30 Let him cry ' Praise and glory on his head !' For forth he goes, and visits all his host, Bids them good morrow with a modest smile, $0 g 79

And calls them brothers, friends and countrymen. Upon his royal face there is no note How dread an army hath enrounded him : Nor doth he dedicate one jot of colour Unto the weary and all-watched night ; But freshly looks, and over-bears attaint, With cheerful semblance, and sweet majesty : 40 That every wretch, pining and pale before, Beholding him, plucks comfort from his looks. A largess universal, like the sun, His liberal eye doth give to every one, Thawing cold fear, that mean and gentle all Behold, as may unworthiness define, A little touch of Harry in the night. And so our scene must to the battle fly : Where-O for pity !--we shall much disgrace With four or five most vile and ragged foils. 50 (Right ill-dispos'd, in brawl ridiculous) The name of Agincourt. Yet sit and see, Minding true things by what their mockeries be. Exit}

SCENE I

The English camp at Agincourt Enter King Henry, Bedford, and Gloucester

Hen. Gloucester, 'tis true that we are in great danger, The greater therefore should our courage be.
Good morrow, brother Bedford. God Almighty, There is some soul of goodness in things evil, Would men observingly distil it out.
For our bad neighbour makes us early stirrers, Which is both healthful, and good husbandry : Besides, they are our outward consciences, And preachers to us all ; admonishing That we should dress us fairly for our end. Thus we may gather honey from the weed, And make a moral of the devil himself.

10

Enter Erpingham

Good morrow, old Sir Thomas Erpingham : A good soft pillow for that good white head Were better than a churlish turf of France.

- Erp. Not so, my liege : this lodging likes me better, Since I may say 'Now lie I like a king.'
- Hen. 'Tis good for men to love their present pains, Upon example, so the spirit is eased :

And when the mind is quicken'd, out of doubt, 20 The organs, though defunct and dead before. Break up their drowsy grave, and newly move. With casted slough and fresh legerity. Lend me thy cloak, Sir Thomas. Brothers both. Commend me to the princes in our camp : Do my good morrow to them, and anon Desire them all to my pavilion. Glo. We shall, my liege. Erb. Shall I attend your grace? No, my good knight : Hen. Go with my brothers to my lords of England : 30 I and my bosom must debate a while. And then I would no other company. Erp. The Lord in heaven bless thee, noble Harry ! Exeunt all but King Hen. God-a-mercy, old heart | thou speak'st cheerfully.} Enter Pistol Pis. Qui va là? Hen A friend. Pis. Discuss unto me, art thou officer, Or art thou base, common, and popular? Hen. I am a gentleman of a company. Pis. Trail'st thou the puissant pike? 40 Hen. Even so: what are you?

Pis. As good a gentleman as the emperor. Hen. Then you are a better than the king. Pis. The king's a bawcock, and a heart of gold, A lad of life, an imp of fame, Of parents good, of fist most valiant : I kiss his dirty shoe, and from heart-string I love the lovely bully. What is thy name? Hen. Harry le Roy. Pis. Le Roy? a Cornish name: art thou of Cornish crew ? 50 Hen. No, I am a Welshman. Pic. Know'st thou Eluellen? Hen. Yes. {Pis.Tell him, I'll knock his leek about his pate Upon Saint Davy's day. Hen. Do not you wear your dagger in your cap that day. lest he knock that about yours.} Pic. Art thou his friend? Hen And his kinsman too. Pis. The figo for thee, then ! 60 {Hen.1 thank you : God be with you ! Pis. }My name is Pistol call'd. Exit Hen. It sorts well with your fierceness. Enter Fluellen and Gower Gow. Captain Fluellen !

- Flu. So! in the name of Jesu Christ, speak lower. It is the greatest admiration in the {universal} world, when the {true and} aunchient prerogatifes {and laws} of the wars is not kept: if you would take the pains but to examine the wars of Pompey the Great, you shall find, I warrant you, that there is no tiddle 70 taddle nor pibble pabble in Pompey's camp; I warrant you, you shall find the ceremonies of the wars, and the cares of it, and the forms of it, {and the sobriety of it, and the modesty of it,} to be otherwise.
- Gow. Why, the enemy is loud, you hear him all night.
- Flu. If the enemy is an ass and a fool, and a prating coxcomb; is it meet, think you, that we should also, look you, be an ass and a fool, and a prating coxcomb, in your own conscience, now?

Gow.I will speak lower.

Exeunt Gower and Fluellen

80

Hen. Though it appear a little out of fashion, There is much care and valour in this Welshman. Enter three soldiers, John Bates, Alexander Court, and Michael Williams

Flu. I pray you, and beseech you, that you will.

Cou. {Brother John Bates,} is not that the morning which breaks yonder?

- {Bat.I think it be : but we have no great cause to desire the approach of day.}
- Wil. We see yonder the beginning of the day, but I think we shall never see the end of it. {Who goes there? 90 Hen. A friend.
- Wil. Under what captain serve you?
- Hen. Under Sir Thomas Erpingham.
- Wil. A good old commander and a most kind gentleman : I pray you, what thinks he of our estate?
- Hen. Even as men wreck'd upon a sand, that look to be wash'd off the next tide.
- Bat. He hath not told his thought to the king?
- Hen. No; nor is it not meet he should. For, though I speak it to you, } I think the king is but a man, as I 100 am: the violet smells to him as it doth to me; {the element shows to him as it doth to me; all his senses have but human conditions : his ceremonies laid by, in his nakedness he appears but a man; and though his affections are higher mounted than ours, vet. when they stoop, they stoop with the like wing.} Therefore when he sees reason of fears, as we do. {his fears, out of doubt, be of the same relish as ours are : yet, in reason, no man should possess him with any appearance of fear; lest he, by showing 110 it, should dishearten his army.

- Bat. He may show what outward courage he will; but I believe, as cold a night as 'tis,} he could wish himself in Thames up to the neck; and so I would he were, and I by him, at all adventures, {so we were quit here.
- Hen. By my troth, I will speak my conscience of the king; I think he would not wish himself any where, but where he is.
- Bat. Then I would he were here alone; so should he be sure 120 to be ransomed, and a many poor men's lives saved.
- Hen. I dare say you love him not so ill, to wish him here alone: howsoever you speak this to feel other's men minds, methinks I could not die any where so contented, as in the king's company; his cause being just, and his quarrel honourable.
- Wil. That 's more than we know.
- Bat. Ay, or more than we should seek after ; for we know enough, if we know we are the king's subjects : if 130 his cause be wrong, our obedience to the king wipes the crime of it out of us.}
- Wil. But if the cause be not good, the king himself hath a heavy reckoning to make, when all those legs, and arms, and heads, chopp'd off in a battle, shall join together at the latter day, and cry all 'We died at such a place;' some swearing, {some crying for a surgeon ;} some upon their wives left poor behind them; {some upon the debts they owe,} some upon their children rawly left. {I am afeard there are 14C few die well that die in a battle; for how can they charitably dispose of any thing, when blood is their argument?} Now, if these men do not die well, it will be a black matter for the king, that led them to it; {whom to disobey were against all proportion of subjection.}

Hen. So, if a son that is by his father sent about merchandise do sinfully miscarry upon the sea, the imputation of his wickedness, by your rule, should be imposed upon his father that sent him: or if a 150 servant, under his master's command, transporting a sum of money, be assailed by robbers, and die in many irreconcil'd iniquities, you may call the business of the master the author of the servant's damnation: but this is not so: the king is not bound to answer the particular endings of his soldiers, the father of his son, nor the master of his servant : for they purpose not their death, when they purpose their services. {Besides, there is no king, be his cause never so spotless, if it come to the arbitrement of 160 swords, can try it out with all unspotted soldiers :} some (peradventure) have on them the guilt of premeditated and contrived murder : some, of beguiling virgins with the broken seals of perjury; {some, making the wars their bulwark, that have before gored the gentle bosom of peace with pillage and robbery.} Now, if these men have defeated the law, and outrun native punishment, though they can outstrip men, they have no wings to fly from God: war is His beadle, war is His vengeance; {so 170 that here men are punish'd for before-breach of the king's laws in now the king's quarrel : where they feared the death, they have borne life away: and where they would be safe, they perish : then if they die unprovided, no more is the king guilty of their damnation than he was before guilty of those impieties, for the which they are now visited.} Every subject's duty is the king's, but every subject's soul is his own. Therefore should every soldier in the wars do as every sick man in his bed, wash every 180 moth out of his conscience : and dying so, death is to him advantage; or not dying, the time was blessedly lost, wherein such preparation was gained : {and in him that escapes, it were not sin to think that, making God so free an offer. He let him outlive that day, to see His greatness, and to teach others how they should prepare.}

- Wil. 'Tis certain, every man that dies ill, the ill upon his own head, the king is not to answer it.
- {Bat.I do not desire he should answer for me,} and yet 19C I determine to fight lustily for him.
- Hen. I myself heard the king say he would not be ransom'd.
- Wil. Ay, he said so, to make us fight cheerfully : but when our throats are cut, he may be ransom'd, and we ne'er the wiser.
- Hen. If I live to see it, I will never trust his word after.
- Wil. You pay him then. That's a perilous shot out of an elder-gun, that a poor and a private displeasure can do against a monarch! {you may as well go about to turn the sun to ice, with fanning in his face 200 with a peacock's feather.} You'll never trust his word after ! come, 'tis a foolish saying.
- Hen. Your reproof is something too round, I should be angry with you, if the time were convenient.
- Wil. Let it be a quarrel between us, if you live.
- Hen. {I embrace it.
- Wil. } How shall I know thee again ?
- Hen. Give me any gage of thine, and I will wear it in my bonnet: then, if ever thou dar'st acknowledge it, I will make it my quarrel. 210

Wil. Here's my glove: give me another of thine. {Hen. There.

Wil. This will I also wear in my cap: if ever thou come to me, and say, after to-morrow, 'This is my glove,' by this hand, I will take thee a box on the car.}

Hen. If ever I live to see it, I will challenge it.

Wil. Thou dar'st as well be hang'd.

- {Hen.Well, I will do it, though I take thee in the king's company.
- Wil. Keep thy word : fare thee well.}
- Bat. Be friends, you English fools, be friends, we have French quarrels enow, if you could tell how to reckon.
- Hen. {Indeed, the French may lay twenty French crowns to one, they will beat us, for they bear them on their shoulders :} but it is no English treason to cut French crowns, and to-morrow the king himself will be a clipper. Exernt soldiers {Upon the king | let us our lives, our souls, Our debts, our careful wives, 230 Our children, and our sins, lay on the king l We must bear all. O hard condition, Twin-born with greatness, subject to the breath Of every fool, whose sense no more can feel But his own wringing ! What infinite heart's-ease Must kings neglect, that private men enjoy ! And what have kings, that privates have not too.

Save ceremony, save general ceremony? And what art thou, thou idol ceremony? What kind of god art thou, that suffer'st more 240 Of mortal griefs than do thy worshippers? What are thy rents? what are thy comings in? O ceremony, show me but thy worth ! What is thy soul of adoration? Art thou aught else but place, degree, and form, Creating awe and fear in other men? Wherein thou art less happy, being fear'd, Than they in fearing. What drink'st thou oft, instead of homage sweet, But poison'd flattery? O, be sick, great greatness, 250 And bid thy ceremony give thee cure ! Think'st thou the fiery fever will go out With titles blown from adulation? Will it give place to flexure and low bending? Canst thou, when thou command'st the beggar's knee. Command the health of it? No, thou proud dream, That play'st so subtly with a king's repose ; I am a king that find thee; and I know, 'Tis not the balm, the sceptre, and the ball, The sword, the mace, the crown imperial, 260 The intertissued robe of gold and pearl,

The farced title running 'fore the king, The throne he sits on ; nor the tide of pomp That beats upon the high shore of this world ; No, not all these, thrice-gorgeous ceremony; Not all these, laid in bed majestical, Can sleep so soundly as the wretched slave : Who with a body fill'd, and vacant mind, Gets him to rest, cramm'd with distressful bread, Never sees horrid night, the child of hell ; 270 But, like a lackey, from the rise to set, Sweats in the eve of Phœbus ; and all night Sleeps in Elysium : next day after dawn. Doth rise and help Hyperion to his horse, And follows so the ever-running year With profitable labour to his grave : And, but for ceremony, such a wretch, Winding up days with toil, and nights with sleep, Had the fore-hand and vantage of a king. The slave, a member of the country's peace, 280 Enjoys it ; but in gross brain little wots What watch the king keeps, to maintain the peace ; Whose hours the peasant best advantages.

Re-enter Erpingham

Erp. My lord, your nobles, jealous of your absence,

Seek through your camp to find you. Hen Good old knight, Collect them all together at my tent: I'll be before thee I shall do't, my lord. Erb. Exit} Hen. O God of battles, steel my soldiers' hearts, † Possess them not with fear : take from them now The sense of reckoning of the opposed numbers : 290 Pluck their hearts from them. Not to-day, O Lord, O, not to-day, think not upon the fault My father made in compassing the crown ! I Richard's body have interred new, And on it have bestow'd more contrite tears Than from it issued forced drops of blood : Five hundred poor I have in yearly pay, Who twice a-day their wither'd hands hold up Toward heaven, to pardon blood; and I have built Two chantries, {where the sad and solemn priests 300 Sing still for Richard's soul. } More will I do : Though all that I can do is all too little, t {Since that my penitence comes after all, Imploring pardon.} Glo. (without) My lord 1 My brother Gloucester's voice. Hen.

Re-enter Gloucester

Glo. My lord, the army stays upon your presence. Hen. Stay, Gloucester, stay, and I will go with thee : The day, my friends, and all things stay for me.

Exeunt

{SCENE II

The French camp

Enter the Dauphin, Orleans, Rambures, and others

Orl. The sun doth gild our armour; up, my lords ! Dau. Montez à cheval ! My horse ! varlet ! laquais ! ha ! Orl. O brave spirit !

Dau. Via les eaux et la terre.

Orl. Rien puis ? l'air et le feu.

Dau. Ciel, cousin Orleans.

Enter Constable

Now, my lord constable?

Con. Hark, how our steeds for present service neigh.

Dau. Mount them, and make incision in their hides,

That their hot blood may spin in English eyes,

And dout them with superfluous courage, ha !

Ram. What, will you have them weep our horses' blood ?

How shall we then behold their natural tears?

Enter Messenger

Mes. The English are embattled, you French peers. Con. To horse, you gallant princes, straight to horse ! Do but behold yon poor and starved band, And your fair show shall suck away their souls. Leaving them but the shales and husks of men. There is not work enough for all our hands, Scarce blood enough in all their sickly veins 20 To give each naked curtle-axe a stain. That our French gallants shall to-day draw out, And sheathe for lack of sport. Let us but blow on them. The vapour of our valour will o'erturn them. 'Tis positive 'gainst all exceptions, lords, That our superfluous lackeys, and our peasants, Who in unnecessary action swarm About our squares of battle, were enow To purge this field of such a hilding foe; Though we upon this mountain's basis by 30 Took stand for idle speculation : But that our honours must not. What 's to sav? A very little little let us do, And all is done : then let the trumpets sound The tucket sonance, and the note to mount ; For our approach shall so much dare the field, 20 h 95

That England shall couch down in fear, and yield. Enter Grandpré

Gra. Why do you stay so long, my lords of France ? Yon island carrions, desperate of their bones, Ill-favouredly become the morning field : 40 Their ragged curtains poorly are let loose. And our air shakes them passing scornfully: Big Mars seems bankrupt in their beggar'd host And faintly through a rusty beaver peeps : The horsemen sit like fixed candlesticks. With torch-staves in their hand; and their poor jades Lob down their heads, dropping the hides and hips, The gum down-roping from the pale-dead eves. And in their pale dull mouths the gimmal bit Lies foul with chaw'd grass, still and motionless : 50 And their executors, the knavish crows, Fly o'er them, all impatient for their hour. Description cannot suit itself in words To demonstrate the life of such a battle, In life so lifeless, as it shows itself. Con. They have said their prayers, and they stay for death. Dau. Shall we go send them dinners, and fresh suits And give their fasting horses provender,

And after fight with them ?

Con. I stay but for my guidon : to the field !

I will the banner from a trumpet take, And use it for my haste. Come, come, away ! The sun is high, and we outwear the day. Exempt }

SCENE III

The English camp

Enter Gloucester, Bedford, Exeter, Erpingham, with all bis host : Salisbury and Westmoreland

{Glo.Where is the king?

Bed. The king himself is rode to view their battle.}

Wes. Of fighting men they have full three score thousand.

Exe. There 's five to one, besides they all are fresh.

Sal. God's arm strike with us, 'tis a fearful odds. {God buy you, princes all ; I 'll to my charge : If we no more meet, till we meet in heaven, Then joyfully, my noble Lord of Bedford,} My dear Lord Gloucester, and my good Lord Exeter, And my kind kinsman, warriors all, adicu ! 10 {Bed.Farewell, good Salisbury, and good luck go with thee !} Exe.Farewell, kind lord ; fight valiantly to-day : And yet I do thee wrong, to mind thee of it, †

For thou art fram'd of the firm truth of valour.

Exit Salisbury

{Bed.He is as full of valour as of kindness; Princely in both.}

Enter the King

Wes O that we now had here But one ten thousand of those men in England That do not work to-day ! Hen. What 's he that wishes so ? My cousin Westmoreland ? {No, my fair cousin : If we are mark'd to die, we are enow 20 To do our country loss; and if to live, The fewer men, the greater share of honour. God's will, I pray thee wish not one man more. By Jove, I am not covetous for gold, Nor care I who doth feed upon my cost ; It yearns me not if men my garments wear; Such outward things dwell not in my desires. But if it be a sin to covet honour, t I am the most offending soul alive. No, faith, my coz, wish not a man from England :} 20 God's peace, I would not lose so great an honour, As one man more, methinks, would share from me. For the best hope I have. O, do not wish one more! Rather proclaim it, Westmoreland, through my host, That he which hath no stomach to this feast, † Let him depart, his passport shall be drawn,

And crowns for convoy put into his purse : We would not die in that man's company That fears his fellowship, to die with us. This day is call'd the feast of Crispian : 40 He that outlives this day, and comes safe home. Will stand a tip-toe when this day is named. And rouse him at the name of Crispian. He that shall live this day, and see old age. Will yearly on the vigil feast his neighbours. And say, 'To-morrow is Saint Crispian :' Then will he strip his sleeve, and show his scars. [And say ' These wounds I had on Crispin's day.'] Old men forget : vet all shall be forgot. But he 'll remember with advantages 50 What feats he did that day : then shall our names, Familiar in his mouth as household words. Harry the king, Bedford and Exeter, Warwick and Talbot, Salisbury and Gloucester, Be in their flowing cups freshly remember'd. This story shall the good man teach his son; And Crispin Crispian shall ne'er go by. From this day to the ending of the world, But we in it shall be remembered ; 60 We few, we happy few, we band of brothers ; For he to-day that sheds his blood with me

Shall be my brother; be he ne'er so base, This day shall gentle his condition: And gentlemen in England, now a-bed, Shall think themselves accurs'd they were not here; And hold their manhoods cheap, whiles any speaks That fought with us upon Saint Crispin's day.

Re-enter Salisbury

Sal. My sovereign lord, bestow yourself with speed: The French are bravely in their battles set, {And will with all expedience charge on us.}

Hen. All things are ready, if our minds be so.

70

Wes. Perish the man whose mind is backward now !

Hen. Thou does not wish more help from England, coz ?

Wes.God's will, my liege, would you and I alone,

Without more help. could fight this battle out !

Hen. Why, now, thou hast unwish'd five thousand men; Which likes me better than to wish us one. You know your places : God be with you all !

Tucket. Enter Montjoy

Mon.Once more I come to know of thee, King Harry,If for thy ransom thou wilt now compound,80{Before thy most assured overthrow :For certainly thou art so near the gulf,Thou needs must be englutted.Besides, in mercy,The constable desires thee thou wilt mind

Thy followers of repentance ; that their souls May make a peaceful and a sweet retire From off these fields ; where, wretches, their poor hodies Must lie and fester.} Hen Who hath sent thee now? Man The Constable of France Hen. I pray thee, bear my former answer back : 90 Bid them achieve me, and then sell my bones. Good God, why should they mock poor fellows thus? The man that once did sell the lion's skin While the beast liv'd, was killed with hunting him. A many of our bodies shall no doubt Find native graves ; {upon the which, I trust, Shall witness live in brass of this day's work. And those that leave their valiant bones in France. Dying like men,} though buried in your dunghills, They shall be fam'd; for there the sun shall greet them. 100 And draw their honours reeking up to heaven, Leaving their earthly parts to choke your clime, The smell whereof shall breed a plague in France. Mark then abounding valour in our English ; That being dead, like to the bullet's grazing, t Break out into a second course of mischief.

Killing in relapse of mortality. Let me speak proudly : {tell the constable We are but warriors for the working-day : Our gavness and our gilt are all besmirch'd ITO With rainy marching in the painful field ;} There's not a piece of feather in our host-Good argument, I hope, we will not fly-And time hath worn us into slovenry : But, by the mass, our hearts are in the trim ; And my poor soldiers tell me, yet ere night They 'll be in fresher robes, or they will pluck The gay new coats o'er the French soldiers' cars And turn them out of service. If they do this-As, if God please, they shall, -my ransom then 120 Will soon be levied. Herald, save thou thy labour : Come thou no more for ransom, gentle herald, They shall have none, I swear, but these my bones ; Which if they have as I will leave 'em them, Shall yield them little, tell the constable. Mon. I shall, King Harry. {And so fare thee well : Thou never shalt hear herald any more. Exit Hen. I fear thou 'lt once more come again for ransom.}

Enter York

Yo. My lord, most humbly on my knee I beg The leading of the vaward.

IO.

Hen. Take it, brave York. Now, soldiers, march away, And how thou pleasest, God, dispose the day ! Exeant

SCENES IV-VIII

Various parts of the field of battle

Alarum. Excursions. Enter Pistol, French Soldier, and Boy

- Pis. Yield, cur !
- $\{F.S.$ Je pense que vous êtes gentilhomme de bonne qualité.
- Pis. Qualtitie calmie custure me! Art thou a gentle man? what is thy name? discuss.
- F.S. O Signeur Dieu !
- Pis. O, Siegnieur Dew should be a gentleman : Perpend my words, O Signieur Dew, and mark ; O Signieur Dew, } thou diest on point of fox, Except, O signieur, thou do give to me Egregious ransom.
- F.S. O, prenez miséricorde l ayez pitié de moi l
- Pis. Moy shall not serve, I will have forty moys; {For I will fetch thy rim out at thy throat In drops of crimson blood.
- F.S. Est-il impossible d'échapper la force de ton bras?

Pis. Brass, cur?

Thou damned and luxurious mountain goat, Offer'st me brass?

- F.S. O pardonnez moi !
- Pis. Say'st thou me so? is that a ton of moys?} Come hither, boy, ask me this slave in French What is his name.
- Boy. Ecoutez : comment êtes-vous appelé?
- F.S. Monsieur le Fer.
- Boy. He says his name is Master Fer.
- Pis. Master Fer! I'll fer him, and firk him, and ferret him : discuss the same in French unto him.
- Boy. I do not know the French for fer, and ferret, and firk.
- Pis. Bid him prepare ; for I will cut his throat. {*F.S.*Que dit-il, monsieur ?}
- Boy. Il me commande de vous dire que vous faites vous prêt; car ce soldat ici est disposé tout à cette heure de couper votre gorge.
- Pis. Owy, cuppele gorge, permafoy, {Peasant, unless thou give me crowns, brave crowns; Or mangled shalt thou be by this my sword.}
- F.S. O, je vous supplie, pour l'amour de Dicu, me pardonner! Je suis gentilhomme de bonne maison: gardez ma vie, et je vous donnerai deux cents écus. 40
- Pis. What are his words?

- Boy. He prays you to save his life, he is a gentleman of a good house, and for his ransom he will give you two hundred crowns.
- Pis.Tell him my fury shall abate, and I The crowns will take.
- {F.S.Petit monsieur, que dit-il ?
- Boy. Encore qu'il est contre son jurement de pardonner aucun prisonnier, néanmoins, pour les écus que vous l'avez promis, il est content de vous donner la liberté, 50 le franchisement.
- F.S. Sur mes genoux je vous donne mille remercîments; et je m'estime heurcux que je suis tombé entre les mains d'un chevalier, je pense, le plus brave, vaillant, et très distingué seigneur d'Angleterre.
- Pis. Expound unto me, boy.
- Boy. He gives you, upon his knecs, a thousand thanks, and he esteems himself happy, that he hath fallen into the hands of one, as he thinks, the most brave, valorous, and thrice-worthy signieur of England.
- Pis.}As I suck blood, I will some mercy show. Follow me !
- {Boy.Suivez-vous le grand capitain.} (exeunt Pistol, and French Soldier.) {I did never know so full a voice issue from so empty a heart : but the saying is true, 'The empty vessel makes the greatest sound.' Bar-dolph and Nym had ten times more valour than this roaring devil i' the old play, that every one may pare his nails with a wooden dagger, and they are both hang'd, and so would this be, if he durst steal any thing adventurously. I must stay with the lackeys, with the luggage of our camp: the French might have a good prey of us, if he knew of it; for there is none to guard it but boys. Exit

Enter Constable, Orleans, Bourbon, Dauphin, and Rambures

Con. O diable !

Orl. O Seigneur! le jour est perdu, tout est perdu! {Dau.Mort de ma vie! all is confounded, all! Reproach, and everlasting shame, Sits mocking in our plumes. O méchante fortune! Do not run away.

A short alarum

t

10

Con. Why, all our ranks are broke.

Dau. O perdurable shame 1 let 's stab ourselves : Be these the wretches that we play'd at dice for ?

Orl. Is this the king we sent to for his ransom?

Bou. Shame, and eternal shame, nothing but shame !}
Let us die in honour : once more back again, And he that will not follow Bourbon now, Let him go hence, and with his cap in hand Like a base leno hold the chamber-door, Whilst by a slave, no gentler than my dog, His fairest daughter is contaminate.

- Con. Disorder, that hath spoil'd us, friend us now l Let us on heaps go offer up our lives.
- Orl. We are enow yet living in the field To smother up the English in our throngs, If any order might be thought upon.
- Bou. The devil take order now ! I'll to the throng : Let life be short, else shame will be too long.

Exerne

20

Alarum. Enter King Henry and his train, with prisoners [and Pistol]

Hen. Well have we done, thrice valiant countrymen, But all 's not done, yet keep the French the field. Exe. The Duke of York commends him to your majesty.

Hen. Lives he, good uncle ? thrice within this hour I saw him down; thrice up again, and fighting, From helmet to the spur all blood he was. Exe. In which array, brave soldier, doth he lie, Larding the plain ; and by his bloody side, (Yoke-fellow to his honour-owing wounds) The noble Earl of Suffolk also lies. 10 Suffolk first died, and York, all haggled over. Comes to him, where in gore he lay insteep'd, And takes him by the beard, kisses the gashes That bloodily did yawn upon his face ; And cries aloud ; ' Tarry, dear cousin Suffolk ! My soul shall thine keep company to heaven : Tarry, sweet soul, for mine, then fly abreast : As in this glorious and well-foughten field We kept together in our chivalry.' Upon these words I came, and cheer'd him up, 20 He {smil'd me in the face, } raught me his hand. {And, with a feeble gripe, } says ; ' Dear my lord, Commend my service to my sovereign.' So did he turn, and over Suffolk's neck He threw his wounded arm {and kiss'd his lips,} And so espous'd to death, with blood he seal'd ŧ A testament of noble-ending love. The pretty and sweet manner of it forc'd

Those waters from me which I would have stopp'd, But I had not so much of man in me, And all my mother came into mine eyes, And gave me up to tears. Hen. I blame you not, For, hearing this, I must perforce compound With mistful eyes, {or they will issue too. Alarum But, hark !} what new alarum is this same ? {The French have reinforced their scatter'd men :} Then every soldier kill his prisoners, {Give the word through.} [Pis. Couple gorge.] Execut

Enter Fluellen and Gower

- Flu. [God's plud,] Kill the poys and the luggage! {'tis ! expressly against the law of arms,} 'tis as arrant a piece of knavery, mark you now, as can be offer'd, in your conscience now, is it not?
- Gow.'Tis certain there's not a boy left alive, and the cowardly rascals that ran from the battle ha' done this slaughter : besides, they have burned and carried away all that was in the king's tent, wherefore the king {most worthily} hath caus'd every soldier to cut his prisoner's throat. O, 'tis a gallant king !

- Flu. Ay, he was porn at Monmouth, Captain Gower: what call you the town's name where Alexander the Pig was born?
- Gow. Alexander the Great.
- Flu. Why, I pray you, is not pig great? the pig, or the great, {or the mighty, or the huge,} or the magnanimous, are all one reckonings, save the phrase is a little variations.
- Gow. I think Alexander the Great was born in Macedon, his father was called Philip of Macedon, as I take it.
- Flu. I think it is in Macedon where Alexander is porn. I tell you, captain, if you look in the maps of the 'orld, I warrant you sall find, in the comparisons between Macedon and Monmouth, that the situations, look you, is both alike. There is a river in Macedon, and there is also moreover a river at Monmouth, it is called Wye at Monmouth; but it is out of my prains what is the name of the other river; but 'tis all one, 'tis alike as my fingers is to my fingers, and there is salmons in both. If you mark Alexander's life well, Harry of Monmouth's life is come after it indifferent well; {for there is figures in all things. } Alexander, God knows, and you know, in his rages, and his furies, and his wraths, {and his cholers, and his moods,} and his displcasures, and his indignations, {and also being a little intoxicates in his prains,} did, in his ales and his angers, look you, kill his best friend, Cleitus.

10

20

- Gow. Our king is not like him in that, he never kill'd any of his friends.
- Flu. It is not well done, mark you now, to take the tales out of my mouth, ere it is made [an end] and finished.
 I speak but in the figures and comparisons of it: as Alexander kill'd his friend Cleitus, {being in his ales and his cups}; so also Harry Monmouth, being in his ripe wits, and his good judgements, turn'd away the fat knight with the great-belly doublet: {he was full of jests, and gipes, and knaveries, and mocks,} I have forgot his name.

Gow.Sir John Falstaff.

Flu. Ay, I think it is Sir John Falstaff indeed : I'll tell you, there is good men porn at Monmouth.

Gow. Here comes his majesty.

Alarum. Enter King Henry and forces; Warwick, Gloucester, Exeter, and others

Hen. I was not angry since I came to France Until this instant. Take a trumpet, herald,

Ride thou unto the horsemen on yon hill : If they will fight with us, bid them come down, Or void the field ; they do offend our sight : If they 'll do neither, we will come to them, And make them skirr away, as swift as stones Enforced from the old Assyrian slings : Besides, we 'll cut the throats of those we have, And not a man of them that we shall take Shall taste our mercy. {Go and tell them so.} Enter Montjoy

{Exe.Here comes the herald of the French, my liege. Glo. His eyes are humbler than they us'd to be.} Hen. God's will, what means this, herald? know'st thou not

That we have fin'd these bones of ours for ransom ? {Com'st thou again for ransom ?}

Mon.

{No, great king : }

I come to thee for charitable license, {That we may wander o'er this bloody field, To book our dead, and then to bury them,} To sort our nobles from our common men. {For many of our princes (woe the while !) Lie drown'd and soak'd in mercenary blood ; So do our vulgar drench their peasant limbs In blood of princes, and their wounded steeds

Fret fetlock deep in gore, and with wild rage Yerk out their armed heels at their dead masters, Killing them twice. } O, give us leave, great king, 8c To view the field in safety, and dispose Of their dead bodies !

Hen. I tell thee truly, herald, I know not if the day be ours or no, For yet a many of your horsemen peer And gallop o'er the field.

Mon.

The day is yours.

Hen. Praised be God, and not our strength, for it !

What is this castle call'd that stands hard by ? Mon. We call it Agincourt.

Hen. Then call we this the field of Agincourt, Fought on the day of Crispin Crispianus.

90

Flu. Your grandfather of famous memory (an't please your majesty) {and your great-uncle Edward the Plack Prince of Wales, as I have read in the chronicles,} fought a most prave pattle here in France.

Hen. They did, Flucllen.

Flu. Your majesty says very true: if your majesties is remembered of it, the Welshmen did good service in a garden where leeks did grow, {wearing leeks in their Monmouth caps, which your majesty know to this hour is an honourable badge of the service ;} 100 and I do believe your majesty takes no scorn to wear the leek upon Saint Tavy's day.

Hen. I wear it for a memorable honour :

For I am Welsh, you know, good countryman.

Flu. All the water in Wyc, cannot wash your majesty's Welsh plood out of your pody, I can tell you that: God pless it, and preserve it, as long as it pleases his grace, and his majesty too!

Hen. Thanks, good my countryman.

- Flu. By Jeshu, I am your majesty's countryman, I care 110 not who know it; {I will confess it to all the 'orld, I need not to be ashamed of your majesty, praised be God,} so long as your majesty is an honest man.
- Hen. God keep me so! (enter Williams.) Our heralds go with him

Bring me just notice of the numbers dead On both our parts. Call yonder fellow hither. Exeunt Heralds with Montjoy

Exe. (to Williams) Soldier, you must come to the king. Hen. Soldier, why wear'st thou that glove in thy cap?

Wil. An 't please your majesty, 'tis the gage of $\{$ one that I should fight withal, if be he alive. 120

Hen. An Englishman?

Wil. An 't please your majesty, } a rascal that swagger'd with me last night ; who, if alive, and ever dare to challenge this glove, I have sworn to take him a box o' th' ear: {or if I can see my glove in his cap, which he swore as he was a soldier he would wear (if alive), I will strike it out soundly.}

140

- Hen. What think you, Captain Fluellen, is it fit this soldier keep his oath?
- Flu. He is a craven and a villain else, an 't please your 130 majesty, in my conscience.
- Hen. It may be his enemy is a gentleman of great sort, quite from the answer of his degree.
- 7/u. Though he be as good a gentleman as the devil is, as Lucifer and Belzebub himself, it is necessary (look your grace) that he keep his vow and his oath : if he be perjur'd (see you now) his reputation is as arrant a villain and a Jack-sauce, as ever his black shoe trod upon God's ground, and his earth, in my conscience, la !
- len. Then keep thy vow, sirrah, {when you meet'st the fellow.
- 7il. So I will, my liege, as I live.
- len.} Who serv'st thou under?
- "il. Under Captain Gower, my liege.
- lu. Gower is a good captain, and is good knowledge and literatured in the wars.
- en. Call him hither to me, soldier.

Wil. I will, my liege.

Hen. Here, Fluellen, wear thou this favour for me, and 150 stick it in thy cap : when Alanson and myself were down together, I pluck'd this glove from his helm : if any man challenge this, he is a friend to Alanson, and an enemy to our person ; {if thou encounter any such, apprehend him, an thou dost me love.}

- Flu. Your grace doo's me as great honours as can be desir'd in the hearts of his subjects: I would fain see the man, {that has but two legs,} that shall find himself aggriefed at this glove; that is all; but I would fain see it once, an't please God of his grace 160 that I might see.
- Hen. Know'st thou Gower?
- Flu. He is my dear friend, an 't please you.
- Hen. Pray thee, go seek him, and bring him to my tent.
- Flu. I will fetch him. Exit
- Hen. {My Lord of Warwick, and my brother Gloucester,} Follow Fluellen closely at the heels : The glove which I have given him {for a favour May haply purchase him a box o' th' ear ;} It is the soldier's ; {I by bargain should Wear it myself. Follow, good cousin Warwick : If that the soldier strike him, as I judge By his blunt bearing he will keep his word,}

Exit

Some sudden mischief may arise of it; For I do know Fluellen valiant, And, touch'd with choler, hot as gunpowder, And quickly will return an injury: Follow, and see there be no harm between them. {Go you with me, uncle of Exeter.} Executi

Enter Gower and Williams

[Wil.I warrant it is to knight you, captain.] Enter Fluellen

⁷*lu*. God's will, and his pleasure, captain, I beseech you now, come apace to the king: there is more good toward you peradventure than is in your knowledge to dream of.

Vil. Sir, know you this glove?

- ¹/u. {Know the glove ?} I know the glove is a glove.
- Vil. I know this, and thus I challenge it. Strikes him
- 'lu. 'Sblood ! {an arrant traitor as any is in the universal world, or in France, or in England !

- ow.How now, sir? you villain!
- "il. Do you think I'll be forsworn?

Flu.)Stand away, Captain Gower, I will give treason his payment into plows, I warrant you.

{Wil.I am no traitor.

Flu. That's a lie in thy throat. I charge you in his majesty's name, apprehend him, he's a friend of the Duke Alanson's.}

Enter Warwick and Gloucester

War. How now, how now, what 's the matter?

Flu. My Lord of Warwick, here is, praised be God for 20 it, a most contagious treason come to light, look you, as you shall desire in a summer's day. Here is his majesty.

Enter King Henry and Exeter

Hen. How now, what 's the matter ?

- Flu. My liege, here is a villain and a traitor, that, look your grace, has struck the glove which your majesty is take out of the helmet of Alanson.
- Wil. My liege, this was my glove, here is the fellow of it; and he that I gave it to in change promis'd to wear it in his cap: I promis'd to strike him, if he did: I 30 met this man with my glove in his cap, and I have been as good as my word.
- Flu. Your majesty hear now, saving your majesty's manhood, what an arrant, rascally, beggarly, lousy knave it is: I hope your majesty is pear me testimony and witness, and will avouchment, that this is the glove of Alanson, that your majesty is give me, in your conscience, now.

40

Hen. Give me thy glove, soldier : look, here is the fellow of it.

'Twas I, indeed, thou promised'st to strike ; And thou hast given me most bitter terms.

- Flu. And please your majesty, let his neck answer for it, if there is any martial law in the world.
- Hen. How canst thou make me satisfaction?
- Wil.All offences, my lord, come from the heart: never † came any from mine that might offend your majesty.

{Hen.It was ourself thou didst abuse.}

- Wil. Your majesty came not like yourself: you appear'd to me but as a common man; witness the night, 50 your garments, your lowliness; and what your highness suffer'd under that shape, I beseech you to take it for your own fault, and not mine: for had you been as I took you for, I made no offence; therefore I beseech your highness pardon me.
- Hen. Here, uncle Exeter, fill this glove with crowns,
 And give it to this fellow. Keep it, fellow,
 And wear it for an honour in thy cap,
 Till I do challenge it. Give him the crowns :
 And, captain, you must needs be friends with him. 60

- Flu. By this day and this light, the fellow has mettle enough in his belly. Hold, there is twelve pence for you, {and I pray you to serve God,} and keep you out of prawls and prabbles, {and quarrels} and dissensions, and I warrant you it is the better for you.
- Wil. I will none of your money, sir, not I.
- Flu. {It is with a good will; I can tell you} it will serve you to mend your shoes: come, wherefore should you be so queamish? your shoes is not so good: 70 'tis a good silling, {I warrant you, or I will change it.}

Enter an English Herald

{Hen.Now, herald, are the dead number'd?
Her. Here is the number of the slaughter'd French.}
Hen. What prisoners of good sort are taken, uncle?
Exe. Charles Duke of Orleans, nephew to the king,
John Duke of Bourbon, and Lord Bouciqualt :
Of other lords and barons, knights and squires,
Full fifteen hundred, besides common men.

Hen. This note doth tell me of ten thousand French
80
That in the field lie slain : of {princes, in this number,
And} nobles bearing banners, {there lie dead
One hundred twenty six : added to these,
Of knights, esquires, and gallant gentlemen,

Eight thousand and four hundred; of the which,
Five hundred were but yesterday dubb'd knights:
So that, in these ten thousand they have lost,
There are but sixteen hundred mercenaries;
The rest are princes, barons, lords, knights, squires,
And gentlemen of blood and quality.
9c
The names of those their nobles that lie dead :}
Charles Delabreth, high constable of France,
Jaques of Chatillon, admiral of France,
The master of the cross-bows, Lord Rambures,
Great Master of France, the brave Sir Guichard Dolphin,
John Duke of Alanson, {Anthony Duke of Brabant,

The brother to the Duke of Burgundy,

And Edward Duke of Bar: of lusty earls,}

Grandpré and Roussi, Fauconberg and Foix, Beaumont and Marle, Vaudemont and Lestrale. 100

Here was a royal fellowship of death !

Where is the number of our English dead?

Herald shews him another paper

Edward the Duke of York, the Earl of Suffolk, Sir Richard Ketly, Davy Gam, esquire : {None else of name ;} and of all other men But five and twenty.

O God, thy arm was here;

And not to us, but to thy arm alone.
Ascribe we praise. When, without stratagem,	†
But in plain shock and even play of battle,
Was ever known so great and little loss	110
On one part and on th' other? Take it, God,
For it is only thine !	+
Exe. 'Tis wonderful !	,
Hen. Come, go we in procession to the village :
And be it death proclaimed through our host
To boast of this, or take that praise from God,
Which is his due.	†
Flu. Is it not lawful, an 't please your majesty, to tell how	• many is kill'd?
Hen. Yes, captain ; but with this acknowledgement,
That God fought for us.	120
Flu. Yes, my conscience, he did us great good.
Hen. {Do we all holy rites ;}
Let there be sung 'Non nobis' and 'Te Deum,'
The dead with charity enclos'd in clay :
And then to Calais, and to England then,
Where ne'er from France arriv'd more happier men.
Exeunt

Act Fifth

{PROLOGUE Enter Chorus

Chor.Vouchsafe to those that have not read the story, That I may prompt them : and of such as have, I humbly pray them to admit the excuse Of time, of numbers, and due course of things, Which cannot in their huge and proper life Be here presented. Now we bear the king Toward Calais : grant him there ; there seen, Heave him away upon your winged thoughts Athwart the sca : behold the English beach Pales in the flood ; with men, with wives, and boys, IO Whose shouts and claps out-voice the deep-mouth'd sea,

Which like a mighty whiffler 'fore the king Seems to prepare his way: so let him land, And solemnly see him set on to London. So swift a pace hath thought, that even now You may imagine him upon Blackheath; Where that his lords desire him to have borne

His bruised helmet, and his bended sword, Before him through the city : he forbids it, Being free from vainness, and self-glorious pride ; 20 Giving full trophy, signal, and ostent Ouite from himself, to God. But now behold. In the quick forge and working-house of thought, How London doth pour out her citizens, The mayor and all his brethren in best sort. Like to the senators of the antique Rome, With the plebeians swarming at their heels. Go forth and fetch their conquering Cæsar in: As, by a lower but loving likelihood, Were now the general of our gracious empress, 30 As in good time he may, from Ireland coming, Bringing rebellion broached on his sword. How many would the peaceful city quit, To welcome him! much more, and much more cause. Did they this Harry. Now in London place him. As yet the lamentation of the French Invites the King of England's stay at home ; The emperor's coming in behalf of France, To order peace between them; and omit All the occurrences, whatever chanc'd, 40 Till Harry's back return again to France : There must we bring him; and myself have play'd

The interim, by remembering you 'tis past. Then brook abridgement, and your eyes advance, After your thoughts, straight back again to France. Exit}

SCENE I

France. The English camp Enter Fluellen and Gower

- Gow. {Nay, that's right;} but why wear you your leek to-day? Saint Davy's day is past.
- Flu. There is occasions and causes why and wherefore in all things: {I will tell you as my friend, Captain Gower: the rascally, scauld, beggarly, lousy, pragging knave} Pistol, which you and yourself, and all the world, know to be no petter than a fellow, look you now, of no merits; he is come to me, and prings me pread and salt yesterday, look you, and bid me eat my leek: it was in a place where I could not breed no contention with him; but I will be so bold as to wear it in my cap till I see him once again, and then I will tell him a little piece of my desires.

Enter Pistol

Gow. Why, here he comes, swelling like a turkey-cock.

- Flu. 'Tis no matter for his swellings, nor his turkey-cocks. God pless you, Aunchient Pistol 1 you scurvy lousy knave, God pless you.
- Pis. Ha! art thou bedlam? dost thou thirst, base Trojan,

To have me fold up Parca's fatal web? Hence | I am qualmish at the smell of leek.

- Flu. {I pescech you heartily, scurvy lousy knave, at my desires, and my requests, and my petitions, to eat, look you, this leek :} because, look you, you do not love it, nor your affections, and your appetites and your digestions doo's not agree with it, I would desire you to eat it.
- Pis. Not for Cadwallader and all his goats.
- Flu. There is one goat for you. Strikes him {Will you be so good, scauld knave, as eat it ?}
- Pis. Base Trojan, thou shalt die.
- Flu. You say very true, scauld knave, when God's will is: I will desire you to live in the mean time, and eat your victuals: {come, there is sauce for it. (Strikes him.) You call'd me yesterday mountainsquire, but I will make you to-day a squire of low degree. I pray you fall to, if you can mock a leek, you can eat a leek.}

Gow. Enough, captain, you have astonish'd him.

20

30

- Flu. I say, I will make him eat some part of my leek, or I will peat his pate four days: {bite, I pray you, 40 it is good for your green wound, and your ploody coxcomb.}
- Pis. Must I bite?
- Flu. Yes certainly, and out of doubt and out of question too, and ambiguities.
- {Pis.By this leek, I will most horribly revenge I eat and † eat I swear—
- Flu. Eat, I pray you, will you have some more sauce to your leck? there is not enough leek to swear by.
- Pis. Quiet thy cudgel, thou dost see I eat.

50

- Flu. Much good do you, scauld knave, heartily. Nay, pray you, throw none away, the skin is good for your broken coxcomb;} when you take occasions to see leeks hereafter, I pray you mock at 'cm, that is all.
- Pis. Good.
- Flu. Ay, leeks is good : hold you, there is a groat to heal your pate.
- Pis. Me a groat?
- Flu. Yes verily, and in truth you shall take it, or I have 60 another leek {in my pocket, which you shall eat.}
- Pis. I take thy groat in earnest of revenge.
- Flu. If I owe you any thing, I will pay you in cudgels, you ²⁰ k 127 shall be a woodmonger, and buy nothing of me but cudgels. God buy you, and keep you, and heal your pate. Exit

- Pis. All hell shall stir for this.
- {Gow.Go, go, you are a counterfeit cowardly knave, will you mock at an ancient tradition, begun upon an honourable respect, and worn as a memorable trophy of predeceased valour, and dare not avouch in your deeds any of your words? I have seen you gleeking and galling at this gentleman twice or thrice. You thought, because he could not speak English in the native garb, he could not therefore handle an English cudgel: you find it otherwise, and henceforth let a Welsh correction teach you a good English condition; fare ye well.}
- Pis. Doth Fortune play the huswife with me now ? News have I that my Doll is dead i' the spital Of malady of France;
 And there my rendezvous is quite cut off. Old I do wax, and from my weary limbs Honour is cudgell'd. Well, bawd I 'll turn, And something lean to cutpurse of quick hand. To England will I steal, and there I 'll steal : And patches will I get unto these {cudgell'd} scars, And swear I got them in the Gallia wars. Exit

8т

SCENE II

France. A royal palace

Enter, at one door, King Henry, Exeter, Bedford, Gloucester, Warwick, Westmoreland, and other Lords; at another, the French King, Queen Isabel, the Princess Katherine, Alice and other Ladies; the Duke of Burgundy, and his train.

Hen. Peace to this meeting, wherefore we are met ! Unto our brother France, {and to our sister, Health and } fair time of day ; joy and good wishes To our most fair and princely cousin Katherine; And, as a branch and member of this royalty. {By whom this great assembly is contriv'd.} We do salute you, Duke of Burgundy ; {And, princes French, and peers, health to you all !} Cha. Right joyous are we to behold your face. Most worthy brother England, fairly met. 10 So are you, princes English, every one. {Isa. So happy be the issue, brother England, Of this good day, and of this gracious meeting, As we are now glad to behold your eyes, Your eyes, which hitherto have borne in them Against the French, that met them in their bent,

The fatal balls of murdering basilisks ; The venom of such looks, we fairly hope, Have lost their quality, and that this day Shall change all griefs and quarrels into love. 20 Hen. To cry amen to that, thus we appear. Isa. You English princes all, I do salute you.} Bur. My duty to you both, on equal love. {Great Kings of France and England, that I have labour'd. With all my wits, my pains, and strong endeavours, To bring your most imperial majesties Unto this bar, and royal interview, Your mightiness on both parts best can witness. Since then my office hath so far prevail'd. That face to face, and royal eye to eye, 30 You have congreeted :} let it not disgrace me. What rub, or what impediment there is, If I demand before this royal view, Why that the naked, poor, and mangled Peace, Dear nurse of arts, plenties, and joyful births, Should not in this best garden of the world, Our fertile France, put up her lovely visage? {Alas, she hath from France too long been chas'd. And all her husbandry doth lie on heaps, Corrupting in its own fertility. 40

Her vine, the merry cheerer of the heart, Unpruned, dies ; her hedges even-pleach'd, Like prisoners wildly overgrown with hair, Put forth disorder'd twigs ; her fallow leas, The darnel, hemlock, and rank fumitory Doth root upon ; while that the coulter rusts, That should deracinate such savagery ; The even mead, that erst brought sweetly forth The freckled cowslip, burnet, and green clover, Wanting the scythe, all uncorrected, rank, 50 Conceives by idleness, and nothing teems, But hateful docks, rough thistles, kecksies, burs, Losing both beauty and utility; And all our vineyards, fallows, meads, and hedges, Defective in their natures, grow to wildness. Even so our houses, and ourselves, and children, Have lost, or do not learn, for want of time, The sciences that should become our country ; But grow like savages, as soldiers will That nothing do but meditate on blood, 60 To swearing, and stern looks, diffus'd attire, And every thing that seems unnatural. Which to reduce into our former favour. You are assembled : and my speech entreats That I may know the let, why gentle Peace

Should not expel these inconveniences, And bless us with her former qualities. }

Hen. If, Duke of Burgundy, you would the peace, {Whose want gives growth to the imperfections Which you have cited,} you must buy that peace With full accord to all our just demands, {Whose tenours and particular effects You have enschedul'd briefly in your hands.

70

80

Bur. The king hath heard them; to the which, as yet, There is no answer made.

Hen. Well then; the peace

Which you before so urg'd, lies in his answer.} Cha. I have but with a cursorary eye

O'erglanced the articles: pleaseth your grace To appoint some of your council presently To sit with us {once more, with better heed To re-survey them;} we will suddenly Pass our accept and peremptory answer.

Hen. Brother, we shall. Go, uncle Exeter,
And brother Clarence, and you, brother Gloucester,
Warwick, and Huntingdon, go with the king,
{And take with you free power, to ratify
Augment, or alter, as your wisdoms best
Shall see advantageable for our dignity,
Any thing in or out of our demands,

And we'll consign thereto. Will you, fair sister, 90 Go with the princes, or stay here with us?

- Isa. Our gracious brother, I will go with them : Haply a woman's voice may do some good, When articles too nicely urg'd be stood on.
- Hen.} Yct leave our cousin Katherine here with us, {She is our capital demand, compris'd Within the fore-rank of our articles.}

Isa. She hath good leave. Exeant all except Hen., Kat.and Ati. {Hen. Fair Katherine, and most fair,

Will you vouchsafe to teach a soldier terms,

Such as will enter at a lady's ear, And plead his love-suit to her gentle heart? 100

- Kat. Your majesty shall mock at me, I cannot speak your England.
- Hen. O fair Katherine, if you will love me soundly with your French heart, I will be glad to hear you confess it brokenly with your English tongue. Do you like me, Kate?
- Kat. Pardonnez-moi, I cannot tell vat is 'like me.'
- Hen. An angel is like you, Kate, and you are like an angel.
- Kat. Que dit-il? que je suis semblable à les anges?
- 110
- Ali. Oui, vraiment, sauf votre grace, ainsi dit-il.
- Hen. I said so, dear Katherine, and I must not blush to affirm it.

- Kat. O bon Dieu ! les langues des hommes sont pleines de tromperies.
- Hen. What says she, fair one? that the tongues of men are full of deceits?
- Ali. Oui, dat de tongues of de mans is be full of deceits : dat is de princess.
- Hen. The princess is the better Englishwoman. I' faith, 120 Kate, my wooing is fit for thy understanding, I am glad thou canst speak no better English, for, if thou couldst, thou wouldst find me such a plain king that thou wouldst think I had sold my farm to buy my crown. I know no ways to mince it in love, but directly to say 'I love you :' then if you urge me farther than to say 'Do you in faith?' I wear out my suit. Give me your answer, i' faith, do, and so clap hands, and a bargain : how say you, lady?

130

- Kat. Sauf votre honneur, me understand vell.
- Hen. Marry, if you would put me to verses, or to dance for your sake, Kate, why you undid me; for the one, I have neither words nor measure; and for the other, I have no strength in measure, yet a reasonable measure in strength.} If I could win a lady at leapfrog, or by vaulting into my saddle, with my armour on my back, under the correction of bragging be it spoken, I should quickly leap into a wife: {or if I might buffet for my love, or bound my horse for her favours. I could lay on like a butcher, and sit like a 140 jack-an-apes, never off. But, before God, Kate, I cannot look greenly, nor gasp out my eloquence, nor I have no cunning in protestation ; only downright oaths, which I never use till urg'd, nor never break for urging.} If thou canst love a fellow of this temper, Kate, whose face is not worth sunburning, that never looks in his glass for love of any thing he sees there, let thine eve be thy cook. {I speak to thee plain soldier : if thou canst love me for this, take me; if not, } to say to thee that I shall 150 die, is true; but for thy love, by the Lord, no; yet I love thee too. {And while thou liv'st, dear Kate, take a fellow of plain and uncoined constancy, for he perforce must do thee right, because he hath not the gift to woo in other places : for these fellows of infinite tongue, that can rhyme themselves into ladies' favours, they do always reason themselves out again. What? a speaker is but a prater, a rhyme is but a ballad, } a good leg will fall, a straight back will stoop, a black beard will turn white, a curl'd pate 160 will grow bald, a fair face will wither, a full eve will wax hollow : but a good heart, Kate, is the sun and the moon, or rather the sun, and not the moon ; {for it shines bright, and never changes, but keeps his course truly.} If thou would have such a one, take me; and take me, take a soldier; take a soldier, take a king. And what say'st thou then to my love? speak, my fair, and fairly, I pray thee.

- Kat. Is it possible dat I sould love de enemy of France?
- Hen. No, it is not possible you should love the enemy of 170 France, Kate: but, in loving me, you should love the friend of France; for I love France so well that I will not part with a village of it; I will have it all mine: and Kate, when France is mine, and I am yours, then yours is France, and you are mine.
- Kat. I cannot tell vat is dat.
- Hen. No, Kate? I will tell thee in French, which I am sure will hang upon my tongue like a new-married wife about her husband's neck, {hardly to be shook off.} Je quand sur le possession de France, et quand † vous avez le possession de moi,—let me see, what 181 then? Saint Denis be my speed !—donc votre est France, et vous êtes mienne. It is as easy for me, Kate, to conquer the kingdom, as to speak so much more French: {I shall never move thee in French, unless it be to laugh at me.
- Kat. Sauf votre honneur, le François que vous parlez, il est meilleur que l'Anglois lequel je parle.

- Hen. No, faith, is 't not, Kate : but thy speaking of my tongue, and I thine, most truly-falsely, must needs 190 be granted to be much at one.} But, Kate, dost thou understand thus much English ? Canst thou love me ?
- Kat. I cannot tell.
- Hen. Can any of your neighbours tell, Kate? I'll ask them. Come, I know thou lovest me: and at night, when you come into your closet, you'll question this gentlewoman about me; {and I know, Kate, you will to her dispraise those parts in me that you love with your heart :} but, good Kate, mock me merci- 200 fully, the rather, gentle princess, because I love thee cruelly. {If ever thou beest mine, Kate, as I have a saving faith within me tells me thou shalt. I get thee with scambling, and thou must therefore needs prove a good soldier-breeder : } shall not thou and I, between Saint Denis and Saint George, compound a boy, half French half English, that shall go to Constantinople and take the Turk by the beard? {shall we not? what sayest thou, my fair flower-de-luce?} {Kat.I do not know dat. 210
- Hen. No; 'tis hereafter to know, but now to promise: do but now promise, Kate, you will endeavour for your French part of such a boy; and for my English moiety, take the word of a king, and a bachelor. How answer you, la plus belle Katherine du monde, mon très cher et devin déesse ?}

- Kat. Your majestee ave fausse French enough to deceive de most sage demoiselle dat is en France.
- Hen. {Now fie upon my false French! By mine honour in true English, I love thee, Kate; by which honour, 220 I dare not swear thou lovest me, yet my blood begins to flatter me that thou dost ; notwithstanding the poor and untempering effect of my visage. Now beshrew my father's ambition, he was thinking of civil wars when he got me, therefore was I created with a stubborn outside, with an aspect of iron, that, when I come to woo ladies, I fright them. But, in faith. Kate, the clder I wax, the better I shall appear: my comfort is, that old age, that ill layer up of beauty, can do no more spoil upon my face : thou hast me. 230 if thou hast me, at the worst; and thou shalt wear me, if thou wear me, better and better: and therefore tell me, most fair Katherine, will you have me? Put off your maiden blushes, avouch the thoughts of your heart with the looks of an empress, take me by the hand, and say ' Harry of England, I am thine : ' which word thou shalt no sooner bless mine ear withal, but I will tell thee aloud 'England is thine.

Ireland is thine, France is thine, and Henry Plantagenet is thine; ' who, though I speak it before 240 his face, if he be not fellow with the best king, thou shalt find the best king of good fellows. Come, your answer in broken music; for thy voice is music, and thy English broken; therefore, queen of all, Katherine, break thy mind to me in broken English;} wilt thou have me?

Kat. Dat is as it sall please de roi mon père.

- Hen. Nay, it will please him well, Kate; it shall please him, Kate.
- {Kat.Den it sall also content me.

250

Hen. Upon that I kiss your hand, and I call you my queen.

- Kat. Laissez, mon seigneur, laissez, laissez : ma foi, je ne veux point que vous abaissiez votre grandeur en baisant la main d'une de votre seigneurie indigne serviteur ; excusez-moi, je vous supplie, mon trèspuissant seigneur.
- Hen. }Then I will kiss your lips, Kate.
- Kat. Les dames et demoiselles pour être baisées devant leur noces, il n'est pas la coutume de France.
- Hen. Madam, my interpreter, what says she?

- 260
- Ali. Dat it is not be de fashion pour les ladies of France,
 - -I cannot tell vat is baiser en Anglish.
- Hen. To kiss.

{Ali.Your majesty entendre bettre que moi.

Hen. It is not a fashion for the maids in France to kiss before they are married, would she say?

- Ali. Oui, vraiment.
- Hen. O Kate, nice customs courtesy to great kings. {Dear Kate, you and I cannot be confin'd within the weak list of a country's fashion: we are the 270 makers of manners, Kate; and the liberty that follows our places stops the mouth of all find-faults, as I will do yours, for upholding the nice fashion of your country in denying me a kiss:} therefore patiently, and yielding. (Kissing ber.) You have witchcraft in your lips, Kate: {there is more eloquence in a sugar touch of them, than in the tongues of the French council;} and they should sooner persuade Harry of England than a general petition of monarchs. Here comes your father.

Re-enter the French King and his Queen, Burgundy, and other Lords

- {Bur.God save your majesty, my royal cousin, teach you our princess English ?
- Hen. I would have her learn, my fair cousin, how perfectly I love her, and that is good English.

Bur. Is she not apt?

Hen. Our tongue is rough, coz, and my condition is not smooth; so that having neither the voice nor the heart of flattery about me, I cannot so conjure up the spirit of love in her, that he will appear in his true likeness.

290

- Bur. Pardon the frankness of my mirth, if I answer you for that. If you would conjure in her, you must make a circle; if conjure up love in her in his true likeness, he must appear naked, and blind. Can you blame her then, being a maid, yet ros'd over with the virgin crimson of modesty, if she deny the appearance of a naked blind boy in her nakéd seeing self? It were, my lord, a hard condition for a maid to consign to.
- Hen. Yet they do wink and yield, as love is blind and 300 enforces.
- Bur. They are then excus'd, my lord, when they see not what they do.
- Hen. Then, good my lord, teach your cousin to consent winking.
- Bur. I will wink on her to consent, my lord, if you will teach her to know my meaning: for maids well summer'd, and warm kept, are like flies at Bartholomew-tide, blind, though they have their eyes, and then they will endure handling, which before would 310 not abide looking on.

- Hen. This moral ties me over to time, and a hot summer; and so I shall catch the fly, your cousin, in the latter end, and she must be blind too.
- Bur. As love is, my lord, before it loves.
- Hen. It is so: and you may, some of you, thank love for my blindness, who cannot see many a fair French city for one fair French maid that stands in my way.
- Cha. Yes, my lord, you see them perspectively; the cities turned into a maid; for they are all girdled with 32c maiden walls that war hath never entered.
- Hen. Shall Kate be my wife ?
- Cha. So please you.
- Hen. I am content, so the maiden cities you talk of may wait on her: so the maid that stood in the way for my wish shall show me the way to my will.}
- Cha. We have consented to all terms of reason.
- {Hen.Is 't so, my lords of England ?
- Wes. The king hath granted every article : His daughter first ; and then in sequel all,

33(

According to their firm proposed natures.}

Exe. Only he hath not yet subscribed this :

Where your majesty demands, that the King of France, having any occasion to write for matter of grant, shall name your highness in this form and with this addition, in French, Notre très-cher fils Henri, Roi d'Angleterre, Héritier de France; and thus in Latin, Præclarissimus filius noster Henricus, Rex Angliæ, et Hæres Franciæ.

- Cha. Nor this I have not, brother, so denied, 340 But your request shall make me let it pass.
- Hen. I pray you then, in love and dear alliance, Let that one article rank with the rest, And thereupon give me your daughter.
- Cha. Take her, fair son, {and from her blood raise up Issue to me, that the contending kingdoms
 Of France and England, whose very shores look pale
 With envy of each other's happiness,
 May cease their hatred ; and this dear conjunction Plant neighbourhood and Christian-like accord
 In their sweet bosoms ; that never war advance
 His bleeding sword 'twixt England and fair France.
- All. Amen !}
- Hen. Now, welcome, Kate : and bear me witness all, That here I kiss her as my sovereign queen. Flourish
- {Isa. God, the best maker of all marriages, Combine your hearts in one, your realms in one ! As man and wife, being two, are one in love, So be there 'twixt your kingdoms such a spousal, That never may ill offence, or fell jealousy, Which troubles oft the bed of blessed marriage,
 ¹⁰ I
 143

Thrust in between the paction of these kingdoms, To make divorce of their incorporate league : That English may as French, French Englishmen, Receive each other. God speak this Amen ! All. Amen !

Hen.} Prepare we for our marriage : on which day, My Lord of Burgundy, we'll take your oath, And all the peers', for surety of our leagues. Then shall I swear to Kate, and you to me ; 370 And may our oaths well kept and prosperous be ! Sennet. Execut

{EPILOGUE

Enter Chorus

Chor. Thus far, with rough and all-unable pen,
Our bending author hath pursued the story,
In little room confining mighty men,
Mangling by starts the full course of their glory.
Small time : but in that small, most greatly lived
This star of England : Fortune made his sword ;
By which the world's best garden he achieved ;
And of it left his son imperial lord.

Henry the Sixth, in infant bands crown'd King

Of France and England, did this king succeed ; 10 Whose state so many had the managing,

That they lost France, and made his England bleed: Which oft our stage hath shown; and, for their sake, In your fair minds let this acceptance take. Exit

Notes

I. i. t. bill; a project, advanced first in 1404 and renewed in 1410, for confiscating the revenues of the higher ecclesiastics.

I. i. 51. So that the art . . .; the So that is awkward, but the passage clearly means 'his discourse is so good that his theory must clearly be derived from practical experience of affairs, though it is hard to know whence he gained that experience, since . . .'

I. ii. 13. wise and learned; so Q. F reads dear and faithful.

I. ii. 72. line; F find, none of the explanations of which is convincing; Q fine, which seems even less convincing. Line on the other hand is not uncommon in the sense of 'support,' 'back up.'

I. ii. 88. Lewis; it will have been observed that Q, by reason of its cuts, has made considerable nonsense of much of this speech. But the cutter sees that as Lewis has disappeared earlier he must disappear here too, and so reads Charles.

1. ii. 94. Than amply to unbar...; this is only one suggestion among many for a vexed passage. F reads imbarre, Q imbace. Imbar means to exclude, or alternatively 'to fence in'; and neither seems to give satisfactory sense, apart from the suspiciousness of the repetition of bar two lines above. Unbar is of course graphically easy, and gives some sense, in the sense of 'surrender.'

I. ii. 99. the son dies; so Q, representing the sense of Numbers xxvii. 8 better than F's the man dies, since the daughter is only to inherit if there is no son.

I. ii. 103. great-grandsire; Edward III.

I. ii. 146-47. For you . . . France; so Q. This seems to me one of the clear cases that encourage a belief in Q. F contrives a complete, though somewhat halting and infinitely less vigorous, second line by reading:

For you shall read that my great-grandfather Never went with his forces into France.

I. ii. 154. bruit hereof; so Q. F ill neighbourhood.

I. ii. 165. sumless; Q reads shipless.

I. ii. 173. spoil; so Q. F tear, which looks like a clear case of an editor or transcriber trying to improve; the weasel has just been described as 'sucking' (even if any animal could be said to tear eggs); but the alterer's mind is full of the last-mentioned animal, the cat.

I. ii. 181. Put into parts . . .; the whole metaphor is from partsinging, consent being a common spelling for concent, i.e. harmony, and close being the 'cadence.'

I. ii. 207-9. These lines are given as in F. It is perhaps worth giving Q's reading as an example of the odd inequalities of difference between the texts :

As many arrows loosed several ways, fly to one mark : As many several ways meet in one town : As many fresh streams run in one self sea :

where fly and run seem on the whole preferable to the F readings, but self definitely worse; and where the apparent attempt of F to cure the mislineation and the metre by the omission of the second several does not in fact succeed.

I. ii. 233. waxen; Q reads paper, and as there is evidence for the affixing of epitaphs written on paper to the 'herse or grave' this may well be the right reading. If we adhere to the reading of F, then I think that the word means simply 'perishable'; this is described by H. A. Evans as 'the last resource of the desperate annotator'; but the N.E.D. gives several instances of the use of waxen not necessarily in the sense of 'perishable' but rather 'with qualities other than those expected,'e.g. a waxen coat (of mail) is a penetrable coat; and one of the instances specifically contrasts wax with the expected marble (in which contrast it does of course mean perishable).

I. ii. 254. study; so Q. F spirit.

I. ii. 263. bazard; a bazard is any one of the three 'winning openings' in the tennis court, into any of which if the ball is struck it counts a point to the striker. Chases are another technicality of this noble but intricate game; they are, roughly, points held in suspense to be played for at a later stage of the game in which they occur, but as their exact nature has no particular metaphorical significance in this passage, and an attempt to explain it would certainly be long and probably incomprehensible, I forgo the attempt.

II. Prol. 41-42. These two lines could be used as quite definite support for a view that at least the next scene was a later addition to the play, perhaps added because it was felt that the entry of Pistol, who from Q's title-page was clearly a 'draw,' was being too long delayed. The lines in themselves are suspicious; the rhyme is poor; they end the prologue with a double instead of a single couplet, which is not true of the three succeeding prologues and only dubiously true of that to Act I.; and, worst of all, they can only with difficulty be wrenched into meaning what they must mean, namely, that the change of scene which has just been elaborately announced is after all to be postponed till the king enters. Cut out these two lines, with the succeeding scene, and the continuity becomes perfect and the effectiveness of the prologue greatly increased. But if the following scene were an insertion, some such piece of cobbling would have been rendered imperative.

II. i. 9. the humour of it; so Q. F an end. It is surely more natural for Nym's first real speech to end with his characteristic phrase.

II. i. 25. (S.D.). Mistress Quickly; no doubt she ought now to be called Mistress Pistol, but it seems better to leave her under her familiar title.

II. i. 30. by this band; Q reads the more picturesque by gad's lugs, which one would readily accept, and assume that F has been at its usual process of expurgation, if it were not that oaths are very easy gags, and that this particular oath is hardly in Pistol's usual high-flown vein.

II. i. 54. Barbason; one of the fiends; cf. Merry Wives, II. ii. 311.

II. i. 74. powdering-tub etc.; a powdering tub was properly a tub in which beef was salted; it became a cant name for the sweating tub used in the sweating cure for venereal disease (cf. Timon of Athens, IV. iii. 87). In Henryson's Testament of Cressid Cressida dies a leper (lazar); and ' kite of Cressid's kind' seems to have become a stock phrase for a loose woman.

II. i. 118. tashan contigian fever; so Q. Even if it is only due to the actor, it is hard to resist it as against the still muddled, but partly regularised, reading of F, quotidian tertian.

II. iii. 13. christom; i.e. wearing the 'christom,' a white dress worn by a baby for the first month of its life.

II. iii. 18. a' babbled of green fields; perhaps the most famous of Shakespearean emendations; and the modesty with which Theobald advanced it is worth quoting. F reads a Table of green fields. An anonymous gentleman had suggested talked for Table, and Theobald comments, 'The Variation from "Table" to "talked" is not of a very great Latitude; though we may still come nearer to the Traces of the Letters, by restoring it thus: . . . and a' babled of green fields.' (In fact Theobald would have strengthened an already strong case by printing what the MS. almost certainly read, babla, a plain e:d error with a confusion of t and b). If that is not what Shakespeare wrote he would at least have been glad to have written it.

II. iii. 51. Pitch and Pay; there is no question that this means 'Pay cash down,' but much question why it means that. It is perhaps worth noticing that there is a lane near Bristol known as 'Pitch and Pay,' and that the traditional account of its name is that during an epidemic of plague the citizens pitched into a bowl of disinfectant their cash for the produce brought in to the barrier by the country people.

II. iii. 54. hold-fast is the only dog; "Brag is a good dog, but hold-fast is a better."

II. iv. 33. aged; so Q, surely a better contrast to the youth of the Dauphin's attack than the colourless noble of F.

II. iv. 120-22. An almost certain case of either cutting or addition, since the cutting or addition is so neatly done. Q omits 1. 121 and reads unless for an if.

II. iv. 123. loud; so Q, much more in key with what follows than the bot of F.

III. Prol. 6. fanning; this (Rowe's) is the accepted emendation of F's fayning, but it is difficult to be happy about it. The natural meaning would be that the streamers (or the fleet) fan (or whatever the word should be) the young Phæbus. But perhaps the solution of the difficulty is that the construction is absolute, and that Phæbus is an error for Zephyr; so that the meaning is 'while the gentle breeze fans them.'

III. iv. The French of F (and still more of Q) is an odd compost. But since Katherine and Alice were presumably supposed to speak their own language correctly, whatever they did with English, there seems no reason to retain, or even comment on, the many blunders of F and Q, nor, in a text which modernises the spelling of English, to retain the archaic spelling of French.

III. v. 14. nook-shotten; the ordinary meaning of this word, 'shot full of nooks' (cf. Holme in 1688 defining a 'Querke' as 'a nook shoten Pane, or any Pane whose sides and top run out of a square form'), suits no doubt the appearance of England on a map, but is not particularly apposite in the context: and it is worth noticing that Miss G. Jackson, who quotes from Shropshire dialect the use which supports the usual meaning, quotes also another in which the word seems to mean 'worthless,' i.e. 'shot into the (ingle)nook.'

III. vi. 41. pax; the theft is historically recorded, but by all the chroniclers as the theft of a pix, not a pax. The pix (pyx) is a vessel in which the consecrated wafer of the mass was reserved; the pax was a plate with a figure of Christ on the cross stamped on it, which was kissed by priest and congregation in 'the kiss of peace.' Q and F concur in pax (Q packs).

III. vi. 46. petty; so Q. F little; I think that we may allow Pistol an extra alliteration.

III. vi. 70. gull; the ordinary meaning is 'dupe'; but, in spite of the fool which follows, this does not seem particularly appropriate tc Pistol. The first occurrence recorded by the N.E.D. of 'gull' in the sense of 'one who gulls another' is not till 1700, but as it is from a cant dictionary, it is not unreasonable to suppose that that sense was current previously.

III. vi. 90 (S.D.). Q gives an unnecessary Clarence among the entrants, but no soldiers; F gives the unnecessary though picturesque poor soldiers, but no Gloucester, though he is wanted for the single line 173.

III. vii. 18. pipe of Hermes; what is Hermes doing with a pipe ? His normal emblem is the serpent-twined wand, the caduceus. But on one famous occasion he used the pipe, when he lulled the hundred-eyed Argus to sleep.

III. vii. 21. Perseus; why a beast for Perseus in particular? Pegasus did indeed spring from the blood of Medusa, whom Perseus killed, but his owner was Bellerophon. And Perseus has no connection in myth with any particular horse at all. The answer is probably just that Shakespeare was confusing two legends; but it is perhaps worth noticing that Q reads palfry of the sun, and one of the steeds of the sun-god might well be pure air and fire.

III. vii. 64. Le chien . . .; 2 Peter ii. 22.

IV. Prol. 2. poring; this probably is a 'transferred epithet' and means the 'dim dark, in which one can hardly see.' But 'pore' is also a variant spelling of 'pour,' which would suit well with both creeping and the wide vessel.

IV. i. 202. come, 'tis a foolish saying; so F. Q, more bluntly, your a nasse goe.

IV. i. 289-90. These three lines are given as in F, since, though something is clearly wrong, I do not think that it can be cleared up by the facile emendation of of to if (Tyrwhitt) or lest (Theobald), of which the first is graphically likely but poor in sense, while the second gives the right sense but is graphically improbable. Possess them not with fear is a feebly negative petition after steel my soldiers' bearts, and looks as though it belonged rather in such a phrase as that the opposed numbers Possess them not with fear. Q reads quite straightforwardly, though unmetrically, > steel my soldiers' hearts, Take from them now the sense of reckoning,

That the opposed multitudes which stand before them May not appal their courage.

IV. i. 302. all too little; so Q. F misses the chime on all by reading the smoother and triter nothing worth.

IV. iii. 13-14. And yet . . . valour; the transposition of these two lines (Thirlby) which in F inappositely follow 11, is supported by the Q reading, which ends with an odd and interesting phrase, Farewell kind Lord, fight valiantly to day, And yet in truth I do thee wrong, For thou art made on the true sparks of honour.

IV. iii. 28. If it be a sin . . .; it is odd to find Henry speaking in the accents of Hotspur.

IV. iii. 35, 36. feast, drawn; so Q. F fight, made.

IV. iii. 62. base; so Q, a juster contrast to gentle than F's vile.

IV. iii. 105. grazing; this emendation of Theobald is usually accepted without demur for the crasing which is read by both Q and F. But it is not satisfactory graphically, nor wholly so, on examination, in sense, since the bullet is far from dead after the ricochet. Crazing can mean 'broken in pieces.'

IV. iv. 4. Qualitite . . .; it seems waste of time to dispute over Pistol's jargon: but the words after Qualitite may represent a popular Irish refrain, 'Calen, O custure me.'

IV. v. In a text which is relying more than usual on Q it is perhaps fair to give a sample of Q at its worst. Here is this scene as given in Q:

Enter the foure French Lords

Ge. O diabello. Con.Mor du ma vie. Or. O what a day is this !

NOTES

But. O lour de boute all is gone, all is lost.
Con. We are inough yet living in the field, To smother up the English, If any order might be thought upon.
But. A plague of order, once more to the field, And he that will not follow Burbon now, Let him go home, and with his cap in hand, Like a bace leno hold the chamber doore, Why least by a slaue no gentler than my dog, His fairest daughter is contamuracke.
Con. Disorder that hath spoyld us, right us now, Come we in heapes, weele offer up our lives Unto these English, or else die with fame. Come, come along, Lets dye with bonour, our shame doth last too lone.

But it is to be noticed that, bad though this is, the Folio is nothing much to boast of, reading as it does Mor Dieu ma vie; Let us dye in once more backe againe; Wibilst a base slaue, no gentler than my dogge, His fairest daughter is contaminated (not to mention the awkwardly repeated throngs and throng, which look suspiciously like tinkering), so that the despised Quarto has to be brought in to cure it.

IV. vi. 26. seal'd...; Q reads seal'd: An argument of never-ending love, of which never-ending seems definitely preferable to noble-ending, argument, in the sense of 'proof' at least as good as testament, since there is no question of any legacy, and seal'd, in the absolute sense, with no expressed object, quite tolerable.

IV. vii. 1. Kill the poys...; one can hardly help feeling that there is some dislocation here; unless indeed Gower believes that the King has behaved better than he has. At the end of the preceding scene the order to kill the prisoners is a mere matter of expediency, to save guards, not at all a possibly legitimate revenge.

IV. viii. 46-55. The lines are given as in F; but it is perhaps interesting to give them also as they appear in Q, with, I think, an added force of simplicity and directness. My Liege, all offences come from the beart: never came any from mine to offend your majesty. You appeared to me as a common man: witness the night, your garments, your lowliness, and whatsoever you received under that habit, I beseech your majesty impute it to your own fault and not mine. For your self came not like your self: had you been as you seemed, I had made no offence. Therefore I beseech your garde to pardon me.

IV. viii. 108, 112, 116. praise, only, due; so Q. F reads respectively all, none but, only.

V. Prol. 29-34. Essex started on his Irish expedition at the end of March 1599. During the summer his triumphant return was expected. In fact he returned, very far from triumphant, in September.

V. i. 46. This speech of Pistol is regularly, and I think justly, adduced as an example of the picturesque significance of Elizabethan punctuation, or in this case the absence of punctuation.

V. i. 80. Doll; Q and F concur in this odd reading, and I hesitate to change to the obvious and generally accepted Nell (Mistress Quickly's name). It is just worth noticing that the last we heard of Doll (Tearsheet), in II. i. 73, was that she was in the spital; which may either account for the error, or be the point of the remark.

V. ii. 180-83. Je quand ... mienne; given as in F. Q cuts a great deal of this wooing scene, and drastically changes the order of what is left, but verbally alters for the worse very little; and its version of these few lines, with its brisk interchange, seems superior to F, though it would be the better of a transposition, to make it square exactly with 174, 175.

Let me see, Saint Dennis be my speed. Quan France et mon. Kate. Dat is, when France is yours. Harry. Et vous ettes amoy. Kate. And I am to you. Harry. Douck France ettes a vous. Kate. Den France sall be mine. Harry. Et Ile suy ues a vous. Kate. And you will be to me.

Glossary

MANY words and phrases in Shakespeare require glossing, not because they are in themselves unfamiliar, but for the opposite reason, that Shakespeare uses in their Elizabethan and unfamiliar sense a large number of words which seem so familiar that there is no incentive to look for them in the glossary. It is hoped that a glossary arranged as below will make it easy to see at a glance what words and phrases in any particular scene require elucidation. A number of phrases are glossed by what seems to be, in their context, the modern equivalent rather than by lexicographical glosses on the words which compose them.

Prologue

line

6 PORT, carriage 10 SCAFFULD, stage line

II COCKPIT (properly circular enclosure for cock-fighting, and so) the theatre 17 CIPHERS, noughts.

Act First

SCENE I

- 3 LIKE, sc. to have passed
- 4 SCAMBLING, scuffling
- 15 LAZARS, 'sick and poor'
- 28 CONSIDERATION, sober reflection
- 34 CURRANCE, current
- 35 HYDRA, many-headed serpent killed by Hercules (with difficulty, since for each head cut off two grew)
- 36 HIS, its

39 ADMIRING, wondering

- 43 LIST, listen to
- 46 GORDIAN, intricate (a knot tied by Phrygian king Gordius, and cut by Alexander)
- 53 which, and it
- 66 CRESCIVE, growing
- 74 EXHIBITERS, proposers (of bill)
- 86 severals, details

20 m

SCENE II

line		line
15	NICELY, with splitting hairs	175 IS NECESSITY, it is poor-
70	GLOZE, interpret	spirited to think that
137	PROPORTIONS, estimate of	necessary numbers required	190 OF SORTS, of various types
140	MARCHES, borders	194 BOOT, pillage
143	COURSING SNEAKERS, marauders	224 OUR AWE, awe of us
144	INTENDMENT, ' drive '	252 GALLIARD, dance
	GIDDY, unreliable	255 TUN, barrel
151	GLEANED, depleted	267 COMES O'ER US WITH, Casts up
160	STRAY, vagrant	against us
	· -	308 CHECK, rebuke

Act Second

PROLOGUE

12	nformation	28 GRACE OF KINGS, pattern of kingship
14	PALE POLICY, cowardly	31 LINGER, extend
18	manœuvres HONOUR WOULD THEE DO, i.e. would bring thee honour	DIGEST, manage 32 ABUSE, playing fast and loose with
	KIND, true	FORCE, reinforce, support
27	FLARFUL, apprehensive	34 SET, set forward

SCENE I

IO HUMOUR, it is bardly possible to :
gloss all the shades of meaning	88 PRESENTLY, at once
of Nym's favourite word;	106 NOBLE, 68. 8d.
trick is often the nearest	PRESENT PAY, cash down
	110 SUTLER, canteen-keeper
16 REST, resolve	125 PASSES, indulges
68 TALL, valiant

160

GLOSSARY

SCENE II

line		line
2	APPREHENDED, arrested		GULL'D, deceived
- 46	HIS SUFFERANCE, mercy to him	123	TARTAR, Tartarus = Hell
53	ORISONS, pleadings	127	AFFIANCE, loyalty
57	ENLARGE, set free	134	COMPLEMENT, completeness
61	LATF, lately appointed		BOLTED, sifted
90	PRACTICES, plots	159	SUFFERANCE, suffering
108	ADMIRATION, wonder	188	RUB, impediment
	HOOP, exclaim in astonishment ('oo-er')	192	signs, standards

SCENE 111

47 shog, trudge	56 CRYSTALS, i.e. eyes
53 WAFER-CAKES, thin cakes

SCENE IV

28 HUMOROUS, ' temperamental'	85	AV
34 EXCEPTION, taking exception	87	RA
46 OF NIGGARDLY PROJECTION, if	•
niggardly planned	89	DE
50 FLESH'D, having tasted first	90	٥v
blood	91	EV
85 SINISTER, i.e. bar-sinister	95	СН

- WKWARD, not straightforward
- ACK'D, forced (but perhaps we should read rak'd)
- EMONSTRATIVE, demonstrated
- VERLOOK, look over
- VENLY, in direct line
- HALLENGER, claimant

Act Third

PROLOGUE

5 BRAVE, resplendent

- 10 THRFADEN, WOVEN
- 12 BOTTOMS, hulks
- 14 RIVAGE, shore
- 24 CULL'D, picked

- 26 ORDNANCE, CANDON
- 27 GIRDED, besieged 32 LIKES, docs not please
- 33 LINSTOCK, the stick holding the 'match'

161

SCENE I

10 13	HARD-FAVOUR'D, grim-visaged PORTAGE, port-hole JUTTY, project over HIS, its FET, fetched OF WAR-PROOF, tried in war	24	ARGUMENT, anything more to fight for cory, pattern IN THE SLIPS, ready to be let slip (for the course)
	SCENE	11
22	CASE, either a number (as of instruments) or a pair (as of rapiers or pistols) CULLIONS, rascals BAWCOCK, fine fellow (beau cog)	48 57	ANTICS, clowns CARRY COALS, act as drudges PRESENTLY, at once PIONEERS, sappers
	SCENE	111
11	FLESH'D, see gloss on II. iv. 50	50	DEFENSIVE, defensible
	SCENE	v
7 9 13	LUXURY, ' amours ' PUT IN, grafted on OVERLOOK, overtop GRAFTERS, original stock SLOBBERY, muddy (' slob-land ') SUR-REIN'D, over-ridden	20	BARLEY-BROTH, 'barley-brew' (ale) DECOCT, heat up LAVOLTAS, CORANTOS, dances (one leaping, the other gliding)
	SCENE	٧I
75			INJURY, i.e. a boil ADMIRE, wonder at SUFFERANCE, patience

- bubo and carbuncle 107 WHELKS, pimples 147 IMPEACHMENT, hindrance 157 BLOWN, blown up

SCENE VII

line 14	HAIRS (tennis balls were stuffed	line 84	GO HAZARD, bet
	with hair)	105	HOODED, (met. from falconry)
47	PRESCRIPT, conventional	1	with eyes hooded
54	KERN, wild soldier	106	BATE, flap the wings (when bood
	FRENCH HOSE, wide breeches	1	is removed)
55	STRAIT STROSSERS, tight ' trews '

Act Fourth

PROLOGUE

12 ACCOMPLISHING, putting into	39 OVERHEARS ATTAINT, rises superior
' complete steel '	to weakness (prop. infection)
29 RUIN'D, doomed	50 roils, property swords
	53 MINDING, imagining

SCENE I

16	LIKES, pleases	203 ROUND, brusque
23	LEGERITY, liveliness	262 FARCED (stuffed, and so) pompous
38	POPULAR, vulgar	RUNNING FORE, i.e. in the mouth
44	BAWCOCK, brave fellow (beau	of one preceding
	coq)	269 DISTRESSFUL, of poverty
45	IMP, shoot, scion	274 HYPERION, the sun-god
103	CEREMONIES, trappings	279 FORE-HAND, upper hand
	MOUNTED, soared	283 ADVANTAGES, takes advantage of
106	STOOP, SWOOP (as a hawk)	300 CHANTRIES, chapels for the
140	RAWLY, destitute	chanting of memorial masses
181	MOTH, mote	SAD, grave
198	ELDER-GUN, pop-gun

SCENE II

11 DOUT, quench 18 SHALES, shells

21 CURTLE-AXE, Cutlass

28 SQUARES OF BATTLE, battle formation 29 HILDING, worthless

163

Act IV Sc. ii-continued
line	line
30 BY, nearby 35 TUCKET SONANCE, preliminary	49 GIMMAL, Jointed
35 TUCKET SONANCE, preliminary	51 EXECUTORS, inheritors
trumpet-call	60 GUIDON, banner
SCE	NE III
6 GOD BUY, good-bye to	83 ENGLUTTED, engulfed
26 YEARNS, ITKS	107 RELAPSE, either with renewed
50 ADVANTAGES, additions	deadliness or with deadly
63 GENTLE HIS CONDITION, make a gentleman of him	130 VAWARD, vanguard
70 EXPEDIENCE, haste	1
SCE	NE IV
9 Pox, sword	27 FERRET, WORTY (as a ferret) 69 WOODEN DAGGER, property dagger (' dagger of lath ')
14 RIM, midriff	69 WOODEN DAGGER, property
18 LUXURIOUS, lecherous	dagger (' dagger of lath ')
27 FIRK, beat
8C1	ENE V
8 PERDURABLE, eternal	15 LENO, pandar
SCE	NE VI
9 OWING, possessing	33 COMPOUND, come to terms with 34 Issue, overflow
21 RAUGHT, stretched out	34 Issue, overflow
SCE	NE VII
00 SKIRR, SCUITY	78 FRET, stamp
68 FIN'D, promised to pay	79 YERK, kick
72 BOOK, make list of	116 JUST NOTICE, COFFECT list
SCEN	E VIII
70 QUEAMISH, squeamish

Act Fifth

PROLOGUE

line					line
12	WHIFFIER,	officer	clearing	the	21	ткорну, token way tor a	a proces	sion			OSTENT, display

SCENE I

	SCAULD, scoundrelly	81 MALADY OF FRAM	sce, venereal
	GLEEKING, gibing	disease
73	GALLING, scotting

SCENE II

17	BALLS, eyeballs (with pun)	90 CONSIGN, agree
	BASILISKS (a) serpent whose	141 JACK-AN-APES, tame monkey
	glance was fatal, (b) large	142 GREENLY, callow
	cannon	147 GLASS, mirror
	BAR, conference	153 UNCOINED, unalloyed
42	EVEN-PLEACHED, interwoven	204 WITH SCAMBLING, with a struggle
40	COULTER, ploughshare	223 UNTEMPERING, incapable of
47	DERACINATE, UProot	softening you
52	KECKSIES , umbelliferous plants	308 WELL SUMMER'D, after a good
61	DIFFUS'D, disordered	summer
82	ACCEPT, adopted	362 PACTION, compact
	REFEMPTORY decisive

- 82 ACCEPT, adopted PEREMPTORY, decisive

This book must be returned within 3, 7, 14 days of its issue. A fine of ONE ANNA per day will be charged if the book is overdue.

