INTRODUCTION

The two volumes, World Drama, constitute a collection that is the first of its kind in English to offer a panoramic view of the dramatic achievement of the world from the earliest epoch of which any record exists to the beginning of the contemporary drama—which means the first of the modern plays of Ibsen. The modern period, from Ibsen to the present day, is well covered by fifty other collections. Aside from a very few dramatists who by universal consent could not be omitted from any such work as this, I have selected the plays of each country and epoch largely because they appeal to the mind of today, without attempting to exhibit in my table of contents a colorless reflection of the majority vote of the academic world. But in determining which nations and ages should be included I have been guided largely by historical considerations: in other words, ancient Greece could not possibly be left out, while the United States could not be admitted: our own country—until only a few years ago—had added nothing to the store of world drama. As for including a play of Shakespeare's, that would be a waste of good space: his presence may be taken for granted. I have included the living plays of the ages rather than their too glibly acknowledged masterpieces, preferring that students should read a few plays that may not take rank as supreme masterpieces to their praising the highest and being bored by them. I have tried my best not to include a single play in this book that has failed to move or delight me, in the hope that my pleasure may be shared by others; and in order to furnish historical data that has not before found its way into any anthology and to show that drama is not an exclusively literary affair, I have gone out of my way to print specimens of the informal folk drama that has undoubtedly exercised a far wider influence over the development of public taste (as well as the written drama) than we give it credit for. The Japanese farce Abstraction, the medieval French play of The Wise Virgins and the Foolish Virgins, the Italian Commedia dell'Arte The Portrait, and The Play of St. George, all belong in the picture I have tried to compose, because for every Euripides and every Shakespeare there existed a hundred humble playwrights whose very names are lost to us.

I hope therefore that the inclusion of such plays will give students the idea that drama at its best is a reflection of many phases of life; that the past as shown on the boards of the theater is not alone concerned with kings and great men, but with peasants and mechanics, saints and sinners; that it is not the exclusive province of fine writers but of inspired clowns, mountebanks and strolling mummers.

Of all the playwrights who have a place in this collection, Seneca alone is exceptional, in that it is not certain that his plays were actually written to be acted. But these have been so influential on the development of the drama of subsequent times that I have considered it wise to include one of the most brilliant examples of his extraordinary art.

To make my panorama as varied, as full and as colorful as the vast subject it aims to exhibit, I have gone to some trouble to have several plays translated that have never before been available to readers of English; others have been rescued from obscure or forgotten books or periodicals and restored to their proper places. With the assistance of generous and gifted scholars and able translators I am able to offer for the first time an authentic version of what is probably the greatest—certainly the most appealing—of Chinese plays, The Chalk Circle. The translator of that play has also provided me with a version of one of the most characteristic examples of the Italian improvised comedy, The Portrait. The Italian folk comedy Bilora and the French miracle play of The Wise Virgins and the Foolish Virgins are likewise for the first time made available in English translations. The Adam has not hitherto been accessible except in a back number of a scholarly university publication; Abstraction is reprinted from a collection that has for many years been out of print, and the same is true of several other items in the table of contents. The translations of The Cave of Salamanca and Jeppé of the Hill were made especially for these volumes; while the translations of The King, the Greatest Alcalde, The Demi-Monde, and M. Poirier's Son-in-Law were completely revised.

Taken as a whole, then, the plays in World Drama proclaim the never-ending stream of vital energy that underlies every form of artistic creation; they are a pageant of the life of man.

As such I am going to let them tell their own story, without comment. The student who wants to inquire into the background that produced these plays may refer to such books as Sheldon Cheney's The Theater; R. J. Taylor's Story of the Drama; and Thomas Wood Stevens' The Theatre: From Athens to Broadway.

SCENE—A Rocky Desert in European Scythia.

[Enter MIGHT and FORCE, leading in PROMETHEUS; HEPHAËSTUS, with chains.] MIGHT. At length the utmost bound of Earth we've reached, This Scythian soil, this wild untrodden waste. Hephaestus now Jove's high behests demand Thy care; to these steep cliffy rocks bind down With close-linked chains of during adamant This daring wretch. For he the bright-rayed fire, Mother of arts, flower of thy potency, Filched from the gods, and gave to mortals. Here, Just guerdon of his sin shall find him; here Let his pride learn to bow to Jove supreme,	And love men well, but love them not too much. HEPHAËSTUS. Ye twain, rude Might and Force, have done your work To the perfect end; but I—my heart shrinks back From the harsh task to nail a kindred god To this storm-battered crag. Yet dare I must. Where Jove commands, whoso neglects rebels, And pays the traitor's fine. High-counselled son Of right-decreeing Themis, I force myself No less than thee, when to this friendless rock With iron bonds I chain thee, where nor shape Nor voice of wandering mortal shall relieve

Thy lonely watch; but the fierce-burning sun
 Shall parch and bleach thy fresh complexion. Thou, When motley-mantled Night hath hid the
 day,
 Shalt greet the darkness, with how short a joy!
 For the morn's sun the nightly dew shall scatter,
 And thou be pierced again with the same pricks
 Of endless woe—and saviour shall be none.
 Such fruits thy forward love to men hath wrought thee.
 Thyself a god, the wrath of gods to thee
 Seemed little, and to men thou didst dispense Forbidden gifts. For this thou shalt keep watch
 On this delightless rock, fixed and erect,
 With lid unsleeping, and with knee un-bent.
 Alas! what groans and wails shalt thou pour forth Fruitless. Jove is not weak that he should bend;
 For young authority must ever be Harsh and severe.
 MIGHT. Enough of words and tears.
 This god, whom all the gods detest, wilt thou
 Not hate, thou, whom his impious larceny
 Did chiefly injure?
 HEPHAESTUS. But, my friend, my kinsman—
 MIGHT. True, that respect; but the dread father's word Respect much more. Jove's word respect and fear.
 HEPHAESTUS. Harsh is thy nature, and thy heart is full Of pitiless daring.
 MIGHT. Tears were wasted here,
 And labour lost is all concern for him.
 HEPHAESTUS. O thrice-cursed trade, that e'er my hand should use it!
 MIGHT. Curse not thy craft; the cunning of thy hand
 Makes not his woes; he made them for himself.

HEPHAESTUS. Would that some other hand had drawn the lot
 To do this deed!
 MIGHT. All things may be, but this To dictate to the gods. There's one that's free,
 One only: Jove.
 HEPHAESTUS. I know it, and am dumb.
 MIGHT. Then gird thee to the work,
 chain down the culprit,
 Lest Jove thy laggard zeal behold, and blame.
 HEPHAESTUS. The irons here are ready.
 MIGHT. Take them, and strike
 Stout blows with the hammer; nail him to the rock.
 HEPHAESTUS. The work speeds well, and lingers not.
 MIGHT. Strike! strike!
 With ring, and clamp, and wedge make sure the work.
 He hath a subtle wit will find itself
 A way where way is none.
 HEPHAESTUS. This arm is fast.
 MIGHT. Then clasp this other. Let the sophist know,
 Against great Jove how dull a thing is wit.
 HEPHAESTUS. None but the victim can reprove my zeal.
 MIGHT. Now take this adamant bolt, and force
 Its point resistless through his rebel breast.
 HEPHAESTUS. Alas! alas! Prometheus,
 but I pity thee!
 MIGHT. Dost lag again, and for Jove's enemies weep
 Fond tears? Beware thou have no cause to weep
 Tears for thyself.
 HEPHAESTUS. Thou see'st no sightly sight
 For eyes to look on.
 MIGHT. I behold a sower Reaping what thing he sow. But take these thongs,
 And bind his sides withal.
 HEPHAESTUS. I must! I must!
 Nor needs thy urging.

MIGHT. Nay, but I will urge,
Command, and bellow in thine ear! Proceed,

Lower—yet lower—and with these iron rings

Enclasp his legs.

HEPHAESTUS. 'Tis done, and quickly done.

MIGHT. Now pierce his feet through with these nails. Strike hard!

There's one will sternly prove thy work, and thee.

HEPHAESTUS. Harsh is thy tongue, and, like thy nature, hard.

MIGHT. Art thou a weakling, do not therefore blame

The firm harsh-fronted will that suits my office.

HEPHAESTUS. Let us away. He's fettered limb and thew.

MIGHT. There lie, and feed thy pride on this bare rock,

Filching gods' gifts for mortal men. What man

Shall free thee from these woes? Thou hast been called

In vain the Provident: had thy soul possessed

The virtue of thy name, thou hadst foreseen

These cunning toils, and hadst unwound thee from them.

[Hæcunt all, except PROMETHEUS, who is left chained.]

PROMETHEUS. O divine ether, and swift-winged winds,

And river-fountains, and of ocean waves

The multitudinous laughter, and thou Earth,

Boon mother of us all, and thou bright round

Of the all-seeing Sun, you I invoke!

Behold what ignominy of causeless wrongs I suffer from the gods, myself a god.

See what piercing pains shall goad me

Through long ages myriad-numbered!

With such wrongful chains hath bound me

This new leader of the gods.

Ah me! present woes and future

I bemoan. O! when, O! when Shall the just redemption dawn?

Yet why thus prate? I know what ills await me.

No unexpected torture can surprise

My soul prophetic; and with quiet mind

We all must bear our portioned fate, nor idly

Court battle with a strong necessity.

Alas! alas! 'tis hard to speak to the winds;

Still harder to be dumb! my well-deservings

To mortal men are all the offence that bowed me

Beneath this yoke. The secret fount of fire

I sought, and found, and in a reed concealed it;

Whence arts have sprung to man, and life hath drawn

Rich store of comforts. For such deed I suffer

These bonds, in the broad eye of gracious day.

Here crucified. Ah me! ah me! who comes? What sound, what viewless breath, thus taints the air,

God sent, or mortal, or of mingled kind? What errant traveller ill-spiced comes to view

This naked ridge of extreme Earth, and me?

Whoe'er thou art, a hapless god thou see'st

Nailed to this crag; the foe of Jove thou see'st.

Him thou see'st, whom all the Immortals

Whoso tread the Olympian threshold, Name with hatred; thou beholdest

Man's best friend, and, therefore, hated

For excess of love.

Hark, again! I hear the whirring

As of winged birds approaching;

With the light strokes of their pinions

Ether pipes ill-boding whispers!—

Alas! alas! that I should fear

Each breath that nears me.

[The OCEANIDES approach, borne through the air in a winged car.]

STROPHE 1

CHORUS. Fear nothing; for a friendly band approaches;
Fleet rivalry of wings
Oar'd us to this far height, with hard consent

Wrung from our careful sire
The winds swift-sweeping bore me: for I heard

The harsh hammer's note deep deep in ocean caves,

And, throwing virgin shame aside, unshod
The winged car I mounted.

PROMETHEUS. Ah! ah!
Daughters of prolific Tethys,
And of ancient father Ocean,
With his sleepless current whirling
Round the firm ball of the globe.
Look! with rueful eyes behold me
Nailed by adamantine rivets,
Keeping weary watch unenvied
On this tempest-rifted rock!

ANTISTROPHE 1

CHORUS. I look, Prometheus; and a tearful cloud

My woeful sight bedims,
To see thy goodliest form with insult chained,

In adamantine bonds,
To this bare crag, where pinching airs shall blast thee.

New gods now hold the helm of Heaven;
new laws

Mark Jove's unrighteous rule; the giant trace

Of Titan times hath vanished.

PROMETHEUS. Deep in death-receiving Hades

Had he bound me, had he whelmed me
In Tartarean pit, unfathomed,
Fettered with unyielding bonds!
Then nor god nor man had feasted
Eyes of triumph on my wrongs,
Nor I, thus swung in middle ether,
Moved the laughter of my foes.

STROPHE 2

CHORUS. Which of the gods hath heart so hard

To mock thy woes? Who will withhold
The fellow-feeling and the tear,
Save only Jove. But he doth nurse
Strong wrath within his stubborn breast,
And holds all Heaven in awe.

Nor will he cease till his hot rage is glutted,

Or some new venture shakes his stable throne.

PROMETHEUS. By my Titan soul, I swear
it!

Though with harsh chains now he mocks
me,

Even now the hour is ripening,
When this haughty lord of reaven
Shall embrace my knees, beseeching
Me to unveil the new-forged counsels
That shall hurl him from his throne.
But no honey-tongued persuasion,
No smooth words of artful charming,
No stout threats shall loose my tongue,
Till he loose these bonds of insult,
And himself make just atonement
For injustice done to me.

ANTISTROPHE 2

CHORUS. Thou art a bold man, and defiant

The keenest pangs to force thy will.
With a most unreined tongue thou speak-est;

But me—sharp fear hath pierced my heart.

I fear for thee: and of thy woes

The distant, doubtful end

I see not. O, 'tis hard, most hard to reach The heart of Jove! prayer beats his ear in vain.

PROMETHEUS. Harsh is Jove, I know—he frameth

Justice for himself; but soon,
When the destined arm o'ertakes him,
He shall tremble as a child.

He shall smooth his bristling anger,
Courting friendship shunned before,
More importunate to unbind me
Than impatient I of bonds.

CHORUS. Speak now, and let us know the whole offence
Jove charges thee withal; for which he seized,

And with dishonour and dire insult loads thee.

Unfold the tale; unless, perhaps, such sorrow

Irks thee to tell.

PROMETHEUS. To tell or not to tell
Irks me the same; which way I turn is pain.

When first the gods their fatal strife began,

And insurrection raged in Heaven—some striving

To cast old Kronos from his hoary throne,
That Jove might reign, and others to crush i' the bud

His swelling mastery—I wise counsel gave
To the Titans, sons of primal Heaven and Earth;

But gave in vain. Their dauntless stubborn souls

Spurned gentle ways, and patient-working wiles,

Weening swift triumph with a blow. But me,

My mother Themis, not once but oft, and Earth

(One shape of various names), prophetic told

That violence and rude strength in such a strife

Were vain—craft haply might prevail.
This lesson

I taught the haughty Titans, but they deigned

Scarce with contempt to hear my prudent words.

Thus baffled in my plans, I deemed it best,

As things then were, leagued with my mother Themis,

To accept Jove's proffered friendship. By my counsels

From his primeval throne was Kronos hurled

Into the pit Tartarean, dark, profound,
With all his troop of friends. Such was the kindness

From me received by him who now doth hold

The masterdom of Heaven; these the rewards

Of my great zeal: for so it hath been ever.
Suspicion's a disease that cleaves to tyrants,

And they who love most are the first suspected.

As for your question, for what present fault

I bear the wrong that now afflicts me, hear.

Soon as he sat on his ancestral throne
He called the gods together, and assigned
To each his fair allotment, and his sphere
Of sway supreme; but, ah! for wretched man!

To him nor part nor portion fell: Jove vowed

To blot his memory from the Earth, and mould

The race anew. I only of the gods
Thwarted his will; and, but for my strong aid,

Hades had whelmed, and hopeless ruin swamped

All men that breathe. Such were my crimes: these pains

Grievous to suffer, pitiful to behold,
Were purchased thus; and mercy's now denied

To him whose crime was mercy to mankind:

And here I lie, in cunning torment stretched,

A spectacle inglorious to Jove.

CHORUS. An iron-heart were his, and flinty hard,

Who on thy woes could look without a tear,

Prometheus; I had liefer not so seen thee,
And seeing thee fain would call mine eyesight liar.

PROMETHEUS. Certes no sight am I for friends to look on.

CHORUS. Was this thy sole offence?

PROMETHEUS. I taught weak mortals
Not to foresee harm, and forestall the Fates.

CHORUS. A sore disease to anticipate mischance:

How didst thou cure it?

PROMETHEUS. Blind hopes of good I planted

In their dark breasts.

CHORUS. That was a boon indeed,
To ephemeral man.

PROMETHEUS. Nay more, I gave them
fire.

CHORUS. And flame-faced fire is now enjoyed by mortals?

PROMETHEUS. Enjoyed, and of all arts the destined mother.

CHORUS. And is this all the roll of thy offendings

That he should rage so fierce? Hath he not set

Bounds to his vengeance?

PROMETHEUS. None, but his own pleasure.

CHORUS. And when shall he please?
Vain the hope; thou say'st

That thou hast erred; and that thou hast
to us

No pleasure brings, to thee excess of pain.
Of this enough. Seek now to cure the evil.

PROMETHEUS. 'Tis a light thing for him whose foot's unwarped

By misadventure's meshes to advise
And counsel the unfortunate. But I

Foreknew my fate, and if I erred, I erred
With conscious purpose, purchasing man's weal

With mine own grief. I knew I should offend

The Thunderer, though deeming not that he

Would perch me thus to pine 'twixt Earth and Sky,

Of this wild wintry waste sole habitant.

But cease to weep for ills that weeping mends not;

Descend, and I'll discourse to thee at length

Of chances yet to come. Nay, do not doubt;

But leave thy car, nor be ashamed to share

The afflictions of the afflicted; for Mishap,
Of things that lawless wander, wanders
most:

With me to-day it is with you to-morrow.

CHORUS. Not to sluggish ears, Prometheus,

Hast thou spoken thy desire;

From our breeze-borne car descending,
With light foot we greet the ground.
Leaving ether chaste, smooth pathway
Of the gently-winnowing wing,
On this craggy rock I stand,
To hear the tale, while thou may'st tell it,
Of thy sorrows to the end.

[Enter OCEAN.]

OCEAN. From my distant caves cerulean
This fleet-pinioned bird hath borne me;

Needed neither bit nor bridle,
Thought instinctive reined the creature;

Thus, to know thy griefs, Prometheus,
And to grieve with thee I come.

Soothly strong the tie of kindred
Binds the heart of man and god;

But, though no such tie had bound me,
I had wept for thee the same.

Well thou know'st not mine the cunning
To discourse with glozing phrase:

Tell me how I may relieve thee,
I am ready to relieve;

Friend thou boastest none than Ocean
Surer, in the hour of need.

PROMETHEUS. How now, old Ocean!
thou too come to view

My dire disasters?—how should'st thou have dared,

Leaving the billowy stream whose name
thou bearest,

Thy rock-roofed halls, and self-built palaces,

To visit this Scythian land, stern mother of iron,

To know my sorrows, and to grieve with
me?

Look on this sight—thy friend, the friend of Jove,

Who helped him to the sway which now
he bears,

Crushed by the self-same god himself exalted.

OCEAN. I see, Prometheus; and I come to speak

A wise word to the wise; receive it wisely.
Know what thou art, and make thy manners new;

For a new king doth rule the subject gods.
Compose thy speech, nor cast such whetted
words

'Gainst Jove, who though he sits apart sublime,
 Hath ears, and with new pains may smite his victim,
 To which his present wrath shall seem a toy.
 Listen to me; slack thy fierce ire, and seek Speedy deliverance from these woes. Trite wisdom
 Belike I speak, Prometheus; but thou knowest
 A lofty-sounding tongue with passionate phrase
 Buys its own ruin. Proud art thou, unyielding,
 And heap'st new woes tenfold on thine own head.
 Why should'st thou kick against the pricks? Jove reigns
 A lord severe, and of his acts need give Account to none. I go to plead for thee, And, what I can, will try to save my kinsman;
 But be thou calm the while; curb thy rash speech,
 And let not fame report that one so wise Fell by the forfeit of a foolish tongue.
 PROMETHEUS. Count thyself happy, Ocean, being free
 From blame, who shared and dared with me. Be wise
 And what thy meddling aids not, let alone. In vain thou plead'st with him; his ears are deaf.
 Look to thyself: thy errand is not sate.
 OCEAN. Wise art thou, passing wise, for others' weal,
 For thine own good most foolish. Prithee do not So stretch thy stubborn whim to pull against
 The friends that pull for thee. 'Tis no vain boast;
 I know that Jove will hear me.
 PROMETHEUS. Thou art kind;
 And for thy kind intent and friendly feeling
 Have my best thanks. But do not, I beseech thee, Waste labour upon me. If thou wilt labour,
 Seek a more hopeful subject. Thou wert wiser,
 Being safe, to keep thee safe. I, when I suffer,
 Wish not that all my friends should suffer with me.
 Enough my brother Atlas' miseries grieve me.
 Who in the extreme West stands, stoutly bearing
 The pillars of Heaven and Earth upon his shoulders,
 No lightsome burden. Him too, I bewail,
 That made his home in dark Cilician caverns.
 The hostile portent, Earth-born, hundred-headed Impetuous Typhon, quelled by force, who stood Alone, against the embattled host of gods,
 Hissing out murder from his monstrous jaws;
 And from his eyes there flashed a Gorgon glare,
 As he would smite the tyranny of great Jove
 Clean down; but he, with sleepless thunder watching,
 Hurl'd headlong a flame-breathing bolt, and laid
 The big-mouthed vaunter low. Struck to the heart
 With blasted strength, and shrunk to ashes, there
 A huge and helpless hulk, outstretched he lies,
 Beside the salt sea's strait, pressed down beneath
 The roots of Ætna, on whose peaks Hephaestus Sits hammering the hot metal. Thence, one day, Shall streams of liquid fire, swift passage forcing,
 With savage jaws the wide-spread plains devour
 Of the fair-fruited Sicily. Such hot shafts,
 From the flame-breathing ferment of the deep,

Shall Typhon cast with sateless wrath, though now
 All scorched and cindered by the Thunderer's stroke,
 Moveless he lies. But why should I teach thee?
 Thou art a wise man, thine own wisdom use
 To save thyself. For me, I'll even endure
 These pains, till Jove shall please to slack his ire.
 OCEAN. Know'st thou not this, Prometheus, that mild words
 Are medicines of fierce wrath?
 PROMETHEUS. They are, when spoken
 In a mild hour; but the high-swelling heart
 They do but fret the more.
 OCEAN. But, in the attempt
 To ward the threatened harm, what evil see'st thou?
 PROMETHEUS. Most bootless toil, and folly most inane.
 OCEAN. Be it so; but yet 'tis sometimes well, believe me,
 That a wise man should seem to be a fool.
 PROMETHEUS. Seem fool, seem wise, I, in the end, am blamed.
 OCEAN. Thy reckless words reluctant send me home.
 PROMETHEUS. Beware, lest love for me make thyself hated.
 OCEAN. Of whom? Of him, who, on the all-powerful throne Sits, a new lord?
 PROMETHEUS. Even him. Beware thou vex not Jove's jealous heart.
 OCEAN. In this, thy fate shall warn me.
 PROMETHEUS. Away! farewell; and may the prudent thoughts,
 That away thy bosom now, direct thee ever.
 OCEAN. I go, and quickly. My four-footed bird
 Brushes the broad path of the limpid air
 With forward wing: right gladly will he bend
 The wearied knee on his familiar stall.

CHORAL HYMN

STROPHE 1

Thy dire disasters, unexampled wrongs,
 I weep, Prometheus.
 From its soft founts distilled the flowing tear
 My cheek bedashes.
 'Tis hard, most hard! By self-made laws Jove rules,
 And 'gainst the host of primal gods he points
 The lordly spear.

ANTISTROPHE 1

With echoing groans the ambient waste bewails
 Thy fate, Prometheus;
 The neighbouring tribes of holy Asia weep
 For thee, Prometheus;
 For thee and thine! names mighty and revered
 Of yore, now shamed, dishonoured, and cast down,
 And chained with thee.

STROPHE 2

And Colchis, with her belted daughters, weeps
 For thee, Prometheus;
 And Scythian tribes, on Earth's remotest verge,
 Where lone Mæotis spreads her wintry waters,
 Do weep for thee.

ANTISTROPHE 2

The flower of Araby's wandering warriors weep
 For thee, Prometheus;
 And they who high their airy holds have perched
 On Caucasus' ridge, with pointed lances bristling,
 Do weep for thee.

EPODE

One only vexed like thee, and even as thou,
 In adamant bound,

A Titan, and a god scorned by the gods,
 Atlas I knew.
 He on his shoulders the surpassing weight
 Of the celestial pole stoutly upbore,
 And groaned beneath.
 Roars billowy Ocean, and the Deep sucks
 back
 Its waters when he sobs; from Earth's dark caves
 Deep hell resounds;
 The fountains of the holy-streaming rivers
 Do moan with him.
 PROMETHEUS. Deem me not self-willed, nor with pride high-strung,
 That I am dumb; my heart is gnawed
 to see Myself thus mocked and jeered. These gods, to whom Owe they their green advancement but to
 me?
 But this ye know; and, not to teach the taught,
 I'll speak of it no more. Of human kind,
 My great offence in aiding them, in teaching
 The babe to speak, and rousing torpid mind
 To take the grasp of itself—of this I'll talk;
 Meaning to mortal men no blame, but only
 The true recital of mine own deserts.
 For, soothly, having eyes to see they saw
 not,
 And hearing heard not; but like dreamy
 phantoms,
 A random life they led from year to year,
 All blindly floundering on. No craft they knew
 With woven brick or jointed beam to pile
 The sunward porch; but in the dark earth
 burrowed
 And housed, like tiny ants in sunless caves.
 No signs they knew to mark the wintry year:
 The flower-strewn Spring, and the fruit-laden Summer,
 Uncaledared, unregistered, returned—

Till I the difficult art of the stars revealed,
 Their risings and their settings. Numbers, too,
 I taught them (a most choice device) and how
 By marshalled signs to fix their shifting
 thoughts,
 That Memory, mother of Muses, might achieve Her wondrous works. I first slaved to the yoke
 Both ox and ass. I, the rein-loving steeds (Of wealth's gay-flaunting pomp the chiefest pride)
 Joined to the car; and bade them ease the toils
 Of labouring men vicarious. I the first
 Upon the lint-winged car of mariner Was launched, sea-wandering. Such wise arts I found
 To soothe the ills of man's ephemeral life;
 But for myself, plunged in this depth of
 woe,
 No prop I find.
 CHORUS. Sad chance! Thy wit hath slept
 From its firm footing then when needed
 most,
 Like some unlearned leech who many healed,
 But being sick himself, from all his store,
 Cannot cull out one medicinal drug.
 PROMETHEUS. Hear me yet farther;
 and in hearing marvel.
 What arts and curious shifts my wit devised.
 Chiefest of all, the cure of dire disease Men owe to me. Nor healing food, nor drink,
 Nor unguent knew they, but did slowly wither
 And waste away for lack of pharmacy.
 Till taught by me to mix the soothing drug,
 And check corruption's march. I fixed the art
 Of divination with its various phase
 Of dim revealings, making dreams speak
 truth,
 Stray voices, and encounters by the way

Significant; the flight of taloned birds
 On right and left I marked—these fraught with ban,
 With blissful augury those; their way of
 life,
 Their mutual loves and enmities, their flocks,
 And friendly gatherings; the entrails'
 smoothness,
 The hue best liked by the gods, the gall,
 the liver
 With all its just proportions. I first wrapped
 In the smooth fat the thighs; first burnt
 the loins,
 And from the flickering flame taught men
 to spell
 No easy lore, and cleared the fire-faced signs Obscure before. Yet more: I probed the Earth,
 To yield its hidden wealth to help man's weakness—
 Iron, copper, silver, gold. None but a fool,
 A prating fool, will stint me of this praise.
 And thus, with one short word to sum
 the tale,
 Prometheus taught all arts to mortal
 men.

CHORUS. Do good to men, but do it with discretion.
 Why shouldst thou harm thyself? Good hope I nurse
 To see thee soon from these harsh chains unbound,
 As free, as mighty, as great Jove himself.

PROMETHEUS. This may not be; the destined course of things Fate must accomplish; I must bend me
 yet
 'Neath wrongs on wrongs, ere I may 'scape
 these bonds.
 Though Art be strong, Necessity is stronger.

CHORUS. And who is lord of strong Necessity?

PROMETHEUS. The triform Fates, and the sure-memoried Furies.

CHORUS. And mighty Jove himself must yield to them?

PROMETHEUS. No more than others
 Jove can 'scape his doom.

CHORUS. What doom?—No doom hath he but endless sway.

PROMETHEUS. 'Tis not for thee to know: tempt not the question.

CHORUS. There's some dread mystery in thy chary speech,

Close-veiled.

PROMETHEUS. Urge this no more: the truth thou'lt know

In fitting season; now it lies concealed
 In deepest darkness! for relenting Jove Himself must woo this secret from my breast.

STROPHE 1

Never, O never may Jove,
 Who in Olympus reigns omnipotent lord,
 Plant his high will against my weak opinion!

Let me approach the gods
 With blood of oxen and with holy feasts,
 By Father Ocean's quenchless stream, and pay

No backward vows:
 Nor let my tongue offend; but in my heart
 Be lowly wisdom graven.

ANTISTROPHE 1

For thus old Wisdom speaks:
 Thy life 'tis sweet to cherish, and while the length
 Of years is thine, thy heart with cheerful hopes

And lightsome joys to feed.
 But thee—ah me! my blood runs cold to see thee,
 Pierced to the marrow with a thousand pains.

Not fearing Jove,
 Self-willed thou hast respect to man,
 Prometheus,
 Much more than man deserveth.

STROPHE 2

For what is man? behold!
 Can he requite thy love—child of a day—

Or help thy extreme need? Hast thou not seen

The blind and aimless strivings,
The barren blank endeavour,
The pithless deeds, of the fleeting dreamlike race?

Never, O nevermore,
May mortal wit Jove's ordered plan deceive.

ANTISTROPHE 2

This lore my heart hath learned
From sight of thee, and thy sharp pains, Prometheus.

Alas! what diverse strain I sang thee
then,

Around the bridal chamber,
And around the bridal bath,
When thou my sister fair, Hesione,
Won by rich gifts didst lead
From Ocean's caves thy spousal bed to share.

[Enter Io.]

What land is this?—what race of mortals

Owens this desert? who art thou,
Rock-bound with these wintry fetters,
And for what crime tortured thus?
Worn and weary with far travel,
Tell me where my feet have borne me!
O pain! pain! pain! it stings and goads
me again,

The fateful brize!—save me, O Earth!
Avant

Thou horrible shadow of the Earth-born Argus!

Could not the grave close up thy hundred
eyes,

But thou must come,
Haunting my path with thy suspicious
look,

Unhoused from Hades?
Avant! avant!—why wilt thou hound
my track,
The famished wanderer on the waste seashore?

STROPHE

Pipe not thy sounding wax-compacted reed
With drowsy drone at me! Ah wretched
me!

Wandering, still wandering o'er wide Earth, and driven

Where, where? O tell me where?
O Son of Kronos, in what damned sin
Being caught hast thou to misery yoked
me thus,

Pricked me to desperation, and my heart
Pierced with thy furious goads?

Blast me with lightnings! bury me in Earth! To the gape

Of greedy sea-monsters give me! Hear,
O hear

My prayer, O King!

Enough, enough, these errant toils have tried me;

And yet no rest I find: nor when, nor where

These woes shall cease may know.

CHORUS. Dost hear the plaint of the ox-horned maid?

PROMETHEUS. How should I not? the Inachian maid who knows not,
Stung by the god-sent brize? the maid who smote

Jove's lustful heart with love: and his harsh spouse

Hounds her o'er Earth with chase interminable.

ANTISTROPHE

Io. My father's name thou know'st, and my descent!

Who art thou? god or mortal? Speak!
what charm

Gives wretch like thee, the certain clue to know

My lamentable fate?

Aye, and the god-sent plague thou know'st;
the sting

That spurs me o'er the far-stretched Earth; the god

That mads me sheer, wastes, withers, and consumes,

A worn and famished maid,

Whipt by the scourge of jealous Hera's wrath!

Ah me! ah me! Misery has many shapes,

But none like mine.

O thou, who named my Argive home, declare

What ills await me yet; what end; what hope?
 If hope there be for Io.
 CHORUS. I pray thee speak to the weary way-worn maid.
 PROMETHEUS. I'll tell thee all thy wish, not in enigmas Tangled and dark, but in plain phrase, as friend Should speak to friend. Thou see'st Prometheus, who
 To mortal men gifted immortal fire.
 Io. O thou, to man a common blessing given,
 What crime hath bound thee to this wintry rock?
 PROMETHEUS. I have but ceased rehearsing all my wrongs.
 Io. And dost thou then refuse the boon I ask?
 PROMETHEUS. What boon? ask what thou wilt, and I will answer.
 Io. Say, then, who bound thee to this ragged cliff?
 PROMETHEUS. Stern Jove's decree, and harsh Hephaestus' hand.
 Io. And for what crime?
 PROMETHEUS. Let what I've said suffice.
 Io. This, too, I ask—what bound hath fate appointed
 To my far-wandering toils?
 PROMETHEUS. This not to know Were better than to learn.
 Io. Nay, do not hide
 This thing from me!
 PROMETHEUS. If 'tis a boon, believe me, I grudge it not.
 Io. Then why so slow to answer?
 PROMETHEUS. I would not crush thee with the cruel truth.
 Io. Fear not; I choose to hear it.
 PROMETHEUS. Listen then.
 CHORUS. Nay, hear me rather. With her own mouth this maid Shall first her bygone woes rehearse; next thou
 What yet remains shalt tell.
 PROMETHEUS. Even so.
 [To Io.] Speak thou;
 They are the sisters of thy father, Io;

And to wail out our griefs, when they who listen
 Our troubles with a willing tear requite, Is not without its use.
 Io. I will obey,
 And in plain speech my chanceful story tell;
 Though much it grieves me to retrace the source,
 Whence sprung this god-sent pest, and of my shape
 Disfigurement abhorred. Night after night
 Strange dreams around my maiden pillow hovering
 Whispered soft temptings. "*O thrice-blessed maid,
 Why pin'st thou thus in virgin loneliness,
 When highest wedlock courts thee?
 Struck by the shaft
 Of fond desire for thee Jove burns, and pants
 To twine his loves with thine. Spurn not, O maid,
 The proffered bed of Jove; but bid thee straight
 To Lerne's bosomed mead, where are the sheep-folds
 And ox-stalls of thy sire, that so the eye
 Of Jove, being filled with thee, may cease from craving.*"
 Such nightly dreams my restless couch possessed
 Till I, all tears, did force me to unfold
 The portent to my father. He to Pytho
 Sent frequent messengers, and to Dodona,
 Searching the pleasure of the gods; but they
 With various-woven phrase came back, and answers
 More doubtful than the quest. At length, a clear
 And unambiguous voice came to my father,
 Enjoining, with most strict command, to send me
 Far from my home, and from my country far,
 To the extreme bounds of Earth an out-cast wanderer,
 Else that the fire-faced bolt of Jove should smite

Our universal race. By such responses,
Moved of oracular Loxias, my father
Reluctant me reluctant drove from home,
And shut the door against me. What he did

He did perforce; Jove's bit was in his mouth.

Forthwith my wit was frenzied, and my form

Assumed the brute. With maniac bound
I rushed,

Horned as thou see'st, and with the sharp-mouthed sting

Of gad-fly pricked infuriate to the cliff
Of Lerne, and Cenchréa's limpid wave; While Argus, Earth-born cow-herd, hundred-eyed,

Followed the winding traces of my path
With sharp observance. Him swift-swooping Fate

Snatched unexpected from his sleepless guard;

But I from land to land still wander on,
Scourged by the wrath of Heaven's relentless queen.

Thou hast my tale; the sequel, if thou know'st it,

Is thine to tell; but do not seek, I pray
thee,

In pity for me, to drop soft lies; for
nothing

Is worse than the smooth craft of practiséd phrase.

CHORUS. Encugh, enough! Woe's me that ever

Such voices of strange grief should rend my ear!

That such a tale of woe,
Insults, and wrongs, and horrors, should freeze me through,

As with a two-edged sword!
O destiny! destiny! woes most hard to
see,

More hard to bear! Alas! poor maid for
thee!

PROMETHEUS. Thy wails anticipate her woes; restrain

Thy trembling tears till thou hast heard the whole.

CHORUS. Proceed: to know the worst some solace brings

To the vexed heart.

PROMETHEUS. Your first request
I granted,
And lightly; from her own mouth, ye have heard

The spring of harm, the stream expect
from me,

How Hera shall draw out her slow revenge.

Meanwhile, thou seed of Inachus, lend an ear

And learn thy future travel. First to the east

Turn thee, and traverse the unploughed
Scythian fields,

Whose wandering tribes their wattled homes transport

Aloft on well-wheeled wains, themselves well slung

With the far-darting bow. These pass, and, holding

Thy course by the salt sea's sounding surge, pass through

The land; next, on thy left, thou'lt reach the Chalybs,

Workers in iron. These too avoid—for they

Are savage, and harsh to strangers.
Thence proceeding,

Thou to a stream shalt come, not falsely named

Hubristes: but the fierce ill-forded wave Pass not till Caucasus, hugest hill, receives thee,

There where the flood its gushing strength
foams forth

Fresh from the rocky brow. Cross then the peaks

That neighbour with the stars, and thence direct

Southward thy path to where the Amazons

Dwell, husband-hated, who shall one day people

Thermódon's bank, and Themiscyre, and
where

Harsh Salmydessus whets his ravening jaws,

The sailor's foe, stepmother to the ships.
These maids shall give thee escort. Next thou'lt reach

The narrow Cimmerian isthmus, skirting bleak

The waters of Mæotis. Here delay not,
But with bold breast cross thou the strait.
Thy passage

Linked with the storied name of Bos-phorus

Shall live through endless time. Here, leaving Europe,

The Asian soil receives thee. Now, answer me,

Daughters of Ocean, doth not Jove in all things

Prove his despotic will?—In lawless love
Longing to mingle with this mortal maid,
He heaps her with these woes. A bitter suitor,

Poor maid, was thine, and I have told thee scarce

The prelude of thy griefs.

Io. Ah! wretched me!

PROMETHEUS. Alas, thy cries and groans!—What wilt thou do,

When the full measure of thy woes is told
thee?

CHORUS. What! more? her cup of woes not full?

PROMETHEUS. 'Twill flow
And overflow, a sea of whelming woes.

Io. Why do I live? Why not embrace the gain

That, with one cast, this toppling cliff secures,

And dash me headlong on the ground, to end

Life and life's sorrows? Once to die is better

Than thus to drag sick life.

PROMETHEUS. Thou'rt happy, Io,
That death from all thy living wrongs
may free thee;

But I, whom Fate hath made immortal,
see

No end to my long-lingering pains appointed,

Till Jove from his usurping sway be hurled.

Io. Jove from his tyranny hurled—can such thing be?

PROMETHEUS. Doubtless 'twould feast thine eyes to see't?

Io. Ay, truly,
Wronged as I am by him.

PROMETHEUS. Then, learn from me
That he is doomed to fall.

Io. What hand shall wrest Jove's sceptre?

PROMETHEUS. Jove's own empty wit.

Io. How so?

PROMETHEUS. From evil marriage reaping evil fruit.

Io. Marriage! of mortal lineage or divine?

PROMETHEUS. Ask me no further. This
I may not answer.

Io. Shall his spouse thrust him from his ancient throne?

PROMETHEUS. The son that she brings forth shall wound his father.

Io. And hath he no redemption from this doom?

PROMETHEUS. None, till he loose me from these hated bonds.

Io. But who, in Jove's despite, shall loose thee?

PROMETHEUS. One
From thine own womb descended.

Io. How? My Son?
One born of me shall be thy Saviour!—

When?

PROMETHEUS. When generations ten have passed, the third.

Io. Thou speak'st ambiguous oracles.

PROMETHEUS. I have spoken
Enough for thee. Pry not into the Fates.

Io. Wilt thou hold forth a hope to cheat my grasp?

PROMETHEUS. I give thee choice of two things: choose thou one.

Io. What things? Speak, and I'll choose.

PROMETHEUS. Thou hast the choice
To hear thy toils to the end, or learn his name

Who comes to save me.

CHORUS. Nay, divide the choice;
One half to her concede, to me the other,
Thus doubly gracious: to the maid her
toils,

To me thy destined Saviour tell.

PROMETHEUS. So be it!
Being thus whetted in desire, I would not Oppose your wills. First Io, what remains Of thy far-sweeping wanderings hear, and grave

My words on the sure tablets of thy mind.
When thou hast crossed the narrow stream that parts

The continents, to the far flame-faced East
Thou shalt proceed, the highway of the Sun;

Then cross the sounding Ocean, till thou reach

Cisthené and the Gorgon plains, where dwell

Phorcys' three daughters, maids with frosty eld

Hoar as the swan, with one eye and one tooth

Shared by the three; them Phœbus beamybright

Beholds not, nor the nightly Moon. Near
them

Their winged sisters dwell, the Gorgons dire,

Man-hating monsters, snaky-locked, whom eye

Of mortal ne'er might look upon and live.
This for thy warning. One more sight remains,

That fills the eye with horror: mark me
well;

The sharp-beaked Griffins, hounds of Jove, avoid.

Fell dogs that bark not; and the one-eyed host

Of Arimasian horsemen with swift hoofs
Beating the banks of golden-rolling Pluto.
A distant land, a swarthy people next

Receives thee: near the fountains of the Sun

They dwell by Aethiops' wave. This river
trace

Until thy weary feet shall reach the pass Whence from the Bybline heights the sacred Nile

Pours his salubrious flood. The winding wave

Thence to triangled Egypt guides thee,
where

A distant home awaits thee, fated mother
Of no unstoried race. And now, if aught
That I have spoken doubtful seem or dark,

Repeat the question, and in plainer speech
Expect reply. I feel no lack of leisure.

CHORUS. If thou hast more to speak to her, speak on;

Or aught omitted to supply, supply it;
But if her tale is finished, as thou say'st,
Remember our request.

PROMETHEUS. Her tale is told,

But for the more assurance of my words
The path of toils through which her feet had struggled

Before she reached this coast I will declare;

Lightly, and with no cumbrous comment, touching

Thy latest travel only, wandering Io.
When thou hadst trod the Molossian plains, and reached

Steep-ridged Dodona, where Thesprotian
Jove

In council sits, and from the articulate oaks

(Strange wonder!) speaks prophetic, there thine ears

This salutation with no doubtful phrase Received: "All hail, great spouse of mighty Jove

That shall be!"—say, was it a pleasing sound?

Thence by the sting of jealous Hera
goaded,

Along the coast of Rhea's bosomed sea
Thy steps were driven: thence with mazy
course

Tossed hither; gaining, if a gain, this solace,

That future times, by famous Io's name, Shall know that sea. These things may be a sign

That I, beyond the outward show, can pierce

To the heart of truth. What yet remains,
I tell

To thee and them in common, tracing
back

My speech to whence it came. There is a city

In extreme Egypt, where with outspread loam

Nile breasts the sea, its name Canopus.
There

Jove to thy sober sense shall bring thee
 back,
 Soft with no fearful touch, and thou shalt bear
 A son, dark Epaphus, whose name shall tell
 The wonder of his birth; he shall possess
 What fruitful fields fat Nile broad-streaming laves.
 Four generations then shall pass; the fifth
 In fifty daughters glorying shall return
 To ancient Argos, fatal wedlock shunning With fathers' brothers' sons; these, their wild hearts
 Fooled with blind lust, as hawks the gentle doves,
 Shall track the fugitive virgins; but a god
 Shall disappoint their chase, and the fair prey
 Save from their lawless touch; the Apian soil
 Shall welcome them to death, and woman's hands
 Shall dare the deed amid the nuptial watches.
 Each bride shall rob her lord of life, and dip
 The sharp steel in his throat. Such nuptial bliss
 May all my enemies know! Only one maid
 Of all the fifty, with a blunted will,
 Shall own the charm of love, and spare
 her mate,
 And of two adverse reputations choose
 The coward, not the murderess. She shall be
 The mother of a royal race in Argos.
 To tell what follows, with minute remark,
 Were irksome; but from this same root shall spring
 A hero, strong in the archer's craft, whose hand Shall free me from these bonds. Such oracle spake
 Titanian Themis, my time-honoured
 mother,
 But how and why were a long tale to
 tell,

Nor being told would boot thine ear to hear it.

Io. Ah me! pain! pain! ah me!
 Again the fevered spasm hath seized me,
 And the stroke of madness smites!
 Again that fiery sting torments me,
 And my heart doth knock my ribs!
 My aching eyes in dizziness roll,
 And my helmless feet are driven
 Whither gusty frenzy blows!
 And my tongue with thick words struggling
 Like a sinking swimmer plashes
 'Gainst the whelming waves of woe!

[Exit.]

CHORAL HYMN

STROPHE

Wise was the man, most wise,
 Who in deep-thoughted mood conceived, and first
 In pictured speech and pregnant phrase declared
 That marriage, if the Fates shall bless the bond,
 Must be of like with like;
 And that the daughters of an humble
 house
 Shun tempting union with the pomp of wealth
 And with the pride of birth.

ANTISTROPHE

Never, O! never may Fate,
 All-powerful Fate which rules both gods
 and men,
 See me approaching the dread Thun-derer's bed,
 And sharing marriage with the Olympian king,
 An humble Ocean-maid!
 May wretched Io, chased by Hera's
 wrath,
 Unhusbanded, unfriended, fill my sense
 With profitable fear.

EPODE

Me may an equal bond
 Bind with my equal: never may the eye
 Of a celestial suitor fix the gaze
 Of forceful love on me.

This were against all odds of war to war,
And in such strife entangled I were lost;
For how should humble maid resist the embrace,

Against great Jove's decree?

PROMETHEUS. Nay, but this Jove, though insolent now, shall soon
Be humbled low. Such wedlock even now
He blindly broods, as shall uprear his kingdom,

And leave no trace behind; then shall the curse,

Which Kronos heaped upon his ingrate son,

When hurled unjustly from his hoary throne,

Be all fulfilled. What remedy remains
For that dread ruin I alone can tell;
I only know. Then let him sit aloft,
Rolling his thunder, his fire-breathing bolt
Far-brandishing; his arts are vain; his fall,

Unless my aid prevent, his shameful fall,
Is doomed. Against himself to life he brings

A champion fierce, a portent of grim war,
Who shall invent a fiercer flame than lightning,

And peals to outpeal the thunder, who shall shiver

The trident mace that stirs the sea, and shakes

The solid Earth, the spear of strong Poseidon.

Thus shall the tyrant learn how much to serve

Is different from to sway.

CHORUS. Thou dost but make
Thy wishes father to thy slanderous phrase.

PROMETHEUS. I both speak truth and wish the truth to be.

CHORUS. But who can think that Jove shall find a master?

PROMETHEUS. He shall be mastered!
Ay, and worse endure.

CHORUS. Dost thou not blench to cast such words about thee?

PROMETHEUS. How should I fear, being a god and deathless?

CHORUS. But he can scourge with something worse than death.

PROMETHEUS. Even let him scourge! I'm armed for all conclusions.

CHORUS. Yet they are wise who worship Adrastéa.

PROMETHEUS. Worship, and pray; fawn on the powers that be;

But Jove to me is less than very nothing. Let him command, and rule his little hour
To please himself; long time he cannot sway.

But lo! where comes the courier of this Jove,

The obsequious minion of this upstart King,

Doubtless the bearer of some weighty news.

[Enter HERMES.]

HERMES. Thee, cunning sophist, dealing bitter words

Most bitterly against the gods, the friend
Of ephemeral man, the thief of sacred fire,

Thee, Father Jove commands to curb thy boasts,

And say what marriage threats his stable throne.

Answer this question in plain phrase, no dark

Tangled enigmas; do not add, Prometheus,
A second journey to my first: and, mark me!

Thy obduracy cannot soften Jove.

PROMETHEUS. This solemn mouthing, this proud pomp of phrase

Beseems the lackey of the gods. New gods

Ye are, and, being new, ye ween to hold Unshaken citadels. Have I not seen

Two Monarchs ousted from that throne?
the third

I yet shall see precipitate hurled from Heaven

With baser, speedier ruin. Do I seem

To quail before this new-forged dynasty?
Fear is my farthest thought. I pray thee go

Turn up the dust again upon the road

Thou cam'st. Reply from me thou shalt have none.

HERMES. This haughty tone hath been thy sin before:
Thy pride will strand thee on a worsere woe.

PROMETHEUS. And were my woe tenfold what now it is,
I would not barter it for thy sweet chains;
For liefer would I lackey this bare rock
Than trip the messages of Father Jove.
The insolent thus with insolence I repay.

HERMES. Thou dost delight in miseries;
thou art wanton.

PROMETHEUS. Wanton! delighted! would my worst enemies
Might wanton in these bonds, thyself the first!

HERMES. Must I, too, share the blame of thy distress?

PROMETHEUS. In one round sentence, every god I hate

That injures me who never injured him.

HERMES. Thou'rt mad, clean mad; thy wit's diseased, Prometheus.

PROMETHEUS. Most mad! if madness 'tis to hate our foes.

HERMES. Prosperity's too good for thee: thy temper
Could not endure't.

PROMETHEUS. Alas! this piercing pang!

HERMES. "Alas!"—this word Jove does not understand.

PROMETHEUS. As Time grows old he teaches many things.

HERMES. Yet Time that teaches all leaves thee untaught.

PROMETHEUS. Untaught in sooth, thus parleying with a slave!

HERMES. It seems thou wilt not grant great Jove's demand.

PROMETHEUS. Such love as his to me should be repaid
With like!

HERMES. Dost beard me like a boy? Beware.

PROMETHEUS. Art not a boy, and something yet more witless,
If thou expectest answer from my mouth?
Nor insult harsh, nor cunning craft of Jove
Shall force this tale from me, till he unloose

These bonds. Yea! let him dart his levin bolts,

With white-winged snows and subterranean thunders

Mix and confound the elements of things!
No threat, no fear, shall move me to reveal
The hand that hurls him from his tyrant's throne.

HERMES. Bethink thee well: thy vaunts can help thee nothing.

PROMETHEUS. I speak not rashly: what I said I said.

HERMES. If thou art not the bought and sold of folly,
Dare to learn wisdom from thy present ills.

PROMETHEUS. Speak to the waves: thou speak'st to me as vainly!

Deem not that I, to win a smile from Jove,

Will spread a maiden smoothness o'er my soul,

And importune the foe whom most I hate
With womanish upliftings of the hands.

Thou'lt see the deathless die first!

HERMES. I have said
Much, but that much is vain: thy rigid nature

To thaw with prayer is hopeless. A young colt

That frets the bit, and fights against the reins,

Art thou, fierce-champing with most impatient rage;

For wilful strength that hath no wisdom in it

Is less than nothing. But bethink thee well;

If thou despise my words of timely warning,

What wintry storm, what threefold surge of woes

Whelms thee inevitable. Jove shall split
These craggy cliffs with his cloud-bosomed bolt,

And sink thee deep: the cold rock shall embrace thee;

There thou shalt lie, till he shall please to bring thee

Back to the day, to find new pains prepared:

For he will send his Eagle-messenger,
His winged hound, in crimson food de-lighting,

To tear thy rags of flesh with bloody beak,
And daily come an uninvited guest
To banquet on thy gory liver. This,
And worse expect, unless some god endure
Vicarious thy tortures, and exchange
His sunny ether for the rayless homes
Of gloomy Hades, and deep Tartarus.

Consider well. No empty boast I speak,
But weighty words well weighed: the mouth of Jove

Hath never known a lie, and speech with
him

Is prophet of its deed. Ponder and weigh, Close not thy stubborn ears to good advice.

CHORUS. If we may speak, what Hermes says is wise,
And fitting the occasion. He advises
That stubborn will should yield to prudent counsel.

Obey: thy wisdom should not league with
folly.

PROMETHEUS. Nothing new this preacher preaches:

Seems it strange that foe should suffer
From the vengeance of his foe?
I am ready. Let him wreathe
Curls of scorching flame around me;
Let him fret the air with thunder,
And the savage-blustering winds!
Let the deep abysmal tempest
Wrench the firm roots of the Earth!
Let the sea upheave her billows,
Mingling the fierce rush of waters
With the pathway of the stars!
Let the harsh-winged hurricane sweep me
In its whirls, and fling me down
To black Tartarus: there to lie
Bound in the iron folds of Fate.
I will bear: but cannot die.

HERMES. Whom the nymphs have struck with madness

Raves as this loud blusterer raves;
Seems he not a willing madman,
Let him reap the fruits he sowed!
But ye maids, who share his sorrows,
Not his crimes, with quick removal
Hie from this devoted spot,
Lest with idiocy the thunder
Harshly blast your maundering wits.

CHORUS. Wouldst thou with thy words persuade us,

Use a more persuasive speech;
Urge no reasons to convince me
That an honest heart must hate.
With his sorrows I will sorrow:
I will hate a traitor's name;
Earth has plagues, but none more noisome
Than a faithless friend in need.

HERMES. Ponder well my prudent counsel,

Nor, when evil hunts thee out,
Blame great Jove that he doth smite
thee

With an unexpected stroke.
Not the gods; thy proper folly
Is the parent of thy woes.

Jove hath laid no trap to snare thee,
But the scapeless net of ruin
Thou hast woven for thyself.

PROMETHEUS. Now his threats walk forth in action,

And the firm Earth quakes indeed.
Deep and loud the ambient Thunder
Bellows, and the flaring Lightning
Wreathes his fiery curls around me,
And the Whirlwind rolls his dust;
And the Winds from rival regions
Rush in elemental strife,
And the Ocean's storm-vexed billows
Mingle with the startled stars!
Doubtless now the tyrant gathers
All his hoarded wrath to whelm me.
Mighty Mother, worshipped Themis,
Circling Ether that diffusest
Light, a common joy to all,
Thou beholdest these my wrongs!

CHARACTERS

ANTIGONE, } daughters of Œdipus, late king of Thebes
ISMENE, }

CREON, brother to Jocasta, late queen of Thebes, Captain-general of the army, and successor to the throne

A Sentinel

HÆMON, son to CREON, betrothed to ANTIGONE

TIRESIAS, a seer.

A Messenger in attendance on CREON

EURYDICE, wife to CREON

CHORUS composed of Senators of Thebes

GUARDS; ATTENDANTS; A BOY leading Tiresias

SCENE—Before the Royal Palace at Thebes.

TIME—Early morning.

[Enter ANTIGONE and ISMENE.]

ANTIGONE. Ismene, dear in very sisterhood,
Do you perceive how Heaven upon us two
Means to fulfil, before we come to die,
Out of all ills that grow from Œdipus—
What not, indeed? for there's no sorrow or harm,
No circumstance of scandal or of shame
I have not seen, among your griefs, and mine.
And now again, what is this word they
say

Our Captain-general proclaimed but now
To the whole city? Did you hear and heed?

Or are you blind, while pains of enemies
Are passing on your friends?

ISMENE.

Antigone,

To me no tidings about friends are come,
Pleasant or grievous, ever since we two
Of our two brothers were bereft, who died
Both in one day, each by the other's hand.

And since the Argive host in this same night

Took itself hence, I have heard nothing else,

To make me happier, or more miserable.

ANTIGONE. I knew as much; and for that reason made you Go out of doors—to tell you privately.

ISMENE. What is it? I see you have some mystery.

ANTIGONE. What! has not Creon to the tomb preferred

One of our brothers, and with contumely Withheld it from the other? Eteocles Duly, they say, even as by law was due, He hid beneath the earth, rendering him honour

Among the dead below; but the dead body Of Polynees, miserably slain, They say it has been given out publicly None may bewail, none bury, all must leave

Unwept, unsepulchred, a dainty prize For fowl that watch, gloating upon their prey!

This is the matter he has had proclaimed— Excellent Creon! for your heed, they say, And mine, I tell you—mine! and he moves hither,

Meaning to announce it plainly in the ears

Of such as do not know it, and to declare It is no matter of small moment; he Who does any of these things shall surely die;

The citizens shall stone him in the streets. So stands the case. Now you will quickly show

If you are worthy of your birth or no.

ISMENE. But O rash heart, what good, if it be thus,

Could I effect, helping or hindering?

ANTIGONE. Look, will you join me? will you work with me?

ISMENE. In what attempt? What mean you?

ANTIGONE. Help me lift

The body up—

ISMENE. What, would you bury him? Against the proclamation?

ANTIGONE. My own brother And yours I will! If you will not, I will;

I shall not prove disloyal.

ISMENE. You are mad!

When Creon has forbidden it?

ANTIGONE. From mine own

He has no right to stay me.

ISMENE. Alas, O sister,

Think how our father perished! self-con- vict—

Abhorred—dishonoured—blind—his eyes put out

By his own hand! How she who was at once

His wife and mother with a knotted noose Laid violent hands on her own life! And how

Our two unhappy brothers in one day Each on his own head by the other's hand Wrought common ruin! We now left alone—

Do but consider how most miserably We too shall perish, if despite of law We traverse the behest or power of kings.

We must remember we are women born, Unapt to cope with men; and, being ruled By mightier than ourselves, we have to bear

These things—and worse. For my part, I will ask

Pardon of those beneath, for what perforce I needs must do, but yield obedience To them that walk in power; to exceed Is madness, and not wisdom.

ANTIGONE. Then in future

I will not bid you help me; nor hence- forth,

Though you desire, shall you, with my good will,

Share what I do. Be what seems right to you;

Him will I bury. Death, so met, were honour;

And for that capital crime of piety, Loving and loved, I will lie by his side.

Far longer is there need I satisfy Those nether Powers, than powers on earth; for there

For ever must I lie. You, if you will, Hold up to scorn what is approved of Heaven!

ISMENE. I am not one to cover things with scorn;

But I was born too feeble to contend
Against the state.

ANTIGONE. Yes, you can put that forward;

But I will go and heap a burial mound
Over my most dear brother.

ISMENE. My poor sister,
How beyond measure do I fear for you!

ANTIGONE. Do not spend fear on me.
Shape your own course.

ISMENE. At least announce it, then, to nobody,

But keep it close, as I will.

ANTIGONE. Tell it, tell it!
You'll cross me worse, by far, if you keep silence—

Not publish it to all.

ISMENE. Your heart beats hotly
For chilling work!

ANTIGONE. I know that those approve
Whom I most need to please.

ISMENE. If you could do it!
But you desire impossibilities.

ANTIGONE. Well, when I find I have no power to stir,
I will cease trying.

ISMENE. But things impossible
'Tis wrong to attempt at all.

ANTIGONE. If you will say it,
I shall detest you soon; and you will justly

Incur the dead man's hatred. Suffer me
And my unwisdom to endure the weight Of what is threatened. I shall meet with nothing

More grievous, at the worst, than death, with honour.

ISMENE. Then go, if you will have it:
and take this with you,
You go on a fool's errand!

[Exit ANTIGONE.]

Lover true
To your beloved, none the less, are you!

[Exit.]

[Enter THEBAN SENATORS, as Chorus.]

CHORUS.

I. 1.

Sunbeam bright! Thou fairest ray
That ever dawned on Theban eyes
Over the portals seven!

O orb of aureate day,

How glorious didst thou rise

O'er Dirca's streams, shining from heaven,

Him, the man with shield of white
Who came from Argos in armour dight

Hurrying runagate o'er the plain,
Jerking harder his bridle rein;

Who by Polynices' quarrellous broil
Stirred up in arms to invade our soil

With strident cries as an eagle flies
Swooped down on the fields before him,

'Neath cover of eagle pinion white
As drifted snow, a buckler bright

On many a breast, and a horsetail
crest

From each helm floating o'er him.

I. 2.

Yawning with many a blood-stained spear

Around our seven-gated town

High o'er the roofs he stood;

Then, or ever a torch could sear

With flames the rampart-crown—

Or ever his jaws were filled with blood

Of us and ours, lo, he was fled!

Such clatter of war behind him spread,
Stress too sore for his utmost might Matched with the Dragon in the fight;

For Zeus abhors tongue-glorious boasts;
And straightway as he beheld their hosts,

Where on they rolled, covered with gold,

Streaming in mighty eddy,

Scornfully with a missile flame

He struck down Capaneus, as he came Uplifting high his victory-cry

At the topmost goal already.

II. 1.

Tantalus-like aloft he hung, then fell;

Earth at his fall resounded;

Even as, maddened by the Bacchic spell,
On with torch in hand he bounded,

Breathing blasts of hate.

So the stroke was turned aside,

Mighty Ares rudely dealing

Others elsewhere, far and wide,

Like a right-hand courser wheeling

Round the goals of fate.

For captains seven at portals seven Found each his match in the combat even,
And left on the field both sword and shield

As a trophy to Zeus, who o'erthrew
them;

Save the wretched twain, who against each other

Though born of one father, and one
mother,

Laid lances at aim—to their own death came,

And the common fate that slew them.

II. 2.

But now loud Victory returns at last

On Theban chariots smiling,

Let us begin oblivion of the past,
Memories of the late war beguiling
Into slumber sound.

Seek we every holy shrine;

There begin the night-long chorus;

Let the Theban Boy divine,

Bacchus, lead the way before us,

Shaking all the ground.

Leave we the song: the King is here;

Creon, Menæus' son, draws near;

To the function strange—like the heaven-sent change

Which has raised him newly to power:

What counsel urging—what ends of state,

That he summons us to deliberate,

The elders all, by his herald's call,

At a strange unwonted hour?

[Enter CREON, attended.]

CREON. Sirs, for the ship of state—the Gods once more,

After much rocking on a stormy surge,

Set her on even keel. Now therefore you,

You of all others, by my summoners

I bade come hither; having found you first

Right loyal ever to the kingly power

In Laius' time; and next, while Œdipus

Ordered the commonwealth; and since his fall,

With steadfast purposes abiding still,

Circling their progeny. Now, since they perished,

Both on one day, slain by a two-edged

fate,

Striking and stricken, sullied with a stain
Of mutual fratricide, I, as you know,
In right of kinship nearest to the dead,
Possess the throne and take the supreme power.

Howbeit it is impossible to know

The spirit of any man, purpose or will,

Before it be displayed by exercise

In government and laws. To me, I say,

Now as of old, that pilot of the state

Who sets no hand to the best policy,

But remains tongue-tied through some terror, seems

Vilest of men. Him too, who sets a friend

Before his native land, I prize at nothing.

God, who seest all things always, witness
it!

If I perceive, where safety should have been,

Mischief advancing toward my citizens,

I will not sit in silence; nor account

As friend to me the country's enemy;

But thus I deem: she is our ark of safety;

And friends are made then only, when,
embarked

Upon her deck, we ride the seas upright.

Such are the laws by which I mean to further

This city's welfare; and akin to these

I have given orders to the citizens

Touching the sons of Œdipus. Eteocles,

Who in this city's quarrel fought and fell,

The foremost of our champions in the fray,

They should entomb with the full sanctity

Of rites that solemnize the downward road

Of their dead greatest. Him the while, his brother,

That Polynices who, returning home

A banished man, sought to lay waste with fire

His household Gods, his native country—sought

To glut himself with his own kindred's
blood,

Or carry them away to slavery,

It has been promulgated to the city

No man shall bury, none should wail for
him;

Unsepulchred, shamed in the eyes of
men,

His body shall be left to be devoured

By dogs and fowls of the air. Such is my will.

Never with me shall wicked men usurp
The honours of the righteous; but whoe'er
Is friendly to this city shall, by me,
Living or dead, be honoured equally.

1ST SENATOR. Creon Menæceus' son, we hear your pleasure

Both on this city's friend, and on her foe;
It is your sovereignty's prerogative
To pass with absolute freedom on the dead,

And us, who have survived them.

CREON. Please to see
What has been said performed.

1ST SENATOR. That charge confer
On one who is younger.

CREON. Of the body?
Sentries are set, already.

1ST SENATOR. Then what else Is there, besides, which you would lay on us?

CREON. Not to connive at disobedience.

1ST SENATOR. There's no such fool as to embrace his death.

CREON. Death is the penalty. But men right often
Are brought to ruin, through their dreams of gain.

[Enter a SENTINEL.]

SENTINEL. My lord, I will not say—“breathless with speed

I come, plying a nimble foot;” for truly
I had a many sticking-points of thought
Wheeling about to march upon my rear.
For my heart whispered me all sorts of
counsel;

“Poor wretch, why go, to meet thy sentence?”—“Wretch,

Tarrying again? If Creon hear the news
From others' lips, how shalt thou then not rue it?”

Out of this whirligig it came to pass
I hastened—at my leisure; a short road,
Thus, becomes long. Nevertheless at last
It won the day to come hither, to your presence;

And speak I will, though nothing have to
say;

For I come clinging to the hope that I
Can suffer nothing—save my destiny.

CREON. Well—and what caused you this disheartenment?

SENTINEL. First let me tell you what concerns myself.

I do protest, I neither did the deed,
Nor saw it done, whoever 'twas who did
it;

Nor should I rightly come to any harm.

CREON. At all events you are a good tactician,
And fence the matter off all round. But clearly

You have some strange thing to tell?

SENTINEL. Yes. Serious tidings
Induce much hesitation.

CREON. Once for all
Please to speak out, and make an end, and go.

SENTINEL. Why, I am telling you. That body some one

Has just now buried—sprinkled thirsty
dust

Over the form—added the proper rites,
And has gone off.

CREON. What say you? What man dared
To do it?

SENTINEL. I know not. There was no
dint there

Of any mattock, not a sod was turned;
Merely hard ground and bare, without a break,

Without a rut from wheels; it was some workman

Who left no mark. When the first daysentry

Shewed what had happened, we were all dismayed.

The body had vanished; not indeed interred,

But a light dust lay on it, as if poured out

By one who shunned the curse; and there appeared

No trace that a wild beast, or any hound,
Had come, or torn the carcase. Angry
words

Were bandied up and down, guard blaming guard,

And blows had like to end it, none being by

To hinder; for each one of us in turn

Stood culprit, none convicted, but the plea
"I know not" passed. Ready were we to take

Hot iron in hand, or pass through fire, and call

The Gods to witness, that we neither did
it,

Nor were accessory to any man

Who compassed it, or did it. So at last,

When all our searching proved to be in
vain,

There speaks up one, who made us, every
man,

Hang down our heads for fear, knowing no way

To say him nay, or without scathe comply,
His burden was, this business must be carried

To you, without reserve. That voice prevailed;

And me, poor wretch, the lot condemns to get

This piece of luck. I come a post unwilling,

I well believe it, to unwilling ears;

None loves the messenger who brings bad
news.

1ST SENATOR. My lord, my heart mis-gave me from the first

This must be something more than natural.

CREON. Truce to your speech, before I choke with rage,

Lest you be found at once grey-beard and
fool!

To say that guardian deities would care
For this dead body, is intolerable.

Could they, by way of supereminent
honour

Paid to a benefactor, give him burial,

Who came to fire their land, their pillared
fanés

And sacred treasures, and set laws at nought?

Or do you see Gods honouring the bad?

'Tis false. These orders from the first some people

Hardly accepted, murmuring at me,

Shaking their heads in secret, stiffening

Uneasy necks against this yoke of mine.

They have suborned these sentinels to do
it,

I know that well. No such ill currency
Ever appeared, as money to mankind:

This is it that sacks cities, this routs out Men from their homes, and trains and turns astray

The minds of honest mortals, setting them
Upon base actions; this made plain to men
Habits of all misdoing, and cognizance
Of every work of wickedness. Howbeit
Such hireling perpetrators, in the end,
Have wrought so far, that they shall pay for it.

So surely as I live to worship Jove,

Know this for truth; I swear it in your ears;

Except you find and bring before my face
The real actor in this funeral,

Death, by itself, shall not suffice for
you,

Before, hung up alive, you have revealed
The secret of this outrage; that henceforth
You may seek plunder—not without respect

Of where your profit lies; and may be taught

It is not good to covet all men's pay;

For mark you! by corruption few men thrive,

And many come to mischief.

SENTINEL.

Have I leave
To say a word, or shall I turn and go?

CREON. Cannot you see your prating tortures me?

SENTINEL. Pricks you how deep? In the ears, or to the spleen?

CREON. Why do you gauge my chafing, where it lies?

SENTINEL. Your heart-ache were the doer's, your ear-ache mine.

CREON. Out, what a bare-faced babbler born art thou!

SENTINEL. Never the actor in this business, though!

CREON. Yes, and for money you would sell your soul!

SENTINEL. Plague on it! 'tis hard, a man should be suspicious,

And with a false suspicion!

CREON. Yes, suspicion;

Mince it as best you may. Make me to know

Whose are these doings, or you shall soon allow

Left-handed gains work their own punishment. [Exit.]

SENTINEL. I wish he may be found.
Chance must decide.

Whether or no, you will not, certainly,
See me returning hither. Heaven be praised

I am in safety, past all thought or dream!
[Exit.]

CHORUS

I. 1.

Much is there passing strange;
Nothing surpassing mankind.
He it is loves to range
Over the ocean hoar,
Thorough the surges' roar,
South winds raging behind;

Earth, too, wears he away,
The Mother of Gods on high,
Tireless, free from decay;
With team he furrows the ground,
And the ploughs go round and round,
As year on year goes by.

I. 2.

The bird-tribes, light of mind,
The races of beasts of prey,
And sea-fish after their kind,
Man, abounding in wiles,
Entangles in his toils
And carries captive away.

The roamers over the hill,
The field-inhabiting deer,
By craft he conquers, at will;
He bends beneath his yoke
The neck of the steed unbroke,
And pride of the upland steer.

II. 1.

He has gotten him speech, and fancy breeze-betost,
And for the state instinct of order
meet;
He has found him shelter from the chilling frost

Of a clear sky, and from the arrowy sleet;

Illimitable in cunning, cunning-less

He meets no change of fortune that can come;

He has found escape from pain and helplessness;

Only he knows no refuge from the tomb.

II. 2.

Now bends he to the good, now to the ill,
With craft of art, subtle past reach of
sight;

Wresting his country's laws to his own
will,

Spurning the sanctions of celestial
right;

High in the city, he is made city-less,
Whoso is corrupt, for his impiety;

He that will work the works of wicked-
ness,

Let him not house, let him not hold,
with me!

At this monstrous vision I stand in Doubt! How dare I say, well knowing
her,

That this maid is not—Antigone!

Daughter of Œdipus!

Hapless child, of a hapless father!

Sure—ah surely they did not find thee

Madly defying our king's commandments,

And so prisoner bring thee here?

[Enter SENTINEL with ANTIGONE.]

SENTINEL. This is the woman who has done the deed.

We took her burying him. Where's Creon?

1ST SENATOR. Here

Comes he again, out of the house, at need.

[Enter CREON.]

CREON. What is it? In what fit season come I forth?

SENTINEL. My lord, I see a man should never vow

He will not do a thing, for second thoughts Bely the purpose. Truly I could have sworn

It would be long indeed ere I came hither Under that hail of threats you rained on
me.

But since an unforeseen happy surprise
Passes all other pleasing out of measure,
I come, though I forswore it mightily, Bringing this maiden, who was caught in act

To set that bier in order. Here, my lord,
No lot was cast; this windfall is to me,
And to no other. Take her, now, yourself;

Examine and convict her, as you please;
I wash my hands of it, and ought, of
right,

To be clean quit of the scrape, for good and all.

CREON. You seized—and bring—her?
In what way, and whence?

SENTINEL. Burying that man, herself!
You know the whole.

CREON. Are you in earnest? Do you understand

What you are saying?

SENTINEL. Yes, that I saw this girl
Burying that body you forbade to bury.

Do I speak clear and plain?

CREON. How might this be,
That she was seen, and taken in the act?

SENTINEL. Why thus it happened.

When we reached the place,

Wrought on by those dread menacings
from you,

We swept away all dust that covered up
The body, and laid the clammy limbs quite bare,

And windward from the summit of the hill,

Out of the tainted air that spread from
him,

We sat us down, each, as it might be, rousing

His neighbour with a clamour of abuse,
Wakening him up, whenever any one Seemed to be slack in watching. This went on,

Till in mid air the luminous orb of day
Stood, and the heat grew sultry. Suddenly

A violent eddy lifted from the ground
A hurricane, a trouble of the sky;

Ruffling all foliage of the woodland plain
It filled the horizon; the vast atmosphere Thickened to meet it; we, closing our
eyes,

Endured the Heaven-sent plague. After a while,

When it had ceased, there stands this maiden in sight,

And wails aloud, shrill as the bitter note
Of the sad bird, when as she finds the couch

Of her void nest robbed of her young; so
she,

Soon as she sees the body stripped and
bare,

Bursts out in shrieks, and, calls down curses dire

On their heads who had done it. Straightway then

She gathers handfuls of dry dust, and brings them,

And from a shapely brazen cruse held high
She crowns the body with drink-offerings,

Once, twice, and thrice. We at the sight rushed forward,

And trapped her, nothing daunted, on the spot;

And taxed her with the past offence, and this

The present. Not one whit did she deny;
A pleasant though a pitiful sight to me;

For nothing's sweeter than to have got off
In person; but to bring into mischance

Our friends is pitiful. And yet to pay
No more than this is cheap, to save one's life.

CREON. Do you, I say—you, with your downcast brow—

Own or deny that you have done this deed?

ANTIGONE. I say I did it; I deny it not.

CREON. Take yourself hence, whither you will, sir knave;

You are acquitted of a heavy charge.

[Exit SENTINEL.]

Now tell me, not at length, but in brief space,

Knew you the order not to do it?

ANTIGONE.

Yes,

I knew it; what should hinder? It was plain.

CREON. And you made free to overstep my law?

ANTIGONE. Because it was not Zeus who ordered it,
Nor Justice, dweller with the Nether Gods, Gave such a law to men; nor did I deem
Your ordinance of so much binding force,
As that a mortal man could overbear
The unchangeable unwritten code of Heaven;

This is not of today and yesterday,
But lives for ever, having origin
Whence no man knows: whose sanctions I were loath

In Heaven's sight to provoke, fearing the
will

Of any man. I knew that I should die—
How otherwise? even although your voice
Had never so prescribed. And that I die
Before my hour is due, that I count gain.
For one who lives in many ills, as I—
How should he fail to gain by dying?

Thus

To me the pain is light, to meet this fate;
But had I borne to leave the body of him
My mother bare unburied, then, indeed,
I might feel pain; but as it is, I cannot;
And if my present action seems to you Foolish—'tis like I am found guilty of
folly

At a fool's mouth!

1ST SENATOR. Lo you, the spirit stout
Of her stout father's child—unapt to bend
Beneath misfortune!

CREON. But be well assured,
Temper too stubborn are the first to fail;
The hardest iron from the furnace, forged
To stiffness, you may see most frequently Shivered and broken; and the chafing
steeds

I have known governed with a slender curb.

It is unseemly that a household drudge
Should be misproud; but she was conversant

With outrage, ever since she passed the bounds

Laid down by law; then hard upon that
deed

Comes this, the second outrage, to exult

And triumph in her deed. Truly if here
She wield such powers uncensured, she is
man,

I woman! Be she of my sister born,
Or nearer to myself than the whole band
Of our domestic tutelary Jove,
She, and the sister—for her equally
I charge with compassing this funeral—
Shall not escape a most tremendous doom.
And call her; for within the house but
now

I saw her, frenzied and beside herself;
And it is common for the moody sprite
Of plotters in the dark to no good end
To have been caught, planning its knavery,
Before the deed is acted. None the less
I hate it, when one taken in misdoing
Straight seeks to gloss the facts!

ANTIGONE. Would you sought more Than take my life, whom you did catch?

CREON. Not I;

Take that, take all.

ANTIGONE. Then why do you delay?
Since naught is pleasing of your words to
me,

Or, as I trust, can ever please, so mine
Must needs be unacceptable to you.
And yet from whence could I have gathered praise

More worthily, than from depositing
My own brother in a tomb? These, all of
them,

Would utter one approval, did not fear
Seal up their lips. 'Tis tyranny's privilege,
And not the least—power to declare and do

What it is minded.

CREON. You, of all this people,
Are singular in your discernment.

ANTIGONE. Nay,
They too discern; they but refrain their tongues

At your behest.

CREON. And you are not ashamed
That you deem otherwise?

ANTIGONE. It is no shame
To pay respect to our own flesh and blood.

CREON. And his dead foeman, was not he your brother
As well?

ANTIGONE. Yes, the same sire's and mother's son.

CREON. Why pay, then, honours which are wrongs to him?

ANTIGONE. The dead clay makes no protest.

CREON. Not although His with a villain's share your reverence?

ANTIGONE. It was no bondman perished, but a brother.

CREON. Spoiling, I say, this country; while his rival

Stood for it.

ANTIGONE. All the same, these rites are due

To the underworld.

CREON. But not in equal measure Both for the good man and the bad.

ANTIGONE. Who knows This is not piety there?

CREON. The enemy Can never be a friend, even in death.

ANTIGONE. Well, I was made for fellowship in love, Not fellowship in hate.

CREON. Then get you down Thither, and love, if you must love, the dead!

No woman, while I live, shall order me.

CHORUS

See where out by the doors Ismene Weeping drops of sisterly grieving Comes; and a cloud o'erhanging her eyebrows

Mars her dark-flushed cheek, and moistens Her fair face with pitiful tears.

[Enter Attendants with ISMENE.]

CREON. And you—who like a viper unaware

Have crept into my house, and sucked me bloodless,

While I unknowingly was fostering you, Twin furies, to the upsetting of my throne—

Come, tell me, will you say you also shared

This burying, or protest your innocence?

ISMENE. Yes, I have done it—if Antigone

Says so—I join with her to share the blame.

ANTIGONE. That justice will not suffer; you refused,

And I—I had no partner.

ISMENE. In your trouble I do not blush to claim companionship

Of what you have to endure.

ANTIGONE. Whose was the deed Death and the spirits of the dead can tell!

A friend in words is not a friend for me.

ISMENE. Shame me not, sister, by denying me

A death, for honouring the dead, with you!

ANTIGONE. Mix not your death with mine. Do not claim work

You did not touch. I shall suffice to die.

ISMENE. And what care I for life, if I lost you?

ANTIGONE. Ask Creon; you are dutiful to him.

ISMENE. Why do you cross me so, to no good purpose?

ANTIGONE. Nay, I am sick at heart, if I do make

My mock of you.

ISMENE. Nay, but what can I do, Now, even yet, to help you?

ANTIGONE. Save yourself; I do not grudge you your escape.

ISMENE. O me Unhappy! And must I miss to share your fate?

ANTIGONE. You made your choice, to live; I mine, to die.

ISMENE. Not if you count my words unsaid.

ANTIGONE. By some Your judgment is approved; by others mine.

ISMENE. Then our delinquency is equal, too.

ANTIGONE. Take courage, you are living; but my life

Long since has died, so I might serve the dead.

CREON. Of these two girls I swear the one even now

Has been proved witless; the other was so born.

ISMENE. Ah sir, the wretched cannot keep the wit
That they were born with, but it flits away.

CREON. Yours did so, when you chose to join ill-doers

In their misdoing.

ISMENE. How could I live on Alone, without my sister?

CREON. Do not say "My sister"; for you have no sister more.

ISMENE. What, will you put to death your own son's bride?

CREON. He may go further afield—

ISMENE. Not as by troth Plighted to her by him.

CREON. Unworthy wives For sons of mine I hate.

ANTIGONE. O dearest Hæmon, How are you slighted by your father!

CREON. I Am weary of your marriage, and of you.

ISMENE. Your own son! will you tear her from his arms?

CREON. Death will prevent that bridal-rite, for me.

1ST SENATOR. I see, the sentence of this maiden's death

Has been determined.

CREON. Then we see the same. An end of trifling. Slaves, there, take them in!

As women, henceforth, must they live—not suffered

To gad abroad; for even bold men flinch, When they view Death hard by the verge of Life.

[Exeunt ANTIGONE and ISMENE, guarded.]

CHORUS

I. 1.

Happy the man whose cup of life is free From taste of evil! If Heaven's influence shake them,

No ill but follows, till it overtake them, All generations of his family;

Like as when before the sweep Of the sea-borne Thracian blast The surge of ocean coursing past Above the cavern of the deep Rolls up from the region under All the blackness of the shore, And the beaten beaches thunder Answer to the roar.

I. 2.

Woes upon woes on Labdacus' race I see— Living or dead—inveterately descend; And son with sire entangled, without end,

And by some God smitten without remedy; For a light of late had spread O'er the last surviving root In the house of Œdipus; Now, the sickle murderous Of the Rulers of the dead, And wild words beyond control, And the frenzy of her own soul, Again mow down the shoot.

II. 1.

Thy power, O God, what pride of man constraineth, Which neither sleep, that all things else enchaineth, Nor even the tireless moons of Heaven destroy?

Thy throne is founded fast, High on Olympus, in great brilliancy, Far beyond Time's annoy. Through present and through future and through past Abideth one decree; Nought in excess Enters the life of man without unhappiness.

II. 2.

For wandering Hope to many among mankind Seems pleasurable; but to many a mind Proves but a mockery of its wild desires. They know not aught, nor fear, Till their feet feel the pathway strewn with fires.

"If evil good appear, That soul to his ruin is divinely led"— (Wisely the word was said!) And short the hour He spends unscathed by the avenging power.

Hæmon comes, thy last surviving Child. Is he here to bewail, indignant,

His lost bride, Antigone? Grieves
he

For a vain promise—her marriage-bed?

[Enter HÆMON.]

CREON. We shall know soon, better than seers can tell us.

Son, you are here in anger, are you not,
Against your sire, hearing his final doom
Upon your bride to be? Or are we friends,
Always, with you, what'er our policy?

HÆMON. Yours am I, father; and you guide my steps

With your good counsels, which for my part I

Will follow closely; for there is no marriage

Shall occupy a larger place with me Than your direction, in the path of honour.

CREON. So is it right, my son, to be disposed—

In everything to back your father's quarrel.

It is for this men pray to breed and rear
In their homes dutiful offspring—to re-quite

The foe with evil, and their father's friend Honour, as did their father. Whoso gets Children unserviceable—what else could he
Be said to breed, but troubles for himself,
And store of laughter for his enemies?

Nay, never fling away your wits, my son,
Through liking for a woman; recollect, Cold are embracings, where the wife is naught,

Who shares your board and bed. And what worse sore

Can plague us, than a loved one's worth-lessness?

Better to spurn this maiden as a foe!
Leave her to wed some bridegroom in the grave!

For, having caught her in the act, alone
Of the whole city disobeying me,
I will not publicly bely myself,
But kill her. Now let her go glorify

Her God of kindred! If I choose to cherish

My own born kinsfolk in rebelliousness,
Then verily I must count on strangers too.
For he alone who is a man of worth
In his own household will appear upright
In the state also; and whoe'er offends
Against the laws by violence, or thinks
To give commands to rulers—I deny Favour to such. Obedience is due

To the state's officer in small and great,
Just and unjust commandments; he who pays it

I should be confident would govern well,
And cheerfully be governed, and abide
A true and trusty comrade at my back,
Firm in the ranks amid the storm of war.
There lives no greater fiend than Anarchy;
She ruins states, turns houses out of doors,

Breaks up in rout the embattled soldiery;
While Discipline preserves the multitude
Of the ordered host alive. Therefore it is
We must assist the cause of order; this Forbids concession to a feminine will;
Better be outcast, if we must, of men,
Than have it said a woman worsted us.

1ST SENATOR. Unless old age have robbed me of myself,

I think the tenor of your words is wise.

HÆMON. Father, the Gods plant reason in mankind,

Of all good gifts the highest; and to say
You speak not rightly in this, I lack the
power;

Nor do I crave it. Still, another's thought
Might be of service; and it is for me, Being your son, to mark the words, the
deeds,

And the complaints of all. To a private
man

Your frown is dreadful, who has things to
say

That will offend you; but I secretly
Can gather this; how the folk mourn this maid,

"Who of all women most unmeriting,

For noblest acts dies by the worst of deaths,

Who her own brother battle-slain—un-buried—

Would not allow to perish in the fangs
Of carrion hounds or any bird of prey;
And" (so the whisper darkling passes round)

"Is she not worthy to be carved in gold?"
Father, beside your welfare there is nothing

More prized by me; for what more glorious crown
Can be to children, than their father's honour?

Or to a father, from his sons, than theirs?
Do not persist, then, to retain at heart
One sole idea, that the thing is right
Which your mouth utters, and nought else beside.

For all men who believe themselves alone
Wise, or that they possess a soul or speech
Such as none other, turn them inside out,
They are found empty; and though a man be wise,

It is no shame for him to live and learn,
And not to stretch a course too far. You
see

How all the trees on winter torrent banks, Yielding, preserve their sprays; those that would stem it

Break, roots and all; the shipman too, who keeps

The vessel's main sheet taut, and will not slacken,

Goes cruising, in the end, keel uppermost:
Let thy wrath go! Be willing to relent!
For if some sense, even from a younger
head,

Be mine to afford, I say it is far better
A man should be, for every accident, Furnished with inbred skill; but what of
that?

Since nature's bent will have it otherwise,
'Tis good to learn of those who counsel wisely.

1ST SENATOR. Sir, you might learn,
when he speaks seasonably;
And you, from him; for both have spoken
well.

CREON. Men that we are, must we be sent to school
To learn discretion of a boy like this?

HÆMON. None that's dishonest; and if I am young,

It is not well to have regard to years
Rather than services.

CREON. Good service is it,
To pay respect to rebels?

HÆMON. To wrongdoers
I would not even ask for reverence.

CREON. Was it not some such taint infected her?

HÆMON. So say not all this populace of Thebes.

CREON. The city to prescribe me my decrees!

HÆMON. Look, say you so, you are too young in this!

CREON. Am I to rule this land after some will

Other than mine?

HÆMON. A city is no city
That is of one man only.

CREON. Is not the city
Held to be his who rules it?

HÆMON. That were brave—
You, a sole monarch of an empty land!

CREON. This fellow, it seems, fights on the woman's side.

HÆMON. An you be woman! My forethought is for you.

CREON. O villain—traversing thy father's rights!

HÆMON. Because I see you sinning against right.

CREON. Sin I, to cause my sway to be held sacred?

HÆMON. You desecrate, by trampling on Heaven's honour.

CREON. Foul spotted heart—a woman's follower!

HÆMON. You will not find me serving what is vile.

CREON. I say this talk of thine is all for her.

HÆMON. And you, and me, and for the Gods beneath!

CREON. Never shall she live on to marry thee!

HÆMON. Die as she may, she shall not die alone.

CREON. Art thou grown bold enough to threaten, too?

HÆMON. Where is the threat, to speak against vain counsel?

CREON. Vain boy, thyself shalt rue thy counselling.
 HÆMON. I had called you erring, were you not my sire.
 CREON. Thou woman's bondman, do not spaniel me!
 HÆMON. Do you expect to speak, and not be answered?
 CREON. Do I so? By Olympus over us, If thou revile me, and find fault with me,
 Never believe but it shall cost thee dear! Bring out the wretch, that in his sight, at once,
 Here, with her bridegroom by her, she may die!
 HÆMON. Not in my sight, at least— not by my side,
 Believe it, shall she perish! And for thee—
 Storm at the friends who choose thy company!
 My face thou never shalt behold again.

[Exit.]

1ST SENATOR. The man is gone, my lord, headlong with rage;
 And wits so young, when galled, are full of danger.

CREON. Let be, let him imagine more, or do,
 Than mortal may; yet he shall not redeem
 From sentence those two maidens.

1ST SENATOR. Both of them? Is it your will to slay them both alike?

CREON. That is well said; not her who did not touch it.

1ST SENATOR. And by what death mean you to kill the other?

CREON. Into some waste untrodden of mankind
 She shall be drawn, and, in some rock-hewn cave,
 With only food enough provided her
 For expiation, so that all the city
 Escape the guilt of blood, buried alive.
 There, if she ask him, Hades, the one God

Whom she regards, may grant her not to perish;

Or there, at latest, she shall recognize
 It is lost labour to revere the dead. [Exit.]

CHORUS

O Love, thou art victor in fight: thou mak'st all things afraid;
 Thou coucest thee softly at night on the cheeks of a maid;
 Thou passest the bounds of the sea, and the folds of the fields;
 To thee the immortal, to thee the ephemeral yields;
 Thou maddenest them that possess thee; thou turnest astray
 The souls of the just, to oppress them, out of the way;
 Thou hast kindled amongst us pride, and the quarrel of kin;
 Thou art lord, by the eyes of a bride, and the love-light therein;
 Thou sittest assessor with Right; her kingdom is thine,
 Who sports with invincible might, Aphrodite divine.

[Enter ANTIGONE, guarded.]

I too, myself, am carried as I look Beyond the bounds of right;
 Nor can I brook
 The springing fountain of my tears, to see
 My child, Antigone,
 Pass to the chamber of universal night.

I. 1.

ANTIGONE. Behold me, people of my native land:

I wend my latest way:
 I gaze upon the latest light of day
 That I shall ever see;
 Death, who lays all to rest, is leading me
 To Acheron's far strand
 Alive; to me no bridal hymns belong,
 For me no marriage song
 Has yet been sung; but Acheron instead
 Is it, whom I must wed.

CHORUS. Nay but with praise and voices of renown
 Thou partest for that prison-house of the dead;

Unsmitten by diseases that consume,
 By sword unvisited,
 Thou only of mortals freely shalt go down,
 Alive, to the tomb.

I. 2.

ANTIGONE. I have heard tell the sorrowful end of her,
That Phrygian sojourner
On Sipylus' peak, offspring of Tantalus;
How stony shoots upgrown
Like ivy bands enclosed her in the stone;
With snows continuous
And ceaseless rain her body melts away;
Streams from her tear-flown head
Water her front; likest to hers the bed
My fate prepares today.

CHORUS. She was of godlike nature, goddess-sprung,
And we are mortals, and of human race;
And it were glorious odds
For maiden slain, among
The equals of the Gods
In life—and then in death—to gain a place.

II. 1.

ANTIGONE. They mock me. Gods of Thebes! why scorn you me
Thus, to my face,
Alive, not death-stricken yet?
O city, and you the city's large-dowered
race,
Ye streams from Dirca's source,
Ye woods that shadow Theba's chariot-
course,
Listen and see,
Let none of you forget,
How sacrificed, and for what laws offended,
By no tears friended,
I to the prisoning mound
Of a strange grave am journeying under ground.
Ah me unhappy! [home is none for
me;]

Alike in life or death an exile must I be.

CHORUS. Thou to the farthest verge forth-faring,

O my child, of daring,
Against the lofty threshold of the laws
Didst stumble and fall. The cause Is some ancestral load, which thou art bearing.

II. 2.

ANTIGONE. There didst thou touch upon my bitterest bale—

A threefold tale—

My father's piteous doom,
Doom of us all, scions of Labdacus.

Woe for my mother's bed!
Woe for the ill-starred spouse, from her own womb

Untimely born!
O what a father's house

Was that from whence I drew my life forlorn!

To whom, unwed,
Accursed, lo I come

To sojourn as a stranger in their home!
And thou too, ruined, my brother, in a
wife,

Didst by thy death bring death upon thy sister's life!

CHORUS. To pay due reverence is a duty, too:

And power—his power, whose empire is confest,

May no wise be transgressed;
But thee thine own infatuate mood o'er-threw.

ANTIGONE. Friendless, unwept, unwed,
I, sick at heart, am led
The way prepared for me;
Day's hallowed orb on high

I may no longer see;
For me no tears are spent,
Nor any friends lament
The death I die.

[Enter CREON.]

CREON. Think you that any one, if help might be

In wailing and lament before he died,
Would ever make an end? Away with her!
Wall her up close in some deep catacomb,
As I have said; leave her alone, apart,
To perish, if she will; or if she live,
To make her tomb her tenement. For us,
We will be guiltless of this maiden's
blood;

But here on earth she shall abide no more.

ANTIGONE. Thou Grave, my bridal chamber! dwelling-place

Hollowed in earth, the everlasting prison
Whither I bend my steps, to join the band
Of kindred, whose more numerous host already

Persephone hath counted with the dead;
Of whom I last and far most miserably
Descend, before my term of life is full;
I come, cherishing this hope especially,
To win approval in my father's sight,
Approval too, my mother, in thine, and thine

Dear brother! for that with these hands I paid

Unto you dead lavement and ordering
And sepulchre-libations; and that now,
Polynices, in the tendance of thy body
I meet with this reward. Yet to the wise
It was no crime, that I did honour thee.
For never had I, even had I been Mother of children, or if spouse of mine Lay dead and mouldering, in the state's despite

Taken this task upon me. Do you ask
What argument I follow here of law?
One husband dead, another might be mine;
Sons by another, did I lose the first;
But, sire and mother buried in the grave,
A brother is a branch that grows no more.
Yet I, preferring by this argument
To honour thee to the end, in Creon's
sight

Appear in that I did so to offend,
And dare to do things heinous, O my brother!

And for this cause he hath bid lay hands
on me,
And leads me, not as wives or brides are led,

Unblest with any marriage, any care
Of children; destitute of friends, forlorn,
Yet living, to the chambers of the dead
See me descend. Yet what celestial right
Did I transgress? How should I any more
Look up to heaven, in my adversity?
Whom should I call to aid? Am I not
come

Through piety to be held impious? If This is approved in Heaven, why let me suffer,

And own that I have sinned; but if the sin

Belong to these—O may their punishment
Be measured by the wrongfulness of mine!

1ST SENATOR. Still the same storms possess her, with the same precipi-tance of spirit.

CREON. Then for this
Her guards shall rue their slowness.

ANTIGONE. Woe for me!
The word I hear comes hand in hand with
death!

1ST SENATOR. I may not say Be comforted, for this
Shall not be so; I have no words of cheer.

ANTIGONE. O City of Thebes! O my country! Gods,
The Fathers of my race! I am led hence—
I linger now no more. Behold me, lords,
The last of your kings' house—what doom
is mine,
And at whose hands, and for what cause
—that I

Duly performed the dues of piety!
[Exeunt ANTIGONE and guards.]

CHORUS

I. 1.

For a dungeon brazen-barred
The body of Danae endured
To exchange Heaven's daylight of old,
In a tomb-like chamber immured,
Hid beneath fetter and guard;
And she was born, we are told,
O child, my child, unto honour,
And a son was begotten upon her
To Zeus in a shower of gold.
But the stress of a Fate is hard;
Nor wealth, nor warfare, nor ward,
Nor black ships cleaving the sea
Can resist her, or flee.

I. 2.

And the Thracians' king, Dryas' son,
The hasty of wrath, was bound
For his words of mocking and pride;
Dionysus closing him round,
Pent in a prison of stone;
Till, his madness casting aside
Its flower and fury wild,
He knew what God he reviled—
Whose power he had defied;

Restraining the Mænad choir,
 Quenching the Evian fire,
 Enraging the Muses' throng,
 The lovers of song.

II. 1.

And by the twofold main
 Of rocks Cyanean—there
 Lies the Bosporean strand,
 And the lone Thracian plain
 Of Salmydessus, where
 Is Ares' border-land:
 Who saw the stab of pain
 Dealt on the Phineid pair
 At that fierce dame's command;
 Blinding the orbits of their blasted sight,
 Smitten, without spear to smite,
 By a spindle's point made bare,
 And by a bloody hand.

II. 2.

They mourned their mother dead,
 Their hearts with anguish wrung,
 Wasting away, poor seed
 Of her deserted bed;
 Who, Boreas' daughter, sprung
 From the old Erechtheid breed,
 In remote caverns fed
 Her native gales among,
 Went swiftly as the steed,
 Offspring of Heaven, over the steep-down
 wild;
 Yet to her too, my child,
 The Destinies, that lead
 Lives of long ages, clung.

[Enter TIRESIAS led by a boy.]

TIRESIAS. Princes of Thebes, two fellow-travellers.
 Debtors in common to the eyes of one,
 We stand before you; for a blind man's path
 Hangs on the guide who marshals him the way.
 CREON. What would'st thou now, reverend Tiresias?
 TIRESIAS. That will I tell. Do thou obey the seer.
 CREON. I never have departed hitherto
 From thy advice.

TIRESIAS. And therefore 'tis, thou steerest
 The city's course straight forward.

CREON. Thou hast done me
 Good service, I can witness.

TIRESIAS. Now again
 Think, thou dost walk on fortune's razor-edge.

CREON. What is it? I tremble but to see thee speak.

TIRESIAS. Listen to what my art foreshadoweth,
 And thou shalt know. I lately, taking seat

On my accustomed bench of augury, Whither all tribes of fowl after their kind

Always resort, heard a strange noise of birds

Screaming with harsh and dissonant impetus;

And was aware how each the other tore
 With murderous talons; for the whirr of wings

Rose manifest. Then feared I, and straight made trial

Of sacrifices on the altar-hearths
 All blazing; but, out of the offerings,
 There sprang no flame; only upon embers charred

Thick droppings melted off the thighpieces,

And heaved and sputtered, and the gallbladders

Burst, and were lost, while from the folds of fat

The loosened thigh-bones fell. Such auguries,

Failing of presage through the unseemli-
 ness

Of holy rites, I gather from this lad,
 Who is to me, as I to others, guide.

And this state-sickness comes by thy self-
 will;

For all our hearths and altars are defiled
 With prey of dogs and fowl, who have devoured

The dead unhappy son of Œdipus.

Therefore the Gods accept not of us now
 Solemn peace-offering or burnt sacrifice,
 Nor bird trills out a happy-boding note,

Gorged with the fatness of a slain man's blood.

This, then, my son, consider; that to err
From the right path is common to mankind;

But having erred, that mortal is no more
Lusel or fool, who medicines the ill
Wherein he fell, and stands not obstinate.

Conceit of will savours of emptiness.
Give place, then, in the presence of the
dead.

Would not the life that's perished.

Where's thy valour

In slaying o'er the slain? Well I advise, Meaning thee well; 'tis pleasantest to learn

Of good advisers, when their words bring gain.

CREON. Old man, ye all, like archers
at a mark,

Are loosing shafts at me; I am not spared Even your soothsayers' practice; by whose tribe

Long since have I been made as merchandize,

And bought, and sold. Gather your gains at will!

Market your Sardinian silver, Indian gold!
That man ye shall not cover with a tomb;
Not though the eagle ministers of Jove
To Jove's own throne should bear their prey of him,

Not even for horror at such sacrilege
Will I permit his burial. This I know;
There is no power in any man to touch
The Gods with sacrilege; but foul the falls

Which men right cunning fall, Tiresias—Old man, I say—when for the sake of gain

They speak foul treason with a fair outside.

TIRESIAS. Alas, does no man know, does no man think—

CREON. What should one think? What common saw is this?

TIRESIAS. How far good counsel passes all things good?

CREON. So far, I think, folly's the worst of harm!

TIRESIAS. That is the infirmity that fills thy nature.

CREON. I care not to retort upon thee, seer.

TIRESIAS. Thou dost, thou say'st my oracles are false.

CREON. All the prophetic tribe are cov-etous.

TIRESIAS. And that of kings fond of disgraceful gain.

CREON. Know'st thou of whom thou speak'st? I am thy lord.

TIRESIAS. Yea, thou hast saved the state; I gave it thee.

CREON. Thou art a wise seer, but in love with wrong.

TIRESIAS. Thou wilt impel me to give utterance

To my still dormant prescience.

CREON. Say on;
Only beware thou do not speak for gain.

TIRESIAS. For gain of thine, methinks,
I do not speak.

CREON. Thou shalt not trade upon my wits, be sure.

TIRESIAS. And be thou sure of this;
thou shalt not tell

Many more turns of the sun's chariotwheel,

Ere thou shalt render satisfaction, one From thy own loins in payment, dead for
dead,

For that thou hast made Life join hands with Death,

And sent a living soul unworthily
To dwell within a tomb, and keep'st a corpse

Here, from the presence of the Powers beneath,

Not for thy rights or any God's above,
But lawlessly in their despite usurped,
Unhallowed, disappointed, uninterred;
Wherefore the late-avenging punishers,
Furies, from Death and Heaven, lay wait
for thee,

To take thee in the evil of thine own
hands.

Look to it, whether I be bribed who speak;
For as to that, with no great wear of time,
Men's, women's wails to thine own house shall answer.

Also all cities rise in enmity,
To the strown relics of whose citizens
None pays due hallowing, save beasts of
prey,

Dogs, or some fowl, whose pinions to their gates—

Yea, to each hearth—bear taint defiling
them.

Such bolts, in wrath, since thou dar'st
anger me,

I loosen at thy bosom, archer-like,
Sure-aimed, whose burning smart thou shalt not shun.

Lead me away, boy, to my own home
again;

And let him vent his spleen on younger
men,

And learn to keep a tongue more gentle,
and

A brain more sober, than he carries now.
[Exeunt TIRESIAS and Boy.]

1ST SENATOR. The seer is gone, my lord, denouncing woe;

And from the day my old hairs began to indue

Their white for black, we have known him for a watch

Who never barked to warn the state in vain.

CREON. I know it too; and I am ill at ease;

'Tis bitter to submit; but Atë's hand
Smites bitterly on the spirit that abides
her.

1ST SENATOR. Creon, Menœceus' son, be wise at need!

CREON. What should I do? speak, I will hearken.

1ST SENATOR. Go, Set free the maiden from the vault, and build

A tomb for that dead outcast.

CREON. You approve it?
You deem that I should yield?

1ST SENATOR. Sir, with all speed.
Swift-footed come calamities from Heaven
To cut off the perverse.

CREON. O God, 'tis hard!
But I quit heart, and yield; I cannot fight
At odds with destiny.

1ST SENATOR. Up then, to work!

Commit it not to others!

CREON. I am gone
Upon the instant. Quickly, quickly men,
You and your fellows, get you, axe in
hand,

Up to the place, there, yonder; and because

I am thus minded, other than before,
I who did bind her will be there to loose;
For it misgives me it is best to keep
The old appointed laws, all our life long.

[Exeunt CREON and Attendants.]

CHORUS

I. 1.

Thou by many names address,
Child of Zeus loud-thundering,
Glory of a Theban maid,
Who unbidden wanderest
Fair Italia's King,
And art lord in each deep glade
Whither all men seek to her,
Eleusinian Demeter;
Bacchus, who by soft-flowing waters
Of Ismenus habitest
Theba, mother of Bacchant daughters,
With the savage Dragon's stock,

I. 2.

Thee the lurid wild-fire meets
O'er the double-crested rock,
Where Corycian Nymphs arow
Bacchic-wise ascending go,
Thee Castalia's rill;
Thee the ivy-covered capes
Usher forth of Nysa's hill,
And the shore with green of grapes
Clustering, where the hymn to thee
Rises up immortally, Visitant in Theban Streets,
"Evœo, O Evœo!"

II. 1.

Wherefore, seeing thy City thus—
City far above all other
Dear to thee, and her, thy mother
Lightning-slain—by sickness grievous
Holden fast in all her gates,
Come with quickness to relieve us,
By the slopes of Parnassus,
Or the roaring straits.

II. 2.

Hail to thee, the first advancing
 In the stars' fire-breathing chorus!
 Leader of the nightly strain,
 Boy and son of Zeus and King!
 Manifest thyself before us
 With thy frenzied Thyiad train,
 Who their lord Iacchus dancing
 Praise, and all night sing.

[Enter a MESSENGER.]

MESSENGER. You citizens who dwell beside the roof
 Of Cadmus and Amphion, there is no sort
 Of human life that I could ever praise,
 Or could dispraise, as constant; Fortune
 still Raising and Fortune overthrowing still
 The happy and the unhappy; and none can read
 What is set down for mortals. Creon, methought
 Was enviable erewhile, when he preserved
 This land of Cadmus from its enemies,
 And took the country's absolute monarchy,
 And ruled it, flourishing with a noble growth
 From his own seed; and now, he has lost all.
 For when men forfeit all their joys in life,
 One in that case I do not count alive,
 But deem of him as of some animate corpse.
 Pile now great riches, if thou wilt, at
 home;
 Wear thou the living semblance of a king;
 An if delight be lacking, all the rest
 I would not purchase, as compared with
 joy,
 From any, for the shadow of a shade.

1ST SENATOR. What new affliction to the royal stock
 Com'st thou to tell?

MESSENGER. Death is upon them—
 death
 Caused by the living.

1ST SENATOR. And who is the slayer?
 Speak! who the victim?

MESSENGER. Hæmon is no more;
 His life-blood spilt, and by no stranger's
 hand.

1ST SENATOR. What, by his father's, or his own?

MESSENGER. Self-slaughtered; Wroth with his father for the maiden slain.

1ST SENATOR. Prophet! how strictly is thy word come true!

MESSENGER. Look to the future, for these things are so.

1ST SENATOR. And I behold the poor
 Eurydice
 Come to us from the palace, Creon's wife;
 Either of chance, or hearing her son's
 name.

[Enter EURYDICE.]

EURYDICE. O all you citizens, I heard the sound
 Of your discourse, as I approached the gates,
 Meaning to bring my prayers before the face

Of Pallas; even as I undid the bolts,
 And set the door ajar, a voice of woe
 To my own household pierces through my ears;

And I sink backward on my handmaidens
 Afaint for terror; but whate'er the tale,
 Tell it again; I am no novice, I,
 In misery, that hearken.

MESSENGER. Dear my mistress,
 I saw, and I will speak, and will let slip No syllable of the truth. Why should we soothe

Your ears with stories, only to appear Liars thereafter? Truth is always right.
 —I followed in attendance on your lord,
 To the flat hill-top, where despitely
 Was lying yet, harried by dogs, the body
 Of Polynices. Pluto's name, and hers,
 The wayside goddess, we invoked, to stay
 Their anger and be favourable; and him
 We washed with pure lustration, and consumed

On fresh-lopped branches the remains of
 him,

And piled a monument of natal earth
 High over all; thence to the maiden's cell, Chamber of death, with bridal couch of stone,

We made as if to enter. But afar
 One fellow hears a loud uplifted wail

Fill all the unhallowed precinct; comes, and tells

His master, Creon; the uncertain sound
Of piteous crying, as he draws more nigh,
Comes round him, and he utters, groaning loud

A lamentable plaint; "Me miserable!
Was I a prophet? Is this path I tread
The unhappiest of all ways I ever went?
My son's voice thrills my ear. What ho, my guard!

Run quickly thither to the tomb where stones

Have been dragged down to make an opening,

Go in and look, whether I really hear
The voice of Hæmon, or am duped by Heaven."

Quickly, at our distracted lord's command,
We looked: and in the tomb's inmost recess

Found we her, as she had been hanged by the neck,

Fast in a strip-like loop of linen; and him
Laid by her, clasping her about the waist,
Mourning his wedlock severed in the grave,
And his sire's deeds, and his ill-fated bride.

He, when he sees them, with a terrible cry
Goes in towards him, calling out aloud
"Ah miserable, what hast thou done? what
mind

Hadst thou? by what misfortune art thou crazed?

Come out, my son,—suppliant I ask of
thee!"

But with fierce aspect the youth glared
at him;

Spat in his face; answered him not a word;

Grasped at the crossed hilts of his sword
and drew it,

And—for the father started forth in flight—

Missed him! then, angered with himself,
poor fool,

There as he stood he flung himself along
Upon the sword-point firmly planted in The middle of his breast, and, conscious
yet,

Clings to the maid, clasped in his failing arms,

And gasping, sends forth on the pallid cheek

Fast welling drops of blood: So lies he,
dead,

With his arms round the dead; there, in the grave

His bridal rite is full; his misery
Is witness to mankind what worst of woe
The lack of counsel brings a man to know! [Exit EURYDICE.]

1ST SENATOR. What do you make of this? The woman's gone

Back, and without one word, of good or bad!

MESSENGER. I marvel too; and yet I am in hope

She would not choose, hearing her son's sad fate,

In public to begin her keening-cry;
But rather to her handmaids in the house
Dictate the mourning for a private pain.
She is not ignorant of self-control,
That she should err.

1ST SENATOR. I know not; but on me
Weigh heavily both silence over-much,
And loud complaint in vain.

MESSENGER. Well, we shall know it,
If she hide aught within a troubled heart
Even to suppression of its utterance,
If we approach the house. Yes, you say truly,

It does weigh heavy, silence over-much.
[Exit.]

CHORUS

Lo now, Creon himself draws near us,
Clasping a record
Manifest, if we sin not, saying it,
Of ruin unwrought by the hands of others,
But fore-caused by his own self-will.

[Enter CREON, attended, with the body of HÆMON.]

I. 1.

CREON. O sins of a mind
That is minded to stray!
Mighty to bind
And almighty to slay!
Behold us, kin slayers and slain, O ye who stand by the way!
Ah, newness of death!
O my fruitless design!

New to life's breath,
O son that wert mine,

Ah, ah, thou art dead, thou art sped, for a fault that was mine, not thine!

1ST SENATOR. Ah, how thou seem'st to see the truth, too late!

CREON. Ah yes, I have learnt, I know my wretchedness!

II. 1.

Heaviness hath o'ertaken me
And mine head the rod;
The roughness hath shaken me
Of the paths I trod;

Woe is me; my delight is brought low,
cast under the feet of a God!

Woe for man's labours that are profit-
less!

[Reënter the MESSENGER.]

MESSENGER. O master, now thou hast and hast in store
Of sorrows; one thou bearest in thine
arms,
And one at home thou seemest to be come
Merely to witness.

CREON. And what more of sorrow,
Or what more sorrowful, is yet behind?

MESSENGER. Thy wife, the mother—mother of the dead—

Is, by a blow just fallen, haplessly slain.

I. 2.

CREON. O hard to appease thee,
Haven of Death,
How should it please thee
To end this breath?

O herald of heavy news, what is this thy mouth uttereth?

O man, why slayest thou
A man that is slain?
Alas, how sayest thou
Anew and again

That the slaying of a woman is added to slaying—a pain to a pain!

MESSENGER. See for thyself; the palace doors unclose.

[The Altar is disclosed, with the dead body of EURYDICE.]

CREON. Woe is me again, for this new sorrow I see.

II. 2.

What deed is not done?

What tale is not told?

Thy body, O son,

These arms enfold—

Dead—wretch that I am! Dead, too, is the face these eyes behold.

Ah, child, for thy poor mother!
ah for thee!

MESSENGER. She with a sharp-edged dagger in her heart

Lies at the altar; and her darkened lids
Close on her wailing for the glorious lot
Of Megareus, who died before, and next
For his, and last, upon her summoning
Evil to fall on thee, the child-slayer!

III. 1.

CREON. Alas, I faint for dread!

Is there none will deal

A thrust that shall lay me
dead

With the two-edged steel?

Ah woe is me!

I am all whelmed in utter misery!

MESSENGER. It may be so; thou art arraigned of her

Who here lies dead, for the occasion thou
Hast wrought for Destiny on her, and him.

1ST SENATOR. In what way did she slay herself and die?

MESSENGER. Soon as she heard the raising of the wail

For her son's death, she stabbed herself to the heart.

IV. 1.

CREON. Woe is me! to none else can they lay it,

This guilt, but to me!

I, I was the slayer, I say it,

Unhappy, of thee!

O bear me, haste ye, spare not,

To the ends of earth,

More nothing than they who were not

In the hour of birth!

1ST SENATOR. Thou counsell'est well—if anything be well
To follow, in calamity; the ills Lying in our path, soonest o'erpast, were best.

III. 2.

CREON. Come, thou most welcome Fate,
Appear, O come;
Bring my days' final date,
Fill up their sum! .
Come quick, I pray;
Let me not look upon another
day!

1ST SENATOR. This for to-morrow; we must take some thought
On that which lies before us; for these griefs,
They are their care on whom the care has fallen.

CREON. I did but join your prayer for our desire.

1ST SENATOR. Pray thou for nothing more; there is no respite
To mortals from the ills of destiny.

IV. 2.

CREON. Lead me forth, cast me out, no other
Than a man undone;
Who did slay, unwitting, thy mother
And thee, my son!
I turn me I know not where
For my plans ill-spel,
And a doom that is heavy to bear
Is come down on my head.
[Exit CREON, attended.]

CHORUS

Wisdom first for a man's well-being Maketh, of all things. Heaven's insistence
Nothing allows of man's irreverence;
And great blows great speeches aveng-
ing,
Dealt on a boaster,
Teach men wisdom in age, at last.
[Exeunt omnes.]

CHORUS OF PHEREANS

APOLLO. Thy royal house, Admetus, yet again I visit, where a slave among thy slaves Thy table, though a god, I deigned to praise; To this compelled by Jove, who slew my son, The healing sage, launching against his breast The flaming thunder; hence enraged I killed The Cyclops, that prepared his fiery bolts. For this a penal task my vengeful sire Assigned me, to a mortal doomed a slave Perforce; I hither came, and fed his herds, Who friendly entertained me, guarding then, And to this day, his hospitable house. Holy the house, and holy is its lord,	The son of Pheres; him from death I saved The Fates beguiling; for those ancient powers Assented that Admetus should escape Death then approaching, would some other go, Exchanged for him, to the dark realms beneath. His friends, his father, e'en the aged dame That gave him birth, were asked in vain; not one Was found, his wife except; for him she willed To die, and view no more th' ethereal light. She in the house, supported in their arms, Now sighs out her last breath: for she must die.

And this the fate-appointed day: for this,
Dear as it is, I leave the friendly mansion,
Lest there pollution find me. But I see
Orcus advancing near, priest of the dead;
He to the house of Pluto will conduct
her;
Observant of the stated time he comes,
True to the day when she performe must die.

[ORCUS, APOLLO.]

ORCUS. Why art thou here? Why dost thou make this house
Thy haunt, Apollo? Thou dost wrong,
again,
Th' infernal realms defrauding of their honours,
Torn from them, or delayed. Sufficed it
not

T' have snatched Admetus from his doom,
the Fates

With fraudulent arts deluding? Now again, Armed with thy bow, why dost thou guard
his wife,

Daughter of Pelias, bound by solemn vow, Saving her husband's life, to die for
him?

APOLLO. Fear not; thy right I reverence and just claim.

ORCUS. What means thy bow, if thou revere the right?

APOLLO. It ever is my wont to bear these arms.

ORCUS. Ay, and unjustly to defend this house.

APOLLO. I mourn th' afflictions of the man I love.

ORCUS. Wouldst thou defraud me of this second dead?

APOLLO. The first by violence I took not from thee.

ORCUS. How on the earth then walks
he now alive?

APOLLO. Ransomed by her, for whom thou now art come.

ORCUS. And I will lead her to the realms below.

APOLLO. Take her: I know not if I might persuade thee.

ORCUS. Him, whom I ought, to seize;
for that prepared.

APOLLO. No; but t' involve in death ripe, lingering age.

ORCUS. Full well I understand thy speech and zeal.

APOLLO. May then Alcestis to that age be spared?

ORCUS. No: honour, be assured, delights e'en me.

APOLLO. Thou canst but take a single life, no more.

ORCUS. Greater my glory when the youthful die.

APOLLO. More sumptuous obsequies await her age.

ORCUS. This were a law in favour of the rich.

APOLLO. What secret meaning hath thy wisdom here?

ORCUS. They with their wealth would purchase to die old.

APOLLO. Wilt thou not then indulge me with this grace?

ORCUS. Not I indeed: go to: thou knowest my manners.

APOLLO. Hostile to mortals, hateful to the gods.

ORCUS. Thou canst not have all that thou shouldst not have.

APOLLO. Yet, ruthless as thou art, soon wilt thou cease

This contest; such a man to Pheres' house
Comes, to the frozen continent of Thrace
Sent by Eurystheus for the savage steeds Yoked to the tyrant's car. He, in this house

A welcome guest t' Admetus, will by force
Take his wife from thee; and no thanks
from me

Will be thy due; yet what I now entreat
Then thou wilt yield, and I shall hate thee
still.

ORCUS. Say what thou wilt, nothing the more for that

Shalt thou from me obtain: this woman goes,

Be sure of that, to Pluto's dark domain.
I go, and with this sword assert my claim,

For sacred to th' infernal gods that
head,

Whose hair is hallowed, by this charmed blade.

CHORUS

1ST SEMICHORUS. Before this royal mansion all is still:

What may this melancholy silence mean?

2ND SEMICHORUS. And not a friend is nigh, from whom to learn

Whether we ought to wail the queen now dead,

Or lives she yet, yet sees the light of heaven,

For conjugal affection justly deemed

By me, by all, the noblest of her sex.

1ST SEMICHORUS. Hear you a cry, hear you a clash of hands

Within, or lamentations for the dead?

2ND SEMICHORUS. Not e'en a servant holds his station here

Before the gates. O, 'midst this awful gloom

Appear, bright Pæan, and dispel the storm!

1ST SEMICHORUS. If she were dead, they would not be thus silent;

Nor could the body vanish from the house.

2ND SEMICHORUS. Whence is thy confidence? My fears o'ercome me.

1ST SEMICHORUS. A wife so honoured would Admetus bear

Without due pomp in silence to her tomb?

2ND SEMICHORUS. Nor vase of fountain water do I see

Before the doors, as custom claims, to bathe

The corse; and none hath on the portal placed

His locks, in solemn mourning for the dead

Usually shorn; nor does the younger train Of females raise their sorrowing voices high.

1ST SEMICHORUS. Yet this the fatal day, when she must leave

The light of heaven.

2ND SEMICHORUS. Why dost thou mention this?

O, thou hast touched my heart, hast touched my soul.

1ST SEMICHORUS. When on the good afflictions fall, to grieve

Becomes the man that hath been prized as honest.

STROPHE

In vain, our pious vows are vain:

Make we the flying sail our care,

The light bark bounding o'er the main,

To what new realm shall we repair?

To Lycia's hallowed strand?

Or where in solitary state,

'Midst thirsty deserts wild and wide

That close him round on ev'ry side,

Prophetic Ammon holds his awful seat?

What charm, what potent hand

Shall save her from the realms beneath?

He comes, the ruthless tyrant Death:

I have no priest, no altar more,

Whose aid I may implore.

ANTISTROPHE

O that the son of Phœbus now

Lived to behold th' ethereal light!

Then might she leave the seats below,

Where Pluto reigns in cheerless night

The Sage's potent art,

Till thund'ring Jove's avenging power

Hurled his red thunders at his breast,

Could from the yawning gulf releast

To the sweet light of life the dead restore.

Who now shall aid impart?

To ev'ry god at ev'ry shrine

The king hath paid the rites divine:

But vain his vows, his pious care;

And ours is dark despair.

[CHORUS, FEMALE ATTENDANT.]

CHORUS. But of the female train one from the house

Comes bathed in tears: what tidings shall I hear?

To weep, if aught of ill befalls thy lords, Becomes thee: I would know if yet she lives,

Or sinks beneath the ruthless power of death.

ATTENDANT. As living I may speak of her, and dead.

CHORUS. Living and dead at once, how may that be?

ATTENDANT. E'en now she sinks in death, and breathes her last.

CHORUS. Unhappy king, of what a wife bereft!

ATTENDANT. Nor knows our lord his suffering, ere it comes.	She went, and crowned it, and addressed her vows,
CHORUS. Is there no hope then yet to save her life?	Plucking the myrtle bough: nor tear, nor sigh
ATTENDANT. Th' inevitable day of fate is come.	Came from her, neither did th' approaching ill
CHORUS. Have you prepared what the sad case requires?	Change the fresh beauties of her vermeil cheek.
ATTENDANT. Each honour that may grace her obsequies.	Her chamber then she visits, and her bed;
CHORUS. Illustrious in her death, the best of wives:	Thre her tears flowed, and thus she spoke: "O bed,
The sun in his wide course sees not her equal.	To which my wedded lord, for whom I die,
ATTENDANT. The best of wives indeed; who will gainsay it?	Led me a virgin bride, farewell! To thee
What could the brightest pattern of her sex	No blame do I impute, for me alone
Do more? What greater proof give of the honour	Hast thou destroyed. Disdaining to betray
She bears her husband, than a ready will To die for him! This all the city knows.	Thee, and my lord, I die. To thee shall come
How in the house she hath demeaned herself	Some other woman, not more chaste, perchance
Will claim thy admiration. When she knew	More happy." As she lay, she kissed the couch,
The destined day was come, in fountain water	And bathed it with a flood of tears; that passed,
She bathed her lily-tinctured limbs, then took	She left her chamber, then returned, and oft
From her rich chests of odorous cedar formed	She left it, oft returned, and on the couch
A splendid robe, and her most radiant dress;	Fondly, each time she entered, cast herself.
Thus gorgeously arrayed she stood before The hallowed flames, and thus addressed her prayer:	Her children, as they hung upon her robes
"O queen, I go to the infernal shades, Yet, ere I go, with reverence let me breathe	Weeping, she raised, and clasped them to her breast
My last request—Protect my orphan children,	Each after each, as now about to die.
Make my son happy with the wife he loves, And wed my daughter to a noble husband:	Each servant through the house burst into tears
Nor let them, like their mother, to the tomb	In pity of their mistress; she to each
Untimely sink, but in their native land Be blest through lengthened life to honoured age."	Stretched her right hand; nor was there one so mean
Then to each altar in the royal house	To whom she spoke not, and admitted him To speak to her again. Within the house These are our griefs. Admetus must have died,
	Have perished; but escaping is immersed In sorrows, which his heart shall ne'er forget.
	CHORUS. Well may the groan burst from him, thus to lose
	A wife with every excellence adorned.
	ATTENDANT. He weeps indeed, and in his arm supports

His much-loved wife, entreats her not to leave him,
 Asking impossibilities. She wastes
 And fades with her disease; her languid limbs
 Supporting on his hand, yet while some breath
 Of life remains she wishes to behold
 The radiance of the sun, 'tis her last view,
 As never more to see his golden orb.
 I go to tell them thou art here: not all
 Bear to their lords that firm unshaken faith
 T' attend them in their ills; but thou of old
 Hast to this house approved thyself a friend.
 CHORUS. Supreme of gods, is there no remedy
 To these afflictions, from the storms of fate
 No refuge to our lords? Some means of safety
 Hast thou assigned? Or must these locks be shorn,
 And sorrow robe me in her sable weeds?
 ATTENDANT. Too plain, my friends, too plain:
 yet to the gods
 Breathe we our vows, for great their power to save.
 O royal Pæan, for Admetus' ills
 Find some relief; assist him, O assist him!
 As thou before didst save him, save him now
 From death; repress the tyrant's murderous haste!
 CHORUS. Alas, alas! Woe, woe is me!
 Thou son
 Of Pheres, wilt thou bear to live, deprived
 Of such a wife? Will not despair unshenth
 The self-destroying sword? Will it not find
 Some means of violent death? This day thy wife—
 Dear should I say? nay, dearest to thy soul—Shalt thou see dead. But she comes forth, and with her
 Her husband. Groan, thou land of Pheres, raise

The cry of mourning; for the best of women
 Wastes with disease, and drooping to the earth
 Sinks to th' infernal Pluto's dreary realms.
 Never will I pronounce the nuptial state
 To pleasure more allied than grief: of old
 This often have I noted, chiefly now
 Viewing my king's affliction, who, bereft
 Of this sweet excellence, is doomed to pass
 A solitary life estranged from joy.

[ALCESTIS, ADMETUS, EUMELUS, CHORUS.]

ALCESTIS. Thou sun, and thou fair light of day, ye clouds
 That in quick eddies whirl along the sky!
 ADMETUS. Sees thee and me most wretched, yet in nought
 Offending 'gainst the gods that thou shouldst die.
 ALCESTIS. O earth, ye tow'ring roofs, thou bridal bed
 Raised in Iolcos, my paternal seat!
 ADMETUS. O thou poor sufferer, raise thee, leave me not;
 Entreat the powerful gods to pity thee.
 ALCESTIS. I see the two-oared boat, the Stygian barge;
 And he, that wafts the dead, grasps in his hand
 His pole, and calls me, "Why dost thou delay?
 Haste thee; thou lingerest; all is ready here.
 Charon impatient speeds me to be gone."
 ADMETUS. A melancholy voyage this to me.
 O thou unhappy, what a fate is ours!
 ALCESTIS. He drags me, some one drags me to the gates
 That close upon the dead; dost thou not see him,
 How stern he frowns beneath his gloomy brows,
 Th' impetuous Pluto? What wouldst thou with me?
 Off, let me go! Ah, what a dreary path,
 Wretched, most wretched, must I downwards tread!
 ADMETUS. To thy friends mournful, most to me, and these

Thy children, who with me this sorrow share.

ALCESTIS. No longer hold me up, hold me no longer;

Here lay me down: I have not strength to stand:

Death is hard by, dark night creeps o'er my eyes.

My children, O my children, now no more, Your mother is no more: farewell! May you

More happy see the golden light of heaven!

ADMETUS. Ah, what a mournful word is this! To me

Than any death more painful. By the gods,

Forsake me not. Shouldst thou be taken from me,

I were no more; in thee I live; thy love, Thy sweet society my soul reveres.

ALCESTIS. Thou seest, Admetus, what to me the Fates

Assign; yet, ere I die, I wish to tell thee What lies most near my heart. I honoured thee,

And in exchange for thine my forfeit life Devoted; now I die for thee, though free Not to have died, but from Thessalia's chiefs

Preferring whom I pleased in royal state To have lived happy here: I had no will To live bereft of thee with these poor orphans;

I die without reluctance, though the gifts Of youth are mine to make life grateful to me.

Yet he that gave thee birth, and she that bore thee,

Deserted thee, though well it had beseeemed them

With honour to have died for thee, t' have saved

Their son with honour, glorious in their death.

They had no child but thee, they had no hope

Of other offspring shouldst thou die; and I Might thus have lived, thou mightst have lived, till age

Crept slowly on, nor wouldst thou heave the sigh

Thus of thy wife deprived, nor train alone Thy orphan children. But some god appointed

It should be thus: thus be it. Thou to me Requite this kindness; never shall I ask An equal retribution, nothing bears A value high as life: yet my request Is just, thou wilt confess it; for thy love To these our children equals mine, thy soul

If wisdom tempers. In their mother's house

Let them be lords: wed not again, to set A stepdame o'er my children, some base woman

That wants my virtues; she through jealousy

Will work against their lives, because to thee

I bore them: do not this, I beg thee do not;

For to the offspring of a former bed A stepdame comes sharp as a serpent's tooth.

My son, that holds endearing converse with thee,

Hath in his father a secure protection. But who, my daughter, shall with honour guide

Thy virgin years? What woman shalt thou find,

New-wedded to thy father, whose vile arts Will not with slanderous falsehoods taint thy name,

And blast thy nuptials in youth's freshest bloom?

For never shall thy mother see thee led A bride, nor at thy throes speak comfort to thee.

Then present when a mother's tenderness Is most alive: for I must die; the ill Waits not a day, but quickly shall I be Numbered amongst the dead. Farewell, be happy

And thou, my husband, mayst with honour boast

Thou hast been wedded to a virtuous wife; And you, my children, glory in your mother.

CHORUS. Fear not: I boldly pledge my faith that this

He will perform, if reason holds her seat.

ADMETUS. This shall be done, let not such fears disturb thee,

It shall be done; for living thou wast mine,

And dead thou only shalt be called my wife.

Never in thy dear place Thessalian bride Shall call me husband: no, nor other woman,

Though from a line of ancient kings she draws

Her noble blood, and boasts each peerless grace

Of native beauty. I am blest with children,

Nor wish I more; in these I pray the gods I may have joy, since all my joy in thee is lost. This mourning not one single year,

But to my life's last period, shall be borne. How hateful are my parents! for their words

Alone were friendly, not their deeds; whilst thou,

Paying the dearest forfeit for my life, Hast saved me. Shall I ever cease to mourn,

Deprived of such a wife? Hence I renounce

The feast, the cheerful guest, the flow'ry wreath

And song that used to echo through my house.

For never will I touch the lyre again, Nor to the Libyan flute's sweet measures raise

My voice: with thee all my delights are dead.

Thy beauteous figure, by the artist's hand Skilfully wrought, shall in my bed be laid; By that reclining, I will clasp it to me, And call it by thy name, and think I hold My dear wife in my arms, and have her yet,

Though now no more I have her: cold delight

I ween; yet thus th' affliction of my soul Shall I relieve, and visiting my dreams Shalt thou delight me; for to see a friend Is grateful to the soul, come when he will,

Though an unreal vision of the night.

Had I the voice of Orpheus, and his skill Of power to soothe with my melodious strains

The daughter of bright Ceres, or her husband,

That from their realms I might receive thee back,

I would go down; nor should th' infernal dog,

Nor the stern Charon, sitting at his oar To wait the dead, restrain me, till thy life

I had restored to the fair light of day.

But there await me till I die; prepare

A mansion for me, as again with me

To dwell; for in thy tomb will I be laid

In the same cedar, by thy side composed;

For ev'n in death I will not be disjoined From thee, who hast alone been faithful to me.

CHORUS. For her dear sake thy sorrows will I share

As friend with friend; and she is worthy of it.

ALCESTIS. You hear, my children, what your father's words

Have promised, not to wed another woman To your discomfort, nor dishonour me.

ADMETUS. I now repeat it; firm shall be my faith.

ALCESTIS. On this, receive thy children from my hands.

ADMETUS. A much-loved gift, and from a much-loved hand.

ALCESTIS. Be now, instead of me, a mother to them.

ADMETUS. If they lose thee, it must indeed be so.

ALCESTIS. When I should live, I sink among the dead.

ADMETUS. Ah me, what shall I do bereft of thee!

ALCESTIS. Time will abate thy grief, the dead is nothing.

ADMETUS. O lead me, by the gods, lead me down with thee.

ALCESTIS. Enough, it is enough that I die for thee.

ADMETUS. O fate, of what a wife dost thou deprive me!

ALCESTIS. A heavy weight hangs on my darkened eye.

ADMETUS. If thou forsake me, I am lost indeed.

ALCESTIS. As one that is no more I now am nothing.

ADMETUS. Ah, raise thy face: do not forsake thy children.

ALCESTIS. It must be so perforce: farewell, my children!

ADMETUS. Look on them, but a look!

ALCESTIS. I am no more.

ADMETUS. How dost thou? Wilt thou leave us then?

ALCESTIS. Farewell!

ADMETUS. And what a wretch, what a lost wretch am I!

CHORUS. She's gone; thy wife, Admetus, is no more.

EUMELUS. O my unhappy fate!
My mother sinks to the dark realms of night,
Nor longer views this golden light;
But to the ills of life exposed
Leaves my poor orphan state.
Her eyes, my father, see, her eyes are closed,
And her hand nerveless falls.
Yet hear me, O my mother, hear my cries,
It is thy son that calls,
Who prostrate on the earth breathes on thy lips his sighs.

ADMETUS. On one that hears not, sees not: I and you Must bend beneath affliction's heaviest load.

EUMELUS. Ah, she hath left my youth:
My mother, my dear mother, is no more,
Left me my sufferings to deplore;
Who shall my sorrows soothe?
Thou too, my sister, thy full share shalt know
Of grief, thy heart to rend.
Vain, O my father, vain thy nuptial vows,
Brought to this speedy end;
For, when my mother died, in ruin sunk thy house.

CHORUS. Admetus, thou perforce must bear these ills:
Thou'rt not the first, nor shalt thou be the last

Of mortal men, to lose a virtuous wife:
For know, death is a debt we all must pay.

ADMETUS. I know it well; not unawares this ill
Falls on me; I foresaw, and mourned it long.
But I will bear the body hence; attend:
And, whilst thou wait, raise with alternate voice
The pæan to the ruthless god that rules
Below: and through my realms of Thes-saly
I give command that all in solemn grief
For this dear woman shear their locks, and wear
The sable garb of mourning; from your steeds,
Whether in pairs they whirl the car, or bear
Single the rider's rein, their waving manes
Cut close; nor through the city be the sound
Of flute or lyre for twelve revolving moons.
Never shall I entomb one dearer to me,
Or one more kind: these honours from my hands
She merits, for she only died for me.

STROPHE 1

Immortal bliss be thine,
Daughter of Pelias in the realms below,
Immortal pleasures round thee flow,
Though never there the sun's bright beams shall shine.
Be the black-browed Pluto told,
And the Stygian boatman old,
Whose rude hands grasp the oar, the ruder guide,
The dead conveying o'er the tide,
Let him be told, so rich a freight before
His light skiff never bore;
Tell him that o'er the joyless lakes
The noblest of her sex her dreary passage takes.

STROPHE 2

Thy praise the bards shall tell,
When to their hymning voice the echo rings,
Or when they sweep the solemn strings,

And wake to rapture the seven-chorded shell,

Or in Sparta's jocund bowers,
Circling when the vernal hours
Bring the Carnean feast, whilst through the night

Full-orbed the high moon rolls her
light;

Or where rich Athens proudly elevate
Shows her magnificent state:

Their voice thy glorious death shall
raise,

And swell th' enraptured strain to celebrate thy praise.

ANTISTROPHE 1

O that I had the power,
Could I but bring thee from the shades of
night

Again to view this golden light,
To leave that boat, to leave that dreary
shore,

Where Cocytus deep and wide
Rolls along his sullen tide!

For thou, O best of women, thou alone
For thy lord's life daredst give thy own.

Light lie the earth upon that gentle
breast,

And be thou ever blest!

But should he choose to wed again,
Mine and thy children's hearts would hold him in disdain.

ANTISTROPHE 2

When, to avert his doom,
His mother in the earth refused to lie;
Nor would his ancient father die
To save his son from an untimely tomb;
Though the hand of time had spread
Hoar hairs o'er each aged head;
In youth's fresh bloom, in beauty's radiant glow,

The darksome way thou daredst to go,
And for thy youthful lord's to give thy
life.

Be mine so true a wife;

Though rare the lot: then should I prove

Th' indissoluble bond of faithfulness and love.

[HERCULES, CHORUS.]

HERCULES. Ye strangers, citizens of Phææ, say

If I shall find Admetus in the house.

CHORUS. There is the son of Phères,
Hercules.

But what occasion, tell us, brought thee
hither

To Theessaly; to Phææ why this visit?

HERCULES. A toil imposed by the Tirynthian king.

CHORUS. And whither roving? On what journey bound?

HERCULES. For the four steeds that whirl the Thracian's car.

CHORUS. How to be won; art thou a stranger there?

HERCULES. A stranger, never on Bistonian ground.

CHORUS. These horses are not won without strong contest.

HERCULES. The toil, whate'er it be, I could not shun.

CHORUS. He must be slain, or death awaits thee there.

HERCULES. Not the first contest this
I have essayed.

CHORUS. Shouldst thou o'ercome their lord, what is the prize?

HERCULES. His coursers to Eurystheus
I shall lead.

CHORUS. No slight task in their mouths to place the curb.

HERCULES. I shall, though from their nostrils they breathe fire.

CHORUS. With their fierce jaws they rend the flesh of men.

HERCULES. So feeds the mountain savage, not the horse.

CHORUS. Their mangers shalt thou see all stained with blood.

HERCULES. From whom does he that bred them draw his race?

CHORUS. From Mars this king of golden-shielded Thrace.

HERCULES. How is this toil assigned me by my fate,

In enterprise so hazardous and high Engaged, that always with the sons of Mars

I must join battle? With Lycaon first,
 With Cygnus next; now with these furious steeds
 And their proud lord another contest
 waits me:
 But never shall Alcmena's son be seen
 To tremble at the fierceness of a foe.
 CHORUS. But, see, the sceptred ruler of this land,
 Admetus, from his house advances to
 thee.

[ADMETUS, HERCULES, CHORUS.]

ADMETUS. Hail, son of Jove, of Persæus' noble blood.
 HERCULES. Hail thou, Admetus, king of Thessaly.
 ADMETUS. I am no stranger to thy friendly wishes.
 HERCULES. Why are thy locks in sign of mourning shorn?
 ADMETUS. 'Tis for one dead, whom I must this day bury.
 HERCULES. The god avert thy mourning for a child!
 ADMETUS. My children, what I had,
 live in my house.
 HERCULES. Thy aged father, haply he is gone.
 ADMETUS. My father lives, and she that bore me lives.
 HERCULES. Lies then thy wife Alcestis
 'mongst the dead?
 ADMETUS. Of her I have in double wise
 to speak.
 HERCULES. As of the living speakst thou, or the dead?
 ADMETUS. She is, and is no more: this grief afflicts me.
 HERCULES. This gives no information,
 dark thy words.
 ADMETUS. Knowst thou not then the destiny assigned her?
 HERCULES. I know that she submits to die for thee.
 ADMETUS. To this assenting is she not
 no more?
 HERCULES. Lament her not too soon;
 await the time.
 ADMETUS. She's dead; one soon to die is now no more.

HERCULES. It differs wide to be, or not to be.
 ADMETUS. Such are thy sentiments, far other mine.
 HERCULES. But wherefore are thy tears? What friend is dead?
 ADMETUS. A woman; of a woman made I mention.
 HERCULES. Of foreign birth, or one allied to thee?
 ADMETUS. Of foreign birth, but to my house most dear.
 HERCULES. How in thy house then did she chance to die?
 ADMETUS. Her father dead, she came an orphan hither.
 HERCULES. Would I had found thee with no grief oppressed.
 ADMETUS. With what intent dost thou express thee thus?
 HERCULES. To seek some other hospitable hearth.
 ADMETUS. Not so, O king; come not so great an ill.
 HERCULES. To those that mourn a guest is troublesome.
 ADMETUS. Dead are the dead: but enter thou my house.
 HERCULES. Shame that with those who weep a guest should feast.
 ADMETUS. We have apartments separate, to receive thee.
 HERCULES. Permit me to depart, much will I thank thee.
 ADMETUS. It must not be; no, to another house
 Thou must not turn aside. Go thou before;
 Ope those apartments of the house which
 bear
 A different aspect; give command to those Whose charge it is to spread the plenteous
 table,
 And bar the doors between: the voice of
 woe
 Unseemly heard afflicts the feasting guest.
 CHORUS. What wouldst thou do, Admetus? Such a grief
 Now lying heavy on thee, canst thou bear
 T' admit a guest? Doth this bespeak thee wise?

ADMETUS. If from my house or city I should drive

A coming guest, wouldst thou commend me more?

Thou wouldst not: my affliction would not thus

Be less, but more unhospitable I;

And to my former ills this further ill Be added, I should hear my mansion called The stranger-hating house. Besides, to me

His hospitable doors are always open, Whene'er I tread the thirsty soil of Argos.

CHORUS. Why didst thou then conceal thy present grief,

A stranger friend arriving, as thou sayst?

ADMETUS. My gate he would not enter, had he known

Of my affliction aught: yet acting thus Some may perchance deem me unwise, nor hold me

Worthy of praise; yet never shall my house

Know to dishonour or reject a guest.

STROPHE 1

Yes, liberal house, with princely state

To many a stranger, many a guest

Oft hast thou oped thy friendly gate,

Oft spread the hospitable feast.

Beneath thy roof Apollo deigned to dwell,

Here strung his silver-sounding shell,

And mixing with thy menial train

Deigned to be called the shepherd of the plain:

And as he drove his flocks along,

Whether the winding vale they rove,

Or linger in the upland grove,

He tuned the pastoral pipe or rural song.

STROPHE 2

Delighted with thy tuneful lay

No more the savage thirsts for blood;

Amidst thy flocks in harmless play

Wantons the lynx's spotted brood;

Pleased from his lair on Othrys' rugged brow

The lion seeks the vale below;

Whilst to thy lyre's melodious sound

The dappled hinds in sportive measures bound;

And as the vocal echo rings,

Lightly their nimble feet they ply,

Leaving their pine-clad forests high,

Charmed with the sweet notes of thy gladdening strings.

ANTISTROPHE 1

Hence is thy house, Admetus, graced

With all that Plenty's hand bestows,

Near the sweat-streaming current placed

That from the lake of Bœbia flows.

Far to the west extends the wide domain,

Rich-pastured mead and cultured plain;

Its bound, the dark Molossian air,

Where the Sun stations his unharnessed car,

And stretching to his eastern ray,

Where Pelion rising in his pride

Frowns o'er th' Ægean's portless tide,

Reaches from sea to sea thy ample sway.

ANTISTROPHE 2

Yet wilt thou ope thy gate e'en now,

E'en now wilt thou receive this guest:

Though from thine eye the warm tear flow,

Though sorrow rend thy suffering breast:

Sad tribute to thy wife, who knew in death

Lamented lies thy roof beneath,

But Nature thus her laws decreed,

The generous mind is prompt to generous deed;

For all the power of wisdom lies

Fixed in the righteous bosom: hence

My soul assumes this confidence,

Fair to the virtuous shall Success arise.

[ADMETUS, CHORUS.]

ADMETUS. Ye citizens of Phœæ, present here,

Benevolent to me, my dead adorned

With every honour, the attendant train

Are bearing to the tomb and funeral pyre.

Do you, for ancient usage so requires,

Address her as she takes her last sad way.

CHORUS. Thy father Pheres! See, his aged foot
Advances; his attendants in their hands
Bear gorgeous presents, honours to the dead.

[PHERES, ADMETUS, CHORUS.]

PHERES. I come, my son, joint sufferer in thy griefs;
For thou hast lost a good and virtuous wife,
None will gainsay it; but thou must perse-

forece
Endure this, though severe. These ornaments

Receive, and let her go beneath the earth:
These honours are her due, since for thy life

She died, my son; nor would she I should be

Childless, nor suffered me bereft of thee
To waste in grief my sad remains of life.

The life of all her sex hath she adorned
With added lustre by this generous deed.
O thou, that hast preserved my son, and raised

Our sinking glories, hail! E'en in the house

Of Pluto be thou blest! Such marriages
Pronounce I good; others of little worth.

ADMETUS. Thou comest not to these obsequies by me

Invited, nor thy presence do I deem Friendly. She never in thy ornaments
Shall be arrayed, nor wants she aught of thine

To grace her funeral rites. Then was the time

To show thy social sorrow, when my life
The Fates demanded: thou couldst stand aloof,

Old as thou art, and give a younger up
To die; and wouldst thou now bewail her death?

Art thou my father? No; nor she, who says

She brought me forth, my mother, though so called;

But the base offspring of some slave thy wife

Stole me, and put me to her breast. Thy deeds

Show what thou art by plain and evident proof:

And never can I deem myself thy son,
Who passest all in mean and abject spirit.
At such an age, just trembling on the verge

Of life, that wouldst not—nay, thou daredst not—die

For thine own son: but you could suffer her,

Though sprung from foreign blood. With justice then

Her only as my father must I deem,
Her only as my mother; yet this course
Mightst thou have run with glory, for thy son

Daring to die; brief was the space of life
That could remain to thee. I then had lived

My destined time; she too had lived, nor thus

Of her forsaken should I wail my loss.
Yet all that makes man happy hadst thou proved,

Blest through thy life: in royalty thy youth

Grew up; I was thy son t' inherit from thee

Thy treasures, that not childless hadst thou died,

Leaving thy desolated house a prey
To plundering strangers. Neither canst thou say

Thou gavest me up to death as one that held

Thy age in rude contempt: I honoured thee

With holy reverence, requited thus
By thee and her that bore me. Other sons
Wilt thou not therefore speed thee to beget.

To cherish thy old age, to grace thee dead
With sumptuous vest, and lay thee in the tomb?

That office never shall my hand perform,
For, far as in thee lay, I died; if yet
I view this light, fortune presenting me
Other deliverer, his son I am,
With pious fondness to support his age.

Unmeaning is the old man's wish to die,
Of age complaining and life's lengthened
course;

For, at th' advance of death, none has the
will

To die: old age is no more grievous to
them.

CHORUS. Forbear; enough the present weight of woe.

My son, exasperate not a father's mind.

PERES. Me as some worthless Lydian
dost thou rate,

My son, or Phrygian slave bought with thy gold?

Dost thou not know I am Thessalian born,
Of a Thessalian father, truly free?

Opprobrious are thy words, reviling me
With youthful insolence, not quitted so.

I gave thee birth, thence lord of my fair
house;

I gave thee nurture, that indeed I owed
thee,

But not to die for thee: such law from nature

Received I not, that fathers for their sons

Should die, nor does Greece know it. For thyself,

Whether misfortune press thee, or thy
state

Be happier, thou wast born: thou hast
from me

Whate'er behoves thee: o'er an ample realm

Thou now art king, and I shall leave thee
more,

A large extent of lands; for from my father

These I received. In what then have I wronged thee?

Or what deprived thee? Die not thou for
me,

Nor I for thee. Is it to thee a joy
To view the light of heaven? and dost thou think

Thy father joys not in it? Long I deem
The time below? But little is the space

Of life, yet pleasant. Thou, devoid of shame,

Hast struggled not to die, and thou dost
live

Passing the bounds of life assigned by fate,

By killing her. My mean and abject spirit Thou dost rebuke, O thou most timid wretch,

Vanquished e'en by a woman, who for
thee,

Her young and beauteous husband, freely died.

A fine device that thou mightst never die,
Couldst thou persuade who at the time
might be

Thy wife to die for thee; yet canst thou load

Thy friends with vile reproach, if they decline

To do it, base and timid as thou art.
But hold thy peace; and think, if life be
dear

To thee, it must be dear to all. On us,
If thou wilt throw reproaches, thou shalt hear

Enough of thy ill deeds, and nothing false.
CHORUS. Too much of ill already hath been spoken:

Forbear, old man, nor thus revile thy son.

ADMETUS. Say what thou wilt, I have declared my thoughts:

But if it gives thee pain to hear the truth,
Much it behoved thee not to wrong me
thus.

PERES. Had I died for thee, greater were the wrong.

ADMETUS. Is death alike then to the young and old?

PERES. With one life ought we live, and not with two.

ADMETUS. Mayst thou then live a greater age than Jove!

PERES. And dost thou, nothing injured, curse thy parents?

ADMETUS. I saw thee fondly coveting long life.

PERES. Her, that died for thee, wilt thou not entomb?

ADMETUS. These are the tokens of thy abject spirit.

PERES. By us she died not, that thou wilt not say.

ADMETUS. Ah, mayst thou some time come to want my aid!

PHERES. Wed many wives, that more may die for thee.
ADMETUS. On thee be that reproach, thou wouldst not die.
PHERES. Sweet is this light of heaven, sweet is this light.
ADMETUS. Base is thy thought, unworthy of a man.
PHERES. Would it not joy thee to entomb
 my age?
ADMETUS. Die when thou wilt, inglorious wilt thou die.
PHERES. An ill report will not affect me dead.
ADMETUS. Alas, alas, how shameless is old age!
PHERES. She was not shameless, but thou foundst her mad.
ADMETUS. Begone, and suffer me t' entomb
 the dead.
PHERES. I go; thou shalt entomb her,
 as thyself
 Her murderer. Look for vengeance from her friends.
Acastus is no man, if his hands fail
 Dearly t' avenge on thee his sister's blood.
ADMETUS. Why get thee gone, thou and thy worthy wife;
 Grow old together, as you well deserve,
 Childless, your son yet living; never more Meet me beneath this roof. Go! Were it decent
 To interdict thee by the herald's voice,
 I would forbid thee ever set thy foot
 Within this mansion of thy ancestors.
 But let us go, since we must bear our ill,
 And place her body on the funeral pyre.
CHORUS. O thou unhappy, nobly daring
 woman,
 Most generous, brightest excellence, fare-
 well!
 Courteous my Hermes and th' infernal
 king
 Receive thee: in those realms if aught of grace
 Awaits the virtuous, be those honours
 thine,
 And be thy seat nigh Pluto's royal bride.
ATTENDANT. To many a guest ere now, from various realms
 Arriving, in this mansion have I spread

The hospitable feast; but at this hearth
 A viler than this stranger never shared
 The bounty of Admetus: though he saw My lord oppressed with grief, it checked him not,
 He boldly entered; nor with sober cheer Took the refreshment offered, though he knew
 Th' affliction of the house. If what he would
 We brought not on the instant, he enforced
 His harsh commands; and, grasping in his hands
 A goblet wreathed with ivy, filled it high
 With the grape's purple juice, and quaffed
 it off
 Untempered, till the glowing wine inflamed him;
 Then, binding round his head a myrtle wreath,
 Howls dismal discord; two unpleasing strains
 We heard, his harsh notes, who in nought
 revered
 Th' afflictions of Admetus, and the voice
 Of sorrow through the family that wept
 Our mistress; yet our tearful eyes we showed not,
Admetus so commanded, to the guest.
 My office bids me wait, and in the house
 Receive this stranger, some designing
 knave,
 Or ruffian robber: she meantime is borne
 Out of the house, nor did I follow her,
 Nor stretched my hand lamenting my lost
 mistress:
 She was a mother to me, and to all
 My fellow-servants; from a thousand ills
 She saved us, with her gentleness appeas-
 ing
 Our lord when angry: justly do I hate
 This stranger then, who came amidst our grief.

[HERCULES, ATTENDANT.]

HERCULES. You follow, why that grave and thoughtful look?
 Ill it becomes a servant's countenance
 To frown on strangers, whom he should receive

With cheerfulness. A good friend of thy lord

Is present: all the welcome he can get
From thee, a sullen and contracted brow,
Mourning a loss that touches not this house.

Come hither, that thou mayst be wiser, friend;

Knowst thou the nature of all mortal things?

Not thou, I ween; how shouldst thou? Hear from me

By all of human race death is a debt
That must be paid, and none of mortal men

Knows whether till to-morrow life's short space

Shall be extended: such the dark events
Of fortune; never to be learned, nor traced
By any skill. Instructed thus by me
Bid pleasure welcome, drink, the life allowed

From day to day esteem thine own, all else

Fortune's. To Venus chief address thy vows—

Of all the heavenly powers she, gentle queen,

Kindest to man, and sweetest: all besides
Reckless let pass, and listen to my words,
If thou seest reason in them, as I think
Thou dost: then bid excessive grief farewell,

And drink with us; master these present ills,

And bind thy brows with garlands; well I know

The circling bowl will waft thy spirits to bliss,

Now sunk in dark and sullen melancholy.
Since we are mortal, be our minds intent
On mortal things; to all the grave, whose brows

With cares are furrowed, let me judge for thee,

Life is no life, but a calamity.

ATTENDANT. These things we know;
but what becomes us now
Ill suits with festal revelry and mirth.

HERCULES. O woman dies, one unrelated; check

Thy grief: the lords of this fair mansion live.

ATTENDANT. Live! Knowst thou not th' afflictions of this house?

HERCULES. Unless thy lord in something hath deceived me.

ATTENDANT. Liberal his mind, too liberal to the guest.

HERCULES. No: for a stranger dead he hath done well.

ATTENDANT. No stranger, but a near domestic loss.

HERCULES. Is it some sorrow which he told not me?

ATTENDANT. Go thou with joy; ours are our lord's afflictions.

HERCULES. These are not words that speak a foreign loss.

ATTENDANT. If such, thy revelry had not displeased me.

HERCULES. Then by my friendly host I much am wronged.

ATTENDANT. Thy coming was unseasonable; this house

Wanted no guest: thou seest our locks all shorn,

Our grief and sable vests.

HERCULES. Who then is dead?

One of his children, or his aged father?

ATTENDANT. His wife Alcestis, stranger, is no more.

HERCULES. What sayst thou? And e'en so could you receive me?

ATTENDANT. It shamed him to reject thee from his house.

HERCULES. O wretch, of what a wife art thou bereft!

ATTENDANT. Not she alone, we all are lost with her.

HERCULES. I might have thought this when I saw his eye

Flowing with tears, his locks shorn off, and grief

Marked on his face: but he persuaded me, Saying that one of foreign birth he mourned,

And bore her to the tomb: unwillingly
Ent'ring these gates I feasted in the house,
My hospitable friend with such a grief
Oppressed; nay more, I revelled, and my head

With garlands shaded: but the fault was
thine,

Who didst not tell me that a woe like this Thy house afflicted. But inform me where She is interred: where shall I find her tomb?

ATTENDANT. Right in the way that to Larissa leads

Without the city wilt thou find her tomb.

HERCULES. Now my firm heart, and thou, my daring soul,

Show what a son the daughter of Elec-tryon,

Alcmena of Tirynthia, bore to Jove.

This lady, new in death, behoves me save,
And, to Admetus rend'ring grateful service,

Restore his lost Alcestis to his house.
This sable-vested tyrant of the dead
My eye shall watch, not without hope to find him

Drinking th' oblations nigh the tomb. If once

Seen from my secret stand I rush upon
him,

These arms shall grasp him till his panting sides

Labour for breath; and who shall force him from me,

Till he gives back this woman? Should I fail

To seize him there, as coming not to taste

The spilt blood's thickening foam, I will descend

To the drear house of Pluto and his queen,
Which the sun never cheers, and beg her thence,

Assured that I shall lead her back, and place her

In my friend's hands, whose hospitable
heart

Received me in his house, nor made excuse, Though pierced with such a grief; this he concealed

Through generous thought and reverence to his friend.

Who in Thessalia bears a warmer love
To strangers? Who, through all the realms of Greece?

It never shall be said this generous man

Received in me a base and worthless
wretch.

[ADMETUS, CHORUS]

ADMETUS. Ah me! Ah me! How mournful this approach!

How hateful to my sight this widowed
house!

Ah, whither shall I go? where shall I rest?

What shall I say? or what forbear to say?
How may I sink beneath this weight of
woe?

To misery was I born, wretch that I am;
I envy now the dead, I long for them,
Long to repose me in that house. No
more

With pleasure shall I view the sun's fair beams,

No more with pleasure walk upon this
earth:

So dear an hostage death has rent from
me,

And yielded to th' infernal king his prey.

CHORUS. Go forward, yet go forward; to thy house

Retire.

ADMETUS. Ah me!

CHORUS. Thy sufferings do indeed
Demand these groans.

ADMETUS. O miserable me!

CHORUS. Thy steps are set in sorrow,
well I know,

But all thy sorrow nought avails the dead.

ADMETUS. Wretch that I am!

CHORUS. To see thy wife no more,
No more to see her face, is grief indeed.

ADMETUS. O, thou hast touched on that which deepest wounds

My mind: what greater ill can fall on
man

Than of a faithful wife to be deprived?

O that I ne'er had wedded, in the house Had ne'er dwelt with her! The unmarried
state

I envy, and deem those supremely blest
Who have no children; in one single life
To mourn is pain that may be well endured

To see our children wasting with disease,
To see death ravaging our nuptial bed,

This is not to be borne, when we might pass

Our lives without a child, without a wife.

CHORUS. Fate comes, resistless Fate.

ADMETUS. Unhappy me!

CHORUS. But to thy sorrows wilt thou put no bounds?

ADMETUS. Woe, woe, woe, woe!

CHORUS. A ponderous weight indeed To bear, yet bear them. Thou art not the first

That lost a wife: misery, in different forms

To different, men appearing, seizes all.

ADMETUS. Ye lasting griefs, ye sorrows for our friends

Beneath the earth! Ah, why did ye restrain me?

I would have cast myself into the tomb,
The gaping tomb, and lain in death with
her,

The dearest, best of women; there for one
Pluto had coupled two most faithful souls,
Together passing o'er th' infernal lake.

CHORUS. I had a friend, by birth allied
to me,

Whose son, and such a son as claimed his tears,

Died in the prime of youth, his only child;
Yet with the firmness of a man he bore
His grief, though childless, and declining
age

Led him with hasty steps to hoary hairs.

ADMETUS. Thou goodly mansion, how shall I endure

To enter thee, how dwell beneath thy roof,

My state thus sunk! Ah me, how changed from that,

When 'midst the pines of Pelion blazing
round,

And hymeneal hymns, I held my way,
And led my loved Alcestis by her hand:

The festal train with many a cheerful shout

Saluted her, now dead, and me, and hailed
Our union happy, as descended each

From generous blood and high-born ancestry.

Now for the nuptial song, the voice of
woe—

For gorgeous robes, this black and mournful garb—

Attends me to my halls, and to my couch,
Where solitary sorrow waits me now.

CHORUS. This sorrow came upon thee
'midst a state

Of happiness, a stranger thou to ills:

Yet is thy life preserved: thy wife is dead,
Leaving thy love; is there aught new in
this?

Many hath death reft of their wives before.

ADMETUS. My friends, I deem the fortune of my wife

Happier than mine, though otherwise it seems;

For never more shall sorrow touch her
breast,

And she with glory rests from various ills.
But I, who ought not live, my destined hour

O'erpassing, shall drag on a mournful life, Late taught what sorrow is. How shall
I bear

To enter here? To whom shall I address My speech? Whose greeting renders my return

Delightful? Which way shall I turn?
Within

In lonely sorrow shall I waste away.

As widowed of my wife I see my couch,
The seats deserted where she sate, the rooms

Wanting her elegance. Around my knees
My children hang, and weep their mother
lost:

These too lament their mistress now no
more.

This is the scene of misery in my house:
Abroad, the nuptials of Theasalia's youth
And the bright circles of assembled dames
Will but augment my grief: ne'er shall I bear

To see the loved companions of my wife.
And if one hates me, he will say, "Behold
The man, who basely lives, who dared not
die,

But, giving through the meanness of his soul

His wife, avoided death, yet would be deemed

A man: he hates his parents, yet himself
Had not the spirit to die." These ill reports
Cleave to me: why then wish for longer
life,
On evil tongues thus fallen, and evil days?

CHORUS

STROPHE 1

My venturous foot delights
To tread the Muses' arduous heights;
Their hallowed haunts I love t' explore,
And listen to their lore:
Yet never could my searching mind
Aught, like necessity, resistless find;
No herb of sovereign power to save,
Whose virtues Orpheus joyed to trace,
And wrote them in the rolls of Thrace;
Nor all that Phœbus gave,
Instructing the Asclepian train,
When various ills the human frame assail,
To heal the wound, to soothe the pain,
'Gainst her stern force avail.

ANTISTROPHE 1

Of all the powers divine
Alone none dares approach her shrine;
To her no hallowed image stands,
No altar she commands;
In vain the victim's blood would flow;
She never deigns to hear the suppliant vow.
Never to me mayst thou appear,
Dread goddess, with severer mien,
That oft in life's past tranquil scene
Thou hast been known to wear.
By thee Jove works his stern behest:
Thy force subdues e'en Scythia's stubborn
steel
Nor ever does thy rugged breast
The touch of pity feel.

STROPHE 2

And now, with ruin pleased,
On thee, O king, her hands have seized,
And bound thee in her iron chain:
Yet her fell force sustain.
For from the gloomy realms of night
No tears recall the dead to life's sweet
light;

No virtue, though to heaven allied,
Saves from th' inevitable doom:
Heroes and sons of gods have died,
And sunk into the tomb.
Dear, whilst our eyes her presence blest,
Dear, in the gloomy mansions of the dead;
Most generous she, the noblest, best
Who graced thy nuptial bed.

ANTISTROPHE 2

Thy wife's sepulchral mound
Deem not as common, worthless ground,
That swells their breathless bodies o'er
Who die, and are no morg.
No: be it honoured as a shrine
Raised high, and hallowed to some power
divine.
The traveller, as he passes by,
Shall thither bend his devious way,
With reverence gaze, and with a sigh
Smite on his breast, and say,
"She died of old to save her lord;
Now blest among the blest: Hail, power
revered;
To us thy wanted grace afford!"
Such vows shall be preferred.
But see, Admetus, to thy house, I ween,
Alcmene's son bends his returning steps.

[HERCULES, ADMETUS, CHORUS]

HERCULES. I would speak freely to my friend, Admetus,
Nor what I blame keep secret in my breast.
I came to thee amidst thy ills, and
thought
I had been worthy to be proved thy friend.
Thou toldst me not the obsequies prepared
Were for thy wife, but in thy house re-ceivdst me
As if thou grievdst for one of foreign birth.
I bound my head with garlands, to the gods
Pouring libations in thy house with grief Oppressed. I blame this: yes, in such a state
I blame this: yet I come not in thine ills
To give thee pain; why I return in brief
Will I unfold. This woman from my hands
Receive to thy protection, till returned

I bring the Thracian steeds, having there slain

The proud Bistonian tyrant; should I fail,
Be that mischance not mine, for much I wish

Safe to revisit thee, yet should I fail,
I give her to the safeguard of thy house.
For with much toil she came into my hands.

To such as dare contend some public games,

Which well deserved my toil, I find proposed,

I bring her thence, she is the prize of conquest;

For slight assays each victor led away
A courser; but for those of harder proof
The conqueror was rewarded from the herd,

And with some female graced: victorious there,

A prize so noble it were base to slight.
Take her to thy protection, not by stealth
Obtained, but the reward of many toils;
The time perchance may come when thou wilt thank me.

ADMETUS. Not that I slight thy friendship, or esteem thee

Other than noble, wished I to conceal
My wife's unhappy fate; but to my grief
It had been added grief, if thou hadst sought

Elsewhere the rites of hospitality;
Suffice it that I mourn ills which are mine.

This woman, if it may be, give in charge,
I beg thee, king, to some Thessalian else,
That hath not cause like me to grieve;
in Phææ

Thou mayst find many friends; call not my woes

Fresh to my memory; never in my house
Could I behold her but my tears would flow;

To sorrow add not sorrow; now enough
I sink beneath its weight Where should her youth

With me be guarded? for her gorgeous vests

Proclaim her young; if mixing with the men

She dwell beneath my roof, how shall her fame,

Conversing with the youths, be kept unsullied?

It is not easy to restrain the warmth
Of that intemperate age; my care for thee

Warns me of this. Or if from them removed

I hide her in th' apartments late my wife's,

How to my bed admit her? I should fear
A double blame; my citizens would scorn me

As light, and faithless to the kindest wife
That died for me, if to her bed I took Another blooming bride; and to the dead

Behoves me pay the highest reverence
Due to her merit. And thou, lady, know, Who'er thou art, that form, that shape,
that air

Resembles my Alcestis. By the gods,
Remove her from my sight. It is too much,

I cannot bear it: when I look on her,
Methinks I see my wife; this wounds my heart,

And calls the tears fresh gushing from my eyes.

This is the bitterness of grief indeed.

CHORUS. I cannot praise thy fortune;
but behoves thee

To bear with firmness what the gods assign.

HERCULES. O that from Jove I had the power to bring Back from the mansions of the dead thy wife

To heaven's fair light, that grace achieving for thee!

ADMETUS. I know thy friendly will.
But how can this

Be done? The dead return not to this light.

HERCULES. Check then thy swelling griefs; with reason rule them.

ADMETUS. How easy to advise, but hard to bear!

HERCULES. What would it profit shouldst thou always groan?

ADMETUS. I know it; but I am in love with grief.

HERCULES. Love to the dead calls forth the ceaseless tear.

ADMETUS. O, I am wretched more than words can speak.

HERCULES. A good wife hast thou lost, who can gainsay it?

ADMETUS. Never can life be pleasant to me more.

HERCULES. Thy sorrow now is new, time will abate it.

ADMETUS. Time, sayst thou? Yes, the time that brings me death.

HERCULES. Some young and lovely bride will bid it cease.

ADMETUS. No more: what sayst thou? Never could I think—

HERCULES. Wilt thou still lead a lonely, widowed life?

ADMETUS. Never shall other woman share my bed.

HERCULES. And think'st thou this will aught avail the dead?

ADMETUS. This honour is her due, where'er she be.

HERCULES. This hath my praise, though near allied to frenzy.

ADMETUS. Praise me, or not, I ne'er will wed again.

HERCULES. I praise thee that thou'rt faithful to thy wife.

ADMETUS. Though dead, if I betray her may I die!

HERCULES. Well, take this noble lady to thy house.

ADMETUS. No, by thy father Jove let me entreat thee.

HERCULES. Not to do this would be the greatest wrong.

ADMETUS. To do it would with anguish rend my heart.

HERCULES. Let me prevail; tuis grace may find its meed.

ADMETUS. O that thou never hadst received this prize!

HERCULES. Yet in my victory thou art victor with me.

ADMETUS. 'Tis nobly said: yet let this woman go.

HERCULES. If she must go, she shall: but must she go?

ADMETUS. She must, if I incur not thy displeasure.

HERCULES. There is a cause that prompts my earnestness.

ADMETUS. Thou hast prevailed, but much against my will.

HERCULES. The time will come when thou wilt thank me for it.

ADMETUS. Well, if I must receive her, lead her in.

HERCULES. Charge servants with her! No, that must not be.

ADMETUS. Lead her thyself then, if thy will incline thee.

HERCULES. No, to thy hand alone will I commit her.

ADMETUS. I touch her not; but she hath leave to enter.

HERCULES. I shall entrust her only to thy hand.

ADMETUS. Thou dost constrain me, king, against my will.

HERCULES. Venture to stretch thy hand, and touch the stranger's.

ADMETUS. I touch her, as I would the headless Gorgon.

HERCULES. Hast thou her hand?

ADMETUS. I have.

HERCULES. Then hold her safe.

Hereafter thou wilt say the son of Jove Hath been a generous guest: view now her face,

See if she bears resemblance to thy wife, And thus made happy bid farewell to grief.

ADMETUS. O gods, what shall I say? 'Tis marvellous,

Exceeding hope. See I my wife indeed? Or doth some god distract me with false joy?

HERCULES. In very deed dost thou behold thy wife.

ADMETUS. See that it be no phantom from beneath.

HERCULES. Make not thy friend one that evokes the shades.

ADMETUS. And do I see my wife, whom I entombed?

HERCULES. I marvel not that thou art diffident.

ADMETUS. I touch her; may I speak to her as living? HERCULES. Speak to her; thou hast all thy heart could wish. ADMETUS. Dearest of women, do see I again That face, that person? This exceeds all hope: I never thought that I should see thee more. HERCULES. Thou hast her; may no god be envious to thee. ADMETUS. O, be thou blest, thou gen- erous son of Jove! Thy father's might protect thee! Thou alone Hast raised her to me; from the realms below How hast thou brought her to the light of life? HERCULES. I fought with him that lords it o'er the shades. ADMETUS. Where with the gloomy tyrant didst thou fight? HERCULES. I lay in wait, and seized him at the tomb. ADMETUS. But wherefore doth my wife thus speechless stand? HERCULES. It is not yet permitted that thou hear Her voice addressing thee, till from the gods	That rule beneath she be unsanctified With hallowed rites, and the third morn return. But lead her in: and as thou'rt just in all Besides, Admetus, see thou reverence strangers. Farewell: I go t' achieve the destined toil For the imperial son of Sthenelus. ADMETUS. Abide with us, and share my friendly hearth. HERCULES. That time will come again; this demands speed. ADMETUS. Success attend thee; safe mayst thou return. Now to my citizens I give in charge, And to each chief, that for this blest event They institute the dance, let the steer bleed, And the rich altars, as they pay their vows, Breathe incense to the gods; for now I rise To better life, and grateful own the bless- ing. CHORUS. With various hand the gods dispense our fates: Now showering various blessings, which our hopes Dared not aspire to; now controlling ills We deemed inevitable; thus the god To these hath given an end exceeding thought. Such is the fortune of this happy day.

SCENE—Athens.

[STREPSIADES is discovered in his chamber, PHEIDIPIDES sleeping in his bed. Time, before break of day.]

STREPSIADES [stretching and yawning].

Ah me, ah me! will this night never end?

Oh kingly Jove, shall there be no more day?

And yet the cock sung out long time ago; I heard him—but my people lie and snore; Snore in defiance, for the rascals know It is their privilege in time of war,

Which with its other plagues brings this upon us,
That we mayn't rouse these vermin with a cudgel.

There's my young hopeful too, he sleeps it through,

Snug under five fat blankets at the least. Would I could sleep so sound! but my poor eyes

Have no sleep in them; what with debts and duns

And stable-keepers' bills, which this fine spark

Heaps on my back, I lie awake the whilst:
And what cares he but to coil up his locks,
Ride, drive his horses, dream of them all
night,

Whilst I, poor devil, may go hang—for
now

The moon in her last quarter wains apace,
And my usurious creditors are gaping.

What ho! a light! bring me my tablets,
boy!

That I may set down all, and sum them
up,

Debts, creditors, and interest upon interest— [Boy enters with a light and tablets.]

Let me see where I am and what the total—

Twelve pounds to Pasiás—Hah! to Pasiás twelve!

Out on it, and for what? A horse forsooth,

Right noble by the mark—Curse on such marks!

Would I had giv'n this eye from out this
head,

Ere I had paid the purchase of this jennet!

PHÉIDIPIDES. Shame on you, Philo!—
Keep within your ring.

STREPSIADES. There 'tis! that's it! the bane of all my peace—

He's racing in his sleep.

PHÉIDIPIDES. A heat—a heat!

How many turns to a heat?

STREPSIADES. More than enough;

You've giv'n me turns in plenty—I am jaded.

But to my list—what name stands next to Pasiás?

Amyniás—three good pounds—still for the race—

A chariot mounted on its wheels complete.

PHÉIDIPIDES. Dismount! unharness and away!

STREPSIADES. I thank you;

You have unharness'd me: I am dismounted,

And with a vengeance—All my goods in pawn,

Fines, forfeiture, and penalties in plenty.

PHÉIDIPIDES [wakes]. My father! why so restless? who has vex'd you?

STREPSIADES. The sheriff vexes me; he breaks my rest.

PHÉIDIPIDES. Peace, self-tormentor,
let me sleep!

STREPSIADES. Sleep on!

But take this with you; all these debts of mine

Will double on your head: a plague confound

That cursed match-maker, who drew me in
To wed, forsooth, that precious dam of thine.

I liv'd at ease in the country, coarsely clad,

Rough, free, and full withal as oil and honey

And store of stock could fill me, till I took, Clown as I was, this limb of the Alc-
mæons,

This vain, extravagant, high-blooded dame:

Rare bed-fellows and dainty—were we
not?

I, smelling of the wine-vat, figs and fleeces,
The produce of my farm, all essence she,
Saffron and harlot's kisses, paint and washes,

A pamper'd wanton—idle I'll not call
her;

She took due pains in faith to work my ruin,

Which made me tell her, pointing to this cloak,

Now threadbare on my shoulders—see,
goodwife,

This is your work—in troth you toil too hard. [Boy reënters.]

Boy. Master, the lamp has drunk up all its oil.

STREPSIADES. Aye, 'tis a drunken lamp;
the more fault yours;

Whelp, you shall howl for this.

Boy. Why? for what fault?

STREPSIADES. For cramming such a greedy wick with oil. [Exit boy.]

Well! in good time this hopeful heir was born;

Then I and my beloved fell to wrangling
About the naming of the brat.—My wife

Would dub her colt Xanthippus or Charippus,
 Or it might be Callipides, she car'd not
 So 'twere equestrian the name—but I Stuck for his grandfather Pheidonides;
 At last when neither could prevail, the matter
 Was compromis'd by calling him Pheidippides:
 Then she began to fondle her sweet babe,
 And taking him by th' hand—Lambkin,
 she cried,
 When thou art some years older thou shalt drive,
 Megacles-like, thy chariot to the city,
 Rob'd in a saffron mantle.—No, quoth I,
 Not so, my boy, but thou shalt drive thy goats,
 When thou art able, from the fields of Phelle,
 Clad in a woollen jacket like thy father:
 But he is deaf to all these frugal rules,
 And drives me on the gallop to my ruin;
 Therefore all night I call my thoughts to council,
 And after long debate find one chance
 left,
 To which if I can lead him, all is safe,
 If not—but soft: 'tis time that I should wake him.
 But how to soothe him to the task—
 [speaking in a soft gentle tone.]
 Pheidippides!
 Precious Pheidippides!
 PHEIDIPPIDES. What now, my father?
 STREPSIADES. Kiss me, my boy! reach me thine hand—
 PHEIDIPPIDES. Declare,
 What would you?
 STREPSIADES. Dost thou love me,
 sirrah? speak!
 PHEIDIPPIDES. Aye, by equestrian Neptune!
 STREPSIADES [angrily]. Name not him,
 Name not that charioteer; he is my bane,
 The source of all my sorrow—but, my son,
 If thou dost love me, prove it by obedience.
 PHEIDIPPIDES. In what must I obey?
 STREPSIADES. Reform your habits;

Quit them at once, and what I shall prescribe
 That do!
 PHEIDIPPIDES. And what is it that you prescribe?
 STREPSIADES. But wilt thou do't?
 PHEIDIPPIDES. Yes, by Dionysus.
 STREPSIADES. 'Tis well: get up! come hither, boy! look out!
 Yon little wicket and the hut hard by—
 Dost see them?
 PHEIDIPPIDES. Clearly. What of that same hut?
 STREPSIADES. Why that's the council-chamber of all wisdom:
 There the choice spirits dwell, who teach the world
 That heav'n's great concave is one mighty oven,
 And men its burning embers; these are
 they,
 Who can show pleaders how to twist a
 cause,
 So you'll but pay them for it, right or wrong.
 PHEIDIPPIDES. And how do you call
 them?
 STREPSIADES. Troth, I know not that,
 But they are men, who take a world of
 pains;
 Wondrous good men and able.
 PHEIDIPPIDES. Out upon 'em!
 Poor rogues, I know them now; you mean those scabs,
 Those squalid, barefoot, beggarly impos-
 tors,
 The mighty cacodæmons of whose sect
 Are Socrates and Chærephon. Away!
 STREPSIADES. Hush, hush! be still;
 don't vent such foolish prattle;
 But if you'll take my counsel, join their college
 And quit your riding-school.
 PHEIDIPPIDES. Not I, so help me
 Dionysus our patron! though you brib'd
 me
 With all the racers that Leogaras
 Breeds from his Phasian stud.
 STREPSIADES. Dear, darling lad,
 Prythee be rul'd, and learn.
 PHEIDIPPIDES. What shall I learn?

STREPSIADES. They have a choice of logic; this for justice, That for injustice: learn that latter art, And all these creditors, that now beset me, Shall never touch a drachma that I owe them.

PHEIDIPIDES. I'll learn of no such masters, nor be made A scare-crow and a may-game to my comrades;

I have no zeal for starving.

STREPSIADES. No, nor I For feasting you and your fine pamper'd cattle

At free cost any longer.—Horse and foot To the crows I bequeath you. So begone!

PHEIDIPIDES. Well, sir, I have an uncle rich and noble; Megacles will not let me be unhors'd; To him I go; I'll trouble you no longer.

[Erit.]
STREPSIADES [alone]. He has thrown me to the ground, but I'll not lie there;

I'll up, and, with permission of the gods,

Try if I cannot learn these arts myself: But being old, sluggish, and dull of wit, How am I sure these subtleties won't pose me?

Well! I'll attempt it: what avails complaint?

Why don't I knock and enter?—Hoa! within there!—

[Knocks violently at the door.]

DISCIPLE [half opening the door]. Go. hang yourself! and give the crows a dinner—

What noisy fellow art thou at the door?

STREPSIADES. Strepsiades of Cicyнна, son of Pheidon.

DISCIPLE. Whoe'er thou art, 'fore Heaven, thou art a fool Not to respect these doors; battering so loud,

And kicking with such vengeance, you have marr'd

The ripe conception of my pregnant brain, And brought on a miscarriage.

STREPSIADES. Oh! the pity!— Pardon my ignorance: I'm country bred

And far a-field am come: I pray you tell me

What curious thought my luckless din has strangled,

Just as your brain was hatching.

DISCIPLE. These are things We never speak of but amongst ourselves.

STREPSIADES. Speak boldly then to me, for I am come

To be amongst you, and partake the secrets

Of your profound academy.

DISCIPLE. Enough!

I will impart, but set it down in thought Amongst our mysteries.—This is the question,

As it was put but now to Chærephon, By our great master Socrates, to answer— How many of his own lengths at one spring

A flea can hop—for we did see one vault From Chærephon's black eye-brow to the head

Of the philosopher.

STREPSIADES. And how did t'other contrive to measure this?

DISCIPLE. Most accurately: He dipt the insect's feet in melted wax, Which, hard'ning into sandals as it cool'd,

Gave him the space by rule infallible.

STREPSIADES. Imperial Jove! what subtilty of thought!

DISCIPLE. But there's a deeper question yet behind;

What would you say to that?

STREPSIADES. I pray, impart it.

DISCIPLE. 'Twas put to Socrates, if he could say,

When a gnat humm'd, whether the sound did issue

From mouth or tail.

STREPSIADES. Aye; marry, what said he?

DISCIPLE. He said your gnat doth blow his trumpet backwards

From a sonorous cavity within him, Which being filled with breath, and forc'd along

The narrow pipe or rectum of his body, Doth vent itself in a loud hum behind.

STREPSIADES. Hah! then I see the podox of your gnat
Is trumpet-fashion'd—Oh! the blessings on him

For this discovery; well may he escape
The law's strict scrutiny, who thus develops

The anatomy of a gnat.

DISCIPLE. Nor is this all;
Another grand experiment was blasted
By a curst cat.

STREPSIADES. As how, good sir; discuss?

DISCIPLE. One night as he was gazing
at the moon,
Curious and all intent upon her motions,
A cat on the house ridge was at her needs,
And squirted in his face.

STREPSIADES. Beahrew her for it!
Yet I must laugh no less to think a cat
Should so bespatter Socrates.

DISCIPLE. Last night
We were bilk'd of our supper.

STREPSIADES. Were you so?
What did your master substitute instead?

DISCIPLE. Why to say truth, he sprinkled a few ashes

Upon the board, then with a little broach, Crook'd for the nonce, pretending to describe

A circle, neatly filch'd away a cloak.

STREPSIADES. Why talk we then of Thales? Open to me,
Open the school, and let me see your
master:

I am on fire to enter—Come, unbar!

[The door of the school is un-barred. The Socratic scholars are seen in various grotesque situations and positions. STREPSIADES, with signs of astonishment, draws back a pace or two, then exclaims:]

O Hercules, defend me! who are these?

What kind of cattle have we here in view?

DISCIPLE. Where is the wonder? What do they resemble?

STREPSIADES. Methinks they're like our Spartan prisoners, Captur'd at Pylos. What are they in search of?

Why are their eyes so riveted to th' earth?

DISCIPLE. There their researches centre.

STREPSIADES. 'Tis for onions

They are in quest—Come, lads, give o'er your search;

I'll show you what you want, a noble plat,
All round and sound—but soft! what mean those gentry,

Who dip their heads so low?

DISCIPLE. Marry, because

Their studies lead that way: They are now diving

To the dark realms of Tartarus and Night.

STREPSIADES. But why are all their cruppers mounted up?

DISCIPLE. To practise them in stargazing, and teach them

Their proper elevations—but no more:

In, fellow-students, in: if chance the master come

And find us here—

[Addressing himself to some of his fellow students, who were crowding about the new-comer.]

STREPSIADES. Nay, prythee let 'em stay,
And be of council with me in my business.

DISCIPLE. Impossible; they cannot give the time.

STREPSIADES. Now for the love of Heav'n, what have we here?

Explain their uses to me. [Observing the apparatus.]

DISCIPLE. This machine

Is for astronomy—

STREPSIADES. And this?

DISCIPLE. For geometry.

STREPSIADES. As how?

DISCIPLE. For measuring the earth.

STREPSIADES. Indeed!

What, by the lot?

DISCIPLE. No, faith, sir, by the lump;
Ev'n the whole globe 'at once.

STREPSIADES. Well said, in troth.

A quaint device, and made for general use.

DISCIPLE. Look now, this line marks the circumference

Of the whole earth, d'ye see—This spot is Athens—

STREPSIADES. Athens! go to, I see no courts are sitting;

Therefore I can't believe you.

DISCIPLE. Nay, in truth,
This very tract is Attica.

STREPSIADES. And where,
Where is my own Cicynna?

DISCIPLE. Here it lies:
And here's Eubœa—Mark! how far it runs—

STREPSIADES. How far it runs! Yes,
Pericles has made it
Run far enough from us—Where's Lacedæmon?

DISCIPLE. Here; close to Athens.

STREPSIADES. Ah! how much too close—
Prythee, good friends, take that bad neighbour from us.

DISCIPLE. That's not for us to do.

STREPSIADES. The worse luck your's!
But look! [Casting up his eyes.] Who's this suspended in a basket?

[SOCRATES is discovered.]

DISCIPLE [with solemnity]. HIMSELF.
The HE.

STREPSIADES. The HE? What HE?

DISCIPLE. Why, Socrates.

STREPSIADES. Hah! Socrates!—[To the scholar.] Make up to him and roar, Bid him come down! roar lustily.

DISCIPLE. Not I:
Do it yourself; I've other things to mind.
[Exit.]

STREPSIADES. Ho! Socrates—What hoa, my little Socrates!

SOCRATES. Mortal, how now! Thou insect of a day,
What would'st thou?

STREPSIADES. I would know what thou art doing.

SOCRATES. I tread in air, contemplating the sun.

STREPSIADES. Ah! then I see you're basked so high,
That you look down upon the Gods—
Good hope,

You'll lower a peg on earth.

SOCRATES. Sublime in air, Sublime in thought I carry my mind
with me,

Its cogitations all assimilated
To the pure atmosphere, in which I float;

Lower me to earth, and my mind's subtle powers,

Seiz'd by contagious dullness, lose their spirit;

For the dry earth drinks up the generous sap,

The vegetating vigour of philosophy,
And leaves it a mere husk.

STREPSIADES. What do you say?
Philosophy has sapt your vigour? Fie upon it.

But come, my precious fellow, come down quickly,
And teach me those fine things I'm here in quest of.

SOCRATES. And what fine things are they?

STREPSIADES. A new receipt
For sending off my creditors, and foiling
them

By the art logical; for you shall know
By debts, pawns, pledges, usuries, executions,

I am rackt and rent in tatters.

SOCRATES. Why permit it?

What strange infatuation seiz'd your senses?

STREPSIADES. The horse-consumption, a devouring plague;

But so you'll enter me amongst your scholars,

And tutor me like them to bilk my creditors,

Name your own price, and by the Gods I swear

I'll pay you the last drachm.

SOCRATES. By what Gods?

Answer that first; for your Gods are not mine.

STREPSIADES. How swear you then?

As the Byzantians swear

By their base iron coin?

SOCRATES. Art thou ambitious
To be instructed in celestial matters,
And taught to know them clearly?

STREPSIADES. Aye, aye, in faith,

So they be to my purpose, and celestial.

SOCRATES. What, if I bring you to a conference

With my own proper Goddesses, the Clouds?

STREPSIADES. 'Tis what I wish devoutly.
 SOCRATES. Come, sit down;
 Repose yourself upon this couch.
 STREPSIADES. 'Tis done.
 SOCRATES. Now take this chaplet—wear it.
 STREPSIADES. Why this chaplet?
 Would'st make of me another Athamas,
 And sacrifice me to a cloud?
 SOCRATES. Fear nothing;
 It is a ceremony indispensable
 At our initiations.
 STREPSIADES. What to gain?
 SOCRATES. [Instead of the sacred meat, which was thrown on the sacrificed victim, a basket of stones is showered on the head of STREPSIADES.]
 'Twill sift your faculties as fine as powder, Bolt 'em like meal, grind 'em as light as
 dust;
 Only be patient.
 STREPSIADES. Truly, you'll go near To make your words good; an' you pound
 me thus,
 You'll make me very dust and nothing else.
 SOCRATES [assuming all the magical solemnity and tone of voice of an adept]. Keep silence, then, and listen to a prayer,
 Which fits the gravity of age to hear—
 Oh! Air, all powerful Air, which dost
 enfold
 This pendant globe, thou vault of flaming gold.
 Ye sacred Clouds, who bid the thunder
 roll,
 Shine forth, approach, and cheer your suppliant's soul!
 STREPSIADES. Hold, keep 'em off awhile, till I am ready.
 Ah! luckless me, wou'd I had brought my bonnet,
 And so escap'd a soaking.
 SOCRATES. Come, come away!
 Fly swift, ye Clouds, and give yourselves to view!
 Whether on high Olympus' sacred top
 Snow-crown'd ye sit, or in the azure vales
 Of your own father Ocean sporting weave
 Your misty dance, or dip your golden urns

In the seven mouths of Nile; whether ye
 dwell
 On Thracian Mimas, or Mæotis' lake, Hear me, yet hear, and thus invok'd approach!

[CHORUS OF CLOUDS. The scene is at the remotest part of the stage. Thunder is heard. A large and shapeless Cloud is seen floating in the air; from which the following song is heard.]

CHORUS OF CLOUDS. Ascend, ye watery
 Clouds, on high,
 Daughters of Ocean, climb the sky,
 And o'er the mountain's pine-capt brow
 Towering your fleecy mantle throw:
 Thence let us scan the wide-stretch'd scene,
 Groves, lawns, and rilling streams between,
 And stormy Neptune's vast expanse,
 And grasp all nature at a glance.
 Now the dark tempest flits away,
 And lo! the glittering orb of day
 Darts from his clear ethereal beam,
 Come let us snatch the joyous gleam.
 SOCRATES. Yes, ye Divinities, whom I adore,
 I hail you now propitious to my prayer.
 Didst thou not hear them speak in thunder to me?
 STREPSIADES [kneeling, and, with various acts of buffoonery, affecting terror and embarrassment.]
 And I too am your Cloudships' most obedient,
 And under sufferance trump against your thunder:—
 Nay [turning to SOCRATES], take it how you may, my frights and fears
 Have pinch'd and cholic'd my poor bowels
 so,
 That I can't choose but treat their holy nostrils
 With an unsavoury sacrifice,
 SOCRATES. Forbear
 These gross scurrilities, for low buffoons
 And mountebanks more fitting. Hush! be still,
 List to the chorus of their heavenly voices,
 For music is the language they delight in.

CHORUS OF CLOUDS [approaching nearer]. Ye Clouds replete with fruitful showers,

Here let us seek Minerva's towers,
The cradle of old Cecrops' race,
The world's chief ornament and grace;
Here mystic fanes and rites divine
And lamps in sacred splendour shine;
Here the Gods dwell in marble domes,
Feasted with costly hecatombs,
That round their votive statues blaze,
Whilst crowded temples ring with praise;
And pompous sacrifices here
Make holidays throughout the year,
And when gay spring-time comes again,
Bromius convokes his sportive train,
And pipe and song and choral dance
Hail the soft hours as they advance.

STREPSIADES. Now, in the name of Jove, I pray thee tell me
Who are these ranting dames, that talk in stilts?
Of the Amazonian cast no doubt.

SOCRATES. Not so,
No dames, but clouds celestial, friendly powers
To men of sluggish parts; from these we draw Sense, apprehension, volubility,
Wit to confute, and cunning to ensnare.

STREPSIADES. Aye, therefore 'twas that my heart leapt within me

For very sympathy when first I heard 'em:
Now I could prattle shrewdly of first causes,

And spin out metaphysic cobwebs finely,
And dogmatise most rarely, and dispute
And paradox it with the best of you:
So, come what may, I must and will behold 'em;

Show me their faces, I conjure you.

SOCRATES. Look,
Look towards Mount Parnes as I point—
There, there!

Now they descend the hill; I see them plainly,

As plain as can be.

STREPSIADES. Where, where? I prythee, show me.

SOCRATES. Here! a whole troop of them thro' woods and hollows,

A byway of their own.

STREPSIADES. What ails my eyes,
That I can't catch a glimpse of them?

SOCRATES. Behold!
Here at the very entrance—

STREPSIADES. Never trust me,
If yet I see them clearly.

SOCRATES. Then you must be Sand-blind or worse.

STREPSIADES. Nay, now by Father Jove,
I cannot choose but see them—precious creatures!

For in good faith here's plenty and to spare.

[CHORUS OF CLOUDS enter.]

SOCRATES. And didst thou doubt if they were goddesses?

STREPSIADES. Not I, so help me! only I'd a notion
That they were fog, and dew, and dusky vapour.

SOCRATES. For shame! Why, man, these are the nursing mothers
Of all our famous sophists, fortune-tellers, Quacks, med'cine-mongers, bards bombastical,

Chorus projectors, and star interpreters,
And wonder-making cheats—the gang of idlers,

Who pay them for their feeding with good store

Of flattery and mouth-worship.

STREPSIADES. Now I see
Whom we may thank for driving them along

At such a furious dithyrambic rate,
Sun-shadowing clouds of many-colour'd hues,

Air-rending tempests, hundred-headed Typhons;

Now rousing, rattling them about our ears,
Now gently wafting them adown the sky,
Moist, airy, bending, bursting into showers;

For all which fine descriptions these poor knaves

Dine daintily on scraps.

SOCRATES. And proper fare;
What better do they merit?

STREPSIADES. Under favour,

If these be clouds (d'you mark me?)
 very clouds,
 How came they metamorphos'd into
 women?

Clouds are not such as these.

SOCRATES. And what else are they?

STREPSIADES. Troth, I can't rightly tell,
 but I should guess

Something like flakes of wool, not women,
 sure;

And look! these dames have noses.

SOCRATES. Hark you, friend,

I'll put a question to you.

STREPSIADES. Out with it!

Be quick: let's have it.

SOCRATES. This it is, in short—

Hast thou ne'er seen a cloud, which thou could'st fancy

Shap'd like a centaur, leopard, wolf, or bull?

STREPSIADES. Yea, marry, have I, and what then?

SOCRATES. Why then

Clouds can assume what shapes they will,
 believe me;

For instance; should they spy some hairy clown

Rugged and rough, and like the unlick't cub

Of Xenophantes, straight they turn to centaurs,

And kick at him for vengeance.

STREPSIADES. Well done, Clouds!

But should they spy that peculating
 knave,

Simon, that public thief, how would they treat him?

SOCRATES. As wolves—in character most like his own.

STREPSIADES. Aye, there it is now;
 when they saw Cleonymus,

That dastard runaway, they turn'd to hinds

In honour of his cowardice.

SOCRATES. And now,

Having seen Cleisthenes, to mock his lewd-
 ness

They change themselves to women.

STREPSIADES. Welcome, ladies!

Imperial ladies, welcome! An' it please

Your Highnesses so far to grace a mortal,

Give me a touch of your celestial voices.

CHORUS. Hail, grandsire! who at this late hour of life

Would'st go to school for cunning; and all hail,

Thou prince pontifical of quirks and quib-
 bles,

Speak thy full mind, make known thy wants and wishes!

Thee and our worthy Prodicus excepted,

Not one of all your sophists have our ear:

Him for his wit and learning we esteem,

Thee for thy proud deportment and high looks,

In barefoot beggary strutting up and down,

Content to suffer mockery for our sake,

And carry a grave face whilst others laugh.

STREPSIADES. Oh! mother earth, was ever voice like this,

So reverend, so portentous, so divine!

SOCRATES. These are your only deities, all else

I flout at.

STREPSIADES. Hold! Olympian Jupiter—

Is he no god?

SOCRATES. What Jupiter? what god?

Prythee no more—away with him at once!

STREPSIADES. Say'st thou? who gives us rain? answer me that.

SOCRATES. These give us rain; as I will straight demonstrate:

Come on now—When did you e'er see it rain

Without a cloud? If Jupiter gives rain, Let him rain down his favours in the sunshine,

Nor ask the clouds to help him.

STREPSIADES. You have hit it,

'Tis so; heav'n help me! I did think till
 now,

When 'twas his godship's pleasure, he made water

Into a sieve and gave the earth a shower.

But, hark'ye me, who thunders? tell me
 that;

For then it is I tremble.

SOCRATES. These, these thunder,

When they are tumbled.

STREPSIADES. How, blasphemers, how?
 SOCRATES. When they are charg'd with vapours full to th' bursting,
 And bandied to and fro against each other,
 Then with the shock they burst and crack
 amain.

STREPSIADES. And who is he that jowls them thus together
 But Jove himself?

SOCRATES. Jove! 'tis not Jove that does
 it,
 But the ætherial vortex.

STREPSIADES. What is he?
 I never heard of him; is he not Jove?
 Or is Jove put aside, and Vortex crown'd
 King of Olympus in his state and place?
 But let me learn some more of this same
 thunder.

SOCRATES. Have you not learnt? I told you how the clouds,
 Being surcharg'd with vapour, rush together,
 And, in the conflict, shake the poles with thunder.

STREPSIADES. But who believes you?
 SOCRATES. You, as I shall prove it:
 Mark the Panatheneæ, where you cram
 Your belly full of pottage; if you shake
 And stir it lustily about—what then?

STREPSIADES. Marry, why then it gives a desperate crack;
 It bounces like a thunderbolt, the pottage
 Keeps such a coil within me—At the first,
Pappax it cries—anon with double force,
Pappax!—when at length Pappappax
 From forth my sounding entrails thund'ring bursta.

SOCRATES. Think then, if so your belly trumpets forth,
 How must the vasty vault of heaven re-
 sound,
 When the clouds crack with thunder!

STREPSIADES. Let that pass,
 And tell me of the lightning, whose quick flash
 Burns us to cinders; that, at least, great
 Jove

Keeps in reserve to launch at perjury?
 SOCRATES. Dunce, dotard! were you born before the flood
 To talk of perjury, whilst Simon breathes,

Theorus and Cleonymus, whilst they,
 Thrice-perjur'd villains, brave the light-
 ning's stroke,
 And gaze the heav'ns unscorcht? Would these escape?

Why, man, Jove's random fires strike his own fane,
 Strike Sunium's guiltless top, strike the dumb oak,
 Who never yet broke faith or falsely swore.

STREPSIADES. It may be so, good sooth!
 You talk this well:
 Rut I would fain be taught the natural cause
 Of these appearances.

SOCRATES. Mark when the winds,
 In their free courses check'd, are pent and purs'd
 As 'twere within a bladder, stretching
 then
 And struggling for expansion, they burst forth
 With crack so fierce as sets the air on fire.

STREPSIADES. The devil they do! why
 now the murder's out:
 So was I serv'd with a damn'd paunch, I broil'd
 On Jove's day last, just such a scurvy
 trick;
 Because, forsooth, not dreaming of your
 thunder,

I never thought to give the rascal vent,
 Bounce! goes the bag, and covers me all over
 With filth and ordure till my eyes struck
 fire.

CHORUS. The envy of all Athens shalt thou be,
 Happy old man, who from our lips dost suck
 Into thy ears true wisdom, so thou art
 But wise to learn, and studious to retain What thou hast learnt; patient to bear the blows
 And buffets of hard fortune; to persist,
 Doing or suffering; firmly to abide Hunger and cold, not craving where to dine,
 To drink, to sport and trifle time away;

But holding that for best, which best becomes

A man who means to carry all things through

Neatly, expertly, perfect at all points

With head, hands, tongue, to force his way to fortune.

STREPSIADES. Be confident; I give myself for one

Of a tough heart, watchful as care can make me,

A frugal, pinching fellow, that can sup Upon a sprig of savory and to bed;

I am your man for this, hard as an anvil.

SOCRATES. 'Tis well, so you will ratify your faith

In these our deities—CHAOS and CLOUDS And SPELCH—to these and only these adhere.

STREPSIADES. If from this hour henceforth I ever waste

A single thought on any other gods, Or give them sacrifice, libation, incense, Nay, even common courtesy, renounce me.

CHORUS. Speak your wish boldly then, so shall you prosper

As you obey and worship us, and study The wholesome art of thriving.

STREPSIADES. Gracious ladies, I ask no mighty favour, simply this— Let me but distance every tongue in Greece,

And run 'em out of sight a hundred lengths.

CHORUS. Is that all? There we are your friends to serve you;

We will endow thee with such powers of speech,

As henceforth not a demagogue in Athens Shall spout such popular harangues as thou shalt.

STREPSIADES. A fig for powers of spouting! give me powers Of nonsuited my creditors.

CHORUS. A trifle— Granted as soon as ask'd; only be bold, And show yourself obedient to your teachers.

STREPSIADES. With your help so I will, being undone,

Strip of my pelf by these high-blooded cattle,

And a fine dame, the torment of my life. Now let them work their wicked will upon me;

They're welcome to my carcass; let 'em claw it,

Starve it with thirst and hunger, fry it, freeze it,

Nay, flay the very skin off; 'tis their own;

So that I may but fob my creditors, Let the world talk; I care not though it call me

A bold-faced, loud-tongued, overbearing bully;

A shameless, vile, prevaricating cheat;

A tricking, quibbling, double-dealing knave;

A prating, pettyfogging limb o' th' law;

A sly old fox, a perjurer, a hang-dog,

A raggamuffin made of shreds and patches, The leavings of a dunghill—Let 'em rail,

Yea, marry, let 'em turn my guts to fiddle-strings,

May my bread be my poison! if I care.

CHORUS. This fellow hath a prompt and daring spirit—

Come hither, sir; do you perceive and feel

What great and glorious fame you shall acquire

By this our schooling of you?

STREPSIADES. What, I pray you!

CHORUS. What but to live the envy of mankind

Under our patronage?

STREPSIADES. When shall I see

Those halcyon days?

CHORUS. Then shall your doors be throng'd

With clients waiting for your coming forth,

All eager to consult you, pressing all

To catch a word from you, with abstracts, briefs,

And cases ready-drawn for your opinion. But come, begin and lecture this old fellow;

Sift him, that we may see what meal he's made of.

SOCRATES. Hark ye, let's hear what principles you hold,
That these being known, I may apply such tools

As tally with your stuff.

STREPSIADES. Tools! by the gods;
Are you about to spring a mine upon me?

SOCRATES. Not so, but simply in the way of practice

To try your memory.

STREPSIADES. Oh! as for that,
My memory is of two sorts, long and short:

With them who owe me aught, it never fails;

My creditors indeed complain of it,
As mainly apt to leak and lose its reck'ning.

SOCRATES. But let us hear if nature hath endow'd you

With any grace of speaking.

STREPSIADES. None of speaking
But a most apt propensity to cheating.

SOCRATES. If this be all, how can you hope to learn?

STREPSIADES. Fear me not, never break your head for that.

SOCRATES. Well then be quick, and when I speak of things Mysterious and profound, see that you make

No boggling, but—

STREPSIADES. I understand your meaning;

You'd have me bolt philosophy by mouthfuls,

Just like a hungry cur.

SOCRATES. Oh! brutal, gross
And barbarous ignorance! I must suspect,
Old as thou art, thou must be taught with stripes:

Tell me now, when thou art beaten, what dost feel?

STREPSIADES. The blows of him that beats me I do feel;

But having breath'd awhile I lay my action

And cite my witnesses; anon more cool,
I bring my cause into the court, and sue
For damages.

SOCRATES. Strip off your cloak! prepare.

STREPSIADES. Prepare for what? what crime have I committed?

SOCRATES. None; but the rule and custom is with us,

That all shall enter naked.

STREPSIADES. And why naked?
I come with no search-warrant; fear me not;

I'll carry nought away with me.

SOCRATES. No matter;
Conform yourself, and strip.

STREPSIADES. And if I do,
Tell me for my encouragement to which
Of all your scholars will you liken me.

SOCRATES. You shall be call'd a second Chærephon.

STREPSIADES. Ah! Chærephon is but another name

For a dead corpse—excuse me.

SOCRATES. No more words:
Pluck up your courage; answer not, but follow:

Haste and be perfected.

STREPSIADES. Give me my dole
Of honey-cake in hand, and pass me on;
Ne'er trust me if I do not quake and tremble

As if the cavern of Trophonius yawn'd,
And I were stepping in.

SOCRATES. What ails you? enter!
Why do you halt and loiter at the door?
[SOCRATES and STREPSIADES enter the mansion of the former.]

CHORUS. Go, brave adventurer, proceed!

May fortune crown the gallant deed;
Tho' far advanc'd in life's last stage,
Spurning the infirmities of age,
Thou canst to youthful labours rise,
And boldly struggle to be wise.

Ye, who are here spectators of our scene,
Give me your patience to a few plain words,

And by my patron Bacchus, whose I am,
I swear they shall be true ones.—Gentle friends,

So may I prosper in your fair esteem,
As I declare in truth that I was mov'd

To tender you my former comedy,
 As deeming it the best of all my works,
 And you its judges worthy of that work,
 Which I had wrought with my best care
 and pains:
 But fools were found to thrust me from the stage,
 And you, whose better wisdom should have sav'd me
 From that most vile cabal, permitted it;
 For which I needs must chide, yet not so sharply
 As to break off from such approv'd good friends:
 No, you have been my patrons from all
 time,
 Ev'n to my first-born issue: when I dropt
 My bantling at your door to hide the
 shame
 Of one, who call'd herself a maiden rause,
 You charitably took the foundling in,
 And gave it worthy training. Now, behold,
 This sister comedy, Electra-like,
 Comes on the search if she perchance may find
 Some recognition of a brother lost,
 Though but a relic of his well-known hair.
 Seemly and modest she appears before
 you;
 Not like our stage buffoons in shaggy hide
 To set a mob a roaring; she will vent
 No foolish jests at baldness, will not dance
 Th' indecent cordax; we have no old
 man
 Arm'd with a staff to practise manual jokes
 On the by-standers' ribs, and keep the ring
 For them who dance the chorus: you shall
 see
 No howling furies burst upon the stage
 Waving their torches; other weapons
 Than the muse gives us we shall not employ,
 Nor let ah me, ah me! sigh in your ears.
 Yet not of this I boast, nor that I scorn
 To cater for your palates out of scraps
 At second or third hand, but fresh and fair
 And still original, as one, who knows,

When he has done a good deed, where to stop;
 And, having levell'd Cleon to the ground,
 Not to insult his carcass, like to those
 Who, having once run down Hyperbolus, Poor devil! mouth and mangle without mercy
 Him and his mother too; foremost of these
 Was Eupolis, who pilfer'd from my muse,
 And pass'd it for his own with a new
 name,
 Guilty the more for having dash'd his theft
 With the obscene device of an old hag
 Dancing the drunken cordax in her cups,
 Like her Phrynichus feign'd to be devour'd
 By the sea-monster.—Shame upon such scenes!
 Hermippus next Hyperbolis'd amain,
 And now the whole pack open in full cry,
 Holding the game in chase, which I had rous'd.
 If there be any here, who laugh with these,
 Let such not smile with me; but if this
 night
 Ye crown these scenes with merited applause,
 Posterity shall justify your taste.
 SEMICHORUS. Great Jove, supreme of Gods, and heav'n's high king,
 First I invoke; next him the Trident's
 lord,
 Whose mighty stroke smites the wild waves asunder,
 And makes the firm earth tremble; thee from whom
 We draw our being, all-inspiring Air,
 Parent of nature; and thee, radiant Sun,
 Thron'd in thy flaming chariot, I invoke,
 Dear to the gods and by the world ador'd.
 CHORUS OF CLOUDS. Most grave and sapient judges, hear the charge,
 Which we shall now prefer, of slights ill
 brook'd
 By us your wrong'd appellants: for whilst we
 The patronesses of your state, the Clouds,
 Of all the powers celestial serve you most,

You graceless mortals serve us not at all;
Nor smoke, nor sacrifice ascends from
you,

But blank ingratitude and cold neglect.
If some rash enterprise you set on foot,
Some brainless project, straight with rain or thunder,

Sure warnings, we apprise you of your
folly:

When late you made that offspring of a tanner,

That Paphlagonian odious to the gods,
The general of your armies, mark how fierce

We scowl'd upon you, and indignant roll'd
Our thunders intermixt with flashing fires;

The Moon forsook her course, and the next Sun

Quench'd his bright torch, disdainingly to behold

Cleon your chief, yet chief that Cleon
was,

(For it should seem a proverb with your people,

That measures badly taken best succeed):
But if you'll learn of us the ready mode
To cancel your past errors, and ensure Fame and good-fortune for the public
weal,

You have nought else to do, but stop the swallow

Of that wide-gaping cormorant, that thief
Convicted and avow'd, with a neat noose Drawn tight and fitted to his scurvy throat.

SEMICHORUS. Thou too, Apollo, of thy native isle,

Upon the Cinthian mount high thron'd,
the king,

Hear and be present! thou, Ephesian goddess,

Whose golden shrine the Lydian damsels
serve

With rich and costly worship; thou,
Minerva,

Arm'd with the dreadful ægis, virgin
queen,

And patroness of Athens; thou, who hold'st

Divided empire on Parnassus' heights,

Lead hither thy gay train of revellers,
Convivial god, and thus invok'd approach!

CHORUS. As we were hither journeying, in midway

We crost upon the Moon, who for a while

Held us in converse, and with courteous greeting

To this assembly charg'd us.—This premis'd,

The tenor of our next instruction points
To anger and complaint for ill returns
On your part to good offices on hers.

First for the loan of her bright silver lamp

So long held out to you, by which you've sav'd

Your torch and lacquey for this many a
night.

More she could name, if benefits avail'd;
But you have lost all reck'ning of your feasts,

And turn'd your calendar quite topsy-
turvy;

So that the deities, who find themselves
Bilk'd of their dues, and supperless for lack

Of their accustom'd sacrifices, rail
At her, poor Moon, and vent their hungry spite,

As she were in the fault; whilst you, for-
sooth,

Maliciously select our gala days,
When feasting would be welcome, for your suits

And criminal indictments; but when we Keep fast and put on mourning for the loss

Of Memnon or Sarpedon, sons of Heaven,
Then, then you mock us with the savoury odour

Of smoking dainties, which we may not taste:

Therefore it is, that when this year ye
sent

Your deputy Amphictyon to the diet,
(Hyperbolus forsooth) in just revenge

We tore away his crown, and drove him
back

To warn you how you slight the Moon
again.

[SOCRATES (coming out of the house in violent indignation), STREPSIADES, CHORUS.]

SOCRATES. O vivifying breath, æthereal air,
And thou profoundest chaos, witness for me

If ever wretch were seen so gross and dull,
So stupid and perplexed as this old clown,
Whose shallow intellect can entertain
No image nor impression of a thought;
But ere you've told it, it is lost and gone!
'Tis time however he should now come forth

In the broad day—What ho! Strepsiades—

Take up your pallet; bring yourself and it
Into the light.

STREPSIADES. Yes, if the bugs would Jet me.

SOCRATES. Quick, quick. I say: set down your load and listen!

STREPSIADES. Lo! here am I.

SOCRATES. Come, tell me what it is.
That you would learn besides what I have taught you;

Is it of measure, verse, or modulation?

STREPSIADES. Of measure by all means,
for I was fobb'd

Of two days' dole i' th' measure of my meal

By a damn'd knavish huckster.

SOCRATES. Pish! who talks
Of meal? I ask which metre you prefer,
Tetrameter or trimeter.

STREPSIADES. I answer—
Give me a pint pot.

SOCRATES. Yes, but that's no answer.

STREPSIADES. No answer! stake your money, and I'll wager
That your tetrameter is half my pint pot.

SOCRATES. Go to the gallows, clodpate, with your pint pot!

Will nothing stick to you? But come, perhaps

We may try further and fare better with
you—

Suppose I spoke to you of modulation;
Will you be taught of that?

STREPSIADES. Tell me first,

Will I be profited? will I be paid
The meal that I was chous'd of? tell me
that.

SOCRATES. You will be profited by being taught

To bear your part at table in some sort
After a decent fashion; you will learn
Which verse is most commensurate and fit
To the arm'd chorus in the dance of war,
And which with most harmonious cadence
guides

The dactyl in his course poetical.

STREPSIADES. The dactyl, quotha! Sure
I know that well.

SOCRATES. As how? discuss.

STREPSIADES. Here, at my fingers' end;
This is my dactyl, and has been my dactyl
Since I could count my fingers.

SOCRATES. Oh! the dolt.

STREPSIADES. I wish to be no wiser in these matters.

SOCRATES. What then?

STREPSIADES. Why then, teach me no other art

But the fine art of cozening.

SOCRATES. Granted; still There is some previous matter, as for instance

The genders male and female.—Can you name them?

STREPSIADES. I were a fool else.—These are masculine:

Ram, bull, goat, dog, and pullet.

SOCRATES. There you're out:

Pullet is male and female.

STREPSIADES. Tell me how?

SOCRATES. Cock and hen pullet—so they should be nam'd.

STREPSIADES. And so they should, by the æthereal air!

You've hit it; for which rare discovery,
Take all the meal this cardopus contains.

SOCRATES. Why there again you sin against the genders.

To call your bolting-tub a cardopus, Making that masculine which should be fem'nine.

STREPSIADES. How do I make my bolting-tub a male?

SOCRATES. Did you not call it cardopus? As well

You might have call'd Cleonymus a man;
He and your bolting-tub alike belong
To t'other sex, believe me.

STREPSIADES. Well, my trough
Shall be a cardopa and he Cleonyma;
Will that content you?

SOCRATES. Yes, and while you live
Learn to distinguish sex in proper names.

STREPSIADES. I do; the female I am perfect in.

SOCRATES. Give me the proof.

STREPSIADES. Lysilla, she's a female;
Philinna, and Demetria, and Cleitagora.

SOCRATES. Now name your males.

STREPSIADES. A thousand—as for instance,

Philoxenus, Melesias, and Amynias.

SOCRATES. Call you these masculine, egregious dunce?

STREPSIADES. Are they not such with
you?

SOCRATES. No; put the case.

You and Amynias meet—how will you greet him?

STREPSIADES. Why, thus for instance—
Hip! holla! Amynia!

SOCRATES. There, there! you make a wench of him at once.

STREPSIADES. And fit it is for one who shuns the field;

A coward ought not to be call'd a man;

Why teach me what is known to all the world?

SOCRATES. Aye, why indeed?—but come, repose yourself.

STREPSIADES. Why so?

SOCRATES. For meditation's sake: lie down.

STREPSIADES. Not on this pallet I beseech you, sir;

But if I must lie down, let me repose
On the bare earth and meditate.

SOCRATES. Away!

There's nothing but this bed will cherish
thought.

STREPSIADES. It cherishes, alas! a host of bugs,

That show no mercy on me.

SOCRATES. Come, begin,
Cudgel your brains and turn yourself about;

Now ruminat awhile, and if you start
A thought that puzzles you, try t'other
side,

And turn to something else, but not to sleep;

Suffer not sleep to close your eyes one moment.

STREPSIADES [after a considerable pause]
Ah! woe is me; ah, woeful, well-a-day!

SOCRATES. What ails you? why this moaning?

STREPSIADES. I am lost;

I've rous'd the natives from their hiding holes;

A colony of bugs in ambushade

Have fall'n upon me: belly, back, and ribs,

No part is free: I feed a commonwealth.

SOCRATES. Take not your sufferings too much to heart.

STREPSIADES. How can I choose—a wretch made up of wants!

Here am I penniless and spiritless,

Without a skin, Heav'n knows, without a shoe;

And to complete my miseries here I lie,

Like a starv'd sentinel upon his post,

At watch and ward, till I am shrunk to
nothing.

[A pause of some duration.]

SOCRATES. How now; how fare you?

Have you sprung a thought?

STREPSIADES. Yes, yes, so help me Neptune!

SOCRATES. Hah! what is it?

STREPSIADES. Why I am thinking if these cursed vermin

Will leave one fragment of my carcass
free.

SOCRATES. A plague confound you!

STREPSIADES. Spare yourself that prayer;

I'm plagued already to your heart's content.

SOCRATES. Prythee don't be so tender of your skin;

Tuck yourself up and buff it like a man:
Keep your skull under cover, and depend

on't

'Twill make your brain bring forth some precious project

For furthering your good-fortune at the expense

Of little else but honesty and justice.

STREPSIADES. Ah! would to Heav'n some friendly soul would help me To a fine project how to cheat the bugs With a sleek lambskin. [A long pause.]

SOCRATES. Whereabouts, I trow, Sits the wind now? What ails you? are you dozing?

STREPSIADES. Not I, by Heaven!

SOCRATES. Can you start nothing yet?

STREPSIADES. Nothing, so help me.

SOCRATES. Will your head breed no project,

Tho' nurs'd so daintily?

STREPSIADES. What should it breed? Tell me, sweet Socrates; give me some hint.

SOCRATES. Say first what 'tis you wish.

STREPSIADES. A thousand times, Ten thousand times I've said it o'er and o'er—

My creditors, my creditors—'Tis them I would fain bilk.

SOCRATES. Go to! get under cover, Keep your head warm, and rarify your wits

Till they shall sprout into some fine conceit,

Some scheme of happy promise: sift it well,

Divide, abstract, compound, and when 'tis ready,

Out with it boldly.

STREPSIADES. Miserable me!

Would I were out!

SOCRATES. Lie still, and if you strike Upon a thought that baffles you, break off

From that entanglement and try another. So shall your wits be fresh to start again.

STREPSIADES [not attending to what Socrates is saying]. Hah! my dear boy! My precious Socrates!

SOCRATES. What would'st thou, gaffer?

STREPSIADES. I have sprung a thought, A plot upon my creditors.

SOCRATES. Discuss!

STREPSIADES. Answer me this—Suppose that I should hire

A witch, who some fair night shall raise a spell,

Whereby I'll snap the moon from out her sphere

And bag her.

SOCRATES. What to do!

STREPSIADES. To hold her fast, And never let her run her courses more; So shall I 'scape my creditors.

SOCRATES. How so?

STREPSIADES. Because the calculations of their usury Are made from month to month.

SOCRATES. A gallant scheme; And yet methinks I could suggest a hint As practicable and no less ingenious— Suppose you are arrested for a debt, We'll say five talents, how will you contrive

To cancel at a stroke both debt and writ?

STREPSIADES. Gramercy! I can't tell you how off hand;

It needs some cogitation.

SOCRATES. Were you apt, Such cogitations would not be to seek; They would be present at your fingers' ends,

Buzzing alive, like chafers in a string,

Ready to slip and fly.

STREPSIADES. I've hit the nail That does the deed, and so you will confess.

SOCRATES. Out with it!

STREPSIADES. Good chance but you have noted

A pretty toy, a trinket in the shops, Which being rightly held produceth fire From things combustible—

SOCRATES. A burning glass, Vulgarly call'd—

STREPSIADES. You are right; 'tis so.

SOCRATES. Proceed!

STREPSIADES. Put the case now your whoreson bailiff comes, Shows me his writ—I, standing thus, d'ye mark me,

In the sun's stream, measuring my distance, guide

My focus to a point upon his writ, And off it goes in fumo!

SOCRATES. By the Graces!

'Tis wittingly devis'd.

STREPSIADES. The very thought
Of his five talents cancel'd at a stroke
Makes my heart dance for joy.

SOCRATES. But now again—

STREPSIADES. What next?

SOCRATES. Suppose yourself at bar, surpris'd

Into a suit, no witnesses at hand,
The judge prepar'd to pass decree against
you—

How will you parry that?

STREPSIADES. As quick as thought—

SOCRATES. But how?

STREPSIADES. Incontinently hang myself,

And baulk the suitor—

SOCRATES. Come, you do but jest.

STREPSIADES. Serious, by all the gods!

A man that's dead

Is out of the law's reach.

SOCRATES. I've done with you—

Instruction's lost upon you; your vile jests

Put me beyond all patience.

STREPSIADES. Nay, but tell me

What is it, my good fellow, that offends
thee?

SOCRATES. Your execrable lack of memory.

Why how now; what was the first rule I taught you?

STREPSIADES. Say'st thou the first? the very first—what was it?

Why, let me see; 'twas something, was it
not?

About the meal—Out on it! I have lost
it.

SOCRATES. Oh thou incorrigible, old doating blockhead,

Can hanging be too bad for thee?

STREPSIADES. Why there now,

Was ever man so us'd? If I can't make

My tongue keep pace with yours, teach it the quirks

And quibbles of your sophistry at once,

I may go hang—I am a fool forsooth—

Where shall I turn? Oh gracious Clouds, befriend me,

Give me your counsel.

CHORUS. This it is, old man—

If that your son at home is apt and docile, Depute him in your stead, and send him
hither.

STREPSIADES. My son is well endow'd with nature's gifts,

But obstinately bent against instruction.

CHORUS. And do you suffer it?

STREPSIADES. What can I do?

He's a fine full-grown youth, a dashing fellow,

And by the mother's side of noble blood:
I'll feel my way with him—but if he kicks,
Befall what may, nothing shall hinder me
But I will kick him headlong out of doors,
And let him graze ev'n where he will for
me—

Wait only my return; I'll soon dispatch.

[Exit.]

CHORUS. "Highly favour'd shalt thou
be,

With gifts and graces kept in store
For those who our divinities adore,
And to no other altars bend the knee:
And well we know th' obedience shown
By this old clown deriv'd alone
From lessons taught by thee.
Wherefore to swell thy lawful gains,
Thou soon shalt skin this silly cur,
Whom thou hast put in such a stir,
And take his plunder for thy pains:
For mark how often dupes like him devise Projects that only serve t' enrich the wise."

[STREPSIADES (coming out of his house to his Son, who stands at the door),
PHEIDIPPIDES.]

STREPSIADES. Out of my house! I call the Clouds to witness

You shall not set a foot within my doors.
Go to your Lord Megacles! Get you
hence,

And gnaw his posts for hunger.

PHEIDIPPIDES. Ah, poor man!

I see how it is with you. You are mad,

Stark mad, by Jupiter!

STREPSIADES. You swear by Jupiter!

Why then, I swear by Jove there's no such
god—

Now who is mad but you?

PHEIDIPPIDES. Why do you turn

Such solemn truths to ridicule?

STREPSIADES. I laugh

To hear a child prate of such old men's fables;

But list to what I'll tell you, learn of me,

And from a child you shall become a man—

But keep the secret close, do you mark me, close;

Beware of babbling.

PHEIDIPPIDES. Heydey! what is coming?

STREPSIADES. You swore but now by Jupiter—

PHEIDIPPIDES. I did.

STREPSIADES. Mark now what 'tis to have a friend like me—

I tell you at a word there is no Jupiter.

PHEIDIPPIDES. How then?

STREPSIADES. He's off; I tell it you for truth,

He's out of place, and Vortex reigns instead.

PHEIDIPPIDES. Vortex indeed! What freak has caught you now?

STREPSIADES. No freak, 'tis fact.

PHEIDIPPIDES. Who tells you this?

STREPSIADES. E'en Socrates the Melian, And Chærephon, the flea philosopher.

PHEIDIPPIDES. And are you so far gone in dotage, sir,

As to be dup'd by men like them, fellows Whose bile has overflowed them?

STREPSIADES. Keep a good tongue;

Take heed you slander not such worthy men,

So wise withal and learned—men so pure And cleanly in their morals, that no razor Ever profan'd their beards; their un-wash'd hides

Ne'er dabbled in a bath, nor wafted scent Of od'rous unguent as they pass'd along. But you, a prodigal fine spark, make waste And havoc of my means, as I were dead And out of thought—but come, turn in and learn.

PHEIDIPPIDES. What can I learn or profit from such teachers?

STREPSIADES. Thou canst learn everything that turns to profit;

But first and foremost thou canst learn to know

Thyself how totally unlearn'd thou art;

How mere a blockhead, and how dull of brain—

But wait awhile with patience—

[Enters the house hastily.]

PHEIDIPPIDES. Woe is me!

How shall I deal with this old crazy father?

What course pursue with one, whose reason wanders

Out of all course? Shall I take out the statute,

And cite him for a lunatic; or wait

Till nature and his phrenzy, with the help Of the undertaker, shall provide a cure?

[STREPSIADES returns, with a cock in one hand and a hen in the other.]

STREPSIADES. Now we shall see! Lo! what have I got here?

PHEIDIPPIDES. A chicken—

STREPSIADES. Well and this?

PHEIDIPPIDES. A chicken also.

STREPSIADES. Are they the same then? Have a care, good boy,

How you expose yourself, and for the future

Describe them cock and hen-chick severally.

PHEIDIPPIDES. Ridiculous! Is this the grand discovery

You have just borrow'd from these sons o' th' dunghill?

STREPSIADES. This, and a thousand others—but being old

And lax of memory, I lose it all

As fast as it comes in.

PHEIDIPPIDES. Yes, and methinks By the same token you have lost your cloak.

STREPSIADES. No, I've not lost it; I have laid it out

Upon the arts and sciences.

PHEIDIPPIDES. Your shoes—

They're vanish'd too. How have you laid them out?

STREPSIADES. Upon the commonwealth. —Like Pericles

I'm a barefooted patriot.—Now no more;

Do as thou wilt, so thou wilt but conform
And humour me this once, as in times past
I humour'd thee, and in thy playful age Brought thee a penny go-cart from the
fair,

Purchas'd with what my legal labours
earn'd,

The fee for my attendance.

[Going towards the house of SOCRATES.]

PHEIDIPPIDES. You'll repent,
My life upon 't; you will repent of this.

[Following reluctantly.]

STREPSIADES. No matter, so you'll humour me—What, ho!

Why Socrates, I say, come forth, behold,
Here is my son!

I've brought him, tho' in faith
Sorely against the grain.

[SOCRATES enters.]

SOCRATES. Aye, he's a novice,
And knows not where the panniers hang as yet.

PHEIDIPPIDES. I would you'd hang yourself there in their stead.

STREPSIADES. Oh monstrous impudence!
this to your master!

SOCRATES. Mark how the idiot quibbles upon hanging.

Driv'ling and making mouths—Can he be taught

The loopholes of the law; whence to escape,

How to evade, and when to press a suit;—
Or tune his lips to that soft rhetoric,
Which steals upon the ear, and melts to pity

The heart of the stern judge?

STREPSIADES. Come, never doubt him;
He is a lad of parts, and from a child
Took wondrously to dabbling in the mud, Whereof he'd build you up a house so natural

As would amaze you, trace you out a ship,
Make you a little cart out of the sole
Of an old shoe mayhap, and from the rind
Of a pomegranate cut you out a frog, You'd swear it was alive. Now what do you think?

Hath he not wit enough to comprehend
Each rule both right and wrong? Or if not both,

The latter way at least—There he'll be perfect.

SOCRATES. Let him prepare: His lecturers are ready.

STREPSIADES. I will retire—When next we meet, remember

I look to find him able to contend
'Gainst right and reason, and outwit them both. [Exit.]

[DICÆOLOGOS and ADICÆOLOGOS enter.]

DICÆOLOGOS. Come forth; turn out, thou bold audacious man,

And face this company.

ADICÆOLOGOS. Most willingly:

I do desire no better: take your ground
Before this audience, I am sure to triumph.

DICÆOLOGOS. And who are you that vapour in this fashion?

ADICÆOLOGOS. Fashion itself—the very style of the times.

DICÆOLOGOS. Aye, of the modern times, and them and you I set at naught.

ADICÆOLOGOS. I shall bring down your pride.

DICÆOLOGOS. By what most witty weapon?

ADICÆOLOGOS. By the gift
Of a most apt invention.

DICÆOLOGOS. Then I see
You have your fools to back you.

ADICÆOLOGOS. No,—the wise
Are those I deal with.

DICÆOLOGOS. I shall spoil your market.

ADICÆOLOGOS. As how, good sooth?

DICÆOLOGOS. By speaking such plain truths

As may appeal to justice.

ADICÆOLOGOS. What is justice?

There's no such thing—I traverse your appeal.

DICÆOLOGOS. How! No such thing as justice?

ADICÆOLOGOS. No; where is it?

DICÆOLOGOS. With the immortal gods.

ADICÆOLOGOS. If it be there,

How chanc'd it Jupiter himself escap'd
For his unnatural deeds to his own father?

DICÆOLOGOS. For shame, irreverent wretch, thus do you talk?

I sicken at impiety so gross,
My stomach kicks against it.

ADICÆOLOGOS. You are craz'd;
Your wits, old gentleman, are off the hinges.

DICÆOLOGOS. You are a vile blasphemer and buffoon.

ADICÆOLOGOS. Go on! you pelt me—but it is with roses.

DICÆOLOGOS. A scoffer!

ADICÆOLOGOS. Every word your malice vents

Weaves a fresh wreath of triumph for my brows.

DICÆOLOGOS. A parricide!

ADICÆOLOGOS. Proceed, and spare me not—

You shower down gold upon me.

DICÆOLOGOS. Lead, not gold,

Had been your retribution in times past.

ADICÆOLOGOS. Aye, but times present cover me with glory.

DICÆOLOGOS. You are too wicked.

ADICÆOLOGOS. You are much too weak.

DICÆOLOGOS. Thank your own self, if our Athenian fathers

Coop up their sons at home, and fear to trust them

Within your schools, conscious that nothing else

But vice and folly can be learnt of you.

ADICÆOLOGOS. Methinks, friend, your's is but a ragged trade.

DICÆOLOGOS. And your's, oh shame! a thriving one, tho' late,

A perfect Telephus, you tramp'd the street

With beggar's wallet cramm'd with hungry scraps,

Choice gather'd from—Pandeletus' larder.

ADICÆOLOGOS. Oh! what rare wisdom you remind me of!

DICÆOLOGOS. Oh, what rank folly theirs, who rule this city,

And let it nourish such a pest as you,

To sap the morals of the rising age.

ADICÆOLOGOS. You'll not inspire your pupil with these notions,

Old hoary-headed time!

DICÆOLOGOS. I will inspire him,

If he has grace, to shun the malady Of your eternal clack.

ADICÆOLOGOS. Turn to me, youth!

And let him rail at leisure.

DICÆOLOGOS. Keep your distance, And lay your hands upon him at your peril.

CHORUS [interposing]. Come, no more wrangling.—Let us hear you both;

You of the former time produce your rules Of ancient discipline—of modern, you—

That so, both weigh'd, the candidate may judge

Who offers fairest, and make choice between you.

DICÆOLOGOS. I close with the proposal.

ADICÆOLOGOS. 'Tis agreed.

CHORUS. But which of you shall open?

ADICÆOLOGOS. That shall he:

I yield him up that point; and in reply, My words, like arrows levelled at a butt,

Shall pierce him through and through; then, if he rallies,

If he comes on again with a rejoinder,

I'll launch a swarm of syllogisms at him,

That, like a nest of hornets, shall belabour him,

Till they have left him not an eye to see with.

CHORUS. "Now, sirs, exert your utmost care,

And gravely for the charge prepare;

The well-rang'd hoard of thought explore, Where sage experience keeps her store;

All the resources of the mind

Employment in this cause will find,—

And he, who gives the best display

Of argument, shall win the day:

Wisdom this hour at issue stands,

And gives her fate into your hands;

Your's is a question that divides

And draws out friends on different sides:

Therefore on you, who, with such zealous praise,

Applaud the discipline of former days,

On you I call; now is your time to show

You merit no less praise than you bestow."

DICÆOLOGOS. Thus summon'd, I prepare myself to speak

Of manners primitive, and that good time, Which I have seen, when discipline prevail'd,

And modesty was sanctioned by the laws,

No babbling then was suffer'd in our schools;—
 The scholar's test was silence. The whole group
 In orderly procession sallied forth
 Right onwards, without straggling, to attend
 Their teacher in harmonics; though the snow
 Fell on them thick as meal, the hardy brood
 Breasted the storm uncloak'd: their harps were strung
 Not to ignoble strains, for they were taught
 A loftier key, whether to chant the name
 Of Pallas, terrible amidst the blaze
 Of cities overthrown, or wide and far
 To spread, as custom was, the echoing peal.
 There let no low buffoon intrude his tricks,
 Let no capricious quavering on a note,
 No running of divisions high and low
 Break the pure stream of harmony; no Phrynix
 Practising wanton warblings out of place—
 Woe to his back that so was found offending!
 Hard stripes and heavy would reform his taste.
 Decent and chaste their postures in the school
 Of their gymnastic exercises; none
 Expos'd an attitude that might provoke
 Irregular desire; their lips ne'er mov'd
 In love-inspiring whispers, and their walks
 From eyes obscene were sacred and secure,
 Hot herbs, the old man's diet, were proscrib'd;
 No radish, anise, parsley, deck'd their board;
 No rioting, no revelling was there
 At feast or frolic, no unseemly touch
 Or signal, that inspires the hint impure.
 ADICÆOLOGOS. Why these are maxims obsolete and stale:
 Worm-eaten rules, coeval with the hymns
 Of old Ceceydas and Buphonian feasts.
 DICÆOLOGOS. Yet so were train'd the heroes, that imbru'd
 The field of Marathon with hostile blood;

This discipline it was that braced their nerves
 And fitted them for conquest. You, forsooth,
 At great Minerva's festival produce
 Your martial dancers, not as they were wont,
 But smother'd underneath the tawdry load
 Of cumbrous armour, till I sweat to see them
 Dangling their shields in such unseemly sort
 As mars the sacred measure of the dance.
 Be wise, therefore, young man, and turn to me.
 Turn to the better guide, so shall you learn
 To scorn the noisy forum, shun the bath,
 And turn with blushes from the scene impure:
 Then conscious innocence shall make you bold
 To spurn the injurious, but to reverend age
 Meek and submissive, rising from your seat
 To pay the homage due, nor shall you ever
 Or wring the parent's soul, or stain your own.
 In purity of manners you shall live
 A bright example; vain shall be the lures
 Of the stage-wanton floating in the dance,
 Vain all her arts to snare you in her arms,
 And strip you of your virtue and good name.
 No petulant reply shall you oppose
 To fatherly commands, nor taunting vent
 Irreverent mockery on his hoary head,
 Crying—"Behold Iäpetus himself!"
 Poor thanks for all his fond parental care.
 ADICÆOLOGOS. Aye, my brave youth, do,
 follow these fine rules,
 And learn by them to be as mere a swine,
 Driveller, and dolt, as any of the sons
 Of our Hippocrates;—I swear by Bacchus,
 Folly and foul contempt shall be your doom.
 DICÆOLOGOS. Not so, but fair and fresh in youthful bloom

Amongst our young athletics you shall shine;

Not in the forum loit'ring time away
In gossip prattle, like our gang of idlers,
Nor yet in some vexatious paltry suit
Wrangling and quibbling in our petty courts.

But in the solemn academic grove,
Crown'd with the modest reed, fit converse hold

With your collegiate equals; there serene,
Calm as the scene around you, underneath
The fragrant foliage where the ilex spreads,

Where the deciduous poplar strews her leaves,

Where the tall elm-tree and wide-stretching plane

Sigh to the fanning breeze, you shall inhale

Sweet odours wafted in the breath of spring.

This is the regimen that will insure
A healthful body and a vigorous mind,
A countenance serene, expanded chest,
Heroic stature and a temperate tongue;
But take these modern masters, and behold

These blessings all revers'd; a pallid cheek,
Shrunk shoulders, chest contracted, sapless limbs,

A tongue that never rests, and mind debas'd,

By their vile sophistry perversely taught
To call good evil, evil good, and be
That thing, which nature spurns at, that disease,

A mere Antimachus, the sink of vice.

CHORUS. "Oh sage instructor, how sublime

These maxims of the former time!
How sweet this unpolluted stream
Of eloquence, how pure the theme!
Thrice happy they, whose lot was cast
Amongst the generation past,
When virtuous morals were display'd
And these grave institutes obey'd.
Now you, that vaunt yourself so high,
Prepare; we wait for your reply,
And recollect, or ere you start,
You take in hand no easy part;

Well hath he spoke, and reasons good
By better only are withstood;
Sharpen your wits then, or you'll meet
Contempt as certain as defeat."

ADICÆOLOGOS. Doubt not I'm ready, full up to the throat
And well nigh chok'd with plethora of words,

Impatient to discharge them. I do know
The mighty masters of the modern school
Term me the Lower Logic, so distinguish'd

From the old practice of the upper time,
By him personified; which name of honour

I gain'd as the projector of that method,
Which can confute and puzzle all the courts

Of law and justice—An invention worth
Thousands to them who practise it, whereas

It nonsuits all opponents.—Let that pass.
Now take a sample of it in the ease,
With which I'll baffle this old vaunting pedant

With his warm baths, that he forsooth forbids.

Hark'ye, old man, discuss, if so it please you,

Your excellent good reason for this rule,
That interdicts warm bathing.

DICÆOLOGOS. Simply this—
I hold it a relaxer, rendering men
Effeminate and feeble.

ADICÆOLOGOS. Hold awhile—
I have you on the hook. Answer me this—

Of all the heroes Jupiter has father'd,
Which is for strength, for courage, and a course

Of labours most renown'd?
DICÆOLOGOS. I know of none
Superior in those qualities to Hercules.

ADICÆOLOGOS. And who e'er heard Herculean baths were cold?

Yet Hercules himself you own was strong.
DICÆOLOGOS. Aye, this is in the very
style of the times;

These are the dialectics now in fashion
With our young sophists, who frequent the baths

Whilst the palæstra starves.

ADICÆOLOGOS. I grant you this;
It is the style of the times, by you condemn'd,

By me approv'd, and not without good cause;

For how but thus doth ancient Nestor talk?

Can Homer err? Were all his wise men fools?

They are my witnesses.—Now for this tongue,

This member out of use by his decree,
Not so by mine.—His scholar must be silent

And chaste withal—damping prescriptions both—

For what good fortune ever did betide
The mute and modest? Instance me a case.

DICÆOLOGOS. Many—Chaste Peleus so obtained his sword.

ADICÆOLOGOS. His sword! and what did Peleus gain by that?

Battle and blows this modest Peleus gain'd;

Whilst mean Hyperbolus, whose wretched craft

Was lamp-making, by craft of viler sort
Garbel'd his thousands, solid coin, not swords.

DICÆOLOGOS. But continence befriended Peleus so,

As won the goddess Thetis to his bed.

ADICÆOLOGOS. And drove her out of it
—for he was cold,

Languid and listless: she was brisk and stirring,

And sought the sport elsewhere. Now are you answered?

Good sooth you're in your dotage. Mark, young sir.

These are the fruits of continence: you see

What pleasure you must forfeit to preserve it—

All the delights that woman can bestow;
No am'rous sports to catch the fair one's smile,

No luscious dainties shall you then partake,

No gay convivial revels, where the glass
With peals of laughter circulates around;
These you must sacrifice, and without these

What is your life?—So much for your delights.—

Now let us see how stands your score with nature—

You're in some scrape we'll say—intrigue—adultery—

You're caught, convicted, crush'd—for what can save you?

You have no powers of speech—but arm'd by me,

You're up to all occasions: Nothing fear;
Ev'n give your genius scope; laugh, frolic, sport,

And flout at shame; for should the wittol spouse

Detect you in the fact, you shall so pose him

In his appeal, that nothing shall stick to you;

For Jove shall take the blame from off your shoulders,

Being himself a cuckold-making god,
And you a poor frail mortal—Why should you

Be wiser, stronger, purer than a god?

DICÆOLOGOS. But what if this your scholar should incur

Th' adulterer's correction,—pill'd and sanded,

And garnish'd with a radish in his crupper,

The scoff of all beholders—What fine quirk

Will clear him at that pinch, but he must pass

For a most perfect Ganimede?

ADICÆOLOGOS. What then?

Where is the harm?

DICÆOLOGOS. Can greater harm befall him?

ADICÆOLOGOS. What will you say if here I can confute you?

DICÆOLOGOS. Nothing—my silence shall confess your triumph.

ADICÆOLOGOS. Come on then—answer me to what I ask.

Our advocates—what are they?

DICÆOLOGOS. Catamites.	Postponing other calls, we will descend.
ADICÆOLOGOS. Our tragic poets—what are they?	The bearing branches of your vines shall sprout,
DICÆOLOGOS. The same.	Nor scorch'd with summer heats nor chill'd with rain.
ADICÆOLOGOS. Good, very good!—our demagogues—	This to our friends who serve us,—but to him,
DICÆOLOGOS. No better.	Who dares to slight us, let that mortal hear,
ADICÆOLOGOS. See there! discern you not that you are foil'd?	And tremble at the vengeance which awaits him:
Cast your eyes round this company!—	Nor wine nor oil shall that man's farm produce;
DICÆOLOGOS. I do.	For when his olive trees shall yield their fruit,
ADICÆOLOGOS. And what do you discover?	And his ripe vineyard tempts the gatherer's hand,
DICÆOLOGOS. Numerous birds	We'll batter him to ruin, lay him bare;
Of the same filthy feather, so Heaven help me!	And if we catch him with his roof untiled,
This man I mark; and this, and this fine fop	Heav'n's! how we'll drench him with a pelting storm
With his curl'd locks.—To all these I can swear.	Of hail and rain incessant! above all,
ADICÆOLOGOS. What say you then?	Let him beware upon the wedding night;
DICÆOLOGOS. I say I am confuted—	When he brings home his own or kinsman's bride,
Here, wagtails, catch my cloak—I'll be amongst you.	Let him look to't! Then we'll come down in torrents,
SOCRATES [to STREPSIADES, just returned]. Now, friend, what say you? who shall school your son?	That he shall rather take his chance in Egypt,
STREPSIADES. School him and scourge him, take him to yourself.	Than stand the vengeful soaking we will give him.
And mind you whet him to an edge on both sides,	[STREPSIADES with a sack of meal on his shoulder, and talking to himself.]
This for slight skirmish, that for stronger work.	STREPSIADES. Lo! here's the fifth day gone—the fourth—the third—
SOCRATES. Doubt not, we'll finish him to your content	The second too—day of all days to me
A perfect sophist.	Most hateful and accurs'd—the dreadful eve,
PHEIDIPIDES. Perfect skin and bone—That I can well believe.	Ushering the new moon, that lets in the tide
SOCRATES. No more.—Away!	Of happy creditors, all sworn against me,
[STREPSIADES retires.]	To rack and ruin me beyond redemption,
PHEIDIPIDES. Trust me you've made a rod for your own back.	I, like a courteous debtor, who would fain
[Follows SOCRATES into the house.]	Soften their flinty bosoms, thus accost them—
[CHORUS address the Spectators.]	"Ah, my good sir, this payment comes upon me
CHORUS. Now to our candid judges we shall tell
What recompense they may expect from us,
If they indeed are studious to deserve it:
First, on your new-sown grounds in kindly showers,

At a bad time, excuse me—That bill's due,
But you'll extend your grace—This you will cancel,
And totally acquit me."—By no means;
All with one voice cry out, they will be
paid,
And I must be be-knav'd into the bargain,
And threaten'd with a writ to mend the
matter—
Well, let it come!—They may ev'n do their worst;
I care not so my son hath learnt the
trick
Of this new rhetoric, as will appear
When I have beat this door—[Knocks at the door.]—Boy, boy! come forth!

[SOCRATES comes forth.]

SOCRATES. Hail to Strepsiades!

STREPSIADES. Thrice hail to Socrates!
But first I pray you [Setting down the meal against the door.] take this dole of meal.

In token of the reverence I bear you;
And now, so please you, tell me of my
son,

Your late novice. Comes he on apace?

SOCRATES. He apprehends acutely.

STREPSIADES. Oh brave news!

Oh the transcendant excellence of fraud!

SOCRATES. Yes, you may set your creditors at naught—

STREPSIADES. And their avouchers too?—

SOCRATES. Had they a thousand.

STREPSIADES [singing and dancing].

Then I'll sing out my song, and sing
aloud,

And it shall be—Woe, woe to all your gang,

Ye money-jobbing caitiffs, usurers, sharks!
Hence with your registers, your cents-
per-cent;

I fear you not; ye cannot hook me now.

Oh! such a son have I in training for
you,

Arm'd with a two-edg'd tongue that cuts
o' both sides,

The stay, support, and pillar of my house,
The scourge of my tormentors, the redeemer

Of a most wretched father—Call him
forth,
Call him, I say, and let my eyes feast on
him—
What ho! My son, my boy—your father calls;
Come forth and show yourself.

[To them PHEIDIPPIDES.]

SOCRATES. Behold him present!

STREPSIADES. My dear—my darling—

SOCRATES. Lo! you have your darling.

STREPSIADES. Joy, joy, my son! all joy

—for now you wear

A face of a right character and cast,
A wrangling, quibbling, contradicting
face;

Now you have got it neatly on the tongue—

The very quirk o' th' time—"What's that you say?"

What is it?"—Shifting from yourself the wrong

To him that suffers it—an arch conceit

To make a transfer of iniquity,

When it has serv'd your turn—Yes, you will pass;

You've the right Attic stamp upon your forehead.

Now let me see a sample of your service,
Forsooth to say you owe me a good turn.

PHEIDIPPIDES. What vexes you, my father?

STREPSIADES. What! the moon,

This day both new and old.

PHEIDIPPIDES. Both in one day?

Ridiculous!

STREPSIADES. No matter—"Tis the day
Will bring my creditors upon my back
All in a swarm together.

PHEIDIPPIDES. Let them swarm!

We'll smother 'em if they dare so to mis-call

One day as two days.

STREPSIADES. What should hinder them?

PHEIDIPPIDES. What, do you ask? Can the same woman be

Both young and old at once?

STREPSIADES. They speak by law:

The statute bears them out.

PHEIDIPPIDES. But they misconstrue

The spirit of the statute.

STREPSIADES. What's that?

PHEIDIPIDES. Time-honour'd Solon was the people's friend—

STREPSIADES. This makes not to the case of new or old.

PHEIDIPIDES. And he appointed two days for the process,

The old and new day—for citation that,
This for discharge—

STREPSIADES. Why did he name two days?

PHEIDIPIDES. Why, but that one might warn men of their debts,

The other serve them to escape the payment;

Else were they laid by th' heels, as sure as fate,

On the new moon ensuing.

STREPSIADES. Wherefore then

Upon the former day do they commence

Their doles of first fruits at the Prytaneum,

And not at the new moon?

PHEIDIPIDES. Because, forsooth,
They're hungry feeders, and make haste to thrust

Their greedy fingers in the public dish.

STREPSIADES. Hence then, ye witless creditors, begone!

We are the wise ones, we are the true sort;

Ye are but blocks, mob, cattle, empty casks—

"Therefore with ecstasy I'll raise

My jocund voice in fortune's praise,

And, oh rare son!—Oh happy me!

The burden of my song shall be;

For hark! each passing neighbour cries—

All hail, Strepsiadés the wise!

Across the forum as I walk,

I and my son the public talk,

All striving which shall have to boast

He prais'd me first, or prais'd me most—

And now, my son, my welcome guest,

Enter my house and grace my feast."

[Exeunt.]

[PASIAS, and a Witness.]

PASIAS. Should this man be permitted to go on

At such a desperate rate? It must not be.

Better for him to have brok'n up at once
Than to be thus beset. Therefore it is That I am forc'd upon this hostile course, Empowering you to summon this my debtor

For the recovery of my own—Good sooth,
I will not put my country to the blush,
But I must rouse Strepsiadés—

[STREPSIADES reënters.]

STREPSIADES. Who's this?

PASIAS. The old and new day call upon you, sir.

STREPSIADES [to the spectators]. Bear witness that this man has nam'd two days—

And for what debt do you assail me thus?

PASIAS. For twelve good pounds that you took up at interest

To pay for your son's racer.

STREPSIADES. I a racer?

Do you not hear him? Can you not all witness

How mortally and from my soul I hate

All the whole racing calendar?

PASIAS. What then?

You took the gods to witness you would pay me.

STREPSIADES. I grant you, in my folly
I did swear,

But then my son had not attain'd the art
Of the new logic unconfutable.

PASIAS. And have you now the face to stand it out

Against all evidence?

STREPSIADES. Assuredly—

Else how am I the better for my schooling?

PASIAS. And dare you, knowing it to be a falsehood,

Take the great gods to witness to your oath,

When I shall put it to you?

STREPSIADES. What great gods?

PASIAS [starting at the question]. Mer-curius, Neptune, Jupiter himself—

STREPSIADES. Yes, and stake down three-farthings as a handsel

That I will take the oath, so help me
Jove!

PASIAS. Insolent wretch, you'll perish in your folly!

STREPSIADES. Oh! that this madman was well scrubb'd with salt
To save his brains from addling!

PASIAS. Out upon't!

Do you make game of me?

STREPSIADES. I warrant me
He'll take at least six gallons for a dressing.

PASIAS. So may great Jove and all the gods deal with me

As I will handle you for this buffoonery!

STREPSIADES. I thank you for your gods—They're pleasant fellows—
And for your Jupiter, the learn'd and wise
Hold him a very silly thing to swear by.

PASIAS. 'Tis well, rash man, 'tis well!

The time will come

When you shall wish these vaunting words unsaid:

But will you pay the debt or will you not?
Say, and dismiss me.

STREPSIADES. Set your mind at rest;
You shall have satisfaction in a twinkling— [Steps aside.]

PASIAS. What think you of this chap?

WITNESS. That he will pay you.

[STREPSIADES returns.]

STREPSIADES. Where is this dun of mine? Come hither, friend,
How do you call this thing?

PASIAS. A kneading-trough,
Or, as we say, a cardopus—

STREPSIADES. Go to!

Dost think I'll pay my money to a block-
head,

That calls this kneading-trough a cardopus?

I tell you, man, it is a cardopa—

Go, go, you will not get a doit from me,
You and your cardopus.

PASIAS. Will you not pay me?

STREPSIADES. Assure yourself I will not—Hence, begone!

Will you not beat your march, and quit
my doors?

PASIAS. I'm gone, but take this with you, if I live

I'll sue you in the Prytaneum before
night.

STREPSIADES. You'll lose your suit, and your twelve pounds besides.

I'm sorry for your loss, but who can help
it?

You may ev'n thank your cardopus for that. [Exit PASIAS and Witness.]

[AMYNIAS enters, followed by a Witness.]

AMYNIAS. Ah me, ah me!

STREPSIADES. Who's that with his—
Ah me?

Whom has Carcinus sent amongst us
now—

Which of his doleful deities?—

AMYNIAS. Alas!

Would you know who I am? Know then
I am

A wretch made up of woes—

STREPSIADES. A woeful wretch—

Granted! pass on.

AMYNIAS. Oh inauspicious chance!

Oh ye hard-hearted, chariot-breaking fates!

Oh! Pallas my destroyer, what a crash
Is this that you have giv'n me!

STREPSIADES. Hah! what ails you?

Of what can you accuse Tlepolemus?

AMYNIAS. Mock not my miseries, but bid your son

Repay what he has borrow'd.

STREPSIADES. Take me with you—

What should my son repay?

AMYNIAS. The sum I lent him.

STREPSIADES. Is that it? Then your case is desperate;

Truly you're out of luck.

AMYNIAS. I'm out of everything—

I overthrew my chariot—By the gods
That's being out, I take it, with a vengeance.

STREPSIADES. Say rather you are kick'd by an ass—a trifle!

AMYNIAS. But, sir, my lawful money is no trifle;

I shall not choose to be kick'd out of
that.

STREPSIADES. I'll tell you what you are —Out of your wits.

AMYNIAS. How so?

STREPSIADES. Because your brain seems wondrous leaky.

AMYNIAS. Look to't! By Mercury, I'll clap you up,

If you don't pay me.

STREPSIADES. Hark'ye, one short question—

When Jove rains on us does he rain fresh water,

Or only vapours that the sun exhales?
Answer me that.

AMYNIAS. I care not what he rains;
I trouble not my cap with such conceits.

STREPSIADES. And do you think a man, that has no wit

To argue upon these rare points, will argue me

Out of my money?

AMYNIAS. Let your debt go on,
And pay me up the interest.

STREPSIADES. What is that?
What kind of thing is that same interest?

AMYNIAS. A thing it is that grows from day to day,
And month to month, swelling as time rolls on

To a round sum of money.

STREPSIADES. Well defin'd!
One question more—What think you of the sea?

Is it not fuller now than heretofore?

AMYNIAS. No, by the Gods! not fuller, but as full:

That is my judgment of it.

STREPSIADES. Oh thou miser!
That so would'st stint the ocean, and yet cram

Thy swelling coffers till they overflow—
Fetch me a whip, that I may lash him
hence:

Take to your heels—begone!

AMYNIAS. I will convoke
My witnesses against you.

STREPSIADES. Start! set off!—
Away! you jennet, you!

AMYNIAS [to the spectators]. Is not this outrage?

STREPSIADES [smacking his whip]. Will you not bolt? will you not buckle kindly

Into your geers, or must I mount and goad you

Under the crupper, till you kick and wince

For very madness? Oho! Are you off?
A welcome riddance—All the devils drive
You and your cursed chariot hence together!

[STREPSIADES goes into his house.]

MANET CHORUS. "Mark here how rarely it succeeds

To build our trust on guilty deeds:

Mark how this old cajoling elf,
Who sets a trap to catch himself,
Falsely believes he has found the way

To hold his creditors at bay.
Too late he'll curse the Sophists' school,

That taught his son to cheat by rule,
And train'd the modest lips of youth

In the vile art of torturing truth;
A modern logic much in use,

Invented for the law's abuse;
A subtle knack of spying flaws

To cast in doubt the clearest cause,
Whereby, in honesty's despite,

The wrong side triumphs o'er the right—
Alas! short triumph he must have,

Who glories that his son's a knave:
Ah foolish sire, the time will come

You'll wish that son of your's were dumb."

[STREPSIADES (rushing out of the house, in great confusion, followed by his Son)
PHEIDIPIDES, CHORUS.]

STREPSIADES. Ho! there! What ho!
for pity's sake some help!

Friends, kinsmen, countrymen! turn out and help!

Oh! my poor head, my cheeks are bruised to jelly—

Help by all means!—Why, thou un-gracious cub,

Thy father wouldst thou beat?

PHEIDIPIDES. Assuredly.

STREPSIADES. There, there! he owns that he would beat his father.

PHEIDIPIDES. I own it, good my father!

STREPSIADES. Parricide!

Impious assassin! Sacrilegious wretch!

PHEIDIPIDES. All, all, and more—You cannot please me better;

I glory in these attributes. Go on!

STREPSIADES. Monster of turpitude!

PHEIDIPIDES. Crown me with roses!

STREPSIADES. Wretch, will you strike your parent?

PHEIDIPPIDES. Piously,
And will maintain the right, by which I do it.

STREPSIADES. Oh shameless villain! can there be a right Against all nature so to treat a father?

PHEIDIPPIDES. That I shall soon make clear to your conviction.

STREPSIADES. You, you convince me?

PHEIDIPPIDES. With the greatest ease:
And I can work the proof two several ways;

Therefore make choice between them.

STREPSIADES. What do you mean?

PHEIDIPPIDES. I mean to say we argue up or down—

Take which you like. It comes to the same end.

STREPSIADES. Aye, and a precious end you've brought it to,

If all my care of you must end in this,
That I have put you in the way to beat me.

(Which is a thing unnatural and profane)

And after justify it.

PHEIDIPPIDES. That I'll do.

By process clear and categorical,
That you shall fairly own yourself a convert

To a most wholesome cudgelling.

STREPSIADES. Come on!

Give me your arguments—but spare your blows.

CHORUS. How to restrain this headstrong son of yours

Behoves you now, old man, to find the means,

For sure he could not be thus confident
Without some cause; something there needs must be,

Some strong possession of himself within,
That buoys him up to this high pitch of daring,

This bold assumption; which that we may know.

Give us distinctively the whole detail
From first to last whence this contention sprang,

So shall we hear, and hearing judge betwixt you.

STREPSIADES. So please you then I will the cause unfold

Of this base treatment to your patient ears,

And thus it stands—When we had supp'd together,

As you all know, in friendly sort, I bade him

Take up his lute and give me the good song

Of old Simonides,—“the ram was shorn;”—

But he directly scouted my request—

It was a fashion out of date forsooth—

He would not sit twanging the lute, not he;

'Twas not for him to cackle o'er his wine,
As if he were some wench working the hand-mill—

'Twas vulgar and unseemly—

PHEIDIPPIDES. Grossly so;
And was it not high time that I should beat you,

Who had no better manners than to set
Your guest a chirping like a grasshopper?

STREPSIADES. These were his very words, and more than these;

For by and by he told me that Simonides
Was a most paltry poet. This you'll own

Was a tough morsel, yet I gulp'd it down,
And pass'd it off with bidding him recite

Some passage out of Æschylus, withal
Tendering a myrtle wreath, as custom is,

To grace the recitation.—He forsooth,
Flouting my tender, instantly replied—

“I hold your Æschylus, of all our poets,
First of the spouters, incoherent, harsh,
Precipitous and turgid.”—Oh my friends,
Was not this more than flesh and blood should bear?

Yet, yet I smother'd rage within my heart,
And calmly said—“Call something else to mind

More to your taste and from some modern bard,

So it be good withal and worth the hearing—”

Whereat, would you believe it? he began Repeating from Euripides—Great Jove,

Guard my chaste ears from such another dose!

A perilous long-winded tale of incest
'Twixt son and daughter of the same sad mother.

Sick to the soul I spurn'd at such declaim-
ing,

Adding, as well I might, all that my scorn
Of such vile trash could add! till, to be short,

Words begat words, and blows too as it
prov'd,

For leaping from his seat he sprung upon
me,

Struck, buffeted, and bang'd me out of measure,

Throttled me, pounded me well nigh to
dust—

PHEIDIPIDES. And what less does that heretic deserve.

Who will not praise Euripides, the first in wisdom of all poets?

STREPSIADES. He the first!

How my tongue itches!—but the rogue is ready;

He'll beat me if I answer.

PHEIDIPIDES. And with reason.

STREPSIADES. What reason, graceless cub, will bear you out

For beating me, who in your baby age
Caress'd you, dandled you upon my knee, Watch'd every motion, humour'd all your wants?

Then if you lisp'd a syllable I caught it—Bryn cried the bantling—strait I gave you drink:

Mamman it mew'd—and that forsooth was bread:

Nay, I perform'd the nurse's dirtiest task,

And held you out before me at your needs;
And now in my necessity you show'd
No mercy to the pressing calls of nature,
But having pummel'd me till my poor bowels

Could hold no longer, kept me fast imprison'd

To struggle with occasion as I could.

CHORUS. Now every young man's heart beats an alarm,

Anxious to hear his advocate's appeal;

Which if he can establish, the same right
By him asserted will on all devolve,
And beating then will be so much in vogue

That old men's skins will be reduc'd to cobwebs.—

Now you, that hold up this new paradox,
Look well how you defend it, for it asks
No trivial reasons to enforce persuasion.

PHEIDIPIDES. Now gratefully the mind receives new lights,

Emerging from the shades of prejudice,
And casting old establishments aside!
Time was but now, when every thought of mine

Was centred in the stable; then I had
not

Three words upon my tongue without a stumble;

But now, since I've been put into the way
Of knowing better things, and the fine
art

Of subtle disputation, I am bold
To meet this question, and convince my hearers

How right it is to punish this old sinner.

STREPSIADES. Mount, mount your chariot! Oh, that I could see you

Seated again behind your favourite horses, Tho' 'twere with four in hand, so that you kept

From driving me at such a pelting rate.

PHEIDIPIDES. Now then I ask you, gathering up my thread

Where it was broken off, if you, my father,
When I was but a stripling, spar'd my
back?

STREPSIADES. No, for I studied all things for your good.

And therefore I corrected you.

PHEIDIPIDES. Agreed.

I also am like studious of your good,
And therefore I most lovingly correct
you;

If beating be a proof of love, you have it Plenteous in measure, for by what exemption

Is your most sacred carcass freed from stripes

And mine made subject to them? Am not I

Free-born as you? Say, if the son's in tears,

Should not the father weep?

STREPSIADES. By what one rule Of equity?

PHEIDIPPIDES. What equity were that If none but children are to be chastis'd? And grant they were, the proverb's in your teeth,

Which says old age is but a second childhood.

Again, if tears are seen to follow blows, Ought not old men to expiate faults with tears

Rather than children, who have more to plead

In favour of their failings?

STREPSIADES. Where's the law That warrants this proceeding? There's none such.

PHEIDIPPIDES. And what was your law-maker but a man, Mortal as you and I are? And tho' time Has sanctified his statutes, may not I Take up the cause of youth, as he of age, And publish a new ordinance for leave By the right-filial to correct our fathers, Remitting and consigning to oblivion All ex post facto beating? Look at instinct—

Inquire of nature how the brute creation Kick at their parents, which does nothing differ

From lordly man, except that they compile

No laws, and hold their rights without a statute.

STREPSIADES. If you are thus for pecking at your father

Like a young fighting-cock, why don't you peck

Your dinner from the dunghill, and at night

Roost on a perch?

PHEIDIPPIDES. The cases do not tally. Nor does my master Socrates prescribe Rules so absurd.

STREPSIADES. Cease then from beating me;

Else you preclude yourself.

PHEIDIPPIDES. As how preclude?

STREPSIADES. Because the right I have of beating you

Will be your right in time over your son, When you shall have one PHEIDIPPIDES. But if I have none, All my sad hours are lost, and you die laughing.

STREPSIADES. There's no denying that. —How say you, sirs?

Methinks there is good matter in his plea;

And as for us old sinners, truth to say, If we deserve a beating we must bear it.

PHEIDIPPIDES. Hear me—there's more to come—

STREPSIADES. Then I am lost, For I can bear no more.

PHEIDIPPIDES. Oh fear it not, Rather believe what I have now to tell you

Will cause you to make light of what is past,

'Twill bring such comfort to you.

STREPSIADES. Let me have it: If it be comfort, give it me.

PHEIDIPPIDES. Then know, Henceforth I am resolv'd to beat my mother

As I have beaten you.

STREPSIADES. How say you? How? Why this were to out-do all you have done.

PHEIDIPPIDES. But what if I have not a proof in petto,

To show the moral uses of this beating?

STREPSIADES. Show me a proof that you have hang'd yourself,

And with your tutor Socrates beside you Gone to the devil together in a string;

Those moral uses I will thank you for— Oh inauspicious goddesses, O Clouds!

In you confiding, all these woes fall on me.

CHORUS. Evil events from evil causes spring,

And what you suffer flows from what you've done.

STREPSIADES. Why was I not forewarn'd? You saw me old,

And practis'd on my weak simplicity.

CHORUS. 'Tis not for us to warn a wilful sinner;
We stay him not, but let him run his course,
Till by misfortunes rous'd, his conscience wakes,
And prompts him to appease th' offended gods.

STREPSIADES. I feel my sorrows, but I own them just:
Yes, ye reforming Clouds, I'm duly punish'd
For my intended fraud.—And now, my son,
Join hands with me and let us forth together
To wreak our vengeance on those base deceivers,
That Chærephon and Socrates the chief,
Who have cajol'd us both.

PHEIDIPIDES. Grace forbid
I should lift up my hand against my masters!

STREPSIADES. Nay, nay, but rather dread avenging Jove,
God of your ancestors, and him revere.

PHEIDIPIDES. You're mad, methinks, to talk to me of Jove—
Is there a god so call'd?

STREPSIADES. There is! there is!

PHEIDIPIDES. There is no Jupiter, I tell you so;
Vortex has whirl'd him from his throne,
and reigns

By right of conquest in the Thunderer's place.

STREPSIADES. 'Tis false, no Vortex reigns but in my brain.

PHEIDIPIDES. Laugh at your own dull joke and be a fool! [Exit.]

STREPSIADES [striking his breast]. Insufferable blockhead that I was;
What ail'd me thus to court this Socrates,
Ev'n to the exclusion of the immortal gods?

O Mercury, forgive me; be not angry,
Dear tutelary god, but spare me still,
And cast a pitying eye upon my follies,
For I have been intemperate of tongue,
And dearly rue it.—Oh my better genius,

Inspire me with thy counsel how to act,

Whether by legal process to assail them,
Or by such apter means as thou may'st dictate,

I have it! Well hast thou inspir'd the thought;

Hence with the lazy law; thou art not for it.

With fire and faggot I will fall upon them,

And send their school in fumo to the Clouds.

Ho, Xanthias [Calling to one of his slaves.] ho! bring forth without delay
Your ladder and your mattock, mount the roof,

Break up the rafters, whelm the house upon them,

And bury the whole hive beneath the ruins.

[XANTHIAS mounts the roof and begins working with his mattock.]
Haste! if you love me, haste! Oh, for a torch,

A blazing torch new lighted, to set fire To the infernal edifice.—I warrant me

I'll soon unhouse the rascals, that now carry

Their heads so high, and roll them in the dust.

[One of the scholars comes out.]

FIRST DISCIPLE. Woe! mischief! misery!

STREPSIADES [mounts the roof and fixes a torch to the joists].

Torch, play your part: And we shall muster up a conflagration.

FIRST DISCIPLE. What are you doing, fellow?

STREPSIADES. Chopping logic; Arguing a knotty point with your house-beams.

SECOND DISCIPLE. Oh horror! Who has set our house on fire?

STREPSIADES. The very man whose cloak you nabb'd so neatly.

SECOND DISCIPLE. Undone and ruin'd—!

STREPSIADES. Heartily I wish it—

And mean you should so be if this same mattock

Does not deceive my hopes, and I escape
With a whole neck.

[SOCRATES comes forth.]

SOCRATES. Ho! there! What man is that?

You there upon the roof—what are you doing?

STREPSIADES. Treading on air—contemplating the sun—

SOCRATES. Ah me! I'm suffocated, smother'd, lost—

[CHÆREPHON appears.]

CHÆREPHON. Wretch that I am, I'm melted, scorch'd, consum'd—

STREPSIADES. Blasphemers, why did you insult the gods?

Dash, drive, demolish them! Their crimes are many,

But their contemptuous treatment of the gods,

Their impious blasphemies, exceed them all.

CHORUS. Break up!—The Chorus have fulfill'd their part.

OVERSEERS OF SLAVES

A BOY

[The Scene represents the house of HEGIO in Ætolia. Before the house are seen standing in chains the two prisoners, PHILOCRATES and TYNDARUS.]

PROLOGUE. You all can see two prisoners standing here,
Standing in bonds; they stand, they do not sit;
In this you'll witness that I speak the truth.
Old Hegio, who lives here, is this one's father;
But how he's come to be his father's slave
My prologue shall inform you, if you'll listen.

This old man had two sons; the one of whom
Was stolen by a slave when four years old.
He ran away to Elis and there sold him
To this one's father.

—Do you see?—That's right?
Yon fellow in the gallery says he doesn't?
Let him come nearer, then! What, there's no room?
If there's no room to sit, there's room to walk!
You'd like to send me begging, would you,
sir!
Pray, don't suppose I'll crack my lungs for
you!
You gentlemen of means and noble rank
Receive the rest; I hate to be in debt.

That run-a-way, as I've already said,
 When in his flight he'd stolen from his
 home
 His master's son, sold him to this man's
 father,
 Who, having bought him, gave him to his son
 To be his valet; for the two lads were Much of an age. Now he's his father's slave
 In his own home, nor does his father know
 it;
 See how the gods play ball with us poor
 men!
 Now then, I've told you how he lost one
 son.
 The Ætolians and the Elians being at war,
 His other son, a not uncommon thing
 In war, was taken prisoner; and a doctor
 At Elis, called Menarchus, bought him
 there.
 His father then began to buy up Elians,
 To see if he could find one to exchange
 Against his son,—the one that is a prisoner;
 The other, who's at home, he doesn't know
 Now, only yesterday he heard a rumor
 How that an Elian knight of highest rank
 And noblest family was taken prisoner;
 He spared no cash if he might save his
 son;
 And so, to get him home more readily,
 He bought these two from the commissioners.
 But they between themselves have laid a plot,
 So that the slave may get his lord sent
 home.
 Thus they've exchanged their clothing and their names;
 He's called Philocrates, he Tyndarus,
 And either plays the other's part to-day.
 The slave to-day will work this clever dodge,
 And get his master set at liberty.
 By the same act he'll save his brother too,
 And get him brought back free to home
 and father,
 Though all unwitting: oft we do more good
 In ignorance than by our best-laid plans.

Well, ignorantly, in their own deceit,
 They've so arranged and worked their little trick,
 That he shall still remain his father's
 slave.
 For now, not knowing it, he serves his
 father.
 What things of naught are men, when one reflects on 't!
 This story's ours to act, and yours to see.
 But let me give you one brief word of warning:
 It's well worth while to listen to this play.
 It's not been treated in a hackneyed fashion,
 Nor like the rest of plays; here you'll not find
 Verses that are too nasty to be quoted.
 Here is no perjured pimp, or crafty girl,
 Or braggart captain.—Pray, don't be afraid
 Because I said a war was going on Between the Ætolians and the Elians;
 The battles won't take place upon the stage.
 We're dressed for comedy; you can't expect
 That we should act a tragedy all at once.
 If anybody's itching for a fight,
 Just let him start a quarrel; if he gets
 An opposite that's stronger, I dare bet He'll quickly see more fighting than he likes,
 And never long to see a fight again.
 I'm off. Farewell, ye most judicious judges
 At home, most valiant fighters in the field! [Exit PROLOGUE.]

[Enter ERGASILUS from the town.]

ERGASILUS. Grace is the name the boys have given me,
 Because I'm always found before the meat!
 The wits, I know, say it's ridiculous;
 But so don't I! For at the banquet-
 table
 Your gamester throws the dice and asks for grace.
 Then is grace there or not? Of course she is!

But, more of course, we parasites are there,
 Though no one ever asks or summons us!
 Like mice we live on other people's food;
 In holidays, when folks go out of town,
 Our teeth enjoy a holiday as well.
 As, when it's warm, the snails lie in their shells,
 And, failing dew, live on their native juices;
 So parasites lie hid in misery
 All through the holidays, living on their juices,
 Whilst those they feed on jaunt it in the country.
 During the holidays, we parasites
 Are greyhounds; when they're over, we are mastiffs,
 Bred out of "Odious" by "Prince of Bores."
 Now here, unless your parasite can stand
 Hard fisticuffs, and has no strong objection
 To have the crockery broken on his pate,
 He'd better go and take a porter's billet
 At the Trigeminal gate; which lot, I fear,
 Is not at all unlikely to be mine.
 My patron has been captured by the foe—
 The Ætolians and the Elians are at war,
 (This is Ætolia); Philopolemus,
 The son of Hegio here, whose house this is,
 In Elis lies a prisoner; so this house
 A house of lamentation is to me;
 As oft as I behold it, I must weep.
 Now for his son's sake, he's begun a trade,
 Dishonorable, hateful to himself;
 He's buying prisoners, if perchance he may Find any to exchange against his son.
 O how I pray that he may gain his wish!
 Till he's recovered, I am past recovery.
 The other youths are selfish, hopelessly,
 And only he keeps up the ancient style.
 I've never flattered him without reward;
 And the good father takes after his son!
 Now I'll go see him. Ha! the door is opening, Whence I have often come, just drunk with gorging.

[Enter from the house HEGIO and an OVERSEER.]

HEGIO. Attend to me; those prisoners that I bought
 A day ago from the Commissioners
 Out of the spoil, put lighter fetters on
 them;
 Take off these heavier ones with which they're bound,
 And let them walk indoors or out at will;
 But watch them with the utmost careful-
 ness.
 For when a free man's taken prisoner,
 He's just like a wild bird; if once he gets
 A chance of running off, it's quite enough;
 You needn't hope to catch your man again.
 OVERSEER. Why, all of us would rather far be free
 Than slaves.
 HEGIO. Why not take steps, then, to be free?
 OVERSEER. Shall I give leg-bail? I've naught else to give!
 HEGIO. I fancy that in that case you would catch it!
 OVERSEER. I'll be like that wild bird you spoke about.
 HEGIO. All right; then I will clap you in a cage.
 Enough of this; do what I said, and go.
 [Exit OVERSEER into the house.]
 I'll to my brother's, to my other captives,
 To see how they've behaved themselves
 last night,
 And then I'll come back home again
 straightway.
 ERGASILUS [aside]. It grieves me that the poor old man should ply
 This gaoler's trade to save his hapless son.
 But if perchance the son can be brought
 back,
 The father may turn hangman: what care
 I?
 HEGIO. Who speaks there?
 ERGASILUS. One who suffers in your grief.
 I'm growing daily thinner, older, weaker!
 See, I'm all skin and bones, as lean as lean!
 All that I eat at home does me no good;
 Only a bite at a friend's agrees with me.
 HEGIO. Ergasilus! hail!
 ERGASILUS. Heav'n bless you, Hegio!

HEGIO. Don't weep!
 ERGASILUS. Not weep for him? What, not bewail
 That excellent young man?
 HEGIO. I always knew
 You and my son to be the best of friends.
 ERGASILUS. Alas! we don't appreciate our blessings
 Till we have lost the gifts we once enjoyed.
 Now that your son is in the foeman's
 hands,
 I realize how much he was to me!
 HEGIO. Ah, if a stranger feels his loss
 so much,
 What must I feel? He was my only joy.
 ERGASILUS. A stranger? I a stranger?
 HEGIO,
 Never say that nor cherish such a
 thought!
 Your only joy he was, but oh! to me
 Far dearer than a thousand only joys.
 HEGIO. You're right to make your friend's distress your own;
 But come, cheer up!
 ERGASILUS. Alas! it pains me here,
 That now the feaster's army is discharged.
 HEGIO. And can't you meantime find another general
 To call to arms this army that's discharged?
 ERGASILUS. No fear! since Philopolemus was taken,
 Who filled that post, they all refuse to
 act.
 HEGIO. And it's no wonder they refuse to act.
 You need so many men of divers races
 To work for you; first, those of Bakerton;
 And several tribes inhabit Bakerton;
 Then men of Breadport and of Biscuitville,
 Of Thrushborough and Ortolania,
 And all the various soldiers of the sea.
 ERGASILUS. How oft the noblest talents lie concealed!
 O what a splendid general you would make,
 Though now you're serving as a private merely.
 HEGIO. Be of good cheer; in a few days,
 I trust,

I shall receive my dear son home again.
 I've got a youthful Elian prisoner,
 Whom I am hoping to exchange for him,
 One of the highest rank and greatest wealth.
 ERGASILUS. May Heaven grant it!
 HEGIO. Where've you been invited
 To dine to-day?
 ERGASILUS. Why, nowhere that I know of.
 Why do you ask?
 HEGIO. Because it is my birthday;
 And so, I pray you, come and dine with
 me.
 ERGASILUS. Well said indeed!
 HEGIO. That is if you're content
 With frugal fare.
 ERGASILUS. Well, if it's not too frugal;
 I get enough of that, you know, at home.
 HEGIO. Well, name your figure!
 ERGASILUS. Done! unless I get
 A better offer, and on such conditions
 As better suit my partners and myself.
 As I am selling you my whole estate,
 It's only fair that I should make my terms.
 HEGIO. I fear that this estate you're selling me
 Has got a bottomless abyss within't!
 But if you come, come early.
 ERGASILUS. Now, if you like!
 HEGIO. Go hunt a hare; you've only caught a weasel.
 The path my guest must tread is full of stones.
 ERGASILUS. You won't dissuade me,
 HEGIO; don't think it!
 I'll get my teeth well shod before I come.
 HEGIO. My table's really coarse.
 ERGASILUS. Do you eat brambles?
 HEGIO. My dinner's from the soil.
 ERGASILUS. So is good pork.
 HEGIO. Plenty of cabbage!
 ERGASILUS. Food for invalids!
 What more?
 HEGIO. Be there in time.
 ERGASILUS. I'll not forget. [Exit
 ERGASILUS to the marketplace.] HEGIO. Now I'll go in and look up my accounts,
 To see what I have lying at my banker's;

Then to my brother's, as I said just now.
[Exit HEGIO into the house.]

[Enter OVERSEERS, PHILOCRATES and TYNDARUS, each in the other's clothes, and other slaves.]

OVERSEER. Since Heaven has willed it should be so,

That you must drink this cup of woe,
Why, bear it with a patient mind,
And so your pain you'll lighter find.
At home, I dare say, you were free;
Now that your lot is slavery,
Just take it as a thing of course,
Instead of making matters worse;
Behave yourselves and don't be queasy
About your lord's commands; 't is easy.

PRISONERS. Oh, oh!

OVERSEER. No need for howls and cries!
I see your sorrow in your eyes.
Be brave in your adversities.

TYNDARUS. But we're ashamed to wear these chains.

OVERSEER. My lord would suffer far worse pains,
Should he leave you to range at large out of his custody,
Or set you at liberty whom he bought yesterday.

TYNDARUS. Oh, he needn't fear that he'll lose his gains;
Should he release us, we know what's our duty, sir.

OVERSEER. Yes, you'll run off; I know that. You're a beauty, sir!

TYNDARUS. Run off? run off where?

OVERSEER. To the land of your birth.

TYNDARUS. Nay, truly, it never would answer

To imitate runaway slaves.

OVERSEER. Well, by Jove!
I'd advise you, if you get a chance, sir.

TYNDARUS. One thing I beg of you.

OVERSEER. What's your petition, sir?

TYNDARUS. Give us a chance of exchanging a word,
Where there's no fear that we'll be over-
heard.

OVERSEER. Granted! Go, leave them.
We'll take our position there.
See that your talk doesn't last too long!

TYNDARUS. Oh, that's my intention.
So, now, come along!

OVERSEER. Go, leave them alone.

TYNDARUS. We ever shall own We're in your debt for the kindness you've shown to us;

You have the power, and you've proved yourself bounteous.

PHILOCRATES. Come away farther, as far as we can from them;

We must contrive to conceal our fine plan
from them,

Never disclose any trace of our trickery,
Else we shall find all our dodges a mockery.

Once they get wind of it,

There'll be an end of it;

For if you are my master brave,

And I pretend to be your slave,

Then we must watch with greatest care;

Of eavesdroppers we must beware.

With caution and skill keep your senses
all waking;

There's no time to sleep; it's a big undertaking.

TYNDARUS. So I'm to be master?

PHILOCRATES. Yes, that is the notion.

TYNDARUS. And so for your head (I would pray you remark it),

You want me to carry my own head to market!

PHILOCRATES. I know.

TYNDARUS. Well, when you've gained your wish, remember my devotion.

This is the way that you'll find most men
treating you;

Until they have

The boon they crave,

They're kind as can be; but success makes the knave!

When they have got it, they set to work
cheating you.

Now I have told you the treatment you owe to me.

You I regard as a father, you know, to
me.

PHILOCRATES. Nay, let us say,—no conventions shall hinder us,—

Next to my own, you're my father, dear Tyndarus.

TYNDARUS. That will do!

PHILOCRATES. Now then, I warn you always to remember this;
I no longer am your master but your slave; don't be remiss.
Since kind Heav'n has shown us plainly that the way ourselves to save
Is for me, who was your master, now to turn into your slave,
Where before I gave you orders, now I beg of you in prayer,
By the changes in our fortune, by my father's kindly care,
By the common fetters fastened on us by the enemy,
Think of who you were and are, and pay no more respect to me
Than I used to pay to you, when you were slave and I was free.

TYNDARUS. Well, I know that I am you and you are me!

PHILOCRATES. Yes, stick to that!
Then I hope that by your shrewdness we shall gain what we are at.

[Enter HEGIO from his house.]

HEGIO [addressing some one inside]. I'll be back again directly when I've looked into the case:

Where are those whom I directed at the door to take their place?

PHILOCRATES. O by Pollux! you've been careful that we shouldn't be to seek; Thus by bonds and guards surrounded we have had no chance to sneak!

HEGIO. Howsoever careful, none can be as careful as he ought;
When he thinks he's been most careful, oft your careful man is caught.

Don't you think that I've just cause to keep a careful watch on you,
When I've had to pay so large a sum of money for the two?

PHILOCRATES. Truly we've no right to blame you, that you watch and guard us thus;

And if we should get a chance and run away, you can't blame us.

HEGIO. Just like you, my son is held in slavery by your countrymen.

PHILOCRATES. Was he taken prisoner?
HEGIO. Yes.

PHILOCRATES. We weren't the only cowards then.

HEGIO. Come aside here; there is something I would ask of you alone;
And I hope you'll not deceive me.

PHILOCRATES. Everything I know I'll own;

If in aught I'm ignorant, I'll tell you so, upon my life.

[HEGIO and PHILOCRATES go aside; TYNDARUS standing where he can hear their conversation.]

TYNDARUS [aside]. Now the old man's at the barber's; see my master whets his knife!

Why, he hasn't even put an apron on to shield his clothes!

Will he shave him close or only cut his hair?

Well, goodness knows!
But if he has any sense, he'll crop the old man properly!

HEGIO. Come now, tell me, would you rather be a slave or get set free?

PHILOCRATES. What I want is that which brings me most of good and least of ill.

Though I must confess my slavery wasn't very terrible:

Little difference was made between me and my master's son.

TYNDARUS [aside]. Bravo! I'd not give a cent for Thales, the Milesian!

For, compared with this man's cunning, he is but a trifling knave.

Mark how cleverly he talks, as if he'd always been a slave!

HEGIO. Tell me to what family Philocrates belongs?

PHILOCRATES. The Goldings;
That's a family most wealthy both in honors and in holdings.

HEGIO. Is your master there respected?

PHILOCRATES. Highly, by our foremost men.

HEGIO. If his influence amongst them is as great as you maintain,

Are his riches fat?

PHILOCRATES. I guess so! Fat as suet, one might say.

HEGIO. Is his father living?

PHILOCRATES. Well, he was, sir, when we came away;

Whether he still lives or not, you'll have to go to hell to see.

TYNDARUS [aside]. Saved again! for now he's adding to his lies philosophy!

HEGIO. What's his name, I pray?

PHILOCRATES. Thensaurocæsonicochry-sides.

HEGIO. I suppose a sort of nickname given to show how rich he is.

PHILOCRATES. Nay, by Pollux! it was given him for his avarice and greed. Truth to tell you, Theodoromedes is his name indeed.

HEGIO. What is this? His father's grasping?

PHILOCRATES. Grasping? Ay, most covetous!

Just to show you, when he sacrifices to his Genius,

All the vessels that he uses are of Samian crockery,

Lest the Genius should steal them! There's his character, you see.

HEGIO. Come with me then.

Now I'll ask the other what I want to know.

[To TYNDARUS.] Now, Philocrates, your slave has acted as a man should do,

For from him I've learnt your birth; the whole he has confessed to me.

If you will admit the same, it shall to your advantage be;

For your slave has told me all.

TYNDARUS. It was his duty so to do. All is true that he's confessed; although I must admit to you,

'T was my wish to hide from you my birth, and wealth, and family;

But now, Hegio, that I've lost my fatherland and liberty,

Naturally he should stand in awe of you much more than me,

Since by force of arms our fortunes stand on an equality.

I remember when he durst not speak a word to do me ill;

He may strike me now; so fortune plays with mortals as she will.

I, once free, am made a slave and brought from high to low degree,

And instead of giving orders must obey submissively.

But if I should have a master, such as I was when at home,

I've no fear that his commands will prove unjust or burdensome.

Hegio, will you bear from me a word of warning?

HEGIO. Yes, say on.

TYNDARUS. Once I was as free and happy as your own beloved son.

But the force of hostile arms has robbed him of his freedom, too;

He's a slave amongst our people, just as I am here with you.

Certainly there is a God who watches us where'er we be;

He will treat your son exactly as He finds that you treat me.

Virtue sure will be rewarded, vice will e'er bring sorrow on—

I've a father misses me, as much as you your absent son.

HEGIO. Yes, I know. Do you admit, then, what your slave confessed to me?

TYNDARUS. I admit, sir, that my father is a man of property,

And that I'm of noble birth. But I beseech you, Hegio,

Do not let my ample riches cause your avarice to grow,

Lest my father think it better, though I am his only son,

That I should continue serving you and keep your livery on,

Rather than come home a beggar to my infinite disgrace.

HEGIO. Thanks to Heav'n and my forefathers, I've been wealthy all my days;

Nor is wealth, in my opinion, always useful to obtain—

Many a man I've known degraded to a beast by too much gain;

There are times when loss is better far than gain, in every way.

Gold! I hate it! Oh, how many people has it led astray!

Now, attend to me, and I my purpose plainly will declare:

There in Elis, with your people, is my son a prisoner.

If you'll bring him back to me, you shall not pay a single cent:

I'll release you and your slave too; otherwise I'll not relent.

TYNDARUS. That's the noblest, kindest offer! All the world can't find your mate!

But is he in slavery to a private man or to the State?

HEGIO. To Menarchus, a physician.

TYNDARUS. Ah! my client! all is plain; Everything will be as easy as the falling of the rain.

HEGIO. Bring him home as soon as may be.

TYNDARUS. Certainly; but, Hegio—

HEGIO. What's your wish? For I'll do aught in reason.

TYNDARUS. Listen; you shall know.

I don't ask that I should be sent back until your son has come.

Name the price you'll take for yonder slave, to let me send him home,

That he may redeem your son.

HEGIO. Nay, some one else I should prefer,

Whom I'll send when truce is made to go and meet your father there.

He can take your father any message that you like to send.

TYNDARUS. It's no use to send a stranger; all your toil in smoke would end.

Send my slave, he'll do the business just as soon as he gets there;

You won't hit on anybody you can send who's trustier,

Or more faithful; he's a man who does his work with all his heart.

Boldly trust your son to him; and he will truly play his part.

Don't you fear! at my own peril I'll make trial of his truth;

For he knows my kindness to him; I can safely trust the youth.

HEGIO. Well, I'll send him at your risk, if you consent.

TYNDARUS. Oh, I agree.

HEGIO. Let him start as soon as may be.

TYNDARUS. That will suit me perfectly.

HEGIO. Well, then, if he doesn't come back here you'll pay me fifty pounds;

Are you willing?

TYNDARUS. Certainly.

HEGIO. Then go and loose him from his bonds;

And the other too.

TYNDARUS. May Heaven ever treat you graciously!

Since you've shown me so much kindness, and from fetters set me free.

Ah, my neck's more comfortable, now I've cast that iron ruff!

HEGIO. Gifts when given to good people win their gratitude! Enough!

Now, if you are going to send him, teach and tell him what to say,

When he gets home to your father. Shall I call him?

TYNDARUS. Do so, pray!

[HEGIO crosses the stage to PHILOCRATES and addresses him.]

HEGIO. Heav'n bless this project to my son and me,

And you as well! I, your new lord, desire That you should give your true and faithful service

To your old master. I have lent you to him,

And set a price of fifty pounds upon you.

He says he wants to send you to his father

That he may ransom my dear son and make

An interchange between us of our sons.

PHILOCRATES. Well, I'm prepared to serve either one or t' other;

I'm like a wheel, just twist me as you please!

I'll turn this way or that, as you command.

HEGIO. I'll see that you don't lose by your compliance;

Since you are acting as a good slave should.

Come on.

Now, here's your man.

TYNDARUS. I thank you, sir,

For giving me this opportunity
Of sending him to bring my father word
About my welfare and my purposes;
All which he'll tell my father as I bid him.

Now, Tyndarus, we've come to an agreement,

That you should go to Elis to my father;
And should you not come back, I've undertaken

To pay the sum of fifty pounds for you.

PHILOCRATES. A fair agreement! for your father looks

For me or for some other messenger
To come from hence to him.

TYNDARUS. Then, pray attend,
And I will tell you what to tell my father.

PHILOCRATES. I have always tried to serve you hitherto, Philocrates, As you wished me, to the utmost of my poor abilities.

That I'll ever seek and aim at, heart and soul and strength alway.

TYNDARUS. That is right: you know your duty. Listen now to what I say.

First of all, convey a greeting to my parents dear from me,
And to other relatives and friends, if any you should see.

Say I'm well, and held in bondage by this worthy gentleman,
Who has shown and ever shows me all the honor that he can.

PHILOCRATES. Oh, you needn't tell me that, it's rooted in my memory.

TYNDARUS. If I didn't see my keeper, I should think that I was free.

Tell my father of the bargain I have made with Hegio,

For the ransom of his son.

PHILOCRATES. Don't stay to tell me that. I know.

TYNDARUS. He must purchase and restore him, then we both shall be set free.

PHILOCRATES.

Good!

HEGIO. Bid him be quick, for your sake and for mine in like degree.

PHILOCRATES. You don't long to see your son more ardently than he does his!

HEGIO. Why, each loves his own.

PHILOCRATES. Well, have you any other messages?

TYNDARUS. Yes; don't hesitate to say I'm well and happy, Tyndarus;

That no shade of disagreement ever separated us;

That you've never once deceived me nor opposed your master's will,

And have stuck to me like wax in spite of all this flood of ill.

By my side you've stood and helped me in my sore adversities,

True and faithful to me ever. When my father hears of this,

Tyndarus, and knows your noble conduct towards himself and me,

He will never be so mean as to refuse to set you free;

When I'm back I'll spare no effort that it may be brought about.

To your toil, and skill, and courage, and your wisdom, there's no doubt

That I owe my chance of getting to my father's home again:

For 't was you confessed my birth and riches to this best of men;

So you set your master free from fetters by your ready wit.

PHILOCRATES. Yes, I did, sir, as you say; I'm glad that you remember it.

But indeed, you've well deserved it at my hands, Philocrates;

For if I should try to utter all your many kindnesses,

Night would fall before I'd finished; you have done as much for me

As if you had been my slave.

HEGIO. Good heavens, what nobility shines in both their dispositions! I can scarce refrain from tears

When I see their true affection, and the way the slave reveres

And commends his master.

TYNDARUS. Truly he has not commended me

Even a hundredth part as much as he himself deserves to be.

HEGIO. Well, as you've behaved so nobly, now you have a splendid chance Here to crown your services by doubly faithful vigilance.

PHILOCRATES. As I wish the thing accomplished, so I shall do all I know; To assure you of it, I call Jove to witness, Hegio!

That I never will betray Philocrates, I'll take my oath!

HEGIO. Honest fellow!

PHILOCRATES. I will treat him as myself, upon my troth!

TYNDARUS. From these loving protestations, mind you never never swerve.

And if I've said less about you than your faithful deeds deserve,

Pray you, don't be angry with me on account of what I've said;

But remember you are going with a price upon your head;

And that both my life and honor I have staked on your return;

When you've left my sight, I pray you, don't forget what you have sworn,

Or when you have left me here in slavery instead of you,

Think that you are free, and so neglect what you are pledged to do,

And forget your solemn promise to redeem this good man's son.

Fifty pounds, remember, is the price that we've agreed upon.

Faithful to your faithful master, do not let your faith be bought;

And I'm well assured my father will do everything he ought.

Keep me as your friend forever, and this good old man as well.

Take my hand in yours, I pray you, swear an oath unbreakable,

That you'll always be as faithful as I've ever been to you.

Mind, you're now my master, eye protector, and my father too!

I commit to you my hopes and happiness.

PHILOCRATES. O that'll do!

Are you satisfied if I can carry this commission through?

TYNDARUS. Yes.

PHILOCRATES. Then I'll return in such a manner as shall please you both.

Is that all, sir?

HEGIO. Come back quickly.

PHILOCRATES. So I will, upon my troth.

HEGIO. Come along then to my banker's; I'll provide you for the way.

Also I will get a passport from the prætor.

TYNDARUS. Passport, eh?

HEGIO. Yes, to get him through the army so that they may let him go.

Step inside.

TYNDARUS. A pleasant journey!

PHILOCRATES. Fare-you-well!

HEGIO. By Pollux, though, What a blessing that I bought these men from the Commissioners!

So, please Heav'n, I've saved my son from bondage to those foreigners.

Dear! How long I hesitated whether I should buy or not!

Please to take him in, good slaves, and do not let him leave the spot,

When there is no keeper with him; I shall soon be home again.

[Exeunt TYNDARUS and slaves into the house.]

Now I'll run down to my brother's and inspect my other men.

I'll inquire if any of them is acquainted with this youth.

[To PHILOCRATES.] Come along and I'll despatch you. That must be done first, in sooth. [Exeunt HEGIO and PHILOCRATES to the marketplace.]

[Enter ERGASILUS returning from the marketplace.]

ERGASILUS. Wretched he who seeks his dinner, and with trouble gets a haul;

Wretcheder who seeks with trouble, and can't find a meal at all;

Wretchedest who dies for food, and can't get any anyway.

If I could, I'd like to scratch the eyes out of this cursed day!

For it's filled all men with meanness towards me. Oh, I never saw

Day so hungry; why, it's stuffed with famine in its greedy maw.
Never day pursued its purpose in so vacuous a way;
For my gullet and my stomach have to keep a holiday.
Out upon the parasite's profession: it's all gone to pot!
For us impecunious wits the gilded youth
don't care a jot.
They no longer want us Spartans, owners of a single chair,
Sons of Smacked-Face, whose whole stock-in-trade is words, whose board is bare.
Those that they invite are fellows who can ask them back in turn.
Then they cater for themselves and us
poor parasites they spurn;
You will see them shopping in the market with as little shame
As when, sitting on the bench, the culprit's sentence they proclaim.
For us wits they don't care twopence;
keep entirely to their set.
When I went just now to market, there a group of them I met;
"Hail!" says I; "where shall we go," says I, "to lunch?" They all were mum.
"Who speaks first? Who volunteers?"
says I. And still the chaps were dumb.
Not a smile! "Where shall we dine together? Answer." Not a word!
Then I flashed a jest upon them from my very choicest hoard,
One that meant a month of dinners in the old days, I declare.
No one smiled; and then I saw the whole was a got-up affair.
Why, they wouldn't even do as much as any angry cur;
If they couldn't smile, they might at least have shown their teeth, I swear!
Well, I left the rascals when I saw that they were making game;
Went to others; and to others; and to others—still the same!
They had formed a ring together, just like those who deal in oil

I' the Velabrum. So I left them when I saw they mocked my toil.
In the Forum vainly prowling other parasites I saw.
I've resolved that I must try to get my rights by Roman law.
As they've formed a plot to rob us of our life and victuals too,
I shall summon them and fine them, as a magistrate would do.
They shall give me ten good dinners, at a time when food is dear!
So I'll do; now to the harbor; there I may to dinner steer;
If that fails me, I'll return and try this old man's wretched cheer. [Exit
ERGASILUS to the harbor.]

[Enter HEGIO from his brother's with ARISTOPHONTES.]

HEGIO. How pleasant it is when you've managed affairs
For the good of the public, as yesterday I
did,
When I bought those two fellows. Why,
every one stares
And congratulates me on the way I decided.
To tell the plain truth, I am worried with standing,
And weary with waiting;
From the flood of their words I could scarce get a landing,
And even at the pretor's it showed no
abating.
I asked for a passport; and when it had
come,
I gave it to Tyndarus; he set off home.
When he had departed, for home off I started;
Then went to my brother's, to question
the others,
Whether any among them Philocrates
knew.
Then one of them cries, "He's my friend,
good and true."
I told him I'd bought him;
He begged he might see him; and so I have brought him.
I bade them loose him from his chains,
And came away. [To ARISTOPHONTES.]

Pray follow me;
Your earnest suit success obtains,
Your dear old friend you soon shall see.

[Exeunt HEGIO, ARISTOPHONTES into house; TYNDARUS rushes out.]

TYNDARUS. Alas! the day has come on which I wish I never had been born. My hopes, resources, stratagems, have fled and left me all forlorn.

On this sad day no hope remains of saving my poor life, 't is clear;

No help or hope remains to me to drive away my anxious fear.

No cloak I anywhere can find to cover up my crafty lies,

No cloak, I say, comes in my way to hide my tricks and rogueries.

There is no pardon for my fibs, and no escape for my misdeeds;

My cheek can't find the shelter, nor my craft the hiding-place it needs.

All that I hid has come to light; my plans lie open to the day;

The whole thing's out, and in this scrape I fail to see a single ray

Of hope to shun the doom which I must suffer for my master's sake.

This Aristophontes, who's just come, will surely bring me to the stake;

He knows me, and he is the friend and kinsman of Philocrates.

Salvation couldn't save me, if she would; there is no way but this,

To plan some new and smarter trickeries. Hang it, what? What shall I do? I am just up a lofty tree,

If I can't contrive some new and quite preposterous foolery.

[Enter from the house HEGIO and ARISTOPHONTES.]

HEGIO. Where's the fellow gone whom we saw rushing headlong from the house?

TYNDARUS [aside]. Now the day of doom has come; the foe's upon thee, Tyndarus!

O, what story shall I tell them? What deny and what confess?

My purposes are at all sea; O, ain't I in a pretty mess?

O would that Heaven had blasted you before you left your native land, You wretch, Aristophontes, who have ruined all that I had planned.

The game is up if I can't light on some atrocious villainy!

HEGIO. Ah, there's your man: go speak to him.

TYNDARUS [aside]. What man is wretcheder than I?

ARISTOPHONTES. How is this that you avoid my eyes and shun me, Tyndarus?

Why, you might have never known me, fellow, that you treat me thus!

I'm a slave as much as you, although in Elis I was free,

Whilst you from your earliest boyhood were enthralled in slavery.

HEGIO. Well, by Jove! I'm not surprised that he should shun you, when he sees

That you call him Tyndarus, not, as you should, Philocrates.

TYNDARUS. Hegio, this man in Elis was considered raving mad.

Take no note of anything he tells you either good or bad.

Why, he once attacked his father and his mother with a spear;

And the epilepsy takes him in a form that's most severe.

Don't go near him!

HEGIO. Keep your distance!

ARISTOPHONTES. Rascal! Did I rightly hear,

That you say I'm mad, and once attacked my father with a spear?

And that I have got the sickness for which men are wont to spit?

HEGIO. Never mind! for many men besides yourself have suffered it, And the spitting was a means of healing them, and they were glad.

ARISTOPHONTES. What, do you believe the wretch?

HEGIO. In what respect?

ARISTOPHONTES. That I am mad!

TYNDARUS. Do you see him glaring at you? Better leave him! O beware!

Hegio, the fit is on him; he'll be raving soon! Take care!

HEGIO. Well, I thought he was a mad-man when he called you Tyndarus.

TYNDARUS. Why, he sometimes doesn't know his own name. Oh, he's often thus.

HEGIO. But he said you were his comrade.

TYNDARUS. Ah, no doubt! precisely so! And Alcmaeon, and Orestes, and Lycurgus, don't you know,

Are my comrades quite as much as he is!

ARISTOPHONTES. Oh, you gallows bird, Dare you slander me? What, don't I know you?

HEGIO. Come, don't be absurd.

You don't know him, for you called him Tyndarus: that's very clear.

You don't know the man you see; you name the man who isn't here.

ARISTOPHONTES. Nay, he says he is the man he isn't, not the man he is.

TYNDARUS. O yes! Doubtless you know better whether I'm Philocrates Than Philocrates himself does!

ARISTOPHONTES. You'd prove truth itself a liar, As it strikes me. But, I pray you, look at me!

TYNDARUS. As you desire!

ARISTOPHONTES. Aren't you Tyndarus?

TYNDARUS. I'm not.

ARISTOPHONTES. You say you are Philocrates?

TYNDARUS. Certainly.

ARISTOPHONTES. Do you believe him?

HEGIO. Yes, and shall do, if I please.

For the other, who you say he is, went home from here to-day To the father of this captive.

ARISTOPHONTES. Father? He's a slave.

TYNDARUS. And, pray!

Are you not a slave, though you were free once, as I hope to be, When I have restored good Hegio's son to home and liberty?

ARISTOPHONTES. What's that, gaol-bird? Do you tell me that you were a free-man born?

TYNDARUS. No! Philocrates, not Freeman, is my name.

ARISTOPHONTES. Pray, mark his scorn! Hegio, I tell you, you're being mocked and swindled by this knave;

Why, he never had a slave except himself; for he's a slave.

TYNDARUS. Ah, because you're poor yourself, and have no means of livelihood,

You'd wish everybody else to be like you. I know your mood;

All poor men like you are spiteful, envy those who're better off.

ARISTOPHONTES. Hegio, don't believe this fellow; for he's doing naught but scoff;

Sure I am, he'll play some scurvy trick on you before he's done;

I don't like this tale of his about the ransom of your son.

TYNDARUS. You don't like it, I dare say; but I'll accomplish it, you see!

I'll restore him to his father; he in turn releases me.

That's why I've sent Tyndarus to see my father.

ARISTOPHONTES. Come, that's lame!

You are Tyndarus yourself, the only slave who bears that name!

TYNDARUS. Why reproach me with my bondage? I was captured in the fray.

ARISTOPHONTES. Oh, I can't restrain my fury!

TYNDARUS. Don't you hear him? Run away!

He'll be hurling stones at us just now, if you don't have him bound.

ARISTOPHONTES. Oh, damnation!

TYNDARUS. How he glares at us! I hope your ropes are sound.

See, his body's covered over with bright spots of monstrous size!

It's the black bile that afflicts him.

ARISTOPHONTES. Pollux! if this old man's wise,

You will find black pitch afflict you, when it blazes round your breast.

TYNDARUS. Ah, he's wandering now, poor fellow! by foul spirits he's possessed!

- HEGIO [to TYNDARUS]. What do you think? Would it be best to have him bound?
- TYNDARUS. Yes, so I said.
- ARISTOPHONTES. Oh, perdition take it! Would I had a stone to smash his head,
- This whipped cur, who says I'm mad! By Jove, sir, I will make you smart!
- TYNDARUS. Hear him calling out for stones!
- ARISTOPHONTES. Pray, might we have a word apart, Hegio?
- HEGIO. Yes, but keep your distance; there's no need to come so close!
- TYNDARUS. If, by Pollux, you go any nearer, he'll bite off your nose.
- ARISTOPHONTES. Hegio, I beg and pray you, don't believe that I am mad, Or that I have epilepsy as this shameless fellow said.
- But if you're afraid of me, then have me bound; I won't say no,
- If you'll bind that rascal too.
- TYNDARUS. O no, indeed, good Hegio!
- Bird the man who wishes it!
- ARISTOPHONTES. Be quiet, you! The case stands thus;
- I shall prove Philocrates the false to be true Tyndarus.
- What are you winking for?
- TYNDARUS. I wasn't.
- ARISTOPHONTES. He winks before your very face!
- HEGIO. What, if I approached this mad-man?
- TYNDARUS. It would be a wild-goose chase.
- He'll keep chattering, till you can't make either head or tail of it.
- Had they dressed him for the part, you'd say 't was Ajax in his fit.
- HEGIO. Never mind, I will approach him.
- TYNDARUS [aside]. Things are looking very blue.
- I'm between the knife and altar, and I don't know what to do.
- HEGIO. I attend, Aristophontes, if you've anything to say.
- ARISTOPHONTES. You shall hear that
- that is true which you've been thinking false to-day.
- First I wish to clear myself of all suspicion that I rave,
- Or that I am subject to disease—except that I'm a slave.
- So may He who's king of gods and men restore me home again:
- He's no more Philocrates than you or I.
- HEGIO. But tell me then, Who he is.
- ARISTOPHONTES. The same that I have told you from the very first
- If you find it otherwise, I pray that I may be accursed,
- And may suffer forfeit of fatherland and freedom sweet.
- HEGIO. What say you?
- TYNDARUS. That I'm your slave, and you're my master.
- HEGIO. That's not it.
- Were you free?
- TYNDARUS. I was.
- ARISTOPHONTES. He wasn't. He's just lying worse and worse.
- TYNDARUS. How do you know? Perhaps it happened that you were my mother's nurse,
- That you dare to speak so boldly!
- ARISTOPHONTES. Why, I saw you when a lad.
- TYNDARUS. Well, I see you when a man to-day! So we are quits, by gad!
- Did I meddle with your business? Just let mine alone then, please.
- HEGIO. Was his father called Thensauracresonicochrysidēs?
- ARISTOPHONTES. No, he wasn't, and I never heard the name before to-day.
- Theodoromedes was his master's father.
- TYNDARUS [aside]. Deuce to pay!
- O be quiet, or go straight and hang yourself, my beating heart!
- You are dancing there, whilst I can hardly stand to play my part.
- HEGIO. He in Elis was a slave then, if you are not telling lies,
- And is not Philocrates?
- ARISTOPHONTES. You'll never find it otherwise.

HEGIO. So I've been chopped into fragments and dissected, goodness knows, By the dodges of this scoundrel, who has led me by the nose.

Are you sure there's no mistake though?

ARISTOPHONTES. Yes, I speak of what I know.

HEGIO. Is it certain?

ARISTOPHONTES. Certain? Nothing could be more entirely so.

Why, Philocrates has been my friend from when he was a boy;

But where is he now?

HEGIO. Ah, that's what vexes me, but gives him joy.

Tell me though, what sort of looking man is this Philocrates?

ARISTOPHONTES. Thin i' the face, a sharpish nose, a fair complexion, coal-black eyes,

Reddish, crisp, and curly hair.

HEGIO. Yes, that's the fellow to a T.

TYNDARUS [aside]. Curse upon it, everything has gone all wrong to-day with me.

Woe unto those wretched rods that on my back to-day must die!

HEGIO. So I see that I've been cheated.

TYNDARUS [aside]. Come on, fetters, don't be shy!

Run to me and clasp my legs and I'll take care of you, no fear!

HEGIO. Well, I've been sufficiently bamboozled by these villains here.

T' other said he was a slave, while this pretended to be free;

So I've gone and lost the kernel, and the husk is left to me.

Yes, they've corked my nose most finely!

Don't I make a foolish show?

But this fellow here shan't mock me!

Colaphus, Corax, Cordalio,

Come out here and bring your thongs.

[Enter. OVERSEERS.]

OVERSEER. To bind up faggots? Here's a go!

HEGIO. Come, bind your heaviest shackles on this wretch.

TYNDARUS. Why, what's the matter? what's my crime?

HEGIO. Your crime!

You've sowed and scattered ill, now you shall reap it.

TYNDARUS. Hadn't you better say I harrowed too?

For farmers always harrow first, then sow.

HEGIO. How boldly does he flout me to my face!

TYNDARUS. A harmless, guiltless man, although a slave,

Should boldly face his master, of all men.

HEGIO. Tie up his hands as tightly as you can.

TYNDARUS. You'd better cut them off; for I am yours.

But what's the matter? Why are you so angry?

HEGIO. Because my plans, as far as in you lay,

By your thrice-villainous and lying tricks You've torn asunder, mangled limb from limb,

And ruined all my hopes and purposes. Philocrates escaped me through your guile;

I thought he was the slave, and you the free;

For so you said, and interchanged your names

Between yourselves.

TYNDARUS. Yes, I admit all that.

'T is just as you have said, and cunningly He's got away by means of my smart work;

But I beseech you, are you wroth at that?

HEGIO. You've brought the worst of torments on yourself.

TYNDARUS. If not for sin I perish, I don't care!

But though I perish, and he breaks his word,

And doesn't come back here, my joy is this:

My deed will be remembered when I'm dead,

How I redeemed my lord from slavery, And rescued him and saved him from his foes,

To see once more his father and his home;

And how I rather chose to risk my life,

Than let my master perish in his bonds.

HEGIO. The only fame you'll get will be in hell.

TYNDARUS. Nay, he who dies for virtue doesn't perish.

HEGIO. When I've expended all my torments on you,
And given you up to death for your de-
ceits,

People may call it death or perishing
Just as they like; so long as you are
dead,

I don't mind if they say that you're alive.

TYNDARUS. By Pollux! if you do so,
you'll repent,

When he comes back as I am sure he will.

ARISTOPHONTES. O Heavens! I see it now! and understand

What it all means. My friend Philocrates
Is free at home, and in his native land.

I'm glad of that; nothing could please me
more.

But I am grieved I've got him into trouble,
Who stands here bound because of what I said.

HEGIO. Did I forbid you to speak falsely
to me?

TYNDARUS. You did, sir.

HEGIO. Then how durst you tell me
lies?

TYNDARUS. Because to tell the truth would have done hurt

To him I served; he profits by my lie.

HEGIO. But you shall smart for it!

TYNDARUS. O that's all right!

I've saved my master and am glad of that,
For I've been his companion from a boy;
His father, my old master, gave me to
him.

D' you now think this a crime?

HEGIO. A very vile one.

TYNDARUS. I say it's right; I don't agree with you.

Consider, if a slave had done as much
For your own son, how grateful you would be!

Wouldn't you give that slave his liberty?
Wouldn't that slave stand highest in your favor?

Answer!

HEGIO. Well, yes.

TYNDARUS. Then why be wroth with
me?

HEGIO. Because you were more faithful to your master

Than e'er to me.

TYNDARUS. What else could you expect?
Do you suppose that in one night and day
You could so train a man just taken captive,

A fresh newcomer, as to serve you better Than him with whom he'd lived from earliest childhood?

HEGIO. Then let him pay you for it.
Take him off,

And fit him with the heaviest, thickest chains;

Thence to the quarries you shall go right
on.

And whilst the rest are hewing eight stones each,

You shall each day do half as much again,
Or else be nicknamed the Six-hundred-striper.

ARISTOPHONTES. By gods and men, I pray you, Hegio,

Do not destroy him.

HEGIO. I'll take care of him!

For in the stocks all night he shall be kept,

And quarry stones all day from out the ground.

O, I'll prolong his torments day by day.

ARISTOPHONTES. Is this your purpose?

HEGIO. Death is not so sure.

Go take him to Hippolytus the smith;
Tell him to rivet heavy fetters on him.

Then cause him to be led out of the city
To Cordalus, my freedman at the quarries,
And tell him that I wish him to be treated With greater harshness than the worst slave there.

TYNDARUS. Why should I plead with you when you're resolved?

The peril of my life is yours as well
When I am dead I have no ill to fear;

And if I live to an extreme old age,
My time of suffering will be but short.

Farewell! though you deserve a different wish.

Aristophontes, as you've done to me,
So may you prosper; for it is through you

That this has come upon me.

HEGIO. Take him off.

TYNDARUS. But if Philocrates returns to you,

Give me a chance of seeing him, I pray.

HEGIO. Come, take him from my sight or I'll destroy you!

TYNDARUS. Nay, this is sheer assault and battery! [Exeunt OVERSEERS and TYNDARUS to the quarries.]

HEGIO. There, he has gone to prison as he merits.

I'll give my other prisoners an example, That none of them may dare repeat his crime.

Had it not been for him, who laid it bare, The rascals would have led me in a string. Never again will I put trust in man.

Once cheated is enough. Alas! I hoped

That I had saved my son from slavery.

My hope has perished. One of my sons I lost,

Stolen by a slave when he was four years old;

Nor have I ever found the slave or him.

The elder's now a captive. What's my crime,

That I beget my children but to lose them?

Follow me, you! I'll take you where you were.

Since no one pities me, I'll pity none.

ARISTOPHONTES. Under good auspices I left my chain;

But I must take the auspices again.

[Exeunt ARISTOPHONTES and HEGIO to HEGIO'S brother's.]

[Enter ERGASILUS from the harbor.]

ERGASILUS. Jove supreme, thou dost protect me and increase my scanty store,

Blessings lordly and magnific thou bestowest more and more;

Both thanks and gain, and sport and jest, festivity and holidays,

Processions plenty, lots of drink and heaps of meat and endless praise.

Ne'er again I'll play the beggar, everything I want I've got;

I'm able now to bless my friends, and send my enemies to pot.

With such joyful joyfulness this joyful day has loaded me!

Though it hasn't been bequeathed me, I've come into property!

So now I'll run and find the old man

HEGIO. O what a store

Of good I bring to him, as much as ever he could ask, and more.

I am resolved I'll do just what the slaves do in a comedy;

I'll throw my cloak around my neck, that he may hear it first from me.

For this good news I hope to get my board in perpetuity.

[Enter HEGIO from his brother's.]

HEGIO. How sad the regrets in my heart that are kindled,

As I think over all that has happened to me.

O isn't it shameful the way I've been swindled,

And yet couldn't see!

As soon as it's known, how they'll laugh in the city!

When I come to the market they'll show me no pity,

But chaffing say, "Wily old man up a tree!"

But is this Ergasilus coming? Bless me!

His cloak's o'er his shoulder. Why, what can it be?

ERGASILUS. Come, Ergasilus, act, and act vigorously!

Hereby I denounce and threaten all who shall obstruct my way;

Any man who dares to do so will have seen his life's last day.

I will stand him on his head.

HEGIO. 'Fore me the man begins to spar!

ERGASILUS. I shall do it. Wherefore let all passers-by stand off afar;

Let none dare to stand conversing in this street, till I've passed by;

For my fist's my catapult, my arm is my artillery,

And my shoulder is my ram; who meets my knee, to earth he goes.

Folk will have to pick their teeth up, if with me they come to blows.

HEGIO. What's he mean by all this

- threatening? I confess I'm puzzled quite.
- ERGASILUS. I'll take care they don't forget this day, this place, my mickle might.
- He who stops me in my course, will find he's stopped his life as well.
- HEGIO. What he's after with these threats and menaces, I cannot tell.
- ERGASILUS. I proclaim it first, that none may suffer inadvertently;
- Stay at home, good people all, and then you won't get hurt by me.
- HEGIO. Oh, depend on't, it's a dinner that has stirred his valorous bile.
- Woe to that poor wretch whose food has given him this lordly style!
- ERGASILUS. First, for those pig-breeding millers, with their fat and bran-fed sows,
- Stinking so that one is hardly able to get past the house;
- If in any public place I catch their pigs outside their pen,
- With my fists I'll hammer out the bran from those same filthy—men!
- HEGIO. Here's pot-valour with a vengeance! He's as full as man could wish!
- ERGASILUS. Then those fishmongers, who offer to the public stinking fish, riding to the market on a jumping, jolting, joggling cob,
- Whose foul smell drives to the Forum every loafer in the mob;
- With their fish baskets I'll deal them on their face a few smart blows,
- Just to let them feel the nuisance that they cause the public nose.
- HEGIO. Listen to his proclamations! What a royal style they keep!
- ERGASILUS. Then the butchers, who arrange to steal the youngsters from the sheep,
- Undertake to kill a lamb, but send you home right tough old mutton;
- Nickname ancient ram as yearling, sweet enough for any glutton;
- If in any public street or square that ram comes in my view,
- I will make them sorry persons—ancient ram and butcher, too!
- HEGIO. Bravo! he makes rules as if he were a mayor and corporation.
- Surely he's been made the master of the market to our nation.
- ERGASILUS. I'm no more a parasite, but kinglier than a king of kings.
- Such a stock of belly-timber from the port my message brings.
- Let me haste to heap on Hegio this good news of jollity.
- Certainly there's no man living who's more fortunate than he.
- HEGIO. What's this news of gladness which he gladly hastes on me to pour?
- ERGASILUS. Ho! where are you?
- Who is there? Will some one open me this door?
- HEGIO. Ah! the fellow's come to dinner.
- ERGASILUS. Open me the door, I say;
- Or I'll smash it into matchwood, if there's any more delay.
- HEGIO. I'll speak to him. Ergasilus!
- ERGASILUS. Who calls my name so lustily?
- HEGIO. Pray, look my way!
- ERGASILUS. You bid me do what Fortune never did to me!
- Who is it?
- HEGIO. Why, just look at me. It's Hegio!
- ERGASILUS. Ye gods! It's he.
- Thou best of men, in nick of time we have each other greeted.
- HEGIO. You've got a dinner at the port; that makes you so conceited.
- ERGASILUS. Give me your hand.
- HEGIO. My hand?
- ERGASILUS. Your hand, I say, at once!
- HEGIO. I give it. There!
- ERGASILUS. Now rejoice!
- HEGIO. Rejoice! but why?
- ERGASILUS. 'T is my command. Begone dull care!
- HEGIO. Nay, the sorrows of my household hinder me from feeling joy.
- ERGASILUS. Ah, but I will wash you clean from every speck that can annoy.
- Venture to rejoice!
- HEGIO. All right, though I've no reason to be glad.

- ERGASILUS. That's the way. Now order—
- HEGIO. What?
- ERGASILUS. To have a mighty fire made.
- HEGIO. What, a mighty fire?
- ERGASILUS. I said so; have it big enough.
- HEGIO. What next?
- Do you think I'll burn my house down at your asking?
- ERGASILUS. Don't be vexed!
- Have the pots and pans got ready. Is it to be done or not?
- Put the ham and bacon in the oven, have it piping hot.
- Send a man to buy the fish—
- HEGIO. His eyes are open, but he dreams!
- ERGASILUS. And another to buy pork, and lamb, and chickens—
- HEGIO. Well, it seems
- You could dine well, if you'd money.
- ERGASILUS. —Perch and lamprey, if you please,
- Pickled mackerel and sting-ray, then an eel and nice soft cheese.
- HEGIO. Naming's easy, but for eating you won't find facilities
- At my house, Ergasilus.
- ERGASILUS. Why, do you think I'm ordering this
- For myself?
- HEGIO. Don't be deceived; for you'll eat neither much, nor little,
- If you've brought no appetite for just your ordinary victual.
- ERGASILUS. Nay, I'll make you eager for a feast though I should urge you not.
- HEGIO. Me?
- ERGASILUS. Yes, you.
- HEGIO. Then you shall be my lord.
- ERGASILUS. A kind one too, I wot!
- Come, am I to make you happy?
- HEGIO. Well, I'm not in love with woe.
- ERGASILUS. Where's your hand?
- HEGIO. There, take it.
- ERGASILUS. Heaven's your friend!
- HEGIO. But I don't mark it, though.
- ERGASILUS. You're not in the market, that's why you don't mark it: come now, bid
- That pure vessels be got ready for the offering, and a kid,
- Fat and flourishing, be brought.
- HEGIO. What for?
- ERGASILUS. To make a sacrifice.
- HEGIO. Why, to whom?
- ERGASILUS. To me, of course!—I'm Jupiter in human guise!
- Yes, to you I am Salvation, Fortune, Light, Delight, and Joy.
- It's your business to placate my deity with food, dear boy!
- HEGIO. Hunger seems to be your trouble.
- ERGASILUS. Well, my hunger isn't yours.
- HEGIO. As you say; so I can bear it.
- ERGASILUS. Lifelong habit that ensures!
- HEGIO. Jupiter and all the gods confound you!
- ERGASILUS. Nothing of the sort!
- Thanks I merit for reporting such good tidings from the port.
- Now I'll get a meal to suit me!
- HEGIO. Idiot, go! you've come too late.
- ERGASILUS. If I'd come before I did, your words would come with greater weight.
- Now receive the joyful news I bring you. I have seen your son
- Philopolemus in harbor safe; and he'll be here anon.
- He was on a public vessel; with him was that Elian youth
- And your slave Stalagmus, he who ran away—it's naught but truth—
- He who stole your little boy when four years old so cruelly.
- HEGIO. Curse you, cease your mocking!
- ERGASILUS. So may holy Fulness smile on me,
- Hegio, and make me ever worthy of her sacred name,
- As I saw him.
- HEGIO. Saw my son?
- ERGASILUS. Your son, my patron: they're the same.
- HEGIO. And the prisoner from Elis?

ERGASILUS. Oui, parbleu!
 HEGIO. And that vile thief,
 Him who stole my younger son, Stalag-mus?
 ERGASILUS. Oui, monsieur, par Crieff!
 HEGIO. What, just now?
 ERGASILUS. Par Killiecrankie!
 HEGIO. Has he come?
 ERGASILUS. Oui, par Dundee!
 HEGIO. Are you sure?
 ERGASILUS. Par Auchtermuchtie!
 HEGIO. Certain?
 ERGASILUS. Oui, par Kirkcudbright!
 HEGIO. Why by these barbarian cities do you swear?
 ERGASILUS. Because they're rude,
 As you said your dinner was.
 HEGIO. That's just like your ingratitude!
 ERGASILUS. Ah, I see you won't believe me though it's simple truth I say.
 But what countryman was this Stalag-mus, when he went away?
 HEGIO. A Sicilian.
 ERGASILUS. Well, but he belongs to Colorado now;
 For he's married to a collar, and she squeezes him, I vow!
 HEGIO. Tell me, is your story true?
 ERGASILUS. It's really true—the very truth.
 HEGIO. O good Heav'ns! if you're not mocking, I've indeed renewed my youth.
 ERGASILUS. What? Will you continue doubting when I've pledged my sacred troth?
 As a last resource then, Hegio, if you can't believe my oath,
 Go and see.
 HEGIO. Of course I will; go in, prepare the feast at once;
 Everything's at your disposal; you're my steward for the nonce.
 ERGASILUS. If my oracle's a false one,
 with a cudgel comb my hide!
 HEGIO. You shall have your board forever, if you've truly prophesied.
 ERGASILUS. Who will pay?
 HEGIO. My son and I.
 ERGASILUS. You promise that?

HEGIO. I do indeed.
 ERGASILUS. Then I promise you your son has really come in very deed.
 HEGIO. Take the best of everything!
 ERGASILUS. May no delay your path impede! [Exit HEGIO to the harbor.] ERGASILUS. He has gone; and put his kitchen absolutely in my hands!
 Heav'ns! how necks and trunks will be dissevered at my stern commands!
 What a ban will fall on bacon, and what harm on humble ham!
 O what labor on the lard, and what calamity on lamb!
 Butchers and pork dealers, you shall find a deal to do to-day!
 But to tell of all who deal in food would cause too long delay.
 Now, in virtue of my office, I'll give sentence on the lard,
 Help those gammons, hung though un-condemned—a fate for them too hard.
 [Exit ERGASILUS into the house.]
 [Enter a boy from the house of HEGIO.]
 Boy. May Jupiter and all the gods, Ergasilus, confound you quite,
 And all who ask you out to dine, and every other parasite.
 Destruction, ruin, dire distress, have come upon our family.
 I feared that, like a hungry wolf, he'd make a fierce attack on me.
 I cast an anxious look at him, he licked his lips and glared around;
 I shook with dread, by Hercules! he gnashed his teeth with fearsome
 sound.
 When he'd got in, he made a raid upon the meat-safe and the meats;
 He seized a knife—from three fat sows he cut away the dainty teats.
 Save those which held at least a peck, he shattered every pan and pot:
 Then issued orders to the cook to get the copper boiling hot.
 He broke the cupboard doors and searched
 the secrets of the storeroom's hoard.
 So kindly watch him if you can, good slaves, whilst I go seek my lord.
 I'll tell him to lay in fresh stores, if he wants any for himself,

For as this fellow's carrying on, there'll soon be nothing on the shelf.

[Exit boy to the harbor.]

[Enter from the harbor HEGIO, PHILOPOLEMUS, PHILOCRATES, and STALAGMUS.]

HEGIO. All praise and thanksgiving to Jove I would render.

For bringing you back to your father again;

For proving my staunch and successful defender,

When, robbed of my son, I was tortured with pain;

For restoring my runaway slave to my hands;

For Philocrates' honor; unsullied it stands.

PHILOPOLEMUS. Grieved I have enough already, I don't want to grow still thinner,

And you've told me all your sorrows at the harbor, pending dinner.

Now to business!

PHILOCRATES. Tell me, Hegio, have I kept my promises,

And restored your son to freedom?

HEGIO. Yes, you have, Philocrates.

I can never, never thank you for the services you've done,

As you merit for the way you've dealt with me and with my son.

PHILOPOLEMUS. Yes, you can, dear father, and the gods will give us both a chance,

Worthily to recompense the source of my deliverance.

And I'm sure, my dearest father, it will be a pleasing task.

HEGIO. Say no more. I have no tongue that can deny you aught you ask.

PHILOCRATES. Then restore to me the slave whom, as a pledge, I left behind.

He has always served me better than himself, with heart and mind.

To reward him for his kindness now shall be my earnest care.

HEGIO. For your goodness he shall be restored to you; 't is only fair.

That and aught beside you ask for, you shall have. But don't, I pray,

Be enraged with me because in wrath I've punished him to-day.

PHILOCRATES. Ah, what have you done?

HEGIO. I sent him to the quarries bound with chains,

When I found how I'd been cheated.

PHILOCRATES. Woe is me! he bears these pains,

Dear good fellow, for my sake, because he gained me my release.

HEGIO. And on that account you shall not pay for him a penny piece.

I will set him free for nothing.

PHILOCRATES. Well, by Pollux! Hegio, That is kind. But send and fetch him quickly, will you?

HEGIO. Be it so.

[To a slave]. Ho, where are you? Run and quickly bid young Tyndarus return.

Now, go in; for from this slave, this whipping-block, I fain would learn

What has happened to my younger son, and if he's living still.

Meanwhile you can take a bath.

PHILOPOLEMUS. Come in, Philocrates.

PHILOCRATES. I will.

[Exit PHILOPOLEMUS and PHILOCRATES into the house.]

HEGIO. Now stand forth, my worthy sir, my slave so handsome, good, and wise!

STALAGMUS. What can you expect from me, when such a man as you tells lies?

For I never was nor shall be fine or handsome, good or true;

If you're building on my goodness, it will be the worse for you.

HEGIO. Well, it isn't hard for you to see which way your interest lies;

If you tell the truth, 't will save you from the harshest penalties.

Speak out, straight and true; although you've not done right and true, I guess.

STALAGMUS. Oh, you needn't think I blush to hear you say what I confess.

HEGIO. I will make you blush, you villain; for a bath of blood prepare!

STALAGMUS. That will be no novelty! you threaten one who's oft been there!

But no more of that; just tell me what you want to ask of me.

Perhaps you'll get it.

HEGIO. You're too fluent; kindly speak with brevity.

STALAGMUS. As you please.

HEGIO. Ah, from a boy he was a supple, flattering knave.

But to business! Pray attend to me, and tell me what I crave.

If you speak the truth, you'll find your interest 't will best subserve.

STALAGMUS. Don't tell me! D' you think that I don't know full well what I deserve?

HEGIO. But you may escape a part if not the whole of your desert.

STALAGMUS. Oh, it's little I'll escape! and much will happen to my hurt:

For I ran away and stole your son from you, and him I sold.

HEGIO. Oh, to whom?

STALAGMUS. To Theodoromedes of the house of Gold.

For ten pounds.

HEGIO. Good Heav'ns! Why, that's the father of Philocrates.

STALAGMUS. Yes, I know that quite as well as you do—better, if you please.

HEGIO. Jupiter in Heaven, save me, and preserve my darling son!

On your soul, Philocrates, come out! I want you. Make haste, run!

[Enter PHILOCRATES from the house.]

PHILOCRATES. Hegio, I am at your service.

HEGIO. This man says he sold my son To your father there in Elis for ten pounds.

PHILOCRATES. When was this done?

STALAGMUS. Twenty years ago.

PHILOCRATES. O, nonsense! Hegio, he's telling lies.

STALAGMUS. Either you or I am lying; for when you were little boys,

He was given you by your father to be trained along with you.

PHILOCRATES. Well, then, tell me what his name was, if this tale of yours is true.

STALAGMUS. Pægnium at first; in after time you called him Tyndarus.

PHILOCRATES. How it is that I don't know you?

STALAGMUS. Men are oft oblivious, And forget the names of those from whom they've nothing to expect.

PHILOCRATES. Then this child you sold my father, if your story is correct, Was bestowed on me as valet. Who was he?

STALAGMUS. My master's son.

HEGIO. Is he living, fellow?

STALAGMUS. Nay, I got the money; then I'd done.

HEGIO. What say you?

PHILOCRATES. That Tyndarus is your lost son! I give you joy!

So at least this fellow's statements make me think; for he's the boy Who received his education with myself all through our youth.

HEGIO. Well, I'm fortunate and wretched all at once, if you speak truth;

Wretched that I treated him so cruelly, if he's my son;

Oh, alas! I did both more and less than what I should have done!

How I'm vexed that I chastised him! Would that I could alter it!

See, he comes! and in a fashion that is anything but fit.

[Enter TYNDARUS from the quarries.]

TYNDARUS. Well, I've often seen in pictures all the torments of the damned; But I'm certain that you couldn't find a hell that's stuffed and crammed

With such tortures as those quarries.

There they've got a perfect cure

For all weariness; you simply drive it off by working more.

When I got there, just as wealthy fathers oft will give their boys

Starlings, goslings, quills to play with in the place of other toys,

So when I got there, a crow was given me as playing pretty!

Ah, my lord is at the door; and my old lord from Elis city

Has returned!

HEGIO. O hail, my long lost son!

TYNDARUS. What means this talk of "sons"?

Oh, I see why you pretend to be my father; yes, for once

You have acted like a parent, for you've brought me to the light.

PHILOCRATES. Hail, good Tyndarus!

TYNDARUS. All hail! for you I'm in this pretty plight.

PHILOCRATES. Ah! but now you shall be free and wealthy; for you must be told,

Hegio's your father. That slave stole you hence when four years old;

And then sold you to my father for ten pounds, who gave you me,

When we both were little fellows, that my valet you might be.

This man whom we brought from Elis has most certain proofs supplied.

TYNDARUS. What, am I his son?

PHILOCRATES. You are; your brother too you'll find inside.

TYNDARUS. Then you have brought back with you his son who was a prisoner?

PHILOCRATES. Yes, and he is in the house.

TYNDARUS. You've done right well and nobly, sir.

PHILOCRATES. Now you have a father; here's the thief who stole you when a boy.

TYNDARUS. Now that I'm grown up, he'll find that theft will bring him little joy.

PHILOCRATES. He deserves your vengeance.

TYNDARUS. Oh, I'll have him paid for what he's done.

Tell me though, are you my father really?

HEGIO. Yes, I am, my son.

TYNDARUS. Now at length it dawns upon me, and I seem, when I reflect, Yes, I seem to call to mind and somewhat vaguely recollect,

As if looking through a mist, my father's name was Hegio.

HEGIO. I am he!

PHILOCRATES. Then strike the fetters off your son and let him go! And attach them to this villain.

HEGIO. Certainly, it shall be so.

Let's go in, and let the smith be summoned to strike off your chains,

And to put them on this fellow.

STALAGMUS. Right! For they're my only gains.

EPILOGUE. Gentlemen, this play's been written on the lines of modesty;

Here are found no wiles of women, no gay lovers' gallantry;

Here are no affiliations, and no tricks for getting gold:

No young lover buys his mistress whilst his father is cajoled.

It's not often nowadays that plays are written of this kind,

In which good folk are made better. Now then, if it be your mind,

And we've pleased you and not bored you, kindly undertake our cause,

And to modestly award the prize with heartiest applause.

PROLOGUE

Since the old bard can not provoke our poet To leave the muse, and sit hereafter idle, He new invectives now prepares, in hopes To terrify him that he'll write no more: His former plays, maliciously he cries, Are lightly scribled, and the style is poor:	This he reports, because our poet never Brought on the stage a frantic youth that saw A hind in flight, and by the hounds pur- sued, Her case lamenting, and imploring aid: But was he conscious that his play's suc- cess Was thro the actor's merit, not his own,
---	---

He wou'd not, as he now offends, offend,
And then his plays wou'd meet with greater favour.

If any now shall say, or can suppose,
That, had not the old poet first provok'd
The young one to abuse him in return,
This had not known what prologues to have wrote,

Our poet answers thus; the prize to all
The servants of the muses is propos'd.
He strove to drive our poet from his studies,

And to subject him to the hand of need:
This strives to answer him, not to provoke:

Had his contention been in gentle words,
He, in return, had gently been reprov'd:
But let him think that, which he brought,
repay'd:

Henceforward I shall cease to speak of
him,

Since he continues to expose himself.

Now kindly to my humble suit attend:
I here present to ye a play that's new;
This comedy Phormio the Latins call,
And Epidicazomenos the Greeks:

Phormio 'tis call'd from the chief character,

The parasite, who shall the bus'ness guide,
If in the poet's favour ye're inclin'd.

Silent attend with an impartial ear,
That the same fortune now we may not
meet,

Which we before had, when our company
Was by the tumult from their places drove;

Which, by the actor's excellence, have since,

Assisted by your goodness, been restor'd.

ACT I

SCENE I

DAVUS. My good friend and countryman Geta came to me yesterday: I had a little money of his in my hands on an old account; which he desir'd me to make up; I have made it up, and am carrying it to him. I hear that his master's son is marry'd; I believe this is scrap'd together for a present to his bride. How unjust it is, that they who have but little shou'd be always adding something to the wealth of the rich! All that this poor fellow has sav'd, by little and little, out of his wages, cheating his belly at the same time for't, must go at once to her, who does not think with what difficulty 'twas got: besides Geta will be struck for another sum when his mistress is brought to bed, and for another when the son's birthday comes about next year, at which time he'll be initiated: all this goes to the mother, tho the boy's the pretence: but is n't that Geta I see?

SCENE II

[GETA and DAVUS.]

GETA. If a red-hair'd man shou'd enquire for me—

DAVUS. Say no more, he's at your elbow.

GETA. O! Davus, I was just coming to you.

DAVUS. Here, take it; 'tis all good;
there's exactly what I owe you. [He gives the money to GETA.]

GETA. I love you, and thank you for not neglecting me.

DAVUS. Especially as times go now; things are come to such a pass, that if a man pays what he owes, his creditor's to say he's much oblig'd to him: but why are you melancholly?

GETA. I? You do n't know what tribulation and danger I'm in.

DAVUS. What's the matter?

GETA. I'll tell you, if you can be secret.

DAVUS. Away, you fool: are you afraid to trust him with words that you've found faithful in money? What interest have I in betraying you?

GETA. Well, hear me.

DAVUS. I'm attentive.

GETA. Do you know Chremes, Davus, our old man's elder brother?

DAVUS. Know him? Yes.

GETA. Do you? And his son Phædria?

DAVUS. As well as I know you.

GETA. The old men both took a journey at one time, he that I've been speaking of to Lemnos, our old gentleman to

Cilicia to an old acquaintance there: this same acquaintance tempted our old man over by letters, promising him mountains of gold, and what not?

DAVUS. To one so rich, and who has more than he knows what to do with?

GETA. Hold your tongue: 'tis his temper.

DAVUS. O! If I was what I ought to be, I shou'd be a king.

GETA. When the old men went from hence, they both left me as governor over their sons.

DAVUS. O! Geta, 'tis a hard task you've taken on yourself.

GETA. That I know by experience: I am sure my genius was angry, or I had not been left with such a charge. I began at first to oppose 'em: in short, while I was faithful to the old men, my shoulders smarted: I consider'd, that 'tis folly to kick against the pricks: I then devoted myself entirely to my young masters, and did ev'ry thing they'd have me.

DAVUS. You knew how to make you market.

GETA. Our spark did not fly into any mischief at first; but Phædria was not long before he got his music-girl; and he became desperately fond of her; she was in the hands of a sordid rascal of a cock-bawd; and their fathers had taken care that they shou'd not have it in their pow'r to give anything: in the meanwhile he cou'd do nothing with her but feed his eyes, and dangle after her, and lead her to school and back again. We at our leisure gave Phædria our attendance: over against the school where this girl was educated was a barber's shop: there we usually waited till she came from school to go home: as we were sitting there, a young man came crying to us: we were surpris'd: we ask'd him what's the matter: "Poverty," says he, "never seem'd to me so sad and heavy a burden as it did just now. I have just seen a poor unhappy maid in the neighbourhood here, lamenting over her departed mother: she was plac'd just against her, without any kind friend, acquaintance, or relation, excepting one old woman, to assist her in the funeral: it griev'd my heart, to see such beauty in distress!" In short, he mov'd us all: then says Antipho immediately, "Shall we go and see her?" "Yes," says one, "let us go—pray shew us the way." We walk on, we come to the place, we behold her: fair she was indeed, and the more so, because she had no help from art to her beauty: loose was her hair, and bare her feet, she was dirty, ill dress'd, and all in tears, so that, had there not been a native force of beauty in her charms, they had been extinguish'd here. The spark that lov'd the music-girl only say'd, "She's pretty enough," but our—

DAVUS. I easily guess: he was wounded.

GETA. But can you guess how deeply? Observe the consequence. The next day he goes directly to the old woman; he intreats her to let him possess the girl: she refuses, and tells him 'tis unjust to do it, that she's a citizen of Athens, of a good character, and good parentage, if he has a mind to marry her, that he may lawfully do; he had a strong inclination to marry her, but was afraid of his father who's abroad.

DAVUS. Wou'd not his father give him leave, if he was come home?

GETA. He give him leave to marry a wench of no birth or fortune? Never.

DAVUS. What's come of it at last?

GETA. What's come of it? There's a certain parasite, one Phormio, a fellow of an undaunted assurance, who, the devil take him for it—

DAVUS. What has he done?

GETA. —Gave him the following counsel: "Tis a law," says he, "that young women, who are orphans, shall be marry'd to their nearest relations, and this same law obliges the men to marry them: I'll say you are her kinsman, and I'll be your prosecutor: I'll pretend to be her father's friend: we'll bring it before the judges: who her father was, who her mother, and how she's related to you, leave to my management, I'll have all ready, to carry it to my own advantage and in favor of me: when you disprove none of these articles, I shall gain my cause. Your father will come home: he'll have a pull with me: what then? We shall secure our woman."

DAVUS. A humourous piece of impudence!

GETA. He prevail'd on the young man: they set about it: they come into court: he marry'd her.

DAVUS. What's that you say?

GETA. 'Tis just as I tell you.

DAVUS. O! Geta, what will become of you?

GETA. I can't tell, by Hercules: this I know, whatever fortune lays upon me, I'll bear it patiently.

DAVUS. I'm glad to hear you say so: 'tis what we all ought to do.

GETA. All my hope is in myself.

DAVUS. I commend you.

GETA. Suppose I get one to intercede for me, this perhaps will be his speech—

"pray forgive him now, but if he does so again, I'll not speak a word for him." 'Tis well if he do n't add, "when I'm gone, e'en hang him."

DAVUS. What of the music-girl's hero? What exploit has he in hand?

GETA. Nothing worth speaking of.

DAVUS. Perhaps he has it not in his pow'r to give much.

GETA. He can give nothing but hope.

DAVUS. Is his father come home, or not?

GETA. Not yet.

DAVUS. Well, when d' y' expect your old man?

GETA. I do n't know certainly; but I hear'd just now that there's a letter come from him, and left at the port: I'll go for it.

DAVUS. Have you any more to say to me, Geta?

GETA. Nothing, but that I wish you well. [DAVUS goes.] Here boy. Will nobody come out? [A boy comes.] Take this, and give it to Dorcius.

[He gives the money to the boy and goes.]

SCENE III

[ANTIPHO and PHÆDRIA.]

ANTIPHO. That it shou'd come to this, Phædria, that I shou'd be afraid of my father when I do but think of his return, of a father who wishes me so well! Had I not been an inconsiderate fool, I might have expected him as I ought.

PHÆDRIA. What's the matter?

ANTIPHO. Is that a question for you to ask, who was my confidant in so bold an enterprise? O! that it had never enter'd into Phormio's head to persuade me to it, and that he had not drove me in my fit of love on what has prov'd the source of my misfortunes! If I had not obtain'd her, then I shou'd have been uneasy some few days; but I shou'd have escap'd this perplexity of mind, which ev'ry day torments me—

PHÆDRIA. I hear you.

ANTIPHO. —While I'm ev'ry moment in expectation of his return, who will force me from the arms of my belov'd.

PHÆDRIA. 'Tis a grievance to some that they can't have what they love; satiety's the root of your complaint. Antipho, you're too rich in love; for such, by Hercules, is your situation, 'tis worth our warmest wishes and endeavours. By heav'n, cou'd I possess my love so long, I'd purchase it with death, nor think it dear: do but consider, what I endure amidst my present want, and what you gather from your plenteous store; not to mention your good fortune, in having gain'd, according to your will, an honest wellbred wife, whose character has never yet been stain'd: you're a happy man, if you had but this one thing, a mind to bear your fortune as you ought; you'd feel how 'tis, if you had to do with such a cock-bawd as I have: but 'tis in the nature of us all to murmur at our own condition.

ANTIPHO. But, on the contrary, Phædria, you are the fortunate man in my eye now; in whom is lodg'd the pow'r without constraint of consulting what pleases you best, to keep her, love her, or to leave her: I'm unhappily fall'n into such a strait, that I have no right to turn her off, nor pow'r to keep her:—but what's here? Is n't that Geta that comes running hither? 'Tis he himself: I'm afraid, lest he shou'd bring some news now that wo' n't please me.

SCENE IV

[GETA, ANTIPHO, and PHÆDRIA.]

GETA [to himself, not seeing them].
Thou'rt undone, Geta, unless thy invention can relieve thee soon, so many sudden misfortunes hang over thy head now when thou'rt ill prepar'd for 'em; which I know neither how to ward against, nor to get myself out of; for the boldness of our proceedings can't be a secret long; which, if not cunningly guarded against, will fall heavily on me or my master.

ANTIPHO. What's the meaning of his confusion here? [To PHÆDRIA.]

GETA. Then I've scarcely a minute to turn myself about in, my master's so near.

[To himself.]

ANTIPHO. What mischief's forwards?

GETA. Which when he shall hear of, how shall I oppose his anger? Suppose I pretend to speak? I shall enrage him: what, if I say nothing? I shall provoke him: how if I attempt to clear myself? 'Twill be labour in vain. Alas! what an unhappy fellow I am! While I tremble for myself, I am as much on the rack for Antipho; I am concern'd for him; I fear on his account; 'tis he that detains me; for, was it not for him, I shou'd have taken care enough of myself, and have been reveng'd on the old man's anger; I shou'd have scrap'd up something for my journey, and have march'd off directly.

[To himself, not seeing them.]

ANTIPHO. What journey is he making, or what is he scraping up?

[To PHÆDRIA.]

GETA. But where shall I find Antipho? Or where shall I look for him?

[To himself, not seeing them.]

PHÆDRIA. He names you.

[To ANTIPHO.]

ANTIPHO. I'm afraid he's the messenger of some very ill news, tho I do n't know what. [To PHÆDRIA.]

PHÆDRIA. Ah! Have you loss'd your senses? [To ANTIPHO.]

GETA. I'll make the best of my way homewards: 'tis most likely he's there.

[To himself, not seeing them.]

PHÆDRIA. Let's call the fellow back.

[To ANTIPHO.]

ANTIPHO. Stop, you, immediately.

[To GETA.]

GETA. Huy, huy! You speak with authority, whoever you are.

[Hearing, but not seeing him.]

ANTIPHO. Geta. [Aloud.]

GETA. 'Tis the very person I wanted to meet. [Seeing him.]

ANTIPHO. Pray let us know what you're so full of; and tell us in a word, if you can. [To GETA.]

GETA. So I will.

ANTIPHO. Out with it.

GETA. There's now put into port—

ANTIPHO. Who, my father?

GETA. You're right.

ANTIPHO. I'm ruin'd.

PHÆDRIA. Pshaw!

ANTIPHO. What shall I do?

PHÆDRIA. What say you? [To GETA.]

GETA. That I saw his father your uncle.

ANTIPHO. Alas! what remedy shall I find now to this sudden evil? If such my fortune, my dear Phany, that I must be torn from you, let me part with life and you together.

GETA. Therefore as the affair stands, Antipho, you have the more need to look sharp about you: fortune helps the brave.

ANTIPHO. I'm quite confounded.

GETA. But now you've most occasion to exert yourself, Antipho; for if your father perceives you to be afraid, he'll conclude you're in fault.

PHÆDRIA. That's true.

ANTIPHO. I can't change my nature.

GETA. What wou'd you do if you had now a more difficult affair on your hands?

ANTIPHO. Since I can't go thro this, I shou'd be less able to bear that.

GETA. Here's nothing in this, Phædria;

let him go. Why do we labour in vain here? I'll be gone.

PHÆDRIA. So will I.

ANTIPHO. Pray now, suppose I put on a countenance, will it do?

GETA. You do but trifle.

ANTIPHO. Look in my face: hum! Will this do?

GETA. No.

ANTIPHO. What say you to this?

GETA. That will almost do.

ANTIPHO. What to this?

GETA. That will do: ay, keep that; and answer him word for word, and give him as good as he brings; and don't let him bluster you out of countenance in his passion.

ANTIPHO. Very well.

GETA. Say you was forc'd, against your will, by the law, and decree of the court: do you understand me? But what old man's that, which I see at the farther end of the street?

ANTIPHO. 'Tis he himself: I can't stand my ground.

GETA. Ah! what are you doing? Where are you going, Antipho? Stay I say.

ANTIPHO. I know myself and my offence: I leave my Phany and my life to your care. [ANTIPHO goes.]

SCENE V

[PHÆDRIA and GETA.]

PHÆDRIA. What's to be done now, Geta?

GETA. You'll have a chiding now; but hanging will be my lot, if I'm not mistaking: but what we just now here advis'd Antipho to do, we must do ourselves, Phædria.

PHÆDRIA. Leave out must; and command me what to do.

GETA. Do you remember what you say'd, at the beginning of this enterprise, as a defence necessary to be made, that their cause was just, plain, binding, and the fairest that could be?

PHÆDRIA. I remember.

GETA. Ah! now we have need of it indeed, or, if we cou'd have it, a better, and more subtle one.

PHÆDRIA. I'll take care about it.

GETA. Now go you up to him first: I'll lie ready to relieve you, if you shall happen to want auxiliaries.

PHÆDRIA. Come on.

SCENE VI

[DEMIPHO, GETA, and PHÆDRIA.]

DEMIPHO. Is it so, is Antipho marry'd without my consent? Shou'd not my authority—but I wave authority—shou'd not he have fear'd my displeasure at least? Is he not asham'd? Audacious act! O! Geta, thou tutor!

[To himself, not seeing them.]

GETA. He's out at last.

[Aside to PHÆDRIA.]

DEMIPHO. I wonder what they'll say to me, or what excuse they'll find.

[To himself, not seeing them.]

GETA. I've found one already: look you for another. [Aside to PHÆDRIA.]

DEMIPHO. Will he excuse himself by saying, "I did it against my will, the law compell'd me?" I hear him, and allow it to be so. [To himself, not seeing them.]

GETA. Well say'd. [Aside.]

DEMIPHO. But knowingly, without speaking a word, to give up his cause to his adversaries! Did the law compel him to that too?

[To himself, not seeing them.]

PHÆDRIA. That strikes home.

[Aside to GETA.]

GETA. I'll find an excuse for that: leave it to me: [Aside to PHÆDRIA.]

DEMIPHO. I know not what to do, because this has happen'd beyond my expectation or belief: I'm so provok'd, that I am scarcely capable of thinking: ev'ry one therefore, in the height of his prosperity, should then think within himself how he cou'd bear adversity; let him always, as he returns home, consider thus, I may meet with dangers, losses, a disobedient son, a dead wife, or a sick daughter, and these are misfortunes common to all men, there's nothing new or strange in either of them, therefore whatever happens beyond his expectation he should account as gain.

[To himself, not seeing them.]

GETA. O! Phædria, 'tis scarcely to be believ'd how much wiser I am than my master: I have consider'd of all the inconveniences which can happen to me, if my master shou'd return, I concluded that I should be condemn'd to perpetual imprisonment to grind there, to be well drubbed, to be fettered, or sentenced to work in the fields; neither of which wou'd be new or strange to me; therefore whatever happens beyond my expectation I shall account as gain: but why do n't you go up to the old gentleman, and speak him fair?

[Aside to PHÆDRIA.]

DEMIPHO. There's Phædria my brother's son, I see, coming this way. [To himself.]

PHÆDRIA. Uncle, your servant.

DEMIPHO. Your servant: but where's Antipho?

PHÆDRIA. I'm glad to see you safe return'd.

DEMIPHO. I believe you: but give me an answer to what I ask.

PHÆDRIA. He's very well; and he's not far off; but are all things as you'd have 'em?

DEMIPHO. I wish they were.

PHÆDRIA. What's the matter?

DEMIPHO. Do you ask, Phædria? Ye 've patch'd up a fine marriage here in my absence.

PHÆDRIA. O, what, are you angry with him for that?

GETA. He manages him dextrously!

[To himself.]

DEMIPHO. Ought I not to be angry with him? I wish he'd come into my presence, that he may see now how he has provok'd a good-natured father by his offence.

PHÆDRIA. But he has done nothing, uncle, to merit your displeasure.

DEMIPHO. See how they hang together; they're all alike; know one, you know all.

PHÆDRIA. Indeed you mistake us.

DEMIPHO. Let one commit a fault, and the other's ready to defend him; if one's here, the other's not far off; so they help one another.

GETA. The old man has spoke the truth of them without knowing it.

[To himself.]

DEMIPHO. For if it was not so, you wou'd not stand up for him, Phædria.

PHÆDRIA. Uncle, if Antipho had been so much his own enemy as to have been guilty of any fault, contrary to his interest or honour, I would not open my lips in his behalf, but give him over to what he might deserve; but supposing any one, by his malicious stratagems, has lay'd a snare for us youth, and has caught us in it, are we to be blam'd or the judges, who often thro envy take from the rich, and as often thro pity add to the poor?

GETA. If I did not know the affair, I shou'd believe what he's saying to be true.

[Aside.]

DEMIPHO. How should any judge know your right, when you don't speak a word for yourself, as he did not?

PHÆDRIA. He behav'd like a gentleman; when he came before the judges, he was unable to utter what he had premeditated, his modesty and fear so confounded him.

GETA. Well defended: but why don't I go directly up to the old man? [To himself.] Your servant, Sir: I'm glad to see you safe return'd.

DEMIPHO. Oh! thou excellent guardian, your servant, thou prop of our family, to whose care I committed my son when I went from hence.

GETA. I hear you have been accusing us all undeservedly, and me most undeservedly of all; for what wou'd you have me do for you in this affair? The laws don't allow a servant to plead, nor is his evidence taken.

DEMIPHO. Well, be it so: grant besides that the young man was foolishly fearful, I allow it, you're but a servant; however, if she was ever so near related, there was no occasion for him to marry her; but, as the law requires, you shou'd have giv'n her a portion; and she might look out for another husband: what reason had he to take a beggar home?

GETA. We did not want reason, but money.

DEMIPHO. He shou'd have borrow'd it anywhere.

GETA. Anywhere? Nothing more easily said.

DEMIPHO. If he cou'd not borrow it on other terms, he shou'd have took it up on interest.

GETA. Huy! that's well said: as if any one would lend him money, while you are alive.

DEMIPHO. No, no, it must not be so, it never can: shall I suffer her to live with him one day? There's no temptation for it. I wish that fellow was brought before me, or that I knew where he lives.

GETA. You mean Phormio.

DEMIPHO. The woman's friend.

GETA. I'll bring him here presently.

DEMIPHO. Where's Antipho now?

GETA. Within.

DEMIPHO. Go, Phædria, look for him, and bring him hither.

PHÆDRIA. I'll go directly.

GETA. Yes to Pamphila. [Aside.]

[PHÆDRIA and GETA go.]

SCENE VII

[DEMIPHO.]

I'll go home and thank the Gods for my return; then I'll go to the market, and summons some of my friends to be present in this affair, that I may not be unprovided if Phormio comes.

ACT II

SCENE I

[PHORMIO and GETA.]

PHORMIO. Say you so, is he gone, and afraid to shew his face to his father?

GETA. 'Tis even so.

PHORMIO. And is Phanium left to herself, say you?

GETA. Neither better nor worse.

PHORMIO. And is the old man in a rage?

GETA. Yes, and in a great one.

PHORMIO. The burden, Phormio, must lie on your shoulders: you've a hard crust to mumble; you must down with it: set about it.

GETA. Pray do.

PHORMIO. Suppose he should question me about—

GETA. Our hope is in you.

PHORMIO. Ay, but consider, what if he replies?

GETA. You forced us.

PHORMIO. Well, I think that's right.

GETA. Come, give us your assistance.

PHORMIO. Let the old man come; I'll warrant you I am provided for him.

GETA. What do you intend?

PHORMIO. What, but secure Phanium's marriage, and free Antipho from what he's accused of, and take all the old man's anger on myself?

GETA. You've a stout heart of your own, and we are much oblig'd to you: but I'm very much afraid, Phormio, lest you draw the string till it breaks at last.

PHORMIO. Ah! there's no danger of that; I'm experienc'd in those things; I tread sure. How many men d' y' think I have worried to death, strangers and citizens? The oftener I've try'd, the more my hand's in. Tell me how, did you ever hear of an action of battery against me?

GETA. How have you escap'd?

PHORMIO. Because the net is never spread for such birds as the hawk or the kite, which are mischievous to us, but for such as do us no harm; because these are precious morsels, the other are not worth the labour: so they who have anything to lose are most in danger; they know I've nothing; but they'll commit you to prison, say you; to which I answer they do not chuse to maintain such a devouring fellow as I am; and, in my opinion, they'll shew their wisdom, in not doing me so good an office in return for a bad one.

GETA. He can never thank you enough for your favour.

PHORMIO. O! nobody can thank a prince enough for his royal favour. Is it not pleasant for you to come at free cost, anointed, and fresh from the bath, with an easy mind, while another has the trouble and expense? While you have what you chuse, he's fretting himself, you laugh, drink the first cup, and take the first place, when the dubious entertainment is serv'd up.

GETA. Dubious, why dubious?

PHORMIO. Because you're doubtful what to eat of most:—when you consider how delicious and dear these things are, does not the master of the feast appear a very God to you?

GETA. Here comes the old man: be on your guard: the first onset's the fiercest; if you sustain that, you may wind him about as you will afterwards.

SCENE II

[DEMIPHO, GETA, PHORMIO, HEGIO, CRATINUS, and CRITO.]

DEMIPHO. Did ye ever hear of any one being more injuriously used than I am in this? Pray assist me.

[To the Advocates.]

GETA. He's in a passion.

[Aside to PHORMIO.]

PHORMIO. Do you but mind your cue; I'll rouse him presently. [Aside to GETA.]—Good Gods! does Demipho deny that Phanium's related to him? Does Demipho deny it?

[Aloud to GETA.]

GETA. He does deny it.

[Aloud.]

DEMIPHO. This is he, I think, that I've to do with. Keep close to me.

[To the Advocates.]

PHORMIO. And that he does not know who her father was?

[Aloud to GETA.]

GETA. He denies it.

[Aloud.]

PHORMIO. Nor who Stilpho was?

[Aloud to GETA.]

GETA. He knows nothing of him.

[Aloud.]

PHORMIO. Because she was left destitute, poor girl, her father's not known, and she's slighted: see, what avarice can make some people do!

[Aloud to GETA.]

GETA. If you reflect upon my master for avarice, I'll give you your own.

[Aloud to PHORMIO.]

DEMIPHO. The impudence of the fellow! Does he come on purpose to accuse me?

[Aside to the Advocates.]

PHORMIO. There's no reason to be angry with the young man, if he had no great knowledge of him; for the poor man was old, and liv'd by his labour, almost confining himself to the country: where he farm'd a piece of ground of my father: the old man has often told me that this kinsman of his slighted him; but what a man did he slight? The best man that I ever saw in my life.

[Aloud to GETA.]

GETA. See that you say no more than you can prove of yourself and him.

[Aloud to PHORMIO.]

PHORMIO. Go hang yourself; if I did not think as well of him as I report him, I'd never get such ill will to our family as I do for her sake that he so ungenerously slights now.

[Aloud to GETA.]

GETA. Do you still abuse my master in his absence, you villain?

[Aloud to PHORMIO.]

PHORMIO. 'Tis no more than he deserves.

[Aloud to GETA.]

GETA. Say you so, you jailbird?

[Aloud to PHORMIO.]

DEMIPHO. Geta.

GETA. You're an invader of other people's rights, a perverter of the laws.

[Aloud to PHORMIO, pretending not to hear DEMIPHO.]

DEMIPHO. Geta.

PHORMIO. Answer him.

[Aside to GETA.]

GETA. Who's that? O! is't you, Sir?

DEMIPHO. Do n't talk to him.

GETA. He has been abusing you behind your back, without ceasing, in such a manner as you don't deserve, though he does.

DEMIPHO. Well, say no more. [To GETA.]—First, young man, if you'll vouchsafe me an answer, I desire to know, with your good leave, who that friend of yours was, and how he claim'd relation to me.

[To PHORMIO.]

PHORMIO. So you examine me, as if you did not know.

DEMIPHO. I know?

PHORMIO. Yes.

DEMIPHO. I deny it; you, who affirm it, rub up my memory.

PHORMIO. Huy, huy, as if you did not know your first cousin!

DEMIPHO. You kill me: tell me his name.

PHORMIO. His name?

DEMIPHO. To be sure. Why don't you tell it?

PHORMIO. I'm ruin'd, by Hercules, I've forgot his name. [Aside.]

DEMIPHO. Ha, what's that you say?

PHORMIO. Geta, if you remember the name I told you just now, tell it me. [Aside to GETA.]—I'll not tell you, as if you did not know! You come to try me.

[To DEMIPHO.]

DEMIPHO. I try you?

GETA. Stilpho. [Aside to PHORMIO.]

PHORMIO. What is't to me? 'Tis Stilpho.

DEMIPHO. What's his name, say you?

PHORMIO. Stilpho, I say, you knew him.

DEMIPHO. I knew no such person, nor was any of that name related to me.

PHORMIO. Can you say so? Are n't you ashamed of this? But if he had left an estate of ten talents—

DEMIPHO. The Gods confound you.

PHORMIO. —You'd have been the first to have trac'd your family from generation to generation.

DEMIPHO. It may be so; then, if I had gone about it, I could have told how she was related to me: now do you the same: tell me how she's my relation.

GETA. Well said, master. [To DEMIPHO.]—You, Sir, take care of yourself.

[To PHORMIO.]

PHORMIO. I made it appear plain enough, where I ought, before the judges: if it was false, why did not your son then refute it?

DEMIPHO. What tell you me of my son, whose folly can't be sufficiently expressed?

PHORMIO. But do you, who are so very wise, make your appearance in court, and get the same cause tried over again, since you are sovereign here, and you only can obtain a second decree in the same cause.

DEMIPHO. Though I'm much injured, yet, rather than follow lawsuits, or hear you prate, I'll give you fifteen guineas with her, which is the portion that is requir'd by law supposing she was my relation.

PHORMIO. Ha, ha, ha, a pretty sort of a man.

DEMIPHO. What's the matter? Is there anything unreasonable in what I propose? Can't I obtain this, which is common justice?

PHORMIO. Is it come to that, pray, does the law require, after you have used a citizen like a whore, that you should pay her and turn her off? Is it not otherwise, is it not requir'd, to prevent her from bringing shame on herself through poverty, that she should be married to her next relation, that she may have to do only with him, which you are against?

DEMIPHO. Yes, to her next relation; but what have we to do with that? Why must we be concerned?

PHORMIO. O, O, 'tis all over, as they say, you can't try it again.

DEMIPHO. I'll not try it again: yet I'll not drop it till I have gone thro with it.

PHORMIO. Words, words.

DEMIPHO. See if I don't make 'em good.

PHORMIO. In short, Demipho, I've nothing to do with you; 'tis your son that's cast, not you; for you are a little too old for a young bride.

DEMIPHO. Imagine that 'tis he that says all which I now say to you, or I'll thrust him and his wife out of doors.

GETA. He's nettled.

[Aside to PHORMIO.]

PHORMIO. You'll think better on't.

DEMIPHO. Are you so provided to do all you can against me, you unlucky knave?

PHORMIO. He's afraid of us, though he endeavours so earnestly to conceal it.

[Aside to GETA.]

GETA. You have begun successfully.

[Aside to PHORMIO.]

PHORMIO. Why don't you bear what can't be avoided like a man? 'Twill be more to your advantage, if you end it amicably with us.

DEMIPHO. Amicably with you? Why shou'd I see you, or hear your impertinence?

PHORMIO. If you and she can agree, you'll have a comfort to your old age: have some regard to your years.

DEMIPHO. Do you take her for a comfort.

PHORMIO. Be not in such a passion.

DEMIPHO. Observe me: we have had words enough; unless you take the wench away quickly, I'll turn her out: I have said it, Phormio.

PHORMIO. If you offer to handle her otherwise than becomes a gentlewoman, I'll bring a heavy action against you: I have said it, Demipho. [Aloud to DEMIPHO.]—If you want me, you'll find me at home. [Aside to GETA.]

GETA. I understand you.

[PHORMIO goes.]

SCENE III

[DEMIPHO, GETA, HEGIO, CRATINUS, and CRITO.]

DEMIPHO. What care and anxiety my son brings upon me, by intangling himself and me in this marriage! and he does not come near me, that I may know at least what he has to say for himself, or what his sentiments are now.—Go you, and see if he isn't come home yet. [To GETA.]

GETA. I will.

[GETA goes.]

SCENE IV

[DEMIPHO, HEGIO, CRATINUS, and CRITO.]

DEMIPHO. Ye see how this affair stands: what must I do? Your opinion, Hegio.

HEGIO. Whose, mine? Let Cratinus speak first, if you think fit.

DEMIPHO. Your opinion, Cratinus.

CRATINUS. Mine?

DEMIPHO. Yes.

CRATINUS. I'd have you do what is most to your interest in this affair: I think that what your son did in your absence ought in justice and equity to be made void; and that's what you'll obtain: I've given my opinion.

DEMIPHO. Now, Hegio, your opinion.

HEGIO. I believe he has spoke his best; but so it is, so many men so many minds; ev'ry one has his way: I think what the law has done can't be revoked; and 'tis scandalous to attempt it.

DEMIPHO. Crito, your opinion.

CRITO. I think it requires more time to consider of it: 'tis a weighty affair.

HEGIO. Do you want any more with us?

DEMIPHO. Ye 've done enough: [The Advocates go.].—I am now more at a loss than I was before.

SCENE V

[GETA and DEMIPHO.]

GETA. He's not come home, they say.

DEMIPHO. I wait for my brother, whose advice I'll follow in this affair: I'll go and enquire at the waterside, to learn what tidings I can of him.

[DEMIPHO goes.]

GETA. And I'll look out for Antipho, that I may inform him of what's done here: but here he comes just as I want him.

SCENE VI

[ANTIPHO and GETA.]

ANTIPHO. Indeed, Antipho, your want of courage is much to be blamed; could you go away, and leave your life and safety in the hands of other persons? Did you believe other people would be more careful of your affairs than yourself? However other things went, you ought certainly to consider her that you left at home, and not let her suffer any harm, and be deceived through her confidence in you, whose hope, poor creature, and all whose interest, now depend on you alone.

[To himself, not seeing GETA.]

GETA. And indeed, master, we did not spare you in your absence for going from us.

ANTIPHO. I was looking for you.

GETA. But we were never the more negligent for that.

ANTIPHO. Pray tell me how my interests and my fortunes stand: has my father any suspicion?

GETA. Not yet.

ANTIPHO. Is there any hope left?

GETA. I don't know.

ANTIPHO. How!

GETA. But Phædría did all he could for you.

ANTIPHO. There's nothing new in that.

GETA. Then Phormio has been as hearty and as active in this as in other affairs.

ANTIPHO. What has he done?

GETA. He was too hard for the old gentleman as angry as he was.

ANTIPHO. O! brave Phormio.

GETA. I did what I could too.

ANTIPHO. My Geta, I love ye all.

GETA. The first conference was as I tell you: the affair's in a good situation at present; and your father now waits for your uncle's arrival, before he proceeds any farther.

ANTIPHO. What does he wait for him for?

GETA. He said that he'd be directed by his advice in this affair.

ANTIPHO. How I dread my uncle's return now, Geta! For by his sentence only, as you tell me, I must live or die.

GETA. Here comes Phædría.

ANTIPHO. Where?

GETA. See, he's coming from his usual place of exercise.

SCENE VII

[PHÆDRÍA, DORIO, ANTIPHO, and GETA.]

PHÆDRÍA. Prithee hear me, Dorio.

[Not seeing ANTIPHO and GETA.]

DORIO. Not I.

PHÆDRÍA. A little.

DORIO. Don't trouble me.

PHÆDRÍA. Hear what I have to say.

DORIO. But 'tis tiresome to hear the same a thousand times over and over.

PHÆDRÍA. But you'll be pleas'd with what I'm going to say now.

DORIO. Well, let's hear.

PHÆDRÍA. Can't I prevail on you to stay three days longer? Where are you going?

DORIO. I should wonder if you had offered anything new to me.

ANTIPHO. The bawd, I fear, is drawing an old house over his head.

[Aside to GETA.]

GETA. I fear so too.

[Aside to ANTIPHO.]

PHÆDRÍA. You do not believe me.

DORIO. There you're right.

PHÆDRÍA. Upon my credit.

DORIO. Mere flams.

PHÆDRÍA. You'll have no reason to repent, you'll confess so afterwards.

DORIO. Words, words.

PHÆDRÍA. Believe me, you'll be glad of it; 'tis true, by Hercules.

DORIO. 'Tis all a dream.

PHÆDRÍA. Do but try, 'tis not long.

DORIO. The same story over again.

PHÆDRÍA. I'll acknowledge you for a kinsman, a father, a friend, a—

DORIO. 'Tis all but talk.

PHÆDRÍA. That you can be so hardened and inexorable, to be moved neither by pity nor entreaty!

DORIO. That you can be so inconsiderate and ignorant, Phædría, to think by your fine speeches to wheedle me out of what's my own for nothing!

ANTIPHO. I pity him. [Aside to GETA.]

PHÆDRÍA. Ah! what he says is too true. [To himself.]

GETA. How they both keep to their characters! [Aside to ANTIPHO.]

PHÆDRÍA. When Antipho is in full possession of his love, that I should have this plague!

ANTIPHO. Ah! Phædría, what's the matter?

PHÆDRÍA. O! fortunate Antipho!

ANTIPHO. I fortunate?

PHÆDRÍA. Yes, in having what you love at home, and in not having to do with such a villain as this.

ANTIPHO. What I love at home? Yes, as the saying is, I have a wolf by the ears; for I know not how to let her go, nor how to keep her.

DORIO. That's my case with this spark.

ANTIPHO. O! brave bawd, don't depart from your character. [To the bawd.]—What has he done at last?

[To PHÆDRIA.]

PHÆDRIA. Done? Like an inhuman fellow, he has sold my Pamphila.

GETA. What? Sold her?

ANTIPHO. Sold her, say you?

PHÆDRIA. He has sold her.

DORIO. A horrid crime, to sell a wench that I paid for!

PHÆDRIA. I can't persuade him to break off with the other, and stay three days, till I get the money which my friends promis'd: [To ANTIPHO.]—if I don't give it you then, don't stay an hour longer.

[To the bawd.]

DORIO. You stun me.

ANTIPHO. 'Tis but a little time that he requires, Dorio: be prevail'd upon: he'll make it doubly up to you, and you'll deserve it.

DORIO. These are but words.

ANTIPHO. Will you endure that Pamphila should be carried from this town? [To PHÆDRIA.]—Can you be so hard-hearted as to tear these lovers from one another?

[To the bawd.]

DORIO. 'Tis neither I, nor you, that do it.

GETA. May the Gods deny you nothing that you deserve.

DORIO. I have, contrary to my disposition, indulged you many months, you've promised, and whimpered, but never performed anything; now I have found one that proceeds in quite a different strain, who can pay without sniveling; give place to your betters.

ANTIPHO. Certainly, if I remember rightly, there was a day fixed formerly, in which you was to let him have her.

[To the bawd.]

PHÆDRIA. There was so.

DORIO. Do I deny it?

ANTIPHO. Is that day pass'd?

DORIO. No, but this is come before it.

ANTIPHO. Aren't you ashamed of your roguery?

DORIO. Not when 'tis to my advantage.

GETA. Dirty rascal!

PHÆDRIA. Dorio, d'y' think you do as you ought?

DORIO. 'Tis my custom, if you like me, use me.

ANTIPHO. Do you impose upon him thus?

DORIO. Rather, Antipho, he imposes upon me; for he knew me to be such a person; I thought him another sort of a man; he has deceived me; I am just the same with him that I always was: but yet, however the affair stands, I'll do this; the captain promised to bring me the money early to-morrow; if you bring it before he does, Phædria, I'll keep up my custom, and prefer the first comer: so adieu.

[DORIO goes.]

SCENE VIII

[PHÆDRIA, ANTIPHO, and GETA.]

PHÆDRIA. What shall I do? How shall I now, that am not worth a straw, raise the money for him so suddenly? If he could but have been prevailed upon to stay three days, I was promised it then.

ANTIPHO. Shall we forsake him, Geta, in his distress, that, according to your own report, assisted me so friendly just now? Rather let us try to return the favor, now there's occasion.

GETA. I know it is but just that we should.

ANTIPHO. Set about it therefore, you are the only man that can save him.

GETA. What can I do?

ANTIPHO. Raise the money.

GETA. With all my heart; but tell me how.

ANTIPHO. My father's at hand.

GETA. I know that; but what then?

ANTIPHO. Pshaw, a word to the wise is enough.

GETA. Say you so?

ANTIPHO. Yes.

GETA. Very fine advice, by Hercules! Why don't you go about it? Shan't I have reason to triumph, if I escape on the account of your marriage, but you must now insist on my bringing one misfortune on the back of another over my head, for his sake too?

ANTIPHO. What he says is true.

PHÆDRIA. What? Do you look upon me as a stranger, Geta?

GETA. By no means; but is it of no consideration, now we have enraged the old man against us all, whether we provoke him so that no room can be left for entreaty?

PHÆDRIA. Shall another man bear her from my eyes to an unknown land? Alas! Speak to me, Antipho, and consider me, while you may, and while I'm with ye.

ANTIPHO. Why? What are you about now? Tell me.

PHÆDRIA. Whatever part of the world she's carried to, I'm resolved to follow her, or to perish.

GETA. Good luck go with you; yet I'd advise you not to be in a hurry.

ANTIPHO. See if you can assist him, do.

GETA. Assist him? How?

ANTIPHO. Pray try, lest he should do more or less, Geta, than we'd wish, and which we should be sorry for afterwards.

GETA. I'm trying.— He's secure, I believe; but I'm afraid that I shall suffer for't.

ANTIPHO. Don't be afraid: we'll share your fortune with you, be it good or bad.

GETA. How much money d'y' want? Tell me. [To PHÆDRIA.]

PHÆDRIA. But little more than ninety guineas.

GETA. Ninety guineas? Ah! she's very dear, Phædria.

PHÆDRIA. She's very cheap at that price.

GETA. Well, well, I'll get 'em.

PHÆDRIA. There's a good fellow!

[Hugging GETA.]

GETA. Let me go, hands off.

PHÆDRIA. I want the money now.

GETA. You shall have it presently; but I must have Phormio's assistance.

ANTIPHO. He's ready; lay what burden on him you will, and he'll bear it: he's of all men truest to his friend.

GETA. Therefore let us hasten to him.

ANTIPHO. Have ye any farther occasion for me?

GETA. No; but go home, and comfort that poor creature, who is now, I know, quite dispirited with fear. Why d'y' stay?

ANTIPHO. There's nothing that I can do with so good a will.

PHÆDRIA. How do you propose doing that?

GETA. I'll tell you as we go; but make haste from hence.

ACT III

SCENE I

[DEMIPHO and CREMES.]

DEMIPHO. Why, what did you go to Lemnos for, Chremes? Have you brought your daughter with you?

CREMES. No.

DEMIPHO. How so?

CREMES. Her mother, seeing that I stayed here longer than ordinary, and that the girl was of an age that required a husband, is reported to have come here with all her family in search of me.

DEMIPHO. Pray what detained you so long there then, after you had heard it?

CREMES. A disease.

DEMIPHO. How did you get it? Or what was it?

CREMES. There's a question! Old age itself is a disease: but the captain who brought them over told me that they arrived safe.

DEMIPHO. Have you heard what has happened to my son in my absence, Chremes?

CREMES. 'Tis that which now makes me uncertain what to do; for if I should marry her to a stranger, I must tell him how she's my daughter, and who's her mother: I know that you wish me as well as I do myself; but if one who was no relation before should marry her, he'll be silent as long as there's a good understanding betwixt us; but if he begins to have no value for me, I shall wish he did not know so much of me: and I'm afraid it should come to my wife's knowledge; and should it, I've nothing to do but to brush off, and leave my house; for I'm the only friend I have at home.

DEMIPHO. I know it; and that's what troubles me; nor will I desist, till I have performed all that I've promised you.

SCENE II

[GETA, CHREMES, and DEMIPHO.]

GETA [to himself, not seeing CHREMES and DEMIPHO]. Surely there never was a cunninger fellow than Phormio: I went to him, to inform him that money must be had, and how it might be got: he understood me before I had spoke half what I had to say: he rejoiced, commended me, enquired after the old man, and thanked the Gods that he had an opportunity to shew himself as much Phædría's friend as Antípho's: I bade him wait for me at the market, where I would bring the old man to him: but here he is: who is that behind him? Egad, 'tis Phædría's father: but why, like a beast, should I be afraid? Because I have two in my power now to choose instead of one? 'Tis better, I think, to have two strings to a bow: I'll set upon him that I first proposed; if I get it from him, 'tis well; if I make nothing of him, then I must attack this newcomer.

SCENE III

[ANTIPHO, GETA, CHREMES, and DEMIPHO.]

ANTIPHO. I expect Geta here:—but surely that's my uncle standing with my father there: Death! I'm in pain to know what effect his arrival will have on my father in my affair! [To himself.]

GETA. I'll go up to 'em: [To himself.]
—welcome home, Master Chremes.

CHREMES. How is't, Geta?

GETA. I'm glad to see you safe returned.

CHREMES. I believe you.

GETA. How go affairs?

CHREMES. I meet with many alterations here, according to custom.

GETA. True: have you heard what has happened to Antípho?

CHREMES. Yes, all.

GETA. Have you informed him. [To DEMIPHO.]—What a shameful thing 'tis, Chremes, to be so imposed upon!

DEMIPHO. That's what I was talking to him about now.

GETA. By Hercules, as I was thinking seriously of it with myself, I believe I found a remedy to this evil.

CHREMES. What is it, Geta?

DEMIPHO. What remedy?

GETA. As I went from you, I happened to meet Phormio.

CHREMES. Who, Phormio?

GETA. The same that took the young woman's part.

CHREMES. I know whom you mean.

GETA. I thought it proper to pump him first. I take him aside: "Phormio," quoth I, "why don't we see and make an end of this business by fair means rather than by foul? My master's a generous man, and hates strife; I can assure you that all his friends have unanimously advised him to turn her out."

ANTIPHO. What is the fellow about, or what will this come to at last?

[To himself.]

GETA. Do you think he's in any danger from the laws, if he should turn her out? He has had counsel about that; pshaw, you'll have enough to do, if you go to law with him, he does not want words: but suppose you should cast him, he won't lose his life, a little money will bring him off." When I perceived that what I had said had took down his courage, "We are now alone here, continued I; hark y', what would you expect down to drop this suit, to have her sent back, and to let us be no more troubled with you?"

ANTIPHO. Is the devil in him?

[To himself.]

GETA. "—I very well know, if you should make a proposal any way just and reasonable, that he's so good a man, you will not have three words to a bargain."

DEMIPHO. By what authority did you say so?

CHREMES. He could not bring about what we want better.

ANTIPHO. I'm ruined! [To himself.]

CHREMES. Go on.

GETA. At first the fellow raved.

DEMIPHO. Why, what does he ask?

GETA. Ask? Too much.

CHREMES. Tell what he demands.

GETA. He talked of no less than a great talent.

DEMIPHO. Hang the rascal: isn't he ashamed?

GETA. I said as much to him. What, continued I, could he do more, if he was going to portion out an only daughter of his own? At that rate he has not gain'd much by not bringing one up, if another is found that he must give a fortune to: to be short, and passing over his impertinences, this was his final answer; I would, says he, at first have marry'd my friend's daughter, as 'twas reasonable I should; for I considered what inconveniences she would be subjected to, poor creature, by marrying into a rich family to be made a slave of: but, to be plain with you now, I wanted one that could bring in something to pay the little that I owe; therefore now, if Demipho will give as much with her, as I am to have with this that I'm engag'd to, I don't know one in the world that I would sooner choose for a wife than her.

ANTIPHO. I can't tell whether 'tis folly or malice that makes him talk thus, whether he does it designedly or not.

[To himself.]

DEMIPHO. What is't to us if he owes his soul to any one?

GETA. He mortgaged a piece of ground, he says, for thirty guineas.

DEMIPHO. Well, well, let him marry her; I'll give him as much.

GETA. And a house for thirty more.

DEMIPHO. Huy, huy! that's too much.

CHREMES. Silence: you shall have these thirty from me.

GETA. A maid must be bought for his wife; then some more furniture is wanted; and the expense of the wedding is to be defrayed: these, says he, will require thirty more.

DEMIPHO. I'll sooner bear six hundred actions against me; I'll give nothing; shall I make myself a laughingstock to the rogue?

CHREMES. Pray be quiet, I'll pay the money; only do you prevail on your son to marry the woman we'd have him.

ANTIPHO. Ah! Geta, thou hast ruined me by thy treachery. [To himself.]

CHREMES. 'Tis on my account she's turned off; 'tis but just therefore that I should defray the expense.

GETA. Let me know as soon as you can, says he, that if they think fit to let me marry her, I may rid myself of the other, and not remain in an uncertainty; for they've appointed to pay me the fortune directly.

CHREMES. He shall have the money immediately; let him break off with the other, and marry this.

DEMIPHO. And ill luck go with him.

CHREMES. I have very seasonably brought money with me now, the rents of my wife's farms at Lemnos; I'll make use of part of that; and I'll tell my wife that you wanted it.

[CHREMES and DEMIPHO go.]

SCENE IV

[ANTIPHO and GETA.]

ANTIPHO. Geta.

GETA. Ha!

ANTIPHO. What have you done?

GETA. I have cleanly chus'd the old men of the money.

ANTIPHO. Is that sufficient?

GETA. That I can't tell, but I've done no more than I was ordered.

ANTIPHO. I'll drub you; won't you answer me to the purpose?

GETA. What d'y' mean?

ANTIPHO. What can I mean? You might as well have giv'n me a halter as have done what you have. Heav'n and hell confound you for an example to such rascals! If any one wants to be brought out of a calm into a storm, I'd recommend him to you. What could you have done worse than have touched on this sore, or named my wife? You have giv'n my father hopes of his being able to turn her away. Prithee tell me now, if Phormio accepts the portion, he must marry her, what must be done then?

GETA. But he'll not marry her.

ANTIPHO. I grant it: but when they demand the money of him back, our cause will be much the better I suppose.

GETA. There's nothing, Antipho, but may be spoiled in the telling: the good you omit here; but you mention the bad: now hear me; if he takes the money, he must marry her, as you say; I admit it; but there must be a little time allow'd to prepare for the wedding, to invite friends, and to sacrifice: in the meanwhile the other will get the money which his friends promised him, and he may return it out of that.

ANTIPHO. How can that be? Or what excuse will he make?

GETA. Would you know? What strange prodigies, he may say, have happened to me since the agreement! A strange black dog came into my house, a snake fell off the tiles through the spout into my yard, my hen crowed, the soothsayer warned me, the fortune-teller forbid me to enter on any new business before winter; there can't be better excuses: these will do.

ANTIPHO. Would they may.

GETA. They will; depend on me. Your father's coming. Go, tell Phædria he shall have the money. [ANTIPHO goes.]

SCENE V

[DEMIPHO, GETA, and CREMES.]

DEMIPHO. Be easy, I say; I'll take care that he sha' n't impose upon us: I'll never part with this rashly, but I'll have witnesses present, when I give it; and I'll have a memorandum taken of the occasion of my giving it.

GETA. How wary he is, where there is no reason! [To himself.]

CREMES. 'Tis necessary you should do so; and make haste, while he is in this same humor; for if that other woman insists on the contract, he may leave us perhaps in the lurch.

GETA. Well thought of.

DEMIPHO. Therefore show me to him.

GETA. As soon as you will.

CREMES. When you have done this, go to my wife, that she may talk to her before she goes away: let her tell her that, to prevent any resentment on her side, we have agreed to marry her to Phormio, he being a proper match for her, being more intimate with her, that we have done our duty, having consented to give him as large a portion as he desired.

DEMIPHO. What have you to do with that?

CREMES. A great deal, Demipho.

DEMIPHO. Is it not enough for you to do your duty, without being publicly applauded for it?

CREMES. I'd have her consent to what we do, that she mayn't say we force her away.

DEMIPHO. I can manage that myself.

CREMES. Not so well as one woman can with another.

DEMIPHO. I'll ask your wife to do it.

CREMES. I am considering where I shall find those women now. [To himself.] [They go.]

ACT IV

SCENE I

[SOPHRONA and CREMES.]

SOPHRONA. What shall I do? Where shall I find a friend in my distress? Or to whom can I relate my tale? Or where apply for aid? I'm afraid my mistress will suffer undeservedly for following my advice, I hear the young gentleman's father is so enraged at what is done.

[To herself, not seeing CREMES.]

CREMES. What old woman's this, that comes panting from my brother's?

[To himself.]

SOPHRONA. Necessity compelled me to what I did (though I knew the match was not good), that I might contrive how to preserve her from want.

[To herself, not seeing CHREMES.]

CHREMES. Certainly, if I don't mistake, or if I'm not blind, that's my daughter's nurse I see there. [To himself.]

SOPHRONA. And her father—

[To herself, not seeing CHREMES.]

CHREMES. What's to done?

[To himself.]

SOPHRONA. —is not to be found:—

[To herself, not seeing CHREMES.]

CHREMES. Shall I go to her, or wait and hear what more she has to say?

[To himself.]

SOPHRONA. —but if I can find him now, I shall not have any occasion to fear.

[To herself, not seeing CHREMES.]

CHREMES. 'Tis she: I'll speak to her.

[To himself.]

SOPHRONA. Whose voice is that?

[To herself, hearing CHREMES.]

CHREMES. Sophrona.

SOPHRONA. And he names me!

[To herself.]

CHREMES. Look this way.

SOPHRONA. Good Gods, is not this Stilpho? [Aloud.]

CHREMES. No.

SOPHRONA. Do you deny your name?

CHREMES. Pray come a little this way from that door, Sophrona: and don't call me by that name any more.

SOPHRONA. How? Are not you the person you always said you was?

CHREMES. St.

SOPHRONA. Why are you afraid of this door?

CHREMES. I have a shrew of a wife shut up here: therefore I gave myself that wrong name formerly, lest any of ye should unadvisedly blab out my right name, and be the occasion of my wife's knowing the affair.

SOPHRONA. That's the reason we poor wretches could never find you out here.

CHREMES. Hark y', tell me what business you have with that family from whence you came now? And where are your mistresses?

SOPHRONA. Alas! alas!

CHREMES. Ah! What's the matter? Are they alive?

SOPHRONA. Your daughter is: but her poor mother died with grief.

CHREMES. O! sad!

SOPHRONA. I, who am a forsaken, poor, ignorant, old woman, did all I could to marry your daughter to the young gentleman of this house.

CHREMES. To whom? To Antipho?

SOPHRONA. To the very same I assure you.

CHREMES. What? Has he two wives?

SOPHRONA. No, I beseech you; he has none but her.

CHREMES. What's the other that they said was his kinswoman?

SOPHRONA. This is she.

CHREMES. What say you?

SOPHRONA. 'Twas done with a design, that, as he was in love with her, he might marry her without a portion.

CHREMES. Good Gods, how things often happen accidentally which we have not courage to wish for! I have found, upon my arrival, my daughter married to the person I would have had her married to, and all as I could have wished: what we both took the greatest pains to bring about, this old woman has alone accomplished by her own great care, without any help from us.

SOPHRONA. Consider now what is necessary to be done: here comes the young gentleman's father; and they say he's very angry at this marriage.

CHREMES. There's no danger: but in the names of Heaven and Earth, don't let any one know she's mine.

SOPHRONA. Nobody shall know from me.

CHREMES. Follow me: you shall hear the rest within. [They go.]

SCENE II

[DEMIPHO and GETA.]

DEMIPHO. 'Tis our own fault that people get by being dishonest, while we study to be thought over punctual and generous: never run into extremes, as the saying is:

was it not enough to bear his imposition, but we must give him more than was expected, to put it in his power to support himself, till he can contrive some other mischief?

GETA. You're very right.

DEMIPHO. They are rewarded now, who turn right into wrong.

GETA. 'Tis too true.

DEMIPHO. How foolishly we managed the affair with him!

GETA. If he performs his agreement, and marries her, 'tis well enough.

DEMIPHO. Is that to be doubted?

GETA. Considering what sort of a man he is, I don't know, by Hercules, but he may change his mind.

DEMIPHO. How! change his mind?

GETA. I don't know; but, if it should be so, I say.

DEMIPHO. I'll follow my brother's advice; I'll bring his wife hither to talk with her: go you, Geta, and give her notice of her coming. [DEMIPHO goes.]

SCENE III

[GETA.]

The money's procured for Phædria; and no words are made about it: and care's taken that she mayn't stir from hence at present: what more now? What's to be done? You're as deep in the mire as before, you'll pay all with interest, Geta, you only put off a beating to another day, you'll have the more lashes, if you don't look about you: now I'll go home, and instruct Phanium, that she mayn't be afraid of marrying Phormio, nor frightened at what Nausistrata will say to her.

[He goes.]

SCENE IV

[DEMIPHO and NAUSISTRATA.]

DEMIPHO. Come, Nausistrata, use some of your art now; and manage her so that she may do as we would have her, and at the same time let it be with her own consent.

NAUSISTRATA. I'll do my best.

DEMIPHO. Assist me now with your labour, as you've done before with your money.

NAUSISTRATA. 'Tis in my inclination; but 'tis less in my power than it ought to be, through my husband's mismanagement.

DEMIPHO. How so?

NAUSISTRATA. Because the estate which came by my father is very ill looked after; he made two talents a year with ease of those farms: ah! what a difference there is betwixt man and man!

DEMIPHO. Two talents, say you?

NAUSISTRATA. Yes, two talents, and in much worse seasons.

DEMIPHO. Indeed!

NAUSISTRATA. What, does this seem strange?

DEMIPHO. Yes, truly.

NAUSISTRATA. I wish I'd been born a man, I'd show him—

DEMIPHO. That you would.

NAUSISTRATA. —How—

DEMIPHO. Don't heat yourself, that you may be able to engage the young woman, and she mayn't run you down.

NAUSISTRATA. I'll do as you direct me: but my husband, I see, is coming from your house.

SCENE V

[CHREMES, DEMIPHO, and NAUSISTRATA.]

CHREMES. O! Demipho, has he had the money yet?

DEMIPHO. I paid it him directly.

CHREMES. I wish you had not. [To DEMIPHO.]—Ah! here's my wife: I'd almost blabbed too much. [Aside.]

DEMIPHO. Why d'y' wish I had not, Chremes?

CHREMES. 'Tis very well.

DEMIPHO. What have you done? Have you told her the occasion of your wife's coming to her?

CHREMES. I went through it.

DEMIPHO. What says she to it?

CHREMES. She can't go.

DEMIPHO. How can't?

CHREMES. Because their affection is mutual.

DEMIPHO. What have we to do with that?

CHREMES. A great deal: besides, I've discovered her to be related to us.

DEMIPHO. What, are you mad?

CHREMES. So it is; I don't speak without foundation; I have recollected myself.

DEMIPHO. Are you in your senses?

NAUSISTRATA. Ah! pray see you don't injure a kinswoman.

DEMIPHO. She's no kinswoman.

CHREMES. Don't deny her; her father went by another name, 'tis that breeds this mistake in you.

DEMIPHO. Did not she know her father?

CHREMES. Yes, yes.

DEMIPHO. Why did he go by another name?

CHREMES. Will you never yield to what I say, nor understand me?

[Aside to DEMIPHO.]

DEMIPHO. I don't know what you talk of; how should I understand you?

CHREMES. You ruin all.

[Aside to DEMIPHO.]

NAUSISTRATA. I wonder what's the meaning of all this.

DEMIPHO. By Hercules, I don't know.

CHREMES. Shall I tell you? As I hope to be saved, she has not a nearer relation in the world than you and I are.

DEMIPHO. Good Gods! Let us all go together to her; I'll know whether 'tis so or not.

CHREMES. Ah!

DEMIPHO. What's the matter?

CHREMES. Is my credit so little with you?

DEMIPHO. Would you have me take what you've said for granted? Would you have me seek no farther into it? Well, be it so: but consider, what's to be done with our friend's daughter?

CHREMES. She'll do very well.

DEMIPHO. Must we dismiss her at last?

CHREMES. Why not?

DEMIPHO. And let her stay that is here?

CHREMES. Yes.

DEMIPHO. Then you may go home again, Nausistrata.

NAUSISTRATA. By Pollux, I think your last resolution best, that she should stay here: for she seemed, when I saw her, to be very much of a gentlewoman.

[NAUSISTRATA goes.]

SCENE VI

[DEMIPHO and CHREMES.]

DEMIPHO. What is this business?

CHREMES. Has she shut the door yet?

DEMIPHO. Yes.

CHREMES. O! Jupiter! the Gods are certainly our friends; 'tis my daughter, I find, that is married to your son.

DEMIPHO. Ah! how came that to pass?

CHREMES. 'Tis not safe to tell you here.

DEMIPHO. Go in then.

CHREMES. Hark y', I would not have our sons know of this. [They go.]

ACT V

SCENE I

[ANTIPHO.]

ANTIPHO. I am glad, however my own affairs go, that my brother's succeed to his desire. How prudent it is for a man to entertain such appetites as he may easily satisfy when things run cross! As soon as he received the money, he rid himself of his care; but I can find no remedy to my troubles; for if this business continues a secret, I shall be in fear, and, if 'tis discovered, I shall be disgraced: and I should have no heart to go home now, unless I'd some hope of keeping her: but where can I find Geta, that I may consult him about a proper time to meet my father?

SCENE II

[PHORMIO and ANTIPHO.]

PHORMIO. I've received the money, given it to the bawd, brought away the woman, and put Phædria in possession of her; for she's no longer a slave: now one thing still remains, which I must bring about, that is to get leave of the old men to go and tittle a little; for I'm resolved to enjoy myself these few days.

[To himself, not seeing ANTIPHO.]

ANTIPHO. But here's Phormio: [To himself.] — Well, what say you?

PHORMIO. Of what?

ANTIPHO. What's Phædria about now? How does he propose to have his fill of love?

PHORMIO. He's going, in his turn, to act your part.

ANTIPHO. What part?

PHORMIO. To avoid his father: he entreats you again to appear for him, and plead his cause; for he's going to take a glass at my house. I'll tell the old men that I'm going to Sunium to the fair, to buy a girl that Geta spoke of a little while ago, lest, when they miss me here, they should believe that I'm consuming their money: but your door creaks.

ANTIPHO. See who's coming out.

PHORMIO. 'Tis Geta.

SCENE III

[GETA, ANTIPHO, and PHORMIO.]

GETA. O! fortune! O! propitious fortune, what unexpected favors have you this day heap'd on my Master Antipho!

[To himself, not seeing them.]

ANTIPHO. What is he talking of to himself?

[To PHORMIO.]

GETA. And how have you freed us his friends from fear! But this is no time to loiter, I should throw my cloak cross my shoulder, and run to find him, that I may tell him what has happened.

[To himself, not seeing them.]

ANTIPHO. Do you understand what he says?

[To PHORMIO.]

PHORMIO. Do you?

ANTIPHO. Not a word.

PHORMIO. Nor I.

GETA. I'll go directly to the bawd's; they are there now.

[To himself, not seeing them.]

ANTIPHO. Soho, Geta.

GETA. See there! Is there anything wonderful or new in being called back, when a man's going forwards?

[Hearing, but not seeing, him.]

ANTIPHO. Geta.

GETA. Again? By Hercules, you may bawl as long as you will, but you shall never bring me back.

[Hearing, but not seeing, him.]

ANTIPHO. Won't you stay?

GETA. Go on and be drubbed.

[Hearing, but not seeing, him.]

ANTIPHO. That's what you shall be soon, if you don't stay, you Bridewell-cur.

GETA. This should be one that's very well acquainted with me, he is so free with his threats: but is it he that I'm in search of, or not?—The very man.

[Aside.]

PHORMIO. Go up to him immediately.

[To ANTIPHO.]

ANTIPHO. Well, how go our affairs?

[To GETA.]

GETA. O! 'tis impossible there can be a more fortunate man living than yourself, for, without dispute, you're the only favorite of Heaven, Antipho.

ANTIPHO. I should be glad of that; but I wish you would give me some reason to believe it.

GETA. Is it not sufficient if I plunge you all over in joy?

ANTIPHO. You kill me.

PHORMIO. Don't keep us in suspense, but out with what you have to tell.

GETA. Oh! are you here too, Phormio?

PHORMIO. Yes; but why are you so tedious?

GETA. Well, I'll tell you. As soon as we gave you the money at the marketplace, we went directly home; [To PHORMIO.]—then my master sends me to your wife.

[To ANTIPHO.]

ANTIPHO. For what?

GETA. I'll omit that; because it signifies nothing to this affair, Antipho. As I was going to her apartment, her boy Mida runs to me; he takes hold on my cloak behind, and pulls me back; I turn my head, and ask him why he stops me; there are orders, says he, that nobody should go in to my mistress; Sophrona, continues he, carried our old gentleman's brother, Chremes, in just now, and he's with 'em there at this time; as soon as I heard this, I crept on tiptoe softly to the door; I went to it, and there I stood; I held my breath, put my ear close to the door, and fixed myself in this manner to hear.

ANTIPHO. Well done, Geta.

GETA. There I heard the finest story, that made me almost cry out for joy, by Hercules.

ANTIPHO. What was it?

GETA. What d'y' think?

ANTIPHO. I don't know.

GETA. The most surprising! Your uncle is discovered to be your wife's, your Phany's, father.

ANTIPHO. How! What say you?

GETA. He had formerly a private correspondence with her mother at Lemnos.

PHORMIO. He dreams: how could she be ignorant of her own father?

GETA. Depend upon it Phormio, there's some reason for it: but do you imagine that I, who was without, could understand all that was doing among themselves within?

ANTIPHO. By Hercules, I've heard the same too.

GETA. I'll give you farther reasons to believe it: in the meanwhile your uncle goes out; and not long after he returns with your father and goes in with him; and they both said you're at liberty to keep your wife: at last I was sent to find you and bring you thither.

ANTIPHO. Carry me to them immediately: why d'y' loiter?

GETA. I'll go with you.

ANTIPHO. Adieu, my Phormio.

PHORMIO. Antipho, adieu: 'tis very lucky, as I hope for happiness.

[ANTIPHO and GETA go.]

SCENE IV

[PHORMIO.]

PHORMIO. I'm rejoiced at the good fortune that has happened to them so unexpectedly. Here's a fine occasion offered to me now to choose the old men, and to rid Phædria of the care that he's under for money, that he mayn't lay himself under an obligation to any of his friends for it; for this same money, however 'tis given, will be given with an ill will to him: I have found out a way how I shall surely get it. I must now put on a new face, and a new behavior: but I'll retire into the next alley; and when they come out, I'll shew myself to 'em. I shall not go to the fair as I pretended I should.

SCENE V

[DEMIPHO, PHORMIO, and CREMES.]

DEMIPHO. The Gods deserve my thanks, and they have 'em, since these things have proved so fortunate to us, brother. Let us find Phormio as soon as we can, that we may get our ninety pieces from him before he has consumed 'em.

[To CREMES, not seeing PHORMIO.]

PHORMIO. I'll go and see if Demipho's at home, that I may—

[To himself, pretending not to see them.]

DEMIPHO. We were coming to you, Phormio.

PHORMIO. On this same affair perhaps.

DEMIPHO. On the very same, by Hercules.

PHORMIO. So I thought: but why did you give yourselves the trouble? What a jest that is! Are ye afraid that I should not be so good as my word? Notwithstanding I'm so very poor, I have hitherto taken care of one thing, I've preserved my credit.

CREMES. Isn't she a genteel girl?

[To DEMIPHO.]

DEMIPHO. Indeed she is.

PHORMIO. Therefore I was coming to ye, Demipho, to tell ye I'm ready: I'll marry her when ye will; for I've laid aside all other business, as I ought, since I saw ye were so earnest for my having her.

DEMIPHO. But my brother here has advised me not to let you have her: "For what will the people say, if you should do so," says he? "When you could have disposed of her before with honor, then you neglected it; it would be base now to make a widow of her, and turn her out." He made all the same objections which you did to me before.

PHORMIO. You insult me at your pleasure.

DEMIPHO. How so?

PHORMIO. Is that a question? Because I can't marry the other now; for with what face can I go back to her that I've cast off?

CHREMES. Besides, I see that Antipho's unwilling to part with her, say.

[Aside to DEMIPHO.]

DEMIPHO. Besides I see that my son is unwilling to part with her: therefore go to the market, Phormio, and order that money to be paid me back.

PHORMIO. How can that be, when I've paid it to my creditors?

DEMIPHO. What's to be done now?

[Aside to CHREMES.]

PHORMIO. If you'll give me the wife you promised, I'll marry her; but if you'd rather keep her to yourselves, let me keep the portion, Demipho; for 'tis unjust that I should be disappointed on your account, when for your honor I broke off from the other, who had as good a portion.

DEMIPHO. Go and be hanged you blustering vagabond; d'y' think now we don't know you or your pranks?

PHORMIO. This is provoking.

DEMIPHO. Would you marry her, if you might?

PHORMIO. Try me.

DEMIPHO. Your scheme then was that my son should have her at your house.

PHORMIO. What's that you say, pray?

DEMIPHO. Give me back the money.

PHORMIO. Do you give me my wife.

DEMIPHO. Come before a judge.

PHORMIO. Before a judge? Really if you continue being so troublesome——

DEMIPHO. What will you do?

PHORMIO. Do? Perhaps ye think that I've only beggars under my protection, but you'll find I've others.

CHREMES. What's that to us?

PHORMIO. Nothing: but I know a certain gentlewoman here, whose husband had——

CHREMES. Ah! [Aside.]

DEMIPHO. What's the matter?

[Aside to CHREMES.]

PHORMIO. ——another wife at Lemnos;——

CHREMES. I'm a dead man. [Aside.]

PHORMIO. ——by whom he had a daughter; which he brings up privately.

CHREMES. I'm buried. [Aside.]

PHORMIO. I'll go this instant and tell the gentlewoman this.

CHREMES. Pray don't.

PHORMIO. Why, was you the man?

DEMIPHO. What a jest he makes of us!

CHREMES. We'll let you go.

PHORMIO. That's all pretence.

CHREMES. What would you have? We give you leave to keep the money that you have.

PHORMIO. I hear you: but why do ye trifle thus shamefully with me, with your foolish childish speeches? I won't, I will, I will, I won't again, take it, give it back; said, and unsaid; a bargain and no bargain.

CHREMES. How or where did he come to the knowledge of this?

[To DEMIPHO.]

DEMIPHO. I can't tell: but I'm sure I told nobody of it.

[To CHREMES.]

CHREMES. As I hoped to be saved, 'tis next to a miracle. [Aside to DEMIPHO.]

PHORMIO. I've graveled them.

[To himself.]

DEMIPHO. Zooks, shall he carry off such a sum from us, and laugh at us so openly too? By Hercules I'd sooner lose my life: bear up, man, with courage. You see that this slip of thine is no secret abroad, therefore it can't be long concealed from your wife: now 'tis better for ourselves to tell her what she'll soon hear from other persons, we shall more easily make our peace if we do: then we may revenge ourselves at our pleasure on this villain.

[Aside to CHREMES.]

PHORMIO. Body o' me! If I don't look out sharp, I shall be fled, they make towards me with such terrible looks.

[To himself.]

CHREMES. But I'm afraid she will not be easily reconciled. [Aside to DEMIPHO.]

DEMIPHO. Have a good heart: I'll bring you into favor again, depend upon it, Chremes, since she's dead by whom you had this daughter. [Aside to CHREMES.]

PHORMIO. Do ye deal thus with me? Ye set upon me very cunningly [To both.]

—By Hercules, Demipho, you don't consult his good in provoking me. [To DEMIPHO.—Do you think, when you've been following your pleasures abroad, without paying any regard to this worthy gentlewoman here, but offering a strange indignity to her, to come now and wash away your offence by entreatys? I'll so fire her for you by a relation of these pranks, that you shan't be able to quench her, though you melt into tears.

[To CHREMES.]

DEMIPHO. May all the Gods and Goddesses confound him: that any man should be possessed of so much impudence! Don't this villain deserve to be transported by the public into some desert?

CHREMES. He has reduced me to such a situation, that I don't know what to do with him.

DEMIPHO. I know; let us go before a judge.

PHORMIO. Before a judge? Yes, in here, if you will.

DEMIPHO. Follow him, and hold him, till I call the servants hither.

CHREMES. I can't alone; come and help me.

PHORMIO. I've an action against you.

[To DEMIPHO.]

CHREMES. Do your worst then.

PHORMIO. And another against you, Chremes.

DEMIPHO. Away with him.

[To the servants.]

PHORMIO. Are ye at that sport? Then I must use my voice: Nausistrata, come hither.

CHREMES. Stop his mouth.

[To the servants.]

DEMIPHO. See how strong the villain is.

PHORMIO. Nausistrata, I say.

CHREMES. Won't you hold your tongue?

PHORMIO. Hold my tongue?

DEMIPHO. If he won't follow, punch your fist in his belly.

PHORMIO. If you tear my eyes out, I shall find a time to be sufficiently revenged on ye.

SCENE VI

[NAUSISTRATA, CHREMES, PHORMIO, and DEMIPHO.]

NAUSISTRATA. Who calls me?

CHREMES. Ah! [Aside.]

NAUSISTRATA. Pray, husband, what's this disturbance here?

PHORMIO. Ah! what, are you thunder-struck now? [To CHREMES.]

NAUSISTRATA. Who is this fellow? Don't you answer me? [To CHREMES.]

PHORMIO. How should he answer you, who don't know where himself is?

CHREMES. Take care how you believe him. [To NAUSISTRATA.]

PHORMIO. Go and feel him, if he is not all over in a cold fit, kill me.

CHREMES. That's nothing.

NAUSISTRATA. Then let me know what it is he has to say?

PHORMIO. That you shall; do but hear me.

CHREMES. Do you resolve to believe him?

NAUSISTRATA. How should I believe one that has said nothing?

PHORMIO. Fear has took the poor man's senses away.

NAUSISTRATA. By Pollux, you are not thus fearful for nothing? [To CHREMES.]

CHREMES. I fearful?

PHORMIO. Very well truly; since you're afraid of nothing, and what I have to say signifies nothing, do you tell it.

DEMIPHO. Must he tell at your bidding, rascal?

PHORMIO. Well said, you do well to stand up for your brother.

NAUSISTRATA. Won't you tell me, husband?

CHREMES. Why—

NAUSISTRATA. What—why?

CHREMES. 'Tis of no consequence to tell you.

PHORMIO. You think so; but 'tis of great consequence to this lady. [To

CHREMES.] —In Lemnos—

[To NAUSISTRATA.]

CHREMES. Ah? What are you about?

DEMIPHO. Will you not hold your tongue?

PHORMIO. Unknown to you—

[To NAUSISTRATA.]

CHREMES. I'm ruined! [Aside.]

PHORMIO. —he married another woman:—

NAUSISTRATA. Husband, Heaven forbid.

PHORMIO. 'Tis even so.

NAUSISTRATA. What an unhappy undone woman am I!

PHORMIO. —And he had a daughter by her, while you dreamed nothing of it.

CHREMES. What must we do now?

[To DEMIPHO.]

NAUSISTRATA. Immortal Gods, what an unworthy and injurious act is this!

DEMIPHO. 'Tis done and can't be recalled.

NAUSISTRATA. Was there ever so unworthy an act? When they come to their wives, then they are old.—Demipho, I apply myself to you, for it's irksome to me to speak to him: were these his frequent journies, and long continuance at Lemnos? Was this the cheapness of provisions that lowered our rents?

DEMIPHO. Nausistrata, I don't deny that he deserves blame in this affair, but 'tis such as may be pardon'd;—

PHORMIO. She's deaf to what he says.

[Aside.]

DEMIPHO. —for it was not through any neglect or hatred of you he did it; but, being in liquor about fifteen years since, he happened to have an intrigue with the woman by whom he had this daughter; and he never touched her afterwards; she's dead now; the objection in this affair is now removed: therefore, pray, exert your usual good nature, and bear it patiently.

NAUSISTRATA. What should I bear patiently? I wish I was rid of this troublesome affair; but what can I hope? Have I any reason to think age will make him better? He was old enough then, if age would have preserved his modesty: have my years and beauty more temptations in 'em now than before, Demipho? What can you advance to make me expect or hope that 'twill be no more so?

PHORMIO. They who have a mind to be at Chremes's funeral come now, now is the time; I'll give it him home: come on now, and provoke Phormio who dares; he shall meet with the same fate.—He may get into favor again; I've had revenge enough; she has something to ring in his ear as long as he lives.

NAUSISTRATA. Can I believe that I've deserved such usage? Why, Demipho, should I repeat how faithful I have been to him in every particular?

DEMIPHO. I know all that as well as yourself.

NAUSISTRATA. Do you think I've deserved this?

DEMIPHO. Nobody less; but, since your reproaches can't undo what is done, forgive him: he asks your pardon, acknowledges his fault, and excuses himself; what would you have more?

PHORMIO. But before she pronounces his pardon, I must take care of myself and Phædria. ([Aside.]—Hark y', Nausistrata, hear me before you answer him without consideration.

NAUSISTRATA. What have you to say?

PHORMIO. I chous'd him of ninety pieces by a stratagem; which I gave to your son; which he gave to the bawd for his mistress.

CHREMES. Ah! what's that you say?

NAUSISTRATA. Do you think it such a crime, that your son, who is a young man, should have one mistress, while you have two wives? Aren't you ashamed? With what face can you reprove him? answer me.

DEMIPHO. He'll do what you will.

NAUSISTRATA. Well, that you may know my resolution now, I'll neither forgive, nor promise anything, nor answer, till I see my son; I'll be determined by his judgement; I'll do what he desires.

PHORMIO. You are a woman of judgement, Nausistrata.

NAUSISTRATA. Do you approve of it?

PHORMIO. Yes indeed, I'm come well off, and beyond my expectation.

NAUSISTRATA. Tell me your name.

PHORMIO. My name? Phormio, a friend to your family, but more especially to Phædria.

NAUSISTRATA. By Castor, Phormio, from this time forwards I'll serve you in whatever you ask of me, to the utmost of my power, in word and deed.

PHORMIO. You're very good.

NAUSISTRATA. By Pollux, you deserve it.

PHORMIO. First now will you do that, Nausistrata, which will please me, and make your husband's eyes ache?

NAUSISTRATA. With all my heart.

PHORMIO. Invite me to supper.

NAUSISTRATA. By Pollux, I do invite you.

DEMIPHO. Now let us go in.

NAUSISTRATA. We will; but where's Phædria our judge?

PHORMIO. I'll bring him immediately.

[To NAUSISTRATA.]—Farewell, and give us your applause. [To the Spectators.]

MEDEA

BY SENECA

(L. ANNÆUS SENECA)

Written probably 1st century A.D., but no record of performance exists.

TRANSLATED BY FRANK JUSTUS MILLER *

CHARACTERS

MEDEA, daughter of AËTÉS, King of Colchis, and wife of JASON

JASON, son of AESON, and nephew of PELLAS, the usurping king of Thessaly; organizer and leader of the Argonautic expedition to Colchis in quest of the golden fleece.

CREON, King of Corinth, who had received into his hospitable kingdom MEDEA and JASON, fugitives from Thessaly, after MEDEA had plotted the death of PELLAS

NURSE, of Medea

MESSENGER

TWO SONS, of MEDEA and JASON (personæ mutæ)

CHORUS OF CORINTHIANS. Friendly to JASON and hostile to MEDEA

The time of the play is confined to the single day of the culmination of the tragedy, the day proposed by CREON for the banishment of MEDEA and marriage of JASON to CREÛSA, daughter of CREON.

The scene is in Corinth, in the court of the house of JASON.

ACT I

MEDEA. Ye gods of wedlock, thou the nuptial couch's guard,		The Argo's pilot, learned to guide his pristine bark,
Lucina, thou from whom that tamer of the deep,		And Neptune, thou stern ruler of the ocean's depths,
		And Titan, by whose rays the shining day is born,

* Reprinted from The Tragedies of Seneca, University of Chicago Press, copyright 1907, by permission of the translator and publisher.

Thou triformed maiden Hecate, whose conscious beams With splendor shine upon the mystic worshippers— Upon ye all I call, the powers of heaven, the gods By whose divinity false Jason swore; and ye Whose aid Medea may more boldly claim, thou world Of endless night, th' antipodes of heavenly realms, Ye damnèd ghosts, thou lord of hades' dark domain, Whose mistress was with trustier pledge won to thy side— Before ye all this baleful prayer I bring: Be near! Be near! Ye crime-avenging furies, come and loose Your horrid locks with serpent coils entwined, and grasp With bloody hands the smoking torch; be near as once Ye stood in dread array beside my wedding couch. Upon this new-made bride destruction send, and death Upon the king and all the royal line! But he, My husband, may he live to meet some heavier doom; This curse I imprecate upon his head; may he, Through distant lands, in want, in exile wander, scorned And houseless. Nay, may he once more my favor woo; A stranger's threshold may he seek where now he walks A well-known guest; and—this the blackest curse I know— May children rise to him to emulate their sire, Their mother's image bear.—Now won is vengeance, won! For I have children borne.—Nay, nay, 'tis empty plaints And useless words I frame. Shall I not rather rush	Against the foe and dash the torches from their hands, The light from heaven? Does Father Phoebus suffer this? Do men behold his face, as, seated in his car, He rolls along th' accustomed track of sky serene? Why does he not return to morning's gates, the law Of heaven reversing? Grant that I be borne aloft In my ancestral car! Give me the reins, O sire, Thy fiery team grant me to guide with lines of flame. Then Corinth, though with double shore delaying fate, Herself consumed with fire, shall light two seas with flame. But no, this course alone remains, that I myself Should bear the wedding torch, with acquiescent prayers, And slay the victims on the altars consecrate. Thyself inspect the entrails, and seek there the way By prayer, if still, O soul, thou livest, if there still Remaineth aught of old-time strength in thee! Away With woman's fears! Put on thy heart a breast-plate hard And chill as Caucasus! Then all the wizard arts That Phasis knew, or Pontus, shall be seen again In Corinth. Now with mad, unheard of, dreadful deeds, Whereat high heaven and earth below shall pale and quake, My pregnant soul is teeming; and my heart is full Of pictured wounds and death and slaughter.—Ah, too long On trifling ills I dwell. These were my virgin deeds. Now that a mother's pains I've felt, my larger heart
--	--

Must larger crimes conceive. Then passion, gird thyself,
 Put on thy strength, and for the issue now prepare!
 Let my rejection pay as dread a fee as when,
 Of old, through impious deeds of blood, I came to him.
 Come, break through slow delay, and let the home once won
 By crime, by equal deeds of crime be done away!

CHORUS [chanting the epithalamium for the nuptials of JASON and CREÛSA].
 Now on our royal nuptials graciously smiling,

Here may the lords of heaven and the deeps of the ocean
 Come while the people feast in pious rejoicing!

First to the gods who sway the scepter of heaven,
 Pealing forth their will in the voice of thunder,
 Let the white bull his proud head bow in tribute.

Then to the fair Lucina, her gift we offer,
 White as the driven snow, this beautiful heifer,
 Still with her neck untouched by the yoke of bondage.

Thou who alone canst rule the heart of the war-god,
 Thou who linkest in peace the opposing nations,

Out of thy generous hand abundance pouring—

Thee we offer a daintier gift, O Concord!
 Thou who, on the marriage torches attending,

Night's dark gloom with favoring hand dispellest,

Hither come with languishing footstep drunken,
 Binding thy temples fair with garlands of roses!

Star of the evening, thou who to twilight leadest

The day, and hailest again the dawn of the morning,
 All too slowly thou com'st for lovers impatient,
 Eager to see thy sign in the glow of the sunset.

The fairest of girls is she,
 The Athenian maids outshining,
 Or the Spartan maiden with armor laden,
 No burden of war declining.

Not by Alpheus' sacred stream,
 Nor Boeotia's musical water,
 Is there any fair who can compare
 With our lovely Corinthian daughter.

Our Thessalian prince excels,
 In beauty of form and face,
 Even Bacchus, the son of the fierce-flaming one,
 Who yokes the wild tigers in place.

The murmuring tripod's lord,
 Though the fairest in heavenly story,
 The twins with their star bright gleaming afar—
 All yield to our Jason in glory.

When in her train of courtly maidens she mingles—

Like the bright sunshine paling the starry splendor,
 Or the full' moonlight quenching the Pleiads' brilliance,
 So does she shine, all peerless, of fair ones the fairest.

Now, O Jason, freed from the hateful wedlock

That held thee bound to the barbarous Colchian woman,
 Joyfully wed the fair Corinthian maiden,
 While at last her parents' blessings attend thee.

Ho then, youths, with licensed jest and rejoicing,
 Loud let the songs of gladness ring through the city;
 Rarely against our lords such freedom is given.

Fair and noble band of Bacchus, the thyrsus-bearer,

Now is the time to light the glittering torches of pinewood.

Shake on high the festal fire with languishing fingers;

Now let the bold and merry Fescennine
laughter and jesting

Sound through our ranks. Let Medea fare in silence and darkness,

If perchance another lord she shall wed
in her exile.

ACT II

MEDEA. We are undone! How harsh upon mine ears doth grate

The song! and even now I cannot comprehend

The vast extent of woe that hath befallen
me.

Could Jason prove so false? Bereft of native land,

And home, and kingdom, could he leave me here alone

On foreign shores? Oh, cruel, could he quite reject

My sum of service, he who saw the fire and sea

With crime o'ercome for his dear sake?
And does he think

That thus the fatal chapter can be ended?
Wild,

Devoid of reason, sick of soul, my swift mind darts

In all directions seeking whence revenge may come!

I would he had a brother! But his wife—'gainst her

Be aimed the blow! Can thus my wrongs be satisfied?

Nay, nay—to meet my sum of woe must be heaped high

The crimes of Greece, of strange barbaric lands, and those

Which even thy hands have not known.
Now lash thy soul

With memory's scourge, and call thy dark deeds in review:

The glory of thy father's kingdom reft
away;

Thy brother, guiltless comrade of thy guilty flight,

All hewn in pieces and his corpse strewn
on the deep,

To break his royal father's heart; and,
last of crimes,

Old Pelias by his daughters slain at thy command.

O impious one, what streams of blood have flowed to work

Thy ends! And yet, not one of all my crimes by wrath

Was prompted. Love, ill-omened love, suggested all.

Yet, what could Jason else have done, compelled to serve

Another's will, another's law? He should have died

Before he yielded to the tyrant's will.
Nay, nay,

Thou raging passion, speak not so! For,
if he may,

I would that Jason still may live and still be mine,

As once he was; if not, yet may he still live on,

And, mindful of my merits, live without my aid.

The guilt is Creon's all, who with unbridled power

Dissolves the marriage bond, my children separates

From me who bore them, yea, and makes the strongest pledge,

Though ratified with straightest oath, of none effect.

Let him alone sustain my wrath; let Creon pay

The debt of guilt he owes! His palace will I bring

To utter desolation; and the whirling fire
To far-off Malea's crags shall send its lurid glare.

NURSE. Be silent now, I pray thee, and thy plaints confine

To secret woe! The man who heavy blows can bear

In silence, biding still his time with patient soul,

Full oft his vengeance gains. 'Tis hidden wrath that harms;

But hate proclaimed oft loses half its power to harm.

MEDEA. But small the grief is that can counsel take and hide
Its head; great ills lie not in hiding, but must rush Abroad and work their will.

NURSE. Oh, cease this mad complaint,
My mistress; scarce can friendly silence help thee now.

MEDEA. But fortune fears the brave, the faint of heart o'erwhelms.

NURSE. Then valor be approved, if for it still there's room.

MEDEA. But it must always be that valor finds its place.

NURSE. No star of hope points out the way from these our woes.

MEDEA. The man who hopes for naught at least has naught to fear.

NURSE. The Colchians are thy foes; thy husband's vows have failed;
Of all thy vast possessions not a jot is left.

MEDEA. Yet I am left. There's left both sea and land and fire
And sword and gods and hurtling thunderbolts.

NURSE. The king must be revered.
MEDEA. My father was a king.

NURSE. Dost thou not fear?
MEDEA. Not though the earth produced the foe.

NURSE. Thou'lt perish.
MEDEA. So I wish it.

NURSE. Flee!
MEDEA. I'm done with flight.

Why should Medea flee?
NURSE. Thy children!

MEDEA. Whose, thou know'st.
NURSE. And dost thou still delay?

MEDEA. I go, but vengeance first.
NURSE. Th' avenger will pursue.

MEDEA. Perchance I'll stop his course.
NURSE. Nay, hold thy words, and cease thy threats, O foolish one.

Thy temper curb; 'tis well to yield to fate's decrees.

MEDEA. Though fate may strip me of my all, myself am left.

But who flings wide the royal palace doors? Behold,

'Tis Creon's self, exalted high in Grecian sway. [MEDEA retires to back of stage; exit NURSE; enter CREON.]

CREON. Medea, baleful daughter of the Colchian king,

Has not yet taken her hateful presence from our realm.

On mischief is she bent. Well known her treach'rous power.

For who escapes her? Who may pass his days in peace?

This curs'd pestilence at once would I have stayed

By force of arms; but Jason's prayers prevailed. She still

May live, but let her free my borders from the fear

Her presence genders, and her safety gain by flight.

[He sees MEDEA approaching.]
But lo, she comes, with fierce and threatening mien, to seek

An audience with us. [To attendants.]
Slaves defend us from her touch

And pestilential presence! Bid her silence keep,

And learn to yield obedience to the king's commands. [To MEDEA.]

Go, speed thy flight, thou thing of evil, fell, and monstrous!

MEDEA. But tell me what the crime, my lord, or what the guilt

That merits exile?
CREON. Let the guiltless question thus.

MEDEA. If now thou judgest, hear me; if thou reign'st, command.

CREON. The king's command thou must abide, nor question aught.

MEDEA. Unrighteous sovereignty has never long endured.

CREON. Go hence, and to the Colchians complain.

MEDEA. I go,
But let him take me hence who brought me to thy shores.

CREON. Thy prayer has come too late, for fixed is my decree.

MEDEA. Who judges, and denies his ear to either side,

Though right his judgment, still is he himself unjust.

CREON. Didst lend thine ear to Pelias, ere thou judgedst him?

But come, I'll give thee grace to plead thy goodly cause.

MEDEA. How hard the task to turn the soul from wrath, when once To wrath inclined; how 'tis the creed of sceptered kings To swerve not from the purposed course they once have taken, Full well I know, for I have tasted royalty.

For, though by present storms of ill I'm overwhelmed, An exile, suppliant, lone, forsaken, all forlorn, I once in happier times a royal princess shone, And traced my proud descent from heavenly Phoebus' self.

My father's realm extended wide o'er all the land

Where Phasis' gentle waters flow, o'er Scythia's plains

Whose rivers sweeten Pontus' briny waves; where, too, Thermodon's banks inclose the race of warlike maids, Whose gleaming shields strike terror to their foes. All this My father held in sway. And I, of noble birth, And blessed of heaven, in royal state was high upraised.

Then princes humbly sought my hand in wedlock, mine, Who now must sue. O changeful fortune, thou my throne Hast reft away, and given me exile in its stead.

Trust not in kingly realms, since fickle chance may strew Their treasures to the winds. Lo, this is regal, this The work of kings, which time nor change cannot undo: To succor the afflicted, to provide at need A trusty refuge for the suppliant. This alone

I brought of all my Colchian treasure, this renown,

This very flower of fame, that by my arts I saved

The bulwark of the Greeks, the offspring of the gods.

My princely gift to Greece is Orpheus, that sweet bard

Who can the trees in willing bondage draw, and melt

The crag's hard heart. Mine too are Boreas' wingèd sons,

And Leda's heaven-born progeny, and Lynceus, he

Whose glance can pierce the distant view—yea, all the Greeks,

Save Jason; for I mention not the king of kings,

The leader of the leaders; he is mine alone,

My labor's recompense; the rest I give to you.

Nay, come, O king, arraign me, and rehearse my crimes.

But stay! for I'll confess them all. The only crime

Of which I stand accused is this—the Argo saved.

Suppose my maiden scruples had opposed the deed;

Suppose my filial piety had stayed my hand:

Then had the mighty chieftains fall'n, and in their fate

All Greece had been o'erwhelmed; then this, thy son-in-law,

Had felt the bull's consuming breath, and perished there.

Nay, nay, let fortune, when she will, my doom decree;

I glory still that kings have owed their lives to me.

But what reward I reap for all my glorious deeds

Is in thy hands. Convict me, if thou wilt, of sin,

But give him back for whom I sinned. O Creon, see,

I own that I am guilty. This much thou didst know,

When first I clasped thy knees, a humble
suppliant,
And sought the shelter of thy royal clemency.
Some little corner of thy kingdom now I ask,
In which to hide my grief. If I must flee again,
Oh, let some nook remote within thy broad domain
Be found for me!
CREON. That I my power in mercy wield,
And spurn not those who seek my aid let Jason's self
My witness be, who, exiled, overwhelmed
by fate,
And smitten sore with fear, a refuge found
with me.
For lo, Thessalia's monarch, bent on vengeance dire,
Seeks Jason at my hand. The cause, indeed, is just:
For that his sire, o'erburdened with the weight of years,
Was foully taken off, while by thy wicked
guile
His guileless sisters' hands were nerved to do the deed.
If now our Jason can unlink his cause
from thine,
'Tis easy his defense to make, for on his hands
No stain of blood is found. His arm no sword upraised,
And he has had no part nor lot in this thy crime.
No, thou and thou alone the arch contriver
art,
Uniting in thy person woman's fertile wit
And man's effective strength; while in thy reckless heart
No thought of reputation dwells to check
thy hand.
Then go thou hence and purge our kingdom of its stain;
Bear hence thy deadly poisons; free the citizens
From fear; abiding in some other land than this,
Outwear the patience of the gods.
MEDEA. Thou bid'st me flee?

Then give me back my bark wherein to flee. Restore
The partner of my flight! Why should
I flee alone?
I came not thus. Or if avenging war
thou fear'st,
Then banish both the culprits; why distinguish me
From Jason? 'Twas for him old Pelias was o'ercome;
For him the flight, the plunder of my father's realm,
My sire forsaken and my infant brother
slain,
And all the guilt that love suggests; 'twas
all for him.
Deep dyed in sin am I, but on my guilty
soul
The sin of profit lieth not.
CREON. Why seek delay
By speech? Too long thou tarriest.
MEDEA. I go, but grant
This last request: let not the mother's fall o'erwhelm
Her hapless babes.
CREON. Then go in peace. For I to
them
A father's place will fill, and take them to my heart.
MEDEA. Now by the fair hopes born upon this wedding day,
And by thy hopes of lasting sovereignty secure
From changeful fate's assault, I pray thee
grant from flight
A respite brief, while I upon my children's lips
A mother's kiss imprint, perchance the last.
CREON. A time
Thou seek'st for treachery.
MEDEA. What fraud can be devised
In one short hour?
CREON. To those on mischief bent, be sure,
The briefest time is fraught with mis-chief's fatal power.
MEDEA. Dost thou refuse me, then, one little space for tears?
CREON. Though deep-ingrafted fear would fain resist thy plea,

A single day I'll give thee ere my sentence holds.

MEDEA. Too gracious thou. But let my respite further shrink,
And I'll depart content.

CREON. Thy life shall surely pay
The forfeit if tomorrow's sun beholds thee still

In Corinth. But the voice of Hymen calls away

To solemnize the rites of this his festal day. [Exeunt.]

CHORUS. Too bold the man who first upon the seas,
The treacherous seas, his fragile bark confided;

Who, as the well-known shore behind him glided,

His life intrusted to the fickle breeze;

And, as his unknown seaward course he sped

Within his slender craft with foolish darning,

Midway 'twixt life and death went onward faring,

Along the perilous narrow margin led.

Not yet were sparkling constellations known,

Or sky, all spangled with the starry glory;
Not yet could sailors read the warning story

By stormy Hyades upon the heavens thrown.

Not yet was Zeus's foster-mother famed,

Nor slow Boïtes round the north star wheeling;

Nor Boreas nor Zephyr gently stealing,
Each feared or welcomed, though as yet unnamed.

First Tiphys dared to spread his venturesome sail,

The hidden lesson of the breezes learning,
Now all his canvas to the Zephyrs turning,

Now shifting all to catch the changing gale.

Now midway on the mast the yard remains,

Now at the head with all its canvas drawing,

While eager sailors lure the breezes blowing,

And over all the gleaming topsail strains.

The guiltless golden age our fathers saw,

When youth and age the same horizon bounded;

No greed of gain their simple hearts confounded;

Their native wealth enough, 'twas all they knew.

But lo, the severed worlds have been brought near

And linked in one by Argo's hand uniting;

While seas endure the oar's unwonted smiting,

And add their fury to the primal fear.

This impious bark its guilt in dread atoned

When clashing mountains were together driven,

And sea, from sea in mighty conflict riven,

The stars besprinkled with the leaping foam.

Amid these perils sturdy Tiphys paled,

And from his nerveless hand the vessel bounded;

While stricken Orpheus' lyre no more resounded,

And tuneless Argo's warning message failed.

What sinking terror filled each quaking breast,

When near the borders of sea-girt Pelorus,

There smote upon their ears the horrid chorus
Of Scylla's baying wolves around them pressed.

What terror when they neared the Sirens' lair,
Who soothe the troubled waves with witching measures!
But Orpheus filled their souls with nobler pleasures,
And left the foe in impotent despair.

And of this wild adventure what the prize,
That lured the daring bark with heroes laden?
The fleece of gold, and this mad Colchian
maiden,
Well fit to be the first ship's merchandize.

The sea, subdued, the victor's law
obeys;
No vessel needs a goddess' art in framing,
Nor oars in heroes' hands, the ocean tam-
ing:
The frailest craft now dares the roughest waves.

Now, every bound removed, new cities
rise
In lands remote, their ancient walls removing;
While men of Ind by Caspian shores are roving,
And Persia's face now greets the western skies.

The time will come, as lapsing ages
flee,
When every land shall yield its hidden treasure;
When men no more shall unknown courses
measure,
For round the world no "farthest land" shall be.

ACT III

[MEDEA is rushing out to seek vengeance, while the NURSE tries in vain to restrain
her.]

NURSE. My foster-daughter, whither spedest thou abroad?

Oh, stay, I pray thee, and restrain thy passion's force.

[MEDEA hastens by without answering. The NURSE soliloquizes.]

As some wild Bacchanal, whose fury's raging fire

The god inflames, now roams distraught
on Pindus' snows,

And now on lofty Nysa's rugged slopes;
so she,

Now here, now there, with frenzied step is hurried on,

Her face revealing every mark of stricken
woe,

With flushing cheek and sighs deep drawn,
wild cries, and tears,

And laughter worse than tears. In her a medley strange

Of every passion may be seen: o'ertopping
wrath,

Bewailings, bitter groans of anguish.
Whither tends

This overburdened soul? What mean her frenzied threats?

When will the foaming wave of fury spend itself?

No common crime, I fear, no easy deed of ill

She meditates. Herself she will outvie.
For well

I recognize the wonted marks of rage.
Some deed

Is threatening, wild, profane, and hideous.

[Reënter MEDEA.]

Behold

Her face betrays her madness. O ye gods, may these

Our fears prove vain forebodings!

MEDEA [not noticing the NURSE's presence]. For thy hate, poor soul, Dost thou a measure seek? Let it be deep as love.

And shall I tamely view the wedding torches' glare?

And shall this day go uneventful by, this
day,

So hardly won, so grudgingly bestowed?
Nay, nay,

While, poised upon her heights, the central earth shall bear

The heavens up; while seasons run their endless round,
And sands unnumbered lie; while days,
and nights, and sun,
And stars in due procession pass; while round the pole
The ocean-fearing bears revolve, and tumbling streams
Flow downward to the sea; my grief shall never cease
To seek revenge, and shall forever grow.
What rage
Of savage beast can equal mine? What Scylla famed?
What sea-engulfing pool? What burning Aetna placed
On impious Titan's heaving breast? No torrent stream,
Nor storm-tossed sea, nor breath of flame
fanned by the gale,
Can check or equal my wild storm of rage.
My will
Is set on limitless revenge!

Will Jason say

He feared the power of Creon and Acastus' threats?
True love is proof against the fear of man. But grant
He was compelled to yield, and pledged his hand in fear:
He might at least have sought his wife with one last word
Of comfort and farewell. But this, though brave in heart,
He feared to do. The cruel terms of banishment
Could Creon's son-in-law not soften? No.
One day
Alone was giv'n for last farewell to both my babes.
But time's short space I'll not bewail;
though brief in hours,
In consequence it stretches out eternally.
This day shall see a deed that ne'er shall be forgot.
But now I'll go and pray the gods, and move high heaven
But I shall work my will!

NURSE. Thy heart all passion-tossed,
I pray thee, mistress, soothe, and calm thy troubled soul.

MEDEA. My troubled soul can never know a time of rest Until it sees all things o'erwhelmed in common doom.
All must go down with me! 'Tis sweet such death to die.

[Exit MEDEA.]

NURSE [calling after her]. Oh, think what perils thou must meet if thou persist!
No one with safety may defy a sceptered
king.

[Enter JASON.]

JASON. O heartless fate, if frowns or smiles bedeck thy brow,
How often are thy cures far worse than the disease
They seek to cure! If, now, I wish to keep the troth
I plighted to my lawful bride, my life must pay
The forfeit; if I shrink from death, my guilty soul
Must perjured be. I fear no power that man can wield;
But in my heart paternal love unmans me quite;
For well I know that in my death my children's fate
Is sealed. O sacred Justice, if in heaven thou dwell'st,
Be witness now, that for my children's sake I act.
Nay, sure am I that even she, Medea's
self,
Though fierce she is of soul and brooking
no restraint,
Will see her children's good outweighing
all her wrongs.
With this good argument my purpose now
is fixed,
In humble wise to brave her wrath.

[Enter MEDEA.]

At sight of me
Her raging fury flames anew! Hate, like a shield,
She bears, and in her face is pictured all her woe.

MEDEA. Thou see'st, Jason, that we flee.
'Tis no new thing

To suffer exile, but the cause of flight is strange;
 For with thee I was wont to flee, not from thee. Yes,
 I go. But whither dost thou send me whom thou driv'st
 From out thy home? Shall I the Colchians seek again,
 My royal father's realm, whose soil is steeped in blood
 My brother shed? What country dost thou bid me seek?
 What way by sea is open? Shall I fare again
 Where once I saved the noble kings of Greece, and thee,
 Thou wanton, through the threatening jaws of Pontus' strait,
 The blue Symplegades? Or shall I hie me back
 To fair Thessalia's realms? Lo, all the doors which I,
 For thee, have opened wide, I've closed upon myself.
 But whither dost thou send me now? Thou bid'st me flee,
 But show'st no way or means of flight.
 But 'tis enough:
 The king's own son-in-law commands and I obey.
 Come, heap thy torments on me; I deserve them all.
 Let royal wrath oppress me, wanton that I am,
 With cruel hand, and load my guilty limbs with chains;
 And let me be immured in dungeons black as night:
 Still will my punishment be less than my offense.
 O ingrate! hast thou then forgot the brazen bull,
 And his consuming breath? the fear that smote thee, when,
 Upon the field of Mars, the earth-born brood stood forth
 To meet thy single sword? 'Twas by my arts that they,
 The monsters, fell by mutual blows. Remember, too,

The long-sought fleece of gold I won for thee, whose guard,
 The dragon huge, was lulled to rest at my command;
 My brother slain for thee. For thee old Pelias fell,
 When, taken by my guile, his daughters slew their sire,
 Whose life could not return. All this I did for thee.
 In quest of thine advantage have I quite forgot Mine own.
 And now, by all thy fond paternal hopes,
 By thine established house, by all the monsters slain
 For thee, by these my hands which I have ever held
 To work thy will, by all the perils past, by heaven
 And sea that witnessed at my wedlock, pity me!
 Since thou art blessed, restore me what I lost for thee:
 That countless treasure plundered from the swarthy tribes
 Of India, which filled our goodly vaults with wealth,
 And decked our very trees with gold. This costly store
 I left for thee, my native land, my brother, sire,
 My reputation—all; and with this dower I came.
 If now to homeless exile thou dost send me forth,
 Give back the countless treasures which I left for thee.
 JASON. Though Creon in a vengeful mood would have thy life,
 I moved him by my tears to grant thee flight instead.
 MEDEA. I thought my exile punishment; 'tis now, I see,
 A gracious boon!
 JASON. Oh, flee while still the respite holds;
 Provoke him not, for deadly is the wrath of kings.

MEDEA. Not so. 'Tis for Creüsa's love thou sayest this;
 Thou wouldst remove the hated wanton once thy wife.

JASON. Dost thou reproach me with a guilty love?

MEDEA. Yea, that,
 And murder too, and treachery.

JASON. But name me now,
 If so thou canst, the crimes that I have done.

MEDEA. Thy crimes—
 Whatever I have done.

JASON. Why then, in truth, thy guilt
 Must all be mine, if all thy crimes are mine.

MEDEA. They are,
 They are all thine; for who by sin advantage gains,
 Commits the sin. All men proclaim thy wife defiled.
 Do thou thyself protect her, and condone her sin.
 Let her be guiltless in thine eyes who for thy gain
 Has sinned.

JASON. But gifts which sin has bought
 'twere shame to take.

MEDEA. Why keep'st thou then the gifts which it were shame to take?

JASON. Nay, curb thy fiery soul! Thy children—for their sake
 Be calm.

MEDEA. My children! Them I do refuse, reject,
 Renounce! Shall then Creüsa brothers bear to these
 My children?

JASON. But the queen can aid thy wretched sons.

MEDEA. May that day never dawn, that day of shame and woe,
 When in one house are joined the low born and the high,
 The sons of that foul robber Sisypus, and these,
 The sons of Phoebus.

JASON. Wretched one, and wilt thou then Involve me also in thy fall? Begone, I pray.

MEDEA. Creon hath heard my prayer.

JASON. What wouldst thou have me do?

MEDEA. For me? I'd have thee dare the law.

JASON. The royal power
 Doth compass me.

MEDEA. A greater than the king is here:

Medea. Set us front to front and let us strive;
 And of this royal strife let Jason be the prize.

JASON. O'erwearied by my woes I yield.
 But be thou ware,

Medea, lest too often thou shouldst tempt thy fate.

MEDEA. Yet fortune's mistress have I ever been.

JASON. But see,
 With hostile front Acastus comes, on vengeance bent,
 While Creon threatens instant death.

MEDEA. Then flee them both.
 I ask thee not to draw thy sword against the king
 Nor yet to stain thy pious hands with kindred blood.

Come, flee with me.

JASON. But what resistance can we make,
 If war with double visage rear his horrid front,
 If Creon and Acastus join in common cause?

MEDEA. Add, too, the Colchian armies with my father's self
 To lead them; join the Scythian and Pelasgian hordes:
 In one deep gulf of ruin will I whirl them all.

JASON. Yet on the scepter do I look with fear.

MEDEA. Beware,
 Lest not the fear, but lust of power prevail with thee.

JASON. Too long we strive: have done, lest we suspicion breed.

MEDEA. Now Jove, throughout thy heavens let the thunders roll!
 Thy mighty arm in wrath make bare!
 Thy darting flames
 Of vengeance loose, and shake the lofty firmament

With rending storms! At random hurl thy vengeful bolts,
Selecting neither me nor Jason with thy aim;
That thus whoever falls may perish with the brand
Of guilt upon him; for thy hurtling darts can take
No erring flight.
JASON. Recall thee and in calmness speak
With words of peace and reason. Then if any gift
From Creon's royal house can compensate thy woes,
Take that as solace of thy flight.
MEDEA. My soul doth scorn
The wealth of kings. But let me have my little ones
As comrades of my flight, that in their childish breasts
Their mother's tears may flow. New sons await thy home.
JASON. My heart inclines to yield to thee, but love forbids.
For these my sons shall never from my arms be reft,
Though Creon's self demand. My very spring of life,
My sore heart's comfort, and my joy are these my sons;
And sooner could I part with limbs or vital breath,
Or light of life.
MEDEA [aside]. Doth he thus love his sons? 'Tis well;
Then is he bound, and in his armored strength this flaw
Reveals the place to strike. [To JASON.]
At least, ere I depart,
Grant me this last request: let me once more embrace
My sons. E'en that small boon will comfort my sad heart.
And this my latest prayer to thee: if, in my grief,
My tongue was over bold, let not my words remain
To rankle in thy heart. Remember happier things

Of me, and let my bitter words be straight forgot.
JASON. Not one shall linger in my soul;
and curb, I pray,
Thy too impatient heart, and gently yield to fate.
For resignation ever soothes the woeful soul. [Exit JASON.]
MEDEA. He's gone! And can it be?
And shall he thus depart,
Forgetting me and all my service? Must
I drop,
Like some discarded toy, out of his faith-
less heart?
It shall not be. Up then, and summon all thy strength
And all thy skill! And, this the fruit of former crime,
Count nothing criminal that works thy will. But lo,
We're hedged about; scant room is left for our designs.
Now must the attack be made where least suspicion wakes
The least resistance. Now Medea, on!
and do
And dare thine utmost, yea, beyond thine utmost power! [To the NURSE.]
Do thou, my faithful nurse, the comrade of my grief,
And all the devious wanderings of my checkered course,
Assist me now in these my plans. There is a robe,
The glory of our Colchian realm, the precious gift
Of Phoebus' self to king Aëtes as a proof
Of fatherhood; a gleaming circlet, too, all wrought
With threads of gold, the yellow gold be-spangled o'er
With gems, a fitting crown to deck a princess' head.
These treasures let Medea's children bear
as gifts
To Jason's bride. But first infuse them with the power
Of magic, and invoke the aid of Hecate;
The woe-producing sacrifices then prepare,
And let the sacred flames through all our courts resound.

CHORUS. No force of name or raging gale,
Or whizzing bolt so fearful is,
As when a wife, by her lord betrayed,
Burns hot with hate.

Not such a force is Auster's blast,
When he marshals forth the wintry storms;
Nor Hister's headlong rushing stream,
Which, wrecking bridges in its course,
Pours reckless on;

Nor yet the Rhone, whose current strong
Beats back the sea; nor when the snows,
Beneath the lengthening days of spring
And the sun's warm rays, melt down in streams
From Haemus' top.

Blind is the rage of passion's fire,
Will not be governed, brooks no reins,
And scoffs at death; nay, hostile swords
It gladiat courts.

Spare, O ye gods, be merciful,
That he who tamed the sea may live.
But much we fear, for the lord of the deep
Is wroth that his realm of the second lot
Should be subdued.

The thoughtless youth who dared to drive
His father's sacred chariot,
Was by those fires, which o'er the heavens
He scattered in his mad career,
Himself consumed.

The beaten path has never proved
The way of danger. Walk ye then
Where your forefathers safely trod,
And keep great nature's holy laws
Inviolat.

Whoever dipped the famous oars
Of that bold bark in the rushing sea;
Who'er despoiled old Pelion
Of the thick, dark shade of his sacred groves;

Whoever dared the clashing rocks,
And, after countless perils passed,
His vessel moored on a barbarous shore,
Hoping to fare on his homeward way
The master of the golden fleece,
All by a fearful end appeased
The offended sea.

First Tiphys, tamer of the deep,
Abandoned to an untrained hand
His vessel's helm. On a foreign shore,
Far from his native land he died;
And now within a common tomb,
'Midst unknown ghosts, he lies at rest.
In wrathful memory of her king
Lost on the sea, did Aulis then Within her sluggish harbor hold
The impatient ships

Then he, the tuneful Muse's son,
At whose sweet strains the streams stood
still,

The winds were silent, and the birds,
Their songs forgotten, flocked to him,
The whole wood following after—he,
Over the Thracian fields was hurled
In scattered fragments; but his head
Down Hebrus' grieving stream was borne.
The well-remembered Styx he reached,
And Tartarus, whence ne'er again
Would he return.

The winged sons of Boreas
Alcides slew, and Neptune's son
Who in a thousand changing forms
Could clothe himself. But after peace
On land and sea had been proclaimed,
And after savage Pluto's realm
Had been revealed to mortal eyes,
Then did Alcides' self, alive,
On burning Oeta's top lie down,
And give his body to the flames;
For sore distressed was he, consumed
By Deianira's deadly gift,
The double blood.

A savage boar Ancaeus slew;
Thou, Meleager, impiously
Thy mother's brother in wrath didst slay,
And by that angry mother's hand
Didst die. All these deserved their death.
But for what crime did Hylas die,
A tender lad whom Hercules Long time but vainly sought? For he,
'Mid waters safe was done to death.
Go then, and fearlessly the deep
Plow with your daring ships; but fear
The peaceful pools.

Idmon, though well he knew the fates,
A serpent slew on Afric sands;

And Mopsus, to all others true,
False to himself, died far from Thebes.
If he with truth the future sang,
Then Nauplius, who strove to wreck
The Argive ships by lying fires,
Shall headlong fall into the sea.
And for his father's daring crime
Shall Ajax, that Oileus' son,
Make full atonement, perishing
 'Midst flame and flood.

And thou, Admetus' faithful mate,
Shalt for thy husband pay thy life,
Redeeming his from death. But he,
Who bade the first ship sail in quest
Of the golden spoil, King Pelias, Seethed in a boiling cauldron, swam
'Mid those restricted waves. Enough,
O gods, have ye avenged the sea:
Spare him, we pray, who did but go
 On ordered ways.

ACT IV

NURSE [alone]. My spirit trembles, for
I feel the near approach
Of some unseen disaster. Swiftly grows her grief,
Its own fires kindling; and again her pas-sion's force
Hath leaped to life. I oft have seen her, with the fit
Of inspiration in her soul, confront the gods
And force the very heavens to her will.
But now,
A monstrous deed, of greater moment far than these,
Medea is preparing. For, but now, did
she
With step of frenzy hurry off until she reached
Her stricken home. There, in her chamber, all her stores
Of magic wonders are revealed; once more she views
The things herself hath held in fear these many years,
Unloosing one by one her ministers of ill,
Occult, unspeakable, and wrapt in mystery;

And, grasping with her hand the sacred altar-horn,
With prayers, she straightly summons all destructive powers,
The creatures bred in Libya's sands, and on the peaks
Of frigid Taurus, clad in everlasting snows.
Obedient to her potent charms, the scaly brood
Of serpents leave their darksome lairs and swarm to her;
One savage creature rolls his monstrous
length along,
And darts his forkèd tongue with its envenomed sting,
Death-dealing; at the charming sound he stops amazed,
And fold on fold his body writhes in nerveless coils.
"But these are petty ills; unworthy of my hand,"
She cries, "are such weak, earth-born weapons. Potent charms Are bred in heaven. Now, now 'tis time to summon powers
Transcending common magic. Down I'll draw from heaven
That serpent huge whose body lies athwart
the sky
Like some great ocean stream, in whose constricting folds
The greater and the lesser Bears are held enthralled,
The greater set as guide for Grecian ships, the less
For Sidon's mariners! Let Ophiuchus loose
His hand and pour forth venom from his captive thrall!
And let the Python huge, that dared to rear its head
Against the heavenly twins, be present at my prayer!
Let Hydra's writhing heads, which by Alcides' hand
Were severed, all return to life and give me aid!
Thou too be near and leave thy ancient Colchian home,

Thou watchful dragon, to whose eyes the first sleep came

In answer to my incantations."

When she thus

Had summoned all the serpent brood, she cast her store

Of baleful herbs together; all the poisons brewed

Amid the rocky caves of trackless Eryx;
plants

That flourish on the snowy peaks of Caucasus,

Whose crags were spattered with Prometheus' gore; the herbs

Within whose deadly juice the Arab dips
his darts,

And the quiver-bearing Mede and fleeing Parthian;

Those potent juices, too, which, near the shivering pole,

The Suabian chieftains gather in Hyrcanian groves.

The seasons, too, have paid their tribute to her stores:

Whatever earth produces in the nesting
time,

And when the stiff'ning hand of winter's frost has stripped

The glory from the trees and fettered all the land

With icy bonds; whatever flow'ring plant conceals

Destruction in its bloom, or in its twisted roots

Distils the juice of death, she gathers to her use.

These pestifential herbs Haemonian Athos gave;

And these on lofty Pindus grew; a bloody knife

Clipped off these slender leaves on Mace-donia's heights;

Still others grew beside the Tigris, whirling on

His flood to meet the sea; the Danube nourished some;

These grew on bright gem-starred
Hydaspes' tepid stream;

And these the Baetis bore, which gave the land its name,

Displacing with its languorous tide, the western sea.

These felt the knife when early dawn begins to break;

The fruit of these was cut in midnight's gloomy hour;

This fatal crop was reaped with sickle magic-edged.

These deadly, potent herbs she takes and sprinkles o'er

With serpent venom mixing all; and in the broth

She mingles unclean birds: a wailing screech owl's heart,

A ghastly vampire's vitals torn from living flesh.

Her magic poisons all she ranges for her use.

The ravening power of hidden fire is held
in these,

While deep in others lurks the numbing chill of frost.

Now magic runes she adds more potent
far. But lo!

Her voice resounds! and, as with maddened step she comes,

She chants her charms, while heaven and earth convulsive rock.

[Enter MEDEA, chanting her incantations.]

MEDEA. I supplicate the silent throng, and you, the gods

Of death's sad rites, and groping chaos,
and the home

Of gloomy Pluto, and the black abyss of
death

Girt by the banks of Tartarus! Ye storied shades,

Your torments leave and haste to grace
the festival

At Hymen's call! Let stop the whirling wheel that holds

Ixion's limbs and let him tread Corinthian
ground;

Let Tantalus unfrighted drink Pirene's
stream.

On Creon's stock alone let heavier torments fall,

And backward o'er the rocks let Sisyphus be hurled.

You too, the seed of Danaüs, whose fruitless toil
 The ever-empty urns deride, I summon
 you;
 This day requires your helping hands.
 Thou radiant moon,
 Night's glorious orb, my supplications hear and come
 To aid; put on thy sternest guise, thou goddess dread
 Of triple form! Full oft have I with flowing locks,
 And feet unsandaled, wandered through thy darkling groves
 And by thy inspiration summoned forth
 the rain
 From cloudless skies; the heaving seas
 have I subdued,
 And sent the vanquished waves to ocean's lowest depths.
 At my command the sun and stars together shine,
 The heavenly law reversed; while in the Arctic sea
 The Bears have plunged. The seasons, too, obey my will:
 I've made the burning summer blossom as
 the spring,
 And hoary winter autumn's golden harvests bear.
 The Phasis sends his swirling waves to seek their source,
 And Ister, flowing to the sea with many mouths,
 His eager water checks and sluggish rolls along.
 The billows roar, the mad sea rages,
 though the winds
 All silent lie. At my command primeval
 groves
 Have lost their shade; the sun, abandoning the day,
 Has stood in middle heaven; while falling Hyades
 Attest my charms.
 But now thy sacred hour is come,
 O Phoebe. Thine these bonds with bloody hand entwined
 With ninefold serpent coils; these cords I offer thee,

Which on his hybrid limbs Typhoeus bore, who shook
 The throne of Jove. This vessel holds the dying blood
 Of Nessus, faithless porter of Alcides'
 bride.
 Here are the ashes of the pyre on Oeta's top
 Which drank the poisoned blood of dying
 Hercules;
 And here the fatal billet that Althaea burned
 In vengeance on her son. These plumes the Harpies left Within their caverned lair when Zetes drove them forth;
 And these the feathers of that vile Stymphalian bird
 Which arrows, dipped in Lerna's deadly poison, pierced.
 But lo! mine altar fires resound!
 While in the tripod's answering voice
 Behold the present deity!
 I see the car of Trivia,
 Not full and clear as when she drives
 The livelong night to meet the dawn;
 But with a baleful, lurid glare,
 As, harried by Thessalian cries,
 She holds a more restricted course.
 Send such uncanny light abroad!
 Fill mortals with a dread unknown:
 And let our Corinth's priceless bronze
 Resound, Dictynna, for thy aid!
 To thee a solemn sacrifice
 On bloody altar do we pay!
 To thee, snatched from the mournful
 tomb,
 The blazing torch nocturnal burns;
 On thee I call with tossing head,
 And many a frantic gesture make;
 Corpse-like upon the bier I lie,
 My hair with priestly fillet bound;
 Before thy awful shrine is waved
 The branch in Stygian waters dipped.
 And, calling on thy name, with gleaming shoulders bared,
 Like Bacchus' mad adorers, will I lash my arms
 With sacrificial knife. Now let my life-blood flow!

And let my hands be used to draw the deadly sword,

And learn to shed belovèd blood!

[She cuts her arm and lets the blood flow upon the altar.]

Behold, self-stricken have I poured the sacrifice!

But if too oft upon thy name I call,
I pray forgive this importunity!
The cause, O Hecate, of all my prayers
Is ever Jason; this my constant care.

[To attendants.]

Take now Creüsa's bridal robe, and steep
in these,

My potent drugs; and when she dons the clinging folds,

Let subtle flames go stealing through her inmost heart.

The fire that in this tawny golden cirelet lurks

Prometheus gave, who, for his daring heavenly theft

In human aid, endured an ever-living
death.

'Twas Vulcan showed the fires concealed in sulphur's veins;

While from my brother Phaëthon I gained a flame

That never dies; I have preserved Chimera's breath,

And that fierce heat that parched the fiery, brazen bull

Of Colchis. These dread fires commingled with the gall

Of dire Medusa have I bidden keep the
power

Of lurking evil. Now, O Hecate, Give added force to these my deadly gifts.

And strictly guard the hidden seeds of flame.

Let them deceive the sight, endure the touch;

But through her veins let burning fever run;

In fervent heat consume her very bones,

And let her fiercely blazing locks outshine

Her marriage torches! Lo, my prayer is heard:

Thrice have replied the hounds of Hecate,

And she has shown her baleful, gleaming fires.

Now all is ready: hither call my sons,
And let them bear these presents to the bride.

[Enter sons.]

Go, go, my sons, of hapless mother
born,

And win with costly gifts and many prayers

The favor of the queen, your father's
wife.

Begone, but quick your homeward
way retrace,

That I may fold you in a last embrace.

[*Exeunt sons toward the palace,
MEDEA in opposite direction.*]

CHORUS. Where hastes this Bacchic fury now,

All passion-swept? what evil deed
Does her unbridled rage prepare?

Her features are congealed with rage,
And with a queenly bearing, grand

But terrible, she sets herself
Against e'en Creon's royal power.

An exile who would deem her now?

Her cheeks anon with anger flush,

And now a deadly pallor show;

Each feeling quick succeeds to each,

While all the passions of her heart

Her changing aspect testifies.

She wanders restless here and there,

As a tigress, of her young bereft,

In frantic grief the jungle scours.

Medea knows not how in cheek

To hold her wrath nor yet her love;

If love and wrath make common
cause,

What dire results will come?

When will this scourge of Corinth leave

Our Grecian shores for Colchis' strand,

And free our kingdom from its fear?

Now, Phoebus, hasten on thy course

With no retarding rein.

Let friendly darkness quickly veil the
light,

And this dread day be buried deep in night.

ACT V

MESSENGER [comes running in from the direction of the palace]. Lo, all is lost! the kingdom totters from its base!

The daughter and the father lie in common dust!

CHORUS. By what snare taken?

MESSENGER. By gifts, the common snare of kings.

CHORUS. What harm could lurk in them?

MESSENGER. In equal doubt I stand; And, though my eyes proclaim the dreadful deed is done,

I scarce can trust their witness.

CHORUS. What the mode of death?

MESSENGER. Devouring flames consume the palace at the will

Of her who sent them; there complete destruction reigns,

While men do tremble for the very city's doom.

CHORUS. Let water quench the fire.

MESSENGER. Nay here is added wonder:

The copious streams of water feed the deadly flames;

And opposition only fans their fiery rage To whiter heat. The very bulwarks feel their power.

[MEDEA enters in time to hear that her magic has been successful.]

NURSE [to MEDEA]. Oh, haste thee, leave this land of Greece, in headlong flight!

MEDEA. Thou bid'st me speed my flight? Nay rather, had I fled, I should return for this. Strange bridal rites I see!

[Absorbed in her own reflections.]

Why dost thou falter, O my soul? 'Tis well begun;

But still how small a portion of thy just revenge

Is that which gives thee present joy? Not yet has love

Been banished from thy maddened heart if 'tis enough

That Jason widowed be. Pursue thy vengeful quest

To acts as yet unknown, and steel thyself for these.

Away with every thought and fear of God and man;

Too lightly falls the rod that pious hands upbear.

Give passion fullest sway; exhaust thy ancient powers;

And let the worst thou yet hast done be innocent

Beside thy present deeds. Come, let them know how slight

Were those thy crimes already done; mere training they

For greater deeds. For what could hands untrained in crime

Accomplish? Or what mattered maiden rage? But now,

I am Medea; in the bitter school of woe

My powers have ripened.

[In an ecstasy of madness.]

Oh, the bliss of memory!

My infant brother slain, his limbs asunder rent,

My royal father spoiled of his ancestral realm,

And Pelias' guiltless daughters lured to slay their sire!

But here I must not rest; no untrained hand I bring

To execute my deeds. But now, by what approach

Or by what weapon wilt thou threaten the treacherous foe?

Deep hidden in my secret heart have I conceived

A purpose which I dare not utter. Oh, I fear

That in my foolish madness I have gone too far—

I would that children had been born to him of this

My hated rival. Still, since she hath gained his heart,

His children too are hers—
That punishment would be most fitting and deserved.
Yes, now I see the final deed of crime,
and thou,
My soul, must face it. You, who once were called my sons,
Must pay the penalty of these your father's crimes—
My heart with horror melts, a numbing chill pervades
My limbs, and all my soul is filled with sinking fear.
Now wrath gives place, and, heedless of my husband's sins,
The tender mother-instinct quite possesses
me.
And could I shed my helpless children's blood? Not so,
Oh, say not so, my maddened heart! Far from my hand
And thought be that unnameable and hideous deed!
What sin have they that shedding of their wretched blood
Would wash away?
Their sin—that Jason is their sire,
And, deeper guilt, that I have borne them.
Let them die;
They are not mine. Nay, nay! they are my own, my sons,
And with no spot of guilt. Full innocent they are,
'Tis true—my brother, too, was innocent.
O soul,
Why dost thou hesitate? Why flow these streaming tears,
While with contending thoughts my waver-ing heart is torn?
As when conflicting winds contend in stubborn strife,
And waves, to stormy waves opposed, the sea invade,
And to their lowest sands the briny waters
boil;
With such a storm my heart is tossed.
Hate conquers love,
And love puts impious hate to flight. Oh,
yield thee, grief,
To love! Then come, my sons, sole comfort of my heart,

Come, cling within your mother's close embrace. Unharm'd
Your sire may keep you, while your mother holds you too.
[Embraces her sons.]
But flight and exile drive me forth! And even now
My children must be torn away with tears and cries.
Then let them die to Jason since they're lost to me.
Once more has hate resumed her sway,
and passion's fire
Is hot within my soul. Now fury, as of yore, Reseeks her own. Lead on, I follow to the end!
I would that I had borne twice seven sons, the boast
Of Niobe! But all too barren have I been.
Still will my two sufficient be to satisfy
My brother and my sire.
[Sees a vision of the furies and her brother's ghost.]
But whither hastes that throng Of furies? What their quest? What mean their brandished fires?
Whom threats this hellish host with horrid, bloody brands?
I hear the writhing lash resound of serpents huge.
Whom seeks Megaera with her deadly torch? Whose shade
Comes gibbering there with scattered limbs? It is my brother!
Revenge he seeks, and we will grant his quest. Then come,
Within my heart plunge all your torches,
rend me, burn;
For lo, my bosom open to your fury's stroke.
O brother, bid these vengeful goddesses depart
And go in peace down to the lowest shades
of hell.
And do thou leave me to myself, and let this hand
That slew thee with the sword now offer
sacrifice
Unto thy shade. [Slays her first son.]
What sudden uproar meets my ear?

'Tis Corinth's citizens on my destruction bent.

Unto the palace roof I'll mount and there complete

This bloody sacrifice.

[To her remaining son.]

Do thou come hence with me.

But thee, poor senseless corse, within mine arms I'll bear.

Now gird thyself, my heart, with strength. Nor must this deed

Lose all its just renown because in secret done;

But to the public eye my hand must be approved.

JASON [in the street below shouting to citizens]. Ho, all ye loyal sons, who mourn the death of kings!

Come, let us seize the worker of this hideous crime.

Now ply your arms and raze her palace to the ground.

MEDEA [appearing on the housetop with her two sons]. Now, now have I regained my regal state, my sire,

My brother! Once again the Colchians hold the spoil

Of precious gold! And by the magic of this hour

I am a maid once more. O heavenly powers, appeased

At length! O festal hour! O nuptial day! On, on!

Accomplished is the guilt, out not the recompense

Complete the task while yet thy hands are strong to act!

Why dost thou linger still? why dost thou hesitate

Upon the threshold of the deed? Thou canst perform it.

Now wrath has died within me, and my soul is filled

With shame and deep remorse. Ah me, what have I done, Wretch that I am? Wretch that thou art, well mayst thou mourn,

For thou hast done it'

At that thought delirious joy O'ermasters me and fills my heart which fain would grieve.

And yet, methinks, the act was almost meaningless,

Since Jason saw it not; for naught has been performed

If to his grief be added not the woe of sight.

JASON [discovering her]. Lo, there she stands upon the lofty battlements!

Bring torches! fire the house, that she may fall ensnared

By those devices she herself hath planned.

MEDEA [derisively]. Not so,

But rather build a lofty pyre for these thy sons;

Their funeral rites prepare. Already for thy bride

And father have I done the service due the dead;

For in their ruined palace have I buried them.

One son of thine has met his doom; and this shall die

Before his father's face.

JASON. By all the gods, and by the perils of our flight,

And by our marriage bond which I have ne'er betrayed,

I pray thee spare the boy, for he is innocent.

If aught of sin there be. 'tis mine. Myself I give

To be the victim. Take my guilty soul for his.

MEDEA. 'Tis for thy prayers and tears I draw, not sheathe the sword.

Go now, and take thee maids for wives, thou faithless one;

Abandon and betray the mother of thy sons.

JASON. And yet, I pray thee, let one sacrifice atone.

MEDEA. If in the blood of one my passion could be quenched,

No vengeance had it sought. Though both my sons I slay,

The number still is all too small to satisfy My boundless grief.

JASON. Then finish what thou hast begun—

I ask no more—and grant at least that no delay

Prolong my helpless agony.

MEDEA. Now hasten not,
Relentless passion, but enjoy a slow revenge.

This day is in thy hands; its fertile hours employ.

JASON. Oh, take my life, thou heartless
one.

MEDEA. Thou bid'st me pity—
Well! [Slays the second child.]—"Tis done!

No more atonement, passion, can I offer
thee.

Now hither lift thy tearful eyes ungrateful one.

Dost recognize thy wife? 'Twas thus of old I fled.

The heavens themselves provide me with a safe retreat.

[A chariot drawn by dragons appears in the air.]

Twin serpents bow their necks submissive to the yoke.

Now, father, take thy sons; while I, upon my car,

With wingèd speed am borne aloft through realms of air.

[*Mounts her car and is borne
away.*]

JASON [calling after her]. Speed on through realms of air that mortals never see:

But, witness heaven, where thou art gone no gods can be!

BENEDICTION

Ísa preserve you! he who is revealed
 In these eight forms by man perceptible—
 Water, of all creation's works the first;
 The Fire that bears on high the sacrifice
 Presented with solemnity to heaven;
 The Priest, the holy offerer of gifts;
 The Sun and Moon, those two majestic
 orbs,
 Eternal marshallers of day and night;
 The subtle Ether, vehicle of sound,
 Diffused throughout the boundless universe;
 The Earth, by sages called 'The place of birth
 Of all material essences and things';
 And Air, which giveth life to all that breathe.

STAGE-MANAGER [after the recitation of the benediction, looking toward the tiring-room]. Lady, when you have finished attiring yourself, come this way.

ACTRESS [entering]. Here I am, Sir;
 what are your commands?

STAGE-MANAGER. We are here before the eyes of an audience of educated and discerning men; and have to represent in their presence a new drama composed by Kálidása, called 'Sakoontalá; or, the Lost Ring.' Let the whole company exert themselves to do justice to their several parts.

ACTRESS. You, Sir, have so judiciously managed the cast of the characters, that nothing will be defective in the acting.

STAGE-MANAGER. Lady, I will tell you the exact state of the case.

No skill in acting can I deem complete,
 Till from the wise the actor gain applause;
 Know that the heart e'en of the truly skilful,
 Shrinks from too boastful confidence in
 self.

ACTRESS [modestly]. You judge correctly. And now, what are your commands?

STAGE-MANAGER. What can you do better than engage the attention of the audience by some captivating melody?

ACTRESS. Which among the seasons shall I select as the subject of my song?

STAGE-MANAGER. You surely ought to give the preference to the present summer season that has but recently commenced, a season so rich in enjoyment. For now
 Unceasing are the charms of halcyon days.
 When the cool bath exhilarates the frame;
 When sylvan gales are laden with the scent

Of fragrant Pátalas; when soothing sleep
 Creeps softly on beneath the deepening shade;

And when, at last, the dulcet calm of eve
 Entrancing steals o'er every yielding sense.

ACTRESS. I will:— [Sings.]

Fond maids, the chosen of their hearts to please,

Entwine their ears with sweet Śirisha
 flowers,

Whose fragrant lips attract the kiss of bees

That softly murmur through the summer hours.

STAGE-MANAGER. Charmingly sung!
 The audience are motionless as statues, their souls riveted by the enchanting strain. What subject shall we select for representation, that we may ensure a continuance of their favour?

ACTRESS. Why not the same, Sir, announced by you at first? Let the drama called 'Sakoontalá; or, the Lost Ring.' be the subject of our dramatic performance.

STAGE-MANAGER. Rightly reminded!
 For the moment I had forgotten it.

Your song's transporting melody decoyed
 My thoughts, and rapt with ecstasy my
 soul;

As now the bounding antelope allures
 The King Dushyanta on the chase intent.

[Exeunt.]

ACT I

SCENE—A Forest.

[Enter KING DUSHYANTA, armed with a bow and arrow, in a chariot, chasing an antelope, attended by his CHARIOTEER.]

CHARIOTEER [looking at the deer, and then at the KING]. Great Prince.

When on the antelope I bend my gaze,
And on your Majesty, whose mighty bow
Has its string firmly braced; before my eyes
The god that wields the trident seems revealed,
Chasing the deer that flies from him in vain.

KING. Charioteer, this fleet antelope has drawn us far from my attendants.

See! there he runs:
Aye and anon his graceful neck he bends
To cast a glance at the pursuing car;
And dreading now the swift-descending shaft,
Contracts into itself his slender frame;
About his path, in scattered fragments strewn,
The half-chewed grass falls from his panting mouth;
See! in his airy bounds he seems to fly,
And leaves no trace upon thy elastic turf.

[With astonishment.]

How now! swift as is our pursuit, I scarce can see him.

CHARIOTEER. Sire, the ground here is full of hollows; I have therefore drawn in the reins and checked the speed of the chariot. Hence the deer has somewhat gained upon us. Now that we are passing over level ground, we shall have no difficulty in overtaking him.

KING. Loosen the reins, then.

CHARIOTEER. The King is obeyed.

[Drives the chariot at full speed.]

Great Prince, see! see!
Responsive to the slackened rein, the steeds,
Chafing with eager rivalry, career
With emulative fleetness o'er the plain;
Their necks outstretched, their waving plumes, that late Fluttered above their brows, are motionless;

Their sprightly ears, but now erect, bent low;

Themselves unsullied by the circling dust
That vainly follows on their rapid course.

KING [joyously]. In good sooth, the horses seem as if they would outstrip the steeds of Indra and the Sun.

That which but now showed to my view minute

Quickly assumes dimension; that which seemed

A moment since disjoined in diverse parts,
Looks suddenly like one compacted whole;
That which is really crooked in its shape
In the far distance left, grows regular;
Wondrous the chariot's speed, that in a breath,

Makes the near distant and the distant near.

Now, Charioteer, see me kill the deer.

[Takes aim.]

A VOICE [behind the scenes]. Hold, O King! this deer belongs to our hermitage. Kill it not! kill it not!

CHARIOTEER [listening and looking]. Great King, some hermits have stationed themselves so as to screen the antelope at the very moment of its coming within range of your arrow.

KING [hastily]. Then stop the horses.

CHARIOTEER. I obey. [Stops the chariot.]

[Enter a HERMIT, and two others with him.]

HERMIT [raising his hand]. This deer, O King, belongs to our hermitage. Kill it not! kill it not!

Now heaven forbid this barbèd shaft descend

Upon the fragile body of a fawn,
Like fire upon a heap of tender flowers!
Can thy steel bolts no meeter quarry find
Than the warm life-blood of a harmless deer?

Restore, great Prince, thy weapon to its quiver.

More it becomes thy arms to shield the weak,

Than to bring anguish on the innocent.

KING. 'Tis done. [Replaces the arrow in its quiver.]

HERMIT. Worthy is this action of a Prince, the light of Puru's race. Well does this act befit a Prince like thee, Right worthy is it of thine ancestry. Thy guerdon be a son of peerless worth, Whose wide dominion shall embrace the earth.

BOTH THE OTHER HERMITS [raising their hands]. May heaven indeed grant thee a son, a sovereign of the earth from sea to sea!

KING [bowing]. I accept with gratitude a Bráhma's [benediction].

HERMIT. We came hither, mighty Prince, to collect sacrificial wood. Here on the banks of the Málini you may perceive the hermitage of the great sage Kanwa. If other duties require not your presence, deign to enter and accept our hospitality.

When you behold our penitential rites Performed without impediment by saints Rich only in devotion, then with pride Will you reflect:—Such are the holy men Who call me Guardian; such the men for whom To wield the bow I bare my nervous arm, Scarred by the motion of the glancing string.

KING. Is the Chief of your Society now at home?

HERMIT. No; he has gone to Somatirtha to propitiate Destiny, which threatens his daughter sakoontalá with some calamity; but he has commissioned her in his absence to entertain all guests with hospitality.

KING. Good! I will pay her a visit. She will make me acquainted with the mighty sage's acts of penance and devotion.

HERMIT. And we will depart on our errand. [Exit with his companions.]

KING. Charioteer, urge on the horses. We will at least purify our souls by a sight of this hallowed retreat.

CHARIOTEER. Your Majesty is obeyed. [Drives the chariot with great velocity.]

KING [looking all about him]. Charioteer, even without being told, I should have known that these were the precincts of a grove consecrated to penitential rites.

CHARIOTEER. How so?

KING. Do not you observe?

Beneath the trees, whose hollow trunks afford

Secure retreat to many a nestling brood Of parrots, scattered grains of rice lie strewn.

Lo! here and there are seen the polished slabs

That serve to bruise the fruit of Ingudi.

The gentle roe-deer, taught to trust in man,

Unstartled hear our voices. On the paths Appear the traces of bark-woven vests Borne dripping from the limpid fount of waters.

And mark!

Laved are the roots of trees by deep canals,

Whose glassy waters tremble in the breeze;

The sprouting verdure of the leaves is dimmed

By dusky wreaths of upward curling smoke

From burnt oblations; and on new-mown lawns

Around our car graze leisurely the fawns.

CHARIOTEER. I observe it all.

KING [advancing a little further]. The inhabitants of this sacred retreat must not be disturbed. Stay the chariot, that I may alight.

CHARIOTEER. The reins are held in. Your Majesty may descend.

KING [alighting]. Charioteer, groves devoted to penance must be entered in humble attire. Take these ornaments. [Delivers his ornaments and bow to the CHARIOTEER.] Charioteer, see that the horses are watered, and attend to them until I return from visiting the inhabitants of the hermitage.

CHARIOTEER. I will. [Exit.]

KING [walking and looking about]. Here is the entrance to the hermitage. I will now go in.

[Entering and feeling a throbbing sensation in his arm.]

Serenest peace is in this calm retreat,
By passion's breath unruffled; what portends
My throbbing arm? Why should it whisper here

Of happy love? Yet everywhere around us
Stand the closed portals of events unknown.

A VOICE [behind the scenes]. This way, my dear companions; this way.

KING [listening]. Hark! I hear voices to the right of yonder grove of trees. I will walk in that direction. [Walking and looking about.] Ah! here are the maidens of the hermitage coming this way to water the shrubs, carrying water-pots proportioned to their strength. [Gazing at them.] How graceful they look!

In palaces such charms are rarely ours;
The woodland plants outshine the garden flowers.

I will conceal myself in this shade and watch them. [Stands gazing at them.]

[Enter ŚAKOONTALĀ, with her two female companions, employed in the manner described.]

ŚAKOONTALĀ. This way, my dear companions; this way.

ANASÚYĀ. Dear śakoontalā, one would think that father Kanwa had more affection for the shrubs of the hermitage even than for you, seeing he assigns to you, who are yourself as delicate as the fresh-blown jasmine, the task of filling with water the trenches which encircle their roots.

ŚAKOONTALĀ. Dear Anasúyā, although I am charged by my good father with this duty, yet I cannot regard it as a task. I really feel a sisterly love for these plants.

[Continues watering the shrubs.]

KING. Can this be the daughter of Kanwa? The saintly man, though descended from the great Kaśyapa, must be very deficient in judgment to habituate such a maiden to the life of the recluse.

The sage who would this form of artless grace

Inure to penance, thoughtlessly attempts
To cleave in twain the hard acacia's stem
With the soft edge of a blue lotus-leaf.

Well! concealed behind this tree, I will watch, her without raising her suspicions. [Conceals himself.]

ŚAKOONTALĀ. Good Anasúyā, Priyamvadā has drawn this bark-dress too tightly about my chest. I pray thee, loosen it a little.

ANASÚYĀ. I will. [Loosens it.]
PRIYAMVADĀ [smiling]. Why do you lay the blame on me? Blame rather your own blooming youthfulness which imparts fullness to your bosom.

KING. A most just observation!

This youthful form, whose bosom's swelling charms

By the bark's knotted tissue are concealed,

Like some fair bud close folded in its sheath,

Gives not to view the blooming of its beauty.

But what am I saying? In real truth this bark-dress, though ill-suited to her figure, sets it off like an ornament.

The lotus with the śaivala entwined
Is not a whit less brilliant; dusky spots
Heighten the lustre of the cold-rayed moon;

This lovely maiden in her dress of bark
Seems all the lovelier. E'en the meanest garb

Gives to true beauty fresh attractiveness.

ŚAKOONTALĀ [looking before her]. Yon Keśara-tree beckons to me with its young shoots, which, as the breeze waves them to and fro, appear like slender fingers. I will go and attend to it.

[Walks towards it.]

PRIYAMVADA. Dear Śakoontalā, prithee, rest in that attitude one moment.

ŚAKOONTALĀ. Why so?

PRIYAMVADĀ. The Kēśara-tree, whilst your graceful form bends about its stem, appears as if it were wedded to some lovely twining creeper.

ŚAKOONTALĀ. Ah! saucy girl, you are most appropriately named Priyam-vadā ['Speaker of flattering things'].

KING. What Priyamvadā says, though complimentary, is nevertheless true. Verily,

Her ruddy lip vies with the opening bud;

Her graceful arms are as the twining stalks;

And her whole form is radiant with the glow

Of youthful beauty, as the tree with bloom.

ANASŪYĀ. See, dear Śakoontalā, here is the young jasmine, which you named 'the Moonlight of the Grove,' the self-elected wife of the mango-tree. Have you forgotten it?

ŚAKOONTALĀ. Rather will I forget myself. [Approaching the plant and looking at it.] How delightful is the season when the jasmine-creeper and the mango-tree seem thus to unite in mutual embraces! The fresh blossoms of the jasmine resemble the bloom of a young bride, and the newly-formed shoots of the mango appear to make it her natural protector.

[Continues gazing at it.]

PRIYAMVADĀ. Do you know, my Anasūyā, why Śakoontalā gazes so intently at the jasmine?

ANASŪYĀ. No, indeed, I cannot imagine. I pray thee tell me.

PRIYAMVADĀ. She is wishing that as the jasmine is united to a suitable tree, so, in like manner, she may obtain a husband worthy of her.

ŚAKOONTALĀ. Speak for yourself, girl; this is the thought in your own mind.

[Continues watering the flowers.]

KING. Would that my union with her were permissible! and yet I hardly dare hope that the maiden is sprung from a caste different from that of the Head of the hermitage. But away with doubt:

That she is free to wed a warrior-king My heart attests. For, in conflicting doubts,
The secret promptings of the good man's soul

Are an unerring index of the truth.

However, come what may, I will ascertain the fact.

ŚAKOONTALĀ [in a flurry]. Ah! a bee, disturbed by the sprinkling of the water, has left the young jasmine, and is trying to settle on my face.

[Attempts to drive it away.]

KING [gazing at her ardently]. Beautiful! there is something charming even in her repulse.

Where'er the bee his eager onset plies,
Now here, now there, she darts her kindling eyes;

What love hath yet to teach, fear teaches now,

The furtive glances and the frowning brow. [In a tone of envy.]

Ah, happy bee! how boldly dost thou try
To steal the lustre from her sparkling eye;

And in thy circling movements hover near,
To murmur tender secrets in her ear;

Or, as she coyly waves her hand, to sip
Voluptuous nectar from her lower lip!

While rising doubts my heart's fond hopes destroy,

Thou dost the fulness of her charms enjoy.

ŚAKOONTALĀ. This impertinent bee will not rest quiet. I must move elsewhere.

[Moving a few steps off, and casting a glance around.] How now! he is following me here. Help! my dear friends, help! deliver me from the attacks of this troublesome insect.

PRIYAMVADĀ and ANASŪYĀ. How can we deliver you? Call Dushyanta to your aid. The sacred groves are under the King's special protection.

KING. An excellent opportunity for me to show myself. Fear not—[checks himself when the words are half-uttered.]

Aside.] But stay, if I introduce myself in this manner, they will know me to be the King. Be it so, I will accost them, nevertheless.

ŚAKOONTALĀ [moving a step or two further off]. What! it still persists in following me.

KING [advancing hastily]. When mighty Puru's offspring sways the earth,
And o'er the wayward holds his threatening rod,
Who dares molest the gentle maids that keep
Their holy vigils here in Kanwa's grove?

[All look at the KING, and all are embarrassed.]

ANASŪYĀ. Kind Sir, no outrage has been committed; only our dear friend here was teased by the attacks of a troublesome bee. [Points to ŚAKOONTALĀ.]

KING [turning to ŚAKOONTALĀ]. I trust all is well with your devotional rites?

[ŚAKOONTALĀ stands confused and silent.]

ANASŪYĀ. All is well indeed, now that we are honoured by the reception of a distinguished guest. Dear śakoontalā, go, bring from the hermitage an offering of flowers, rice, and fruit. This water that we have brought with us will serve to bathe our guest's feet.

KING. The rites of hospitality are already performed; your truly kind words are the best offering I can receive.

PRIYAMVADĀ. At least be good enough, gentle Sir, to sit down awhile, and rest yourself on this seat shaded by the leaves of the Sapta-parṇa tree.

KING. You, too, must all be fatigued by your employment.

ANASŪYĀ. Dear śakoontalā, there is no impropriety in our sitting by the side of our guest; come, let us sit down here.

[All sit down together.]

ŚAKOONTALĀ [aside]. How is it that the sight of this man has made me sensible of emotions inconsistent with religious vows?

KING [gazing at them all by turns]. How charmingly your friendship is in keeping with the equality of your ages and appearance!

PRIYAMVADĀ [aside to ANASŪYĀ]. Who can this person be, whose lively yet dignified manner, and polite conversation, bespeak him a man of high rank?

ANASŪYĀ. I, too, my dear, am very curious to know. I will ask him myself. [Aloud.] Your kind words, noble Sir, fill me with confidence, and prompt me to inquire of what regal family our noble guest is the ornament? what country is now mourning his absence? and what induced a person so delicately nurtured to expose himself to the fatigue of visiting this grove of penance?

ŚAKOONTALĀ [aside]. Be not troubled, O my heart, Anasūyā is giving utterance to thy thoughts.

KING [aside]. How now shall I reply? shall I make myself known, or shall I still disguise my real rank? I have it; I will answer her thus. [Aloud.] I am the person charged by his Majesty, the descendant of Puru, with the administration of justice and religion; and am come to this sacred grove to satisfy myself that the rites of the hermits are free from obstruction.

ANASŪYĀ. The hermits, then, and all the members of our religious society, have now a guardian.

[ŚAKOONTALĀ gazes bashfully at the KING.]

PRIYAMVADĀ and ANASŪYĀ [perceiving the state of her feelings, and of the KING's. Aside to ŚAKOONTALĀ]. Dear śakoontalā, if father Kanwa were but at home to-day—

ŚAKOONTALĀ [angrily]. What if he were?

PRIYAMVADĀ and ANASŪYĀ. He would honour this our distinguished guest with an offering of the most precious of his possessions.

ŚAKOONTALĀ. Go to! you have some silly idea in your minds. I will not listen to such remarks.

KING. May I be allowed, in my turn, to ask you maidens a few particulars respecting your friend?

PRIYAMVADĀ and ANASŪYĀ. Your request, Sir, is an honour.

KING. The sage Kanwa lives in the constant practice of austerities. How, then, can this friend of yours be called his daughter?

ANASŪYĀ. I will explain to you, Sir. You have heard of an illustrious sage of regal caste, Viśwāmītra, whose family name is Kauśika.

KING. I have.

ANASŪYĀ. Know that he is the real father of our friend. The venerable Kanwa is only her reputed father. He it was who brought her up, when she was deserted by her mother.

KING. 'Deserted by her mother!' My curiosity is excited; pray let me hear the story from the beginning.

ANASŪYĀ. You shall hear it, Sir. Some time since, this sage of regal caste, while performing a most severe penance on the banks of the river Godāvāri, excited the jealousy and alarm of the gods; insomuch that they despatched a lovely nymph named Menakā to interrupt his devotions.

KING. The inferior gods, I am aware, are jealous of the power which the practice of excessive devotion confers on mortals.

ANASŪYĀ. Well, then, it happened that Viśwāmītra, gazing on the bewitching beauty of that nymph at a season when, spring being in its glory—[Stops short, and appears confused.]

KING. The rest may be easily divined. Śakoontalā, then, is the offspring of the nymph.

ANASŪYĀ. Just so.

KING. It is quite intelligible.

How could a mortal to such charms give birth?

The lightning's radiance flashes not from earth. [ŚAKOONTALĀ remains modestly seated with downcast eyes.]

[Aside.] And so my desire has really scope for its indulgence. Yet I am still distracted by doubts, remembering the pleasantry of her female companions respecting her wish for a husband.

PRIYAMVADĀ [looking with a smile at ŚAKOONTALĀ, and then turning towards the KING]. You seem desirous, Sir, of asking something further.

[ŚAKOONTALĀ makes a chiding gesture with her finger.]

KING. You conjecture truly. I am so eager to hear the particulars of your friend's history, that I have still another question to ask.

PRIYAMVADĀ. Scruple not to do so. Persons who lead the life of hermits may be questioned unreservedly.

KING. I wish to ascertain one point respecting your friend.

Will she be bound by solitary vows
Opposed to love, till her espousals only?
Or ever dwell with these her cherished
fawns,

Whose eyes, in lustre vying with her own,
Return her gaze of sisterly affection?

PRIYAMVADĀ. Hitherto, Sir, she has been engaged in the practice of religious duties, and has lived in subjection to her foster-father; but it is now his fixed intention to give her away in marriage to a husband worthy of her.

KING [aside]. His intention may be easily carried into effect.

Be hopeful, O my heart, thy harrowing doubts

Are past and gone; that which thou didst believe

To be as unapproachable as fire,
Is found a glittering gem that may be touched.

ŚAKOONTALĀ [pretending anger]. Anasūyā, I shall leave you.

ANASŪYĀ. Why so?

ŚAKOONTALĀ. That I may go and report this impertinent Priyamvadā to the venerable matron, Gautamī.

ANASŪYĀ. Surely, dear friend, it would not be right to leave a distinguished guest before he has received the rites of hospitality, and quit his presence in this wilful manner.

[ŚAKOONTALĀ, without answering a word, moves away.]

KING [making a movement to arrest her departure, but checking himself. Aside.].

Ah! a lover's feelings betray themselves by his gestures.

When I would fain have stayed the maid, a sense

Of due decorum checked my bold design; Though I have stirred not, yet my mien betrays

My eagerness to follow on her steps.

PRİYAMVADĀ [holding ŚAKOONTALĀ back]. Dear śakoontalā, it does not become you to go away in this manner.

ŚAKOONTALĀ [frowning]. Why not, pray?

PRİYAMVADĀ. You are under a promise to water two more shrubs for me. When you have paid your debt, you shall go, and not before. [Forces her to turn back.]

KING. Spare her this trouble, gentle maiden. The exertion of watering the shrubs has already fatigued her.

The water-jar has overtasked the strength Of her slim arms; her shoulders droop, her hands

Are ruddy with the glow of quickened pulses;

E'en now her agitated breath imparts Unwonted tremor to her heaving breast; The pearly drops that mar the recent bloom

Of the śirisha pendent in her ear, Gather in clustering circles on her cheek; Loosed is the fillet of her hair; her hand Restrains the locks that struggle to be free.

Suffer me, then, thus to discharge the debt for you.

[Offers a ring to PRİYAMVADĀ. Both the maidens, reading the name DUSHYANTA on the seal, look at each other with surprise.]

KING. Nay, think not that I am King Dushyanta. I am only the King's officer, and this is the ring which I have received from him as my credentials.

PRİYAMVADĀ. The greater the reason you ought not to part with the ring from your finger. I am content to release her from her obligation at your simple request. [With a smile.] Now, śakoontalā, my love, you are at liberty to retire, thanks to the intercession of this noble stranger, or rather of this mighty prince.

ŚAKOONTALĀ [aside]. My movements are no longer under my own control. [Aloud.] Pray, what authority have you over me, either to send me away or keep me back?

KING [gazing at ŚAKOONTALĀ. Aside]. Would I could ascertain whether she is affected towards me as I am towards her! At any rate, my hopes are free to indulge themselves. Because,

Although she mingles not her words with mine,

Yet doth her listening ear drink in my speech;

Although her eye shrinks from my ardent gaze,

No form but mine attracts its timid glances.

A VOICE [behind the scenes]. O hermits, be ready to protect the animals belonging to our hermitage. King Dushyanta, amusing himself with hunting, is near at hand.

Lo! by the feet of prancing horses raised, Thick clouds of moving dust, like glittering swarms

Of locusts, in the glow of eventide, Fall on the branches of our sacred trees;

Where hang the dripping vests of woven bark,

Bleached by the waters of the cleansing fountain.

And see!

Scared by the royal chariot in its course, With headlong haste an elephant invades The hallowed precincts of our sacred grove;

Himself the terror of the startled deer,
 And an embodied hindrance to our rites.
 The hedge of creepers clinging to his feet,
 Feeble obstruction to his mad career,
 Is dragged behind him in a tangled chain;
 And with terrific shock one tusk he drives
 Into the riven body of a tree,
 Sweeping before him all impediments.

KING [aside]. Out upon it! my retinue are looking for me, and are disturbing this holy retreat. Well! there is no help for it; I must go and meet them.

PRİYAMVADĀ and ANASŪYĀ. Noble Sir, we are terrified by the accidental disturbance caused by the wild elephant. Permit us to return to the cottage.

KING [hastily]. Go, gentle maidens. It shall be our care that no injury happen to the hermitage. [All rise up.]

PRİYAMVADĀ and ANASŪYĀ. After such poor hospitality, we are ashamed to request the honour of a second visit from you.

KING. Say not so. The mere sight of you, sweet maidens, has been to me the best entertainment.

ŚAKOONTALĀ. Anasūyā, a pointed blade of Kuśa-grass has pricked my foot; and my bark-mantle is caught in the branch of a Kuruvaka-bush. Be so good as to wait for me until I have disentangled it.

[Exit with her two companions, after making pretence for delay, that she may steal glances at the KING.]

KING. I have no longer any desire to return to the city. I will therefore rejoin my attendants, and make them encamp somewhere in the vicinity of this sacred grove. In good truth, Śakoontalā has taken such possession of my thoughts, that I cannot turn myself in any other direction.

My limbs drawn onward leave my heart behind,
 Like silken pennon borne against the wind.

ACT II

SCENE—A plain on the skirts of the forest

[Enter the Jester MĀTHAVYA, in a melancholy mood.]

MĀTHAVYA [sighing]. Heigh-ho! what an unlucky fellow I am! worn to a shadow by my royal friend's sporting propensities. 'Here's a deer!' 'There goes a boar!' 'Yonder's a tiger!' This is the only burden of our talk, while in the heat of the meridian sun we toil on from jungle to jungle, wandering about in the paths of the woods, where the trees afford us no shelter. Are we thirsty? We have nothing to drink but the dirty water of some mountain stream mixed with dry leaves, which give it a most pungent flavour. Are we hungry? We have nothing to eat but roast game, which we must swallow down at odd times, as best we can. Even at night there is no peace to be had. Sleeping is out of the question, with joints all strained by dancing attendance upon my sporting friend; or if I do happen to doze, I am awakened at the very earliest dawn by the horrible din of a lot of rascally beaters and huntsmen, who must needs surround the wood before sunrise, and deafen me with their clatter. Nor are these my only troubles. Here's a fresh grievance, like a new boil rising upon an old one! Yesterday, while we were lagging behind, my royal friend entered yonder hermitage after a deer; and there, as ill-luck would have it, caught sight of a beautiful girl, called Śakoontalā, the hermit's daughter. From that moment, not another thought about returning to the city! and all last night not a wink of sleep did he get for thinking of the damsel. What is to be done? At any rate I will be on the watch for him as soon as he has finished his toilet. [Walking and looking about.] Oh! here he comes, attended by the Yavana women, with bows in their hands, and wearing garlands of wild flowers. What shall I do? I have it. I will pretend to stand in the easiest attitude for resting my bruised and crippled limbs. [Stands leaning on a staff.]

[Enter KING DUSHYANTA, followed by a retinue, in the manner described.]

KING. True, by no easy conquest may I win her,
Yet are my hopes encouraged by her mien.
Love is not yet triumphant; but, methinks,
The hearts of both are ripe for his delights.

[Smiling.] Ah! thus does the lover delude himself; judging of the state of his loved one's feelings by his own desires.

But yet,
The stolen glance with half-averted eye,
The hesitating gait, the quick rebuke
Addressed to her companion, who would fain
Have stayed her counterfeit departure; these

Are signs not unpropitious to my suit.
So eagerly the lover feeds his hopes,
Claiming each trivial gesture for his own.

MĀTHAVYA [still in the same attitude].
Ah, friends, my hands cannot move to greet you with the usual salutation. I can only just command my lips to wish your Majesty victory.

KING. Why, what has paralysed your limbs?

MĀTHAVYA. You might as well ask me how my eye comes to water after you have poked your finger into it.

KING. I don't understand you; speak more intelligibly.

MĀTHAVYA. Ah, my dear friend, is yonder upright reed transformed into a crooked plant by its own act, or by the force of the current?

KING. The current of the river causes it, I suppose.

MĀTHAVYA. Ay; just as you are the cause of my crippled limbs.

KING. How so?

MĀTHAVYA. Here are you living the life of a wild man of the woods in a savage unfrequented region, while your State-affairs are left to shift for themselves; and as for poor me, I am no longer master of my own limbs, but have to follow you about day after day in your chases after wild animals, till my bones are all crippled and out of joint. Do, my dear friend, let me have one day's rest.

KING [aside]. This fellow little knows, while he talks in this manner, that my mind is wholly engrossed by recollections of the hermit's daughter, and quite as disinclined to the chase as his own.

No longer can I bend my well-braced bow
Against the timid deer; nor e'er again
With well-aimed arrows can I think to harm

These her beloved associates, who enjoy
The privilege of her companionship;
Teaching her tender glances in return.

MĀTHAVYA [looking in the KING's face].
I may as well speak to the winds, for any attention you pay to my requests. I suppose you have something on your mind, and are talking it over to yourself.
KING [smiling]. I was only thinking that I ought not to disregard a friend's request.

MĀTHAVYA. Then may the King live for ever! [Moves off.]

KING. Stay a moment, my dear friend. I have something else to say to you.

MĀTHAVYA. Say on, then.

KING. When you have rested, you must assist me in another business which will give you no fatigue.

MĀTHAVYA. Ah! In eating something nice, I hope.

KING. You shall know at some future time.

MĀTHAVYA. No time better than the present.

KING. What ho, there!

WARDER [entering]. What are your Majesty's commands?

KING. O Raivatika, bid the General of the forces attend.

WARDER. I will, Sir. [Exit and re-enters with the GENERAL.] Come forward, General; his Majesty is looking towards you, and has some order to give you.

GENERAL [looking at the KING]. When, with unerring course, his driven shaft

Though hunting is known to produce ill effects, my royal master has derived only benefit from it. For

Like the majestic elephant that roams O'er mountain wilds, so does the King display

A stalwart frame, instinct with vigorous life.

His brawny arms and manly chest are scored

By frequent passage of the sounding string;

Unharm'd he bears the midday sun; no toil

His mighty spirit daunts; his sturdy limbs,

Stripped of redundant flesh, relinquish nought

Of their robust proportions, but appear In muscle, nerve, and sinewy fibre cas'd.

[Approaching the KING.] Victory to the King! We have tracked the wild beasts to their lairs in the forest. Why delay, when everything is ready?

KING My friend Māthavya here has been disparaging the chase, till he has taken away all my relish for it.

GENERAL [aside to MĀTHAVYA]. Per-severe in your opposition, my good fellow; I will sound the King's real feelings, and humour him accordingly. [Aloud.] The blockhead talks nonsense, and your Majesty in your own person furnishes the best proof of it. Observe, Sire, the advantage and pleasure the hunter derives from the chase.

Freed from all grosser influences his frame

Loses its sluggish humours, and becomes Buoyant, compact, and fit for bold encounter.

'Tis his to mark with joy the varied passions,

Fierce heats of anger, terror, blank dismay,

Of forest animals that cross his path.

Then what a thrill transports the hunter's soul

When, with unerring course, his driven shaft

Pierces the moving mark! Oh! 'tis conceit In moralists to call the chase a vice; What recreation can compare with this?

MĀTHAVYA [angrily]. Away! tempter, away! The King has recovered his senses, and is himself again. As for you, you may, if you choose, wander about from forest to forest, till some old bear seizes you by the nose, and makes a mouthful of you.

KING. My good General, as we are just now in the neighbourhood of a consecrated grove, your panegyric upon hunting is somewhat ill-timed, and I cannot assent to all you have said. For the present,

All undisturbed the buffaloes shall sport In yonder pool, and with their ponderous horns

Scatter its tranquil waters, while the deer,

Couched here and there in groups beneath the shade

Of spreading branches, ruminant in peace. And all securely shall the herd of boars

Feed on the marshy sedge; and thou, my bow,

With slackened string, enjoy a long repose.

GENERAL. So please your Majesty, it shall be as you desire.

KING. Recall, then, the beaters who were sent in advance to surround the forest. My troops must not be allowed to disturb this sacred retreat, and irritate its pious inhabitants.

Know that within the calm and cold recluse

Lurks unperceived a germ of smothered flame,

All-potent to destroy; a latent fire That rashly kindled bursts with fury forth;

As in the disc of crystal that remains Cool to the touch, until the solar ray

Falls on its polished surface, and excites
The burning heat that lies within concealed.

GENERAL. Your Majesty's commands shall be obeyed.

MĀTHAVYA. Off with you, you son of a slave! Your nonsense won't go down here, my fine fellow. [Exit GENERAL.]

KING [looking at his attendants]. Here, women, take my hunting-dress; and you, Raivatika, keep guard carefully outside.

ATTENDANTS. We will, Sire. [Exeunt.]

MĀTHAVYA. Now that you have got rid of these plagues, who have been buzzing about us like so many flies, sit down, do, on that stone slab, with the shade of the tree as your canopy, and I will seat myself by you quite comfortably.

KING. Go you, and sit down first.

MĀTHAVYA. Come along, then. [Both walk on a little way, and seat themselves.]

KING. Māthavya, it may be said of you that you have never beheld anything worth seeing; for your eyes have not yet looked upon the loveliest object in creation.

MĀTHAVYA. How can you say so, when I see your Majesty before me at this moment?

KING. It is very natural that every one should consider his own friend perfect; but I was alluding to śakoontalā, the brightest ornament of these hallowed groves.

MĀTHAVYA [aside]. I understand well enough, but I am not going to humour him. [Aloud.] If, as you intimate, she is a hermit's daughter, you cannot lawfully ask her in marriage. You may as well then dismiss her from your mind, for any good the mere sight of her can do.

KING. Think you that a descendant of the mighty Puru could fix his affections on an unlawful object?

Though, as men say, the offspring of the sage,
The maiden to a nymph celestial owes
Her being, and by her mother left on earth,

Was found and nurtured by the holy man
As his own daughter, in this hermitage.
So, when dissevered from its parent stalk,
Some falling blossom of the jasmine,
wafted

Upon the sturdy sun-flower, is preserved
By its support from premature decay.

MĀTHAVYA [smiling]. This passion of yours for a rustic maiden, when you have so many gems of women at home in your palace, seems to me very like the fancy of a man who is tired of sweet dates, and longs for sour tamarinds as a variety.

KING. You have not seen her, or you would not talk in this fashion.

MĀTHAVYA. I can quite understand it must require something surpassingly attractive to excite the admiration of such a great man as you.

KING. I will describe her, my dear friend, in a few words.

Man's all-wise Maker, wishing to create
A faultless form, whose matchless symmetry
Should far transcend Creation's choicest works,

Did call together by his mighty will,
And garner up in his eternal mind,
A bright assemblage of all lovely things;
And then, as in a picture, fashion them
Into one perfect and ideal form—
Such the divine, the wondrous prototype,
Whence her fair shape was moulded into being.

MĀTHAVYA. If that's the case, she must indeed throw all other beauties into the shade.

KING. To my mind she really does.

This peerless maid is like a fragrant flower,
Whose perfumed breath has never been diffused;
A tender bud, that no profaning hand
Has dared to sever from its parent stalk;
A gem of priceless water, just released
Pure and unblemished from its glittering bed.

Or may the maiden haply be compared
To sweetest honey, that no mortal lip

Has sipped; or, rather, to the mellowed fruit

Of virtuous actions in some former birth,
Now brought to full perfection! Lives the man

Whom bounteous heaven has destined to espouse her?

MĀTHAVYA. Make haste, then, to her aid; you have no time to lose, if you don't wish this fruit of all the virtues to drop into the mouth of some greasy-headed rustic of devout habits.

KING. The lady is not her own mistress, and her foster-father is not at home.

MĀTHAVYA. Well, but tell me, did she look at all kindly upon you?

KING. Maidens brought up in a hermitage are naturally shy and reserved; but for all that

She did look towards me, though she quick withdrew

Her stealthy glances when she met my gaze;

She smiled upon me sweetly, but disguised

With maiden grace the secret of her smiles.

Coy love was half unveiled: then, sudden checked

By modesty, left half to be divined.

MĀTHAVYA. Why, of course, my dear friend, you never could seriously expect that at the very first sight she would fall over head and ears in love with you, and without more ado come and sit in your lap.

KING. When we parted from each other, she betrayed her liking for me by clearer indications, but still with the utmost modesty.

Scarce had the fair one from my presence passed,

When, suddenly, without apparent cause, She stopped, and, counterfeiting pain, exclaimed,

'My foot is wounded by this prickly grass.'

Then, glancing at me tenderly, she feigned Another charming pretext for delay,

Pretending that a bush had caught her robe

And turned as if to disentangle it.

MĀTHAVYA. I trust you have laid in a good stock of provisions, for I see you intend making this consecrated grove your game-preserve, and will be roaming here in quest of sport for some time to come.

KING. You must know, my good fellow, that I have been recognised by some of the inmates of the hermitage. Now I want the assistance of your fertile invention, in devising some excuse for going there again.

MĀTHAVYA. There is but one expedient that I can suggest. You are the King, are you not?

KING. What then?

MĀTHAVYA. Say you have come for the sixth part of their grain, which they owe you for tribute.

KING. No, no, foolish man; those hermits pay me a very different kind of tribute, which I value more than heaps of gold or jewels; observe,

The tribute which my other subjects bring Must moulder into dust, but holy men Present me with a portion of the fruits Of penitential services and prayers— A precious and imperishable gift.

A VOICE [behind the scenes]. We are fortunate; here is the object of our search.

KING [listening]. Surely those must be the voices of hermits, to judge by their deep tones.

WARDER [entering]. Victory to the King! two young hermits are in waiting outside, and solicit an audience of your Majesty.

KING. Introduce them immediately.

WARDER. I will, my liege. [Goes out, and reciters with TWO YOUNG HERMITS.] This way, Sirs, this way. [Both the HERMITS look at the KING.]

FIRST HERMIT. How majestic is his mien, and yet what confidence it inspires! But this might be expected in a king, whose character and habits have earned for him a title only one degree removed from that of a Sage.

In this secluded grove, whose sacred joys

All may participate, he deigns to dwell
Like one of us; and daily treasures up
A store of purest merit for himself,
By the protection of our holy rites.
In his own person wondrously are joined
Both majesty and saintlike holiness;
And often chanted by inspired bards,
His hallowed title of 'Imperial Sage'
Ascends in joyous accents to the skies.

SECOND HERMIT. Bear in mind, Gautama, that this is the great Dushyanta, the friend of Indra.

FIRST HERMIT. What of that?

SECOND HERMIT. Where is the wonder if his nervous arm,
Puissant and massive as the iron bar
That binds a castle gateway, singly sways
The sceptre of the universal earth,
E'en to its dark-green boundary of waters?
Or if the gods, beholden to his aid
In their fierce warfare with the powers
of hell,
Should blend his name with Indra's in their songs
Of victory, and gratefully accord
No lower meed of praise to his braced
bow,
Than to the thunders of the god of heaven?

BOTH THE HERMITS [approaching]. Victory to the King!

KING [rising from his seat]. Hail to you both!

BOTH THE HERMITS. Heaven bless your Majesty! [They offer fruits.]

KING [respectfully receiving the offering]. Tell me, I pray you, the object of your visit.

BOTH THE HERMITS. The inhabitants of the hermitage, having heard of your Majesty's sojourn in our neighbourhood, make this humble petition:—

KING. What are their commands?

BOTH THE HERMITS. In the absence of our Superior, the great sage Kanwa, evil demons are disturbing our sacrificial rites. Deign, therefore, accompanied by your charioteer, to take up your abode in our hermitage for a few days.

KING. I am honoured by your invitation.

MĀTHAVYA [aside]. Most opportune and convenient, certainly!

KING [smiling]. Ho, there, Raivatika! Tell the charioteer from me to bring round the chariot with my bow.

WARDER. I will, Sire. [Exit.]

BOTH THE HERMITS [joyfully]. Well it becomes the King by acts of grace To emulate the virtues of his race. Such acts thy lofty destiny attest; Thy mission is to succour the distressed.

KING [bowing to the HERMITS]. Go first, reverend Sire, I will follow you immediately.

BOTH THE HERMITS. May victory attend you! [Exeunt.]

KING. My dear Māthavya, are not you full of longing to see sakoontalā?

MĀTHAVYA. To tell you the truth, though I was just now brimful of desire to see her, I have not a drop left since this piece of news about the demons.

KING. Never fear; you shall keep close to me for protection.

MĀTHAVYA. Well, you must be my guardian-angel, and act the part of a very Vishṇu to me.

WARDER [entering]. Sire, the chariot is ready, and only waits to conduct you to victory. But here is a messenger named Karabhaka, just arrived from your capital, with a message from the Queen, your mother.

KING [respectfully]. How say you? a messenger from the venerable Queen?

WARDER. Even so.

KING. Introduce him at once.

WARDER. I will, Sire. [Goes out and reënters with KARABHAKA.] Behold the King. Approach.

KARABHAKA. Victory to the King! The Queen-mother bids me say that in four days from the present time she intends celebrating a solemn ceremony for the advancement and preservation of her son. She expects that your Majesty will honour her with your presence on that occasion.

KING. This places me in a dilemma. Here, on the one hand, is the commission of these holy men to be executed; and, on the other, the command of my revered parent to be obeyed. Both duties are too sacred to be neglected. What is to be done?

MÁTHAVYA. You will have to take up an intermediate position between the two, like King Triśanku, who was suspended between heaven and earth, because the sage Viśwámitra commanded him to mount up to heaven, and the gods ordered him down again.

KING. I am certainly very much perplexed. For here, Two different duties are required of me In widely distant places; how can I In my own person satisfy them both? Thus is my mind distracted, and impelled In opposite directions like a stream That, driven back by rocks, still rushes on, Forming two currents in its eddying course.

[Reflecting.] Friend Máthavya, as you were my play-fellow in childhood, the Queen has already received you like a second son; go you, then, back to her, and tell her of my solemn engagement to assist these holy men. You can supply my place in the ceremony, and act the part of a son to the Queen.

MÁTHAVYA. With the greatest pleasure in the world; but don't suppose that I am really coward enough to have the slightest fear of those trumpery demons.

KING [smiling]. Oh! of course not; a great Bráhmaṇ like you could not possibly give way to such weakness.

MÁTHAVYA. You must let me travel in a manner suitable to the King's younger brother.

KING. Yes, I shall send my retinue with you, that there may be no further disturbance in this sacred forest.

MÁTHAVYA [with a strut]. Already I feel quite like a young prince.

KING [aside]. This is a giddy fellow, and in all probability he will let out the truth about my present pursuit to the women of the palace. What is to be done? I must say something to deceive him. [Aloud to MÁTHAVYA, taking him by the hand.] Dear friend, I am going to the hermitage wholly and solely out of respect for its pious inhabitants, and not because I have really any liking for Śakoontalá, the hermit's daughter. Observe:—

What suitable communion could there be Between a monarch and a rustic girl? I did but feign an idle passion, friend, Take not in earnest what was said in jest.

MÁTHAVYA. Don't distress yourself; I quite understand. [Exeunt.]

PRELUDE TO ACT III

SCENE—The Hermitage

[Enter a YOUNG BRÁHMAN carrying bundles of Kuśa-grass for the use of the sacrificing priest.]

YOUNG BRÁHMAN. How wonderful is the power of King Dushyanta! No sooner did he enter our hermitage, than we were able to proceed with our sacrificial rites, unmolested by the evil demons.

No need to fix the arrow to the bow; The mighty monarch sounds the quivering string, And, by the thunder of his arms dismayed, Our demon foes are scattered to the wind.

I must now, therefore, make haste and deliver to the sacrificing priests these bundles of Kuśa-grass, to be strewn round the altar. [Walking and looking about; then addressing some one off the stage.]

Why, Priyamvadá, for whose use are you carrying that ointment of Uśra-root and those lotus-leaves with fibres attached to them? [Listening for her answer.] What say you?—that Śakoontalá is suffering from fever produced by exposure to the sun, and that this ointment is to cool her burning frame? Nurse her with care, then, Priyamvadā, for she is cherished by our reverend Superior as the very breath of his nostrils. I, for my part, will contrive that soothing waters, hallowed in the sacrifice, be administered to her by the hands of Gautamī. [Exit.]

ACT III

SCENE—The Sacred Grove

[Enter KING DUSHYANTA, with the air of one in love.]

KING [sighing thoughtfully]. The holy sage possesses magic power
In virtue of his penance; she, his ward,
Under the shadow of his tutelage,
Rests in security. I know it well;
Yet sooner shall the rushing cataract
In foaming eddies re-ascend the steep,
Than my fond heart turn back from its pursuit.

God of love! God of the flowery shafts!
we lovers are cruelly deceived by thee, and by the Moon, however deserving of confidence you may both appear.

For not to us do these thine arrows seem
Pointed with tender flowerets; not to us
Doth the pale Moon irradiate the earth
With beams of silver fraught with cooling dews;

But on our fevered frames the moonbeams fall

Like darts of fire, and every flower-tipt shaft

Of Kāma, as it probes our throbbing
hearts,

Seems to be barbed with hardest adamant.

Adorable god of love! hast thou no pity for me? [In a tone of anguish.]
How can thy arrows be so sharp when they are pointed with flowers? Ah! I know the reason:

È'en now in thine unbodied essence lurks
The fire of Śiva's anger, like the flame
That ever hidden in the secret depths

Of ocean, smoulders there unseen. How else

Could'st thou, all immaterial as thou art,
Inflame our hearts thus fiercely?—thou, whose form

Was scorched to ashes by a sudden flash
From the offended god's terrific eye.

Yet, methinks,
Welcome this anguish, welcome to my
heart

These rankling wounds inflicted by the
god,

Who on his scutcheon bears the monster-fish

Slain by his prowess; welcome death itself,

So that, commissioned by the lord of
love,

This fair one be my executioner.

Adorable divinity! Can I by no re-proaches excite your commiseration?

Have I not daily offered at thy shrine

Innumerable vows, the only food

Of thine ethereal essence? Are my prayers
Thus to be slighted? Is it meet that thou

Should'st aim thy shafts at thy true
votary's heart,

Drawing thy bow-string even to thy ear?

[Pacing up and down in a melancholy manner.] Now that the holy men have completed their rites, and have no more need of my services, how shall I dispel my melancholy? [Sighing.] I have but one resource. Oh for another sight of the idol of my soul! I will seek her.

[Glancing at the sun.] In all probability,
as the sun's heat is now at its height,

Śakoontalā is passing her time under the shade of the bowers on the banks of the Mālinī, attended by her maidens. I will go and look for her there. [Walking and looking about.] I suspect the fair one has but just passed by this avenue of young trees.

Here, as she tripped along, her fingers plucked

The opening buds; these lacerated plants,
Shorn of their fairest blossoms by her

hand,

Seem like dismembered trunks, whose recent wounds

Are still unclosed; while from the bleeding socket

Of many a severed stalk, the milky juice Still slowly trickles, and betrays her path.

[Feeling a breeze.]

What a delicious breeze meets me in this spot!

Here may the zephyr, fragrant with the scent

Of lotuses, and laden with the spray Caught from the waters of the rippling stream,

Fold in its close embrace my fevered limbs.

[Walking and looking about.] She must be somewhere in the neighbourhood of this arbour of overhanging creepers enclosed by plantations of cane; [Looking down.] For at the entrance here I plainly see

A line of footsteps printed in the sand. Here are the fresh impressions of her feet;

Their well-known outline faintly marked in front,

More deeply towards the heel; betokening The graceful undulation of her gait.

I will peep through those branches.

[Walking and looking. With transport.]

Ah! now my eyes are gratified by an entrancing sight. Yonder is the beloved of my heart reclining on a rock strewn with flowers, and attended by her two friends. How fortunate! Concealed behind the leaves, I will listen to their conversation, without raising their suspicions. [Stands concealed, and gazes at them.]

[ŠAKOONTALÁ and her two attendants, holding fans in their hands, are discovered as described.]

PRIYAMVADÁ and ANASÚYÁ [fanning her. In a tone of affection.]. Dearest Šakoontalá, is the breeze raised by these broad lotus-leaves refreshing to you?

ŠAKOONTALÁ. Dear friends, why should you trouble yourselves to fan me?

[PRIYAMVADÁ and ANASÚYÁ look sorrowfully at one another.]

KING. Šakoontalá seems indeed to be seriously ill. [Thoughtfully.] Can it be the intensity of the heat that has affected her? or does my heart suggest the true cause of her malady? [Gazing at her passionately.] Why should I doubt it?

The maiden's spotless bosom is o'erspread With cooling balsam; on her slender arm Her only bracelet, twined with lotus-stalks,

Hangs loose and withered; her recumbent form

Betokens languor. Ne'er could noon-day sun

Inflict such fair disorder on a maid—

No, love, and love alone, is here to blame.

PRIYAMVADÁ [aside to ANASÚYÁ]. I have observed, Anasúyá, that Šakoontalá has been indisposed ever since her first interview with King Dushyanta. Depend upon it, her ailment is to be traced to that source.

ANASÚYÁ. The same suspicion, dear, has crossed my mind. But I will at once ask her and ascertain the truth. [Aloud.] Dear Šakoontalá, I am about to put a question to you. Your indisposition is really very serious.

ŠAKOONTALÁ [half rising from her couch]. What were you going to ask?

ANASÚYÁ. We know very little about love-matters, dear Šakoontalá; but for all that, I cannot help suspecting your present state to be something similar to that of the lovers we have heard about in romances. Tell us frankly what is the cause of your disorder. It is useless to apply a remedy, until the disease be understood.

KING. Anasúyá bears me out in my suspicion.

ŠAKOONTALÁ [aside]. I am, indeed, deeply in love; but cannot rashly disclose my passion to these young girls.

PRIYAMVADÁ. What Anasúyá says, dear Šakoontalá, is very just. Why give so little heed to your ailment? Every day you are becoming thinner; though I must confess your complexion is still as beautiful as ever.

KING. Priyamvadā speaks most truly.
Sunk is her velvet cheek; her wasted
bosom

Loses its fulness; e'en her slender waist
Grows more attenuate; her face is wan,
Her shoulders droop;—as when the vernal blasts

Sear the young blossoms of the Mādhavī, Blighting their bloom; so mournful is the change;

Yet in its sadness, fascinating still,
Inflicted by the mighty lord of love
On the fair figure of the hermit's daughter.

ŚAKOONTALĀ. Dear friends, to no one would I rather reveal the nature of my malady than to you; but I should only be troubling you.

PRIYAMVADĀ and ANASŪYĀ. Nay, this is the very point about which we are so solicitous. Sorrow shared with affectionate friends is relieved of half its poignancy.

KING. Pressed by the partners of her joys and griefs,

Her much beloved companions, to reveal
The cherished secret locked within her
breast,

She needs must utter it; although her looks

Encourage me to hope, my bosom throbs
As anxiously I listen for her answer.

ŚAKOONTALĀ. Know then, dear friends, that from the first moment the illustrious Prince who is the guardian of our sacred grove presented himself to my sight—

[Stops short, and appears confused.]

PRIYAMVADĀ and ANASŪYĀ. Say on,
dear Śakoontalā, say on.

ŚAKOONTALĀ. Ever since that happy moment, my heart's affections have been fixed upon him, and my energies of mind and body have all deserted me, as you see.

KING [with rapture]. Her own lips have uttered the words I most longed to hear.

Love lit the flame, and Love himself allays
My burning fever, as when gathering
clouds

Rise o'er the earth in summer's dazzling noon,
And grateful showers dispel the morning
heat.

ŚAKOONTALĀ. You must consent, then,
dear friends, to contrive some means by which I may find favour with the King, or you will have ere long to assist at my funeral.

KING. Enough! These words remove all my doubts.

PRIYAMVADĀ [aside to ANASŪYĀ]. She is far gone in love, dear Anasūyā, and no time ought to be lost. Since she has fixed her affections on a monarch who is the ornament of Puru's line, we need not hesitate for a moment to express our approval.

ANASŪYĀ. I quite agree with you.

PRIYAMVADĀ [aloud]. We wish you joy, dear Śakoontalā. Your affections are fixed on an object in every respect worthy of you. The noblest river will unite itself to the ocean, and the lovely Mādhavi-creeper clings naturally to the mango, the only tree capable of supporting it.

KING. Why need we wonder if the beautiful constellation Viśākhā pines to be united with the Moon?

ANASŪYĀ. By what stratagem can we best secure to our friend the accomplishment of her heart's desire both speedily and secretly?

PRIYAMVADĀ. The latter point is all we have to think about. As to 'speedily,' I look upon the whole affair as already settled.

ANASŪYĀ. How so?

PRIYAMVADĀ. Did you not observe how the King betrayed his liking by the tender manner in which he gazed upon her, and how thin he has become the last few days, as if he had been lying awake thinking of her?

KING [looking at himself]. Quite true!
I certainly am becoming thin from want of sleep:

As night by night in anxious thought I raise

This wasted arm to rest my sleepless head,

My jewelled bracelet, sullied by the tears
That trickle from my eyes in scalding
streams,

Slips towards my elbow from my shrivelled wrist.

Oft I replace the bauble, but in vain;
So easily it spans the fleshless limb
That 'e'en the rough and corrugated skin, Scarred by the bow-string, will not check its fall.

PRIYAMVADĀ [thoughtfully]. An idea strikes me, Anasūyā. Let śakoontalā write a love-letter; I will conceal it in a flower, and contrive to drop it in the King's path. He will surely mistake it for the remains of some sacred offering,
and will, in all probability, pick it up.

ANASŪYĀ. A very ingenious device! It has my entire approval; but what says śakoontalā?

ŚAKOONTALĀ. I must consider before I can consent to it.

PRIYAMVADĀ. Could you not, dear śakoontalā, think of some pretty composition in verse, containing a delicate declaration of your love?

ŚAKOONTALĀ. Well, I will do my best;
but my heart trembles when I think of the chances of a refusal.

KING [with rapture]. Too timid maid, here stands the man from whom Thou fearest a repulse; supremely blessed To call thee all his own. Well might he doubt

His title to thy love; but how could'st
thou
Believe thy beauty powerless to subdue
him?

PRIYAMVADĀ and ANASŪYĀ. You undervalue your own merits, dear śakoonttalā. What man in his senses would intercept with the skirt of his robe the bright rays of the autumnal moon, which alone can allay the fever of his body?

ŚAKOONTALĀ [smiling]. Then it seems
I must do as I am bid.

[Sits down and appears to be thinking.]

KING. How charming she looks! My very eyes forget to wink, jealous of losing even for an instant a sight so enchanting.

How beautiful the movement of her brow,
As through her mind love's tender fancies
flow!

And, as she weighs her thoughts, how sweet to trace

The ardent passion mantling in her face!

ŚAKOONTALĀ. Dear girls, I have thought of a verse, but I have no writing-materials at hand.

PRIYAMVADĀ. Write the letters with your nail on this lotus-leaf, which is smooth as a parrot's breast.

ŚAKOONTALĀ [after writing the verse].
Listen, dear friends, and tell me whether the ideas are appropriately expressed.

PRIYAMVADĀ and ANASŪYĀ. We are all attention.

ŚAKOONTALĀ [reads]. I know not the secret thy bosom conceals,

Thy form is not near me to gladden my
sight;

But sad is the tale that my fever reveals,
Of the love that consumes me by day and by night.

KING [advancing hastily towards her].
Nay, Love does but warm thee, fair maiden,—thy frame

Only droops like the bud in the glare of the noon;

But me he consumes with a pitiless flame,
As the beams of the day-star destroy the pale moon.

PRIYAMVADĀ and ANASŪYĀ [looking at him joyfully and rising to salute him].
Welcome, the desire of our hearts, that so speedily presents itself!

[ŚAKOONTALĀ makes an effort to rise.]

KING. Nay, trouble not thyself, dear maiden.

Move not to do me homage; let thy limbs
Still softly rest upon their flowery couch,
And gather fragrance from the lotus-stalks,

Bruised by the fevered contact of thy frame.

ANASŪYĀ. Deign, gentle Sir, to seat yourself on the rock on which our friend is reposing.

[The KING sits down. ŚAKOONTALĀ is confused.]

PRİYAMVADĀ. Any one may see at a glance that you are deeply attached to each other. But the affection I have for my friend prompts me to say something of which you hardly require to be informed.

KING. Do not hesitate to speak out, my good girl. If you omit to say what is in your mind, you may be sorry for it afterwards.

PRİYAMVADĀ. Is it not your special office as a King to remove the suffering of your subjects who are in trouble?

KING. Such is my duty, most assuredly.

PRİYAMVADĀ. Know, then, that our dear friend has been brought to her present state of suffering entirely through love for you. Her life is in your hands; take pity on her and restore her to health.

KING. Excellent maiden, our attachment is mutual. It is I who am the most honoured by it.

ŚAKOONTALĀ [looking at PRİYAMVADĀ]. What do you mean by detaining the King, who must be anxious to return to his royal consorts after so long a separation?

KING. Sweet maiden, banish from thy mind the thought

That I could love another. Thou dost reign

Supreme, without a rival, in my heart,
And I am thine alone; disown me not,
Else must I die a second deadlier death,
Killed by thy words, as erst by Kāma's shafts.

ANASŪYĀ. Kind Sir, we have heard it said that kings have many favourite consorts. You must not, then, by your behaviour towards our dear friend, give her relations cause to sorrow for her.

KING. Listen, gentle maiden, while in a few words I quiet your anxiety.

Though many beauteous forms my palace grace,
Henceforth two things alone will I esteem

The glory of my royal dynasty—
My sea-girt realm, and this most lovely maid.

PRİYAMVADĀ and ANASŪYĀ. We are satisfied by your assurances.

PRİYAMVADĀ [glancing on one side]. See, Anasūyā, there is our favourite little fawn running about in great distress, and turning its eyes in every direction as if looking for its mother; come, let us help the little thing to find her.

[Both move away.]

ŚAKOONTALĀ. Dear friends, dear friends, leave me not alone and unprotected. Why need you both go?

PRİYAMVADĀ and ANASŪYĀ. Unprotected! when the Protector of the world is at your side. [Exeunt.]

ŚAKOONTALĀ. What! have they both really left me?

KING. Distress not thyself, sweet maiden. Thy adorer is at hand to wait upon thee.

Oh let me tend thee, fair one, in the place
Of thy dear friends; and with broad lotus fans

Raise cooling breezes to refresh thy frame;
Or shall I rather, with caressing touch,
Allay the fever of thy limbs, and soothe
Thy aching feet, beauteous as blushing lilies?

ŚAKOONTALĀ. Nay, touch me not. I will not incur the censure of those whom I am bound to respect.

[Rises and attempts to go.]

KING. Fair one, the heat of noon has not yet subsided, and thy body is still feeble.

How canst thou quit thy fragrant couch of flowers,

And from thy throbbing bosom cast aside
Its covering of lotus-leaves, to brave
With weak and fainting limbs the noon-day heat? [Forces her to turn back.]

ŚAKOONTALĀ. Infringe not the rules of decorum, mighty descendant of Puru. Remember, though I love you, I have no power to dispose of myself.

KING. Why this fear of offending your relations, timid maid? When your venerable foster-father hears of it, he will not find fault with you. He knows that the law permits us to be united without consulting him.

In Indra's heaven, so at least 'tis said,
No nuptial rites prevail, nor is the bride
Led to the altar by her future lord;
But all in secret does the bridegroom plight

His troth, and each unto the other vow
Mutual allegiance. Such espousals, too, Are authorised on earth, and many daughters

Of royal saints thus wedded to their lords
Have still received their father's benison.

ŚAKOONTALĀ. Leave me, leave me; I must take counsel with my female friends.

KING. I will leave thee when—

ŚAKOONTALĀ. When?

KING. When I have gently stolen from thy lips

Their yet untasted nectar, to allay
The raging of my thirst, e'en as the bee
Sips the fresh honey from the opening
bud. [Attempts to raise her face.
ŚAKOONTALĀ tries to prevent
him.]

A VOICE [behind the scenes]. The loving birds, doomed by fate to nightly separation, must bid farewell to each other, for evening is at hand.

ŚAKOONTALĀ [in confusion]. Great
Prince, I hear the voice of the matron Gautami. She is coming this way to inquire after my health. Hasten and conceal yourself behind the branches.

KING. I will. [Conceals himself.]

[Enter GAUTAMI with a vase in her hand, preceded by two attendants.]

ATTENDANTS. This way, most venerable Gautami.

GAUTAMI [approaching ŚAKOONTALĀ].
My child, is the fever of thy limbs allayed?

ŚAKOONTALĀ. Venerable mother, there is certainly a change for the better.

GAUTAMI. Let me sprinkle you with this holy water, and all your ailments will depart. [Sprinkling ŚAKOONTALĀ's head.]
The day is closing, my child; come, let us go to the cottage. [They all move away.]

ŚAKOONTALĀ [aside]. Oh, my heart!
thou didst fear to taste of happiness when it was within thy reach. Now that the object of thy desires is torn from thee, how bitter will be thy remorse, how distracting thine anguish! [Moving on a few steps and stopping. Aloud.] Farewell! bower of creepers, sweet soother of my sufferings, farewell! may I soon again be happy under thy shade.

[Exit reluctantly with the others.]

KING [returning to his former seat in the arbour. Sighing]. Alas! how many are the obstacles to the accomplishment of our wishes!

Albeit she did coyly turn away

Her glowing cheek, and with her fingers
guard

Her pouting lips, that murmured a denial
In faltering accents, she did yield herself
A sweet reluctant captive to my will,
As eagerly I raised her lovely face;
But ere with gentle force I stole the kiss, Too envious Fate did mar my daring purpose.

Whither now shall I betake myself? I will tarry for a brief space in this bower of creepers, so endeared to me by the presence of my beloved Śakoontalā.

[Looking round.]

Here printed on the flowery couch I see
The fair impression of her slender limbs;
Here is the sweet confession of her love,
Traced with her nail upon the lotus-leaf;
And yonder are the withered lily-stalks
That graced her wrist. While all around

I view

Things that recall her image, can I quit
This bower, e'en though its living charm be fled?

A VOICE [in the air]. Great King.

Scarce is our evening sacrifice begun,
When evil demons, lurid as the clouds
That gather round the dying orb of day,

Cluster in hideous troops, obscene and dread,

About our altars, casting far and near Terrific shadows, while the sacred fire
Sheds a pale lustre o'er their ghostly shapes.

KING. I come to the rescue, I come.

[Exit.]

PRELUDE TO ACT IV

SCENE—The Garden of the Hermitage.

[Enter PRIYAMVADĀ and ANASŪYĀ in the act of gathering flowers.]

ANASŪYĀ. Although, dear Priyamvadā, it rejoices my heart to think that Śakoontalā has been happily united to a husband in every respect worthy of her, by the form of marriage prevalent among Indra's celestial musicians, nevertheless, I cannot help feeling somewhat uneasy in my mind.

PRIYAMVADĀ. How so?

ANASŪYĀ. You know that the pious King was gratefully dismissed by the hermits on the successful termination of their sacrificial rites. He has now returned to his capital, leaving Śakoontalā under our care; and it may be doubted whether, in the society of his royal consorts, he will not forget all that has taken place in this hermitage of ours.

PRIYAMVADĀ. On that score be at ease.
Persons of his noble nature are not so destitute of all honourable feeling. I confess, however, that there is one point about which I am rather anxious. What, think you, will Father Kanwa say when he hears what has occurred?

ANASŪYĀ. In my opinion, he will approve the marriage.

PRIYAMVADĀ. What makes you think
so?

ANASŪYĀ. From the first, it was always his fixed purpose to bestow the maiden on a husband worthy of her; and since heaven has given her such a husband, his wishes have been realised without any trouble to himself.

PRIYAMVADĀ [looking at the flower-basket]. We have gathered flowers enough for the sacred offering, dear Anasūyā.

ANASŪYĀ. Well, then, let us now gather more, that we may have wherewith to propitiate the guardian-deity of our dear Śakoontalā.

PRIYAMVADĀ. By all means.

[They continue gathering.]

A VOICE [behind the scenes]. Ho there!
See you not that I am here!

ANASŪYĀ [listening]. That must be the voice of a guest announcing his arrival.

PRIYAMVADĀ. Surely, Śakoontalā is not absent from the cottage. [Aside.] Her heart at least is absent, I fear.

ANASŪYĀ. Come along, come along; we have gathered flowers enough.

[They move away.]

THE SAME VOICE [behind the scenes].

Woe to thee, maiden, for daring to slight a guest like me!

Shall I stand here unwelcomed—even I,

A very mine of penitential merit,

Worthy of all respect? Shalt thou, rash
maid,

Thus set at nought the ever sacred ties

Of hospitality? and fix thy thoughts

Upon the cherished object of thy love,

While I am present? Thus I curse thee,
then—

He, even he of whom thou thinkest, he Shall think no more of thee; nor in his heart

Retain thine image. Vainly shalt thou strive

To waken his remembrance of the past;

He shall disown thee, even as the sot,

Roused from his midnight drunkenness, denies

The words he uttered in his revellings.

PRIYAMVADĀ. Alas! alas! I fear a terrible misfortune has occurred. Śakoontalā, from absence of mind, must have offended some guest whom she was bound to treat with respect. [Looking behind the scenes.] Ah! yes; I see; and not less a person than the great sage Durvāsas, who is known to be most irascible. He it is that has just cursed her, and is now retiring with hasty strides, trembling with passion, and looking as if nothing could turn him. His wrath is like a consuming fire.

ANASÚYÁ. Go quickly, dear Priyamvadá, throw yourself at his feet, and persuade him to come back, while I prepare a propitiatory offering for him, with water and refreshments.

PRIYAMVADÁ. I will. [Exit.]

ANASÚYÁ [advancing hastily a few steps and stumbling]. Alas! alas! this comes of being in a hurry. My foot has slipped, and my basket of flowers has fallen from my hand.

[Stays to gather them up.]

PRIYAMVADÁ [reëntering]. Well, dear Anasúyá, I have done my best; but what living being could succeed in pacifying such a cross-grained, ill-tempered old fellow? However, I managed to mollify him a little.

ANASÚYÁ [smiling]. Even a little was much for him. Say on.

PRIYAMVADÁ. When he refused to turn back, I implored his forgiveness in these words: 'Most venerable sage, pardon, I beseech you, this first offence of a young and inexperienced girl, who was ignorant of the respect due to your saintly character and exalted rank.'

ANASÚYÁ. And what did he reply?

PRIYAMVADÁ. 'My word must not be falsified; but at the sight of the ring of recognition the spell shall cease.' So saying, he disappeared.

ANASÚYÁ. Oh! then we may breathe again; for, now I think of it, the King himself, at his departure, fastened on Sakoontalá's finger, as a token of remembrance, a ring on which his own name was engraved. She has, therefore, a remedy for her misfortune at her own command.

PRIYAMVADÁ. Come, dear Anasúyá, let us proceed with our religious duties.

[They walk round.]

PRIYAMVADÁ [looking off the stage]. See, Anasúyá, there sits our dear friend, motionless as a statue, resting her face on her left hand, her whole mind absorbed in thinking of her absent husband. She can pay no attention to herself, much less to a stranger.

ANASÚYÁ. Priyamvadá, let this affair never pass our lips. We must spare our dear friend's feelings. Her constitution is too delicate to bear much emotion.

PRIYAMVADÁ. I agree with you. Who would think of watering a tender jasmine with hot water?

ACT IV

SCENE—The Neighbourhood of the Hermitage.

[Enter one of KANWA'S pupils just arisen from his couch at the dawn of day.]

PUPIL. My master, the venerable Kanwa, who is but lately returned from his pilgrimage, has ordered me to ascertain how the time goes. I have therefore come into the open air to see if it be still dark. [Walking and looking about.] Oh! the dawn has already broken.

Lo! in one quarter of the sky, the Moon, Lord of the herbs and night-expanding flowers,

Sinks towards his bed behind the western hills;

While in the east, preceded by the Dawn, His blushing charioteer, the glorious Sun Begins his course, and far into the gloom Casts the first radiance of his orient beams.

Hail; co-eternal orbs, that rise to set, And set to rise again; symbols divine Of man's reverses, life's vicissitudes.

And now, While the round Moon withdraws his looming disc Beneath the western sky, the full-blown flower

Of the night-loving lotus sheds her leaves In sorrow for his loss, bequeathing nought But the sweet memory of her loveliness To my bereaved sight; e'en as the bride Disconsolately mourns her absent lord, And yields her heart a prey to anxious grief.

ANASÚYÁ [entering abruptly]. Little as I know of the ways of the world, I cannot help thinking that King Dushyanta is treating Sakoontalá very improperly.

PUPIL. Well, I must let my revered preceptor know that it is time to offer the burnt oblation. [Exit.]

ANASŪYĀ. I am broad awake, but what shall I do? I have no energy to go about my usual occupations. My hands and feet seem to have lost their power. Well, Love has gained his object; and Love only is to blame for having induced our dear friend, in the innocence of her heart, to confide in such a perfidious man. Possibly, however, the imprecation of Durvāsas may be already taking effect. Indeed, I cannot otherwise account for the King's strange conduct, in allowing so long a time to elapse without even a letter; and that, too, after so many promises and protestations. I cannot think what to do unless we send him the ring which was to be the token of recognition. But which of these austere hermits could we ask to be the bearer of it? Then, again, Father Kanwa has just returned from his pilgrimage; and how am I to inform him of Śakoontalā's marriage to King Dushyanta, and her expectation of becoming soon a mother? I never could bring myself to tell him, even if I felt that Śakoontalā had been in fault, which she certainly has not. What is to be done?

PRİYAMVADĀ [entering joyfully]. Quick! quick! Anasūyā! come and assist in the joyful preparations for Śakoontalā's departure to her husband's palace.

ANASŪYĀ. My dear girl, what can you mean?

PRİYAMVADĀ. Listen, now, and I will tell you all about it. I went just now to Śakoontalā, to inquire whether she had slept comfortably—

ANASŪYĀ. Well, well; go on.

PRİYAMVADĀ. She was sitting with her face bowed down to the very ground with shame, when Father Kanwa entered, and, embracing her, of his own accord offered her his congratulations. 'I give thee joy, my child,' he said, 'we have had an auspicious omen. The priest who offered the oblation dropped it into the very centre of the sacred fire, though thick smoke obstructed his vision. Henceforth thou wilt cease to be an object of compassion. This very day I purpose sending thee, under the charge of certain trusty hermits, to the King's palace; and shall deliver thee into the hands of thy husband, as I would commit knowledge to the keeping of a wise and faithful student.'

ANASŪYĀ. Who, then, informed the holy father of what passed in his absence?

PRİYAMVADĀ. As he was entering the sanctuary of the consecrated fire, an invisible being chanted a verse in celestial strains.

ANASŪYĀ [with astonishment]. Indeed! pray repeat it.

PRİYAMVADĀ [repeating the verse].
Glows in thy daughter King Dushyanta's glory,
As in the sacred tree the mystic fire;
Let worlds rejoice to hear the welcome story,
And may the son immortalize the sire.

ANASŪYĀ [embracing PRİYAMVADĀ]. Oh, my dear Priyamvadā, what delightful news! I am pleased beyond measure; yet when I think that we are to lose our dear Śakoontalā this very day, a feeling of melancholy mingles with my joy.

PRİYAMVADĀ. We shall find means of consoling ourselves after her departure. Let the dear creature only be made happy at any cost.

ANASŪYĀ. Yes, yes, Priyamvadā, it shall be so; and now to prepare the bridal array. I have always looked forward to this occasion, and some time since, I deposited a beautiful garland of Keśara flowers in a cocoa-nut box, and suspended it on a bough of yonder mango-tree. Be good enough to stretch out your hand and take it down, while I compound unguents and perfumes with this consecrated paste and these blades of sacred grass.

PRİYAMVADĀ. Very well.

[Exit ANASŪYĀ. PRİYAMVADĀ takes down the flowers.]

A VOICE [behind the scenes]. Gautamī bid Śārṅgarava and the others hold themselves in readiness to escort Śakoontalā.

PRIYAMVADÁ [listening]. Quick, quick, Anasúyá! They are calling the hermits who are to go with śakoontalá to Hastinapur.

ANASÚYÁ [reëntering with the perfumed unguents in her hand]. Come along then, Priyamvadá; I am ready to go with you.

[They walk away.]

PRIYAMVADÁ [looking]. See! there sits śakoontalá, her locks arranged even at this early hour of the morning. The holy women of the hermitage are congratulating her, and invoking blessings on her head, while they present her with wedding-gifts and offerings of consecrated wild-rice. Let us join them.

[They approach.]

[ŚAKOONTALÁ is seen seated, with women surrounding her, occupied in the manner described.]

FIRST WOMAN [to ŚAKOONTALÁ]. My child, may'st thou receive the title of 'Chief-queen,' and may thy husband delight to honour thee above all others!

SECOND WOMAN. My child, may'st thou be the mother of a hero!

THIRD WOMAN. My child, may'st thou be highly honoured by thy lord!

[Escort all the women, excepting GAUTAMÍ, after blessing ŚAKOONTALÁ.]

PRIYAMVADÁ and ANASÚYÁ [approaching]. Dear śakoontalá, we are come to assist you at your toilet, and may a blessing attend it!

ŚAKOONTALÁ. Welcome, dear friends, welcome. Sit down here.

PRIYAMVADÁ and ANASÚYÁ [taking the baskets containing the bridal decorations, and sitting down]. Now, then, dearest, prepare to let us dress you. We must first rub your limbs with these perfumed unguents.

ŚAKOONTALÁ. I ought indeed to be grateful for your kind offices, now that I am so soon to be deprived of them. Dear, dear friends, perhaps I shall never be dressed by you again.

[Bursts into tears.]

PRIYAMVADÁ and ANASÚYÁ. Weep not, dearest; tears are out of season on such a happy occasion.

[They wipe away her tears and begin to dress her.]

PRIYAMVADÁ. Alas! these simple flowers and rude ornaments, which our hermitage offers in abundance, do not set off your beauty as it deserves.

[Enter TWO YOUNG HERMITS, bearing costly presents.]

BOTH HERMITS. Here are ornaments suitable for a queen.

[The women look at them in astonishment.]

GAUTAMÍ. Why, Nárada, my son, whence came these?

FIRST HERMIT. You owe them to the devotion of Father Kanwa.

GAUTAMÍ. Did he create them by the power of his own mind?

SECOND HERMIT. Certainly not; but you shall hear. The venerable sage ordered us to collect flowers for śakoontalá from the forest-trees; and we went to the wood for that purpose, when

Straightway depending from a neighbouring tree

Appeared a robe of linen tissue, pure
And spotless as a moonbeam—mystic pledge

Of bridal happiness; another tree
Distilled a roseate dye wherewith to stain
The lady's feet; and other branches near Glistened with rare and costly ornaments.
While, 'mid the leaves, the hands of forest-nymphs,

Vying in beauty with the opening buds,
Presented us with sylvan offerings.

PRIYAMVADÁ [looking at ŚAKOONTALÁ]. The wood-nymphs have done you honour, indeed. This favour doubtless signifies that you are soon to be received as a happy wife into your husband's house, and are from this time forward to become the partner of his royal fortunes.

[ŚAKOONTALÁ appears abashed.]

FIRST HERMIT. Come, Gautamí; Father Kanwa has finished his ablutions. Let us go and inform him of the favour we have received from the deities who preside over our trees.

SECOND HERMIT. By all means.

[Eacunt.]
PRIYAMVADĀ and ANASŪYĀ. Alas! what are we to do? We are unused to such splendid decorations, and are at a loss how to arrange them. Our knowledge of painting must be our guide. We will dispose the ornaments as we have seen them in pictures.

ŚAKOONTALĀ. Whatever pleases you, dear girls, will please me. I have perfect confidence in your taste.

[They commence dressing her.]

[Enter KANWA, having just finished his ablutions.]

KANWA. This day my loved one leaves me, and my heart
Is heavy with its grief; the streams of sorrow,
Choked at the source, repress my faltering voice.

I have no words to speak; mine eyes are dimmed
By the dark shadows of the thoughts that rise

Within my soul. If such the force of grief
In an old hermit parted from his nursling,
What anguish must the stricken parent feel—

Bereft for ever of an only daughter.

[Advances towards ŚAKOONTALĀ.]

PRIYAMVADĀ and ANASŪYĀ. Now, dearest śakoontalā, we have finished decorating you. You have only to put on the two linen mantles.

[ŚAKOONTALĀ rises and puts them on.]

GAUTAMĪ. Daughter, see, here comes thy foster-father; he is eager to fold thee in his arms; his eyes swim with tears of joy. Hasten to do him reverence.

ŚAKOONTALĀ [reverently]. My father, I salute you.

KANWA. My daughter,
May'st thou be highly honoured by thy lord,
E'en as Yayāti śarmishthā adored!

And, as she bore him Puru, so may'st thou Bring forth a son to whom the world shall bow!

GAUTAMĪ. Most venerable father, she accepts your benediction as if she already possessed the boon it confers.

KANWA. Now come this way, my child, and walk reverently round these sacrificial fires.

[They all walk round.]

KANWA [repeats a prayer in the metre of the Rig-veda].

Holy flames, that gleam around
Every altar's hallowed ground;
Holy flames, whose frequent food
Is the consecrated wood,
And for whose encircling bed,
Sacred Kuśa-grass is spread;
Holy flames, that waft to heaven
Sweet oblations daily given,
Mortal guilt to purge away,
Hear, oh hear me, when I pray—
Purify my child this day!

Now then, my daughter, set out on thy journey. [Looking on one side.] Where are thy attendants, śārngarava and the others?

YOUNG HERMIT [entering]. Here we are, most venerable father.

KANWA. Lead the way for thy sister.

ŚĀRNGARAVA. Come, śakoontalā, let us proceed.

[All move away.]

KANWA. Hear me, ye trees that surround our hermitage!
śakoontalā ne'er moistened in the stream
Her own parched lips, till she had fondly poured

Its purest water on your thirsty roots;
And oft, when she would fain have decked her hair

With your thick-clustering blossoms, in her love

She robbed you not e'en of a single flower.
Her highest joy was ever to behold
The early glory of your opening buds;
Oh, then, dismiss her with a kind farewell.
This very day she quits her father's home,
To seek the palace of her wedded lord.

[The note of a Koil is heard.]

Hark! heard'st thou not the answer of the trees,

Our sylvan sisters, warbled in the note
Of the melodious Koil? they dismiss
Their dear Śakoontalá with loving wishes.

VOICES IN THE AIR. Fare thee well, journey pleasantly on amid streams
Where the lotuses bloom, and the sun's glowing beams

Never pierce the deep shade of the wide-spreading trees,

While gently around thee shall sport the cool breeze;

Then light be thy footsteps and easy thy tread,

Beneath thee shall carpets of lilies be spread;

Journey on to thy lord, let thy spirit be gay,

For the smiles of all Nature shall gladden thy way.

[All listen with astonishment.]

GAUTAMI. Daughter! the nymphs of the wood, who love thee with the affection of a sister, dismiss thee with kind wishes for thy happiness. Take thou leave of them reverentially.

ŚAKOONTALÁ [bowing respectfully and walking on. Aside to her friend]. Eager as I am, dear Priyamvadá, to see my husband once more, yet my feet refuse to move, now that I am quitting forever
the home of my girlhood.

PRIYAMVADÁ. You are not the only one, dearest, to feel the bitterness of parting.
As the time of separation approaches, the whole grove seems to share your anguish.

In sorrow for thy loss, the herd of deer Forget to browse; the peacock on the lawn

Ceases its dance; the very trees around Shed their pale leaves, like tears, upon the ground.

ŚAKOONTALÁ [recollecting herself]. My father, let me, before I go, bid adieu to my pet jasmine, the Moonlight of the Grove. I love the plant almost as a sister.

KANWA. Yes, yes, my child, I remember thy sisterly affection for the creeper.

Here it is on the right.

ŚAKOONTALÁ [approaching the jasmine].
My beloved jasmine! most brilliant of climbing plants, how sweet it is to see thee cling thus fondly to thy husband, the mango-tree; yet, prithee, turn thy twining arms for a moment in this direction to embrace thy sister; she is going far away, and may never see thee again.

KANWA. Daughter, the cherished purpose of my heart

Has ever been to wed thee to a man
That should be worthy of thee; such a spouse

Hast thou thyself, by thine own merits, won.

To him thou goest, and about his neck
Soon shalt thou cling confidently, as now Thy favourite Jasmine twines its loving arms

Around the sturdy mango. Leave thou it
To its protector—e'en as I consign

Thee to thy lord, and henceforth from my mind

Banish all anxious thought on thy behalf.

Proceed on thy journey, my child.

ŚAKOONTALÁ [to PRIYAMVADÁ and ANASÚYÁ]. To you, my sweet companions, I leave it as a keepsake. Take charge of it when I am gone.

PRIYAMVADÁ and ANASÚYÁ [bursting into tears]. And to whose charge do you leave us, dearest? Who will care for us when you are gone?

KANWA. For shame, Anasúyá! dry your tears. Is this the way to cheer your friend at a time when she needs your support and consolation? [All move on.]

ŚAKOONTALÁ. My father, see you there my pet deer, grazing close to the hermitage? She expects soon to fawn, and even now the weight of the little one she carries hinders her movements. Do not forget to send me word when she becomes a mother.

KANWA. I will not forget it.

ŚAKOONTALÁ [feeling herself drawn back]. What can this be, fastened to my dress? [Turns round.]

KANWA. My daughter,

It is the little fawn, thy foster-child.
 Poor helpless orphan! it remembers well
 How with a mother's tenderness and love Thou didst protect it, and with grains of rice
 From thine own hand didst daily nourish
 it;
 And, ever and anon, when some sharp thorn
 Had pierced its mouth, how gently thou didst tend
 The bleeding wound, and pour in healing balm.
 The grateful nursling clings to its protectress,
 Mutely imploring leave to follow her.

ŚAKOONTALĀ. My poor little fawn! dost thou ask to follow an ungrateful wretch who hesitates not to desert her companions! When thy mother died, soon after thy birth, I supplied her place, and reared thee with my own hand; and now that thy second mother is about to leave thee, who will care for thee? My father, be thou a mother to her. My child, go back, and be a daughter to my father.

[Moves on, weeping.]

KANWA. Weep not, my daughter, check the gathering tear
 That lurks beneath thine eyelid, ere it
 flow
 And weaken thy resolve; be firm and true—
 True to thyself and me; the path of life
 Will lead o'er hill and plain, o'er rough and smooth,
 And all must feel the steepness of the
 way;
 Though rugged be thy course, press boldly
 on.

ŚĀRNGARAVA. Venerable Sire! the sacred precept is:—"Accompany thy friend as far as the margin of the first stream."
 Here, then, we are arrived at the border of a lake. It is time for you to give us your final instructions and return.

KANWA. Be it so; let us tarry for a moment under the shade of this fig-tree.

[They do so. Aside.] I must think of some appropriate message to send to his Majesty King Dushyanta. [Reflects.]

ŚAKOONTALĀ [aside to ANASŪYĀ]. See, see, dear Anasūyā, the poor female Chakravāka-bird, whom cruel fate dooms to nightly separation from her mate, calls to him in mournful notes from the other side of the stream, though he is only hidden from her view by the spreading leaves of the water-lily. Her cry is so piteous that I could almost fancy she was lamenting her hard lot in intelligible words.

ANASŪYĀ. Say not so, dearest:

Fond bird! though sorrow lengthen out her night

Of widowhood, yet with a cry of joy
 She hails the morning light that brings
 her mate

Back to her side. The agony of parting Would wound us like a sword, but that its edge

Is blunted by the hope of future meeting.

KANWA. ŚĀRNGARAVA! when you have introduced Śakoontalā into the presence of the King, you must give him this message from me:—

ŚĀRNGARAVA. Let me hear it, venerable father.

KANWA. This is it:—

Most puissant prince! we here present before thee

One thou art bound to cherish and receive
 As thine own wife; yea, even to enthrone
 As thine own queen—worthy of equal
 love

With thine imperial consorts. So much,
 Sire,

We claim of thee as justice due to us,
 In virtue of our holy character,
 In virtue of thine honourable rank,
 In virtue of the pure spontaneous love
 That secretly grew up 'twixt thee and
 her,

Without consent or privy of us.

We ask no more—the rest we freely leave
 To thy just feeling and to destiny.

ŚĀRNGARAVA. A most suitable message!
 I will take care to deliver it correctly.

KANWA. And, now, my child, a few words of advice for thee. We hermits, though we live secluded from the world are not ignorant of worldly matters.

ŚARNGARAVA. No, indeed. Wise men are conversant with all subjects.

KANWA. Listen, then, my daughter. When thou reachest thy husband's palace, and art admitted into his family,

Honour thy betters; ever be respectful
To those above thee; and, should others
share

Thy husband's love, ne'er yield thyself a prey

To jealousy; but ever be a friend,
A loving friend, to those who rival thee
In his affections. Should thy wedded lord Treat thee with harshness, thou must never be

Harsh in return, but patient and submissive.

Be to thy menials courteous, and to all
Placed under thee, considerate and kind;
Be never self-indulgent, but avoid Excess in pleasure; and, when fortune smiles,

Be not puffed up. Thus to thy husband's
house

Wilt thou a blessing prove, and not a curse.

What thinks Gautamí of this advice?

GAUTAMÍ. An excellent compendium, truly, of every wife's duties! Lay it well to heart, my daughter.

KANWA. Come, my beloved child, one parting embrace for me and for thy companions, and then we leave thee.

ŚAKOONTALÁ. My father, must Priyam-vadá and Anasúyá really return with you?
They are very dear to me.

KANWA. Yes, my child; they, too, in good time, will be given in marriage to suitable husbands. It would not be proper for them to accompany thee to such a public place. But Gautamí shall be thy companion.

ŚAKOONTALÁ [embracing him]. Removed from thy bosom, my beloved father, like a young tendril of the sandal-tree torn from its home in the western mountains, how shall I be able to support life in a foreign soil?

KANWA. Daughter, thy fears are groundless.

Soon shall thy lord prefer thee to the rank
Of his own consort; and unnumbered cares

Befitting his imperial dignity Shall constantly engross thee. Then the bliss

Of bearing him a son—a noble boy,
Bright as the day-star, shall transport thy
soul

With new delights, and little shalt thou reck

Of the light sorrow that afflicts thee now
At parting from thy father and thy friends.

[ŚAKOONTALÁ throws herself at her foster-father's feet.]

KANWA. Blessings on thee, my child!
May all my hopes of thee be realized!

ŚAKOONTALÁ [approaching her friends].
Come, my two loved companions, embrace me, both of you together.

PRIYAMVADÁ and ANASÚYÁ [embracing her]. Dear Śakoontalá, remember, if the King should by any chance be slow in recognizing you, you have only to show him this ring, on which his own name is engraved.

ŚAKOONTALÁ. The bare thought of it puts me in a tremor.

PRIYAMVADÁ and ANASÚYÁ. There is no real cause for fear, dearest. Excessive affection is too apt to suspect evil where none exists.

ŚARNGARAVA. Come, lady, we must hasten on. The sun is rising in the heavens.

ŚAKOONTALÁ [looking towards the hermitage]. Dear father, when shall I ever see this hallowed grove again?

KANWA. I will tell thee; listen:—

When thou hast passed a long and blissful
life

As King Dushyanta's queen, and jointly shared

With all the earth his ever-watchful care;

And hast beheld thine own heroic son,
Matchless in arms, united to a bride
In happy wedlock; when his aged sire,
Thy faithful husband, hath to him resigned

The helm of state; then, weary of the
world,

Together with Dushyanta thou shalt seek
The calm seclusion of thy former home;
There amid holy scenes to be at peace,
Till thy pure spirit gain its last release.

GAUTAMÍ. Come, my child, the favourable time for our journey is fast passing.
Let thy father return. Venerable Sire, be thou the first to move homewards, or these last words will never end.

KANWA. Daughter, detain me no longer. My religious duties must not be interrupted.

SAKOONTALÁ [again embracing her foster-father]. Beloved father, thy frame is much enfeebled by penitential exercises.
Do not, oh! do not, allow thyself to sorrow too much on my account.

KANWA [sighing]. How, O my child, shall my bereav'd heart
Forget its bitterness, when, day by day,
Full in my sight shall grow the tender
plants

Reared by thy care, or sprung from hallowed grain
Which thy loved hands have strewn around the door—

A frequent offering to our household gods?

Go, my daughter, and may thy journey be prosperous. [Exit SAKOONTALÁ with her escort.]

PRİYAMVADÁ and ANASÚYÁ [gazing after SAKOONTALÁ]. Alas! alas! she is gone, and now the trees hide our darling from our view.

KANWA [sighing]. Well, Anasúyá, your sister has departed. Moderate your grief, both of you, and follow me. I go back to the hermitage.

PRİYAMVADÁ and ANASÚYÁ. Holy father, the sacred grove will be a desert without Sakoontalá. How can we ever return to it!

KANWA. It is natural enough that your affection should make you view it in this light. [Walking pensively on.] As for me, I am quite surprised at myself. Now that I have fairly dismissed her to her husband's house, my mind is easy; for,
indeed,

A daughter is a loan—a precious jewel
Lent to a parent till her husband claim
her.

And now that to her rightful lord and
master

I have delivered her, my burdened soul
Is lightened, and I seem to breathe more freely. [Exeunt.]

ACT V

SCENE—A Room in the Palace

[*The King DUSHYANTA and the Jester
MÁTHAVYA are discovered seated.*]

MÁTHAVYA [listening]. Hark! my dear friend, listen a minute, and you will hear sweet sounds proceeding from the music-room. Some one is singing a charming air. Who can it be? Oh! I know. The queen Hansapadiká is practising her notes, that she may greet you with a new song.

KING. Hush! Let me listen.

A VOICE [sings behind the scenes]. How often hither didst thou rove,
Sweet bee, to kiss the mango's cheek;
Oh! leave not, then, thy early love,
The lily's honeyed lip to seek.

KING. A most impassioned strain,
truly!

MÁTHAVYA. Do you understand the meaning of the words?

KING [smiling]. She means to reprove me, because I once paid her great attention, and have lately deserted her for the queen Vasumatí. Go, my dear fellow, and tell Hansapadiká from me that I take her delicate reproof as it is intended.

MÁTHAVYA. Very well. [Rising from his seat]. But stay—I don't much relish being sent to bear the brunt of her jealousy. The chances are that she will have me seized by the hair of the head and beaten to a jelly. I would as soon expose myself, after a vow of celibacy, to the seductions of a lovely nymph, as encounter the fury of a jealous woman.

KING. Go, go; you can disarm her wrath by a civil speech; but give her my message.

MÁTHAVYA. What must be must be, I suppose. [Exit.]

KING [aside]. Strange! that song has filled me with a most peculiar sensation. A melancholy feeling has come over me, and I seem to yearn after some long-forgotten object of affection. Singular, indeed! but

Not seldom in our happy hours of ease,
When thought is still, the sight of some fair form,

Or mournful fall of music breathing low,
Will stir strange fancies, thrilling all the
soul

With a mysterious sadness, and a sense
Of vague yet earnest longing. Can it be
That the dim memory of events long past,
Or friendships formed in other states of being,

Flits like a passing shadow o'er the spirit? [Remains pensive and sad.]

[Enter the CHAMBERLAIN, named VÁTAYANA.]

CHAMBERLAIN. Alas! to what an advanced period of life have I attained!

Even this wand betrays the lapse of years;

In youthful days 'twas but a useless badge
And symbol of my office; now it serves
As a support to prop my tottering steps.

Ah me! I feel very unwilling to announce to the King that a deputation of young hermits from the sage Kanwa has arrived, and craves an immediate audience. Certainly, his Majesty ought not to neglect a matter of sacred duty, yet I hardly like to trouble him when he has just risen from the judgment-seat. Well, well; a monarch's business is to sustain the world, and he must not expect much repose; because—

Onward, for ever onward, in his car
The unwearied Sun pursues his daily
course,

Nor tarries to unyoke his glittering steeds.
And, ever moving, speeds the rushing
Wind

Through boundless space, filling the universe

With his life-giving breezes. Day and
night,

The King of Serpents on his thousand heads

Upholds the incumbent earth; and even so,
Unceasing toil is aye the lot of kings,
Who, in return, draw nurture from their subjects.

I will therefore deliver my message.

[Walking on and looking about.] Ah!
here comes the King.

His subjects are his children; through the
day,

Like a fond father, to supply their wants,
Incessantly he labours; wearied now,
The monarch seeks seclusion and repose;
E'en as the prince of elephants defies
The sun's fierce heat, and leads the fainting herd

To verdant pastures, ere his wayworn limbs

He yields to rest beneath the cooling shade.

[Approaching.] Victory to the King!
So please your Majesty, some hermits who live in a forest near the Snowy Mountains have arrived here, bringing certain women with them. They have a message to deliver from the sage Kanwa, and desire an audience. I await your Majesty's commands.

KING [respectfully]. A message from the sage Kanwa, did you say?

CHAMBERLAIN. Even so, my liege.

KING. Tell my domestic priest Somaráta to receive the hermits with due honour, according to the prescribed form. He may then himself introduce them into my presence. I will await them in a place suitable for the reception of such holy guests.

CHAMBERLAIN. Your Majesty's commands shall be obeyed. [Exit.]

KING [rising and addressing the WARDER]. Vetravati, lead the way to the chamber of the consecrated fire.

WARDER. This way, Sire.

KING [walking on, with the air of one oppressed by the cares of Government.]

People are generally contented and happy when they have gained their desires; but kings have no sooner attained the object of their aspirations than all their troubles begin.

'Tis a fond thought that to attain the end And object of ambition is to rest: Success doth only mitigate the fever Of anxious expectation; soon the fear Of losing what we have, the constant care Of guarding it, doth weary. Ceaseless toil Must be the lot of him who with his hands Supports the canopy that shields his subjects.

TWO HERALDS [behind the scenes]. May the King be victorious!

FIRST HERALD. Honour to him who labours day by day For the world's weal, forgetful of his own; Like some tall tree that with its stately head Endures the solar beam, while underneath It yields refreshing shelter to the weary.

SECOND HERALD. Let but the monarch wield his threatening rod And e'en the guilty tremble; at his voice The rebel spirit cowers; his grateful subjects Acknowledge him their guardian; rich and poor Hail him a faithful friend—a loving kinsman.

KING. Weary as I was before, this complimentary address has refreshed me. [Walks on.]

WARDER. Here is the terrace of the hallowed fire-chamber, and yonder stands the cow that yields the milk for the oblations. The sacred enclosure has been recently purified, and looks clean and beautiful. Ascend, Sire.

KING [leans on the shoulders of his attendants, and ascends]. Vetravati, what can possibly be the message that the venerable Kanwa has sent me by these hermits?

Perchance their sacred rites have been disturbed

By demons, or some evil has befallen The innocent herds, their favourites, that graze

Within the precincts of the hermitage; Or haply, through my sins, some withering blight

Has nipped the creeping plants that spread their arms

Around the hallowed grove. Such troubled thoughts

Crowd through my mind, and fill me with misgiving.

WARDER. If you ask my opinion, Sire, I think the hermits merely wish to take an opportunity to testifying their loyalty, and are therefore come to offer homage to your Majesty.

[Enter the HERMITS leading ŚAKOONTALĀ, attended by GAUTAMĪ; and in advance of them, the CHAMBERLAIN and the DOMESTIC PRIEST.]

CHAMBERLAIN. This way, reverend Sirs, this way.

ŚĀRNGARAVA. O śāradwata,

'Tis true the monarch lacks no royal grace,

Nor ever swerves from justice; true, his people,

Yea such as in life's humblest walks are found,

Refrain from evil courses; still to me, A lonely hermit reared in solitude,

This throng appears bewildering, and I seem

To look upon a burning house, whose inmates

Are running to and fro in wild dismay.

ŚĀRADWATA. It is natural that the first sight of the King's capital should affect you in this manner; my own sensations are very similar.

As one just bathed beholds the man polluted;

As one late purified, the yet impure;

As one awake looks on the yet unawakened;

Or as the freeman gazes on the thrall,
So I regard this crowd of pleasure-seekers.

ŚAKOONTALĀ [feeling a quivering sensation in her right eyelid, and suspecting a bad omen]. Alas! what means this throbbing of my right eyelid?

GAUTAMĪ. Heaven avert the evil omen, my child! May the guardian deities of thy husband's family convert it into a sign of good fortune! [Walks on.]

PRIEST [pointing to the KING]. Most reverend Sirs, there stands the protector of the four classes of the people; the guardian of the four conditions of the priesthood. He has just left the judgment-seat, and is waiting for you. Behold him!

ŚĀRNGARAVA. Great Brāhman, we are happy in thinking that the King's power is exerted for the protection of all classes of his subjects. We have not come as petitioners—we have the fullest confidence in the generosity of his nature.

The loftiest trees bend humbly to the ground

Beneath the teeming burden of their fruit;
High in the vernal sky the pregnant clouds

Suspend their stately course, and, hanging low,

Scatter their sparkling treasures o'er the earth;

And such is true benevolence; the good
Are never rendered arrogant by riches.

WARDER. So please your Majesty, I judge from the placid countenance of the hermits that they have no alarming message to deliver.

KING [looking at ŚAKOONTALĀ]. But the lady there—

Who can she be, whose form of matchless grace

Is half concealed beneath her flowing veil?

Among the sombre hermits she appears
Like a fresh bud 'mid sear and yellow leaves.

WARDER. So please your Majesty, my curiosity is also roused, but no conjecture occurs to my mind. This at least is certain, that she deserves to be looked at more closely.

KING. True; but it is not right to gaze at another man's wife.

ŚAKOONTALĀ [placing her hand on her bosom. Aside]. O my heart, why this throbbing? Remember thy lord's affection, and take courage.

PRIEST [advancing]. These holy men have been received with all due honour. One of them has now a message to deliver from his spiritual superior. Will your Majesty deign to hear it?

KING. I am all attention.

HERMITS [extending their hands]. Victory to the King!

KING. Accept my respectful greeting.

HERMITS. May the desires of your soul be accomplished!

KING. I trust no one is molesting you in the prosecution of your religious rites.

HERMITS. Who dares disturb our penitential rites

When thou art our protector? Can the night

Prevail to cast her shadows o'er the earth
While the sun's beams irradiate the sky?

KING. Such, indeed, is the very meaning of my title—'Defender of the Just.' I trust the venerable Kanwa is in good health. The world is interested in his well-being.

HERMITS. Holy men have health and prosperity in their own power. He bade us greet your Majesty, and, after kind inquiries, deliver this message.

KING. Let me hear his commands.

ŚĀRNGARAVA. He bade us say that he feels happy in giving his sanction to the marriage which your Majesty contracted with this lady, his daughter, privately and by mutual agreement. Because,

By us thou art esteemed the most illustrious

Of noble husbands; and Śakoontalā, Virtue herself in human form revealed. Great Brahmā hath in equal yoke united A bride unto a husband worthy of her; Henceforth let none make blasphemous complaint

That he is pleased with ill-assorted unions.

Since, therefore, she expects soon to be the mother of thy child, receive her into thy palace, that she may perform, in conjunction with thee, the ceremonies prescribed by religion on such an occasion.

GAUTAMĪ. So please your Majesty, I would add a few words; but why should I intrude my sentiments when an opportunity of speaking my mind has never been allowed me?

She took no counsel with her kindred; thou

Didst not confer with thine, but all alone Didst solemnize thy nuptials with thy wife.

Together, then, hold converse; let us leave you.

ŚAKOONTALĀ [aside]. Ah! how I tremble for my lord's reply.

KING. What strange proposal is this?

ŚAKOONTALĀ [aside]. His words are like fire to me.

ŚĀRNGARAVA. What do I hear? Dost thou, then, hesitate? Monarch, thou art well acquainted with the ways of the world, and knowest that

A wife, however virtuous and discreet, If she live separate from her wedded lord, Though under shelter of her parent's roof, Is mark for vile suspicion. Let her dwell Beside her husband, though he hold her not

In his affection. So her kinsmen will it.

KING. Do you really mean to assert that I ever married this lady?

ŚAKOONTALĀ [despondingly. Aside]. O my heart, thy worst misgivings are confirmed.

ŚĀRNGARAVA. Is it becoming in a monarch to depart from the rules of justice, because he repents of his engagements?

KING. I cannot answer a question which is based on a mere fabrication.

ŚĀRNGARAVA. Such inconstancy is fortunately not common, except in men intoxicated by power.

KING. Is that remark aimed at me?

GAUTAMĪ. Be not ashamed, my daughter. Let me remove thy veil for a little space. Thy husband will then recognize thee. [Removes her veil.]

KING [gazing at ŚAKOONTALĀ. Aside].

What charms are here revealed before mine eyes!

Truly no blemish mars the symmetry Of that fair form; yet can I ne'er believe She is my wedded wife; and like a bee That circles round the flower whose nectared cup

Teems with the dew of morning, I must pause

Ere eagerly I taste the proffered sweetness. [Remains wrapped in thought.]

WARDER. How admirably does our royal master's behaviour prove his regard for justice! Who else would hesitate for a moment when good fortune offered for his acceptance a form of such rare beauty?

ŚĀRNGARAVA. Great King, why art thou silent?

KING. Holy men, I have revolved the matter in my mind; but the more I think of it, the less able am I to recollect that I ever contracted an alliance with this lady. What answer, then, can I possibly give you when I do not believe myself to be her husband, and I plainly see that she is soon to become a mother?

ŚAKOONTALĀ [aside]. Woe! woe! Is our very marriage to be called in question by my own husband? Ah me! is this to be the end of all my bright visions of wedded happiness?

ŚĀRNGARAVA. Beware! Beware how thou insult the holy Sage!

Remember how he generously allowed
Thy secret union with his foster-child;
And how, when thou didst rob him of his
treasure,

He sought to furnish thee excuse, when rather

He should have cursed thee for a ravisher.

ŚARADWATA. Śárngarava, speak to him no more. Śakoontalá, our part is performed; we have said all we have to say, and the King has replied in the manner thou hast heard. It is now thy turn to give him convincing evidence of thy marriage.

ŚAKOONTALÁ [aside]. Since his feeling towards me has undergone a complete revolution, what will it avail to revive old recollections? One thing is clear—I shall soon have to mourn my own widowhood. [Aloud.] My revered husband—[Stops short.] But no—I dare not address thee by this title, since thou hast refused to acknowledge our union. Noble descendant of Puru! It is not worthy of thee to betray an innocent-minded girl, and disown her in such terms, after having so lately and so solemnly plighted thy vows to her in the hermitage.

KING [stopping his ears]. I will hear no more. Be such a crime far from my thoughts!

What evil spirit can possess thee, lady,
That thou dost seek to sully my good
name

By base aspersions, like a swollen torrent,
That, leaping from its narrow bed, o'er-throws

The tree upon its bank, and strives to blend

Its turbid waters with the crystal stream?

ŚAKOONTALÁ. If, then, thou really believest me to be the wife of another, and thy present conduct proceeds from some cloud that obscures thy recollection, I will easily convince thee by this token.

KING. An excellent idea!

ŚAKOONTALÁ [feeling for the ring].
Alas! alas! woe is me! There is no ring on my finger!

[Looks with anguish at GAUTAMÍ.]

GAUTAMÍ. The ring must have slipped off when thou wast in the act of offering homage to the holy water of śachí's sacred pool, near śakrávatára.

KING [smiling]. People may well talk of the readiness of woman's invention!
Here is an instance of it.

ŚAKOONTALÁ. Say, rather, of the omnipotence of fate. I will mention another circumstance, which may yet convince
thee.

KING. By all means let me hear it at once.

ŚAKOONTALÁ. One day, while we were seated in a jasmine-bower, thou didst pour into the hollow of thine hand some water, sprinkled by a recent shower in the cup of a lotus-blossom—

KING. I am listening; proceed.

ŚAKOONTALÁ. At that instant, my adopted child, the little fawn, with soft,
long eyes, came running towards us.
Upon which, before tasting the water thyself, thou didst kindly offer some to the little creature, saying fondly:—'Drink first, gentle fawn.' But she could not be induced to drink from the hand of a stranger; though immediately afterwards, when I took the water in my own hand,
she drank with perfect confidence. Then, with a smile, thou didst say:—'Every creature confides naturally in its own kind. You are both inhabitants of the same forest, and have learnt to trust
each other.'

KING. Voluptuaries may allow themselves to be seduced from the path of duty by falsehoods such as these, expressed in honeyed words.

GAUTAMÍ. Speak not thus, illustrious Prince. This lady was brought up in a hermitage, and has never learnt deceit.

KING. Holy matron,

E'en in untutored brutes, the female sex
Is marked by inborn subtlety—much
more

In beings gifted with intelligence.
The wily Koíl, ere towards the sky
She wings her sportive flight, commits her eggs

To other nests, and artfully consigns
The rearing of her little ones to strangers.

ŚAKOONTALĀ [angrily]. Dishonourable man, thou judgest of others by thine own evil heart. Thou, at least, art unrivalled in perfidy, and standest alone—a base deceiver in the garb of virtue and religion—like a deep pit whose yawning mouth is concealed by smiling flowers.

KING [aside]. Her anger, at any rate, appears genuine, and makes me almost doubt whether I am in the right. For indeed,

When I had vainly searched my memory,
And so with stern severity denied
The fabled story of our secret loves,
Her brows, that met before in graceful curves,
Like the arched weapon of the god of love,
Seemed by her frown dissevered; while the fire
Of sudden anger kindled in her eyes.

[Aloud]. My good lady, Dushyanta's character is well known to all. I comprehend not your meaning.

ŚAKOONTALĀ. Well do I deserve to be thought a harlot for having in the innocence of my heart, and out of the confidence I reposed in a Prince of Puru's race, entrusted my honour to a man whose mouth distils honey, while his heart is full of poison. [Covers her face with her mantle, and bursts into tears.]

ŚĀRNGARAVA. Thus it is that burning remorse must ever follow rash actions which might have been avoided, and for which one has only one's self to blame.

Not hastily should marriage be contracted,
And specially in secret. Many a time,
In hearts that know not each the other's fancies,
Fond love is changed into most bitter hate.

KING. How now! Do you give credence to this woman rather than to me, that you heap such accusations on me?

ŚĀRNGARAVA [sarcastically]. That would be too absurd, certainly. You have heard the proverb:—

Hold in contempt the innocent words of those Who from their infancy have known no guile;
But trust the treacherous counsels of the man
Who makes a very science of deceit.

KING. Most veracious Bráhmaṇ, grant that you are in the right, what end would be gained by betraying this lady?

ŚĀRNGARAVA. Ruin.

KING. No one will believe that a Prince of Puru's race would seek to ruin others or himself.

ŚĀRADWATA. This altercation is idle, Śárngarava. We have executed the commission of our preceptor; come, let us return. [To the KING.]

Śakoontalā is certainly thy bride;
Receive her or reject her, she is thine.
Do with her, King, according to thy pleasure—
The husband o'er the wife is absolute.
Go on before us, Gautamī.

[They move away.]

ŚAKOONTALĀ. What! is it not enough to have been betrayed by this perfidious man? Must you also forsake me, regardless of my tears and lamentations?

[Attempts to follow them.]

GAUTAMĪ [stopping]. My son Śárngarava, see! śakoontalā is following us, and with tears implores us not to leave her. Alas! poor child, what will she do here with a cruel husband who casts her from him?

ŚĀRNGARAVA [turning angrily towards her]. Wilful woman, dost thou seek to be independent of thy lord?

[ŚAKOONTALĀ trembles with fear.]

Śakoontalā!
If thou art really what the King proclaims thee,
How can thy father e'er receive thee back
Into his house and home? but if thy conscience

Be witness to thy purity of soul,
E'en should thy husband to a handmaid's lot

Condemn thee, thou may'st cheerfully endure it,

When ranked among the number of his household.

The duty therefore is to stay. As for us,
we must return immediately.

KING. Deceive not the lady, my good hermit, by any such expectations.

The moon expands the lotus of the night,
The rising sun awakens the lily; each is with his own contented. Even so The virtuous man is master of his passions,

And from another's wife averts his gaze.

SÁRNGARAVA. Since thy union with another woman has rendered thee oblivious of thy marriage with śakoontalá, whence this fear of losing thy character for constancy and virtue?

KING [to his domestic PRIEST]. You must counsel me, revered Sir, as to my course of action. Which of the two evils involves the greater or less sin?

Whether by some dark veil my mind be clouded,

Or this designing woman speak untruly,
I know not. Tell me, must I rather be
The base disowner of my wedded wife,
Or the defiling and defiled adulterer?

PRIEST [after deliberation]. You must take an intermediate course.

KING. What course, revered Sir? Tell me at once.

PRIEST. I will provide an asylum for the lady in my own house until the birth of her child; and my reason, if you ask me, is this: Soothsayers have predicted that your first-born will have universal dominion. Now, if the hermit's daughter bring forth a son with the discus or mark of empire in the lines of his hand, you must admit her immediately into your royal apartments with great rejoicings; if not, then determine to send her back as soon as possible to her father.

KING. I bow to the decision of my spiritual adviser.

PRIEST. Daughter, follow me.

ŚAKOONTALÁ. O divine earth, open and receive me into thy bosom!

[*Exit ŚAKOONTALÁ weeping, with the PRIEST and the HERMITS.
The KING remains absorbed in thinking of her, though the curse still clouds his recollection.*]

A VOICE [behind the scenes]. A miracle! a miracle!

KING [listening]. What has happened
now?

PRIEST [entering with an air of astonishment]. Great Prince, a stupendous prodigy has just occurred.

KING. What is it?

PRIEST. May it please your Majesty, so soon as Kanwa's pupils had departed,
śakoontalá, her eyes all bathed in tears,
With outstretched arms, bewailed her cruel fate—

KING. Well, well, what happened then?

PRIEST. When suddenly a shining apparition,
In female shape, descended from the skies,
Near the nymph's pool, and bore her up
to heaven.

[All remain motionless with astonishment.]

KING. My good priest, from the very first I declined having anything to do with this matter. It is now all over, and we can never, by our conjectures, unravel the mystery; let it rest; go, seek repose.

PRIEST [looking at the KING]. Be it
so. Victory to the King! [Exit.]

KING. Vetravati, I am tired out; lead the way to the bedchamber.

WARDER. This way, Sir.

[They move away.]

KING. Do what I will, I cannot call to mind
That I did e'er espouse the sage's daughter;
Therefore I have disowned her; yet 'tis strange

How painfully my agitated heart
Bears witness to the truth of her assertion,
And makes me credit her against my judgment. [Exeunt.]

PRELUDE TO ACT VI

SCENE—A Street

[Enter the King's brother-in-law as SUPERINTENDENT of the city police; and with him TWO CONSTABLES, dragging a poor FISHERMAN, who has his hands tied behind his back.]

BOTH THE CONSTABLES [striking the prisoner]. Take that for a rascally thief that you are; and now tell us, sirrah, where you found this ring—aye, the King's own signet-ring. See, here is the royal name engraved on the setting of the jewel.

FISHERMAN [with a gesture of alarm]. Mercy! kind sirs, mercy! I did not steal it; indeed I did not.

FIRST CONSTABLE. Oh! then I suppose the King took you for some fine Bráhmán, and made you a present of it?

FISHERMAN. Only hear me. I am but a poor fisherman, living at śakrávatára—

SECOND CONSTABLE. Scoundrel, who ever asked you, pray, for a history of your birth and parentage?

SUPERINTENDENT [to one of the CONSTABLES]. Súchaka, let the fellow tell his own story from the beginning. Don't interrupt him.

BOTH CONSTABLES. As you please, master. Go on, then, sirrah, and say what you've got to say.

FISHERMAN. You see in me a poor man, who supports his family by catching fish with nets, hooks, and the like.

SUPERINTENDENT [laughing]. A most refined occupation, certainly!

FISHERMAN. Blame me not for it, master.

The father's occupation, though despised
By others, casts no shame upon the son,

And he should not forsake it. Is the priest
Who kills the animal for sacrifice
Therefore deemed cruel? Sure a low-born
man
May, though a fisherman, be tender-hearted.

SUPERINTENDENT. Well, well; go on with your story.

FISHERMAN. One day I was cutting open a large carp I had just hooked, when the sparkle of a jewel caught my eye, and what should I find in the fish's maw but that ring! Soon afterwards, when I was offering it for sale, I was seized by your honours. Now you know everything. Whether you kill me, or whether you let me go, this is the true account of how the ring came into my possession.

SUPERINTENDENT [to one of the CONSTABLES]. Well, Jánuka, the rescaler emits such a fishy odour that I have no doubt of his being a fisherman; but we must inquire a little more closely into this queer story about the finding of the ring. Come, we'll take him before the King's household.

BOTH CONSTABLES. Very good, master. Get on with you, you cutpurse.

[All move on.]

SUPERINTENDENT. Now attend, Súchaka; keep your guard here at the gate; and hark ye, sirrahs, take good care your prisoner does not escape, while I go in and lay the whole story of the discovery of this ring before the King in person. I will soon return and let you know his commands.

BOTH CONSTABLES. Go in, master, by all means; and may you find favour in the King's sight. [Exit SUPERINTENDENT.]

FIRST CONSTABLE [after an interval]. I say, Jánuka, the Superintendent is a long time away.

SECOND CONSTABLE. Aye, aye; kings are not to be got at so easily. Folks must bide the proper opportunity.

FIRST CONSTABLE. Jánuka, my fingers itch to strike the first blow at this royal victim here. We must kill him with all the honours, you know. I long to begin binding the flowers round his head. [Pretends to strike a blow at the FISHERMAN.]

FISHERMAN. Your Honour surely will not put an innocent man to a cruel death.

SECOND CONSTABLE [looking]. There's our Superintendent at last, I declare. See! he is coming towards us with a paper in his hand. We shall soon know the King's command; so prepare, my fine fellow, either to become food for the vultures, or to make acquaintance with some hungry cur.

SUPERINTENDENT [entering]. Ho, there, SÚCHAKA! set the fisherman at liberty, I tell you. His story about the ring is all correct.

SÚCHAKA. Oh! very good, Sir; as you please.

SECOND CONSTABLE. The fellow had one foot in hell, and now here he is in the land of the living. [Releases him.]

FISHERMAN [bowing to the SUPERINTENDENT]. Now, master, what think you of my way of getting a livelihood?

SUPERINTENDENT. Here, my good man, the King desired me to present you with this purse. It contains a sum of money equal to the full value of the ring.

[Gives him the money.]

FISHERMAN [taking it and bowing]. His Majesty does me too great honour.

SÚCHAKA. You may well say so. He might as well have taken you from the gallows to seat you on his state elephant.

JÁNUKA. Master, the King must value the ring very highly, or he would never have sent such a sum of money to this ragamuffin.

SUPERINTENDENT. I don't think he prizes it as a costly jewel so much as a memorial of some person he tenderly loves. The moment it was shown to him he became much agitated, though in general he conceals his feelings.

SÚCHAKA. Then you must have done a great service—

JÁNUKA. Yes, to this husband of a fish-wife.

[Looks enviously at the FISHERMAN.]

FISHERMAN. Here's half the money for you, my masters. It will serve to purchase the flowers you spoke of, if not to buy me your good-will.

JÁNUKA. Well, now, that's just as it should be.

SUPERINTENDENT. My good fisherman, you are an excellent fellow, and I begin to feel quite a regard for you. Let us seal our first friendship over a glass of good liquor. Come along to the next wine-shop, and we'll drink your health.

ALL. By all means. [Exeunt.]

ACT VI

SCENE—The Garden of a Palace

[The nymph SÁNUMATI is seen descending in a celestial car.]

SÁNUMATI. Behold me just arrived from attending in my proper turn at the nymphs' pool, where I have left the other nymphs to perform their ablutions, whilst I seek to ascertain, with my own eyes, how it fares with King Dushyanta. My connexion with the nymph Menaká has made her daughter Sakoontalá dearer to me than my own flesh and blood; and Menaká it was who charged me with this errand on her daughter's behalf. [Looking round in all directions.] How is it that I see no preparations in the King's household for celebrating the great vernal festival? I could easily discover the reason by my divine faculty of meditation; but respect must be shown to the wishes of my friend. How then shall I arrive at the truth? I know what I will do. I will become invisible, and place myself near those two maidens who are tending the plants in the garden.

[Descends and takes her station.]

[Enter a MAIDEN, who stops in front of a mango-tree, and gazes at the blossom. Another MAIDEN is seen behind her.]

FIRST MAIDEN. Hail to thee, lovely harbinger of spring!

The varied radiance of thy opening flowers

Is welcome to my sight. I bid thee hail,
Sweet mango, soul of this enchanting season.

SECOND MAIDEN. Parabhṛitiká, what are you saying there to yourself?

FIRST MAIDEN. Dear Madhukariká, am I not named after the Koil? and does not the Koil sing for joy at the first appearance of the mango-blossom?

SECOND MAIDEN [approaching hastily, with transport]. What! is spring really come?

FIRST MAIDEN. Yes, indeed, Madhukariká, and with it the season of joy, love, and song.

SECOND MAIDEN. Let me lean upon you, dear, while I stand on tip-toe and pluck a blossom of the mango, that I may present it as an offering to the god of love.

FIRST MAIDEN. Provided you let me have half the reward which the god will bestow in return.

SECOND MAIDEN. To be sure you shall, and that without asking. Are we not one in heart and soul, though divided in body? [Leans on her friend and plucks a mango-blossom.] Ah! here is a bud just bursting into flower. It diffuses a delicious perfume, though not yet quite expanded. [Joining her hands reverentially.] God of the bow, who with spring's choicest flowers

Dost point thy five unerring shafts; to thee

I dedicate this blossom; let it serve
To barb thy truest arrow; be its mark
Some youthful heart that pines to be beloved. [Throws down a mango-blossom.]

CHAMBERLAIN [entering in a hurried manner, angrily]. Hold there, thoughtless woman. What are you about, breaking off those mango-blossoms, when the King has forbidden the celebration of the spring festival?

BOTH MAIDENS [alarmed]. Pardon us, kind Sir, we have heard nothing of it.

CHAMBERLAIN. You have heard nothing of it? Why, all the vernal plants and shrubs, and the very birds that lodge in their branches, show more respect to the King's order than you do.

Yon mango-blossoms, though long since expanded,

Gather no down upon their tender crests;
The flower still lingers in the amaranth,
Imprisoned in its bud; the tuneful Koil,
Though winter's chilly dews be overpast,
Suspends the liquid volume of his song
Scarce uttered in his throat; e'en Love,
dismayed,

Restores the half-drawn arrow to his quiver.

BOTH MAIDENS. The mighty power of King Dushyanta is not to be disputed.

FIRST MAIDEN. It is but a few days since Mitrávasu, the King's brother-in-law, sent us to wait upon his Majesty; and, during the whole of our sojourn here, we have been entrusted with the charge of the royal pleasure-grounds. We are therefore strangers in this place, and heard nothing of the order till you informed us of it.

CHAMBERLAIN. Well then, now you know it, take care you don't continue your preparations.

BOTH MAIDENS. But tell us, kind Sir, why has the King prohibited the usual festivities? We are curious to hear, if we may.

SĀNUMATĪ [aside]. Men are naturally fond of festive entertainments. There must be some good reason for the prohibition.

CHAMBERLAIN. The whole affair is now public; why should I not speak of it? Has not the gossip about the King's rejection of Śakoontalá reached your ears yet?

BOTH MAIDENS. Oh yes, we heard the story from the King's brother-in-law, as far, at least, as the discovery of the ring.

CHAMBERLAIN. Then there is little more to tell you. As soon as the King's memory was restored by the sight of his own ring, he exclaimed: 'Yes, it is all true. I remember now my secret marriage with Śakoontalá. When I repudiated her, I had lost my recollection!' Ever since that moment, he has yielded himself a prey to the bitterest remorse.

He loathes his former pleasures; he rejects

The daily homage of his ministers;

On his lone couch he tosses to and fro,

Courting repose in vain. Whene'er he meets

The ladies of his palace, and would fain

Address them with politeness, he confounds

Their names; or, calling them 'śakoontalá,'

Is straightway silent and abashed with shame.

SĀNUMATĪ [aside]. To me this account is delightful.

CHAMBERLAIN. In short, the King is so completely out of his mind that the festival has been prohibited.

BOTH MAIDENS. Perfectly right.

A VOICE [behind the scenes]. The King! the King! This way, Sire, this way.

CHAMBERLAIN [listening]. Oh! here comes his Majesty in this direction. Pass on, maidens; attend to your duties.

BOTH MAIDENS. We will, sir.

[Exeunt.]

[Enter King DUSHYANTA, dressed in deep mourning, attended by his Jester, MĀTHAVYA, and preceded by VETRAVATĪ.]

CHAMBERLAIN [gazing at the KING]. Well, noble forms are certainly pleasing, under all varieties of outward circumstances. The King's person is as charming as ever, notwithstanding his sorrow of mind.

Though but a single golden bracelet spans

His wasted arm; though costly ornaments

Have given place to penitential weeds;

Though oft-repeated sighs have blanched his lips,

And robbed them of their bloom; though sleepless care

And carking thought have dimmed his beaming eye;

Yet does his form, by its inherent lustre, Dazzle the gaze; and, like a priceless gem

Committed to some cunning polisher, Grow more effulgent by the loss of substance.

SĀNUMATĪ [aside. Looking at the KING]. Now that I have seen him, I can well understand why śakoontalá should pine after such a man, in spite of his disdainful rejection of her.

KING [walking slowly up and down in deep thought]. When fatal lethargy o'erwhelmed my soul,

My loved one strove to rouse me, but in vain;

And now, when I would fain in slumber deep

Forget myself, full soon remorse doth wake me.

SĀNUMATĪ [aside]. My poor śakoontalá's sufferings are very similar.

MĀTHAVYA [aside]. He is taken with another attack of this odious śakoontalá-fever. How shall we ever cure him?

CHAMBERLAIN [approaching]. Victory to the King! Great Prince, the royal pleasure-grounds have been put in order. Your Majesty can resort to them for exercise and amusement whenever you think proper.

KING. Vetravatī, tell the worthy Piśuna, my prime minister, from me, that I am so exhausted by want of sleep that I cannot sit on the judgment-seat to-day. If any case of importance be brought before the tribunal, he must give it his best attention, and inform me of the circumstances by letter.

VETRAVATĪ. Your Majesty's commands shall be obeyed. [Exit.]

KING [to the CHAMBERLAIN]. And you, Vátáyana, may go about your own affairs.

CHAMBERLAIN. I will, Sire. [Exit.]

MĀTHAVYA. Now that you have rid yourself of these troublesome fellows, you can enjoy the delightful coolness of your pleasure-grounds without interruption.

KING. Ah! my dear friend, there is an old adage:—'When affliction has a mind to enter, she will find a crevice somewhere'; and it is verified in me.

Scarce is my soul delivered from the cloud
That darkened its remembrance of the past,

When lo! the heart-born deity of love
With yonder blossom of the mango barbs
His keenest shaft, and aims it at my breast.

MĀTHAVYA. Well, then, wait a moment; I will soon demolish Master Kāma's arrow with a cut of my cane. [Raises his stick and strikes off the mango-blossom.]

KING [smiling]. That will do. I see very well the god of love is not a match for a Brāhman. And now, my dear friend, where shall I sit down, that I may enchant my sight by gazing on the twining plants, which seem to remind me of the graceful shape of my beloved?

MĀTHAVYA. Don't you remember? you told your personal attendant, Chaturikā, that you would pass the heat of the day in the jasmine-bower; and commanded her to bring the likeness of your queen Śakoontalā, sketched with your own hand.

KING. True. The sight of her picture will refresh my soul. Lead the way to the arbour.

MĀTHAVYA. This way, Sire. [Both move on, followed by SĀNUMATĪ.]

MĀTHAVYA. Here we are at the jasmine-bower. Look, it has a marble seat, and seems to bid us welcome with its offerings of delicious flowers. You have only to enter and sit down. [Both enter and seat themselves.]

SĀNUMATĪ [aside]. I will lean against these young jasmynes. I can easily, from behind them, glance at my friend's picture, and will then hasten to inform her of her husband's ardent affection. [Stands leaning against the creepers.]

KING. Oh! my dear friend, how vividly all the circumstances of my union with Śakoontalā present themselves to my recollection at this moment! But tell me now how it was that, between the time of my leaving her in the hermitage and my subsequent rejection of her, you never breathed her name to me? True, you were not by my side when I disowned her; but I had confided to you the story of my love, and you were acquainted with every particular. Did it pass out of your mind as it did out of mine?

MĀTHAVYA. No, no; trust me for that. But, if you remember, when you had finished telling me about it, you added that I was not to take the story in earnest, for that you were not really in love with a country girl, but were only jesting; and I was dull and thick-headed enough to believe you. But so fate decreed, and there is no help for it.

SĀNUMATĪ [aside]. Exactly.

KING [after deep thought]. My dear friend, suggest some relief for my misery.

MĀTHAVYA. Come, come, cheer up; why do you give way? Such weakness is unworthy of you. Great men never surrender themselves to uncontrolled grief. Do not mountains remain unshaken even in a gale of wind?

KING. How can I be otherwise than inconsolable, when I call to mind the agonized demeanour of the dear one on the occasion of my disowning her?

When cruelly I spurned her from my presence,

She fain had left me; but the young recluse,

Stern as the Sage, and with authority
As from his saintly master, in a voice
That brooked not contradiction, bade her stay.

Then through her pleading eyes, bedimmed
with tears,

She cast on me one long reproachful look,
Which like a poisoned shaft torments me
still.

SĀNUMATĪ [aside]. Alas! such is the force of self-reproach following a rash action. But his anguish only rejoices me.

MĀTHAVYA. An idea has just struck me. I should not wonder if some celestial being had carried her off to heaven.

KING Very likely. Who else would have dared to lay a finger on a wife, the idol of her husband? It is said that Menakā, the nymph of heaven, gave her birth.

The suspicion has certainly crossed my mind that some of her celestial companions may have taken her to their own abode.

SĀNUMATĪ [aside]. His present recollection of every circumstance of her history does not surprise me so much as his former forgetfulness.

MĀTHAVYA. If that's the case, you will be certain to meet her before long.

KING. Why?

MĀTHAVYA. No father and mother can endure to see a daughter suffering the pain of separation from her husband.

KING. Oh! my dear Māthavya, Was it a dream? or did some magic dire, Dulling my senses with a strange delusion, O'ercome my spirit? or did destiny, Jealous of my good actions, mar their fruit,

And rob me of their guerdon? It is past, What'e'er the spell that bound me. Once again

Am I awake, but only to behold The precipice o'er which my hopes have fallen.

MĀTHAVYA. Do not despair in this manner. Is not this very ring a proof that what has been lost may be unexpectedly found?

KING [gazing at the ring]. Ah! this ring, too, has fallen from a station not easily regained, and I offer it my sympathy. O gem,

The punishment we suffer is deserved, And equal is the merit of our works, When such our common doom. Thou didst enjoy

The thrilling contact of those slender fingers,

Bright as the dawn; and now how changed thy lot!

SĀNUMATĪ [aside]. Had it found its way to the hand of any other person, then indeed its fate would have been deplorable.

MĀTHAVYA. Pray, how did the ring ever come upon her hand at all?

SĀNUMATĪ [aside]. I myself am curious to know.

KING. You shall hear. When I was leaving my beloved Sakoontalá that I might return to my own capital, she said to me, with tears in her eyes: 'How long will it be ere my lord send for me to his palace and make me his queen?'

MĀTHAVYA. Well, what was your reply?

KING. Then I placed the ring on her finger, and thus addressed her:—

Repeat each day one letter of the name Engraven on this gem; ere thou hast reckoned

The tale of syllables, my minister Shall come to lead thee to thy husband's palace.

But, hard-hearted man that I was, I forgot to fulfil my promise, owing to the infatuation that took possession of me.

SĀNUMATĪ [aside]. A pleasant arrangement! Fate, however, ordained that the appointment should not be kept.

MĀTHAVYA. But how did the ring contrive to pass into the stomach of that carp which the fisherman caught and was cutting up?

KING. It must have slipped from my Sakoontalá's hand, and fallen into the stream of the Ganges, while she was offering homage to the water of Sachí's holy pool.

MĀTHAVYA. Very likely.

SĀNUMATĪ [aside]. Hence it happened I suppose, that the King, always fearful of committing the least injustice, came to doubt his marriage with my poor Sakoontalá. But why should affection so strong as his stand in need of any token of recognition?

KING. Let me now address a few words of reproof to this ring.

MĀTHAVYA [aside]. He is going stark mad, I verily believe.

KING. Hear me, thou dull and undiscerning bauble!

For so it argues thee, that thou could'st leave

The slender fingers of her hand, to sink Beneath the waters. Yet what marvel is it

That thou should'st lack discernment? let me rather
Heap curses on myself, who, though endowed
With reason, yet rejected her I loved.

MĀTHAVYA [aside]. And so, I suppose,
I must stand here to be devoured by hunger, whilst he goes on in this sentimental strain.

KING. O forsaken one, unjustly banished from my presence, take pity on thy slave, whose heart is consumed by the fire of remorse, and return to my sight.
[Enter CHATURIKĀ hurriedly, with a picture in her hand.]

CHATURIKĀ. Here is the Queen's portrait. [Shows the picture.]

MĀTHAVYA. Excellent, my dear friend, excellent! The imitation of nature is perfect, and the attitude of the figures is really charming. They stand out in such bold relief that the eye is quite deceived.

SĀNUMATĪ [aside]. A most artistic performance! I admire the King's skill, and could almost believe that Śakoontalā herself was before me.

KING. I own 'tis not amiss, though it portrays

But feebly her angelic loveliness,
Aught less than perfect is depicted falsely,
And fancy must supply the imperfection.

SĀNUMATĪ [aside]. A very just remark from a modest man, whose affection is exaggerated by the keenness of his remorse.

MĀTHAVYA. Tell me:—I see three female figures drawn on the canvass, and all of them beautiful; which of the three is her Majesty Śakoontalā?

SĀNUMATĪ [aside]. If he cannot distinguish her from the others, the simple-ton might as well have no eyes in his head.

KING. Which should you imagine to be intended for her?

MĀTHAVYA. She who is leaning, apparently a little tired, against the stem of that mango-tree, the tender leaves of which glitter with the water she has poured upon them. Her arms are gracefully extended; her face is somewhat flushed with the heat; and a few flowers have escaped from her hair, which has become unfastened, and hangs in loose tresses about her neck. That must be the queen Śakoontalā, and the others, I presume, are her two attendants.

KING. I congratulate you on your discernment. Behold the proof of my passion;

My finger, burning with the glow of love,
Has left its impress on the painted tablet;
While here and there, alas! a scalding
tear

Has fallen on the cheek and dimmed its brightness.

Chaturikā, the garden in the background of the picture is only half-painted. Go, fetch the brush that I may finish it.

CHATURIKĀ. Worthily Māthavya, have the kindness to hold the picture until I return.

KING. Nay, I will hold it myself.

[Takes the picture.]

[Exit CHATURIKĀ.]

My loved one came but lately to my presence

And offered me herself, but in my folly
I spurned the gift, and now I fondly cling

To her mere image; even as a madman
Would pass the waters of the gushing
stream,

And thirst for airy vapours of the desert.

MĀTHAVYA [aside]. He has been fool enough to forego the reality for the semblance, the substance for the shadow.
[Aloud.] Tell us, I pray, what else remains to be painted.

SĀNUMATĪ [aside]. He longs, no doubt, to delineate some favourite spot where my Śakoontalā delighted to ramble.

KING. You shall hear:—

I wish to see the Mālinī portrayed,
Its tranquil course by banks of sand impeded;

Upon the brink a pair of swans; beyond,
The hills adjacent to Himālaya,

Studded with deer; and, near the spreading shade

Of some large tree, where 'mid the branches hang

The hermits' vests of bark, a tender doe,
Rubbing its downy forehead on the horn
Of a black antelope, should be depicted.

MĀTHAVYA [aside]. Pooh! if I were he,
I would fill up the vacant spaces with a lot of grizzly-bearded old hermits.

KING My dear Māthavya, there is still a part of Sakootalā's dress which I purposed to draw, but find I have omitted.

MĀTHAVYA. What is that?

SĀNUMATĪ [aside]. Something suitable,
I suppose, to the simple attire of a young and beautiful girl dwelling in a forest.

KING. A sweet śirisha blossom should be twined

Behind her ear, its perfumed crest depending

Towards her cheek; and, resting on her
bosom,

A lotus-fibre necklace, soft and bright
As an autumnal moonbeam, should be traced.

MĀTHAVYA. Pray, why does the Queen cover her lips with the tips of her fingers, bright as the blossom of a lily, as if she were afraid of something? [Looking more closely.] Oh! I see; a vagabond bee, intent on thieving honey from the flowers,
has mistaken her mouth for a rosebud,
and is trying to settle upon it.

KING. A bee! drive off the impudent insect, will you?

MĀTHAVYA. That's your business. Your royal prerogative gives you power over all offenders.

KING. Very true. Listen to me, thou favourite guest of flowering plants; why give thyself the trouble of hovering here?
See where thy partner sits on yonder
flower,
And waits for thee ere she will sip its dew.

SĀNUMATĪ [aside]. A most polite way of warning him off!

MĀTHAVYA. You'll find the obstinate creature is not to be sent about his business so easily as you think.

KING. Dost thou presume to disobey?
Now hear me:—

An thou but touch the lips of my beloved,
Sweet as the opening blossom, whence I quaffed

In happier days love's nectar, I will place
thee

Within the hollow of yon lotus cup,
And there imprison thee for thy presumption.

MĀTHAVYA. He must be bold indeed not to show any fear when you threaten him with such an awful punishment.
[Smiling, aside.] He is stark mad, that's clear; and I believe, by keeping him company, I am beginning to talk almost as wildly. [Aloud.] Look, it is only a painted bee.

KING. Painted? impossible!

SĀNUMATĪ [aside]. Even I did not perceive it; how much less should he!

KING. Oh! my dear friend, why were you so ill-natured as to tell me the truth?

While all entranced, I gazed upon her picture,

My loved one seemed to live before my
eyes

Till every fibre of my being thrilled
With rapturous emotion. Oh! 'twas cruel
To dissipate the day-dream, and transform
The blissful vision to a lifeless image.

[Sheds tears.]

SĀNUMATĪ [aside]. Separated lovers are very difficult to please; but he seems more difficult than usual.

KING. Alas! my dear Māthavya, why am I doomed to be the victim of perpetual disappointment?

Vain is the hope of meeting her in dreams,
For slumber night by night forsakes my
couch;

And now that I would fain assuage my
grief

By gazing on her portrait here before me,
Tears of despairing love obscure my sight.

SĀNUMATĪ [aside]. You have made ample amends for the wrong you did śakoontalā in disowning her.

CHATURIKĀ [entering]. Victory to the King! I was coming along with the box of colours in my hand—

KING. What now?

CHATURIKĀ. When I met the queen Vasumatī, attended by Taralīkā. She insisted on taking it from me, and declared she would herself deliver it into your Majesty's hands.

MĀTHAVYA. By what luck did you contrive to escape her?

CHATURIKĀ. While her maid was disengaging her mantle, which had caught in the branch of a shrub, I ran away.

KING. Here, my good friend, take the picture and conceal it. My attentions to the Queen have made her presumptuous. She will be here in a minute.

MĀTHAVYA. Conceal the picture! conceal myself, you mean. [Getting up and taking the picture.] The Queen has a bitter draught in store for you, which you will have to swallow, as śiva did the poison at the Deluge. When you are well quit of her, you may send and call me from the Palace of Clouds, where I shall take refuge. [Exit, running.]

SĀNUMATĪ [aside]. Although the King's affections are transferred to another object, yet he respects his previous attachments. I fear his love must be somewhat fickle.

VETRAVATĪ [entering with a despatch in her hand]. Victory to the King!

KING. Vetravati, did you observe the queen Vasumatī coming in this direction?

VETRAVATĪ. I did; but when she saw that I had a despatch in my hand for your Majesty, she turned back.

KING. The Queen has too much regard for propriety to interrupt me when I am engaged with State-affairs.

VETRAVATĪ. So please your Majesty, your prime minister begs respectfully to inform you that he has devoted much time to the settlement of financial calculations, and only one case of importance has been submitted by the citizens for his consideration. He has made a written report of the facts, and requests your Majesty to cast your eyes over it.

KING. Hand me the paper.

[VETRAVATĪ delivers it.]

[Reading.]

What have we here? 'A merchant named Dhanamitra, trading by sea, was lost in a late shipwreck. Though a wealthy trader, he was childless; and the whole of his immense property becomes by law forfeited to the king.' So writes the minister. Alas! alas! for his childlessness! But surely, if he was wealthy, he must have had many wives. Let an inquiry be made whether any one of them is expecting to give birth to a child.

VETRAVATĪ. They say that his wife, the daughter of the foreman of a guild belonging to Ayodhyā, has just completed the ceremonies usual upon such expectations.

KING. The unborn child has a title to its father's property. Such is my decree. Go, bid my minister proclaim it so.

VETRAVATĪ [going]. I will, my liege.

KING. Stay a moment.

VETRAVATĪ. I am at your Majesty's service.

KING. Let there be no question whether he may or may not have left offspring;

Rather be it proclaimed that whoso'er Of King Dushyanta's subjects be bereaved Of any loved relation, an it be not That his estates are forfeited for crimes, Dushyanta will himself to them supply That kinsman's place in tenderest affection.

VETRAVATĪ. It shall be so proclaimed.

[Exit VETRAVATĪ, and reënters after an interval.]

VETRAVATĪ. Your Majesty's proclamation was received with acclamations of joy, like grateful rain at the right season.

KING [drawing a deep sigh]. So, then, the property of rich men, who have no lineal descendants, passes over to a stranger at their decease. And such, alas! must be the fate of the fortunes of the race of Puru at my death; even as when fertile soil is sown with seed at the wrong season.

VETRAVATĪ. Heaven forbid!

KING. Fool that I was to reject such happiness when it offered itself for my acceptance!

SĀNUMATĪ [aside]. He may well blame his own folly when he calls to mind his treatment of my beloved Śakoontalā.

KING. Ah! woe is me! when I forsook my wife—

My lawful wife—concealed within her breast

There lay my second self, a child unborn,
Hope of my race, e'en as the choicest fruit
Lies hidden in the bosom of the earth.

SĀNUMATĪ [aside]. There is no fear of your race being cut off for want of a son.

CHATURIKĀ [aside to VETRAVATĪ]. The affair of the merchant's death has quite upset our royal master, and caused him sad distress. Would it not be better to fetch the worthy Māthavya from the Palace of Clouds to comfort him?

VETRAVATĪ. A very good idea. [Exit.]

KING. Alas! the shades of my forefathers are even now beginning to be alarmed, lest at my death they may be deprived of their funeral libations. No son remains in King Dushyanta's place To offer sacred homage to the dead Of Puru's noble line; my ancestors Must drink these glistening tears, the last libation

A childless man can ever hope to make them.

[Falls down in an agony of grief.]

CHATURIKĀ [looking at him in consternation]. Great King, compose yourself.

SĀNUMATĪ [aside]. Alas! alas! though a bright light is shining near him, he is involved in the blackest darkness, by reason of the veil that obscures his sight. I will now reveal all, and put an end to his misery. But no; I heard the mother of the great Indra, when she was consoling Śakoontalā, say that the gods will soon bring about a joyful union between husband and wife, being eager for the sacrifice which will be celebrated in their honour on the occasion. I must not anticipate the happy moment, but will return at once to my dear friend and cheer her with an account of what I have seen and heard. [Rises aloft and disappears.]

A VOICE [behind the scenes]. Help! help! to the rescue!

KING [recovering himself. Listening]. Ha! I heard a cry of distress, and in Māthavya's voice too. What ho, there!

VETRAVATĪ [entering]. Your friend is in danger; save him, great King.

KING. Who dares insult the worthy Māthavya?

VETRAVATĪ. Some evil demon, invisible to human eyes, has seized him, and carried him to one of the turrets of the Palace of Clouds.

KING [rising]. Impossible! Have evil spirits power over my subjects, even in my private apartments? Well, well:—

Daily I seem less able to avert Misfortune from myself, and o'er my actions

Less competent to exercise control;
How can I then direct my subjects' ways,
Or shelter them from tyranny and wrong?

A VOICE [behind the scenes]. Halloo there! my dear friend; help! help!

KING [advancing with rapid strides]. Fear nothing—

THE SAME VOICE [behind the scenes]. Fear nothing, indeed! How can I help fearing when some monster is twisting back my neck, and is about to snap it as he would a sugar-cane?

KING [looking round]. What ho, there! my bow!

SLAVE [entering with a bow]. Behold your bow, Sire, and your arm-guard.

[The KING snatches up the bow and whys arrows.]

ANOTHER VOICE [behind the scenes].

Here, thirsting for thy life-blood, will I slay thee,

As a fierce tiger rends his struggling prey.
Call now thy friend Dushyanta to thy aid;

His bow is mighty to defend the weak;
Yet all its vaunted power shall be as nought.

KING [with fury]. What! dares he defy me to my face? Hold there, monster! Prepare to die, for your time is come. [Stringing his bow.] Vetravati, lead the way to the terrace.

VETRAVATĪ. This way, Sire. [They advance in haste.]

KING [looking on every side]. How's this? there is nothing to be seen.

A VOICE [behind the scenes]. Help!
Save me! I can see you, though you cannot see me. I am like a mouse in the claws of a cat; my life is not worth a minute's purchase.

KING. Avaunt, monster! You may pride yourself on the magic that renders you invisible, but my arrow shall find you out. Thus do I fix a shaft

That shall discern between an impious
demon,
And a good Bráhmaṇ; bearing death to
thee,

To him deliverance—even as the swan Distinguishes the milk from worthless water. [Takes aim.]

[Enter MÁTALI holding MÁTHAVYA, whom he releases.]

MÁTALI. Turn thou thy deadly arrows on the demons;

Such is the will of Indra; let thy bow
Be drawn against the enemies of the gods;

But on thy friends cast only looks of favour.

KING [putting back his arrow]. What, Máli! Welcome, most noble charioteer of the mighty Indra.

MÁTHAVYA. So, here is a monster who thought as little about slaughtering me as if I had been a bullock for sacrifice, and you must e'en greet him with a welcome.

MÁTALI [smiling]. Great Prince, hear on what errand Indra sent me into your presence.

KING. I am all attention.

MÁTALI. There is a race of giants, the descendants of Kálanemi, whom the gods find it difficult to subdue.

KING. So I have already heard from Nárada.

MÁTALI. Heaven's mighty lord, who deigns to call thee 'friend,'

Appoints thee to the post of highest
honour,

As leader of his armies; and commits
The subjugation of this giant brood
To thy resistless arms, e'en as the sun Leaves the pale moon to dissipate the darkness.

Let your Majesty, therefore, ascend at once the celestial car of Indra; and, grasping your arms, advance to victory.

KING. The mighty Indra honours me too highly by such a mark of distinction.
But tell me, what made you act thus towards my poor friend Máthavya?

MÁTALI. I will tell you. Perceiving that your Majesty's spirit was completely broken by some distress of mind under which you were labouring, I determined to rouse your energies by moving you to anger. Because

To light a flame, we need but stir the embers;

The cobra, when incensed, extends his
head

And springs upon his foe; the bravest
men

Display their courage only when provoked.

KING [aside to MÁTHAVYA]. My dear
Máthavya, the commands of the great Indra must not be left unfulfilled. Go you and acquaint my minister, Piśuna, with what has happened, and say to him
from me:—

Dushyanta to thy care confides his realm—
Protect with all the vigour of thy mind
The interests of his people; while his bow

Is braced against the enemies of heaven.

MÁTHAVYA. I obey. [Exit.]

MÁTALI. Ascend, illustrious Prince.

[The KING ascends the car.]

[Exeunt.]

ACT VII

SCENE—The Sky

[Enter KING DUSHYANTA and MATALI in the car of Indra, moving in the air.]

KING. My good Mátali, it appears to me incredible that I can merit such a mark of distinction for having simply fulfilled the behests of the great Indra.

MÁTALI [smiling]. Great Prince, it seems to me that neither of you is satisfied with himself.

You underrate the services you have rendered,

And think too highly of the god's reward; He deems it scarce sufficient recompense For your heroic deeds on his behalf.

KING. Nay, Mátali, say not so. My most ambitious expectations were more than realised by the honour conferred on me at the moment when I took my leave. For,

Tinged with celestial sandal, from the breast

Of the great Indra, where before it hung,
A garland of the ever-blooming tree
Of Nandana was cast about my neck
By his own hand; while, in the very presence

Of the assembled gods, I was enthroned
Beside their mighty lord, who smiled to see

His son Jayanta envious of the honour.

MÁTALI. There is no mark of distinction which your Majesty does not deserve at the hands of the immortals. See, Heaven's hosts acknowledge thee their second saviour;

For now thy bow's unerring shafts (as erst

The Lion-man's terrific claws) have purged

The empyreal sphere from taint of demons foul.

KING. The praise of my victory must be ascribed to the majesty of Indra. When mighty gods make men their delegates

In martial enterprise, to them belongs
The palm of victory; and not to mortals.

Could the pale Dawn dispel the shades of night,

Did not the god of day, whose diadem
Is jewelled with a thousand beams of light,

Place him in front of his effulgent car?

MÁTALI. A very just comparison! [Driving on.] Great King behold! the glory of thy fame has reached even to the vault of heaven.

Hark! yonder inmates of the starry sphere

Sing anthems worthy of thy martial deeds,
While with celestial colours they depict
The story of thy victories on scrolls
Formed of the leaves of heaven's immortal trees.

KING. My good Mátali, yesterday, when I ascended the sky, I was so eager to do battle with the demons, that the road by which we were travelling towards Indra's heaven escaped my observation. Tell me, in which path of the seven winds are we now moving?

MÁTALI. We journey in the path of Parivaha—

The wind that bears along the triple Ganges

And causes Ursa's seven stars to roll
In their appointed orbits, scattering
Their several rays with equal distribution.

'Tis the same path that once was sanctified

By the divine impression of the foot
Of Vishnu, when, to conquer haughty Bali,
He spanned the heavens in his second stride.

KING. This is the reason, I suppose, that a sensation of calm repose pervades all my senses. [Looking down at the wheels.] Ah! Mátali, we are descending towards the earth's atmosphere.

MÁTALI. What makes you think so?

KING. The car itself instructs me; we are moving

O'er pregnant clouds, surcharged with rain; below us

I see the moisture-loving Chátakas
In sportive flight dart through the spokes;
the steeds

Of Indra glisten with the lightning's flash;

And a thick mist bedews the circling wheels.

MĀTALI. You are right; in a little while the chariot will touch the ground, and you will be in your own dominions.

KING [looking down]. How wonderful the appearance of the earth as we rapidly descend!

Stupendous prospect! yonder lofty hills Do suddenly uprear their towering heads Amid the plain, while from beneath their crests

The ground receding sinks; the trees, whose stem

Seemed lately hid within their leafy tresses,

Rise into elevation, and display Their branching shoulders; yonder streams, whose waters,

Like silver threads, were scarce, but now, discerned,

Grow into mighty rivers; lo! the earth Seems upward hurled by some gigantic power.

MĀTALI. Well described! [Looking with awe.] Grand, indeed, and lovely is the spectacle presented by the earth.

KING. Tell me, Mátali, what is the range of mountains which, like a bank of clouds illumined by the setting sun, pours down a stream of gold? On one side its base dips into the eastern ocean, and on the other side into the western.

MĀTALI. Great Prince, it is called 'Golden-peak,' and is the abode of the attendants of the god of wealth. In this spot the highest forms of penance are wrought out.

There Kaśyapa, the great progenitor Of demons and of gods, himself the offspring

Of the divine Marichi. Brahmá's son, With Aditi, his wife, in calm seclusion, Does holy penance for the good of mortals.

KING. Then I must not neglect so good an opportunity of obtaining his blessing. I should much like to visit this venerable personage and offer him my homage.

MĀTALI. By all means. An excellent idea! [Guides the car to the earth.]

KING [in a tone of wonder]. How's this?

Our chariot wheels move noiselessly. Around

No clouds of dust arise; no shock betokened

Our contact with the earth; we seem to glide

Above the ground, so lightly do we touch it.

MĀTALI. Such is the difference between the car of Indra and that of your Majesty.

KING. In which direction, Mátali, is Kaśyapa's sacred retreat?

MĀTALI [pointing]. Where stands yon anchorite, towards the orb

Of the meridian sun, immovable As a tree's stem, his body half-concealed By a huge ant-hill. Round about his breast

No sacred cord is twined, but in its stead A hideous serpent's skin. In place of necklace,

The tendrils of a withered creeper chafe His wasted neck. His matted hair depends

In thick entanglement about his shoulders,

And birds construct their nests within its folds.

KING. I salute thee, thou man of austere devotion.

MĀTALI [holding in the reins of the car]. Great Prince, we are now in the sacred grove of the holy Kaśyapa—the grove that boasts as its ornament one of the five trees of Indra's heaven, reared by Aditi.

KING. This sacred retreat is more delightful than heaven itself. I could almost fancy myself bathing in a pool of nectar.

MĀTALI [stopping the chariot]. Descend, mighty Prince.

KING [descending]. And what will you do, Mátali?

MĀTALI. The chariot will remain where I have stopped it. We may both descend.

[Doing so.] This way, great King. [Walking on.] You see around you the celebrated region where the holiest sages devote themselves to penitential rites.

KING. I am filled with awe and wonder as I gaze.

In such a place as this do saints of earth

Long to complete their acts of penance; here,

Beneath the shade of everlasting trees,
Transplanted from the groves of Paradise,
May they inhale the balmy air, and need
No other nourishment; here may they bathe

In fountains sparkling with the golden dust

Of lilies; here, on jewelled slabs of marble,

In meditation rapt, may they recline;
Here, in the presence of celestial nymphs,
E'en passion's voice is powerless to move them.

MÁTALI. So true is it that the aspirations of the good and great are ever soaring upwards. [Turning round and speaking off the stage.] Tell me, Vridhdhákalya, how is the divine son of Maríchi now engaged? What sayest thou? that he is conversing with Aditi and some of the wives of the great sages, and that they are questioning him respecting the duties of a faithful wife?

KING [listening]. Then we must await the holy father's leisure.

MÁTALI [looking at the KING]. If your Majesty will rest under the shade, at the foot of this Ásoka-tree, I will seek an opportunity of announcing your arrival to Indra's reputed father.

KING [remains under the tree]. As you think proper.

MÁTALI. Great King, I go. [Exit.]

KING [feeling his arm throb]. Wherefore this causeless throbbing, O mine arm?

All hope has fled for ever; mock me not

With presages of good, when happiness
Is lost, and nought but misery remains.

A VOICE [behind the scenes]. Be not so naughty. Do you begin already to show a refractory spirit?

KING [listening]. This is no place for petulance. Who can it be whose behaviour calls for such a rebuke? [Looking in the direction of the sound and smiling.] A child, is it? closely attended by two holy women. His disposition seems anything but child-like. See!

He braves the fury of yon lioness

Suckling its savage offspring, and compels

The angry whelp to leave the half-sucked dug,

Tearing its tender mane in boisterous sport.

[Enter a CHILD, attended by TWO WOMEN of the hermitage, in manner described.]

CHILD. Open your mouth, my young lion, I want to count your teeth.

FIRST ATTENDANT. You naughty child, why do you tease the animals? Know you not that we cherish them in this hermitage as if they were our own children? In good sooth, you have a high spirit of your own, and are beginning already to do justice to the name Sarva-damana ('All-taming'), given you by the hermits.

KING. Strange! My heart inclines towards the boy with almost as much affection as if he were my own child. What can be the reason? I suppose my own childlessness makes me yearn towards the sons of others.

SECOND ATTENDANT. This lioness will certainly attack you if you do not release her whelp.

CHILD [laughing]. Oh! indeed! let her come. Much I fear her, to be sure! [Pouts his under-lip in defiance.]

KING. The germ of mighty courage lies concealed

Within this noble infant, like a spark
Beneath the fuel, waiting but a breath
To fan the flame and raise a conflagration.

FIRST ATTENDANT. Let the young lion go, like a dear child, and I will give you something else to play with.

CHILD. Where is it? Give it me first.
[Stretches out his hand.]

KING [looking at his hand]. How's that? His hand exhibits one of those mystic marks which are the sure prognostic of universal empire. See!

His fingers stretched in eager expectation

To grasp the wished-for toy, and knit together

By a close-woven web, in shape resemble
A lotus blossom, whose expanding petals
The early dawn has only half unfolded.

SECOND ATTENDANT. We shall never pacify him by mere words, dear Suvratā. Be kind enough to go to my cottage, and you will find there a plaything belonging to Mārkaṇḍeya, one of the hermit's children. It is a peacock made of china-ware, painted in many colours. Bring it here for the child.

FIRST ATTENDANT. Very well. [Exit.]

CHILD. No, no; I shall go on playing with the young lion. [Looks at the FEMALE ATTENDANT and laughs.]

KING. I feel an unaccountable affection for this wayward child.

How blessed the virtuous parents whose attire

Is soiled with dust, by raising from the ground

The child that asks a refuge in their arms!

And happy are they while with lisping prattle,

In accents sweetly inarticulate,
He charms their ears; and with his artless smiles

Gladdens their hearts, revealing to their gaze

His pearly teeth just budding into view.

ATTENDANT. I see how it is. He pays me no manner of attention. [Looking off the stage.] I wonder whether any of the hermits are about here. [Secing the KING.] Kind Sir, could you come hither a moment and help me to release the young lion from the clutch of this child who is teasing him in boyish play?

KING [approaching and smiling]. Listen to me, thou child of a mighty saint! Dost thou dare show a wayward spirit here?

Here, in this hallowed region? Take thou heed

Lest, as the serpent's young defiles the sandal,

Thou bring dishonour on the holy Sage
Thy tender-hearted parent, who delights
To shield from harm the tenants of the wood.

ATTENDANT. Gentle Sir, I thank you; but he is not the Saint's son.

KING. His behaviour and whole bearing would have led me to doubt it, had not the place of his abode encouraged the idea. [Follows the CHILD, and takes him by the hand, according to the request of the attendant. Aside.]

I marvel that the touch of this strange child

Should thrill me with delight; if so it be,
How must the fond caresses of a son

Transport the father's soul who gave him being!

ATTENDANT [looking at them both]. Wonderful! Prodigious!

KING. What excites your surprise, my good woman?

ATTENDANT. I am astonished at the striking resemblance between the child and yourself; and, what is still more extraordinary, he seems to have taken to you kindly and submissively, though you are a stranger to him.

KING [fondling the CHILD]. If he be not the son of the great Sage, of what family does he come, may I ask?

ATTENDANT. Of the race of Puru.

KING [aside]. What! are we, then, descended from the same ancestry? This, no doubt, accounts for the resemblance she traces between the child and me. Certainly it has always been an established usage among the princes of Puru's race, To dedicate the morning of their days
To the world's weal, in palaces and halls,
'Mid luxury and regal pomp abiding;
Then, in the wane of life, to seek release
From kingly cares, and make the hallowed shade

Of sacred trees their last asylum, where
As hermits they may practise self-abasement,

And bind themselves by rigid vows of penance.

[Aloud.] But how could mortals by their own power gain admission to this sacred region?

ATTENDANT. Your remark is just; but your wonder will cease when I tell you that his mother is the offspring of a celestial nymph, and gave him birth in the hallowed grove of Kaśyapa.

KING [aside]. Strange that my hopes should be again excited! [Aloud.] But what, let me ask, was the name of the prince whom she deigned to honour with her hand?

ATTENDANT. How could I think of polluting my lips by the mention of a wretch who had the cruelty to desert his lawful wife?

KING [aside]. Ha! the description suits me exactly. Would I could bring myself to inquire the name of the child's mother! [Reflecting.] But it is against propriety to make too minute inquiries about the wife of another man.

FIRST ATTENDANT [entering with the china peacock in her hand]. Sarva-damana, Sarva-damana, see, see, what a beautiful śakoonta [bird].

CHILD [looking round]. My mother! Where? Let me go to her.

BOTH ATTENDANTS. He mistook the word śakoonta for śakoontalá. The boy dotes upon his mother, and she is ever uppermost in his thoughts.

SECOND ATTENDANT. Nay, my dear child, I said: Look at the beauty of this śakoonta.

KING [aside]. What! is his mother's name śakoontalá? But the name is not uncommon among women. Alas! I fear the mere similarity of a name, like the deceitful vapour of the desert, has once more raised my hopes only to dash them to the ground.

CHILD. Dear nurse, what a beautiful peacock! [Takes the toy.]

FIRST ATTENDANT [looking at the CHILD. In great distress]. Alas! alas! I do not see the amulet on his wrist.

KING. Don't distress yourself. Here

it is. It fell off while he was struggling with the young lion. [Stoops to pick it up.]

BOTH ATTENDANTS. Hold! hold! Touch it not, for your life. How marvellous! He has actually taken it up without the slightest hesitation. [Both raise their hands to their breasts and look at each other in astonishment.]

KING. Why did you try to prevent my touching it?

FIRST ATTENDANT. Listen, great Monarch. This amulet, known as 'The Invincible,' was given to the boy by the divine son of Marichi, soon after his birth, when the natal ceremony was performed. Its peculiar virtue is, that when it falls on the ground, no one except the father or mother of the child can touch it unhurt.

KING. And suppose another person touches it?

FIRST ATTENDANT. Then it instantly becomes a serpent, and bites him.

KING. Have you ever witnessed the transformation with your own eyes?

BOTH ATTENDANTS. Over and over again.

KING [with rapture. Aside]. Joy! joy! Are then my dearest hopes to be fulfilled? [Embraces the CHILD.]

SECOND ATTENDANT. Come, my dear Suvratá, we must inform śakoontalá immediately of this wonderful event, though we have to interrupt her in the performance of her religious vows. [Exeunt.]

CHILD [to the KING]. Don't hold me. I want to go to my mother.

KING. We will go to her together, and give her joy, my son.

CHILD. Dushyanta is my father, not you.

KING [smiling]. His contradiction only convinces me the more.

[Enter ŚAKOONTALÁ, in widow's apparel, with her long hair twisted into a single braid.]

ŚAKOONTALÁ [aside]. I have just heard that Sarva-damana's amulet has retained its form, though a stranger raised it from the ground. I can hardly believe in my good fortune. Yet why should not Śānumati's prediction be verified?

KING [gazing at ŚAKOONTALĀ]. Alas! can this indeed be my Śakoontalā?

Clad in the weeds of widowhood, her face Emaciate with fasting, her long hair Twined in a single braid, her whole demeanour

Expressive of her purity of soul; With patient constancy she thus prolongs The vow to which my cruelly condemned her.

ŚAKOONTALĀ [gazing at the KING, who is pale with remorse]. Surely this is not like my husband; yet who can it be that dares pollute by the pressure of his hand my child, whose amulet should protect him from a stranger's touch?

CHILD [going to his mother]. Mother, who is this man that has been kissing me and calling me his son?

KING. My best beloved, I have indeed treated thee most cruelly, but am now once more thy fond and affectionate lover. Refuse not to acknowledge me as thy husband.

ŚAKOONTALĀ [aside]. Be of good cheer, my heart. The anger of Destiny is at last appeased. Heaven regards thee with compassion. But is he in very truth my husband?

KING. Behold me, best and loveliest of women,

Delivered from the cloud of fatal darkness

That erst oppressed my memory. Again Behold us brought together by the grace Of the great lord of Heaven. So the moon

Shines forth from dim eclipse, to blend his rays

With the soft lustre of his Rohiṇī.

ŚAKOONTALĀ. May my husband be victorious— [She stops short, her voice choked with tears.]

KING. O fair one, though the utterance of thy prayer

Be lost amid the torrent of thy tears, Yet does the sight of thy fair countenance And of thy pallid lips, all unadorned

And colourless in sorrow for my absence, Make me already more than conqueror.

CHILD. Mother, who is this man?

ŚAKOONTALĀ. My child, ask the deity that presides over thy destiny.

KING [falling at ŚAKOONTALĀ's feet]. Fairest of women, banish from thy mind The memory of my cruelty; reproach The fell delusion that o'erpowered my soul,

And blame not me, thy husband; 'tis the curse

Of him in whom the power of darkness reigns,

That he mistakes the gifts of those he loves

For deadly evils. Even though a friend Should wreath a garland on a blind man's brow,

Will he not cast it from him as a serpent?

ŚAKOONTALĀ. Rise, my own husband, rise. Thou wast not to blame. My own evil deeds, committed in a former state of being, brought down this judgment upon me. How else could my husband, who was ever of a compassionate disposition, have acted so unfeelingly? [The KING rises.] But tell me, my husband, how did the remembrance of thine unfortunate wife return to thy mind?

KING. As soon as my heart's anguish is removed, and its wounds are healed, I will tell thee all.

Oh! let me, fair one, chase away the drop That still bedews the fringes of thine eye;

And let me thus efface the memory Of every tear that stained thy velvet cheek,

Unnoticed and unheeded by thy lord, When in his madness he rejected thee. [Wipes away the tear.]

ŚAKOONTALĀ [seeing the signet-ring on his finger]. Ah! my dear husband, is that the Lost Ring?

KING. Yes; the moment I recovered it my memory was restored.

ŚAKOONTALĀ. The ring was to blame in allowing itself to be lost at the very time when I was anxious to convince my noble husband of the reality of my marriage.

KING. Receive it back, as the beautiful twining-plant receives again its blossom in token of its reunion with the spring.

ŚAKOONTALĀ. Nay; I can never more place confidence in it. Let my husband retain it.

[Enter MĀTALI.]

MĀTALI. I congratulate your Majesty. Happy are you in your reunion with your wife; happy are you in beholding the face of your own son.

KING. Yes, indeed. My heart's dearest wish has borne sweet fruit. But tell me, Mātali, is this joyful event known to the great Indra?

MĀTALI [smiling]. What is unknown to the gods? But come with me, noble Prince, the divine Kaśyapa graciously permits thee to be presented to him.

KING. Śakoontalā, take our child and lead the way. We will together go into the presence of the holy Sage.

ŚAKOONTALĀ. I shrink from entering the august presence of the great Saint, even with my husband at my side.

KING. Nay; on such a joyous occasion it is highly proper. Come, come; I entreat thee. [All advance.]

[KAŚYAPA is discovered seated on a throne with his wife ADITI.]

KAŚYAPA [gazing at DUSHYANTA. To his wife]. O Aditi,

This is the mighty hero, King Dushyanta, Protector of the earth; who, at the head

Of the celestial armies of thy son,
Does battle with the enemies of heaven.
Thanks to his bow, the thunderbolt of Indra

Rests from its work, no more the minister

Of death and desolation to the world,
But a mere symbol of divinity.

ADITI. He bears in his noble form all the marks of dignity.

MĀTALI [to DUSHYANTA]. Sire, the venerable progenitors of the celestials are gazing at your Majesty with as much affection as if you were their son. You may advance towards them.

KING. Are these, O Mātali, the holy pair,
Offspring of Daksha and divine Marīchi,
Children of Brahmā's sons, by sages
deemed

Sole fountain of celestial light, diffused Through twelve effulgent orbs? Are these the pair

From whom the ruler of the triple world,
Sovereign of gods and lord of sacrifice,
Sprang into being? That immortal pair Whom Vishnu, greater than the Self-existent,

Chose for his parents, when, to save man-

kind,
He took upon himself the shape of mortals?

MĀTALI. Even so.

KING [prostrating himself]. Most august of beings! Dushyanta, content to have fulfilled the commands of your son Indra, offers you his adoration.

KAŚYAPA. My son, long may'st thou live, and happily may'st thou reign over the earth!

ADITI. My son, may'st thou ever be invincible in the field of battle!

ŚAKOONTALĀ. I also prostrate myself before you, most adorable Beings, and my child with me.

KAŚYAPA. My daughter,
Thy lord resembles Indra, and thy child
Is noble as Jayanta, Indra's son;

I have no worthier blessing left for thee,
May'st thou be faithful as the god's own
wife!

ADITI. My daughter, may'st thou be always the object of thy husband's fondest love; and may thy son live long to be the joy of both his parents! Be seated. [All sit down in the presence of KAŚYAPA.]

KAŚYAPA [regarding each of them by turns]. Hail to the beautiful Śakoontalā,

Hail to her noble son, and hail to thee,
Illustrious Prince—rare triple combination

Of virtue, wealth, and energy united.

KING. Most venerable Kaśyapa, by your favour all my desires were accomplished even before I was admitted to your presence. Never was mortal so honoured that his boon should be granted ere it was solicited. Because—

Bloom before fruit, the clouds before the rain,
Cause first and then effect, in endless sequence,

Is the unchanging law of constant nature;
But, ere the blessing issued from thy lips,
The wishes of my heart were all fulfilled.

MĀTALI. It is thus that the great progenitors of the world confer favours.

KING. Most reverend Sage, this thy handmaid was married to me by the Gándharva ceremony, and after a time was conducted to my palace by her relations. Meanwhile a fatal delusion seized me; I lost my memory and rejected her, thus committing a grievous offence against the venerable Kanwa, who is of thy divine race. Afterwards the sight of this ring restored my faculties, and brought back to my mind all the circumstances of my union with his daughter. But my conduct still seems to me incomprehensible; As foolish as the fancies of a man
Who, when he sees an elephant, denies
That 'tis an elephant; then afterwards,
When its huge bulk moves onward, hesitates;

Yet will not be convinced till it has passed

For ever from his sight, and left behind
No vestige of its presence save his footsteps.

KAŚYAPA. My son, cease to think thyself in fault. Even the delusion that possessed thy mind was not brought about by any act of thine. Listen to me.

KING. I am attentive.

KAŚYAPA. Know that when the nymph Menakā, the mother of Śakoontalā, became aware of her daughter's anguish in consequence of the loss of the ring at the nymph's pool, and of thy subsequent rejection of her, she brought her and confided her to the care of Aditi. And I no sooner saw her than I ascertained by my divine faculty of meditation, that thy repudiation of thy poor faithful wife had been caused entirely by the curse of Durvāsas—not by thine own fault—and that the spell would terminate on the discovery of the ring.

KING [drawing a deep breath]. Oh! what a weight is taken off my mind, now that my character is cleared of reproach.

ŚAKOONTALĀ [aside]. Joy! Joy! My revered husband did not, then, reject me without good reason, though I have no recollection of the curse pronounced upon me. But, in all probability, I unconsciously brought it upon myself, when I was so distracted on being separated from my husband soon after our marriage. For I now remember that my two friends advised me not to fail to show the ring in case he should have forgotten me.

KAŚYAPA. At last, my daughter, thou art happy, and hast gained thy heart's desire. Indulge, then, no feeling of resentment against thy consort. See, now, Though he repulsed thee, 'twas the sage's curse

That clouded his remembrance; 'twas the curse

That made thy tender husband harsh towards thee.

Soon as the spell was broken, and his soul
Delivered from its darkness, in a moment
Thou didst regain thine empire o'er his heart.

So on the tarnished surface of a mirror
No image is reflected, till the dust,
That dimmed its wonted lustre, is removed.

KING. Holy father, see here the hope of my royal race. [Takes his CHILD by the hand.]

KAŚYAPA. Know that he, too, will become the monarch of the whole earth. Observe,

Soon, a resistless hero, shall he cross
The trackless ocean, borne above the waves
In an aerial car; and shall subdue
The earth's seven sea-girt isles. Now has he gained,

As the brave tamer of the forest-beasts,
The title Sarva-damana; but then

Mankind shall hail him as King Bharata, And call him the supporter of the world.

KING. We cannot but entertain the highest hopes of a child for whom your Highness performed the natal rites.

ADITI. My revered husband, should not the intelligence be conveyed to Kanwa, that his daughter's wishes are fulfilled, and her happiness complete? He is Śakoontalá's foster-father. Menaká, who is one of my attendants, is her mother, and dearly does she love her daughter.

ŚAKOONTALÁ [aside]. The venerable matron has given utterance to the very wish that was in my mind.

KAŚYAPA. His penances have gained for him the faculty of omniscience, and the whole scene is already present to his mind's eye.

KING. Then most assuredly he cannot be very angry with me.

KAŚYAPA. Nevertheless, it becomes us to send him intelligence of this happy event, and hear his reply. What ho, there!

PUPIL [entering]. Holy father, what are your commands?

KAŚYAPA. My good Gálava, delay not an instant, but hasten through the air and convey to the venerable Kanwa, from me, the happy news that the fatal spell has ceased, that Dushyanta's memory is restored, that his daughter Śakoontalá has a son, and that she is once more tenderly acknowledged by her husband.

PUPIL. Your Highness' commands shall be obeyed. [Exit.]

KAŚYAPA. And now, my dear son, take thy consort and thy child, re-ascend the car of Indra, and return to thy imperial capital.

KING. Most holy father, I obey.

KAŚYAPA. And accept this blessing— For countless ages may the god of gods, Lord of the atmosphere, by copious showers

Secure abundant harvests to thy subjects;

And thou by frequent offerings preserve The Thunderer's friendship. Thus, by interchange

Of kindly actions may you both confer Unnumbered benefits on earth and heaven.

KING. Holy father, I will strive, as far as I am able, to attain this happiness.

KAŚYAPA. What other favour can I bestow on thee, my son?

KING. What other can I desire? If, however, you permit me to form another wish, I would humbly beg that the saying of the sage Bharata be fulfilled:

May kings reign only for their subjects' weal;

May the divine Saraswatí, the source Of speech, and goddess of dramatic art, Be ever honoured by the great and wise; And may the purple self-existent god, Whose vital Energy pervades all space, From future transmigrations save my soul. [Exeunt omnes.]

PROLOGUE

[The scene is the house of MRS. CH'ANG.]

MRS. CH'ANG. I am a native of Ch'ing-ch'ao. My family name is Liu; that of my husband was Ch'ang. He died very young, a long time ago, and left me two children, a boy and a girl. My son's name is Ch'ang-Lin. I taught him to read and write. My daughter's name is Ch'ang Hai-t'ang. I have no need to say much of one so distinguished for her beauty and fineness and greatness of soul. She knows the arts of writing and drawing, can play the flute most delicately and dance like the spirit of a white butterfly flitting amongst the ethereal flowers of heaven. She can sing like a nightingale and accompany herself most ravishingly upon the guitar. In a word, there is not a talent she does not possess to perfection. For seven generations my ancestors held high positions and achieved literary success. But alas! the wheel of fortune turned and in the wink of an eye I had lost all that I had. And now, pressed by necessity, I have had to force my daughter to make traffic of her beauty in order that she may continue to live and be charming. In this neighborhood dwells a rich man named Ma Chun-shing, a frequent caller at our house. He has seen my daughter and has made persistent proposals, offering her the rank of Second Wife. My daughter asks nothing better than to have him for a husband, but I could not give up the fine raiment and manner of living procured for me by her trade. I shall wait until she comes and then talk over with her the subject which now engrosses me.

[Enter CH'ANG-LIN.]

CH'ANG-LIN. I am called Ch'ang-Lin. . . . Well, my Honorable Mother, you know that my father and my ancestors held high places in the literary world and positions of eminence. If you are pleased to allow that miserable little wretch to continue to practice an infamous trade which dishonors her family, what kind of a figure do you think I can make in the world?

MRS. CH'ANG. What is the meaning of this idle talk? If you fear that the conduct of your sister dishonors your family, would it not be better for you to seek some means of gaining silver yourself for the support of your aged mother?

[Enter HAI-T'ANG.]

HAI-T'ANG. My brother, if you would be a gallant youth, take upon yourself the maintenance of our venerable mother.

CH'ANG-LIN. Most degraded of sisters, how is it that you can practice this ignoble profession? If you do not fear the contempt of society, I do. And for that reason, vile creature, I would that you were broken into bits. [He strikes her.]

MRS. CH'ANG [arresting his hand]. Do not strike her. [And as he withdraws.] It is more fitting that I should be the one to strike her.

CH'ANG-LIN. My Honorable Mother, I am weary of these domestic wrangles and beg that you will cease them immediately. Let her receive her punishment through the maledictions and railleries of good people. I am leaving for P'ien-ching, the city where my uncle lives. I shall endeavor to find there some means of gaining a livelihood. It is commonly said that first of all a young man must look out for himself. Big and strong as I am, do you believe that I shall perish of hunger after I have quit this house?

[To HAI-T'ANG.]

And thou, vile creature, after I have departed, see that you take good care of your mother. Should any misfortune befall her, I warn you that you may hope for no pardon.

Inflamed with rage,
This house I quit in haste
To find elsewhere some means
Of sustenance.
So vigorous am I,
I cannot think
The heavens have decreed
I spend my days
In penury.

[Bows to MRS. CH'ANG.]

I go.

[He goes, running as from the seven devils.]

HAI-T'ANG. How often, Respected Mother, am I to suffer such aspersions upon my character? How much better should you graciously permit me to wed the Honorable Ma Chun-shing.

MRS. CH'ANG. You are right, O Daughter of Wisdom. But wait until the Honorable Ma Chun-shing arrives and you shall see that I am augustly disposed to consent to your marriage.

[MA CHUN-SHING enters and stands apart from the others.]

MA CHUN-SHING. My family name is Ma and my surname Chun-shing. My ancestors settled in Ch'ing-ch'iu. In my youth I followed the career of letters and acquired a profound knowledge of the classics and of history. As I enjoy a considerable fortune, every one gives me the title of Yuan-wei. I constantly seek pleasure and am passionately drawn toward what is known as the primrose path. Near by lives a most alluring little beauty who exercises the sweetest of all arts and has for some time past maintained with me the most agreeable of relations. Her name is Ch'ang Hai-t'ang. I have no need to describe the perfect accord of her sentiments with mine, for I have the intention of taking her to wife. She has conveyed to me her desire to become united with me, but her old mother has twenty obstacles to offer to our happiness. I suspect her object is to obtain from me rich presents. I have heard that during the last few days Ch'ang Hai-t'ang has had some lively altercations with her brother, Ch'ang-Lin, and that he precipitately left the maternal mansion to find his uncle in P'ien-ching. I imagine that he will not return for some time, or at least not before the happy day. It is best that I prepare the wedding gifts and renew my demands for the marriage. How fortunate that the heavens favor me and that I am about to realize so delightful a project. But what do I perceive? The Honorable Ch'ang Hai-t'ang stands within the entrance of her house, and as usual is most brilliantly arrayed. Her beauty lights the morn with Celestial radiance and her smile is lovelier than the rarest jade. But softly—let us speak with her a while.

[He regards HAI-T'ANG and bows to her.]

HAI-T'ANG. My lord, since you are here, let us profit by the absence of my brother. It should be the easier to bring my mother around to our project and make her augustly consent. She is in the best of humors and has graciously suffered me to converse with her upon the subject. Let us both go to her.

MA CHUN-SHING. Since she is so well disposed, I see that the moment of my happiness has arrived.

[He perceives MRS. CH'ANG.]

MRS. CH'ANG. My lord, to-day my son, Ch'ang-Lin, has failed in obedience and filial piety. Without respect for my old age, he has conducted himself with violence toward me. I pray you, I pray you to bring the smelling salts.

MA CHUN-SHING. And what was the altercation you had with your son? I came this morning to offer you one hundred pieces of silver, ten rolls of silk and two porcelain cuspidors of refined shape, of the Sung dynasty. Also when Hai-t'ang shall have become my wife, should you be in need of wood or rice, I shall hasten to procure them for you. Be assured, O Venerable Mother, that you will want for nothing. Give yourself over to a day of happiness. Accept my unworthy and insignificant offerings, and augustly give your consent to our marriage.

MRS. CH'ANG. I cannot think very highly of a daughter who daily involves me in quarrels. But after she is married I can live free from disquietude. But, my lord, you have already a wife of first rank. Therefore I must make sure that my daughter will not be subjected to insults and maltreatment, before I allow her to set foot in the bridal chamber. Otherwise, I should prefer to have her remain with me. But once my doubts are set at rest, I shall, my lord, be happy to give my consent to your marriage.

MA CHUN-SHING. Have no fears. My First Wife is as incapable as myself of ill-bred conduct. Your honorable daughter will no sooner take up her residence with me than Mrs. Ma will regard her as a beloved sister. As for myself, notwithstanding ing her secondary rank, she shall have the same privileges as the other. But if Hai-t'ang shall augustly give to the world a man-child, from that moment she shall be in charge of all the affairs of my house. Thus, Respected Mother, you need give yourself no further uneasiness concerning your exalted and sublimely beautiful daughter.

MRS. CH'ANG. My lord, the matter is concluded. Since I have your magnificent gifts, my inferior and ill-favored offspring is yours. You may this instant take her. . . . And thou, my child, my Golden Lotus, know that it was not I who removed you from the shelter of my arms. You are now elevated to the rank of wife. I hope that from now on you will not again take up your former profession.

HAI-T'ANG. My lord, since your First Wife directs all the affairs of your household, I trust you will not fail ever to stand as my protector and support.

My aged mother hopes
That all my days
I shall remain
Quite faithful to my husband.
She also hopes
To rest on me her head—
Her venerable head—
White with the years.

My master, I love you better than all the world.

MA CHUN-SHING. That is too much, my betrothed.

HAI-T'ANG. The sweetness of your character

Is what I most adore;
Your noble sentiments,
Sincerity and loftiness.
And so I give to you to-day
My heart;

But giving it, take to myself the joys
Of which I long have dreamed.

I go to announce to my friends that Ch'ang Hai-t'ang is to wed the illustrious Yuan-wei, Ma Chun-shing. And henceforth I hope that no one will again cast aspersions upon me.

From all aspersions now
I shall be free;

No more can it be said

I smirch the honor of the family.

[She goes out with MA CHUN-SHING.]

MRS. CH'ANG. I go to-day to marry my daughter to the noble Ma Chun-shing, who presented me with one hundred pieces of silver and other valuable gifts. This means that I shall pass the rest of my days in joy and abundance. As this affair occupies me much, I shall first go in search of my aunt and my sisters, whom I have not seen for some time. We will then have tea together and regale ourselves in a neighboring tavern.

END OF THE PROLOGUE

ACT I

[The scene is in the house of MA CHUN-SHING.]

MRS. MA. The men do not cease
To eulogize my charms,
And because I desire their pleasure
There is vermilion upon my lips
And bright colors glorify my cheeks.
Yet in the twinkling of an eye
The rouge and white paint may disappear;
It takes only a basin
Of pure water.

I occupy the important position of First Wife to Ma Chun-shing. He has a Second Wife by the name of Hai-t'ang, a daughter of some person named Ch'ang. She has given our husband a son who is already five years of age. . . . For me, I have succeeded in imposing upon the confidence of my lord Ma. Near here dwells a clerk named Ch'ao, who is as handsome as a spring morning and who passionately adores the gentler sex. I maintain with him certain relations and appreciate his rare qualities. Also, my particular wish, my most ardent desire is to undo this Ma Chun-shing, in order to live always with Ch'ao as a wife with her husband. To-day, seeing that the excellent lord Ma is from home, I have sent some one to Ch'ao with a request that he pass by here. I hope that at any moment he may arrive.

CH'AO. My station in life
Is that of a clerk.
But privately
There are two things I love
Surpassingly:
Good wine
And the women
Of other men.

What is the present object of my affections? A lady whose cheeks rival the most beautiful flowers. . . . My name is Ch'ao. I hold the position of clerk at the court of Ch'ing-ch'iu. Near here lives the First Wife of the Yuan-wei, Ma Chun-shing. One day when he invited me to dine with him, I saw by chance this Wife who is endowed with a most seductive face, the equal of which it may be doubted if heaven or earth has ever produced. The sight of this charming beauty struck deep into my heart. Night and day she is present in my thoughts, before the eyes of my mind. I imagine that she also had fixed her regard upon me because, imposing upon the confidence of her husband, she would hold with me certain relations not entirely in accord with morality. She has begged me to come to see her to-day. Let us go and find her. We do not yet know what is the motive of the message. . . . I now have arrived at the house where she lives. I shall enter without being announced. . . . Madam, you have commanded my presence. May I learn what you desire of me?

Mrs. MA. It is a most simple matter. I am troubled over the mystery with which we have need to cover our furtive amours. We have not yet come to the point of fixing the date for our union. What happiness will be ours when we live together as husband and wife.

For man achieves
Not by himself alone,
Nor woman, either;
But like the fabled
One-winged birds, they two Must rise together.

And to this end I desire but one thing now, to discover with you the most felicitous method of poisoning my lord Ma.

CH'AO. Need we mention this matter? Is it possible that she whom I regard already as my wife should form such a project without its having also presented itself to my own thoughts? Is this not poison? For some time I have been ready to execute this plan.

[He hands the poison to Mrs. MA.]
Here, I shall confide it to you. I am obliged to return to the court to fulfill my duties there. [He goes out.]

Mrs. MA. Ch'ao is gone. Let us take this poison and put it in some safe hiding place. I shall not rest until I have discovered a favorable moment to strike the blow I meditate. But I am thoughtless. I had forgotten that to-day is the anniversary of the birth of the young child. I go to pray with my lord Ma in all the temples, to burn perfume and gild the figure of Fu.*

HAI-T'ANG. I am named Hai-t'ang. It is five years since I was married to my lord Ma. My Venerable Mother has long ago departed to the Land of the Gods. I do not know the whereabouts of my brother, as since his departure I have received no news of him. The child which I had from my marriage is called Shiu-lang. Since he was three years of age he has stayed by the side of Mrs. Ma, who took him to bring up. As to-day is the anniversary of his birth, my lord and Mrs. Ma have taken him to all the temples in the city to burn sweet perfumes and to gild the image of Fu. I go now to prepare rice and tea to receive them as soon as they shall have returned. . . . Hai-t'ang, since you have espoused the lord Ma, nothing has interfered with your happiness.

Through the silken curtains
At my window
I contemplate the moon
And its cold shadows.

* Buddha.

It shines alike without reproach or passion

Upon my richly embroidered curtains
And upon that street which is the abode of vice.

Could I ever have hoped one day
To abandon that degrading profession,
The companionship of rakes and their mistresses,

With their orgies and licentious songs?
Yet I have forever said farewell
To that theatre of pleasure.
Let them follow me if they will
With raileries and aspersions.
Never again will I make advances for gain
Nor stretch forth a seducing hand to noblemen.

No more will I make traffic with my beauty

Nor return to the follies of the gay life.
They shall see me no more
In the abode of the Flowers of the Weeping Willow Tree,

Seeking new paramours
And inviting the return of old ones.
No longer do I fear that officers of the law

Will remove me violently from the Palace of Pleasure.

Nor shall I ever again be the slave
Of the go-between.
I shall suffer no more the amorous callers
Who succeeded one another without cessation.

Nor will my door be broken down
And my house invaded by insolent neighbors.

No longer must I vex myself
About the slenderness of my resources
And the boredom of my profession.
Untroubled by the wickedness of the world outside,

I live the long hours through in tranquil peace.

Even as the wild duck seeks its mate in the grass,

I have found a husband
Whose heart accords happily with mine,
And who each day begs me
To recompense his tenderness.
And so, that I may taste with him

The sweetness of slumber,
Ere the moon silvers the edges
Of my window curtains,
I send back to her own apartment
That woman so jealous of my serenity.

I await the return of my lord and Mrs. Ma. . . . But they do not come. . . . Let us go out for a moment and look for them in the distance.

[She steps outside and with a hand shading her eyes, peers off.]

[Enter CH'ANG-LIN.]

CH'ANG-LIN. From the bounty of my fellow mortals

I have acquired sad experience.
I see now that it is much better
To place one's trust in the High Gods.
I am Ch'ang-Lin. After having had, in the past, a lively altercation with my sister, I quitted the maternal house to go in search of my uncle. Who would have dreamed that I would find him departed for Ch'ong Hse-tao accompanied by some individual named Yen P'ing-fu? Having discovered no one who would tender me hospitality, I have returned benumbed by cold and weighed down by fatigue. I fell down ill in the middle of the road. I have no need to tell how soon my money and my provisions for the journey were used up. In order to exist, I was forced first to pawn, then to sell the clothing off my back. I returned to my family, but my Venerable Mother has long since been enjoying herself in the Celestial Rice Fields. In our ancestral dwelling there is now no place where I can lay my head. I have learned that my sister is married to the great Ma Chun-shing. He is a man of wealth. Without doubt he will deign to regard with compassion his unfortunate brother-in-law and accord him the means of reclaiming his position. Who could blame me for seeking him out? I shall implore his assistance and ask of him relief for my most pressing needs. In a moment I shall arrive at the house of Ma Chun-shing. . . . Why, if I'm not mistaken, there stands my sister just within the doorway!

HAI-T'ANG. I say to myself, who is it that arrives below? Well, if it isn't my brother! . . . Fat and plump as you are, you have nothing to ask here. Get you gone.

CH'ANG-LIN. Most Honored Sister, grant me, I pray you, but two words with you.

HAI-T'ANG. I think, my worthy brother, it must be that you have come to erect a tombstone over the hallowed spot where reposes the body of our Honored Mother, and duly to console me in my grief.

CH'ANG-LIN. Respected Sister, I beg of you do not look at my face but rather at the way I am clothed. I am in penury and tormented by the pangs of hunger. How then can you possibly believe that I have come for the purpose of erecting a tombstone over the grave of our lamented mother?

HAI-T'ANG. When death took my mother, I furnished the shroud and winding sheet and also the camphor wood for the double coffin. I saw to it that with her were buried replicas of all the articles necessary for her comfort while upon this earth, and the spirit money with which to pay her way to the First Heaven. I supported all these expenses without having recourse to my lord Ma Chun-shing.

CH'ANG-LIN. As it was your husband who defrayed the cost of the obsequies, I know that you are under immense obligation to him.

HAI-T'ANG. Having lost my August Father,

Without resources

I was left the care of my mother.

How could you suffer your own sister

To exercise a profession which tarnished
The honor of the house?

I see now that in the depths of your heart
You do not belong to the family of Ch'ang.

[She strikes him.]

CH'ANG-LIN. Why do you strike me, Most Marvelous of Sisters? I realize that I am greatly indebted to you. Be assured that I have only the highest admiration for your extreme filial piety.

HAI-T'ANG. Sweet morsels fall from your lips

Like cherries dipped in honey.

I see that you have learned that flattery
Is the password to a warm welcome.

CH'ANG-LIN. I came to-day, my sister, to ask your assistance. How is it you receive me with such coldness?

HAI-T'ANG. It is not for you to reproach me with the coldness you observe upon my countenance. Do you recall, my brother, the day when, burning with anger, you addressed frightful threats to me, after which you fled as if you wanted to run to the end of the world?

CH'ANG-LIN. My sister, that is ancient history. What pleasure can it give you to bring up the past?

HAI-T'ANG. Since you set forth

Upon the shining road

To cover yourself with glory,

I ask you how

Do you now return

Clad in rags and tatters?

CH'ANG-LIN. You know, my Excellent Sister, that we are the children of one father and of one mother. Therefore if your brother has done you wrong, you should forget it and cool your wrath in the beneficent waters of forgiveness.

HAI-T'ANG. My brother, how could you have the face to seek me out to-day? You will hear to the very end what I have in my heart.

CH'ANG-LIN. Honorable Sister, it was necessity that forced me to appeal to you. Pressed by extremity as I am, I shall not question the amount of the help you accord me and shall leave immediately after receiving it.

HAI-T'ANG. My brother, of silver I have none. It is foolish to demand it of me. You must understand that even the robes and head-ornaments I am wearing are the property of Ma Chun-shing and Mrs. Ma. How could I dispose of them for your benefit? I myself possess nothing to offer as a sacrifice to your needs. Go. It is useless for you to remain.

CH'ANG-LIN. My sister, you are hard and unrelenting. It pierces my marrow that not only have you denied me succor, but you have overwhelmed me with abuse and ill-treatment. However, I shall not take myself off. I shall rest here upon the doorstep until the arrival of the Honorable Ma Chun-shing. Perhaps he will deign to augustly extend to me some bounty.

[Enter Mrs. Ma.]

MRS. MA. I am the First Wife of Ma Chun-shing. I have raised the young child and I have prayed and burned incense for him upon the altars of all the temples.

[Approaching.]

But what do I perceive? A mendicant upon the portal? Ho there, what evil purpose brings you hither?

CH'ANG-LIN [rising]. Madam, I do not merit such language. I am the brother of Ch'ang Hai-t'ang. I have come to call upon my sister.

MRS. MA. Ah! Ah! You are the brother of Hai-t'ang. That makes you my brother-in-law. You know me?

CH'ANG-LIN. Your unworthy servant is unacquainted with the illustrious lady with whom he speaks.

MRS. MA. I am the First Wife of Ma Chun-shing.

CH'ANG-LIN. Gracious Madam, I dare hope that you have not taken offense because I failed to know you.

[He bows to her.]

MRS. MA. My brother-in-law, what was your purpose in looking up your sister?

CH'ANG-LIN. Though the truth is painful I shall not dissimulate. Pressed by necessity and having nothing upon which to subsist, I came to ask my sister for something with which to assuage my urgent need.

MRS. MA. How much did she give you?

CH'ANG-LIN. She replied that all the articles in this house belonged to you and that she therefore had no right to dispose of anything, and that she herself had nothing.

MRS. MA. My brother-in-law, you are no doubt ignorant of the fact that since her marriage with Ma Chun-shing your sister has given him a son who is already five years of age. He is your nephew. Ever since his birth your sister has held the keys of the rice-bin and the entire compound is under her direction. That is because I have no son.

[She beats her breast.]

I have not even the shadow of a son! . . . Since you are the brother of Hai-t'ang, I regard you as my brother. I shall go to her and demand assistance for you. Should you obtain it, do not be too joyful. On your discretion will depend your good or your bad fortune.

CH'ANG-LIN. Your inferior servant realizes that you are a lady of fine spirit and much wisdom.

HAI-T'ANG [perceiving Mrs. MA]. Madam, you are the first to return. You have had a tedious pilgrimage. I am sorry to have caused you so much fatigue.

MRS. MA. Hai-t'ang, who is the man seated upon the doorstep?

HAI-T'ANG. It is my brother, Ch'ang-Lin.

MRS. MA. Ah! It is your brother? Why has he come here?

HAI-T'ANG. He came to ask of his sister something to supply his needs.

MRS. MA. And is it possible that you have given him nothing?

HAI-T'ANG. It was Ma Chun-shing and his First Wife who presented me with these robes and head-ornaments. Tell me if it would be augustly right of me to give them away.

MRS. MA. Since the articles were given to you, what is to prevent your giving them, in turn, to your brother?

HAI-T'ANG. Madam, I believe that to be far from my duty. What should I say if Ma Chun-shing were to inquire what I had done with them?

MRS. MA. If Ma Chun-shing questions you, I shall be there to justify you, and he will present you with new ones. Run along and make haste to take them off and give them to your brother.

HAI-T'ANG [obediently]. Since you permit me, I shall at once remove these robes and ornaments and give them to my brother. [She strips them off.]

MRS. MA. Since he believes they are not your own, give me the things and I will offer them to him myself.

[She takes them and approaches CH'ANG-LIN.]

My brother-in-law, to obtain help for you, I have aroused the anger of Ch'ang Hai-t'ang. I would never have thought that your own sister could be so unkind to you. Who would have imagined that she, who possesses so rich a wardrobe, would not have deigned to present you with so small a part of it? Or that she would refuse so slight a sacrifice with as much fury as if I were wanting to take away some pieces of her flesh. These robes and ornaments were given to me a long time ago as marriage gifts by my Esteemed Mother and Father. I give them to my brother-in-law in order that they may be sold at once to relieve for the moment his most pressing needs. I trust he will not despise them because of their smallness.

CH'ANG-LIN [taking the things which she offers]. Receive, O Most Noble and Generous Lady, my sincerest thanks. Like the little bird whose life was saved by Yang-pao and who returned later in the form of a young man, bearing gifts of four white jade bracelets to his benefactor, I shall place all my efforts into testifying to you worthily of my grateful memory of this august day.

[He bows low to thank her.]

MRS. MA [returning his bow]. My brother-in-law, as Ma Chun-shing is from home, I dare not invite you to dine. I trust you will not be offended.

[He bows and goes.]

CH'ANG-LIN. I believed at first that the robes and the head ornaments were the property of my sister. Who would have supposed they belonged to the honorable Mrs. Ma. . . . Oh well, you are my sister. We had the same father and the same mother. Yet not only have you failed to give me a mite to relieve my distress, but also you have repulsed me in a manner most hard and brutal. On the other hand, this estimable lady to whom I am an entire stranger, most graciously gives me of her clothing and head ornaments. Inasmuch as the written symbol for the word trouble is two women under one roof-tree, I imagine the First Wife and the Second Wife, in the seclusion of the within apartments, have many differences. It is not unlikely that they frequently need the intervention of the police. . . . For the moment, I shall sell only the head ornaments to buy myself some clothing. Afterwards, I shall endeavor to obtain employment as an official in the law-court of Kai Fa'ng-fu. My sister, look well to your conduct, that we may not meet face to face, should any accusation bring you before the tribunal; because I wish to take the skin from off your shoulders with the blows of a stick.

[He goes.]

[Enter MRS. MA.]

MRS. MA [perceiving HAI-T'ANG]. Hai-t'ang, I have just come from presenting the robes and head ornaments which you handed over to me.

HAI-T'ANG. Madam, you give me my life. But I fear one thing, and that is when my lord Ma Chun-shing demands of me what I have done with the things. When this occurs, I hope you will defend me.

MRS. MA. Without any doubt. Put all your trust in me.

[HAI-T'ANG goes out.]

MRS. MA [alone]. Hai-t'ang, thy brother has parted with the robes and head ornaments. I think you will not have any occasion to enjoy yourself about it, because if Ma Chun-shing asks what you have done, I am sorry for you! . . .

[Enter MA CHUN-SHING and his son, SHIU-LANG.]

MA CHUN-SHING [holding his son by the hand]. I am Ma, surnamed Chun-shing. As soon as I had married Ch'ang Hai-t'ang, I had by her this young child, whose name is Shiu-lang. He is five years of age. As to-day is the anniversary of his birth, I have gone with him to all the temples to burn perfumes in honor of Fu. Observing that the temple of the goddess who presides over the birth of boys is crumbling in many places, I have given silver with which to make the repairs. That is the reason for my prolonged absence. But in one instant I shall arrive at my house.

HAI-T'ANG. There comes my lord Ma. He is weary and fatigued. I must go quickly for tea. [She goes.]

MA CHUN-SHING. Madam, how is it that I do not see the customary robes and ornaments upon Ch'ang Hai-t'ang?

Mrs. MA. My lord, had you not questioned me, I should have kept my lips sealed. Because she has given you a son, you have heaped good things upon her and you have toward her a tolerance past bearing. Who would have thought that in your absence she would have taken a lover? To-day, while we were away burning perfume in all the temples, she gave her robes and head ornaments to her paramour. At the moment when she was going in search of other garments and ornaments, I surprised her and uncovered her intrigue. It was I who prevented her from concealing the situation and repairing the disorder of her appearance. I have been awaiting your arrival in order that you may reward the traitress according to her merits. It is not that I am jealous of her; even she does not impute that to me.

MA CHUNG-SHING [snorting]. So then, Hai-t'ang has given her robes and her ornaments to a lover. I see clearly that she is a person naturally depraved. Such conduct makes me die of grief and indignation.

[He calls HAI-T'ANG and strikes her.] I will annihilate you, vile creature, for violating the most sacred of all bonds.

Mrs. MA [egging on her husband]. Beat her, beat her! That is fine! What will you do with a strumpet who has dishonored your house? Augustly kill her with blows.

HAI-T'ANG. The robes, the head ornaments, I would not at first give to my brother, but she forced me to by her insistence. Who would have thought that in the presence of My Lord she would say that I had given them to a lover? In all this there is nothing for which Hai-t'ang should be reproached.

I used to ponder secretly
But not to vex myself;
Mistrusting none of her designs,
Nor yet suspecting this abyss
She's dug to plunge me in
With malice that is past belief.
I tremble now no less from fear
Than from the blows.

MA CHUNG-SHING [transported with rage]. Wrah! To think that you, who have given me a son, should so strip yourself also of honor and decency. You'll make me die of anger.

Mrs. MA. Why do you thus excite yourself? You should rather be thankful that you have at least one woman of unquestioned virtue in your household, and annihilate the other with blows.

HAI-T'ANG. All the time, he has had in his house
A First Wife.
All the time, sole dominion she's had,
She alone.
Who would think she could steal from the fox
His cunning,
Or from the wolf
His ferocity?

It is you who have taken to yourself a lover. How dare you hang upon me this outrageous calumny?

Because in my youth
I was a sing-song girl,
I have no wish to emulate her;
All that is past.

It will not be astonishing if she involves me in a crime.

Dare you cast upon me
The shame of your own debauches?

MRS. MA. Vile creature, I see well that your natural depravity is reawakened. You have given your robes and head ornaments to a lover, while deceiving your husband.

HAI-T'ANG. Surely the young wife named Sang was less cruel than you. You who glory in belonging to an ancient family, dare you say to me, whose heart is true and constant, that I have deceived the head of the house?

MRS. MA. With whom have you carried on this liaison?

HAI-T'ANG. She says that, disrobed, I received a lover.
I might as well assist her
To cover me with mud
As to suffer without a word
This aspersion she casts upon me.

MA CHUNG-SHING [appearing indisposed]. This wretch of a woman will make me die of indignation. Madam, I am faint. Fetch quickly some broth to restore me.

MRS. MA. It is Hai-t'ang the good-for-nothing who has caused the wrath that suffocates the august one. Hai-t'ang, go at once and heat some broth for the Honorable Lord Ma.

HAI-T'ANG. I obey.

Within the hour
There has rained upon my shoulders
A shower of blows.
And now behold!
I am sent to the kitchen
To heat some broth.
Without ceasing
This First Wife irritates lord Ma,
And angers him;
While making me
The victim of his anger
And suspicion. [She brings in the broth.]
Here, madam, is the broth.

MRS. MA. Bring it to me that I may taste of it. [She tastes the broth.]
It needs a little more salt. Run and get it. [Exit HAI-T'ANG.]

MRS. MA. Let us procure quickly the poison prepared some days ago for the August Lord Ma, and put it in the broth.

[She pours in the poison.]
Hai-t'ang, make haste!

[HAI-T'ANG enters.]

HAI-T'ANG. What troubles now my lady Ma,

What makes her shake and tremble?

How could a little lack of salt

Produce such agitation?

Madam, here is the salt.

[MRS. MA sprinkles salt in the broth and stirs it, then holds out the cup to her.]

MRS. MA. Here, Hai-t'ang, run and take it to him.

HAI-T'ANG. Madam, present it to him yourself. I fear to approach the Excellent One, as he augustly permits himself to be in a new fit of rage.

MRS. MA. If you yourself do not take it to him, he will infer that you are displeased with him.

HAI-T'ANG [bowing]. I obey. [She goes to MA CHUN-SHING with the broth.]

HAI-T'ANG. My lord, take a sip of this.

[MA CHUN-SHING takes the cup and drinks.]

HAI-T'ANG. Alas! What's this I see!
He sinks beneath the weight of pain,
His mouth convulsed with bitterness—
And yet the broth was sweet.

[MA CHUN-SHING expires.]

HAI-T'ANG [terrified]. My lord, my lord, deign to open your eyes!

Behold now this sudden pallor
Replacing the warm yellow hue.
What can, in one little instant,
Have taken the light from his eyes?
Frozen with terror, my courage is gone;
My own eyes but rivers of tears.
This spectacle chills while it palsies,
Can nothing prevent this untimely end?

He leaves his two wives and his five-year-old son without protection. . . . Poor mother! I alone remain with my young son and must finish my days in desolate widowhood. And thou, my child, what protector will now sustain thy frail existence? [She goes to MRS. MA.]

Madam, my lord Ma is no more.

MRS. MA. This same lord Ma Chun-shing had the ungraciousness to neglect me and take to himself a Second Wife. . . . Hai-t'ang, wretch that thou art, but a moment ago the excellent lord Ma was in the best of health. Is it possible that the cup of broth you gave him could bring all of a sudden the coldness of death? It is because you put poison in it. Is it not?

HAI-T'ANG. Madam, you tasted the broth yourself. Therefore, if it had been poisoned, it would have killed you first. But in any case, he is dead. And bitter will be my bowls of rice from this time on. [She weeps and rends her garments.] Oh heaven! I shall die of grief and despair.

MRS. MA [calls off]. My good servants, where are you?

[SERVANTS enter.]

Go and choose, upon a bit of high ground, a fitting place to dig a grave. Fell the wood for a coffin and inter for me the honorable lord Ma.

[The SERVANTS make haste to bear away on their shoulders the body of the honorable lord MA CHUN-SHING.]

MRS. MA. Hai-t'ang, you little wretch, wait a bit until we have disposed of the honorable body of Ma Chun-shing, and I shall make suitable arrangements for you, as surely you will not dare venture to continue your residence here.

HAI-T'ANG [weeping]. Madam, since the illustrious Ma Chun-shing is no more, I have no right to remain. Permit me only to take my son with me and I shall immediately take my leave.

MRS. MA. The young child whom he gave to us both?

HAI-T'ANG. It was me to whom he gave the child.

MRS. MA. If it was to you he gave the little Shiu-lang, why did you not nurse and care for him yourself? Ever since his birth he has been close to my side, close in my arms. It was I who fed him and chafed his cold limbs. It was to me that he brought each day his little troubles to be cared for with the tenderness of a mother. Soothing a thousand vexations, to what pains have I been to bring him up properly? And now you have the effrontery to demand that I hand over to you the child I so patiently raised. You have had a secret lover and you have murdered your husband. Therefore the best thing you can do is to renounce your claim upon the child. Will you do so voluntarily, or be compelled under the authority of the law?

HAI-T'ANG. What do you mean by that?

MRS. MA. If you give him up voluntarily, leaving the young child with me, the entire fortune of Ma Chun-shing—his houses, his lands, everything that he possessed, shall be yours. I shall leave, taking Shiu-lang with me. But if you do not withdraw except under legal pressure, I shall bring to mind the fact that you poisoned your husband. As you must know, that is no trifle, and I shall take you before the magistrate.

HAI-T'ANG. As it was not I who poisoned Ma Chun-shing, what fear have I of the magistrate? I am perfectly willing that we should go to him together.

MRS. MA. The magistrate is discriminating and will soon discover the truth. He will not fail to punish the guilty one. Very well then, since you fear nothing in appearing before the judge, I shall conduct you to the court.

HAI-T'ANG. I indeed fear nothing. By all means let us go to the court.

I shall see that the truth is known
And no credence given her mendacity.
I shall call in as witnesses
The two women
Who assisted him into the world.
They shall say which is the mother
And which the stepmother.

MRS. MA [embarrassed]. I am the true . . . true mother of the child. . . . That boy is my . . . my . . . real . . . real child.

[Passionately.]
He is my heart, my blood, my life, the child of my womb. How could I let go of him?

HAI-T'ANG. How impose upon all the inhabitants Of this quarter;
They who know of his birth
And have watched him grow
From infancy
Into a little lad?

MRS. MA. You have poisoned my lord Ma. It is within my power to hush up that fact.

HAI-T'ANG. For a long time you had the poison in readiness and you secretly put it into his broth.

MRS. MA. There is plain evidence that you poisoned the broth. All that I fear is that you may not suffer sufficient retribution.

HAI-T'ANG. Who is it that poisoned her husband?
You wish beyond doubt
That in expiation of your crime
I should sacrifice my life,
There is nothing to incriminate others,
Therefore you calumniate innocence.
No, surely among all the wives
Of first rank,
There is not another on earth
So corrupt and so barbarous as you.

MRS. MA [alone]. How is it that she has divined my strategy? . . . If only I can keep the child, the entire fortune of the honorable lord Ma will become my property. Clearly, this is a matter requiring due consideration. Everything must be carefully thought out if I am to spare myself the bitter food of painful regrets in the future. Let us reflect a little. . . . It is certainly a fact that the child is not my own. If Hai-t'ang invokes the testimony of her midwives and of the neighbors who knew of his birth, all these witnesses will testify before the magistrate in her favor. The whole project will be ruined. But when their black eyes perceive this shining metal—

[She displays silver.] they will undoubtedly burn to possess it. Therefore let us gain in advance their honorable interest, and in payment present each of them with a piece of silver. Then, at least a number of them will speak in my favor. But that is not all. I must also graciously win over the magistrate. What luck that Ch'ao is connected with the Courthouse and that I can send for him to talk the matter over. I must at once consult him as to the course of action I am to follow.

[Enter CH'AO.]

CH'AO. Some one has just been here asking for Ch'ao. Well, here I am. It is some days since I have called upon the honorable Mrs. Ma. I have had in the depths of my heart a most lively desire to see her. Without her, my spirit becomes downcast. . . . But I am now arriving at the door of her house. If her husband is absent, nothing will prevent my seeing her.

[Perceiving MRS. MA.]

Honorable Madam, I have been burning with thoughts of you. My longing has been awfully unutterable.

MRS. MA. Ch'ao, you are not aware that I have administered the poison you brought to the honorable lord Ma. Presently I go to take Hai-t'ang before the magistrate to lodge a complaint against her. I would take unto myself not only the inheritance of the lord Ma, but his son as well. Manage to win over the magistrate. Use all your wits, all your influence to arrange the case according to my wishes. Then we can entwine our lives together in lasting connubial bliss.

CH'AO. Nothing will be easier. I foresee but one difficulty; that the child is not your own. What good will it do you to remain guardian to him? It were the part of great wisdom to let go of him and be free of encumbrance.

Mrs. MA. Is it possible to hold the post of clerk of the court and yet be so stupid? If I give up the child to Hai-t'ang, as he is the heir of the Excellent Lord Ma, he will come and despoil me of his fortune. He will not permit me to keep so much as a stick of incense. As to Hai-t'ang, she plans to call as witnesses the midwives who attended her at the birth and many of the people who live near by. But I intend to make things easy for myself by means of this.

And if you can attend to the details at your end, recourse to the law will avail her nothing. I ask of you but one thing, to go and promptly make the necessary preparations.

CH'AO. Very well, Madam, but make haste to present your accusations. I go to the tribunal to prepare for everything.

[He goes out.]

Mrs. MA. Ch'ao has gone. I go to hind the arms of Hai-t'ang. The proverb says:

"Man dreams not of injuring the tiger;
It is the tiger who dreams
Of devouring man."

But I say:

What man dare attack a tiger
Without getting his flesh torn
To shreds?

END OF ACT I

ACT II

[The scene is the Court of CH'ING-CH'IU and there are present SU-SHUN and his suite.]

SU-SHUN. I am the governor of the Court of Ch'ing-ch'iu. My name is Su-shun.

Although I perform the functions of judge,
I am unacquainted
With a single article of the code.
I love but one thing

With his death it has flown
The clink of silver;
Graced with this beauteous
White metal,
The pleader is sure to win his case.

I detest this county of Ch'ing-ch'iu, which ridicules my extreme indulgence toward the guilty. They have given me the nickname of Su Mo-lun. These words have a double meaning. The character of Mo signifies "to take with the hand," and lun means a square piece of wood. The idea is that whether one receives it with the right hand or the left, it is all the same. It is by that absurd name that I am familiarly known. . . . In my opinion there are many magistrates whose rigid inflexibility has caused the downfall of an infinitude of people. But as for Su Mo-lun, one may try in vain to count the number of persons he has covertly saved. . . . This morning I am opening court unusually early. Ho! officers, bring me the tablets of cases scheduled for to-day.

AN OFFICER [bowing]. I obey.

[Enter Mrs. MA, dragging after her HAI-T'ANG and her young son, SHIU-LANG.]

Mrs. MA. I am taking you before the magistrate, to ask for vengeance.

HAI-T'ANG [struggling]. Let go of me!
Let go of me!

She envelops me
Like a devouring flame.
She bound me with hemp
And dragged me hither.

Mrs. MA. You have poisoned your husband, and the penalty is death.

HAI-T'ANG. You claim I have committed a crime,

The penalty for which
Is death.

If that were so,
How could I escape?
Alas, Hai-t'ang!

In espousing the noble lord Ma,
I attained the pinnacle of happiness.
Of that happiness there remains not trace.

Like red leaves
 Before the Autumn wind.
 Oppressed by calumny,
 I cannot open my mouth to prove my innocence;
 But the heavens know the falseness
 Of her accusations.

MRS. MA. It is perfectly evident that you poisoned our husband. The heavens themselves were witness to your crime.

HAI-T'ANG. I attest my innocence
 Before all space.
 Though truth be hid from mortal sight,
 The gods look down on all
 The whole day through
 And nothing can escape their eyes.

MRS. MA. Vile creature! . . . Here is the entrance to the Courthouse of Kai Fang-fu. Should you dare to falsify before the judge, you will be forced to undergo, one after another, all of the many tortures. It were far better to acknowledge your misdeed. And now, consider well: will you renounce your claim, or undergo the hideous suffering?

HAI-T'ANG. Though they beat me to a pulp, I shall never do as you demand.
 All I ask is that you unbind me and right willingly will I go with you before the judge.

You say that I shall suffer
 In the hands of the Honorable Judge;
 That one by one I shall be subjected
 To all the tortures.
 But to convict me,
 He must find a motive for the deed.
 So kind, so good, so deeply loved,
 How could I have murdered my husband?
 Having persevered most diligently in wisdom,
 Having spent my years
 In contemplating the shadows
 Of the Six Virtues,
 Why should I fear this ordeal
 Or the threatened tortures? Alas!
 Despite my innocence,
 I have fallen into the most odious of traps.

MRS. MA [taking firmer grip on HAI-T'ANG; crying loudly]. Justice! . . . Justice!

SU-SHUN. I would see the person who cries outside the door. Officers, go quickly and bring her before me.

AN OFFICER. She is here.

[Enter MRS. MA, followed by HAI-T'ANG and her son. Perceiving the judge, they sink to their knees.]

SU-SHUN. Who is the plaintiff?

MRS. MA. It is your unworthy servant.

SU-SHUN. In that case, let the plaintiff kneel on that side and the defendant kneel on the opposite side.

[They kneel in places indicated.]

SU-SHUN. I now order that the plaintiff lay before me the reasons for her accusation. Speak: you can count on me for justice.

MRS. MA. Your unworthy servant was the First Wife and now the widow of the illustrious Ma Chun-shing, with title of Yuan-wei.

SU-SHUN [rising from his chair]. In that case, Madam, you may stand up.

AN OFFICER. Your Excellency, this woman is a suppliant. How can she supplicate standing up?

SU-SHUN. She came here to inform us that she was the wife and now the widow of Ma Chun-shing, with the title of Yuanwei.

AN OFFICER. The title of Yuan-wei, being honorary, means nothing. It is given to all men who possess fortunes, but carries no rank or public office.

SU-SHUN [reseating himself]. In that case, kneel down again. . . . Now let us have your accusation.

MRS. MA. Her name is Ch'ang Hait'ang. She is the Second Wife of Ma Chun-shing. I accuse her of having a secret paramour and of having, together with him, poisoned her husband. Also of having appropriated my son and of having stolen my property. Deign, honored sir, to render me prompt justice.

SU-SHUN. With what fluency, with what facility this woman speaks. But I confess I have failed to comprehend a word of her complaint. . . . Let some one call quickly the Clerk of the Court.

[CH'AO enters.]

CH'AO. I am Ch'ao, the Clerk of the Court. I was in my office copying judicial documents when His Excellency had me summoned. Undoubtedly that means he is occupied in conducting a trial and, confronted with some difficulty, has need of me to throw light upon it.

[Perceiving SU-SHUN.]

Sir, what is perplexing you and retarding your decision?

SU-SHUN. Honorable Clerk, here is a person presenting an accusation.

CH'AO. Let me interrogate her. Ho woman! against whom are you making your complaint?

MRS. MA. I accuse Hai-t'ang there of having poisoned her husband, of having appropriated my son, and of having stolen my property. Have pity on me and deign to render me justice.

CH'AO. So! they have brought before me Hai-t'ang. . . . Why have you poisoned your husband? Come, out with the truth. If you do not confess, you must take the consequences. Officers, were it my choice it would be the biggest stick for her.

HAI-T'ANG. Prostrate upon her knees, Your servant entreats you To uncover the origin Of her misfortunes.

CH'AO. Speak plainly! Defend yourself.

HAI-T'ANG. The guards surround me Like so many wolves; The six officials are ranged against me Like a troop of malignant spirits.

CH'AO. You have poisoned your husband. That is one of the six crimes which are punishable by death.

HAI-T'ANG. If the burden of guilt Rests upon me By so much as the weight Of a grain of rice, I hope to expire Amid the cruelest of tortures.

CH'AO. What was your origin? What kind of people were your parents? By what means were you enabled to marry the honorable lord Ma? Go on, speak—I am listening.

HAI-T'ANG. I am of an ancient and distinguished family. But having lost, little by little, Our fortune, My August Mother and I Were finally without resources. Would you have dreamed that your servant

Had then lived by her beauty? Happily I had the good fortune To please my lord Ma, Who made rich wedding presents To my Honorable Mother, And married me—as Second Wife.

CH'AO. Ah! ah! you began as a Sing-song girl, a Flower of the Weeping Willow. That profession does not speak much in your favor. Well, when the lord Ma took you into his establishment, what did you give him—a boy or a girl?

HAI-T'ANG. I gave him both A boy and a girl,* And shall spare no pains In bringing them up.

CH'AO. There was a man who called upon you at your house?

HAI-T'ANG. My brother, pressed by hunger, clad in rags, Came to ask me for aid. I spoke with him upon the step, Then returned into the house, Having given him nothing. We were both observed by Mrs. Ma.

CH'AO. If it was your brother, there was no harm in her seeing you together.

HAI-T'ANG. Mrs. Ma said to me: Hai-t'ang, since your brother is in need of assistance and you have no silver, why not give him the robes and the head ornaments you have on? He can then sell them and procure what he needs.

CH'AO. What you tell of her proves her benevolence.

* Note: The above is the only reference to the girl-child, throughout the play.

HAI-T'ANG. Obeying her counsel, I took off my robes and head ornaments, and she gave them to my brother. But when the lord Ma returned, he wanted to know why I was no longer wearing them and declared I must have given them to a lover.

Who would have thought that this woman,
Professing charity,
Would be double-faced,
Double-tongued—
And would turn my husband
Against me?

MRS. MA. Such falsehood! In the town of Ch'ing-ch'iu I pass for a model of wisdom and virtue. How dare you say I have two tongues and two faces?

CH'AO. That is a trifle and is not a part of the evidence. . . . I am asking you why you poisoned your husband, why you appropriated the son of this woman and why you stole her property? Come, answer these accusations and confess to all the crimes of which you are guilty.

HAI-T'ANG. In a fit of anger
My husband fell to the ground;
Lacking power to move,
He remained there.
But when he had recovered his senses,
Mrs. Ma helped me to lift him up.

Then she said to me: Hai-t'ang, the lord Ma desires some broth. Go quickly and heat a cupful for him.

When I brought the cup
Of hot broth,
She tasted it and said
There was not enough salt.

She profited by the moment I was gone in search of the salt.

Who would have thought
That she would furtively
Pour poison
Into the cup?

My lord Ma then took the broth, but the moment he tasted of it he expired.

Honored Sir, examine well the facts and weigh them carefully.

The servants then burned
The body
And disposed of the ashes
In a desert-place beyond the town.

CH'AO. I see clearly that you administered the poison. But why did you appropriate this woman's son and steal her property? What answers have you to these indictments?

HAI-T'ANG. It is I who am the true mother of the child. Honored Sir, if you will but call before you Mrs. Liu Ssu-shin and Mrs. Wei-Wu, who assisted at his birth, and the people of the quarter where I lived, their testimony will verify my claim.

CH'AO. Your demand is a reasonable one. Officers, fetch the two women and some of the people of the quarter.

[SU-SHUN makes a gesture. AN OFFICER
[goes out.]

OFFICER [calling outside]. Ho ye! men and respectable ladies of the quarter, you are called before the tribunal.

[Enter MRS. LIU SSU-SHIN, MRS. WEI-WU and NEIGHBORS.]

A MAN. The proverb is right: When one has received silver from another, one is disposed to help him out of his troubles. . . . To-day the First Wife of the August Lord Ma has brought an accusation before the Court. We are desired to depose in her favor. The fact is that the First Wife is not the mother of the child. But, graced with the silver with which she gratified us, we shall affirm that it was she who gave him birth. Have no misgivings, you others; do not be troubled in mind.

TWO NEIGHBORS. We know what we have to testify. [They follow the OFFICER and fall upon their knees.] We are here.

CH'AO. It is true that you are inhabitants of the quarter wherein these two wives of Ma Chun-shing reside? . . . Well then, who is the mother of the child?

A NEIGHBOR. The lord Ma was a rich personage and our obscurity prevented close association with him. But when five years ago his wife gave him a son, he distributed to each of the inhabitants of the quarter a piece of silver, in order that we might share in his joy. After one moon, the lord Ma invited us to come and drink and regale ourselves with him. We saw the beautiful child in whose honor the feast was given. In the years following, on each birthday of his son, the Yuan-wei and his Lady took him themselves to all the pagodas and burned perfumes in honor of Fu. All of the other people of the quarter saw them, the same as we did, and could testify to it.

CH'AO. After these depositions it is quite evident that Mrs. Ma is the mother of the child.

HAI-T'ANG. Excellency, these neighbors have been bribed by Mrs. Ma. Their testimony is worth nothing.

THE NEIGHBORS. No, we have not been given so much as a grain of silver. What we are advancing is the purest truth. There is not a false syllable in our depositions.

[To HAI-T'ANG.]
I hope you get a fever-blister on your lip as big as a tea-cup!

HAI-T'ANG. Now I invoke the testimony Of Mrs. Liu Ssu-shin and Mrs. Ch'ang, Who aided in bringing my son Into the world.
During the first moon of his life They came more than ten times To visit me.
Now I am in great trouble, Calumny having pursued me To the very feet of Justice.
It hurts me to see my neighbors Thus perjure themselves And outrage truth and honor.
It is silver That has caused them to persist In their mendacity.

Respected Sir, kindly interrogate these estimable women. No one can be better informed than they.

CH'AO. Who is the mother of the child?

MRS. LIU SSU-SHIN. We midwives attend at least seven or eight cases every day. How then can we recall those which occurred years ago.

CH'AO. The child is not over five years old. Consequently it is not such a very long time since he was born. Make haste now and tell me which of these two women is his mother.

MRS. LIU SSU-SHIN. Wait a bit while I try to draw together the scattered threads of memory. On that day the room in which the mother lay was carefully closed for the most part. The semi-darkness did not permit me to see her features clearly.

CH'AO. It is your turn, Mrs. Wei-Wu. Make your depositions.

MRS. WEI-WU. On that day when I came to deliver the woman, it was the First Wife who was great with child. Thus there is no doubt but that Mrs. Ma is the true mother.

HAI-T'ANG. Is it possible that you both testify so unfairly?

Mrs. Liu, when you came To receive the newly-born,
I spoke to you gently,
You carried me in your arms
From the couch where I lay
To my bed.
And you, Mrs. Wei-Wu,
After you had placed the child
On my breast,
Who lighted for me
The fragrant candles
Before the shrine of Kuang-yün?
You are neither of you
So greatly advanced in age
As to cause impairment
Of your memory.
I ask you how it is
That you could say what you did
With such unbelievable assurance!
Is it possible,
With all this false testimony,
That the judge will be able to distinguish Right from wrong,
Virtue from crime?

The truth is as tangled as water-weeds
In the dark sea of falsehood.

CH'AO. You see how it is. These respectable women both swear that Mrs. Ma is the true mother. Also it is known that you made no objection to her raising the child.

HAI-T'ANG. Respected Sir, the neighbors and these women were bribed with silver by Mrs. Ma. Allow my son to be called as witness. Although he is but five years old, he is endowed with marked intelligence. Will you question him?

MRS. MA [holding the child in her arms]. Say that I am your true mother and that it was I who nursed you.

THE CHILD. There is my own mother.
[To HAI-T'ANG.]

It was you who nursed me.

HAI-T'ANG. Behold another proof of his rare intelligence!

Dear child, dream in the depths
Of thy little heart;
Dream, alas! of the many times
That cruel woman
Bruised thy tender skin
With blows.
Thou dost remember well
That it was she
Whom you call mother,
Who nourished you with her milk
And cradled you
On her breast.
But how could she always Preserve thee from the fury
Of that vixen?

CH'AO. The words of the child count for nothing. It is upon the weight of the testimony of the many that the judge makes his decisions. For the rest, since it is known that you appropriated to yourself the child of the other woman, it is not important to prove that you stole goods from her. Come, admit at once that you poisoned your husband.

HAI-T'ANG. I had nothing whatsoever to do with the poisoning.

CH'AO. Perhaps a good beating will hasten your confession. Ho! Officers, take this hardened wretch and give her a good chastening.

[They beat her until she sinks weakly to the floor.]

MRS. MA. Beat her! Beat her! That's right, that's good. Kill her with blows, it's all the same to me, [HAI-T'ANG faints.]

CH'AO. She is shamming death. Officers, lift her up. [They do so.]

HAI-T'ANG [regaining her senses].
When the blows hailed their fire upon my shoulders,

Hissing like the wind,
A mortal agony shook my spirit;
My trembling soul was nigh unto escape.
The pitiless ones!
They will tear out my hair. . . .

AN OFFICER. Come on now, confess. It is better than to undergo torture.

HAI-T'ANG. Confusion is ringing in my ears.

Alas! this perverse clerk
Accords grace to the culprit
And betrays innocence
Into the hands of his ferocious minions.

CH'AO. Confess who was your paramour.
SU-SHUN. If she continues her obstinacy, I will talk to her myself and then she will admit everything.

HAI-T'ANG. With violence the magistrate would force me
To confess to an imaginary lover
Who does not exist.
Thrice have I tried to escape
By the door in the wall,
But in vain.

What reward will you have
For the blood which streams
From my body?
Alas! did I but possess some silver,
It would be easy to obtain
My deliverance;
But lacking silver as I do,
How can I bring myself to endure
These frightful tortures?

CH'AO. Officers, give her another taste of the rod.

HAI-T'ANG. I come of a good family.
How can I submit to these indignities?

SH-SHUN. Let us waste no more of our valuable time.

[He makes a sign and Two SER-GEANTS put on ghastly, fiendish masks and approach her with knives.]

HAI-T'ANG [groans]. They beat me until I fell unconscious. They cut me with knives and I groaned in my anguish.
The fiends tear at my flesh, and my body is writhing with exquisite pain. Vanquished by suffering, I see myself forced to admit crimes of which I am innocent.

[She comes forward and sinks on her knees before SU-SHUN.]

Honored Sir, your servant recollects that she poisoned her husband, that she abducted the child and stole property. Oh heaven! this injustice is killing me.

CH'AO [apart]. Though it be a thousand times an injustice, what is that to me? And happily the injustice works well for her who would be awarded the boy. . . . Officers, since the woman has admitted her crimes, have her sign her declaration. Then place a large cangue about her neck, after which conduct her to Kai Fang-fu where she will receive her final sentence.

SU-SHUN. Officers, use that brand-new heavy cangue. It weighs nine and a half pounds.

AN OFFICER. You are obeyed. . . .
Vile woman, put your neck in this cangue.

[OFFICERS fasten the wooden yoke about her neck.]

HAI-T'ANG. Oh heaven!
The cruel magistrate ceases not his tyranny.

Without regard for justice,
He records on paper imaginary crimes.
No longer am I to remain here
To invoke, with groaning voice,
The brassy heavens.
The ears of the gods are turned to stone
And the world swarms with infamous accusers.

Ah, where can I find a judge of integrity
Who will recognize my innocence?

CH'AO. Brazen-face! the August Head of this Court is a magistrate of the utmost fairness and incorruptible integrity.
His decisions are ever based upon the law. Nowhere in the world will you find a judge so equitable, so superbly impartial as His Excellency.

HAI-T'ANG [sobbing]. Feeble and dying
as I am,
How can I endure the rigors
Of the dungeon
Where I am to await
The crowning agony?

[She goes out with the guards.]

CH'AO. Behold! the matter is at an end. The witnesses may return tranquilly to their homes. As to the Honorable Plaintiff, I promise to acquaint her with the decision of the Supreme Court as soon as it is reported to me. . . . For me, consider that I have been occupied an entire day in judging. Hunger presses me. It is necessary that I return home for dinner.

[The Neighbors and Witnesses prostrate themselves and then retire. Exit CH'AO.]

SU-SHUN [alone]. The case is at last settled. Though I am a magistrate, I need never exert myself to pass sentence.
When it is a question of whether to flog
some one or to set him at liberty, I leave it to the pleasure of the clerk Ch'ao, even at the risk of having it said that I am a downright rogue.

Now that he has rendered his decision,
I need trouble my head no further.
Whether the accusation be true or false,
Whether the sentence be a cudgeling,
Deportation or exile,
He is at perfect liberty to choose.
I demand but one thing,
Silver.
Always I divide the silver
Into two portions;
One for me
And one for my clever clerk.

[He goes out.]

ACT III

[The scene is a wine-shop and vicinity.]

A WINE-SELLER. I am a seller of wines. My business is situated ten *lis from the town of Ch'ing-ch'iu. The merchants and the travelers on their way north and south never fail to stop at my place for refreshment. I go now to open the door of my shop and to heat this kettle of wine over my brazier. Soon some customers will appear and I must be ready for them.

[He goes out.]

[Enter HAI-T'ANG, led in by two guards, T'ANG-SHAO, and HSEIH-PA. She falls down, rises again and seats herself.]

T'ANG-SHAO. I am a guard employed by the Court of Ch'ing-ch'iu. My name is T'ang-shao. This is my companion, Hsieh-pa. We are conducting the woman named Ch'ang Hai-t'ang to the Supreme Court of Kai Fang-fu, where she will receive her final sentence. . . . Ho, woman, hurry a bit! Don't you hear the roar of the wind? Can't you see the whirling eddies of snow? I suppose you are hungry. Well, take this food. We go to purchase a cup of wine. As soon as you have eaten you will have to go on. [She falls weakly.] Hey! None of that! [Strikes her.]

HAI-T'ANG [rising]. I pray you, my friend, not to strike me. I am unjustly condemned and have not long to live. I ask but one thing: that you pity my condition.

T'ANG-SHAO. Woman, why did you poison your husband? Why did you abduct the son of the First Wife? Why did you steal from her? Come, tell me quietly and I will listen.

HAI-T'ANG. How shall I clear myself of the crimes they impute to me! To whom can I recount the injustice that has been done me? How shall I denounce that woman who, after robbing me of my child, accused me of having poisoned my husband? Where shall I find a disinterested judge, one of integrity?

HSEIH-PA. If you give something to me and my comrade no one will bother you further. You'll have no need to concern yourself with the iniquity of judges.

HAI-T'ANG. Every friend of justice should pity me. Covered with blood from the wounds of the torture, a prey to unheard-of miseries, how can I suppress the sighs that issue from me and the cries that rend the air? How can I eat anything? Alas, my clothing is in tatters, the iron padlock of my chains, this heavy cangue, I bow beneath their weight. Hard and cruel as you are, what do you care that I am the victim of a foul plot?

T'ANG-SHAO. Whoever is responsible for your situation, it is not right for you to accuse us. We are not responsible for your train of misfortunes. What would you have us do? But hasten your steps. The snow is coming down with new force. Come along!

HAI-T'ANG. The goddess of the snow is without pity.

The snow is blinding my tear-swollen eyes. The wind pushes me back with its powerful arms,

Howling like a wild thing

In the trees of the forest.

Alas! I am desolate

And am suffering cruel anguish.

Though strength has abandoned me,

Yet must I go on.

My clothing is in tatters

And my knees are bared to the elements.

The wounds from the torture are bleeding anew.

HSEIH-PA. We are having a hard enough time ourselves, and she will not go on. [Strikes her.]

HAI-T'ANG. Why are you vexed at the sight of my condition?

I am walking as fast as I can.

If you continue to hit me,

I shall die under the blows.

T'ANG-SHAO. I should be inclined to liberate you, if you had not confessed to the murder. What impelled you to do so?

HAI-T'ANG. My friend, do not weary me with importunate questions. I wish only that you would listen.

* 10 lis equal about 2.7 miles.

When the merciless judge employed against me

All the severity of the law,
I went through the torments of the Seven Hells.

Vanquished by suffering,
My endurance at an end,
I surrendered at last to their wishes
And signed my declaration.
There was no one to intercede for me.
Victim alas, of a false accusation,
I was yet put through every degree of torture.

T'ANG-SHAO. Rise, woman!

[Meaningly.]

After we have rounded the next hill, I can promise you the pleasure of a very long rest.

HAI-T'ANG. Would I had turned that hill.

Alack! numbed by the cold,
Weakened by suffering,
I cannot so much as stand.

[Takes a few steps and falls.]

When I lifted my feet
I felt as if all the Shui-mang devils
Were penetrating my flesh.

T'ANG-SHAO [angrily]. Get up!

HAI-T'ANG. Aie! your temper
Is as impetuous as a flame.
See, my friend,
The ground is hard-frozen and glassy.
How can I keep myself
From slipping?

HSIEH-PA. A thousand people, yet ten thousand have passed this way without falling. Wait while I precede you. If I keep my balance, I shall not fail to bruise your legs with my stick.

[He walks on the ice and falls down.]

As a matter 'of fact, the road is a bit slippery.

[CH'ANG-LIN enters.]

CH'ANG-LIN. I am called Ch'ang-Lin. I am the First Clerk of the Court of Kai Fang-fu. This morning the governor, Pao-ch'ing, sent me on a military commission to the frontier of Si-yen. On my return
I was surprised by this blinding snowstorm. Oh heaven, if only it would cease for an instant!

HAI-T'ANG [perceiving him]. That man over there resembles my brother, Ch'ang-Lin.

I have observed his features,
Surely it must be my brother.
But my eyes, swollen with over-weeping
And blinded by the sleet,
May be deceiving me.

Let me look again. . . .

Aie! I am not mistaken;

It is he and none other.

I straighten with an effort my trembling
shoulders;

I hold with my hands my fluttering
bosom. . . .

Alas! How can I catch up with him,
Impeded by this iron chain and heavy cangue?

CH'ANG-LIN [to the guards]. Where are you taking that woman with the iron chain and the heavy cangue?

HAI-T'ANG. My brother!

O my Honorable Brother!
Stop and deliver your sister.

My brother!

Hi-yah! you appear in my sight
As a living image of Kuang-yün the Merciful,

Come down from the Mountain of Lo-chiashan

To preserve me.

Why do you wait to manifest

The goodness and compassion that you feel?

O Honorable Brother, deliver me, your sister.

CH'ANG-LIN. Who are you?

HAI-T'ANG. I am your sister Hai-t'ang, and sorrow is eating my heart.

[She approaches him.]

CH'ANG-LIN [repulses and strikes her].
Vile prostitute! Do you recall how you helped me on that day I implored you for assistance? [Turns away.]

HAI-T'ANG [weeping and running toward him]. I ask why you speak thus
to me!

Yet I am aware that it is difficult
To suppress a fire
That has long burned secretly.
The sight of me has revived
An old enmity.
It is seeing me
That has revived his burning wrath.

[Brokenly.]

My brother!

[CH'ANG-LIN continues on his way.]

He does not deign to recognize me.
As I am in fear of my life,
I shall run after him
And catch him by his garments.

[Dragging her chain, she runs after him and clutches him. T'ANG-SHAO follows.]

CH'ANG-LIN. Vile prostitute! Let go of me! Let go of me!

T'ANG-SHAO [seizing her by the hair]. This woman is molesting passers-by and wearying them with her importunities.

HAIT'ANG. Swifter than I,
He has seized me by the hair.

I supplicate you, cruel man, to give me an instant's respite. And thou, my brother, I pray you to listen to the true story of my misfortunes.

CH'ANG-LIN. Wretch! Could you have foreseen this day you would not have refused me those robes and head ornaments.

HAIT'ANG. She! She! She!
Loves to bring death and destruction
To others.

All of her projects were born of craft
And perfidy.

Thou didst take the robes
And the golden spire
Which ornamented my hair;
And me, me, me!
For having given them,
I am plunged into the abyss
In which you find me.

My brother, the frightful misfortunes which have overwhelmed your sister all sprang from those same robes and head ornaments. At first, believing it would not meet with her approval, I dared not turn them over to you to supply your needs. Could I ever have believed that she would herself have taken them off me and given them to you herself? . . . On the return of the Lord Ma Chun-shing, she told him that, in his absence, I had been entertaining a lover to whom I had given the robes and ornaments. Transported with rage, the Honorable Lord Ma fainted and fell ill. But that is far from all. She gave him a poisoned beverage which swiftly carried him to the Vale of Longevity. Then she dragged thine honorable sister before the judge and condemned me for having poisoned my husband and appropriated her son. O Heaven! Have pity on me! I succumb under the weight of unjust accusations.

CH'ANG-LIN. To whom belonged these robes and head ornaments?

HAIT'ANG. To me! To thy sister.

CH'ANG-LIN. What! They were yours? And to think that that wicked woman assured me the things had come from the trousseau given her by her parents. I was wrong to have so misjudged you. . . . We are before the entrance to an inn. Come inside with me and we will together have some cups of warm reviving wine.

[He leads her to the wine-shop, the two guards following.]

Hey waiter! Fetch us some wine.

THE WINE-SELLER. Right here! Right here! Come in and find seats.

CH'ANG-LIN [to the guards]. Officers of the police, I am the chief clerk of the Court of Kai Fang-fu. My name is Ch'ang-Lin. This woman is my sister. I was sent on a mission by the illustrious governor Pao, from which I am now returning. I pledge myself to look after her and to relieve you of responsibility.

T'ANG-SHAO. My friend, you have no need to give us that assurance. All we ask is that as soon as you arrive in the city, you despatch to us the official answer we are to bring back.

CH'ANG-LIN. That is easy. . . . And now, my sister, I said a while back that that woman was a model of wisdom and prudence. But now that I have learned of the cruelty of her nature, I am wondering how you can escape from the net she has thrown around you.

HAI-T'ANG. That woman, whose visage is bright

With artificial splendor,
Appeared to you to be prudent and wise.
When my husband questioned her, she used against me

All the venom of her long serpent's tongue,
Heaping falsehood upon falsehood.

Later she declared I had poisoned my husband,

Stolen her property and appropriated her child.

On top of that she dragged me
To the Court of Ch'ing-ch'iu
And stood by indifferently
While they put me through the tortures.
Oy-ah! despite my innocence
I am bruised by blows, bleeding from wounds

And doomed to fall under the glittering blade

Of the executioner,
To whom shall I impute the death that menaces me,

If not to that inhuman monster?

My brother, let us rest here a moment in this secluded corner.

[Enter CH'AO, followed by MRS. MA.]

CH'AO. I am Ch'ao the clerk. I come in search of Ch'ang Hai-t'ang. I am quite sure that she has not a near relative who would interest himself in her affairs and demand a reversal of the judgment given at the Court of Ch'ing-ch'iu. However, to be on the safe side, I felt it advisable to have her killed along the way. I chose two guards who do not spare the stick. These are T'ang-shao and Hsieh-pa. According to my instructions, it was not necessary to wait until they had gone any great distance. They were to stop at the first deserted place they came to and there despatch her. But as they had not returned to render an account of their commission, I began to have misgivings. It is necessary that Mrs. Ma and I make this journey in order to clear up our doubts.

MRS. MA. In making my way through this blinding snowstorm I am numbed by the cold. Let us go into this inn where we may obtain some warm wine before continuing our journey.

CH'AO. Madam, that is an excellent suggestion. [They enter the inn. HAI-T'ANG perceives them.]

HAI-T'ANG. What a fortunate encounter. She herself has happened in here with the companion of her debauches. Let us inform my brother.

This woman is cruel and brazen.
Since providentially they are both present,
Here is my opportunity
To arrest the course
Of their iniquity.
But by what means?

My brother, this debauched woman is here in this very inn, accompanied by her accomplice. Let us seize and hold her.

CH'ANG-LIN [to the guards]. My friends, arrest that adúlteress and her paramour.

HAI-T'ANG. Make haste to seize them swiftly,
Lest they become frightened and make their escape.

Now we shall see which of us is innocent
And which shall receive the penalty for crime. [To CH'ANG-LIN.]

Let us not wait for the guards,
But go and capture them ourselves.

[CH'ANG-LIN and HAI-T'ANG go to lay hold of them, but the two guards make signs to them to flee. HAI-T'ANG grabs at MRS. MA, who disengages her hands and escapes with CH'AO.]

HAI-T'ANG. I seized her clothing
And through the fault of these men
She fled under my hands.
Above all it distresses me
That when we so nearly had them,
The guards gave them warning

And caused the flight
Of those illicit lovers.

CH'ANG-LIN [to T'ANG-SHAO]. Imbecile that you are! The sign that you and your comrade made, warned them and gave them a chance to escape. Are you aware that I am the Chief Clerk at the Court of Kai Fang-fu, and that, if I chastise you, I need fear no consequences?

[Strikes T'ANG-SHAO.]

T'ANG-SHAO. Since your rank is higher than that of the master I serve, you have the right to strike me. But I, in turn, have the right to strike my prisoner. Therefore, for every blow I receive from your stick, she shall receive one from mine.

[Strikes HAI-T'ANG.]

HAI-T'ANG. These men conduct me
By order of the magistrate.
Of what use to strike them
When they pass along each blow?

[CH'ANG-LIN seizes T'ANG-SHAO
by the hair, and T'ANG-SHAO promptly seizes HAI-T'ANG in the same manner.]

HAI-T'ANG. He grasps tightly his poor prisoner.

Without pity for my sufferings
He overwhelms me with blows.
He bruises, he kills me . . . !

THE WINE-SELLER [laying hold of them]. Here!—pay me for the wine you have drunk and get out.

HSIEH-PA. Take this for payment!
[He sends him up upside down with a kick, and goes out with the others.]

THE WINE-SELLER. See how unfortunate I am. I wasted a good part of the day on my doorstep, waiting for customers. At length came three or four persons asking for wine. I served them and got a shower of blows in exchange. As for money, I have received not so much as a piece of brass. I have decided to close my shop and, from this day on, to go into some more remunerative business. This trade is far from a flourishing one. Every day the folk to whom I sell wine, make me lose instead of gaining. I shall draw the bolts and close my shop. I had better go into the business of selling water-fowl, which pays in cash instead of in kicks.

[He goes out.]

END OF ACT III

ACT IV

[The scene is in the Court of KAI
FANG-FU.]

[The governor, PAO-CH'ING, enters, followed by the FIRST OFFICER of the COURT and several guards.]

FIRST OFFICER [imperiously]. Order in the Court! Attendants, bring the writing-desk of His Excellency the Governor.

PAO-CH'ING. I preside over this Court
By decree of the Emperor,
The Son of Heaven.

[With a reverential bow.]

I hold at the same time,
The imperial Golden Token
And the Sword, symbol of power.

My family name is Pao, my surname Ch'ing and my honorary name is Hi-wen. I am a native of the village of Lao-eul in the district of Ssu-hiang, a principality of Chin-tiu in the province of Liu-ch'iu. All the public functionaries are aware of the unshakability of my moral fibre and my inflexibility in upholding the mandates of the law. They now consecrate themselves with zeal to the service of the State and fear to permit themselves to be swayed by self-interest and cupidity. They choose as their officers only those men who are renowned for their probity and their filial piety, and spurn the company of slanderers and flatterers. The Emperor has bestowed many honors upon me. I have lately received the title of Member of the Cabinet of Antiquaries, whose duty it is to preserve the ancient chronicles of the archives. In conferring upon me the dignity of Governor, the Son of Heaven [He bows low.] bestowed on me the Golden Token, and the Sword, the symbol of power. He charged me not only to scrutinize the conduct of magistrates and employees unfaithful to their duties, but also to avenge the wrongs of the people and render justice to the oppressed. He permits me to order the decapitation of the guilty and to see that their sentence is carried out. Thus my name alone suffices to arrest the arms of those inclined to abuse their authority. Even my shadow is enough to petrify with fear the cruel and the debauched. Past the balustrade of knotted ropes and near to the walls of this enclosure, I have caused a prison to be built. In it rest those functionaries who have imposed upon their public office and those who have failed in their duty. On the stone tablet which flanks the entrance I have had engraved the words IU-TCHI, meaning By Order of the Emperor, so that all may see it and be filled with awe. At the foot of the Blue Staircase which leads to this, my courtroom, I have placed a sign which reads TI-CHING, or Speak Softly. Under the acacias, which cast their weaving shadows upon the stone flagging of the pathway, I have displayed twenty-four cangues of the largest size, and before the doors to this hall where I deliver my judgments and pass sentences, there are stacked many hundreds of clubs, all studded with the fangs of wolves. At the very entrance stands a bamboo cage containing the head of a robber, "for the punishment must match the deed and frighten evil-doers."

Through all the days there comes no dust
To soil the mind of the governor.
The acacias alone cast shade
Upon the path whereon he walks.
In passing him,
The men of evil still their tongues,
And birds of prey
Suspend their raucous cries.

I saw yesterday a report sent me by the governor of Ch'ing-ch'iu. It states that a Second Wife, named Ch'ang Hai-t'ang, has poisoned her husband in order to satisfy an illicit passion. Also, that she abducted by force a child belonging to the First Wife and likewise stole goods from her. Such crimes are numbered among those punishable by immediate death, without waiting for the more formal regular Autumnal executions. In my opinion, one frequently finds women sufficiently depraved to murder their husbands. But what good did it do this one to abduct the child of the First Wife? I fear this affair may be the result of a calumnious imputation. Therefore I have secretly given orders to arrest and bring before me the accuser and her witnesses. Their presence is necessary if I am to pass correct judgment. This procedure proves my justice and impartiality. . . . Officer, bring me the tablet of cases submitted to me for final judgment. After which, bring before me the plaintiffs in the order of their arrival, that I may condemn the guilty and redeem the innocent.

[The scene changes for a moment to the road outside the courthouse. Enter HAI-T'ANG with GUARDS and CH'ANG-LIN.]

CH'ANG-LIN. Honorable Sister, when you are brought before the magistrate, he will not fail to interrogate you. He must be informed of the injustice of which you are a victim. This supreme judge will examine anew the evidence and end by annulling your sentence. If you do not wish to make your own explanations, keep silent and I will undertake to speak in your place.

HAI-T'ANG. How can I denounce this infamous calumny if I fail to make the most of this day's opportunity?

CH'ANG-LIN. It behooves us to present our case promptly. Let us hurry.

HAI-T'ANG. Who knows the injustice that weighs
So heavily upon my heart?
Alas! what can I do but groan;
Let flow these rivulets of tears?
Not having foreseen in the beginning
The misfortunes which have come upon me,
I am eating the bitter fruits
Of useless regret.

These cruel men drag me hither and thither
And allow me no repose.

CH'ANG-LIN. My sister, we have arrived before the entrance of the Court of Kai Fang-fu. Allow me to precede you, as you will enter in the custody of the police. Take courage. The judge is like a shining mirror which reflects in its crystal purity all the objects placed before it. The moment a matter is brought to his attention he sees it as clearly as if he were familiar with all the details. Make an effort to regain your poise and explain your situation to him in your own words.

HAI-T'ANG. Thou sayest the judge,
Like a mirror of finest glass,
Placed in the highest position
In the tribunal of the South,
Reflects all that is below
With crystalline purity.
Then what am I to fear?
But alas! weighed down by this cangue
and iron chain,
I feel that I may lack the strength
To adequately express myself.
If I am unable to send conviction to his
soul,
I ask you, my brother, to aid me in my defense.

[CH'ANG-LIN goes into the courthouse.
HAI-T'ANG follows with the GUARDS.]

[The scene changes back to the courtroom.]

T'ANG-SHAO. We bring before Your Excellency our prisoner, Ch'ang Hai-t'ang.

FIRST OFFICER. Honored Sir, deliver to these guards their official report, that they may return to render an account of their mission.

PAO-CH'ING. Let them remain here. You may furnish them with their report after I have judged the case.

FIRST OFFICER [bowing]. You are obeyed.

PAO-CH'ING. Ch'ang Hai-t'ang, is it true that you poisoned your husband in order to live with a paramour, that you abducted the son of the First Wife and stole her property? Reply to these questions in the sequence in which they were given. Speak, I am listening.

[HAI-T'ANG looks mutely at her brother.]

CH'ANG-LIN. You cannot? Ah well, I shall speak for you. [He kneels.]

Honored Sir, Ch'ang Hai-t'ang has not maintained criminal relations with a lover, she has not poisoned her husband, she did not abduct the child, she has not stolen property. It is the First Wife herself who maintained guilty relations with a clerk named Ch'ao. When she accused my sister before the judge, it was that same Ch'ao who influenced the decision against her. I adjure you, Honored Sir, that if she admitted the crimes with which she was charged, it was under the intolerable anguish of torture.

PAO-CH'ING. How droll you are! Who requested you to answer for her? Officer, take this man and give him twenty blows with a stick. [OFFICER grabs CH'ANG-LIN and begins beating him.]

CH'ANG-LIN [prostrating himself]. This woman is my Honorable Sister. She has never come into the presence of a magistrate so imposing as Your Excellency, and is therefore bashful and timid. She has not the forcefulness necessary to make the truth known to you. That is why I presumed to talk for her.

PAO-CH'ING. If you are indeed her brother, I shall permit you to answer in her stead. But if you are not he, I shall slice your head with this large knife. . . . Come, woman, speak with all the sincerity and exactitude of which you are capable. You may count on my fairness.

HAI-T'ANG [clapping her hands]. Honored Sir!

Trembling, distracted,
I kneel at your imposing feet.
Your Excellency has bidden me unfold
The circumstances
Which have led to my present situation.
How alas! can I endure the fury
Of the merciless guards
Who press and harass me

Like tigers and devouring wolves?
Will you, Honored Sir,
Listen attentively while I detail to you
The facts appertaining to my case?

PAO-CH'ING. Very well, Ch'ang Hai-t'ang. Who were you as a girl? What was your estate when you were married to Ma Chun-shing in the rank of Second Wife?

HAI-T'ANG. I was a Flower of the Weeping Willow Tree. I entertained one man after another and my occupation was singing and dancing.

PAO-CH'ING. Ah! ah! you were a singing girl! And this Ma Chun-shing, he treated you well?

HAI-T'ANG. We lived as two doves
Most tenderly united.

PAO-CH'ING. Is it true that Ch'ang-Lin is your brother?

CH'ANG-LIN. Ch'ang Hai-t'ang is the sister of your unworthy servant.

HAI-T'ANG. It came to pass, one day,
That my brother,
Raggedly clad and dilapidated in fortune,
Came to seek my aid.

PAO-CH'ING. And you helped him?

HAI-T'ANG. Yes, Honored Sir,
I gave him some robes
And head-ornaments.

CH'ANG-LIN. The money with which I purchased new clothing was obtained from the sale of part of these effects.

PAO-CH'ING [to HAI-T'ANG]. Your husband did not inquire what had become of the robes and ornaments?

HAI-T'ANG. He did indeed. But this woman, who had herself advised me to give the things to my brother, accused me before the lord Ma of having secretly given them to a lover. Was not that enough to make him expire with wrath?

Transported with ire,
My husband
Addressed violent reproaches to me
And fell ill.

PAO-CH'ING. Since it was that which killed your husband, why the accusation that you had poisoned him?

HAI-T'ANG. Dragged, despite my innocence,
Before the tribunal,
I was subjected
To all of the tortures.

PAO-CH'ING. Your husband being dead, what was your idea in abducting the child?

HAI-T'ANG. Death having taken my spouse,
That woman would now separate me
From my son.

PAO-CH'ING. They say she is the mother of the child.

HAI-T'ANG. Driven by natural perversity and the basest jealousy. . . .

PAO-CH'ING. The neighbors affirmed that she was the mother.

HAI-T'ANG. She bought the testimony
Of the witnesses,
Both men and women,
With silver,
And involved them in her scheme.

PAO-CH'ING. Can it be that the magistrate did not verify their depositions?

HAI-T'ANG. Not every magistrate
Takes the pains
To sift out the truth
From falsehood,
Crime from innocence.

PAO-CH'ING. Is it possible that the magistrate of Ch'ing-ch'iu could compel you to undergo the severities of the torture?

HAI-T'ANG. How could I resist?
What chance had I against a magistrate
Who tortures the accused Without investigating
On which side is the crime
Or which the innocence!
And that is not all.
I found in that same tribunal
A most implacable enemy
Who seconded the cruel officers
And I was left before them
Without defense and without support.

Oy-ah!

I heard a sudden scream like a burst of thunder.

A shower of blows rained on my back and bared it.

On the one side,

They afflicted me with wounds
Which caused intolerable distress.

On the other side, the witnesses,

Bought with silver,

Received no chastisement whatsoever.

My teeth chattering,

My movements stiff with agony,

My bones breaking under the blows

Of my tormentors,

Their sinewy arms rest not until I fall

Unconscious and motionless.

AN OFFICER [heard outside]. People of Ch'ing-ch'iu, you who are about to be judged, assemble in the court.

PAO-CH'ING. Have them come in.

[MRS. MA, with the young child SHIU-LANG, the NEIGHBORS and the TWO MID-WIVES enter and fall on their knees.]

OFFICER [to PAO-CH'ING]. They are before you.

PAO-CH'ING [to MRS. MA]. Woman, who is the mother of that child?

MRS. MA. It is I who am the mother.

PAO-CH'ING. And you, neighbors, tell me who is the mother of that child.

ALL [together]. We swear that the First Wife is his mother.

PAO-CH'ING. Very good. . . Ch'ang-Lin, there is some one yet to come. [He makes a gesture and CH'ANG-LIN goes out.]

PAO-CH'ING. Officer, fetch a piece of chalk. You will trace below the bench a circle, in the center of which you will place the young child. Then you will order the two women to wait, each of them at opposite sides of the circle. When the real mother takes hold of him, it will be easy for the child to come outside the circle. But the pretended mother cannot lead him out.

OFFICER. You are obeyed.

[He traces a circle with the chalk and motions the boy to stand in the center of it. MRS. MA takes the child's hand and leads him out of the circle. HAI-T'ANG fails to contend with her.]

PAO-CH'ING. It is evident that this woman is not the mother of the child, since she did not come forward to draw him out of the circle. Officer, bring Ch'ang Hai-t'ang hither and beat her.

[The OFFICER does so.]

PAO-CH'ING. Have the two women try once more to lead the child outside the circle.

[Again MRS. MA leads him out, while HAI-T'ANG again fails to contend.]

PAO-CH'ING. I have the proof twice over. I saw that neither time did you make the slightest effort to draw the child outside the circle. Officer, fetch your largest stick and flog her vigorously.

HAI-T'ANG. I supplicate you, Honored Sir, to calm your wrath which frightens me like a roll of thunder. Soften this menacing aspect, which is like that of the wolf or the tiger. . . Very soon after your unworthy servant was married to the August Lord Ma, she presented him with a child. After giving him the great gift of life, I nourished him with milk from my breast and cared for him with maternal love for the period of three years. When he was cold I would gently chafe his jade-like limbs. Delicate and fragile as the first young shoots of the bamboo tree, one could not, without wounding him grievously, take him to opposite sides of the circle. If I cannot, Honored Sir, obtain my son without dislocating his arm or bruising his baby flesh, I would rather perish under the blows than make the least effort to take him out of the circle.

How could a tender mother
Decide otherwise?

Honored Sir, see for yourself.

The child's arms are fragile
As the first tender stalks of the bamboo tree

In the flush of springtide.
How could this cruel and inhuman woman understand my fears?

And you, Honored Sir,
How is it that for all your sagacity,
You have not been able to discover the
truth?

Alack! how different our positions!
She has a reputation and a fortune,
While I am humiliated and an object of scorn.

Yes, if between us
We would tear apart this tender child,
You would not hesitate to see him
Torn limb from limb.
You were ready to break his bones
And you would have seen his flesh torn to shreds.

PAO-CH'ING. Although the articles of the code are often difficult to interpret, it is possible to penetrate the sentiments of the human heart. A sage of old once said:
What man can hide that which he really is, once you have observed his actions, found the motive for his conduct and recognized the intent of his purpose? . . .
Behold the power of the chalk circle! In the depths of her heart, this woman desired to seize the fortune of Ma Chunshing, and with that end in view, took the child to bring up. How could she have doubted that the hidden truth would reveal itself?

For the purpose of gaining the inheritance,
She raised the young child.
But the chalk circle augustly brought out
The truth and the falsity.
She has an engaging exterior,
But her heart is corrupt.
The true mother
Is at last recognized.

I have instructed Ch'ang-Lin to fetch here the adulterous lover, and shall be surprised if he does not appear.

[Enter CH'ANG-LIN, conducting the clerk
CH'AO.]

CH'ANG-LIN [kneeling]. Here, Honored Sir, is the clerk Ch'ao whom I have brought before you.

PAO-CH'ING. So, my friend Ch'ao, you've got yourself into a pretty mess. Come, confess point by point that in order to satisfy an illicit passion, you poisoned Ma Chun-shing. You assisted in the retention of the child in order to profit by his fortune, and bribed these men and women to render false testimony in your interests.

CH'AO. Your servant is employed at the court in the capacity of clerk. All that occurred is to be imputed to the governor of Ch'ing-ch'iu, who is nicknamed Su Molun. When the court is in session I am only an instrument in his hands. I hold the ink-brush and write down the replies of the accused. If there has been a slip or an error in the verbal process, it is not the poor clerk who should be blamed.

PAO-CH'ING. I am not inquiring if there was any verbal slip or error. Tell me only that in order to satisfy an illicit passion you poisoned Ma Chun-shing.

CH'AO [indicating MRS. MA]. Excellency, do you not see that this woman's face is a mask of paint and powder? If one were to remove with water the artificial coloring, one would no doubt find beneath it a most hideous visage. How could she have been able to seduce your servant and entangle him in an illicit love-affair?

MRS. MA. Oy-ay! And in private you used to tell me that I was more beautiful than Kuang-yün! Now you treat me in this insulting fashion. Perfidious as thou art, you are not worthy of being called a
man.

CH'ANG-LIN. Yesterday, when the snow was falling in great flakes, Ch'ao, with Mrs. Ma, took the road in pursuit of the police-guards, in order to come to an understanding with them. Is it not evident that he was her lover? For the rest, Honored Sir, if you will question the two guards, it will then be easy to recognize the truth.

T'ANG-SHAO. This morning we ourselves took them into custody.

PAO-CH'ING. Officer, seize the clerk Ch'ao and let some one beat him vigorously with the biggest stick.

OFFICER. You are obeyed.

[He beats CH'AO.]

HAI-T'ANG. You hoped to dwell forever With Mrs. Ma.

You hoped that I should never Return from whence you sent me.

With what intention

Did you both follow me

On the way here?

Answer me that

The pair of you. [CH'AO assumes death.]

PAO-CH'ING. The rascal is feigning death. Officer, restore him to life with a jug of cold water.

[The OFFICER throws water in his face and CH'AO revives.]

PAO-CH'ING. Come, confess at once.

CH'AO. For a long time your servant has been having an affair with this woman. According to the law I am guilty of nothing more than adultery. My crime is not among those punishable by death. Regarding the poisoning of Ma Chun-shing, I purchased the poison. That part is true enough. But it was not I who conceived the idea. It was this woman who took the poison and put it in her husband's broth. I had nothing whatever to do with the retention of the child. In fact I said to Mrs. Ma, "Since you are not his mother, why not give him up?" She replied that if she could keep the child she would become mistress of the entire fortune left by the lord Ma. I am only a poor employee and I never could have found the money with which to buy the testimony of the neighbors and these old women. She alone bribed them in order that she might, on the way here, get Hai-t'ang into her clutches. Yes, it was she, yes, it was she.

MRS. MA. Coward that you are! Make haste with your confession. Go on! What do you expect me to say? It was I, it was I who did everything. After all, is it such a misfortune to die? After we have lost our honorable lives, shall we not be reunited forever in the other world, like two turtle-doves?

[A gong sounds and all are silent.]

PAO-CH'ING. You who are here present, listen to my final sentence: Su-shun, the governor of Ch'ing-ch'iu, for having transgressed the law, will be despoiled of his bonnet and his sword-belt. He will return to the rank of the people and, to the end of his days, he shall never obtain employment. The Neighbors and the two old Midwives will never more receive bribes for rendering false testimony. Each of them shall be given twenty-four strokes with a stick and then be banished to a place three hundred lis distant. T'ang-shao and Hsieh-pa, in their positions as guards, will never again accept presents. They will be punished with great severity. Each will receive one hundred strokes of the stick, besides being banished to the frontier, in an arid and uninhabitable country. The adulterous woman and her infamous accomplice, for having killed Ma Chun-shing with poison, for having appropriated the young child that they might fraudulently obtain his inheritance, will be dragged to a public place where they will suffer a slow and ignominious death. Each of them will be cut into twenty-four pieces. Everything that they possess will be awarded to Ch'ang Hai-t'ang and her son Shiu-lang, in order that she may continue her tender care of him. As for Ch'ang-Lin, he may now quit his profession and go to live with his honorable sister.

Because the clerk Ch'ao
Would indulge a criminal passion,
Ch'ang Hai-t'ang was calumniated
In a manner most odious,
And unjustly accused.

But with the aid of the chalk circle,
The truth has this day been brought to light.

Those who permitted themselves
To be bribed with money

Will be sent into exile.
 The two principals in the crime
 Will be decapitated in a public place.
 Ch'ang-Lin himself will take the sword
 And execute the sentence.
 And the little boy and his honorable
 mother
 Will henceforth augustly remain reunited.

[CH'ANG-LIN and HAI-T'ANG prostrate themselves before him.]

HAI-T'ANG. Old women! did I hear you swear
 That after the long years
 You found you could not gather up
 The scattered threads of memory?
 Clerk Ch'ao, did you assure me
 That your magistrate

Observed the law?
 Dame Ma! did you say that you occupied
 The place of First Wife
 With prudence and sagacity?
 But in the end
 The Augustly Supreme Judge
 Uncovered the odious plot.
 These men are exiled
 To an arid and uninhabitable land
 And the two chief culprits
 Are publicly to receive their just chastise-ment.
 Honored Sir, this history
 Of the Chalk Circle
 Is worthy of being spread
 Over the four seas
 And over all the kingdoms
 Of the Celestial Empire.

A HUSBAND

HIS WIFE

THEIR SERVANT TARAKUWAZHIYA

SCENE—A room in a private house in Kiyauto.

HUSBAND. I am a resident in the suburbs of the metropolis. On the occasion of a recent journey down East, I was served [at a tea-house] in the post-town of Nogami, in the province of Mino, by a girl called Hana, who, having since then heard of my return to the capital, has followed me up here, and settled down at Kita-Shirakaha, where she expects me this evening according to a promise made by letter. But my vixen of a wife has got scent of the affair, and thus made it difficult for me to go. So what I mean to do is to call her, and tell her some pretty fable that may set me free. Halloo! halloo! are you there, pray? are you there?

WIFE. So it seems you are pleased to call me. What may it be that makes you thus call me?

HUSBAND. Well, please to come in.

WIFE. Your commands are obeyed.

HUSBAND. My reason for calling you is just simply this: I want to tell you how much my spirits have been affected lately by continual dreams that I have had. That is why I have called you.

WIFE. You are talking rubbish. Dreams proceed from organic disturbance, and do not come true; so pray don't trouble your head about them.

HUSBAND. What you say is quite correct. Dreams, proceeding as they do from organic disturbance, do not come true nine times out of ten. Still, mine have affected my spirits to such an extent, that I think of making some pilgrimage or other to offer up prayers both on your behalf and on my own.

WIFE. Then where shall you go?

HUSBAND. I mean (to say nothing of those in the metropolis and in the suburbs) to worship at every Shiñtau shrine and every Buddhist temple [throughout the land].

WIFE. No, no! I won't allow you to go out of the house for a single hour. If you are so completely bent upon it, choose some devotion that can be performed at home.

HUSBAND. Some devotion to be performed at home? What devotion could it be?

WIFE. Burning incense on your arm or on your head.

HUSBAND. How thoughtlessly you do talk! What! is a devotion like that to suit me—a layman if ever there was one?

WIFE. I won't tolerate any devotion that cannot be performed at home.

HUSBAND. Well, I never! You are one for talking at random. Hang it! what devotion shall it be? [He reflects a few moments.] Ah! I have it! I will perform the devotion of abstraction.

WIFE. Abstraction? What is that?

HUSBAND. Your want of familiarity [with the term] is but natural. It is a devotion that was practised in days of old by Saint Daruma: (blessings on him!) you put your head under what is called the "abstraction blanket," and obtain salvation by forgetting all things past and to come—a most difficult form of devotion.

WIFE. About how long does it take?

HUSBAND. Well, I should say about a week or two.

WIFE. That won't do either, if it is to last so many days.

HUSBAND. Then for how long would my own darling consent to it without complaining?

WIFE. About one hour is what I should suggest; but, however, if you can do it in a day, you are welcome to try.

HUSBAND. Never, never! This important devotion is not a thing to be so easily performed within the limits of a single day. Please, won't you grant me leave for at least a day and a night?

WIFE. A day and a night?

HUSBAND. Yes.

WIFE. I don't much relish the idea; but if you are so completely bent upon it, take a day and a night for your devotion.

HUSBAND. Really and truly?

WIFE. Yes, really and truly.

HUSBAND. Oh! that is indeed too delightful! But I have something to tell you: know then that if a woman so much as peep through a chink, to say nothing of her coming into the actual room where the devotee is sitting, the spell of the devotion is instantly broken. So be sure not to come to where I am.

WIFE. All right. I will not come to you. So perform away.

HUSBAND. Well, then, we will meet again after it shall have been happily accomplished.

WIFE. I shall have the pleasure of seeing you when it is over.

HUSBAND. } Good-by! good-by!
WIFE. }

[She moves away.]

HUSBAND. I say!

WIFE. What is it?

HUSBAND. As I mentioned before, mind you don't come to me. We have the Buddhist's warning words: "When there is a row in the kitchen, to be rapt in abstraction is an impossibility." So, whatever you do, do not come to me.

WIFE. Please feel no uneasiness. I shall not think of intruding.

HUSBAND. Well, then, we shall meet again when the devotion is over.

WIFE. When it is done, I shall have the pleasure of seeing you.

HUSBAND. } Good-by! good-by!
WIFE. }

HUSBAND [laughing]. What fools women are, to be sure! To think of the delight of her taking it all for truth, when I tell her that I am going to perform the religious devotion of abstraction for one whole day and night! Taraukuwazhiya, are you there? halloo?

SERVANT. Yes, sir!

HUSBAND. Are you there?

SERVANT. At your service.

HUSBAND. Oh! you have been quick in coming.

SERVANT. You seem, master, to be in good spirits.

HUSBAND. For my good spirits there is a good reason. I had made, as you know, an engagement to go and visit Hana this evening. But as my old woman has got scent of the affair, thus making it difficult for me to go, I have told her that I mean to perform the religious devotion of abstraction for a whole day and night—a good device, is it not? for carrying out my plan of going to see Hana!

SERVANT. A very good device indeed, sir.

HUSBAND. But in connection with it, I want to ask you to do me a good turn. Will you?

SERVANT. Pray, what may it be?

HUSBAND. Why, just simply this: it is that I have told my old woman not to intrude on my devotions; but, being the vixen that she is, who knows but what she may not peep and look in? in which case she would make a fine noise if there were no semblance [of a religious practice to be seen]; and so, though it is giving you a great deal of trouble, I wish you would oblige me by taking my place until my return.

SERVANT. Oh! it would be no trouble; but I shall get such a scolding if found out, that I would rather ask you to excuse me.

HUSBAND. What nonsense you talk! Do oblige me by taking my place; for I will not allow her to scold you.

SERVANT. Oh, sir! that is all very well; but pray excuse me for this time.

HUSBAND. No, no! you must please do this for me; for I will not so much as let her point a finger at you.

SERVANT. Please, please let me off!

HUSBAND. Gracious goodness! The fellow heeds what my wife says, and won't heed what I say myself! Do you mean that you have made up your mind to brave me?

[Threatening to beat him.]

SERVANT. Oh! I will obey.

HUSBAND. No, no! you mean to brave me?

SERVANT. Oh no, sir! surely I have no help but to obey.

HUSBAND. Really and truly?

SERVANT. Yes, really and truly.

HUSBAND. [My anger] was only a feint. Well, then, take my place, please.

SERVANT. Yes, to be sure; if it is your desire, I will do so.

HUSBAND. That is really too delightful. Just stop quiet while I set things to rights for you to sit in abstraction.

SERVANT. Your commands are laid to heart.

HUSBAND. Sit down here.

SERVANT. Oh! what an unexpected [honour]!

HUSBAND. Now, then; I fear it will be uncomfortable, but oblige me by putting your head under this "abstraction blanket."

SERVANT. Your commands are laid to heart.

HUSBAND. Well, it is scarcely necessary to say so; but even if my old woman should tell you to take off the "abstraction blanket," be sure not to do so until my return.

SERVANT. Of course not. I should not think of taking it off. Pray don't be alarmed.

HUSBAND. I will be back soon.

SERVANT. Please be good enough to return quickly.

HUSBAND. Ah! that is well over! No doubt Hana is waiting impatiently for me. I will make haste and go.

WIFE. I am mistress of this house. I perfectly understood my partner the first time he asked me not to come to him on account of the religious devotion which he was going to perform. But there is something suspicious in his insisting on it a second time with a "Don't come to look at me! don't come to look at me!" So I will just peep through some hidden corner, and see what the thing looks like. [Peeping.] What's this? Why, it seems much more uncomfortable than I had supposed! [Coming in and drawing near.] Please, please; you told me not to come to you, and therefore I had intended not to do so; but I felt anxious, and so I have come. Won't you lift off that "abstraction blanket," and take something, if only a cup of tea, to unbend your mind a little? [The figure under the blanket shakes its head.] You are quite right. The thought of my being so disobedient and coming to you after the care you took to tell me not to intrude may justly rouse your anger; but please forgive my rudeness, and do please take that blanket off and repose yourself, do! [The figure shakes its head again.] You may say no again and again, but I will have it off. You must take it off. Do you hear? [She pulls it off, and TARAUHUWAZHIYA stands exposed.] What! you, you rascal? Where has my old man gone? Won't you speak? won't you speak?

SERVANT. Oh! I know nothing.

WIFE. Oh! how furious I am! Oh! how furious I am! Of course he must have gone to that woman's house. Won't you speak? won't you speak? I shall tear you in pieces!

SERVANT. In that case, how can I keep anything from you? Master has walked out to see Miss Hana.

WIFE. What! Miss Hana, do you say? Say Minz, say Minz. Gracious me, what a rage I am in! Then he really has gone to Hana's house, has he?

SERVANT. Yes, he really has gone there.

WIFE. Oh! when I hear he has gone to Hana's house, I feel all ablaze, and oh! in such a passion! oh! in such a passion!

[She bursts out crying.]

SERVANT. [Your tears] are but natural.

WIFE. Ah! I had meant not to let you go unhurt if you had kept it from me. But as you have told the truth, I forgive you. So get up.

SERVANT. I am extremely grateful for your kindness.

WIFE. Now tell me, how came you to be sitting there?

SERVANT. It was master's order that I should take his place; and so, although it was most repugnant to me, there was no alternative but for me to sit down, and I did so.

WIFE. Naturally. Now I want to ask you to do me a good turn. Will you?

SERVANT. Pray, what may it be?

WIFE. Why, just simply this: you will arrange the blanket on the top of me just as it was arranged on the top of you; won't you?

SERVANT. Oh! your commands ought of course to be laid to heart; but I shall get such a scolding if the thing becomes known, that I would rather ask you to excuse me.

WIFE. No, no! I will not allow him to scold you; so you must really please arrange me.

SERVANT. Please, please, let me off this time.

WIFE. No, no! you must arrange me, as I will not so much as let him point a finger at you.

SERVANT. Well, then, if it comes to my getting a scolding, I count on you, ma'am, as an intercessor.

WIFE. Of course. I will intercede for you; so do you please arrange me.

SERVANT. In that case, be so good as to sit down here.

WIFE. All right.

SERVANT. I fear it will be uncomfortable, but I must ask you to put your head under this.

WIFE. Please arrange me so that he cannot possibly know the difference [between us].

SERVANT. He will never know. It will do very nicely like this.

WIFE. Will it?

SERVANT. Yes.

WIFE. Well then! do you go and rest.

SERVANT. Your commands are laid to heart. [He moves away.]

WIFE. Wait a moment, Taraukuwazhiya!

SERVANT. Yes, ma'am.

WIFE. It is scarcely necessary to say so, but be sure not to tell him that it is I.

SERVANT. Of course not. I should not think of telling him.

WIFE. It has come to my ears that you have been secretly wishing for a purse and a silk wrapper. I will give you one of each which I have worked myself.

SERVANT. I am extremely grateful for your kindness.

WIFE. Now be off and rest.

SERVANT. Yes, ma'am.

[Enter HUSBAND singing as he walks along the road.]

HUSBAND. Why should the lonely sleeper heed

The midnight bell, the bird of dawn?

But ah! they're sorrowful indeed

When loosen'd was the damask zone.

Her image still, with locks that sleep

Had tangled, haunts me, and for aye;

Like willow-sprays where winds do sweep,

All tangled, too, my feelings lie.

As the world goes, it rarely happens even with the most ardent secret love; but in my case I never see her but what I care for her more and more:

'Twas in the spring-tide that we first did meet,

Nor e'en can I forget my flow'ret sweet.

Ah well! ah well! I keep talking like one in a dream, and meantime Taraukuwazhiya is sure to be impatiently awaiting me. I must get home. How will he have been keeping my place for me? I feel a bit uneasy. [He arrives at his house.]

Halloo! halloo! Taraukuwazhiya! I'm back! I'm back! [He enters the room.]

I'm just back. Poor fellow! the time must have seemed long to you. There now! [Seating himself.] Well, I should like to tell you to take off the "abstraction blanket"; but you would probably feel ashamed at being exposed. Anyhow, I will relate to you what Hana said last night, if you care to listen. Do you? [The figure nods acquiescence.] So you would like to? Well, then, I'll tell you all about it:

I made all the haste I could, but yet it was nearly dark before I arrived; and I was just going to ask admittance, my thoughts full of how anxiously Hana must be waiting for me in her loneliness, saying, perhaps, with the Chinese poet:

"He promised, but he comes not, and I lie on my pillow in the fifth watch of the night:

The wind shakes the pine-trees and the bamboos; can it be my beloved?"

when there comes borne to me the sound of her voice, humming as she sat alone:

"The breezes through the pine-trees moan,
The dying torch burns low;

Ah me! 'tis eerie all alone!

Say, will he come or no?"

So I gave a gentle rap on the back-door, on hearing which she cried out: "Who's there? who's there?" Well, a shower was falling at the time. So I answered by singing:

"Who comes to see you, Hana dear,

Regardless of the soaking rain?

And do your words, 'Who's there, who's there?'

Mean that you wait for lovers twain?"

to which Hana replied:

"What a fine joke! well, who can tell?

On such a dark and rainy night

Who ventures out must love me well,

And I, of course, must be polite, and say: Pray, sir, pass this way!" and, with these words, she loosened the ring and staple with a cling-a-ring, and pushed open the door with a crick-a-tick; and, while the breeze from the bamboo-blind poured towards me laden with the scent of flowers, out she comes to me, and, "At your service, sir," says she, "though I am but a poor country maid." So in we went hand in hand to the parlour. But yet her first question, "Who's there?" had left me so doubtful as to whether she might not be playing a double game, that I turned my back on her, and said crossly that I supposed she had been expecting a number of lovers, and that the thought quite spoilt my pleasure. But oh! what a darling Hana is! Coming to my side and clasping tight my hand, she whispered, saying:

"If I do please you not, then from the first Better have said that I do please you not; But wherefore pledge your troth, and after turn Against me? alas! alas!

Why be so angry? I am playing no double game." Then she asked why I had not brought you, Taraukuwazhiya, with me; and on my telling her the reason why you had remained at home, "Poor fellow!" said she, "how lonely he must be all by himself! Never was there a handier lad at everything than he, though doubtless it is a case of the mugwort planted among the hemp, which grows straight without need of twisting, and of the sand mixed with the mud, which gets black without need of dyeing, and it is his having been bound to you from a boy that has made him so genteel and so clever. Please always be a kind master to him." Yes, those are the things you have said of you when Hana is the speaker. As for my old vixen, she wouldn't let as much fall from her mug in the course of a century, I'll warrant! [Violent shaking under the blanket.] Then she asked me to pass into the inner room to rest awhile. So in we went to the inner room, hand in hand. And then she brought out wine and food, and pressed me to drink, so that what with drinking oneself, and passing the cup to her, and pressing each other to drink, we kept feasting until quite far into the night, when at her suggestion another room was sought, and a little repose taken. But soon day began to break, and I said I would go home. Then Hana exclaimed:

"Methought that when I met thee, dearest heart!

I'd tell thee all that swells within my breast:

But now already 'tis the hour to part,
And oh! how much still lingers unexpress'd!

Please stay and rest a little longer!" "But no!" said I, "I must get home. All the temple-bells are a-ringing." "And heartless priests they are," cried she, "that ring them! Horrid wretches to begin their ding-dong, ding-dong, ding-dong, when it is still the middle of the night!" But for all her entreaties, and for all my own regrets, I remembered that "meeting is but parting," and,

Tearing me loose, I made to go; farewell!
Farewell a thousand times, like ocean
sands

Untold! and follow'd by her distant gaze
I went; but as I turn'd me round, the moon,

A slender rim, sparkling remain'd behind,
And oh! what pain it was to me to part!

[He shed tears.] And so I came home. Oh! isn't it a pity? [Weeping again.] Ah well! out of my heart's joy has flowed all this long history, and meanwhile you must be very uncomfortable. Take off that "abstraction blanket." Take it off, for I have nothing more to tell you. Gracious goodness! what a stickler you are! Well then! I must pull it off myself. I will have it off, man! do you hear me?

[He pulls off the blanket, and up jumps his wife.]

WIFE. Oh! how furious I am! Oh! how furious I am! To hoax me and go off to Hana in that manner!

HUSBAND. Oh! not at all, not at all! I never went to Hana. I have been performing my devotions, indeed I have.

WIFE. What! so he means to come and tell me that he has been performing his devotions? and then into the bargain to talk about "things the old vixen would never have let drop"! Oh! I'm all ablaze with rage! Hoaxing me and going off,—where? going off where? [Pursuing her husband round the stage.]

HUSBAND. Not at all, not at all! I never said anything of the kind. Do, do forgive me! do forgive me!

WIFE. Oh! how furious I am! Oh! how furious I am! Where have you been, sir? where have you been?

HUSBAND. Well then! why should I conceal it from you? I have been to pray both for your welfare and for my own at the Temple of the Five Hundred Disciples in Tsukushi.

WIFE. Oh! how furious I am! Oh! how furious I am! as if you could have got as far as the Five Hundred Disciples!

HUSBAND. Do, do forgive me! Do forgive me!

WIFE. Oh! how furious I am! Oh! how furious I am! [The husband runs away.]

Where's the unprincipled wretch off to? Is there nobody there? Please catch him! I won't let him escape! I won't let him escape!

The Chorus

SCENE—The Temple of Chiynuzañzhi, and my Lord MITSUNAKA's palace in Kiyauto.

TIME—Early in the tenth century.

PART I

NAKAMITSU. I am Nakamitsu, a man of the Fujihara clan, and retainer of Mitsunaka, Lord of Tada in the land of Setsushiu. Now you must know that my lord hath an only son, and him hath he sent to a certain monastery amid the mountains named Chiynuzañzhi, while I, too, have a son called Kauzhiyu, who is gone as page to young my lord. But young my lord doth not condescend to apply his mind unto study, loving rather nothing so well as to spend from morn to night in quarrelling and disturbance. Wherefore, thinking doubtless to disinherit young my lord, my lord already this many a time, hath sent his messengers to the temple with summons to return home to Kiyauto. Nevertheless as he cometh not, me hath he now sent on the same errand.

[The above words are supposed to be spoken during the journey, and NAKAMITSU now arrives at the monastery.]

Prithee! is any within?

KAUZHIIYU. Who is it that deigneth to ask admittance?

NAKAMITSU. What! is that Kauzhiyu? Tell young my lord that I have come to fetch him home.

KAUZHIYU. Your commands shall be obeyed. [He goes to his youthful master's apartment.]

How shall I dare to address my lord? Nakamitsu is come to fetch my lord.

BIJIYAU. Call him hither.

KAUZHIYU. Your commands shall be obeyed. [He returns to the outer hall and addresses his father.]

Condescend to come this way.

[They go to BIJIYAU's apartment.]

NAKAMITSU. It is long since I was last here.

BIJIYAU. And what is it that hath now brought thee?

NAKAMITSU. 'Tis that my lord your father hath sent me to bid your lordship follow me home without delay.

BIJIYAU. Shall I, then, go without saying anything to the priests my preceptors?

NAKAMITSU. Yes; if the priests be told, they will surely wish to see your lordship on the way, whereas my lord your father's commands were, that I alone was to escort you.

BIJIYAU. Then we will away.

NAKAMITSU. Kauzhiyu! thou, too, shalt accompany thy master.

KAUZHIYU. Your commands shall be obeyed.

[They depart from the temple, and arrive at MITSUNAKA's palace.]

NAKAMITSU. How shall I dare to address my lord? I have brought hither his lordship Bijiyau.

MITSUNAKA. Well, Bijiyau! my only reason for sending thee up to the monastery was to help thy learning; and I would fain begin, by hearing thee read aloud from the Scriptures.

MITSUNAKA. And with these words, and bidding him read on, He lays on ebon desk before his son The sacred text in golden letters writ.

BIJIYAU. But how may he who never bent his wit To make the pencil trace Asáka's line

Spell out one letter of the book divine?

In vain, in vain his sire's behest he hears: Nought may he do but choke with idle tears.

MITSUNAKA. Ah! surely 'tis that, being my child, he respecteth the Scriptures too deeply, and chooseth not to read them except for purposes of devotion. What of verse-making, then?

BIJIYAU. I cannot make any.

MITSUNAKA. And music?

[BIJIYAU makes no answer.]

MITSUNAKA. What! no reply? Hast lost thy tongue, young fool?

CHORUS. Whom, then, to profit wentest thou to school?

And can it be that e'en a father's word, Like snow that falling melts, is scarcely heard,

But 'tis unheeded? Ah! 'twill drive me wild

To point thee out to strangers as my child!

No sooner said, than out the scabbard flies

His trusty sword, and with fierce flashing eyes

Forward he darts; but, rushing in between,

Good Nakamitsu checks the bloody scene— Firm though respectful, stays his master's arm,

And saves the lad from perilous alarm.

NAKAMITSU. Good my lord, deign to be merciful this once!

MITSUNAKA. Why stayedst thou my hand? Haste thou now and slay Bijiyau with this my sword.

NAKAMITSU. Your commands shall be obeyed.

[He retires into another apartment.]

What is this horror unutterable? 'Tis no mere passing fit of anger. What shall I do?—Ah! I have it! I have it! I will take upon myself to contrive some plan for his escape. Kauzhiyu, Kauzhiyu, art thou there?

KAUZHIYU. Behold me at thy service.

NAKAMITSU. Where is my lord Bijiyau?

KAUZHIIYU. All my prayers have been unavailing to make him leave this spot.

NAKAMITSU. But why will he not seek refuge somewhere? Here am I come from my lord his father as a messenger of death!

[BIJIYAU shows himself.]

BIJIYAU. That I am alive here at this moment is thy doing. But through the lattice I heard my father's words to thee just now.

Little imports it an' I die or live,
But 'tis for thee I cannot choose but grieve
If thou do vex thy lord: to avert his ire Strike off my head, and show it to my sire!

NAKAMITSU. My lord, deign to be calm!
I will take upon myself to contrive some plan for your escape.—What! say you a messenger hath come? My heart sinks within me.—What! another messenger?

[These are messengers from MITSUNAKA to ask whether his orders be not yet carried into execution.]

NAKAMITSU. Alas! each joy, each grief
we see unfurl'd

Rewards some action in a former world.

KAUZHIIYU. In ages past thou sinnedst;

BIJIYAU. And to-day

CHORUS. Comes retribution: think not then to say

'Tis others' fault, nor foolishly upbraid
The lot thyself for thine own self hast made.

Say not the world's askew! with idle prate
Of never-ending grief the hour grows late.
Strike off my head! with many a tear he cries,
And might, in sooth, draw tears from any
eyes.

NAKAMITSU. Ah! young my lord, were
I but of like age with thee, how readily would I not redeem thy life at the cost of mine own! Alas! that so easy a sacrifice should not be possible!

KAUZHIIYU. Father, I would make bold to speak a word unto thee.

NAKAMITSU. What may it be?

KAUZHIIYU. 'Tis, father, that the words thou hast just spoken have found a lodgment in mine ears. Thy charge, truly, is Mitsunaka; but Mitsunaka's son is mine.
This, if any, is a great occasion, and my years point to me as of right the chief actor in it. Be quick! be quick! strike off my head, and show it to Mitsunaka as the head of my lord Bijiyau!

NAKAMITSU. Thou'st spoken truly,
Nakamitsu cries,
And the long sword from out his scabbard flies,
What time he strides behind his boy.

BIJIYAU. But no!
The youthful lord on such stupendous woe
May never gaze unmov'd; with bitter wail
The father's sleeve he clasps. Nought may't avail,
He weeping cries, e'en should the deed
be done,
For I will slay myself if falls thy son.

KAUZHIIYU. But 'tis the rule—a rule of good renown—
That for his lord a warrior must lay down
His lesser life.

BIJIYAU. But e'en if lesser, yet
He, too, is human; neither shouldst forget
What shame will e'er be mine if I survive.

NAKAMITSU. Alas! alas! and 'tis for death they strive!

KAUZHIIYU. Me deign to hear.

BIJIYAU. No! mine the truer word!

NAKAMITSU. Ah! this my child!

KAUZHIIYU. And there behold thy lord!

NAKAMITSU. Betwixt the two see Nakamitsu stand:

CHORUS. His own brave life, an' 'twere
his lord's command,

Were freely giv'n; but now, in sore dismay,

E'en his fierce courage fades and droops
away.

BIJIYAU. Why heed a life my sire himself holds cheap?

Nought may thy pity do but sink more deep

My soul in wretchedness.

KAUZHIIYU. Mistake me not!
Think not 'tis pity moves me; but a blot

The martial honour of our house will stain,

If, when I might have bled, my lord be slain.

CHORUS. On either side 'tis infancy that pleads.

NAKAMITSU. And yet how well they've learnt where duty leads!

CHORUS. Dear is thy lord!

NAKAMITSU. And mine own child how dear!

CHORUS. But Nakamitsu knows full well that ne'er,

To save the child his craven heart ador'd,
Warrior yet dar'd lay hands upon his lord.

He to the left, the trembling father cries,
Was sure my boy, nor lifts his tear-stain'd eyes:

A flash, a moment, the fell sabre gleams,
And sends his infant to the land of dreams.

NAKAMITSU. Oh, horror unutterable! to think that I should have slain mine own innocent child! But I must go and inform my lord.

[He goes to MITSUNAKA's apartment.]

How shall I dare to address my lord? I have slain my lord Bijiyau according to your commands.

MITSUNAKA. So thou has killed the fellow? I trow his last moments were those of a coward. Is it not true?

NAKAMITSU. Not so, my lord. As I stood there aghast, holding in my hand the sword your lordship gave me, your son called out, "Why doth Nakamitsu thus delay?" and those were the last words he was pleased to utter.

MITSUNAKA. As thou well knowest, Bijiyau was mine only child. Go and call thy son Kauzhiyu, and I will adopt him as mine heir.

NAKAMITSU. Kauzhiyu, my lord, in despair at being separated from young my lord, hath cut off his locks, and vanished none knows whither.

NAKAMITSU. I, too, thy gracious license would obtain
Hence to depart, and in some holy fane
To join the priesthood.

MITSUNAKA. Harsh was my decree,
Yet can I think what thy heart's grief must be

That as its own my recreant child received,

And now of both its children is bereav'd.
But 'tis a rule of universal sway

That a retainer ever must obey.

CHORUS. Thus would his lord, with many a suasion fond,

Have rais'd poor Nakamitsu from despond,
Nor eke himself, with heart all stony hard,

Mote, as a father, ev'ry pang discard:

Behold him now, oh! lamentable sight!

O'er his own son perform the fun'ral rite.

PART II

[Some time is supposed to have elapsed, and WESHIN, abbot of the monastery on Mount Hiyei, comes down from that retreat to MITSUNAKA's palace in the capital, bringing with him BIJYAU, who had been persuaded by NAKAMITSU to take refuge with the holy man.]

WESHIN. I am the priest Weshin, and am hastening on my way to my lord Mitsunaka's palace, whither certain motives guide me. [They arrive at the gate, and he cries out:] I would fain crave admittance.

NAKAMITSU. Who is it that asks to be admitted? Ah! 'tis his reverence Weshin.

WESHIN. Alas for poor Kauzhiyu!

NAKAMITSU. Yes; but prithee speak not of this before his lordship.

WESHIN. I understand. Pray tell my lord that I am come.

NAKAMITSU. Wait here, I pray thee, while I go and inform his lordship.

[He goes to MITSUNAKA's apartment.]

How shall I venture to address my lord? His reverence Weshin hath arrived from Mount Hiyei.

MITSUNAKA. Call him hither.

NAKAMITSU. Your commands shall be obeyed. [He goes to the room where WESHIN is waiting, and says:] Be pleased to pass this way.

[They enter MITSUNAKA's apartment.]

MITSUNAKA. What may it be that has brought your reverence here to-day?

WESHIN. 'Tis this, and this only. I come desiring to speak to your lordship anent my lord Bijiyau.

MITSUNAKA. Respecting him I gave orders to Nakamitsu, which orders have been carried out.

WESHIN. Ah! my lord, 'tis that, 'tis that I would discourse of. Be not agitated, but graciously deign to give me thine attention while I speak. Thou didst indeed command that my lord Bijiyau's head should be struck off. But never might Nakamitsu prevail upon himself to lay hands on one to whom, as his lord, he knew himself bound in reverence through all the changing scenes of the Three Worlds. Wherefore he slew his own son, Kauzhiyu, to save my lord Bijiyau's life. And now here I come bringing Bijiyau with me, and would humbly supplicate thee to forgive one who was so loved that a man hath given his own son in exchange for him.

MITSUNAKA. Then he was a coward, as I thought! Wherefore, if Kauzhiyu was sacrificed, did he, too, not slay himself?

WESHIN. My lord, put all other thoughts aside, and, if it be only as an act of piety towards Kauzhiyu's soul—Curse not thy son!

CHORUS. As thus the good man speaks,
Tears of entreaty pour adown his cheeks.
The father hears, and e'en his ruthless breast,
Soft'ning at last, admits the fond request,
While Nakamitsu, crowning their delight,
The flow'ry wine brings forth, and cups that might Have serv'd the fays: but who would choose to set Their fav'rite's bliss that, home returning, met
His grandsons' grandsons' still remoter line,
Beside the joy that doth itself entwine
Round the fond hearts of father and of son,
Parted and now in the same life made one?

WESHIN. Prithee, Nakamitsu, wilt thou not dance and sing to us a while in honour of this haleyon hour?

[During the following song NAKAMITSU dances.]

NAKAMITSU. Water-bird, left all alone
Now thy little mate hath flown,

On the billows to and fro
Flutter, flutter, full of woe!

CHORUS. Full of woe, so full of woe,
Flutter, flutter, full of woe!

NAKAMITSU. Ah! if my darling were but here to-day
I'd make the two together dance and play
While I beat time, and, gazing on my boy,
Instead of tears of grief, shed tears of joy!

CHORUS. Behold him weep!

NAKAMITSU. But the gay throng perceive
Nought but the rhythmic waving of my sleeve,

CHORUS. Hither and thither flutt'ring
in the wind,

NAKAMITSU. Above, beneath, with many a dewdrop lin'd!

CHORUS. Ah, dewy tears! in this our world of woe
If any stay, the friends he loves must go:
Thus 'tis ordain'd, and he that smiles to-day

To-morrow owns blank desolation's sway.
But now 'tis time to part, the good priest cries.

Him his disciple follows, and they rise;
While Nakamitsu, walking in their train,
The palanquin escorts; for he would fain
Last counsel give: "Beware, young lord, beware!

Nor cease from toilsome study; for if e'er

Thy sire again be anger'd, all is lost!"
Then takes his leave, low bending to the dust.

Forward they're borne; but Nakamitsu stays, [gaze,
Watching and watching with heart-broken
And, mutely weeping, thinks how ne'er
again

He'll see his child borne homeward o'er the plain.

FAIR LADIES AT A GAME OF POEM-CARDS

By CHIKAMATSU MONZAEMON

Produced in the early 18th century

TRANSLATED BY ASATARO MIYAMORA AND ROBERT NICHOLS *

I

During the reign of the Emperor Takakura, eighty-eighth emperor, it was Kiyomori, the Prime Minister, and his clan the Taira who in reality steered the ship of state and achieved the zenith of their prosperity. His son and heir, Shigémori, Lord Keeper of the Privy Seal, celebrated throughout Japan for his wisdom and virtue, for literary accomplishments and military proficiency, was an object of love and veneration among the warriors of the two greatest military houses, the Taira and the Minamoto. Among courtiers and court nobles he was also held in esteem, inasmuch as he was elder brother of the merciful and sagacious Empress Kenrei-Mon-in, mother of the Crown Prince shortly destined to become the Emperor Antoku.

On September the ninth, the Feast of the Chrysanthemum, of the first year of Yōwa, Lady Tonasé, chief lady-in-waiting, was despatched by the Empress as messenger to Shigémori. The warrior nobleman, having accorded her a hearty welcome, requested her to reveal her message.

"Permit me to congratulate your lordship upon this happy occasion," began Lady Tonasé. "Since the chrysanthemums are now in full bloom, Her Imperial Majesty graciously deems that the maple leaves upon the mountains must be at their best and accordingly desires to view them. It is therefore her Imperial pleasure that your lordship should order a mushroom picking party to be held upon Mount Kita according to annual custom."

"Your message delights me, my lady," replied Shigémori. "I had intended to transmit precisely this suggestion to Her Majesty. Pray tell Her Majesty that the mushroom picking party will take place on the twelfth and the moon viewing party on the thirteenth, and that I beg Her Majesty to prolong her visit upon the mountain for two or three days after the parties are over."

"The invitation gives me pleasure," returned the Imperial messenger. "I can well imagine what delight that will cause Her Majesty. The younger ladies-in-waiting, nay, even the more elderly, such as myself, always look forward with great pleasure to the two annual Imperial picnics, the flower viewing in spring and the maple-leaf viewing in autumn. Now I must hasten to return and report your lordship's kindly answer to my Imperial mistress. Well can I imagine the scarlet brocade upon the trees and the sweet music of the field insects. Since we have had fine weather for several days now the moon is sure to be bright and beautiful. We should all enjoy ourselves exceedingly.

* Reprinted from Masterpieces of Chikamatsu, published by E. P. Dutton & Co., by permission of the publishers.

I heartily thank your lordship's samurai in advance for the trouble they will be at in making the appropriate arrangements. I beg to take leave of your lordship."

Her ceremonial speech ended, she returned to the Imperial palace.

Shigémori summoned his retainers, Morihisa, Moritsugu and Takiguchi and thus addressed them:—"The Imperial mushroom picking party is to be given on the twelfth. You must do your utmost, as is your wont each year, in the matter of escorting Her Imperial Majesty, in sweeping the mountain, and in building the temporary Imperial pavilion. Furthermore, Her Majesty being a great lover of song-birds, you are to place in front of the pavilion for her entertainment a large and beautiful cage containing many song-birds of the four seasons. I hear that the titmouse recently presented to me by Lord Kadowaki can perform several feats at suggestions of the hand, such for instance as passing through rings and drawing water. It were a somewhat childish thing in me to make much ado about such a bird; I therefore wish to make a present of it to Her Majesty. Takiguchi, this errand shall be yours. Make ready." With these words Shigémori entered the inner apartment.

Takiguchi was an extremely handsome youth of barely nineteen, a fitting envoy for such a task. He promptly trimmed himself up and set out for the Imperial palace accompanied by a henchman who carried the precious bird in a cage.

Now that the date for the mushroom picking party had been announced, the maids-of-honour impatiently awaited the day, not so much for the pleasure of the picnic as for the opportunities afforded of seeing young samurai. For the samurai and men-servants in the palace of the Empress were all men above sixty.

There were to be found among these court ladies two damsels in particular, exceedingly beautiful, named Yokobué and Karumo, both great favourites with the Empress on account of their personal grace, intelligence and sweetness of disposition. Their comrades too felt for them real affection. This day it was Yokobué's turn to serve as usher. She was on duty in the chamber. The other young ladies were gathered in the same chamber and were chattering merrily.

"Yokobué Dono," said one of them, "let us hope that on the occasion of the mushroom picking party we get plenty of chances to see handsome young samurai. I can't help wondering who will accompany Lord Shigémori on that day. What young men of the Taira clan will there be? What fun it will be if there are handsome young men among the attendants! But if it unfortunately turns out that only such warriors as the ferocious, woman-hating Lord of Noto should appear, a very poor time of it we shall get."

"Have no fear on that score," Karumo took up the tale. "Tastes differ. Lord Tsunémasa is commonly held to be the most handsome of the clan of Taira, but he is such a precocious boy that his voice broke at fourteen. Such a trifler too! I don't fancy him. Lord Atsumori is a simple-minded, lovable creature, but I fear he is already engaged to a certain lady. Master Moritsugu's younger brother, Yoshitsugu Dono, is a kind-hearted, lovable man I've no doubt, but that scorpion of a brother of his is so strict about his behaviour that not a girl can get near him. How can a woman choose her comrade for life when this is the case? We can but leave the matter to providence."

"I don't agree with you," said Yakumo and O-Hana simultaneously. "If we leave the matter entirely to providence it is probable that she will provide us with such boorish warriors as Kagékiyo or Gorôbyôé. How could one live a happy life with such a person as that? Master Morihisa certainly played a very pretty tune on the lute at last year's mushroom picnic on Mount Kita, but what an effeminate fellow he is! The gallant who suits the taste of everybody, high and low alike, the paragon of men, he is surely Master Saitô Takiguchi Yorikata. Don't you agree with me, Yokobué Dono?"

Yokobué met this banter with, "I don't share the opinion of any of you, my friends. You talk as if Master Takiguchi were the only handsome man in existence. He's handsome enough in all faith; nobody can call him ill-favoured; but such a person is always too conceited about his own good looks and usually spoilt and ill-natured into the bargain. I tell you I positively dislike him."

But this assertion only provoked an immediate burst of laughter.

"What a liar!" everyone cried. "The hypocrite! Nobody blames Karumo Dono who frankly states she thinks Master Yoshitsugu is the sort of man one could love. We hate such dishonesty in Yokobué Dono. You are loud in your protestations of dislike for Master Yorikata, but your tenderness of heart did not escape us when you were good enough to mend a burst seam of his hakama and we all know how you kissed its gusset at the football match at Lord Shigémori's house the other day. What's more you carried to your lips with obvious pleasure a towel with which he had wiped his mouth. And yet you dare to declare that you positively dislike him! What a little liar! Make a clean breast of it, Yokobué Dono! Confess! If you don't we'll untie your obi as a punishment and strip you to the skin. Come, girls, let's do it now!"

"Please forgive me!"

"Tickle her!" cried the girls, laughing. "Pinch her!"

It was at this moment that Takiguchi arrived before the porch and announced, "Saitō Takiguchi, a messenger from Lord Shigémori, desires to see the lady usher."

At this announcement the girls were overcome with merriment and excitement.

"Speak of angels——" one of them whispered, laughing. "Your beloved's come, Yokobué Dono!"

"Dear Yokobué," said another, "you're in luck to-day, being usher."

"I can never hope to be a yokobué, but I desire to be a shakuhachi and to be set to the mouth of that takiguchi."

"I should like to bring him tea."

They stole toward the paper doors of the porch and peeped through.

"I'd like to bite those lovely cheeks," one whispered.

"I'd like to be held so hard in his arms that I'd die."

The chatterboxes were startled to hear the voice of the chief lady of the court crying, not without asperity, "Girls, Her Majesty summons you! Her Majesty has clapped her hands several times. It's very thoughtless of you that not one of you is in attendance on Her Majesty."

"Gracious me! That old thunderstorm of a hag is blowing up again. Hurry, lest the lightning strike you!"

The girls precipitated themselves into the inner apartments.

Yokobué, who had longed for Takiguchi, opened the doors. Her heart was violently beating. The words she pronounced were tremulous.

"Welcome, sir messenger."

Takiguchi, who had pined for the girl, was transported to see her before him. For a moment he was struck speechless. It was with an effort that he controlled himself sufficiently to say a moment later, "I beg to declare to you my errand. My Lord Shigémori orders me to announce that Her Imperial Majesty be requested to set out early in the morning of the day after to-morrow that she may visit Mount Kita."

His attitude underwent an abrupt change.

"I think and think of you till dawn breaks. All night I am awake thinking of you, so that I never meet you in dreams. By daylight your figure floats continually before me and comes before me and my duties. Passionately I long for you and most of all toward evening. A warrior ought never to shed tears, no, not even once between birth and the grave. Little befits it him to do so. And yet from morn to evening I find tears in my eyes. Can you guess who makes me weep? What nonsense I have been talking! Please forgive me! Well, as I was saying, this titmouse performs several tricks at suggestions made by the hand. She can pass through rings and draw water. Her name therefore is 'The Wonder of the Capital.' Lord Shigémori begs respectfully to present this bird to Her Majesty since he knows her to be a great lover of song-birds. Now, my pretty"—he addressed the bird—"do some tricks for the entertainment of the lady usher."

So saying, Takiguchi made some passes with his hand, whereupon the little bird threw several somersaults round and round the perch—hira-hira-hira, kuru-kuru-kuru. Next the bird nimbly threaded the first, second, third, fourth and fifth rings. Now she hopped to the well and, seizing the rope with her beak, lifted the bucket and drew the water. This operation she repeated again and again—shiton, shiton, shiton.

"Oh, Yokobué Dono," said Takiguchi, not without significant glances, "I have improvised an ode on this dear little creature. Please listen:—

'The very titmouse hops through rings,
Draws water if my will so be;
I would that you would draw my heart
And through great trials come to me.'

If it's not asking you too much, would you be kind enough to make an ode in reply?"

Yokobué, so much entranced that she had noticed neither the bird nor Takiguchi's message, drew close to him, murmuring, "A delightful verse, dear Takiguchi";—she fell into a brown study, then her face brightened as if with a happy thought—"here is my reply," she said.

"The walnut which the titmouse loves Lies fallen in the dingle, where Scarlet the autumn maples burn
And you, my love, may find it there."

"You suggest that we meet secretly in the glen on Mount Kita at the mushroom hunting?"

"Exactly."

"I thank you. I shall not fail."

They drew nearer and embraced so passionately that they tilted the cage, which fell on its side. The bird's food and water rolled out, the rings lost their form. Panic-stricken, Takiguchi hurriedly opened the door of the cage, inserted both his hands and endeavoured to right the damage. But as fast as he pulled one piece straight another would go out of shape. Now he turned the cage upside down, and he laid it on its side, while the frightened bird struggled, flutter-flutter. In his confusion Takiguchi ignored for a moment or two the fact that the cage door was open. With a glad twitter the little prisoner escaped. Frantic with despair, the pair pursued the bird hither and thither around the garden. Takiguchi waved his hand, crying, "Come, my pretty!"—at which the titmouse somersaulted in the air two or three times, then, rejoicing in her freedom, sped away across the sky. Takiguchi and Yokobué stood watching the bird with a vacant stare. They were at their wits' end. They followed the bird with their eyes.

Kaga-no-Gunji Morotaka, police superintendent of the Empress' palace, younger brother to Lady Tonasé and a haughty, heartless old samurai who tyrannized over his subordinates, hearing of the occurrence, rushed out. To Takiguchi he did not vouchsafe a single word of greeting: Yokobué he seized by the arm. "Hussy!" he roared, bending upon her a withering glance. "Do you think this palace is a tea-house or a brothel? Even in the Emperor's palace certain rules of etiquette are observed in the conduct of messenger and usher. How much more then are they and must they be observed here, where almost every office, high and low, is occupied by a woman. Despite the eye I have been keeping on you, you have managed to behave with indecency, nay, the word indecent does not adequately describe your conduct. What is more, you have been so careless as to cause the escape of this precious bird. With these misdeeds to answer for how can you live on shamelessly and dare to show your face before people? Were you a samurai I could apportion you a certain heavy punishment for these serious offences. Since, however, you are a woman, I sentence you to imprisonment. Now, my men, bind Yokobué and be quick about it."

Takiguchi stepped forward and excitedly intervened.

"No, no, Morotaka Dono, Yokobué is not to blame. I am entirely responsible for this mishap. I am resolved to commit seppuku as apology. I cannot however allow what you said just now to pass unchallenged. What was your meaning when you said, 'Were you a samurai I could assign to you a certain heavy punishment'? I am a samurai; tell me what punishment you propose for me."

"You are overexcited. I never meant such punishment for you. Don't take what I said amiss. If any samurai under my command were guilty of such impropriety I could forthwith order him to be bound, decapitated and his head to be exposed. You, however, are a retainer of Lord Shigémori; therefore, though you should flirt with a maid-of-honour, pluck the titmouse's feathers, roast and eat it, whatever you might do would be of no consequence to me. If you care to commit seppuku, however, you are perfectly at liberty to do so. It would make no difference to the fate of Yokobué. Now, my men, why delay? Bind her at once and cast her into prison."

The desperate girl defied him.

"Morotaka Dono, blame yourself before you blame others. There is not one of us to whom you, superintendent as you are, have not written notes. What explanation have you for this foulness?"

Takiguchi laid his hand upon his sword.

"Morotaka," he cried, "I have no option but to believe Yokobué's charge. If it be indeed the law to bind a samurai and behead him for such offences, I, retainer of Lord Shigémori, will begin with you. Prepare yourself, you old fool!"

He rushed upon Morotaka, but the latter leapt back.

"Bind me if you can!" he replied.

None could tell what the outcome might be. Maids and henchmen, struck with terror, could but look at them with anxiety and fear.

At this juncture a voice was heard saying, "See that the quarrel is stopped." It was none other than the Empress, who had been informed of the incident and now stepped out on to the verandah. Upon which the maids cried all together, "It is Her Majesty's pleasure that you stop quarrelling!"

Both samurai instantaneously stopped and bowed their heads in respect.

"I cannot but consider," said the Empress, "that the report is false which accuses Yokobué of impropriety. If any of my maids were guilty of impropriety the blame would be upon Morotaka who is their superintendent. That Takiguchi has let the titmouse escape is no offence at all. Every time he gave the bird food and water he had to open the door of the cage. Is it to be wondered at that the caged bird longs for the blue sky and hungers for an opportunity to escape? Luckily enough the titmouse alighted in the inner garden and I myself have caught her and put her in the fusege. I learn that a large cage containing song-birds is to be ready for my diversion on Mount Kita. Takiguchi, tell Lord Shigémori that I will place the titmouse among the other birds and display her to his lordship. Yokobué and Takiguchi, be of good cheer about that bird. Girls, entertain Takiguchi with saké and give him refreshment. Be of good courage, Takiguchi, and present Lord Shigémori with my hearty thanks for his precious gift."

At these kindly words Takiguchi and Yokobué reverentially bowed their heads and gave way to tears of gratitude. Morotaka made a wry face and ground his teeth in mortification.

"And Morotaka," continued the Empress, turning her eyes upon him, "you are most strictly to command all under your authority never to say a word of what has happened to-day. Should they, in spite of your injunctions, mention this matter, it is you who will be held answerable for it."

Having thus spoken to the relief and satisfaction of all present save the old samurai, the Empress withdrew.

The day of the picnic at last arrived. Shigémori, as host, had done all in his power to make the Imperial visit a success. On Mount Kita had been built a temporary pavilion beautifully thatched with scarlet maple leaves. In front of this was set a large cage containing hundreds of pretty birds, such as nightingales, wag-tails, robins, parrots, tits and ducks. Their fine plumage shone brilliantly in the gold of the afternoon sun. They flitted hither and thither uttering sweet notes. The Empress and her retinue had that morning been escorted thither by a large number of Shigémori's retainers.

The Empress stepped down, advanced to the cage and contemplated the birds with seeming interest. Need attention be drawn to the fact that the titmouse presented by Shigémori was not to be found among them? The Empress had pretended that she had caught the bird in order to cover the fault of Takiguchi and his sweetheart.

"My Lord," said the Empress after a while, "I thank you for your kindness in diverting me with the sight of these beautiful birds. True, I enjoy the sight of them exceedingly, but even more joy will be mine at setting these birds free. It is said that even such little birds as these have the same Buddhist nature as ourselves. Permit me to set them at liberty."

So saying she opened the doors of the cage and let the birds escape. The little creatures, uttering cries of happiness, flew out and soared far away into the blue sky. Shigémori who, like his sister, was of a compassionate nature, was struck with admiration.

"This is a real Hōjōé!" he exclaimed. "I cannot but admire Your Majesty's benevolence. Your Majesty would do well to view the maple leaves and search for mushrooms to-morrow. Let us retire early this evening in order to enjoy the sound of the deer's cries in the stillness of the night."

So saying, both retired into the pavilion.

The night was far advanced; all was still. The mountain sides were obscure, for the thickets obstructed the brightness of the moonlight.

Yoshitsugu, a retainer of Shigémori and younger brother of Moritsugu, referred to above, had stolen from his post and was now standing, head and face swathed in a kerchief, by the hedge of the Imperial pavilion, the place of the assignation made between himself and his sweetheart Karumo, maid-of-honour. There was a love of long standing between them. Passionately had they desired to meet in secret; they had sworn to avail themselves of to-night's opportunity. Yokobué, who likewise had promised to meet her lover by stealth this night, arose when all her companions had fallen asleep. Now wearing a katsugi she stepped down to the hedge. She beckoned to the man in disguise. He advanced toward her readily enough. They conversed in nods and gestures and were in such a state of joyful excitement that they did not trouble to verify each other's identity. The young samurai lifted the damsel on to his back. In this manner their faces remained undisclosed to one another. The young samurai set out with a light heart toward the glen.

As for Karumo, intending to keep her word with Yoshitsugu, she stole out, also wearing a katsugi, at a moment when the position of the moon in the sky declared that midnight had passed. Now she awaited her lover's arrival. Takiguchi, with a kerchief about his head and face, emerged from the darkness intending to meet Yokobué. The expectant Karumo, as was only natural, mistook him for her sweetheart. She beckoned to him. Nor did Takiguchi harbour any doubts as to her identity. Hurriedly he hoisted her on to his back and hastened toward the glen. Presently the passionate lover found himself on the bank of a rivulet, along which he walked awhile, when, to his surprise, he overtook another man also with a woman on his back, toiling upstream. Each was equally scared and tried to avoid being seen by the other, but since they were colleagues by daylight it was not long before they recognized each other.

"Is it Takiguchi?"

"Yoshitsugu, is it?"

"You're in for luck, I too am enjoying myself. Ha! Ha!"

"Let us keep our sweet secrets to ourselves."

With that they parted and each hurried on his particular way. But the girls on their backs remarked to each other, "It would seem we have got mixed up. Are you not Yokobué Dono?"

"Is it Karumo Dono?"

"Eh? Have we got the wrong girls?" said one of the samurai. "We are a couple of fools!"

The two samurai lowered their lovely burdens. Each man removed his kerchief and each girl her veil. The four, to their vast surprise, realized the mistake that had been made. All burst out laughing.

"It would appear we have been overhasty! Had we not realized our mistake until a little later there is no knowing what might not have happened. We're lucky! Let each return his charge to the other none the worse."

They wandered no further. Each pair settled down in a chosen spot and enjoyed moments of supreme happiness.

At this moment a considerable body of men carrying sticks and paper lanterns appeared upon the further hillside. These lanterns bore upon them a crest which turned out to be none other than the butterfly of Morotaka, police superintendent of the Empress' court.

"Heaven defend us!" cried the samurai. "If our secret is detected by that fellow it will prove our ruin. Sweet ladies, do you think you could climb up the valley and find your way safely to the pavilion?"

"Of course. For love's sake we would be ready to tread upon sword-blades. As for you, samurai, make haste and save yourselves."

Hastily bidding their lovers farewell the girls summoned up courage and hand in hand made their way up the glen. A happy thought came to Takiguchi in the shape of a plan to detain Morotaka in the wood sufficiently long to give the girls time to make good their return in his absence. He assumed Yokobué's katsugi that he might appear like a woman. So disguised, he waited near Yoshitsugu for Morotaka's coming.

Having searched here and there and all to no purpose, Morotaka cried, "No wonder Karumo and Yokobué are missing! I know who their seducers are! See, over there are some figures, down by the rivulet. Don't let them escape."

No sooner had he spoken than Morotaka and his followers swooped upon the erstwhile lovers and surrounded Yoshitsugu.

"Aha!" cried Morotaka in triumph. "So Yoshitsugu is the man, is he? Arrest him."

"An unjust charge!" cried Yoshitsugu, as if in confusion. "I came here but a few minutes ago to view the maple leaves by moonlight. That's the exact truth; I am not guilty of any such crime as seduction."

Hardly had he spoken when the superintendent roared, "No further lies, you rogue! That figure over there is Karumo, I'll be bound. It's two years now since my heart was set on her. Had she yielded to my wishes I intended to ask Her Majesty to bestow her on me as wife. It appears that I have wooed her day and night to no purpose, because of her attachment to you. I have long suspected the cause. You are a criminal who corrupts the morals of court ladies. Why, you're as good as the lover of my would-be wife! That woman standing there is an adulteress."

Morotaka rushed upon the supposed Karumo and snatched away the veil. What was his astonishment and fear to behold himself confronted by Takiguchi who glowered upon him, hand laid upon swordhilt. But he recovered his presence of mind.

"If you're here," he said brusquely, "Yokobué must be hereabouts. You must have scented the danger and concealed her. Well, I shall inquire into this matter later. Let us return, my men."

Morotaka beat a retreat; but Yoshitsugu and Takiguchi made haste to intercept him in a threatening fashion.

"There's no 'later on' about it, you old fool," they said. "We want justice here and now. Do you think you can make off with impunity, after snatching a veil from one samurai and seeing fit to call the other a seducer of women? You can't behave with us as you behave when you lord it over the Empress's court and thunder at the maids-of-honour. Just you try to return to the pavilion without first explaining those insults and you'll find, if these swords can speak, that you'll have no legs to walk on!"

"Calm yourselves, sirs," replied Morotaka, not without trepidation. "It is Yokobué and Karumo whom I call corrupters of morals. As their superintendent it is my duty to inquire into every particular of these happenings, but with you I have nothing to do. If my words offend you I pray your forgiveness and throw myself upon your generosity."

"Sir Superintendent," returned Takiguchi provocatively, "but a few minutes ago you confessed that during the last few years your heart has been set upon Karumo and that you have wooed her day and night. Who then is her seducer if it isn't you? As you yourself were good enough to remark at court the other day, such an offender as yourself richly deserves to be bound and decapitated. Now, Yoshitsugu, bind this fellow! I'll behead him. His retainers too we will chasten. See that they don't escape."

At this threat Morotaka's henchmen threw down their sticks and lanterns and ran for their lives.

"How mercilessly you have argued me down!" cried the deserted Morotaka.

"But you wait! I'll show you how I'll be revenged on Yokobué and Karumo!"

So saying, he precipitantly took to his heels.

The two samurai burst into uproarious laughter; then they made their way back to the pavilion at their leisure.

II

Takiguchi's father, Katsuyori, was an old samurai with a record of long service under Shigémori and Shigémori's father, Kiyomori. He had abandoned the profession of arms, had shaved his head, hoary with the snows of seventy winters, and, having assumed the sacerdotal name of Sairai and having donned a hensan (clerical robe), now led a life of abstinence and devotion and made it his daily task to visit the family temple that he might worship Buddha.

One day Sairai, producing an eboshi and a beautiful kariginu, summoned his son Takiguchi and spoke as follows: "These articles were the gift of Lord Shigémori to me many years ago on the occasion of a grand banquet to the ministers of state. I wore them and, in company with my colleagues, received the guests. I make them yours. As heir of our house, you are to wear them on public occasions. Up to now I have not heard any reports, favourable or unfavourable, concerning the manner in which you discharge your duties. Tell me how you stand in the graces of your lord?"

"My dear father," respectfully returned Takiguchi, "albeit my ability is small, I stand, thanks to your influence, higher in his lordship's favour than any of my comrades. Such pleasure does this give me that I serve his lordship with all the loyalty of which I am capable and attend to my duties with the utmost diligence. Furthermore, Her Imperial Majesty is pleased to regard me with a special favour, so that I am entrusted with all messages to Her Majesty's court. Thus, upon the occasion of the recent picnic upon Mount Kita, I often had the honour of being summoned to Her Imperial presence for this purpose or that. Also I was made much of by the maids-of-honour and my colleagues. Under these circumstances I am not without hopes that, thanks to his lordship's authority and your influence, I may shortly receive promotion."

Hardly had he uttered these words when Sairai glowered upon him and roared, "Silence, silence! Listen to me, you brazen-faced boy! In your foolishness you are bold enough to suppose that I have no knowledge of your behaviour. Forasmuch as I have retired from the world I have no particular business with it, but waking or dreaming I never cease to consider your well-being. Indeed, I give more thought to that than to my future happiness. I am ever all ears to pick up any rumour, good or bad, concerning you. You need not therefore presume to suppose that your movements escape me. I know very well how infatuated you are with a maid-of-honour named Yokobué. You made such a fool of yourself flirting with her that you let the titmouse, intended for the Empress, escape. For that you were severely reprimanded by the superintendent Morotaka, who sentenced you to a heavy punishment from which Her Majesty's mercy alone released you. That ignominious news came to my ears the very day of the incident itself. As if this mishap were not sufficient warning, you shamelessly misconducted yourself, as I hear, under cover of night with Yokobué on the occasion of the Imperial picnic on Mount Kita. Caught in the act by Morotaka, notwithstanding the multitude of your shortcomings, you yet managed to turn the tables upon your accuser. What behaviour! What audacity! Even I in my retirement have heard the circumstances. That it should have reached my ears is a sure sign that the story is common property, and what the general public knows must of course have reached the ears of the mighty Lord Shigémori. You must know that Lord Shigémori is the wisest man alive and, albeit his lordship does not let his feelings show in his countenance, yet one can hardly doubt but that his lordship has given you up as a good-for-nothing. Without the protection of his lordship our house is bound sooner or later to come to ruin. I grieve for this. You must know how true the story is better than any one else. The report goes abroad that your boon companion, Yoshitsugu, like you was carrying on an affair with a maid-of-honour. Her name is Karumo and she is pregnant by him. It is further asserted that his brother, Moritsugu, keeps him confined to his house on the score of pretended sickness. If I follow his example and confine or disown you, our house, since I have no other son, will become extinct. How can I on your account suffer our house to come to extinction? Our house which, for generation after generation, has served in vassalage the great family of Taira. It had been my hope to continue my life in comfortable seclusion on the pension graciously bestowed upon me by my lord and to have devoted my remaining years to the attainment of spiritual enlightenment and to prayer, that I may live happily in the Pure Land with your dear mother. Alas! Your behaviour has entirely undone my hopes; nay, your sins will bring us to hell. Undutiful wretch!"—he burst into warm tears—"but what good can come of reviling a devil? From to-day on I return to my secular life and once again serve Lord Shigémori as warrior. I am no longer Sairai but Katsuyori! My seven long years of abstinence and devotion are now at an end!"

With these words he slipped from off him the clerical robe and assumed the eboshi and the kariginu. Takiguchi, overwhelmed by tears, clung to him exclaiming, "Not so, father! I declare to you that I will once for all give up my love. I will start a new life and serve my lord to the best of my ability. Pray forgive my errors, father."

The old man pushed him aside.

"A father may well forgive you, but how can we apologize to my lord and to the world at large? I hardly see how you can remain in your present position." He rose to his feet and took both his swords in his hand.

"Listen, my men," he cried with an air of determination, "make yourselves ready to follow me! Saitō Katsuyori is once again about to serve Lord Shigémori as a warrior!"

With that he entered the inner chamber. Takiguchi was at his wits' end. His sobbing was followed by a melancholy reverie. At length he roused himself, slapped his thigh and thus communed with his spirit: "That's how it stands, is it? My tears are vain. The reproaches of my father are reasonable, but what is done is done. Nothing will be gained by weeping over a past error. I must do something to atone for my fault. Should I attain to spiritual rebirth my wise and compassionate lord would pardon me and my past would be wiped out. But ah, what shame it is to think how I have stood in the way of my father's spiritual enlightenment and of the peace of my mother's soul! That is indeed a greater sin than the Eight Crimes, the Five Crimes and the Ten Evils rolled in one. Well, let me follow the example of Mongaku, who took to the priesthood in consequence of the great love he bore a lady and in time was enabled to lead all his relations to the Pure Land. Life is after all but a dream; reputation and infamy illusions; hatred and compassion but reflections quivering upon the water. Let me hope that my mistake in love will prove but a first step upon the path of spiritual enlightenment. Yokobué will doubtless grieve at my resolution. But she will offer up prayers to meet me and I too will pray for future happiness until such a time as we two are again joined together in the Pure Land. Now is the time for me to make my resolution"—he drew his dirk, cut off his queue and, reverently taking up his father's clerical robe, slipped it over his clothes—"I thank you, father, for your kindly hint. My living father, my dead mother, my sweet-heart and I—do we not all aim at attaining a new life in the lotus flower! Namu Amida Buddha." He prepared himself for a journey, then stole out to find his way to some Buddhist temple.

Karumo, having repeatedly met her lover in secret, now found herself, to her great mortification, pregnant. The scandal had spread beyond court circles. Very much ashamed of herself, she again and again begged dismissal, but Morotaka prevented her discharge. She remained in her chamber; her comrades were strictly forbidden to pay her visits of sympathy; two or three maids were permitted to serve her. Under such circumstances the girl's heart was heavy with shame and grief; her tears fell without ceasing.

One day Morotaka, followed by his retainer Iwamura Gengo and by servants bearing a palanquin, intruded upon her in her room.

"Karumo," said he, assuming a severe air, "this is indeed licentious conduct of yours, that you, a woman in the Imperial service, should over and over again have stolen out of the strictly guarded palace gate to a clandestine meeting until at last you have become great with child. You presume too much in begging for your mere dismissal after the committal of such grave offences. You will have heard, I am sure, that your lover Yoshitsugu is confined to his room by his brother's command. As to your own offence, forasmuch as you are in the Imperial service, the laws require that you be heavily punished. But for all that, my heart, which has been set on you all these years, remains the same toward you as before the event. Come, will you not change your mind and, mindful of all my notes to you, tell me in one word that you are mine? Pronounce the word and I will at once take you to my residence. You shall become my wife and be honoured as such, and this palanquin shall be your bridal palanquin. If, however, you answer 'no,' this palanquin shall be a prisoner's palanquin. Answer 'yes' or 'no' promptly. Remember that this pressure I put upon you is entirely because I am enamoured of you."

The old satyr, who had spoken in a coaxing tone, now concluded and cast sheep's eyes toward the lady.

"It is very kind of you," answered Karumo with a forced smile, "not only not to hate me, though my offence is heavy, but to offer to take me to yourself as your lady. Many thanks for your attentions; I am minded to become your wife, but I very much fear me that Yoshitsugu will hardly give his consent. What would you do should he refuse?"

"Have no fears on that score. No difficulty would be experienced in disposing of that fellow on the pretext of an Imperial order. Well then, we may consider the bargain struck. Be happy my girl."

"Shall I arrange for a discreet abortion or may I give birth to my child, sir?"

"An arrangement of that sort is apt to be dangerous to the mother, so I won't have it. A child is indeed a somewhat unacceptable remembrance of an unfortunate episode; but for my sweet girl's sake I would have it enjoy an easy and natural birth. And if it be a boy I will adopt it as my son and heir."

"There's the rub, sir. This child is Yoshitsugu's son. When he grows up and discovers you are his father's murderer I hardly see how he can fail to plan your death. What would you do then?"

"Oh, kill the young devil. Don't worry about that!"

He had hardly answered when Karumo angrily broke in.

"Do you indeed deem me such a nerveless kind of woman as would be contented to remain the wife of the murderer of her sweetheart and child? The devil take you! Love is everything with a real man or woman. For its sweet sake one takes no care for one's life. It was not because I wished to escape death or preserve my name untarnished that I sought dismissal. My object was, the displeasure of Yoshitsugu's brother being known to me, to visit Yoshitsugu and share his fate. Were I a woman forsaken by all the Gods and by Buddha, were I, I say, such a woman, I might consent to be your wife. Nothing however is further from my present intentions. Most willingly would I forfeit my life for my sweet love's sake. Wreak your vengeance on me, you rascal! Take your fill of it! My only grief is to imagine with what severity you may visit yourself upon Yoshitsugu, doing so under the pretence of an Imperial order. Mean and merciless man that you are! Do you think you can live for ever? Everyone is doomed to die once. Do you imagine there is no future world? That divine justice knows no way to retribution? If you think so, you are but a thoughtless shallow-pate."

With such reproaches the luckless girl sought to overwhelm him until at last she sank to the floor, weeping the bitterest tears. These many insults had their effect upon Morotaka, who flew into a tremendous passion.

"Iwamura Gengo!" he cried. "This wench's reckoning is made up. Away with her to Funaoka-Yama and do with her as I bade you!"

"I will, my lord."

Gengo gripped the damsel by one arm and by the hair, forced her face down toward the floor and thrust her into the palanquin. Her maids, in tears, did their best to prevent this, but Gengo, either pushing them aside or kicking them down, motioned to the servants to carry the palanquin away to Funaoka-Yama. He himself headed the little procession.

Takiguchi had sought refuge in the Ōjōin, a Buddhist temple in the farthest corner of the lonely country district of Saga, which lies many miles west of the capital. He entered the priesthood, assumed the sacerdotal name of Saishun, but soon found the temple was too near the capital for him to be able to apply himself wholly to the life of devotion. Tidings of what passed in the capital occasionally reached his ear and disturbed his quiet study of the scriptures. He therefore resolved to go to the great monastery of Kōyasan, one of the holiest spots in Japan, and which is at a great distance from the capital; but though he had resolved upon this change, he still lingered in the Ōjōin and nightly visited cemeteries in the neighbourhood of the capital. In these cemeteries it was his practice loudly to chant prayers, striking with a stick at the same time upon a small bell that hung about his neck. This he did by way of bidding an eternal farewell to his birth-place and by way of praying for the peace of his dead mother's spirit and his father's future bliss.

One evening Takiguchi found himself in such a cemetery at Funaoka-Yama. He prayed at all the new made graves in succession. Here the smoke from one cremation died away; yonder arose the smoke from another—both smokes symbolizing the uncertainty of human life. He who had been left behind by one who had already taken the journey of the spirit, now, in his turn, left behind another fellow-traveller who would follow him the next day. Takiguchi found himself pleased in reflecting that he had become a priest praying for the departed. Again he sounded his bell, fervently praying the while, "Namu Amida! Namu Amida! Namu Amida Buddha! Show thy mercy upon all creatures. May all aspire to Buddhahood. Amen."

At that moment a warrior appeared accompanied by some soldiers who bore a palanquin. The warrior glanced hither and thither about the burial-ground, then, selecting a spot overshadowed by a tall pine-tree, ordered the palanquin to be set down.

"Another dead person," Takiguchi thought to himself. "Poor soul—already hastening on the journey to Hades. But sooner or later one and all are bound to follow him." And, unnoticed, he murmured a prayer for the supposed deceased.

The soldiers dragged the occupant forth from the palanquin. To Takiguchi's great astonishment it proved not a corpse but a damsel of noble appearance.

All agog to know what was about to happen, our hero hid himself behind a tombstone. Iwamura Gengo, for it was none but he, cried, "Now, Karumo, face your last moment! Once your head falls all is over. It is my master Lord Morotaka's pleasure that you be beheaded at once, but it seems to me a distinct pity that this should occur. Come, can't you see how cruel it is to let the child now in your womb be slain along with you, thus suffering it not to see the light? Neither living nor dead can you expect to meet your sweetheart again, so as far as that matter is concerned there is nothing to choose between them. But if you consent to become Lord Morotaka's lady there is not one of us who will not regard you with the respect due to you as our mistress. Ponder the question well before you answer."

"A saucy fellow! You will remember I refused to answer even your master—why should I change my mind? Don't disturb my preparations for the future life by provoking me at the last moment, but cut off my head and be quick about it."

"A stiff-necked woman! Die then!"

Gengo drew his sword and took station behind her, but, before his blade could flash down, Takiguchi rushed forward and shielded Karumo.

"One moment, sir!"

"Out, fool of a priest! Do you dare plead for this girl's life? No, that's impossible."

"That is not my meaning, sir. I am a priest who nightly visits these cemeteries to pray for the dead. You are, it would appear, about to kill this woman for some grave offence. 'Sin reaps its reward'; that is inevitable. But you have said the woman is pregnant. Are you going to slay the guiltless with the guilty? What do you think can be your reward for such a deed? We do not know the child's age, but as many months as it has lived will it have patron Gods and Buddhas. Queen Maya's Scripture runs, that the wrath of such patrons and Gods descends upon the infanticide, who will presently be seized with an incurable disease or perish by the sword, cut off before a year is out. Nevertheless it is sometimes necessary for a warrior to kill a pregnant woman. In such a case he can divert the divine wrath from his head by the triple repetition of a mystic formula before he commits the deed. There's nothing for it apparently but to slay this poor girl; but, inasmuch as I am acquainted with the formula, it would be wanton cruelty on my part not to try and save you from such punishment. Of a truth I feel very sorry for you and that is the reason why I have momentarily stayed your hand."

"Are these things true?" exclaimed Gengo, overcome by surprise and fear. "I never dreamed of such things. A thousand thanks to you, kind and reverend sir. If it's not asking too much of you, would you please be so good as to teach me the formula?"

"I learned this formula after three weeks' practice of religious austerities and it is one of my greatest secrets; but I can hardly refuse to instruct you in it when it is a case of sudden death for you if I do not. Be sure, however, never to teach it to others."

Having thus cautioned him, Takiguchi whispered in the warrior's ear, "Riken sokuzé Mida-gō (The title of Amida is a sharp sword to cut off thy sins with) Isshō shōnen zaikaijo (If thou once sayest 'Namu Amida' thou shalt be absolved from all thy sins). Repeat this formula thrice before you kill this woman and no evil shall come to you after the deed. Should evil fall on you, however small, I will make atonement for it."

"Dear me! How hard the formula is! I shall never be able to learn it. Isn't there a shorter form?—one easier to learn?"

"Hand me your sword. I'll enchant its blade by repeating the formula over it.

And that will be as good as if you repeated the formula itself."

"Excellent! Please be so good as to enchant my sword for me."

So saying, Gengo, without the least misgiving, handed the delighted Takiguchi the drawn sword.

"Well, sir," said Takiguchi sarcastically, "I observe that after all you won't need the formula or any other thing of that kind; for since the girl is now not going to be killed neither retribution nor curse will fall upon you."

"Impostor of a priest!" roared Gengo, flying into a great rage. "Was this all a trick to rob me of my sword? How can I suffer you to remain in possession of that sword? What a fool you are to lose your life in the senseless attempt to save the life of a sinner! Prepare to die!"

He sprang at Takiguchi. Takiguchi dodged.

"Come, come," he cried, "it's unreasonable of you, a mere layman, to try and recover what has come into a priest's possession. I will now proceed to take this girl too"—he placed his hand upon Karumo's—"Taste the sharpness of Amida's sword!"

With these words he lifted the sword.

"Insolent priest!" cried Gengo and the soldiers and precipitated themselves upon him. Hither and thither Takiguchi whirled the blade. His adversaries, finding themselves no match for him, were not long in taking to their heels. Gengo, however, eager to recover his sword, ambushed himself behind a large tombstone. Presently the soldiers returned and attacked Takiguchi from right and left simultaneously. Again Takiguchi whirled the blade with such dexterity that, as he advanced upon them, they were at last reduced to standing at bay against the tombstone. Takiguchi pressed them and suddenly the tombstone, heavy as it was, toppled over upon the hidden Gengo and crushed him to death. The panic-stricken soldiers sought safety in flight. Takiguchi returned to the girl.

"Can you recognize me, Karumo Dono?"

"Can I believe that you are Master Takiguchi? A thousand thanks to you. But for your assistance I should by now be dead; but I cannot suppress my surprise at finding you a priest."

"We will speak of such things at leisure. Here we should linger no further." Takiguchi hoisted the girl on his back and hurried away.

III

Shigémori, Lord Keeper of the Privy Seal, who was Leniency and Sympathy incarnate, not only refused to sit in judgment upon the misbehaviour of Yoshitsugu and Takiguchi, but even went so far as to feign perfect ignorance of the scandal. Among his retainers, and among his younger warriors in particular, the affair was a subject of frequent gossip. "Poor soul!" Takiguchi's friends whispered, "Takiguchi, led astray by the wanton Yoshitsugu, has come to ruin. Yoshitsugu is the cause of all his troubles." While those who sympathized with Yoshitsugu murmured, "Yoshitsugu, through keeping company with the lecherous Takiguchi, has earned a bad name for himself. A man is known by the company he keeps, good or bad. Yoshitsugu's brother, Moritsugu, has also lost in reputation on account of Takiguchi. Moritsugu's anguish is sure sooner or later to give rise to a quarrel between him and Takiguchi's father, Katsuyori."

Subject to this tittle-tattle, which rose whenever and wherever Shigémori's retainers were gathered together, Katsuyori and Moritsugu became little by little estranged, to such an extent that at last a hidden feud arose between them. One day Moritsugu came to duty in the drawing-room of Shigémori's palace and was there greeted by those young samurai who sympathized with his brother. They saluted him with enthusiasm.

"Master Moritsugu, we are delighted to see you. It grieves us to hear of your brother's lot. We young men are apt to be led into youthful follies by bad companions. We wish to say how deeply we sympathize with you and your brother."

"Many thanks for your sympathy, my friends, but you are misinformed. The truth is, Yoshitsugu is seriously ill."

Hardly had Moritsugu seated himself when Katsuyori, who as ill luck would have it happened to be his appointed comrade on duty for this day, appeared. He wore an eboshi (official head-gear) pressed down to the eyes to conceal his shaven head. Takiguchi's friends gave him a hearty welcome.

"We hear your son, Takiguchi Dono, has forsaken the world. What a pity! But it is always one's friends who lead one to fame or to ruin and, as the Chinese proverb runs, 'To such as possesses three good friends, three bad Dame Fortune also sends.' He's a lucky man who never meets either a bad friend or a whirlwind. We can well imagine how you feel towards your former friend."

Katsuyori made his salute to Moritsugu, then, like the haughty old samurai he was, took a seat higher than Moritsugu's.

"How now! Priest Sairai!" exclaimed the indignant Moritsugu, "I can't but think you, aged eyes fail to recognize me. Know then that I am Moritsugu. You have taken the wrong seat. Take a lower."

"Eh?" replied Katsuyori in scorn. "Believe me, my aged eyes don't fail to recognize my colleague's face. Albeit you are not yet well on in years, your memory seems to fail you with regrettable ease. Kindly recall to yourself that you are of the Fifth Grade in court rank, while I am of the Fourth. There is therefore nothing incorrect in my sitting above you. A very forgetful person evidently! A few drops of medicine might indeed be efficacious in restoring your health and memory."

"Insolent dotard! Take a lower seat and be quick about it, or I will pull you down to a lower. And if I resort to force your hat may slip off and your shiny pate appear, to your shame and humiliation. Perhaps you would prefer that, eh?"

So saying, Moritsugu pressed against the old warrior.

"So you despise me because of my old age? Seize me by the arm if you choose. What new-fangled notion of etiquette is it that requires a samurai of the Fourth Grade to sit below another of the Fifth? Where is the authority enables you to insist upon it? Come, give me a reason, you green boy!"

"You're in your dotage all right," returned Moritsugu, in no whit discomposed. "Fourth Grade, Coarse Grade! True you are of the Fourth Grade, but aren't you also a lay-brother and consequently out of office and service? In point of fact it's your son Takiguchi's turn to be on duty, but there are those that say that, ashamed of his past bad behaviour and consequent ill reputation, he has seen fit to forsake the ways of the wicked world. It is as well that he has done so. Had he remained in office, any young samurai who might have continued as his friends and colleagues could only have followed his bad example and shared his degradation. Takiguchi's punishment, however, depends upon the pleasure of our lord, and whether he will be ordered to commit suicide or will be beheaded none can tell. I understand that, acting on the supposition that your son's forsaking of the world saved him from punishment, you have returned to secular life and are once more in his lordship's service. To-day I meet you in your second service for the first time. You see there has been no change in our turns of service for some considerable time and to-day Takiguchi and I are to be on duty together. You appear then to-day as Takiguchi's substitute. Now I, Moritsugu, am of the Fifth Grade, while Takiguchi is of the Sixth; and I have never sat below your son. Accordingly you, as his substitute, should sit below me. If I am wrong pray correct me at once."

"So!" sneered Katsuyori. "No more cavilling, please, about the ordering of our seats. You would seem to blame me for having permitted Takiguchi to forsake the world sooner than await our lord's punishment, but, if it be our lord's pleasure to have him recalled for self-slaughter or for decapitation, I can so call him back. Since when has it become impossible to punish one who has forsaken the world? As for your brother, Yoshitsugu, is it not everyone's secret that you have confined him to your house, alleging illness, the better in your cowardice to cover up the ill name his bad behaviour has earned him? It is as well that you have done so. Were such a man as he allowed to remain in office, the young samurai, his friends and colleagues, would be bound to follow his bad example and this would lead to their utter degradation. But were our lord, out of his great mercy, to employ him again without first punishing him, you would, I suppose, have the unblushing impudence to permit him to return to service among the other samurai. No man of honour of course could do such a thing, but we all know that, as the saying goes, the scarlet-faced ape laughs at the golden face of the Lord Buddha when he marks the difference in their complexions!"

"Well, well. And another saying goes, the crab who walks sideways laughs at the man who walks forward."

"And the green persimmon, so they say, laughs at the sweet persimmon in the beak of the crow."

"And the man crucified head downward, so I've heard, dies of laughing at an exposed head because it's set forsooth below his feet."

"You seem to speak from experience."

"You perhaps have never seen steel? Shall I let you have a taste of it?"

"Do you think you can do that?"

"Why not? I will oblige you this minute if you wish it."

The excited couple prepared to draw their swords and forthwith all the other samurai, taking sides, assumed defiant attitudes. A period of breathless suspense followed. It was broken by the startling announcement that a messenger from the Empress had this moment arrived. A moment later Shigémori made his appearance and seated himself on the dais. All kneeled reverently. Morotaka, for it was he, addressed Lord Shigémori.

"I beg to deliver my message to your lordship. Recently two court ladies, named respectively Yokobué and Karumo, indulged themselves with Takiguchi and Yoshitsugu. This has occasioned great scandal and disaffection at court. Furthermore, Karumo became pregnant and could no longer remain in service. Her Imperial Majesty, grievously offended with her, ordered me to put a period to her existence. Finding it impossible to disobey the Imperial command, I ordered the damsel to be taken to Funaoka-Yama for execution. Her decapitation was imminent when an unknown stranger, suddenly falling upon my retainer, Iwamura Gengo the executioner, murdered him and carried the prisoner whither none knows. It can hardly be doubted that the rogue in question is Karumo's lover Yoshitsugu. This heinous crime, by which the law has been set at naught and the Imperial will flouted, has much incensed Her Majesty. She requires that Yoshitsugu be instantly executed. Yokobué is to be beheaded at court. Her Majesty will let your lordship know later on the arrangements made for this ceremony. Allow me to repeat once more that it is Her Majesty's pleasure that Yoshitsugu be forthwith beheaded."

"An infamous order!" exclaimed Shigémori after a brief silence. "The like of which has never been heard of before. Izumi Shikibu indulged herself with Hirai-no-Yasumasa and later with Tachibana-no-Michisada, by whom she became the mother of Koshikibu, the poetess. There are the cases too of Akazomé Emon and Nakano Kwampaku; also of Murasaki Shikibu with Nishinomiya-no-Sadaijin. All the above affairs took place while the ladies were in the Imperial service and yet Jôtô-Mon-in, the Empress then reigning, inflicted upon them no punishment whatever. Thus, not only were these ladies spared any disgrace, but have left behind them undying names as authoresses. With these precedents before my eyes, I cannot but deem the present Imperial order of an excessive severity. Surely, Morotaka, you and your sister Lady Tonasé must have joined in remonstrating with Her Majesty?"

"Yes, my lord, my sister and I again and again importuned our Imperial mistress, but with no result. Since Her Majesty is your lordship's sister and comes of a military family she ordains everything according to the manners and customs of the military classes."

"There you err. The Imperial order is contrary to the rules of the military class. I would draw your attention to the fact that the executioner Gengo, in having Karumo carried off, did not act according to the manners that obtain among warriors. Do you suppose that the strict guard kept over a criminal with drawn spears and naked halberds is merely an arrangement made for the safety of the condemned? Is it not also to fend off any violence that may be indulged in by his comrades and relatives? It appears to me to have been an uncommon piece of carelessness on his part that Gengo should not only have permitted his prisoner to be snatched from him, but also to have suffered the loss of his own life. The corpse of so foolish a warrior should undoubtedly be crucified; his relatives should be punished; and you, his lord, required to commit suicide. Such is the rule of the military classes. The Imperial order is against the law inasmuch as it is neither in accordance with the rule of the military class nor with that of the court. To me it appears quite unreasonable; but Her Majesty's pleasure is no less binding than His Majesty's order. Yoshitsugu shall therefore be beheaded during the course of the day. Moritsugu, order your brother to come here! Now, Morotaka, so Yokobué is to be executed at court, eh? Who is to be her executioner? I feel nervous about the matter. Should she be carried off, even as Karumo was, I can well imagine what a scandal would arise at court. You will return therefore to Her Majesty and inform her that I shall send an inspector and an executioner. Such is Shigémori's reply to the Imperial order. And by the way, now I'm on the subject of love affairs, I hear there is a samurai—his name escapes me at this moment—who has written notes to a court lady and who now, out of jealousy caused by her rejection of his suit, is attempting to avenge himself upon her and her lover. There is a villain if you like! If he does not submit himself to punishment by you let me know, Morotaka, for I would have you know that it is my intention to have him heavily punished."

Cowed by these words, Morotaka could but murmur, "Yes, yes, my lord." A cold perspiration bathed his body. He made a bewildered bow, then, stumbling over the skirt of his hakama and slipping on the mats, precipitantly withdrew.

Luckless Yoshitsugu! Promptly obeying his brother's urgent summons, never dreaming of the doom in store for him, he dressed himself completely albeit his hair remained in an unrepresentable condition. He hastened to Shigémori's mansion and presented himself at the hall of reception. Moritsugu said to him, "His lordship's order is that you leave your two swords here and go round to the shirasu."

Instantly the frightful truth flashed upon the mind of the young samurai, but he smiled as he answered, "Certainly, sir." His composed air as he removed his swords showed that he was prepared for the worst.

"A pattern of knighthood," murmured all the samurai present. Their eyes glistened with tears of admiration.

Shigémori bent his gaze upon the young man and said kindly enough, "I am delighted to see you, Yoshitsugu, but I greatly regret that I must tell you that Her Imperial Majesty, in her displeasure at your misbehaviour, has ordered that you be at once beheaded. Know therefore that there is no hope of reprieve. Alas, my poor friend! Since you have served me from your childhood with all possible faithfulness I very much wish that I could at least permit you to commit self-dispatch, but I cannot act in a manner contrary to Her Majesty's pleasure. By reason however of the sympathy and love that a lord feels toward his retainer, I will slay you with my own hands. Therefore bid farewell to your brother and your colleagues and quickly make your way round to the inner courtyard."

So saying Shigémori rose and went within.

Yoshitsugu looked round the company and thus addressed them: "My brother and my friends, pray listen to me a moment. I wish to record the shame my misbehaviour causes me and for which I richly deserve capital punishment. Yet, shamed though I am, I deem myself fortunate in that I am to be slain by His Excellency Lord Shigémori, who is at once my own liege lord and the wisest personage in all Japan. Moreover his lordship saw fit to address some words of gracious consolation and compassion to me, which are indeed of more comfort to me than the ministrations of a holy priest. Dearly do I wish to live on in this world that, if the need arose, I might fight to the death in defence of his lordship, so to requite his favours toward me. It is the consideration of such an interest that alone worries me on the eve of my death. Farewell, farewell, my dearest brother and my most honourable friends."

Having spoken these few words he made his way toward the inner courtyard. Every warrior present, both his friends and those who had aforesaid entertained no feeling for him—and his brother who was already completely resigned to his condemnation—everyone of them was moved to silent tears.

After a brief space Moritsugu exclaimed, casting the while a scornful glance at Katsuyori, "I am a glad man! Had Yoshitsugu forsaken the world, not only would he have missed being favoured with his lordship's comfort and the privilege of dying at his honourable hands, but he would have suffered the humiliation of having his shaven head cut from his body by a nameless soldier. My brother's manner of death is truly worthy of a warrior."

At this moment Morihisa, the chief retainer of Shigémori, emerged from the inner apartments carrying two head-boxes in his hand.

"Here, Katsuyori," he said with an air of authority, "his lordship has slain Yoshitsugu and has placed his head in this box, which has been sealed. Your orders are to take this box to the court, to break the seal, to examine the head and to display it to Her Imperial Majesty. When you have done this, you are to decapitate Yokobué, place her head in this box and bring it back. You, Moritsugu, are ordered to act as inspector at her execution. You are both to proceed at once upon your errand."

"His lordship shall be promptly obeyed," answered Katsuyori respectfully.

He took up the two boxes and rose to his feet. Moritsugu also rose.

"Katsuyori," said he, "dare you accept the order? Can you really be going to examine my brother's head and decapitate Yokobué?"

"Why not? Dare you not act as inspector?"

"Of course, I certainly intend to. And I would have you know that if your manner of head examination and of decapitation is in any way faulty I shall not fail to report it to his lordship. You understand?"

"I do indeed. And if you are at fault as sheriff, I in my turn will not fail to take notice of it. You understand?"

"Yes. We have given each other our words. Don't forget that. Come with me."

"Go before me."

The two samurai, glaring upon each other, proceeded on their way. They resembled two hardy pine-trees growing on a rugged rock, the one old and the other young, which struggle with one another in the storm.

Under the early winter twilight, rain mixed with hail was falling. From the boughs of the trees in the gardens of the Empress' palace the scarlet embroidery of the leaves had been loosened; already the chrysanthemums had faded; the crickets shrilled sadly. That the tedium caused by the weary atmosphere might be shaken off, the Empress thus addressed her maids-of-honour: "Backgammon does not hold my interest since the die does not fall as I wish. Hentsugi is so difficult; kaiavasé chills our hands; what do you say to a game of poem-cards, my girls?"

"A merry game, Your Majesty. Quick, let's play it!"

The young girls promptly seated themselves, produced the cards and spread them on the mats. So engaged, they chattered blithely and glanced about in all directions. Not so Yokobué—who, all melancholy, pined for her lover—for she had continued in service despite the fact that her sleeves were forever wet with her tears. The Empress, in her mercy, had extended her sympathy and tenderness to the damsel and had even comforted her with kind words. Observing Yokobué's mood and touched by it, the Empress had a happy idea. "Somehow," she said to the party, "I feel that I would prefer not to take part in the game, but to be merely the reader. I think you will find an increased interest in the game if you practise a sort of divination by the poems you pick up, a divination to inform you whether your wishes are to become facts or no. If I were you I would put up an inward petition to the gods of poetry to grant that you have your favourite cards in your hand. Well, are you ready? I am going to read the first lines. This is Semi Maru's poem:

"The stranger who has travelled far,
The friend with welcome smile,
All sorts of men who come and go'

"I would have Yokobué get the last half of this. Don't let the others pick up this card, my dear. Look sharp!"

"I must get it, I must get it," Yokobué thought to herself. "It runs:

"Meet at this mountain stile,—
They meet and rest awhile."

"And it seems to suggest our happy reunion."

Eagerly she sought the card, her heart beating violently with hope and fear. But Kozakura, another girl, too quick for her, picked it up to the disappointment of both the Empress and Yokobué.

"Come, this is the Minister Fujiwarano-Sanékata's poem:

"Though love, like blisters made from leaves
Grown on Mount Ibuki
Torments me more than I can say."

Hardly had the Empress read when Izayoi picked up the card and read:

"My lady shall not see How she is paining me."

"This poem does not apply to my case. I'm certain nobody pines for me."

"But we are not so sure!" cried the other girls, laughing.

"Now Lady Isé's poem:

"The double cherry-trees which grew
At Nara in past days
Now beautify this palace, and"

"The last lines symbolize good fortune and happiness. Now Yokobué!"

"Thank you, Your Majesty," responded Yokobué. But Ukon, hurrying her, picked the card up and read:

"Their blossoms all ablaze Perfume the royal ways."

"That's lucky!" she exclaimed. "The poem must mean that the clothes I am going to receive at the year-end will be as beautiful as these cherry-blossoms."

"The next is the poem by the Mother of the Minister of State:

"How difficult it is for men
Not to forget the past!"

"At least I can't fail to pick one up!" cried Yokobué excitedly. She took up the card and read mechanically:

"I fear my husband's love for me
Is disappearing fast;
This day must be my last."

"Oh, I hate this!" she exclaimed regretfully. "What a luckless omen!"

"Here, girls, is the poem by the Mother of Udaishō Michitsuna:

"Throughout the long and dreary night
I lie awake and moan;"

The bewildered Yokobué again picked up the correct card. It read:

"How desolate my chamber feels,
How weary I have grown
Of being left alone."

The exactness of this description was too much for her; she burst into sobs.

"The High Priest Gyōson sings:

"In lonely solitude I dwell,
No human face I see;"

"I myself will take up this one."
With this the Empress took up the card and read:

"And so we two must sympathize,
O, mountain cherry-tree;
I have no friend but thee."

"Don't say 'I have no friend but thee,' Yokobué," continued the Empress, gazing with kindness into the girl's face, "for you see you have a sympathetic friend in me."

Yokobué wept in joy and gratitude.

"Come, girls, be quick. Kakinomoto-no-Hitomaru's poem:

"'Long is the mountain pleasant's tail
That curves down in its flight;'"

Another girl picked up the card which read:

"'But longer still it seems to me,
Left in my lonely plight,
Is this unending night.'"

"Don't be despondent, girl," said the Empress in a soothing tone. "I will not long permit you to be left in solitude. Now, girls, Prince Kentoku's poem:

"'I dare not hope my lady-love
Will smile on me again;'"

It's Kohagi, I'll be bound, who has picked up the last half:

"'She knows no pity and my life
I care not to retain Since all my prayers are vain.'"

"You are still only fourteen. Never put yourself in such a position as may cause you to exclaim, 'My life I care not to retain.' The Imperial adviser Yakamochi's poem:

"'When on the Magpies' Bridge I see
The Hoar-frost King has cast
His sparkling mantle, well I know.'"

"Heaven!" said Kojijū, smiling, as she took up the latter lines:

"'The night is nearly past, Daylight approaches fast.'"

"Even now I feel drowsy enough over my nightly vigil. How much more drowsy I should feel if I had to watch till daylight came!"

"The retired Emperor Sutoku's poem:

"'The rock divides the flood in two.
Both streams with might and main
Go tumbling down the waterfall,'"

"How interesting this poem is! The second half reads:

"'But well I know the twain
Will soon unite again.'"

"Suggestive surely of the successful attainment of every desire. Can't you see it? Look, look, it's there!"

So saying the Empress glanced at Yokobué. The grateful girl, pushing some of her comrades aside, picked up the card.

"I have it!"

Overjoyed at this happy omen, she pressed the card to her breast, and the Empress showed the delight with which she read the girl's feelings.

At this moment an aged lady of the court entered and announced that Superintendent Morotaka would shortly be present, having come on some urgent matter which required a personal interview with the Empress.

"Indeed?" said the Empress, amazed. "Why doesn't he speak through Lady Tonasé? What can be the matter, I wonder. Now, Yokobué, hide yourself under this awhile"—she bade the girl lie down and concealed her under the fuségo—"don't speak, not a sound."

Then she spread a silk garment over the fuségo, drew it close to her back and was sitting at her ease when, a little later, Morotaka presented himself wearing an assumed air of dejection.

"I regret to have to inform Your Majesty that a melancholy message has arrived from His Excellency Lord Shigémori. His Excellency, having heard that Karumo has been discharged on account of her pregnancy caused by a love affair with Yoshitsugu, has seen fit to slay Yoshitsugu with his own hands and has ordered Katsuyori to bring Yoshitsugu's head hither to display it to Your Majesty. The old messenger is now waiting with it. Furthermore, His Excellency wishes to declare that he is of the opinion that Takiguchi deserves the same fate, yet, inasmuch as he has forsaken the world and his present whereabouts are unknown, His Excellency considers that Yokobué should be decapitated in his stead. 'If Her Majesty refuses to deliver Yokobué'—such were the words His Excellency spoke to Katsuyori—"it will be your duty to hunt out and behead Takiguchi, but do your utmost to prevail upon Her Majesty to deliver up Yokobué, then decapitate her and bring her head to me." Acting on these orders, Katsuyori and Moritsugu are at hand in respective capacities of executioner and sheriff; they await Your Majesty's pleasure at the middle gate. This is indeed in my opinion a cruel punishment and one unworthy of His Excellency, but against it there is no remedy. I venture to assert that Your Majesty had better yield to His Excellency's wish and permit them to behead Yokobué. Poor girl! She has served Your Majesty so faithfully; I am saddened at the thought."

He let fall a few crocodile tears. For a while the Empress was speechless with astonishment. Yokobué, struck with terror and grief, closed her mouth with her sleeve lest she should utter a cry. The tears ran down her face. "It grieves me to have to say such a thing of my brother," exclaimed the Empress, "but verily I believe Lord Shigémori must be out of his senses. To indulge the passion of love with a married person is extremely wicked and Sakya Muni counsels us against it. Sincere love, however, is the root of faithfulness and in the sacred art of poesy love is considered as the most important of themes. In days of old the court noble Ariwara-no-Narihira carried on an intrigue with a virgin princess who was at that time purifying herself for the priesthood at the great Isé Shrine; and albeit his conduct was brought to light, yet was he acquitted because of his fame as a poet. This precedent clearly displays to us that the punishment meted out by Lord Shigémori is not in accordance with the rules that regulate the lives of court nobles. The celebrated authoresses Izumi Shikibu, Koshikibu, Murasaki Shikibu and Akazomé Emon again took lovers to themselves while in the Imperial service; yet Generals Yorimitsu and Yorinobu, the actual rulers in those days, did not punish them. The proposed execution of Yokobué therefore cannot be in accordance with the rules regulating the life of the military classes. Whatever her misbehaviour, how is it possible for me to suffer Yokobué to be killed, who has served me with all diligence and loyalty? I and Yokobué, as mistress and maid, are tied with the Karma relations of the three existences. On no account will I consent to her execution, nay, even though I run the risk of losing my rank as Empress and my very life by so doing."—She put her hand behind her back and took a firm hold of Yokobué's fingers—"Morotaka, from to-day henceforth you would do well to consider me as Yokobué's sister or her mother. Never will I permit my daughter to be slain or my sister to be beheaded. Sympathize with me and be so good as to plead with Lord Shigémori on her behalf."

Overwhelmed with gratitude and writhing with anxiety, Yokobué reverently pressed the Empress' hand to her forehead. Morotaka, however, remained unmoved.

"I fear, Your Majesty," he returned, "that the executioner and the sheriff, who have come hither for a definite purpose, will not be readily persuaded to depart. Shall I tell them that, as Yokobué's death is against the will of Your Majesty, they are to hunt out Takiguchi and decapitate him?"

'Twas with difficulty that Yokobué restrained herself. She made as if to emerge from her hiding-place, but the Empress, covering her face with her flowing sleeve, looked back and signed to the girl to do no such thing. The girl drew herself up on her knees and whispered in the Empress' ear between her sobs, "I beg Your Majesty's pardon for seeming to reject your mercy, but Morotaka Dono says that if my life is spared my sweetheart's will be taken. May I ask Your Majesty to deliver me up and thus save Takiguchi from death?"

A brief silence ensued; then the Empress said to Morotaka, "I understand that it is Lord Shigémori's will that either Yokobué or Takiguchi shall be slain; very well. You tell me that two warriors have come, one as executioner and one as sheriff. Now, girls, bid the two warriors enter the neighbouring chamber, as I have something to impart to them from behind the lowered blind. You, too, Morotaka, are to listen to me."

The Empress wiped away her tears, then took her position on a low seat and in a posture full of dignity behind a bamboo blind. Beauty, awe and majesty emanated from her countenance and bearing. Presently the warriors were announced. The Empress' voice was clearly heard.

"Welcome, both of you. Albeit Lord Shigémori is my elder brother, yet he is now my subject. Despite the fact that he occupies the exalted position of Lord Keeper of the Privy Seal, he has with his own hands beheaded Yoshitsugu. I cannot but think he is bereft of his senses. I count it an outrageous thing moreover that he should have dispatched persons of brutal office to the court. Is it nothing to him that he should desecrate the Imperial Palace with bloodshed? How can I suffer that poor girl Yokobué, who has tended me from her youth up, cruelly to perish by the executioner's sword? Albeit a woman, I was born of a 'family of bow and arrow' and am the daughter of Lord Kiyomori, a Prime Minister. I have not learnt how to deal death in battle, but there is no reason why I should not be able to perform the office of beheading another person. I will myself behead Yokobué and display her head to the sheriff. Moritsugu—that is your name, isn't it?—if you are proficient in the duties proper to a sheriff you will carefully examine the head and report on it to Lord Shigémori. When I have performed the deed I, in my turn, will inspect Yoshitsugu's head. Yokobué, I would do everything and anything in my power, but it is evident that my efforts are unavailing. Step forth therefore and prepare for death."

The bright, keen eyes of the Empress glistened with tears. Yokobué revealed herself and prostrated herself before her Imperial mistress.

"Most gracious Majesty," she sobbed, "your benevolence is higher than Mount Shumi and deeper than the ocean, but to pollute your honourable hands with my blood, that is impossible! Divine punishment would visit itself upon me; I should bring disgrace on myself in the next world. I beg one more boon of Your Majesty—let me die by the executioner's sword. I will not complain of the mode of execution, however severe. It is my hope that I shall be able to meet my sweetheart in the life to come. I grieve to part from Your Majesty, whose benevolence is so overwhelming that, were I to be reborn seven times into this world, I could scarcely hope to find another mistress of a like benevolence. Permit me to die at the hands of the executioner."

"No, I cannot permit the maid who is dearest to me to be slain by a warrior. Reconcile yourself to dying by the edge of my sword."

The Empress tucked up her skirts and, taking her sword from the sword-rack, tucked it under her left arm, saying, "Come with me, my girl, you shall meet your death in one of the inner chambers."

She departed quietly and composedly. Yokobué followed her. All those present, and particularly Katsuyori and Moritsugu, were smitten by awe and pain at what seemed her wrath and at the melancholy they read upon her countenance.

"Katsuyori Dono," remarked Moritsugu in tones of reconciliation, "have you noticed that the views of Her Majesty upon the subject of Yokobué and my brother would seem entirely contrary to what was asserted to be her first command? Have you observed how Her Majesty and Lord Shigémori seem to find fault with each other? Does not this seem strange? I am certain that some wicked wretch is deceiving both of them. Our mutual hostility is a private matter and the affairs of Takiguchi and Yoshitsugu are matters of but small public importance. An estrangement, nay, a discord between Her Majesty and Lord Shigémori, however, were an affair of grave concern which might lead to public disturbance. Let us therefore make our peace and bend our joint powers to inquiring into the matter."

"Certainly," nodded Katsuyori, "that is precisely my thought too. First of all let us consider our friendship restored, then let us take note of everybody and keep a sharp lookout."

The two warriors exchanged significant glances, then sternly looked about them. Morotaka, who all this while had been ill at ease, could no longer contain himself.

"Ugh! I have a fit of lumbago, my loins ache; I can bear the pain no longer. Pray excuse me, sirs. Be so good as to apologize to Her Majesty for my taking my leave now. Ugh! There again! Good-bye, sirs."

With a wry face and holding his sides, Morotaka took himself off. The eyes of the two warriors followed his retreating figure not without wonder.

"I consider it very suspicious," both exclaimed, "that this fellow, who is the superintendent of this palace, should remove himself on an occasion like this which is one of greatest importance, merely offering a pretext of sudden illness."

Hardly had they spoken when Lady Tonasé appeared, head-box in hand.

"Good-evening, sirs," said she as she sat herself down. "Her Majesty has beheaded Yokobué and has placed her head in this box which, as you see, she has sealed. Her Majesty orders me to receive Yoshitsugu's head from you and, when I have done so, to deliver Yokobué's head to you."

Katsuyori bowed his head respectfully and, unsealing the box he had brought, removed its lid. With what wonder did not all three behold within, not Yoshitsugu's head, but a queue and a stone as make-weight. Then Lady Tonasé, in her turn, cut the seal from her box with her dagger and so disclosed the contents. Lo and behold! these consisted merely of a bamboo flute cut in two at the mouthpiece and, as make-weight, some earth! All three were dumbfounded. After some rumination Katsuyori exclaimed, "It is above the privilege accorded a man of my rank and station to remark it, but what wise persons Her Majesty and Lord Shigémori are! I am filled with awe and reverence at the boundless benevolence displayed and at the precisely same measure each has taken without pre-arrangement between them. Had his lordship slain Yoshitsugu he could not have spared Karumo's life; it has therefore pleased his lordship graciously to spare Yoshitsugu by cutting off this queue of his and so making a priest of him. By entering the priesthood a man disconnects himself with the secular world, for he who has taken to himself a Buddhist name is, after a manner of speaking, a dead man. This make-weight of a stone is a symbol of the tomb; thus one may say his lordship has slain Yoshitsugu. This is a merciful measure and in accordance with the Buddhist doctrine that 'the bad shall be saved in the same hour as the good.' Her Majesty is apparently of the same mind. Had Her Majesty beheaded Yokobué, how could Takiguchi have survived? The yokobué or flute is a wonderful instrument, possessing miraculous notes and a soul of its own. By cutting this flute in twain and covering it with earth Her Majesty signifies that Yokobué, being dismissed, is as it were no more in this world. Thus, two of them being saved from death, it follows that the four of them are saved and how great will be the joy and gratitude of their parents, brothers, sisters, other relatives and friends. It would appear that a life-granting measure, such as has here been taken by Lord Shigémori and Her Majesty, is a more pious deed than prayers offered by a million priests for sons. Boundless is their benevolence! Oh, Moritsugu, how can we repay this great favour shown us in sparing the lives of your brother and his would-be wife and of my son and his would-be wife? The mercy, the benevolence of it!"

The lion-hearted heroes grasped each other's hands and were speechless, choked by tears of gratitude. Lady Tonasé was also moved to tears.

"I am ashamed, sirs," she said, "for at the bottom of this affair there is a great knave. I need not specify his name. Now that my parents are no more, the love I bear my brother is like the love of a mother for her son. Alas, to know him for the man he is! How can his wickedness fail to attract the notice of Her Majesty and of Lord Shigémori, both being so wise and sagacious? I cannot but think that they will judge me his accomplice. I am prepared for that, though by the Gods and Buddha I have had no hand in the matter. I fear however that their suspicions will not be allayed, even after I am dead. Pray sympathize with me, sirs."

A melancholy silence ensued. At length Katsuyori spoke softly.

"You have our hearty sympathy, lady. Everyone has a mind of his own. A parent cannot know what is in a child's mind and the mind of a brother is unknown to his sister. We can very well understand that you are a perfect stranger to your brother's intentions. A mirror reflects an object exactly as an object appears. Gaze in a mirror with distorted features and a distorted face will look back at you; gaze at it with a placid face and a placid face will greet you. The same is true of Her Majesty: behave innocently and sincerely toward Her Majesty and your reflection will be the same in Her Majesty's mental mirror."

They exchanged head-boxes. The warriors bade her a polite farewell and went their way.

IV

Luckless Yokobué! For a considerable period she had led a sequestered life at Kwazan, nigh the capital, though not a day passed without her pining for Takiguchi. At length her passionate longing induced her to undertake a journey in quest of her sweetheart. Having assumed travelling garb and veiled her face with a sedge hat, she set out one morning before daybreak. She bade a sad farewell to her hermitage and wearily trudged the narrow roads through the rice-fields.

As she plodded on she beheld, far away to the south, the scarlet maple leaves upon Mount Inari, which the poetess Izumi Shikibu immortalized in a love-poem. Her fancy wandered to the village of Fukakusa, situated below the mountain famous for its connection with the court noble Fukakusa-no-Shōshō, who died a tragic death because of the power of his love for the beautiful poetess Komachi. As, crossing the Kamo River, she came to the street of Gojō, she beheld pass by many flower-sellers' carts on which reposed mountains of flowers sparkling with morning dew. At sight of them the love-sick maiden could not but associate them with the ox-cart in which the hero of The Story of Genji visits the daughter of a peasant living in this neighbourhood. Before she reached the village of Saga, the retreat of numerous recluses, she had to pass through many villages and forests and cross certain streams. Their very names were significant to her, either of hope or fear.

At Saga she found so many hermitages in the glens and on the hill-tops that she knew not at which to call in inquiry after her sweetheart. In this quandary she addressed a peasant girl who was going home from the garden where she had been gathering vegetables.

"Somewhere hereabouts lives a young samurai of the capital who has turned priest. Pray tell me which is his hut?"

"Hm! A young samurai is it, who's a priest? Let me see, which can it be? Father Nensai was a huntsman.

Father Dōkin was a—shall I say a Dorking cock? Father Dōsai it cannot be, for he has removed to Nara. I have it!—some time ago a young samurai of the Taira family shaved his head at the Ōjōin Temple yonder. Follow this lane and you will find his hermitage easily enough. Listen, you can hear the sound of prayers in his cell.”

Having said this the girl made off. The joy of Yokobué knew no bounds. Beyond doubt the young priest must be her Takiguchi. She ran along the lane and soon reached the cottage, from within which sounded the bell accompanying prayers. It was with a beating heart that she lifted her hand and knocked upon the garden gate and fence.

“I want to speak to you, sir! Please unlock the door; please open the gate.”

“As you will,” replied a gruff voice.

The next moment there appeared within the fence a shabbily attired man with a shaven head, of about forty years of age.

“My mistake,” he said, leering. “I thought it was the woman bringing rice for to-morrow. Here comes an excellent meal for the night-time; I’d have you know, my pretty girl, that the priest here is a young man, but he was a samurai once and behaves himself very strictly. However skittishly forward you may be with him, let me warn you he will in no wise do even so much as to uncover your dish. No, not he, never! As for me, I too abstain from flesh to-day and to-morrow, but if it’s only a matter of a small consideration, call again the day after to-morrow.”

“Nonsense! What do you mean? I know very well he is a man of strong will; but if we meet he will recognize me. Pray be so good as just to tell him, sir.”

“You’re his friend then? You might have told me so earlier. Wait a moment.” So saying he ran into the cell. Yokobué, following him with her eyes, said to herself, “Takiguchi Sama was wont to say that he had a favourite sandal-carrier; this fellow should be he. What a loyal servant to have entered the priesthood with his master! How admirable!”

The shaven henchman ran out crying, “Oh, terrible, terrible! Are you waiting still, girl? What a fright I got! When I told my master of your coming he glared at me with eyes like saucers and roared at me, ‘Have I ever invited in a girl or woman since I retired here? In the first place I am short of money. You lecher! Whenever you come across a woman you dilly-dally with her. I am tired of such an idiot! Never come on such an errand again!’ And when he had said this he beat me again and again about the head with a bell hammer. Be off, girl!”

“Indeed, he did right in taking amiss what I said. I am sorry to put you to further trouble, but be so kind as to inform him that I come from Her Majesty’s court. Your master will then understand.”

“No, no,” he said sourly, shaking his head with vehemence, “let there be no tattle about Her Majesty’s court. He never will give ear to any mention of silk coat or petticoat. If I go and speak to him I shall get another knock. Terrible, terrible!”

“You seem to have recently shaved your head. I expect you feel cold about the head? I should like to present you with a hood, but I haven’t got one, so allow me to offer you this.”

Yokobué proffered him a cloth wrapper, then threw it over the fence. The fellow seized it joyfully enough.

“Thank you, girl. This is expensive crêpe I see, and the lining red silk. I can use it as a hood. Wasn’t there something wrapped up in it?”

“Yes, it contained money which I gave to beggars on my way here, but next time I come I will bring you anything you want. I suppose you have nose-paper?”

“Yes, I have such things. What would do better—you understand?”

“I understand. I shan’t fail to bring it. Will you please grant my request?”

“Very well then.”

Once more he rushed into the hermitage.

"None are so frank and simple-minded as people of the lower classes," she said. "He is indeed love's messenger on my behalf. I think I will stay at this hut to-night and talk with my sweetheart all night long."

An ecstasy possessed her. She trembled on tiptoe. But it was a crestfallen messenger of love who returned a moment or two later.

"Well, what did he say? Quick!"

"All for nothing. He refuses to see you. He merely rapped out with an oath, 'A friend, eh! No friend if it's a female. I wouldn't cross the road to speak with a bitch or a hen, much less with a woman.' I'm sorry, my girl. I fear you've given me a crêpe wrapper in vain."

He disappeared into the hut again. Yokobué's disappointment was so deep that she was quite confounded. She sank to the ground and wept bitterly. "What change in him! Three years we pined for each other. Three years may seem a short space of time, but when told day by day they amount to more than a thousand days and nights. For so many days and nights did he and I pine for each other. Once we had achieved intimacy, what trouble and difficulty was ours, managing to meet in secret! We vowed to each other that we would become husband and wife through seven existences to come and now he even refuses to see me."

She clung to the gate-post and cried bitterly, but no one came to comfort her.

"It is an idle complaint that I make. Now that I am forsaken by my beloved, to what purpose do I live on? What are the bright moon and the beautiful flowers to me? I will drown myself in yonder stream and in Hades enjoy gazing at the reflection of my lover as it comes and goes upon the river." Having come to this melancholy resolve, the girl hurried toward the "Plover's Pool."

The serving-man turned priest caught sight of her and was astonished.

"Master! The girl is going to drown herself. See, see! She is running toward the river."

The startled priest rushed out, wrenched open the outer gate and, running to the girl, seized her in his arms.

"Takiguchi Sama, is it?" she exclaimed as she embraced him.

"No, I am not Takiguchi."

"Don't lie to me, dear."

She clung to him but he gently freed himself.

"Is it Yokobué Dono?"

"Are you Yoshitsugu Sama? I feel sad. My life was spared through Her Majesty's mercy; since when I have lived on in hopes of meeting Takiguchi Dono. Alas, my hope is frustrated. Pray kill me, Yoshitsugu Sama."

She seized Yoshitsugu's sleeve and wept bitterly.

"Don't be so cast down," said Yoshitsugu, himself almost in tears. "I too was graciously pardoned by my liege lord, since when I have become a priest. I have not been able, however, to free myself from worldly passions, so that I never cease from remembering my beloved Karumo. Beholding your grief, I can well imagine how passionately she is longing after me. Even in this life we four are separated by fate from one another, so that there seems even less hope that we may be able to 'live together in one lotus blossom in the Pure Land.' But since Takiguchi and Karumo, both of whom are pining for us, cannot have gone to the furthest provinces, let us set out in quest of them. The proverb says, 'Desire finds its way even through a rock'; sooner or later what we wish will be accomplished. Be of good heart, Yokobué Dono. In this world a priest has no fixed place of stay; I can therefore start at any moment. Buddha is one and the same all over the world. Everywhere and anywhere Buddha can be found. I therefore need not take leave of the Buddha in my shrine. Hold yourself ready to depart, Yokobué Dono."

On that Yoshitsugu made over the hermitage to his serving-man turned priest, bade the fellow farewell and departed with the girl.

Like a mandarin duck separated from its drake and a cock pheasant parted from its hen, the pair wandered hither and thither, weeping inwardly, but comforting each other as week after week went by without the achievement of any special destination.

Late one winter's afternoon they found themselves trudging along a mountain path in the district of Shiga. Snow was falling thick and fast. A freezing wind from Mount Hiei howled through the snow-crueted trees. The sufferings she had endured upon the long journey had told upon Yokobu \acute{e} . Recently she had grown weaker and now the bitter weather tried her so hard that she seemed scarcely able to take another step.

"Take heart of grace, Yokobu \acute{e} . Have no fears on account of your weakness. I am sure you will soon be able to meet Takiguchi."

"Thank you—for—your—kind—words."

So benumbed were her lips that these words proceeded from them but brokenly.

"Naturally you are tired," returned Yoshitsugu. "It was very much my idea to beg two or three nights' lodging for your health's good, but unfortunately it is near the year's end and every house consequently is busy, and in any event nobody would give lodging to a priest and a young woman. We have slept in the open air now no less than a hundred nights—a hard time this must have been for you who have led an easy and comfortable life at court from your childhood up. You have my sympathy. About a mile further on lies the village of Shiga. I will certainly ask them, at the very first house we come on, to give us lodging for the night. Please try to walk on."

Thus urged, Yokobu \acute{e} did her best to obey, but so weak and benumbed were her legs that she tottered and fell down in the snow.

"What a helpless creature I am!" she exclaimed. "Indeed your kindness overwhelms me. You are searching for your love, yet, despite your sufferings, you have fended every care from me for a long while. You have kindly tended a dying woman without any sign of impatience, despite the heavy snow-storm sweeping this strange country-side and without taking thought to your own discomfort at all. Surely you must have been my father or brother in a former existence; in nowise can I consider you a mere friend. I was lucky in coming across you, but I begin to wonder why I have been so long unable to meet Takiguchi with whom I exchanged vows of fidelity. I fear my hapless lot may be a divine counterpoise to the undeserved benevolence Her Majesty showed towards me. By my own anguish I can well imagine Karumo Dono's pain. Five long years have passed since she was with child and yet you have not met each other. A hard lot hers! I heartily sympathize with you in your agony. It grieves me much to have put you to such trouble when you are already weighed down by your own troubles, but there is no help for it. My anguish and this snow-storm seem to rob me of my breath; I feel dizzy; I think I shall scarcely live until the morrow. My hours are numbered. I have not even strength enough to pray to Buddha. Aid me to pray, that I be suffered to be reborn in the lotus flower in the Pure Land with Takiguchi." She found difficulty in breathing and seemed on the point of death. Yoshitsugu, himself grief-stricken and much fatigued, spoke somewhat sternly to encourage his sick companion.

"This is spiritless of you, Yokobu \acute{e} . If your sympathy really extends even to Karumo, why do you not take part and venture not only through the snow but also through fire to find Takiguchi and then to search for Karumo in his company and mine? You appear a somewhat helpless woman."

He aided her to her feet.

The exhausted Yokobu \acute{e} exclaimed, "I am ashamed of my helplessness and selfishness: I ask pardon of you."

She leaned upon Yoshitsugu's arm. They continued on through the dusk by the light of the snow itself. When they had toiled a little further through the falling snow they were overjoyed to descry, far ahead, a cottage lit by a hearth fire. They stumbled to it and, peeping through the chinks of the paper door, caught sight of a flame drowsily wavering before the images of the "Three Deities of Welcome." They saw too an intelligent-looking boy of five to six summers feeding with firewood the hearth, whereon a kettle was boiling. Hope brightened in them. Yoshitsugu slightly opened the door.

"I say, little sir?"

"Who is it?" said the child on tiptoe. "What do you want?"

"We are travellers who have lost our way in the snow; there are but two of us. Please allow us to rest in that corner till day breaks."

"I'm sorry," replied the boy, with an innocent but firm air, "but the priest of this house has given me orders never to open the door in his absence. I therefore can't allow you in."

"You are right to refuse, as 'tis the time of the year when every house must be guarded against thieves. But see—my companion is a woman who is sick. We are neither of us such as steal. I beg your pardon for using such phrases as are used to grown-ups, but it would be a work of great mercy to give us a lodging. We will apologize to your master. Again I say, do be so good as to grant our request."

"No, I can't."

"Then will you permit us a drink of the water that is boiling there?"

"That is not water but medicine. The first infusion is not yet made."

"There's somebody sick here then? Who is it?"

"My mother. She's long been ill. She lies abed behind that screen day and night. The priest cooks the morning and evening meals. This evening he has gone down to the village hard by, to get mother's medicine."

"In that case, though the priest be absent, you will still be able to ask your mother to give us a night's lodging. Please be so kind, little sir."

"No, no. The priest takes every care of my mother. He says I am never to let in anybody, whomsoever they may be, in his absence, for fear mother should be carried away. I can't allow you in."

"Kaméwaka," called a woman's thin voice from behind the screen, "there are travellers asking for lodging, aren't there? They must be cold in this weather. The priest will soon be back, so call them in quick."

"No, mother," said the boy stubbornly, "the priest told me never to open the door, even to our friends. I'll just go down and fetch him."

So saying, he took from the wall a large hat of bamboo sheaths, placed it on his head and set out through the heavy snow.

"Well," Yoshitsugu said to himself, "it's only natural a priest should hide his wife. I suppose he calls this son of his a pupil. While the boy's away let me steal in with Yokobué and let us warm ourselves by the fire. Ah, no. If the priest is offended we shall get no lodging to-night; let us be patient a little longer."

He laid his hat and the girl's on Yokobué where she lay in the snow and, shivering with cold himself, endeavoured to warm her in his arms. Thickly fell the snow upon their hats. Night wore on. When he shook himself the snowflakes fell off him like goose feathers; the icicles hanging from the sleeves of both of them tinkled like tiny bells.

"Hey, travellers!" cried a youthful voice. "The priest is back."

Priest and child appeared out of the darkness.

"Are you the folk asking for lodging?"

"I am, sir. What, you're Takiguchi, aren't you?"

"Yoshitsugu! A strange reunion indeed! Before anything else let me return to you my precious charges. This is your son from whom you parted when he was yet in his mother's womb. Karumo Dono!"

Karumo made her appearance. She was overjoyed.

"My dear Yoshitsugu, this is our son."

"My dear father!"

The three embraced each other, gazing happily from face to face. All were speechless with joy.

After a brief pause Yoshitsugu said to his friend, "As for me, I have brought you a splendid present; here is your Yokobué Dono."

"I thank you for your friendship."

Takiguchi shook his sweetheart, crying, "Yokobué! My dear Yokobué!" But answer came there none.

He shook the snow from the girl. He clasped her in his arms. In vain! To their consternation she showed no sign of life. He forced open her clenched teeth and blew a restorative into her mouth, but to no purpose. Pulse and life had completely fled. Takiguchi, grief-stricken, held her on his knees and warmed her body by pressing her to his naked breast.

"Oh, Yokobué, how unlucky our love is!" he exclaimed with sobs. "These five long years have we pined for each other and suffered hardships indescribable for each other's sake. And now you have died without enjoying a single day of complete wifehood. How sad it is that you came all unwittingly to your own beloved's door and were frozen to death in the snow when all the while a cheerful fire was burning within! Oh, Yokobué, if you really love me, let me hear the single word 'My dear' from your lips!"

Yoshitsugu and Karumo, also in tears, assisted in lifting Yokobué's body up to the hearth, where they warmed it with great care and tenderness. No signs of revival appeared. Karumo, between her sobs, opened her amulet case, saying, "Here I have a precious incense named 'The King of Medicines' and it is said to be possessed of miraculous powers. It is a portion of a present from the Chinese Emperor to the Emperor Goshirakawa, who gave it to Her Majesty. Her Majesty graciously bestowed it on Yokobué Dono and myself as a token of the relationship between mistress and servant extending to the next world. It is my trust that the odour of this incense will restore Yokobué to life. I will therefore burn it."

No sooner did she begin to burn the incense than a sweet odour filled the air and, wonder of wonders, Yokobué's body instantly recovered its warmth and pulse and her face its colour. She gave a sigh and opened her eyes. Then she cried, "Is it Takiguchi Sama? I am overjoyed to see you!" She was again a beautiful woman in sound health. The others were filled with amaze and joy.

"When my spirit had all but fled and I seemed to be half in a dream, I smelled the sweet odour of precious incense and heard Her Majesty's voice crying, 'Yokobué! Yokobué!' The next instant my dream dissolved and I came to my senses. Great is Her Majesty's goodness!"

All of them spent a happy night, merrily talking of what each had experienced during those five weary years.

V

When the full extent of Morotaka's roguery and calumny became known, it was evident that he deserved death, but for the sake of his sister Lady Tonasé and because the quality of mercy is the foundational principle of government, his punishment was reduced to banishment from the Imperial city. He found it difficult to keep body and soul together and so formed a gang with the villains Genkurō and Muzō, relatives of his retainer Iwamura Gengo, slain at Funaoka-Yama. They roamed the neighbourhood of Karasaki, on Lake Biwa, eking out a living by swindling, highway robbery, burglary, blackmail and the like, as chance and opportunity served.

One day Morotaka whispered to his subordinates, "To-day there should be many visitors to the Shrine of the God Sannō in this place. See, there is a boat adrift yonder! Genkurō will pretend to be her boatman, will give passage to some of the worshippers and rob them when you have rowed out some distance. In the Hall of Worship in the Myōjin Shrine the priest leaves his hat and robe. Muzō will wear them, pretend to be the priest and appropriate the offertory and the money paid for the "Twelve Lights." I, for my part, will prowl the highway and pick the pockets of absent-minded travellers. Come, let us set about our jobs."

They parted on their respective enterprises.

Presently Lady Tonasé, in a palanquin, accompanied by a few attendants, arrived under the Giant Pine-Tree at Karasaki. She had come to the town of Ōtsu, as proxy for the Empress, for a week's worship at the Shrine of Sannō and of Myōjin. She alighted from her carriage, glanced about and said to her attendants, "See whether the priest Sandayū is now in the shrine."

Muzō, having donned the priest's robe, made his appearance.

"Honoured lady," said he, "I am Sandayū's father. I may take orders for the Sacred Dance or the Twelve Lights as well as he."

"Are you Sandayū's father? Sandayū must be sixty and you look younger."

Muzō was confused. "No, no. I said Sandayū was my father. My name is Nidayū."

"So you are his son? Come nearer."

The rogue perforce advanced.

"I have the honour," continued the lady, "of doing proxy to Her Imperial Majesty. Sandayū may have told you that the young court ladies, Yokobué and Karumo, were discharged some years ago on account of their love affairs. Her Majesty has taken pity on them and, a report having come to her ears that they are living a miserable life hereabouts with their lovers, Takiguchi and Yoshitsugu, Her Majesty has commanded me to find them and bring them back to the capital. With this purpose in my mind I have journeyed hither and am now putting up in Ōtsu in order to pray here to the Gods Sannō and Myōjin for guidance as to their whereabouts. I intended worship of a week and have already spent five days in prayer. I beg you to pray to the God to let me have news of their whereabouts."

So saying, she worshipped the deity with her whole heart and soul.

Morotaka who, unnoticed, had played the eavesdropper, suddenly rushed upon her, seized her by the nape and drew her down on her back.

"What villainy!" the frightened woman cried. "Who does this deed?"

"Let not the villain escape!"

So cried her henchmen; and the palanquin bearers instantly hemmed him in.

"Maggot! Touch me if you dare! Hi! Comrades! Knock the old woman down and strip her of her garments."

Genkurō jumped from the boat and cut at the servants. Muzō, who had also rushed to the scene, drew and flourished his weapon. The terrified, cowardly servants precipitantly took to their heels, crying, "Robbery in broad daylight! Highwaymen! Help! Help!"

"So it is you, wild beast and brother!" exclaimed Lady Tonasé. "You who gave so much trouble to Her Majesty, you who wronged so many, you who, for these crimes, were about to be put to death! To whom do you think you owe it that your head still remains upon your shoulders? Partly it is due to me, but also largely to the benevolence of Her Majesty. You ought immediately to have become a priest, that you might atone for your crime. A cursèd wretch, reduced to such a condition, do you not even yet repent of your crime? What shame this is!"

"Pah! If I had repented I should not have come to this pass. Since we are relations I spare your life. I know your purse is full; you have, I am sure, three or four ryō about you. Come, hand it to me at once. If you don't I will kill you."

He forced her head to the ground as he spoke.

"A base villain!" said the lady. "You say you mean to kill me if I don't give you my money! Naturally I would not grudge even thousands of ryō as the price of the redemption of my life. What should a chief court lady have money about her for? Kill me if you choose."

"Aha! I see you have no money on you. Your money must be in your inn at Ôtsu. You are not to stir till I fetch it."

He produced a cord, bound her cruelly and thrust her into the palanquin.

"Come along with me and be quick about it, comrades. Since she says she's to stop here for a week she must have brought plenty of gold and silver coins with her. Think of the special booty there will be—her chests, her fine clothes, her bed-trappings!"

They ran off highly pleased.

They had scarcely taken themselves off when Yoshitsugu with his wife and son appeared. They had spent many days at the temple praying the God Myôjin to restore Yoshitsugu to his former situation as a retainer to Shigémori. They now proceeded to the shrine and, bowing their heads and clapping their hands, prayed with great fervour. While they were absorbed in their devotions a voice was heard insistently crying, "Karumo Dono! Yoshitsugu Sama!" The surprised couple glanced backward.

"The cry comes from that palanquin, I believe."

"Yes, you're right. It is from the palanquin. Dear Karumo Dono, please come to me!"

Karumo rushed to the palanquin and slid open the door.

"Is it Lady Tonasé? Why, how's this! How did you get into such a state?"

She lifted the old woman out and loosened the cord. Tonasé thanked her and, restraining her tears, said, "Where are Takiguchi and Yokobu? I have come here as Her Majesty's proxy to pray for guidance as to your whereabouts. In point of fact Her Majesty orders me to find you and bring you and your friends back to the capital. A few minutes ago, as I was worshipping the God, that villainous brother of mine, who had been banished and who appears to have turned robber, seized and bound me in the fashion you found me in just now. He will shortly return. Before he returns, let us set out together to the capital."

"Have no fear," laughed Yoshitsugu, "nothing will happen to you now that I am with you. Takiguchi and Yokobu will presently be here to worship. Abide here a while. Karumo, you will hide in this palanquin and when Morotaka returns you will say to him, 'I am forsaken by that heartless monster Yoshitsugu.' Appeal to his sympathy and coax him into going aboard that boat. I will pretend to be the boatman. I have a plan for his chastisement."

"Certainly," returned Karumo, entering the palanquin. "I will do my best, dear husband. But be careful of yourself."

"Have no fears for me."

Yoshitsugu took his child in his arms and embarked with Tonasé. He hid them both in the bottom of the boat and, assuming a straw rain-coat and a sedge hat, sat down and feigned a doze. Morotaka presently returned, exuding perspiration.

"Sister," cried he, striking the palanquin, "they would deliver us nothing at your inn without a note from you. We cannot break into your rooms in broad daylight. You will please write a note demanding the delivery of your money and clothes. Be quick about it!"

No response.

"What next!" he cried, and, tearing the blind from the carriage, was amazed to find Karumo within.

"Oh!" said she, assuming a bashful air. "I am ashamed to meet you in this plight, Morotaka Sama. I regret to have to tell you that I have been unkindly forsaken, as a just punishment for my flat refusal of your kind proposal, by that brute Yoshitsugu. Enraged by my jealousy, he swears that he will drown me in this lake. I have managed with great difficulty to escape and have hidden in this unoccupied palanquin. I trust that, though it be but half of what formerly obtained, your affection for me still exists?"

"Has my sister fled then? But I wouldn't exchange you for a thousand sisters. How unkind of you to say 'half my former affection!' Truly my love has grown an hundredfold since then. Make your mind easy; under my protection you are now in no danger. You're even handsomer than when I last saw you. I am madly in love with you! I would die for you, my dearest girl!"

So saying, he embraced her.

"Don't! People might see us. What do you say to hiring yonder boat and spending cosy and pleasant hours in the offing, away from the eyes of common folk?"

"Aha! You've improved in wits as well as looks. Hello, my man! I thought it was merely a boat adrift, but it's yours, boatman, is it? Row us over to Ishiyama, will you?"

"With pleasure, sir. I saw in a glance you were lovers. I shan't be wanting any fare. Come, get aboard."

"Thank you. This really is, as the saying goes, a boat that arrives just when one wants to cross over."

The old rascal was making as if to embark with Karumo, when Yoshitsugu exclaimed, "It's dangerous for two to try and get on board simultaneously; one at a time, please: the girl first."

He took Karumo in his arms and placed her in the boat, then, seizing the oar, to Morotaka's vast surprise and anger, rowed out into the lake. A moment later the boat was a hundred yards from the shore.

"Slave-trader! Robber!" roared the villain. Frantic with despair he waded into the shallows. Yoshitsugu, doffing his coat of straw and his sedge hat, disclosed himself to the astonished Morotaka.

"Has divine punishment sealed your eyes, you villain?" he cried. "Know then that I am Yoshitsugu! It is I have sheltered Lady Tonasé. My advice to you is that you kill yourself instead of continuing to lead a dishonourable life."

Lady Tonasé and Yoshitsugu's son appeared.

"Ah! That I should have been duped! Were this water a hundred or a thousand fathoms deep, yet would I wade out to your boat and capsize it!"

With these words Morotaka tucked up his skirt and rolled up his sleeves for action; but at this moment Takiguchi and Yokobué came on the scene. Takiguchi rushed at him, knocked him down on to the beach and kneeled upon him, while Yokobué beat his head and pinched his legs. The villain writhed. "A shame it is," he cried, "to have been brought down by a greenhorn of a boy!"

"Don't kill him!" Yoshitsugu shouted.

"It would be wrong for us to kill one whose life Their Imperial Majesties have graciously seen fit to spare. Let us lie in wait for his comrades and kill them."

He rowed to the beach, jumped ashore, trussed the old knave up hand and foot, thrust a handful of straw into his mouth, wound a kerchief round his face and threw him into the palanquin. The party then hid behind the shrine.

Presently Muzō and Genkurō, both out of breath, returned at a run.

"Can't find our boss anywhere! And a pretty poor time we've been having! We owe it all to this old hag too; let us finish her."

They approached the palanquin on both sides and thrust their swords again and again through the blinds.

"She mayn't have any money, but I daresay we can find something or other hidden in her bosom."

They dragged the corpse out. Great was their consternation to find themselves gazing upon the bloody body of their chief.

"Muzō, beware!" exclaimed Genkurō, alarmed. "Takiguchi or Yoshitsugu must be about."

"A good guess, villains!" cried the two heroes, rushing from hiding. "You see Yoshitsugu and Takiguchi before you!"

Mighty strokes fell upon the frightened rascals. The villains were held down, stabbed to death.

At this moment Saitō Katsuyori and Etchū Moritsugu appeared.

"Listen, Takiguchi and Yoshitsugu!" they cried. "We bring you a written order from Lord Shigémori, restoring you to your former situations and fiefs."

The joy and gratitude of both couples knew no bounds and the whole company wept for delight over their happy reunion after five years of weary separation.

ADAM

[THE MYSTERY OF ADAM]

ANONYMOUS

Written and produced probably about the middle of the 12th century

TRANSLATED FROM THE FRENCH AND LATIN BY EDWARD NOBLE STONE *

ORDER OF THE PRESENTATION OF ADAM

Let Paradise be set up in a somewhat lofty place; let there be put about it curtains and silken hangings, at such an height that those persons who shall be in Paradise can be seen from the shoulders upward; let there be planted there sweet-smelling flowers and foliage; let divers trees be therein, and fruits hanging upon them, so that it may seem a most delectable place.

Then let the Saviour come, clothed in a dalmatic, and let ADAM and EVE be set before him. Let ADAM be clothed in a red tunic; EVE, however, in a woman's garment of white, and a white silken wimple; and let them both stand before the FIGURE; but ADAM a little nearer, with composed countenance; EVE, however, with countenance a little more subdued.

And let ADAM himself be well instructed when he shall make his answers, lest in answering he be either too swift or too slow. Let not only ADAM, but all the persons, be so instructed that they shall speak composedly and shall use such gestures as become the matter whereof they are speaking; and in uttering the verses, let them neither add a syllable nor take away, but let them pronounce all clearly; and let those things that are to be said be said in their due order.

Whoever shall speak the name of Paradise, let him look back at it and point it out with his hand.

Then let the Lesson begin: "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth."

And after this is ended let the choir sing: "And the Lord God formed man."

And when this is ended, let the FIGURE say: Adam! And let him answer: Lord!

I fashioned thee.

ADAM. I know it, yea!
FIGURE. A living soul to thee I gave,
In thee my likeness did I grave,

Mine earthly image making thee.
Never must thou rebellious be.

* Reprinted from the University of Washington Publications in Language and Literature, University of Washington Press, copyright, 1926, by permission of the translator and publisher.

ADAM. Not I! but I will trust thee aye,
And my Creator I'll obey.

(Eve is she hight) thy wife to be—
Thy wife to be and partner,
And thou must ever cleave to her,
Do thou love her, let her love thee;
So shall ye both be blest of me.
Let her thine own commands obey,
And both be subject to my sway.
From thy rib-bone her form I wrought;
No stranger she, but from thee brought.
Out of thy body I shaped her frame;
From thee, not from without, she came.
Govern her, then, with counsel wise,
Nor let dissent betwixt you rise,
But love and mutual service great.
Such is the law of wedlock's state.

FIGURE [to EVE]. Now will I speak to thee, O Eve.

Take heed, nor lightly this receive:
If thou to do my will art fain,
Thy heart its goodness will retain;
Honor and love to me accord,
Thy Maker and acknowledged Lord;
To serve me be thy heart inclined
With all thy might and all thy mind.
Love Adam, hold him dear as life;
He is thy husband, thou his wife;
Ever to him submit thy heart
And from his teaching ne'er depart;
Serve him and love, with willing mind;
Therein is wedlock's law defined.
If thou art proved a helper meet,
I'll set you both in glory's seat.

EVE. Lord, I will do what pleaseth
thee,

In nothing will neglectful be;
To thee, as sovereign, I will bow,
And him my fere and liege avow.
To him I will at all times cleave,
From me good counsel he'll receive;
Thy pleasure and his service aye
Will I perform, in every way.

[Then let the FIGURE call ADAM nearer, and more particularly addressing him, say:]

Listen! O Adam. Harken unto me.
I formed thee; now this gift I add in fee:
Thou mayest live alway—if you loyal
be—

And hale and sound, from every sickness
free.

Thou'lt hunger not, nor thirst shall thee
annoy,
Neither shall heat nor cold thine ease destroy,
Nor weariness thy perfect bliss alloy,
Nor any suffering abate thy joy.

All of thy life in pleasance thou shalt spend;
'T will not be short—a life withouten
end!

I tell thee this, and will that Eve attend;
Unless she heed, to folly she will bend.

Dominion over all the earth ye'll
hold;

Birds, beasts—all creatures—be by you controlled;

Who grudgeth this, his worth is lightly
told,

For your demesne shall the whole world
enfold.

Of good and ill I grant you choice to
make;

(Who hath such choice is tethered to no stake;)

Weigh all in the balance fairly, nor mistake;

Be true to me, my counsel ne'er forsake.
Leave thou the evil, choose the good as guide;

Love thou thy Lord, and keep thee at his
side;

None other counsel e'er for mine be tried:
Do this, so shalt thou without sin abide.

ADAM. Great thanks I give thee for thy kindness, Lord,

Who madest me and dost such grace accord,

To place both good and evil in my ward.
Thy service shall my fullest joy afford.

Thou art my Lord, and in myself I see Thy handiwork, for thou didst fashion
me;

Nor ever shall my will so stubborn be,
But that my chiefest care be serving thee.

[Then let the FIGURE with its hand point out Paradise to ADAM, saying:]

Adam!

ADAM. Lord!

FIGURE. Hear my plan; lift up thine eyes;

This garden see.

ADAM. Its name?

ADAM. A place most fair!

And plant. Who here shall dwell as friend
I'll prize.

I place it in thy trust, to keep for aye.

[Then shall he send them into Paradise, saying:]

I set you both herein.

ADAM. And shall we stay?

shall you affray;

Now ye can neither die nor waste away.

[Let the choir sing: "And the Lord took the man."

Then shall the FIGURE stretch forth his hand toward Paradise, saying:]

The nature of this garden I'll recite:

Here shalt thou feel the lack of no delight;

No earthly good, desired of any wight,
But each may here be found in measure
right.

Here wife from man shall no harsh word obtain,

Nor man from wife have shame or cause to plain;

Begetting, man shall sinless still remain,
And woman bear her children without pain.

For aye thou'lt live; so blest is this sojourn,

With passing years thine age no change
shall learn;

Nor dread of death shall bring to thee concern;

I will thy dwelling here to be eterne.

[Let the choir sing: "And the Lord said unto ADAM."

Then let the FIGURE with his hand point out unto ADAM the trees of Paradise, saying:]

Of all these fruits thou mayest eat each
day.

[And let him shew him the forbidden tree, and its fruits, saying:]

This I forbid thee, here make no essay;
If thou dost eat thereof thou'rt dead
straightway;

My love thou'lt lose, thy weal with woe repay.

ADAM. All thy commandments will I keep in mind,

Nor I nor Eve to break them be inclined;
If for one fruit such dwelling were resigned,

Rightly should I be outcast to the wind.

If for an apple I thy love gainsay,
Ne'er in my life can I my folly pay;

A traitor should judg'd be for aye,
Who doth himself forswear, his lord betray.

[Then let the FIGURE go to the church, and let ADAM and EVE walk about, innocently delighting themselves in Paradise. In the mean time, let the demons run to and fro through the square, making fitting gestures; and let them come, one after another, alongside of Paradise, shewing EVE the forbidden fruit, as if entreating her to eat thereof. Then let the DEVIL come unto ADAM; and he shall say unto him:]

DEVIL. How liv'st thou, Adam?

ADAM. In felicity.

DEVIL. Is it well with thee?

ADAM. There's nothing vexeth me.

DEVIL. It can be better.

ADAM. Nay—I know not how.

DEVIL. Then, wouldst thou know?

ADAM. It recks me little now.

DEVIL. I know, forsooth!

ADAM. What boots it me to learn?

DEVIL. And why not, pray?

ADAM. Naught doth it me concern.

DEVIL. Concern thee 't will!

ADAM. I know not when.

DEVIL. I'll not make haste to tell thee,
then.

ADAM. Nay, tell me!

DEVIL. No! I'll keep thee waiting

Till thou art sick of supplicating.

ADAM. To know this thing I have no need.

DEVIL. Thou dost deserve no boon, indeed!
 The boon thou hast thou canst not use.
 ADAM. Prithee, how's that?
 DEVIL. Thou'lt not refuse
 To hear? Well, then,—'twixt thee and me,—
 ADAM. I'll listen, most assuredly!
 DEVIL. Now mark me, Adam. I tell thee it
 For thine own good.
 ADAM. That I'll admit.
 DEVIL. Thou'lt trust me, then?
 ADAM. Full trust I bring!
 DEVIL. In every point?
 ADAM. All—save one thing.
 DEVIL. What thing is that?
 ADAM. This: I'll do naught
 Offensive to my Maker's thought.
 DEVIL. Dost fear him so?
 ADAM. I fear him; yes—
 Both love and fear.
 DEVIL. That's foolishness!
 What can he do thee?
 ADAM. Good and bale.
 DEVIL. Thou'st listened to an idle tale!
 An evil thing befall thee? Why,
 In glory born, thou canst not die!
 ADAM. God saith I'll die, without redress,
 When'er his precepts I transgress.
 DEVIL. What is this great transgression, pray?
 I fain would learn without delay.
 ADAM. I'll tell thee all in perfect truth.
 This the command he gave, forsooth:
 Of all the fruits of Paradise
 I've leave to eat (such his advice)—
 —All, save one only, which is banned;
 That I'll not touch, e'en with my hand.
 DEVIL. Which fruit is that?
 [Then let ADAM stretch forth his hand and shew him the forbidden fruit, saying:]
 ADAM. See'st yonder tree?
 That fruit hath he forbidden me.
 DEVIL. Dost know the reason?
 ADAM. Certes, no!
 DEVIL. The occasion of this thing I'll show:
 No whit cares he for all the rest;

But yon, that hangeth loftiest,
 —The fruit of Knowledge—can bestow
 The gift all mysteries to know.
 If thou eat'st that, 't will profit thee.
 ADAM. In what way, pray?
 DEVIL. That thou shalt see:
 Thine eyes will straightway be unsealed,
 All future things to thee revealed;
 All that thou wilt'st thou canst perform;
 'T will bring thee blessings in a swarm.
 Eat, and thou shalt repent it not;
 Then thou'lt not fear thy God in aught;
 Instead, thou'lt be in all his peer;
 For this, he filled thy soul with fear.
 Wilt trust me? Then to taste proceed.
 ADAM. That will I not!
 DEVIL. Fine words, indeed!
 Thou wilt not?
 ADAM. No!
 DEVIL. A fool art thou!
 Thou'lt yet mind what I tell thee now.
 [Then let the DEVIL depart; and he shall go to the other demons, and he shall make an excursion through the square; and after some little interval, cheerful and rejoicing, he shall return to his tempting of ADAM, and he shall say unto him:]
 How farest thou, Adam? Wilt change thy mind?
 Or still to stubbornness inclined?
 I meant to tell thee recently
 God as his almsman keepeth thee.
 He put thee here the fruit to eat;
 Hast other recreation sweet?
 ADAM. Here nothing lacks I could desire.
 DEVIL. Dost to naught loftier aspire?
 Canst boast thyself a man of price!
 —God's gardener of Paradise!
 He made thee keeper of his park;
 Wilt thou not seek a higher mark?
 Filling thy belly!—Surely, he Had nobler aims in mind for thee!
 Listen now, Adam, and attend
 The honest counsel that I lend:
 Thou couldest from thy Lord be free,
 And thy Creator's equal be.
 In brief, I'll this assurance make:

If of this apple thou partake, [Then shall he lift his hand toward Paradise.]

Then thou shalt reign in majesty!
In power, God's partner thou canst be!

ADAM. Go! Get thee hence!

DEVIL. What! Adam. —How!

ADAM. Go! Get thee hence! Satan art thou!

Ill counsel giv'st thou.

DEVIL. How, pray tell!

ADAM. Thou would'st deliver me to hell!

Thou would'st me with my Lord embroil,

Move me from bliss to bale and moil.

I will not trust thee! Get thee hence!

Nor ever have the impudence

Again to come before my face!

Traitor forsworn, withouten grace!

[Then shall the DEVIL, sadly and with downcast countenance, depart from ADAM and he shall go even unto the gates of Hell, and he shall hold converse there with the other demons. Thereafter, he shall make an excursion among the people; but presently he shall draw near to Paradise, on the side where EVE is, and approaching EVE with a cheerful countenance and much blandishment, he thus accosteth her:]

DEVIL. Eve, hither am I come, to thee.

EVE. And prithee, Satan, why to me?

DEVIL. Seeking thy weal, thine honour, too.

EVE. God grant it!

DEVIL. Then, thy fears eschew.

Long since, I've mastered by my pains

Each secret Paradise contains;

A part of them to thee I'll tell.

EVE. Begin, then, and I'll listen well.

DEVIL. Thou'lt hearken to me?

EVE. Hearken?—yea,

Nor vex thy soul in any way.

DEVIL. Thou'lt keep it hidden?

EVE. Yea, in truth.

DEVIL. Nor publish it?

EVE. Not I! forsooth.

DEVIL. Then, to this contract I'll agree,
Nor further pledge require of thee.

EVE. Might'st safely trust my promise, though.

DEVIL. Thou'st been to a good school,
I trow!

Adam I've seen—a fool is he.

EVE. A little hard.

DEVIL. He'll softer be;

But harder now than iron is.

EVE. A noble man!

DEVIL. A churl! I wis.

Thought for himself he will not take;

Let him have care, e'en for thy sake.

Thou art a delicate, tender thing,

Thou'rt fresher than the rose in spring;

Thou'rt whiter than the crystal pale,

Than snow that falls in the icy vale.

An ill-matched pair did God create!

Too tender thou, too hard thy mate.

But thou'rt the wiser, I confess;

Thy heart is full of cleverness;

Therefore 't is good to treat with thee.

To thee I'd speak; have faith in me.

Let none know of it.

EVE. Who should know?

DEVIL. Not Adam even.

EVE. Be it so.

DEVIL. Now will I speak; do thou give ear.

None, save us twain, is present here,

(And Adam yon, who hath not heard.)

EVE. Speak up! He'll not perceive a word.

DEVIL. I'll shew thee, then, what crafty plot

Was 'gainst you in this garden wrought:

The fruit God gave you to possess

Hath in it little goodness,

But in the fruit to you forbidden

Exceeding virtue lieth hidden;

Therein is found of life the dower,

Dominion, mastery, and power,

Knowledge of evil and of good.

EVE. What savour hath 't?

DEVIL. 'T is heavenly food!

To thy fair body, to thy face,

Most meet it were to add this grace:

That thou be queen of the world—of this,

Of the firmament, and of the abyss—

And know all things that shall befall,

And be the mistress of them all.

EVE. Is such the fruit?

DEVIL. Truly, it is.
 [Then shall EVE carefully consider the forbidden fruit, and after she hath considered it for a season, she shall say:]
 EVE. Only to see it brings me bliss!
 DEVIL. But what, if thou shalt eat it, Eve?
 EVE. How should I know?
 DEVIL. Wilt not believe?
 First take it, and to Adam bear;
 Heaven's crown will then be yours to wear;
 Ye shall be like your Maker then,
 He'll hide no secrets from your ken.
 Soon as ye've eaten of the fruit,
 Your hearts it straightway will transmute;
 With God ye'll be—free from all blight—
 Of equal goodness, equal might.
 Come taste it!
 EVE. That I'm thinking on.
 DEVIL. Trust Adam not!
 EVE. I'll taste anon.
 DEVIL. But when?
 EVE. Let me deferment make Till Adam his repose shall take.
 DEVIL. But eat it. Put thy fears away.
 'Twere childish greatly to delay.
 [Then shall the DEVIL depart from EVE and shall go unto Hell; but ADAM shall come unto EVE, being sore displeased because the DEVIL hath spoken with her, and he shall say unto her:]
 ADAM. Say, wife, what thing of thee inquired
 That evil Satan?—what desired?
 EVE. 'T was of our honour he conversed.
 ADAM. Believe him not—the traitor curs'd!
 That he's a traitor, I've no doubt.
 EVE. And wherefore, pray?
 ADAM. I've found him out.
 EVE. What boots it? See him once—thou'lt find
 Eftsoons he'll make thee change thy mind!
 ADAM. Not he! I'll trust him not at all

Till I've made trial of him withal.
 Let him no more come near to thee;
 He's full of foulest perfidy,
 His sovereign Lord he sought to cheat
 And set himself in the highest seat.
 A knave that's done such wickedness
 To thee shall never have access.
 [Then a serpent, cunningly put together, shall ascend along the trunk of the forbidden tree, unto which EVE shall approach her ear, as if hearkening unto its counsel. Thereafter, EVE shall take the apple, and shall offer it unto ADAM. But he shall not yet receive it, and EVE shall say unto him:]
 EVE. Eat! Adam; thou know'st not what is offered!
 Let's take the gift thus freely proffered.
 ADAM. Is it so good?
 EVE. That thou shalt see;
 But canst not, till it tasted be.
 ADAM. I fear!
 EVE. Then, leave it!
 ADAM. Nay, I'll taste.
 EVE. Faint-heart! so long thy time to waste!
 ADAM. I'll take the fruit.
 EVE. Here, eat it! So
 Thou shalt both good and evil know.
 But, first, myself I'll taste it now.
 ADAM. And I next?
 EVE. Marry! Next shalt thou.
 [Then shall EVE eat a part of the apple, and she shall say unto ADAM:]
 I've tasted! Pardi! What a savour!
 I've never known so sweet a flavour!
 With such a savour 't is endued—
 ADAM. What savour?
 EVE. —as no mortal food!
 Now do mine eyes so clearly see
 I seem Almighty God to be!
 All that has been or shall befall
 I know—am mistress of it all!
 Eat! Adam, eat! No more abstain;
 Thou'lt do it to thy lasting gain.
 [Then shall ADAM receive the apple from the hand of EVE, saying:]

ADAM. I'll trust thy word, thou art my peer.

EVE. Take, eat; thou hast no cause to fear.

[Then shall ADAM eat a part of the apple; and having eaten it, he shall straightway take knowledge of his sin; and he shall bow himself down so that he cannot be seen of the people, and shall put off his goodly garments, and shall put on poor garments of fig-leaves sewn together; and manifesting exceeding great sorrow, he shall begin his lamentation:]

ADAM. O! sinful wretch! What have I done?

Now my avoidless death 's begun!
 Now, without rescue, am I dead;
 My fortune fair is evil sped;
 My lot, a little time ago
 So happy, now is turned to woe;
 I my Creator did forsake
 Through counsel of my evil make.
 O! sinner lost! What shall I do?
 How can I now my Maker view?
 Upon my Maker can I look,
 Whom through my folly I forsook?
 Ne'er such ill bargain did I strike!
 Now do I know what sin is like!
 O Death! Why dost thou let me live,
 Nor to the earth clean riddance give?
 Why, cumbering earth, do I yet stay?
 The depths of hell must I essay;
 In hell my dwelling aye shall be Until one come to succour me.
 In hell henceforward I shall fare,
 And whence shall help come to me there?
 Whence shall aid thither come to me?
 Who from such pains shall set me free?
 Why did I thus my Lord offend?
 Now there is none can be my friend;
 None will there be can me avail;
 Lost am I now, withouten fail!
 Against my Lord I've done such sin,
 No suit with him can I begin,
 For right is he, and wrong am I.
 O God! 'Neath what a curse I lie!
 Who, henceforth, will take thought of me,
 Who've wronged the King of Majesty?

'Gainst Heaven's own king such wrong I've done

That claim upon him have I none.
 No friend I have, no neighbour near,
 Who as my surety might appear;
 And whom shall I beseech for aid,
 When mine own wife hath me betrayed,
 Whom God gave me my fere to be?
 An evil counsel gave she me!
 Alas! O Eve! [Then shall he look upon
 EVE, his wife, and shall say:]
 Insensate wife!

In an ill hour I gave thee life!
 O had that rib been burned, alas!
 That brought me to this evil pass!
 Had but the fire that rib consumed,
 That me to such confusion doomed!
 Why, when from me the rib he drew,
 Burned he it not, nor me then slew?
 The rib the body hath betrayed,
 Ill-treated, and all useless made.
 I know not what to say or try;
 Unless grace reach me from on high,
 From pain I cannot be released,
 Such malady on me hath seized.
 Alas! O Eve! Woe worth the day—
 Such torment holdeth me in sway—
 Thou e'er becamest wife to me!
 Now I am lost through heeding thee;
 Through heeding thee I'm in this plight,
 Brought down most low from a great height.

Thence will no mortal rescue me—
 None, save the God of majesty.
 What say I? Wretch! Why named I
 him?

He help? I've gained his anger grim!
 None will e'er bring me succour—none
 Save him who'll come as Mary's son.
 From none can I henceforth get aid
 Since we our trust with God betrayed.
 Then, let all be as God ordains;
 No course, except to die, remains.

[Then let the choir begin: "The voice of the Lord God walking in the garden."

After this hath been sung, the FIGURE shall come, wearing a stole, and looking about him, as if seeking to know where ADAM is. But ADAM and EVE shall be hidden in a corner of Paradise, as if conscious of their wretchedness; and the FIGURE shall say: Adam, where art thou?

Then shall they both arise and stand before the FIGURE, yet not fully upright, but through shame for their sin, bending forward a little, and exceeding sad; and let ADAM make answer:]

ADAM. Lord, I'm here.
I hid; thine anger did I fear;
I saw my nakedness revealed,
Therefore myself have I concealed.

Who thee from goodness drew away?
What hast thou done? Why blushest thou?
How shall I reckon with thee now?
Thou hadst, a little while ago,
No reason any shame to show;
Now see I thee downcast, distraught;
Small joy thy dwelling here hath brought!

ADAM. So great is my confusion, I
Do hide me from thee, Lord.

ADAM. Such shame my body doth enlacc,

I dare not look thee in the face.

Hath this brought any gain to thee?

My servant thou, thy Lord am I.

ADAM. This can I in no wise deny.

Why set'st thou my command at naught?
After mine image formed I thee;
Why hast thou thus affronted me?
Thou didst in no wise heed my best;
Deliberately thou hast transgressed!
That fruit thou atest which I said
I had for thee prohibited.

Didst reckon thus my peer to be?

I do not think thou'lt jest with me!

[Then shall ADAM stretch forth his hand toward the FIGURE, and thereafter toward EVE, saying:]

ADAM. The woman that thou gavest me,

She first did this iniquity;
She gave me it, and I did eat;
Now is my life with woe replete.

Most rashly meddled I therein;

'T was through my wife that I did sin.

FIGURE. Thy wife thou trustedst more than me,

Didst eat without my warranty;

This recompense to thee I'll make:

Curs'd shall the ground be for thy sake,

Where thou shalt wish thy grain to sow,

Nor shall it any fruit bestow;

Curs'd shall it 'neath thy hand remain,

And all thy tillage be in vain.

Its fruit to thee it shall not yield,

But thorns and thistles fill thy field;

'T will change what'er is sown by thee;

Its curse shall be thy penalty.

With grievous toil and bitter pain

To eat thy bread shalt thou be fain;

In sweat, in great affliction, aye

Thou'lt live hereafter, night and day.

[Then shall the FIGURE turn toward EVE, and with a threatening countenance shall say unto her:]

Didst thy rebellion soon begin

And briefly heededest my decree.

EVE. The wicked serpent tempted me.

FIGURE. Didst think through him to be my peer?

Hast learned to make things hidden clear?

Erstwhile thou heldest sovereignty

Over all living things that be;

How quickly hast thou lost thy crown!

Now see I thee sad and cast down.

Hast thou thereby got gain or hurt?

I'll render thee thy just desert;

Thy service I will thus repay:

Woe thee shall find in every way;

In sorrow thou'lt thy children bear,

In pain throughout their life they'll fare;

In sorrow they'll be born of thee,

And end their days in misery.

To such distress and direful need

Thou'st brought thyself and all thy seed;

All thy descendants ever more

Thy sin shall bitterly deplore.

[And EVE shall make answer, saying:]

EVE. Yea, I have sinned—'t was through my folly vain;
For one sole apple I have got such bane
As doometh me and mine to bitter pain—
Great toll of wretchedness, with little gain!

If I have sinned, 't was nothing strange, I fear,
Whenas the serpent charmed my silly ear;
Much guile he hath, no lamb doth he appear;

Unhappy he who would his counsel hear!
I took the fruit—'t was folly, now I see;

This wickedness I wrought 'gainst thy decree;

I tasted it, and won thine enmity.
For a little fruit, my life must forfeit be!

[Then shall the FIGURE threaten the serpent, saying:]

I will exact my due of thee:
Upon thy belly shalt thou go
Through all the days thy life shall know;
The dust shall be thy daily food,
On moor or heath, or in the wood;
Woman shall bear thee enmity,
An evil neighbour ever be;
To strike her heel thou'lt lie in wait,
But she herself shall bruise thy pate;
Thy head with such a Hammer smite
'T will put thee in a sorry plight;
Therefrom shall she such aidance get,
She'll be aveng'd of thee yet!

Thou sought'st her acquaintance to thy woe;

She yet shall bring thy head full low;
There yet shall spring from her a Root
That all thy cunning shall confute.

[Then shall the FIGURE drive them forth out of Paradise, saying:]

Ye've made ill change of residence.
On earth shall ye your dwelling make;
In Paradise ye have no stake,

No title there, and no concern;

Forth shall ye go, without return.

Through judgment ye can claim naught there;

Now find you lodgement elsewhere.

Go! From felicity depart!

Hunger shall fail you not, nor smart,

But pain and weariness abound

Day after day, the whole week round.

On earth a weary term ye'll spend,

And die thereafter, in the end;

After ye've tasted death, straightway

To hell ye'll come without delay.

Here exile shall your bodies quell,

And danger daunt your souls in hell.

Satan shall hold your souls in thrall;

There'll be no helper ye can call,

None by whom rescue can be sent,

Unless I pity and relent.

[Let the choir sing: "In the sweat of thy face."]

In the mean time there shall come an angel, clad in white garments, and bearing a shining sword in his hand, whom the FIGURE shall set over against the gate of Paradise, and he shall say unto him:]

FIGURE. Guard well my Paradise, that ne'er

Again this outlaw enter there—

That him no leave or chance befall

To touch the fruit of Life at all;

With this thy sword that flameth aye,

Forever bar for him the way.

[When they shall be clean outside of Paradise, sad and confounded in appearance, they shall bow themselves to the ground, even unto their feet, and the FIGURE shall point to them with his hand, his face being turned toward Paradise; and the choir shall begin: "Behold Adam is become as one (of us)."]

And when this is ended, the FIGURE shall go back unto the church.

Then shall ADAM have a spade, and EVE a mattock, and they shall begin to till the ground, and they shall sow wheat therein. After they shall have finished their sowing, they shall go and sit for a season in a certain place, as if wearied with their toil, and with tearful eyes shall they look back oftentimes at Paradise, beating their breasts. Meanwhile shall the DEVIL come and plant thorns and thistles in their tillage, and then he shall depart. When ADAM and EVE shall come to their tillage, and when they shall have beheld the thorns and thistles that have sprung up, stricken with grievous sorrow, they shall cast themselves down upon the ground; and remaining there, they shall beat their breasts and their thighs, manifesting their grief by their gestures; and ADAM shall then begin his lamentation:]

ADAM. Woe worth the hour—hateful for ever more—

That e'er my sinfulness so whelmed me o'er!

That I forsook the Lord whom all adore!
To succour me, whom shall I now implore?

[Here let ADAM look back at Paradise; and he shall lift up both hands toward it; and devoutly bowing his head, he shall say:]

O Paradise! How sweet to dwell in thee!

Garden of glory! Oh how fair to see!
Thence, for my sin, must I an outcast be;
Hope of return is ever lost to me!

I was therein; but little joy I got;
Through heeding counsel false I thence was brought.

Now I repent; scorn earn I, as I ought.
'T is all too late, my sighing boots me naught.

Where was my memory? whither fled my wit?

That I, for Satan, glory's King should quit!

Now, sore my grief—no help is there in it;

My sin on history's pages shall be writ.
[Then shall ADAM lift up his hand against EVE, who shall have been set some little distance away, on higher ground, and moving his head with great indignation, he shall say unto her:]

O evil woman, full of perfidy!

How quickly to perdition brought'st thou me,

When thou mad'st sense and reason both to flee!

Now I repent, but can no pardon see.

To evil how inclined wert thou to cleave!

How quick the serpent's counsel to receive!

Through thee I die, through thee my life I leave.

Writ in the book thy sin shall be, O Eve!
Seest thou these tokens of confusion dread?

Earth doth perceive what curse o'erhangs our head;

'T was corn we sowed—thistles spring up instead.

Greatly we've sweat, ill have we profited!
Thou seest the outset of our evil state;

Great sorrow 't is, but greater doth await;
To hell shall we be brought, without rebate;

Pain shall not fail us, neither torment great.

O wretched Eve! How seemeth it to thee?

This hast thou gained thee as thy dowery:
Ne'er more canst thou bring man felicity,
But aye opposed to reason thou wilt be.

All they who come hereafter, of our seed,

Shall feel the punishment of thy misdeed;
Thou sinnedst; all must bear the doom decreed.

Late will he come who shall relieve their need.

[Then let EVE make answer unto ADAM:]

EVE. Adam, dear lord, much hast thou chidden me,
And much reviled and blamed my vil-
lainy;
If I have sinned, my punishment I dree;
Guilty I am, of God I'll judgèd be.
Toward God and thee much evil have
I wrought;
'Gainst my offence long shall reproach be brought;
My fault is great, my sin torments my
thought!
O wretched me! Of good in me is naught!
No ground have I wherewith to make my plea,
That God's just doom be not pronounced
on me;
Forgive me!—no atonement can I see,
Else would my sacrifice be offered free.
A miserable sinner, vile within,
Hiding my face from God for my great
sin—
Oh, take me. Death! Now let my death begin!
Shipwrecked and lost, the shore I cannot win.
The serpent fell, the snake of evil
fame,
Caused me to eat the apple, to my shame;
I gave it thee—to serve thee was mine
aim;
For this thy sin thyself I may not blame.
Oh, why did I my Maker's will defy?
Wherefore, dear lord, thy teachings thus deny?
Thou sinnedst, but the root thereof am I!
Our sickness doth a long, long cure imply.
For my great error, my adventure
vain,
Our seed, henceforth, will dearly pay
again;
The fruit was sweet, bitter will be the pain!
In sin we ate, ours will the guilt remain.
Yet, none the less, my hope in God
I base:
Sometime atonement will our guilt efface,
And I shall know God's favour and his
grace;
His power will bring us from that evil
place.

[Then shall the DEVIL come, and three or four other devils with him, bearing in their hands chains and iron shackles, which they shall place on the necks of ADAM and EVE.

And certain ones shall push them on, others shall drag them toward hell; other devils, however, shall be close beside hell, waiting for them as they come, and these shall make a great dancing and jubilation over their destruction; and other devils shall, one after another, point to them as they come; and they shall take them up and thrust them into hell; and thereupon they shall cause a great smoke to arise, and they shall shout one to another in hell, greatly rejoicing; and they shall dash together their pots and kettles, so that they may be heard without. And after some little interval, the devils shall go forth, and shall run to and fro in the square; certain of them, however, shall remain behind in hell.]

[Then shall come CAIN and ABEL.

Let CAIN be clad in red garments, but ABEL in garments of white; and they shall till the ground that hath been made ready; and after ABEL shall have rested a little from his labor, let him address his brother CAIN in a fond and friendly fashion, saying unto
him:]

ABEL. O Cain, my brother, of one blood are we;

Both Adam's sons—the first of men was
he—

And of one mother, also,—Eve hight
she;

In serving God, let us no niggards be.

To do our Maker's hests let us be fain;
So serve him that we shall his love regain,
Which our poor parents lost through folly
vain.
Let steadfast love abide betwixt us twain.
So serve we God that we may please him aye,
Pay him his dues in full, keep naught
away;
If we with cheerful hearts his word obey,
No dread of death our souls shall e'er affray.
Pay we his tithes, his tributes justly
tell,
First-fruits and offerings, sacrifice as
well;
If ever greed do us to fraud impel,
Without remission we'll be lost in hell.
Betwixt us twain let great affection
be,
Let never envy come, nor enmity;
For why should strife arise 'twixt thee
and me,
When all the earth to us hath been made
free?
[Then shall CAIN look at his brother ABEL, as if mocking him; and he shall say unto
him:]
CAIN. Good brother Abel, featly canst thou preach!
Canst order well thy points, and stablish
each;
But should one practice that which thou
dost teach,
In a few days, his gifts their end would
reach!
This giving tithes ne'er suited me one whit.
Thou, with thy stuff, thy pious vows ac-
quit,
And I, with mine, will do what seems me
fit;
If I do wrong, thou'lt not be damned for
it!
To love each other, Nature taught us
twain;
Let neither, then, dissemble aught, or feign;

Whiche'er of us shall raise contention vain,
Let him pay dear and have good cause to plain.
[Let ABEL again address his brother CAIN; since CAIN hath answered him more mildly than is his wont, he shall say:]
ABEL. Good brother Cain, now list to
me.
CAIN. Gladly! Pray tell what moveth
thee.
ABEL. Thine own advantage.
CAIN. Better still!
ABEL. Rebel no more against God's
will,
Nor flaunt thy froward hardihood:
This I adjure thee.
CAIN. Well and good!
ABEL. Then let us sacrifice, that thus
The Lord may be well pleased with us;
If his forgiveness thus we win,
He will no more regard our sin,
Nor heaviness our souls shall touch;
To gain his love doth profit much.
Come, let us on his altar set
Such gifts as shall his favour get;
Let us his love beseech, and pray
That he defend us night and day.
[Then shall CAIN make answer, as if ABEL's counsel were acceptable to him, saying:]
CAIN. Good brother, thou hast said aright!
This sermon didst thou well indite,
And I will pay good heed to it;
Let's make our offerings, as is fit.
What offerest thou?
ABEL. A lamb I'll bring,
The fairest and the choicest thing
That I can find in all the fold;
That one I'll offer, nor withhold;
And incense, also, will I bring.
Now I have told thee everything;
What offerest thou?
CAIN. Wheat from my field,
Such as God suffereth it to yield.
ABEL. The choicest?
CAIN. God forbid! Instead,
From that, tonight I'll make my bread.
ABEL. Such sacrifice will not avail
To please him.

CAIN. Pish! a silly tale!

ABEL. Thou'rt a rich man, much cattle hast—

CAIN. That have I!

ABEL. Count them, to the last,
And give to him a tenth of all;
This part shalt thou God's portion call.
Offer him this whole-heartedly,
And rich reward shall come to thee.
Wilt do this?

CAIN. Fie! Thou'rt mad, I guess!
To give a tenth were foolishness;
Of ten, there'd then be left but nine!
A fig for all thy counsel fine!
Come, let each offer severally
What seems him good.

ABEL. So let it be.

[Then shall they go unto two great stones, which shall have been made ready for this purpose. The one stone shall be set at such a distance from the other that, when the FIGURE appeareth, ABEL'S stone shall be on his right hand, but the stone of CAIN on his left. ABEL shall offer up a lamb, and incense, whence he shall cause smoke to arise. CAIN shall offer a handful of corn. Then the FIGURE shall appear, and he shall bless ABEL'S offering, but the offering of CAIN shall he regard with scorn. Wherefore, after the oblation, CAIN shall set his face against ABEL; and when their sacrifices are ended, they shall go again unto their own places.]

Then shall CAIN come unto ABEL, seeking craftily to lead him forth, that he may slay him; and he shall say unto him:]

CAIN. Good brother, let us hence!
Arise!

ABEL. Wherefore?

CAIN. Ourselves to exercise,
To view the tillage of our fields,
What growth, what flowering it yields;
Then, to the meadows we will go,
Thereby we'll be refreshed, I know.

ABEL. I'll go with thee, where thou shalt say.

CAIN. Come then; it will thy pains repay.

ABEL. Thou art my elder brother, thou,
And to thy wishes I will bow.

CAIN. Do thou go first, I'll follow thee
With loitering steps and leisurely.

[Then shall they both go to a place apart, and secret, as it were, where CAIN shall rush upon ABEL, like unto a mad man, desiring to slay him; and he shall say unto him:]

CAIN. Abel, thou diest!

ABEL. Wherefore? Speak!

CAIN. I will my vengeance on thee wreak!

ABEL. Have I thee wronged?

CAIN. Aye, wronged enow!
A traitor fully proved art thou.

ABEL. Surely I'm not!

CAIN. Dost thou deny?

ABEL. I'd ne'er do treachery—not I!

CAIN. Thou hast already!

ABEL. How? I'd know.

CAIN. Thou'lt know full soon.

ABEL. Can this be so!

CAIN. I'll set thee right full speedily.

ABEL. But thou canst nothing prove 'gainst me.

CAIN. The proof 's here!

ABEL. God will overthrow it.

CAIN. I'll slay thee!

ABEL. God will surely know it.

[Then shall CAIN lift up his right hand threateningly against him, saying:]

CAIN. Lo, this is what will prove the case!

ABEL. In God alone my trust I place.

CAIN. 'Gainst me, small aid from him
thou'lt get.

ABEL. Haply, he'll thwart thy purpose
yet.

CAIN. He cannot turn thy death aside.

ABEL. By his good pleasure I abide.

CAIN. Would'st hear wherefore I will thee kill?

ABEL. O tell me it!

CAIN. Tell thee I will.

Too long hast thou usurped God's ear!
Through thee, my prayers he would not
hear,

Through thee, he spurned the gifts I bore;
Dost think I'll not pay off this score?
Certes, I'll render thee thy pay!
Dead on this sand thou'lt lie today!

ABEL. If thou slay me, great wrong 't will be;

God will avenge my death on thee.
God wot I thee have harmèd not,
Nor slandered thee to him in aught;
But bade thee so thy acts employ
That thou his favor might'st enjoy, Bade thee grant all his claims—such things

As tithes, firstfruits, and offerings;
Thereby hadst thou his love obtained;
Through failing this, his wrath thou'st gained.

God keepeth faith; who serves him fain,
Shall nothing lose, but greatly gain.

CAIN. Thou'st talked too long; thou diest now!

ABEL. Brother! what say'st? My guide
wert thou;

Hither I came in perfect trust.

CAIN. Trust cannot save thee; die thou must!

I'll slay thee now! I challenge thee!

ABEL. May God be merciful to me!

[Then shall ABEL kneel down, facing the East; and he shall have a pot hidden underneath his garments, which CAIN shall strike violently, as if he were slaying ABEL himself. ABEL, however, shall lie stretched out,
as if he were dead.

The choir shall sing: "Where is Abel, thy brother?"

Meanwhile, the FIGURE shall come forth from the church and go toward CAIN, and after the choir shall have ended the responsorium, he shall say unto CAIN, as if very wroth with
him:]

FIGURE. Where is thy brother Abel, Cain?

To make rebellion art thou fain?

'Gainst me hast thou begun to strive?
Show me thy brother now, alive!

CAIN. How should I know where he may be?

—At home, or with his husbandry?
And why should I be forced to find him?
I was not set to keep and mind him!

O Cain?

Right well I know! Him thou hast slain!
Thy brother's blood to me doth cry;
Its voice hath come to me on high.
Great wickedness didst thou commit,
Thy life long thou'lt be curs'd for it;
This malison thou'lt bear for aye;
As was the deed, so be the pay!
Yet I will not that thou be slain,
But pass thy life in dole and pain;
Whoever, therefore, Cain shall slay,
A sevenfold penalty shall pay.
Thou slewest him who trusted me;
Most heavy shall thy penance be.

[Then shall the FIGURE return unto the church; but the devils shall come forth and lead CAIN away to hell, beating him again and again. ABEL, also, shall they lead away, albeit in a more gentle fashion.]

[Then shall the Prophets be made ready, one by one, in a secret place, as their order is.

Let the Lesson be read in the choir. "You, I say, do I challenge, O Jews."

And let the Prophets be summoned by name; and when they shall come forward, let them advance with dignity and utter their prophecies loudly and distinctly. So shall ABRAHAM come first, an old man with an exceeding long beard, arrayed in ample robes; and when he shall have sat for a brief season upon the bench, let him begin his prophecy in a loud voice:]

ABRAHAM. Thy seed shall possess the gates of their enemies, and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed.

Abraham, I; such is my name.
Hear, now, the message I proclaim:
Whose hope is on God's promise stayed,
Let him keep faith and trust unswayed;
Whose faith is fixed in God, for aye
Will God be with him. This I say
Through knowledge; God my faith did test;

I did his will, obeyed his hest;
For him, mine own son had I slain,
But God's hand did my hand restrain.
The unfinished offering did he bless,
'T was counted me for righteousness.
God promised me—'t is truth, indeed,—
An heir shall issue from my seed
Who shall subdue his every foe,
And strong and mighty shall he grow;
Their gates possessing, ne'er shall he
A menial in their castles be.
E'en such an one, sprung from my root,
Shall all our punishment commute;
By him the world shall ransomed be,
And Adam from his pain set free;
And men, of every race and kind
On earth, through him shall blessing find.

[After these words have been said, and a little time hath intervened, the devils shall lead ABRAHAM to hell.]

Then shall come MOSES, bearing in his right hand a rod, and in his left the tables (of stone). After he hath seated himself, let him utter his prophecy:]

MOSES. God shall raise up a prophet from among your brethren; to him shall ye hearken as to me.

That which I speak, through God I saw;

From our own brethren, from our law,
God shall raise up a man who'll be Prophet and sum of prophecy.
Heaven's secrets all shall he receive;
Him, more than me, shall ye believe.

[Thereafter shall he be led away by the DEVIL into hell. In like manner shall it be done with all the prophets.]

Then shall come AARON, in the vestments of a bishop, bearing in his hand a rod having flowers and fruit; and being seated, let him say:]

AARON. From this rod the flower that springeth

Perfume of salvation bringeth;
Sweet its fruit, 't will end all crying
And all sorrow for our dying.
This rod—unplanted, without root,—
Can bud, and blossom, and bear fruit;
Such Rod from mine own line shall spring
And deadly hurt to Satan bring.
No taint of fleshly birth he'll bear,
Yet man's own nature shall he wear.
This is salvation's fruit, 't will free
Adam from his captivity.

[After him, let DAVID draw nigh, arrayed in royal robes and wearing a crown; and let him say:]

DAVID. Truth is sprung out of the earth; and justice hath looked down from heaven. For the Lord will give goodness; and our earth shall yield her fruit. Out of the earth shall truth arise, And justice watch us from the skies; Yea, God shall give us all things good; Our land shall richly bring us food, Her increase yield that saving Bread Whereby Eve's sons shall all be fed; O'er all the earth shall he hold sway, Shall establish peace, drive war away.

[Thereafter let SOLOMON come forth, with the same adornments as DAVID, yet in such a manner that he shall seem to be younger; and sitting down, let him say:]

SOLOMON. Being ministers of God's kingdom, you have not judged rightly, nor kept the law of justice, nor walked according to the will of God; horribly and speedily will he appear to you; for a most severe judgment shall be for them that bear rule. For to him that is little, mercy is granted.

God gave to you his law, O Jews,
But faith with him ye would not use;
Wardens of his domain were ye,
He established you right royally;

Ye would not render judgment right,
 Your verdicts were in God's despite;
 His will ye would perform no more,
 And your iniquity waxed sore.
 Your deeds shall all to light be brought;
 Most grievous vengeance shall be wrought
 On those that highest sat of all.
 And they shall suffer fearful fall.
 But God shall set the lowly free
 And raise him to felicity.
 This saying shall be verified
 When God's own Son for us hath died.
 The masters of the law 't will be
 That slay him, most unlawfully;
 Against all justice, all belief,
 They'll crucify him, like a thief.
 But they shall lose their lordly seat,
 Who envy him, and ill entreat.
 Low down they'll come, from a great
 height,
 Well may they mourn their woeful plight.
 Howbeit, poor Adam shall he see
 And pity, and from sin set free.

[After him shall come BALAAM, an old man arrayed in ample robes, sitting upon an ass; and he shall come into the midst, and still sitting upon his beast, he shall speak his prophecy:]

BALAAM. A Star shall rise out of Jacob, and a Sceptre shall spring up from Israel, and shall strike the chiefs of Moab, and shall waste all the children of Seth.
 From Jacob shall a Star arise,
 Reddening with heaven's own fire the skies,
 A Sceptre spring from Israel
 That shall 'gainst Moab's rule rebel,
 Their haughtiness diminishing;
 For out of Israel Christ shall spring,
 And he shall be that glorious Star
 Whereby all things illumined are.
 His faithful ones he'll lead to joy,
 But all his enemies destroy.

[Thereafter shall DANIEL draw nigh, in years a youth, but in his demeanour like unto an old man; and when he shall have seated himself, let him speak his prophecy, stretching forth his hand against those whom he addresseth:]

DANIEL. When the Most Holy One shall have come, your anointing shall cease.
 You, O ye Jews, do I address,
 Who use toward God great wickedness.
 When he, the Chief of Saints, draws near,

Then your confusion shall appear,
 For then shall your anointing cease;
 All claim thereto must ye release.
 This Holy One is Christ, 't is plain;
 Through him the faithful life shall gain.
 To earth come, for his people's sake,
 On him your race great war shall make,
 Shall drive him to his Passion; so
 Shall they their unction's grace forego,
 Thenceforth nor priest nor king shall own,
 Their Law lost through themselves alone.

[After him shall come HABAKKUK, an old man; and sitting down, when he beginneth his prophecy, he shall lift up his hands toward the church, manifesting wonder and fear. Let him say:]

HABAKKUK. O Lord, I have heard thy speech and was afraid. In the midst of the two beasts shalt thou be recognized.

From God strange tidings have I heard,
 Whereby my mind is greatly stirred;
 So long did I this sign explore
 My heart thereat is troubled sore:
 Between two beasts shall he be shown,
 By all the world he shall be known.
 To him of whom this thing I say,
 Behold, a star shall point the way;
 Shepherds shall find him, thither brought,
 Within a crib in dry stone wrought
 Wherefrom the beasts shall eat their hay;
 To kings he'll be declared straightway;
 Thither the star shall lead the kings,
 All three shall bring their offerings.

[Then shall JEREMIAH enter, bearing a scroll in his hand; and let him say:]

JEREMIAH. Hear ye the word of the Lord, all ye men of Judah, that enter in at these gates to adore the Lord. Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel:
 Make your ways and your doings good.
 and I will dwell with you in this place.

The holy word of God now hear,
 All who are of his school, give ear,
 All righteous Judah's mighty race,
 Who in his household have a place:
 Ye all shall enter by this door,
 Our Lord to worship, evermore;
 The Lord of Hosts to you doth cry,
 The God of Israel, from on high:
 Make good your ways, amend each one,
 Let them be straight as furrows run,
 And let your hearts be clean, withal,
 Lest any evil you befall;
 Let all your thoughts in good abound,
 Nor wickedness therein be found.
 If thus ye do, then God will come.
 And in your dwellings make his home,
 The Son of God, the glorious,
 For you come down to earth, and thus,
 As mortal man, with you shall be—
 The Lord of heavenly majesty!
 Adam he shall from prison bring,
 Himself as ransom offering.

[After him shall come ISAIAS, bearing a book in his hand, and wrapped in a large mantle; and let him speak his prophecy.]

ISAIAS. And there shall come forth a rod out of the root of Jesse, and a flower shall rise up out of his root, and the Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon it. Now will I tell a wondrous thing: From Jesse's root a Rod shall spring, Shall burgeon and bear flower withal, Whereto great honor shall befall; The Holy Spirit shall enclose This flower, and shall thereon repose.

[Then shall there stand up a certain one of the synagogue, disputing with ISAIAS; and he shall say unto him:]

JEW. Now, Sir Isaias, answer me: Is this a tale, or prophecy? This thing thou'st told—pray, what is it?

Didst it invent, or is it writ? Thou'st been asleep—didst dream the rest? Speak'st thou in earnest, or in jest?

ISAIAS. This is no tale, 't is very truth!

JEW. Then, let's know all of it, forsooth!

ISAIAS. What I have spoke is prophecy.
 JEW. Writ in a book?

ISAIAS. Yea, verily,
 —In Life's! I've dreamed it not, but seen!

JEW. And how?

ISAIAS. Through grace of God, I ween.
 JEW. Thou seem'st to me a dotard grey,
 Thy mind and sense all gone astray!

A soothsayer thou seem'st, indeed,
 Skilled in the glass, perchance, to read;
 Come, read me now this hand, and tell

[Then shall he shew him his hand:]

Whether my heart be sick or well.

ISAIAS. Thou hast sin's murrain in thy soul,

Ne'er in thy life shalt thou be whole!

JEW. Am I, then, sick?

ISAIAS. With error sore.

JEW. When shall I mend me?

ISAIAS. Never more!

JEW. Begin thy soothsaying, I pray.

ISAIAS. There'll be no lie in what I say.

JEW. Come now, re-tell thy vision, quick!

If 't was a rod, or but a stick,
 And what its blossom shall engender;
 Then due respect to thee we'll render,
 And all the present generation
 Will listen to thy dissertation.

ISAIAS. Then, this great marvel shall ye hear;

—Such ne'er was told to mortal ear,
 To such a marvel never man
 Hath listened since the world began:
 "Behold, a virgin shall conceive and bear a son, and his name shall be called Immanuel."

The time is near, within your ken,
 Not tarrying or distant, when
 A virgin shall conceive, most fair,
 And, virgin still, a son shall bear;
 His name shall be Emmanuel.
 Saint Gabriel shall the message tell;
 The maid shall Virgin Mary be,
 She'll bear the fruit of Life's own tree,
 Jesus, our Saviour, who shall bring Adam from dole and suffering,
 And him to Paradise return.
 That which I speak from God I learn;

All this shall surely be fulfilled,
And ye thereon your hope shall build.

[Then shall come NEBUCHAD-NEZZAR, adorned as beftteth a king. And he shall say:]

NEBUCHADNEZZAR. Did we not cast three youths, bound, into the fire?

HIS MINISTERS. True, O King.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR. Lo, I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt, and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God.
Hear now a wondrous prodigy,
Unheard-of by all men that be!

This saw I with the children three
Cast in the blazing fire by me:
The fire was hot and fierce to dree,
The bright flame glowed exceedingly;
The three rejoiced and made great glee,
Within the furnace walking free.
But when I came the fourth to see,
(Great comfort to the rest gave he,)
His face shone, full of majesty,
The Son of God he seemed to be! *

ably very near the end of the play.—ED.

THE WISE VIRGINS AND THE FOOLISH VIRGINS

ANONYMOUS

Written and produced probably about the middle of the 12th century

TRANSLATED ESPECIALLY FOR THIS WORK BY BABETTE AND GLENN HUGHES

THUS SAY THE WOMEN. Where is the Christ, my Lord and exalted Son? Let us hasten to the sepulchre.

THE GUARDIAN ANGEL OF THE SEPULCHRE. He whom you seek in the sepulchre, O Christians, is no longer here. He has arisen, as he prophesied. Go, and announce to his disciples that he has gone before you into Galilee. Verily, the Lord has arisen from the tomb in glory. Hallelujah!

THE BRIDEGROOM. Behold the Bridegroom who is the Christ! Be watchful, virgins! Men now rejoice at his coming, and will further rejoice, for he has come to deliver the cradle of nations from the strong hand of the oppressor, from the forces of evil whose power sprang from the sin of the first mother. It is he whom the prophet calls the second Adam, and through whom the sin of the first Adam is destroyed in us. It is he who suffered on the cross that our blessed homeland should be restored to us, and that we should be saved from the powers of evil. He comes, the Bridegroom who, by his death, has expiated and washed away our sins, and has suffered the agony of the cross.

THE WISE VIRGINS. Hearken, ye virgins, where ye stand, Give ear unto our wise command: Jesus, the Bridegroom, is at hand.

Scarce hath he slept,
This Bridegroom ye attend.

For thy sins came he to earth,
In Bethlehem was his virgin birth,
In Jordan's waters was he cleansed,
Scarce hath he slept,
This Bridegroom ye attend.

Rejected was he, mocked, and flailed,
High on the cross beaten and nailed:
The tomb stood ready for the end.
Scarce hath he slept,
This Bridegroom ye attend.

Now he is arisen, as the Scripture said.
Gabriel am I, and this my stead.
Await him here whom ye shall wed.
Scarce hath he slept,
This Bridegroom ye attend.

THE FOOLISH VIRGINS. We virgins who come seeking you, we have carelessly spilled our oil. We pray to you as sisters in whom we put all our trust.

Sorrowful ones! Frail ones! Too long have we slept!

We are all fellow travellers; you are our sisters. Whatever the cause of our misfortunes, you can help us enter heaven.

Sorrowful ones! Frail ones! Too long
have we slept!

Light then our lamps; have pity on our ignorance, so that we shall not be shut without the door when the Bridegroom calleth you to enter his dwelling.

Sorrowful ones! Frail ones! Too long have we slept!

THE WISE VIRGINS. Cease, we implore you, sisters. Supplicate us no further, for in this matter your supplication is in vain.

Sorrowful ones! Frail ones! Too long have we slept!

Haste ye now; go quickly and ask of the merchants that they furnish you, the careless ones, with oil for your lamps.

Sorrowful ones! Frail ones! Too long have we slept!

THE FOOLISH VIRGINS. Ah, luckless ones that we are! What can we do here? Can we not keep watch? We have brought this trouble upon our own heads.

Sorrowful ones! Frail ones! Too long have we slept!

Oh, that the merchant may give us oil quickly! Either the merchant or his helper. Let us go now to find oil, for we have thoughtlessly spilled ours.

Sorrowful ones! Frail ones! Too long have we slept!

THE WISE VIRGINS. Of our oil ye shall have none, though ye ask us for it. Go and buy it from the merchant whom you see yonder.

Sorrowful ones! Frail ones! Too long have we slept!

THE MERCHANTS. Gentle ladies, go away!

This is no fit place to stay.
Seek help elsewhere—not from us;
Seek help from the generous.

Sorrowful ones! Frail ones! Too long have we slept!

Back to your wise sisters wend;
Ask in God's name that they lend
Oil for your lamps—do not delay,
Soon comes the Bridegroom on his way.
Sorrowful ones! Frail ones! Too long have we slept!

THE FOOLISH VIRGINS. Ah, luckless ones that we are! What will now befall us? Truly, we have found nothing of that we sought. It was prophesied and soon it shall come to pass. . . . Never shall we celebrate our marriage.

Sorrowful ones! Frail ones! Too long have we slept!

Hearken, Bridegroom, to the voices of thy supplicants. Open the door to us, even as to our sisters. Pity our distress.
[Now the BRIDEGROOM appears.]

THE CHRIST. Verily I say unto you, I know you not, for your lamps are unlighted. The way is long, and those who walk with me have need of light.

Go, ye frail ones! Go, unfortunates!
Forever are ye damned to pain.
To Hades go and there remain.

[Immediately they are seized by demons and hurried off to Hades.]

Ye Jews, who deny the word of God, hearken now as man after man of your race bears witness for the King. And you, gentlemen, who doubted the Virgin birth, expiate your error by teaching the truth among your fellows.

ISRAEL. Israel, thou gentle man, tell us: what dost thou know for certain of the Christ?

RESPONSE. There was no king in Judea before the coming of Him who was known by all. The peoples of the earth await, as I do, the cleansing Word of God.

MOSES. Lawgiver, approach and speak worthily of the Christ.

RESPONSE. God will give you a prophet. Hearken unto him as ye hearken unto me.

He who hearkens not shall be driven forth from his people.

ISAIAH. Isaiah, who knowest the truth, why speakest thou it not?

RESPONSE. From the seed of Jesse shall spring a flower, and that flower shall be the spirit of God.

JEREMIAH. Come near, Jeremiah. Speak some prophecies concerning the Christ.

RESPONSE. So be it. This one is our God. There shall be no other.

DANIEL. Daniel, lift thy prophetic voice and specify the facts concerning our Lord.

RESPONSE. The Saint of Saints shall come, and sacraments shall cease.

HABAKKUK. Habakkuk, show us now what kind of witness thou art on behalf of the King of Heaven.

RESPONSE. I awaited, and lo! straightway I was seized with terror in the presence of Thy miracles. At the sight of Thy handiwork I hid myself among the beasts of the field.

DAVID. Speak, O thou David, concerning thy grandson, whose works thou well knowest.

RESPONSE. All the faithful adored the Lord; he whom all future peoples shall serve. The Lord God hath said unto my Lord: thy seat is at my right hand.

SIMEON. Now let Simeon come near; he of whom it was said that he should not die without seeing the Lord.

RESPONSE. And now, O Lord, Thou hast permitted me to finish my life in peace, for I have looked upon Him whom Thou has sent into the world for the salvation of the people.

ELIZABETH. Concerning the Lord, thus speaketh Elizabeth to the multitude.

RESPONSE. Why should my master's mother come to visit me? Because of him, a joyous child is stirring in my womb.

JOHN THE BAPTIST. Say why it is, thou Baptist, that even in thy mother's womb thou hast praised the Christ. Bring forth thy testimony in favor of Him whom thou hast praised so joyously.

RESPONSE. There is one that cometh after me, the latchet of whose shoe I am not worthy to unloose.

VIRGIL. Virgil, thou prophet of the Gentiles, give testimony of the Christ.

RESPONSE. Behold a new day dawns! A new race of men has appeared upon the earth.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR. Come! With thy mouth to the bottle, speak the truth that thou knowest of Christ.

RESPONSE. Nebuchadnezzar, by means of a prophecy, give authority to the author of all things.

RESPONSE. When I had a vision of the three men whom I condemned to die by fire, I saw also the Son of God sharing their fate in the flames. Three men only did I condemn to the fire. The fourth was the Son of God.

SIBYL. Speak truly, Sibyl. What do you presage of the Christ?

RESPONSE. There will come a sign of judgment. The earth shall sweat. From heaven a king shall come. All this at a later day. Here in the flesh he will sit in judgment on the world. Incredulous Judea, why art thou still without fear?

[Here commences the Benedicamus.]

Filled with gladness, let us rejoice. Gather round; let us celebrate with great joy the birth of Christ. He has come bringing grace and has shed His light upon the faithful.

THE SECOND SHEPHERDS' PLAY

[FROM THE Townely, OR Wakefeld CYCLE]

ANONYMOUS *

Written and produced probably between 1360-1410

CHARACTERS

1ST SHEPHERD

2ND SHEPHERD

3RD SHEPHERD

MAK, the Sheep-stealer

MAK'S WIFE

MARY

THE CHILD CHRIST

AN ANGEL

1ST SHEPHERD. Lord! What, these weathers are cold, and I am ill- happed;	For the tilth of our lands lies fallow as the floor, As ye ken.
I am near numb of hand, so long have I napped;	We are so lamed, Over-taxed and shamed,
My legs bend and fold, my fingers are chapped;	We are made hand-tamed, With these gentlery-men.
It is not as I would, for I am all lapped In sorrow.	Thus they rob us our rest, Our Lady them wary!
In storms and tempest, Now in the east, now in the west, Woe is him has never rest, Mid-day nor morrow!	These men that are tied fast, they cause the plow tarry.
But we poor shepherds, that walk on the moor,	Which men say is for the best, we find it contrary,
In faith, we are near-hands out of the door;	Thus are husband-men oppressed, in point to miscarry
No wonder, as it stands, if we be poor,	In life. Thus hold they us under, Thus they bring us in blunder,

* The present version is modernized by the editor, and based to a certain extent upon earlier versions.

It were great wonder,
 If ever should we thrive.
 For may he get a painted sleeve, or a brooch nowadays,
 Woe is him that shall grieve, or once
 againsays,
 Dare no man him reprove, what mast'ry
 he has,
 And yet may no man believe one word that he says—

No letter.

He can make purveyance,
 With boast and bragging,
 And all is through maintenance,
 Of men that are greater.

There shall come a swain, as proud as a peacock,

He must borrow my wain, my plow also,
 Then I am full fain to grant ere he go.
 Thus live we in pain, anger, and woe,

By night and day;

He must have if he longed
 If I should forego it,
 I were better be hanged

Than once say him nay.

It does me good, as I walk thus by mine
 own,

Of this world for to talk in manner of moan—

To my sheep will I stalk and hearken
 anon,

There abide on a balk, or sit on a stone
 Full soon.

For I trow, pardie!

True men if they be,

We get more company
 Ere it be noon.

2ND SHEPHERD. Benedicite and Domi-
nius! what may this mean?

Why fares this world thus? Oft have we not seen!

Lord, these weathers are spiteful, and the weather full keen:

And the frost so hideous they water mine
 e'en,

No lie!

Now in dry, now in wet,

Now in snow, now in sleet,

When my shoon freeze to my feet,

It is not all easy.

But as far as I ken, or yet as I go,

We poor husbands suffer much—
 We have sorrow then and then, it falls often so,

Poor Capel, our hen, both to and fro

She cackles,

But begin she to croak,

To groan or to cluck,

Woe is him, our cock,

For he is in the shackles.

These men that are wed have not all their will,

When they are full hard put, they sigh
 full still;

God wot they are led full hard and full
 ill,

In bower nor in bed they say nought
 theretill,

This tide.

My part have I found,

My lesson is learned,

Woe is him that is bound,

For he must abide.

But now late in our lives,—a marvel to
 me,

That I think my heart breaks such wonders to see,

What that destiny drives, it should so
 be!

Some men will have two wives, and some men three,

In store.

Some are woe that have any;

But so far ken I,

Woe is him that has many,

For he feels sore.

But young men of wooing, for God that you bought,

Be full 'ware of wedding, and think in your thought

"Had I wist" is a thing it serves of
 nought;

Mickle still mourning has wedding home
 brought,

And griefs,

With many a sharp shower,

For thou may catch in an hour

That shall savor full sour

As long as thou liv'st.

For as read I epistle, I have one to my mate

As sharp as a thistle, as rough as a briar.

She is browed like a bristle with a sour-looking cheer;

Had she once wet her whistle she could sing full clear

Her Pater-Noster.

She is as great as a whale,

She has a gallon of gall;

By Him that died for us all!

I would I had run till I'd lost her.

1ST SHEPHERD. God look over the row, fully deafly ye stand.

2ND SHEPHERD. Yea, the devil in thy maw!—so tarrying,

Saw'st thou anywhere Daw?

1ST SHEPHERD. Yea, on a fallow land Heard I him blow. He comes here at hand.

Not far; stand still.

2ND SHEPHERD. Why?

1ST SHEPHERD. For he comes, hope
I.

2ND SHEPHERD. He will make us both a lie,

Unless we beware.

3RD SHEPHERD. Christ's Cross me speed, and Saint Nicholas!

Thereof had I need, it is worse than it
was.

Whoso could, take heed, and let the world
pass,

It is ever in dread and brittle as glass,
And slippery.

This world fared never so,
With marvels more and more—

Now in weal, now in woe,

And all-thing'awry.

Was never since Noah's flood such floods
seen,

Winds and rains so rude, and storms so keen,

Some stammered, some stood in doubt, as I ween,

Now God turn all to good! I say as I mean,

For ponder:

These floods so they drown

Both in fields and in town,

And bear all down,

And that is a wonder.

We that walk in the nights, our cattle to keep,

We see sudden sights, when other men
sleep:

Yet methinks my heart lights, I see knaves
peep,

Ye are two tall wights, I will give my sheep

A turn.

But full ill have I meant,

As I walk on this bent,

I may lightly repent,

My toes if I spurn.

Ah, sir, God you save, and master mine!

A drink fain would I have and somewhat to dine.

1ST SHEPHERD. Christ's curse, my knave, thou art a lazy hind!

2ND SHEPHERD. What, the boy pleases to rave. Abide until later,

We have made it.

I'll thrift on thy pate!

Though the knave came late

Yet is he in state

To dine, if he had it.

3RD SHEPHERD. Such servants as I, that sweats and swinks,

Eats our bread full dry, and that me forthinks;

We are oft wet and weary when master-
men winks,

Yet comes full lately both dinners and drinks,

But thoroughly.

Both our dame and our sire,

When we have run in the mire,

They can nip at our hire,

And pay us full lately.

But hear my truth, master, for the fare that ye make,

I shall do thereafter work, as I take;

I shall do a little, sir, now and then,

For yet lay my supper never on my stomach

In fields.

Whereto should I argue?

With my staff can I leap,

And men say "a cheap bargain yields poorly."

1ST SHEPHERD. Thou wert an ill lad to ride a-woosing

With a man that had but little of spending.

2ND SHEPHERD. Peace, boy, I bade: no more jangling,
Or I shall make thee afraid, by the heaven's king!
With thy gauds;
Where are our sheep, boy, we scorn?
3RD SHEPHERD. Sir, this same day at morn
I them left in the corn,
When they rang Lauds;
They have pasture good, they cannot go wrong.
1ST SHEPHERD. That is right. By the rood, these nights are long!
Yet I would, or we went, one gave us a song.
2ND SHEPHERD. So I thought as I stood, to mirth us among.
3RD SHEPHERD. I grant.
1ST SHEPHERD. Let me sing the tenory.
2ND SHEPHERD. And I the treble so high.
3RD SHEPHERD. Then the mean falls to me;
Let see how ye chant.

[MAK enters, with a cloak thrown over his smock.]

MAK. Now, Lord, for thy names seven, that made both moon and stars
Well more than I can name: thy will, Lord, leaves something lacking;
I am all upset, that moves oft my brains,
Now would God I were in heaven, for there weep no bairns,
So still.
1ST SHEP. Who is that pipes so poor?
MAK. Would God ye wist how I fare!
Lo, a man that walks on the moor,
And has not all his will.
2ND SHEPHERD. Mak, where hast thou gone? Tell us tidings.
3RD SHEPHERD. Is he come? Then each one take heed to this thing.
[Takes his cloak from him.]
MAK. What, I be a yeoman, I tell you, of the king;
The self and the same, sent from a great lording,
And such.
Fie on you; go hence,

Out of my presence!
I must have reverence,
Why, who be I?
1ST SHEPHERD. Why make ye it so quaint? Mak, ye do wrong.
2ND SHEPHERD. But, Mak, play ye saint? I trow that ye sang.
3RD SHEPHERD. I trow the knave can paint, the devil might him hang!
MAK. I shall make complaint, and make you all be flogged.
At a word,
And tell even how ye doth.
1ST SHEPHERD. But, Mak, is that sooth?
Now take out that southern tooth,
And set in a turd.
2ND SHEPHERD. Mak, the devil in your eye, a stroke would I lend you.
3RD SHEPHERD. Mak, know ye not me? By God, I could beat you.
MAK. God look you all three! Me-thought I had seen you.
Ye are a fair company.
1ST SHEPHERD. Can ye now remember you?
2ND SHEPHERD. Joke on, knave!
Thus late as thou goes,
What will men suppose?
And thou hast an ill name
Of stealing of sheep.
MAK. And I am true as steel, all men wot,
But a sickness I feel, that holds me full hot,
My belly fares not well, it is out of estate.
3RD SHEPHERD. Seldom lies the devil dead by the gate.
MAK. Therefore
Full sore am I and ill,
If I stand stock-still;
I eat not a tittle
This month and more.
1ST SHEPHERD. How fares thy wife?
By my hood, how fares she?
MAK. Lies weltering by the road! by the fire, lo!
And a house full of brew she drinks well too,
Ill speed other good that she will do
But so.

Eats as fast as she can,
 And each year that comes to man,
 She brings forth a child,
 And some years two.
 But were I not more gracious, and richer
 by far,
 I were eaten out of house and of harbor,
 Yet is she a fowl dear, if ye come near.
 There is none that trows, nor knows,
 worse

Than ken I.

Now will ye see what I proffer,
 To give all in my coffer
 To-morrow next to offer,

Her head mass-penny.

2ND SHEPHERD. I wot so tired watching is none in this shire:

I would sleep if I took less to my hire.

3RD SHEPHERD. I am cold and naked, and would have a fire.

1ST SHEPHERD. I am weary of walking, and run in the mire.

Wake thou!

2ND SHEPHERD. Nay, I will lie down by,
 For I must sleep truly.

3RD SHEPHERD. As good a man's son was I

As any of you.

But, Mak, come hither, between shalt thou lie down.

MAK. Then might I prevent you forthwith: of that ye would say,

No dread.

From my head to my toe
Manus tuas commendo,
Pontio Pilato.

Christ's cross me speed, [He rises,
while the shepherds sleep, and says:]

Now were time for a man that lacks what he would,

To stalk privily then into a fold,
 And nimble to work then, and be not too
 bold,

He might regret the bargain, if it were told

At the ending.

Now were time for to begin;
 But he needs good counsel
 That fain would fare well,

And has but little spending. [MAK works a spell on them.]

But about you a circle as round as a
 moon,

Till I have done that I will, till that it be noon,

That ye lie stone-still, till that I have
 done,

And I shall say theretill of good words a few

Aloud.

Over your heads my hand I lift,
 Out go your eyes, ford your sight!

But yet I must make better shift,
 And it be right.

Lord, what? they sleep hard! that may ye all hear;

Was I never a shepherd, but now will I learn

If the flock be scared, yet shall I nip near.
 How, draw hitherward! now mends our cheer,

From sorrow:

A fat sheep, I daresay,
 A good fleece dare I lay,

Repay when I may,

But this will I borrow. [He steals a sheep and goes home.]

MAK [at his own door.] How, Gill, art thou in? Get us some light.

HIS WIFE. Who makes such din this time of the night?

I am set for to spin: I hope not I might Rise a penny to win: I shrew them on height.

So fares

A housewife that has been
 To be raced thus between:

There may no jobs be seen

For such small chores.

MAK. Good wife, open the door. See'tst thou not what I bring?

WIFE. I may let thee draw the latch.
 Ah! come in, my sweeting.

MAK. Yea, thou dost not reck of my long standing.

WIFE. By thy naked neck, thou art like for to hang.

MAK. Go away:

I am worthy my meat,

For in a strait can I get

More than they that swink and sweat
 All the long day.

Thus it fell to my lot, Gill, I had such grace.

WIFE. It were a foul blot to be hanged for the case.

MAK. I have scaped, Gillot, oft as hard a blow.

WIFE. But so long goes the pot to the water, men says,
At last comes it home broken.

MAK. Well know I the token,
But let it never be spoken;
But come and help fast.
I would he were slain; I list well eat:
This twelvemonth was I not so fain of one sheep-meat.

WIFE. Come they ere he be slain, and hear the sheep bleat!

MAK. Then might I be ta'en: that were a cold sweat.

Go bar
The gate door.

WIFE. Yes, Mak,
For and they come at thy back.

MAK. Then might I pay for all the pack:
The devil of them give warning!

WIFE. A good trick have I spied, since thou can none:
Here shall we him hide, till they be gone;
In my cradle abide. Let me alone,
And I shall lie beside in childbed and groan.

MAK. Thou advise well.
And I shall say thou wast delivered
Of a knave child this night.

WIFE. Now well is me! Day bright,
That ever I was bred!
This is a good guise and a far cast;
Yet a woman's advice helps at the last.
I care never who spies: again go thou fast.

MAK. But I come ere they rise; else blows a cold blast.
I will go sleep. [MAK goes back to the field.]

Yet sleep all this company.
And I shall go stalk privily,
As it had never been I
That carried their sheep.

1ST SHEPHERD. Resurrez a mortruis:
have hold my hand.

Judas carnas dominus! I may not well stand:
My foot sleeps, by Jesus, and I water fasting!
I thought that we laid us full near England.

2ND SHEPHERD. Ah ya!
Lord, I have slept well!
As fresh as an eel,
As light I me feel
As leaf on a tree.

3RD SHEPHERD. Benedicite! be herein!
So my body quakes,
My heart is out of skin, what-so it makes.
Who makes all this din? So my brow aches,
To the door will I win. Hark fellows, wake!
We were four.
See ye anywhere Mak now?

1ST SHEPHERD. We were up ere thou.

2ND SHEPHERD. Man, I give God a vow,
Yet went he nowhere.

3RD SHEPHERD. Methought he was wrapped in a wolf-skin.

1ST SHEPHERD. So are many happed now, namely within.

2ND SHEPHERD. When we had long napped; methought with a gin
A fat sheep he trapped, but he made no din.

3RD SHEPHERD. Be still:
Thy dream makes thee mad.
It is but phantom, by the rood.

1ST SHEPHERD. Now God turn all to good,
If it be his will.

2ND SHEPHERD. Rise, Mak, for shame!
thou liest right long.

MAK. Now Christ's holy name be us among,
What is this? For Saint James!—I may not well go.
I trow I be the same. Ah! my neck has lain wrong
Enough
Mickle thank, since yester-even.
Now, by Saint Stephen!
I was frightened by a dream;
My heart jumped out of my breast'

I thought Gill began to croak, and travail full sad,
Well nigh at the first cock,—of a young lad,
For to mend our flock: then be I never glad.
To have two to provide for,—more than ever I had.

Ah, my head!

A house full of young mouths,
The devil knock out their brains!

Woe is he has many hairns,
And thereto little bread.

I must go home, by your leave, to Gill,
as I thought.

I pray you look my sleeve, that I steal
nought:

I am loth you to grieve, or from you take aught.

3RD SHEPHERD. Go forth, ill might thou thrive, now would I we sought,

This morn,

That we had all our store.

1ST SHEPHERD. But I will go before,
Let us meet.

2ND SHEPHERD. Where?

3RD SHEPHERD. At the crooked thorn.
MAK [at his own door again]. Undo this door! Who is here?

How long shall I stand?

WIFE. Who makes such a stir? Now walk in the waning of the moon.

MAK. Ah, Gill, what cheer? It is I,
Mak, your husband.

HIS WIFE. Then may we see here the devil in a band,

Sir Guile.

Lo, he comes with noise,
As he were holden in the throat.

I may not sit at my work
A hand-long while.

MAK. Will ye hear what fare she makes—to get her an excuse?
And do naught but plays—and claws her toes.

WIFE. Why, who wanders, who wakes, who comes, who goes?
Who brews, who bakes? Who makes for me this hose?

And then

It is pity to behold,

Now in hot, now in cold,
Full woful is the household
That wants a woman.

But what end hast thou made with the shepherds, Mak?

MAK. The last word that they said,
when I turned my back,

They would look that they had their sheep,
all the pack.

I hope they will not be well paid, when they their sheep lack.

Pardie!

But howso the game goes,
To me they will suspect,
And make a foul noise,

And cry out upon me.

But thou must do as thou promised.

WIFE. I accord me thereto.

I shall swaddle him right in my cradle.
If it were a greater sleight, yet could I help our ends.

I will lie down straight. Come wrap me up.

MAK. I will WIFE. Behind!

Come Coll and his mate,
They will nip us full narrow.

MAK. But I may cry out "Harrow!"
The sheep if they find.

WIFE. Hearken aye when they call:
they will come anon.

Come and make ready all, and sing by thine own,

Sing "Lullay!" thou shall, for I must groan,

And cry out by the wall on Mary and John,

Full sore.

Sing "Lullay" full fast
When thou hears at the last;

And but I play a false cast
Trust me no more.

[Reënter the Three Shepherds.]

3RD SHEPHERD. Ah, Coll! good morn: why sleep'st thou not?

1ST SHEPHERD. Alas, that ever was I born! We have a foul blot.

A fat wether have we lorn.

3RD SHEPHERD. Marry, Gods forbid!

2ND SHEPHERD. Who should do us that scorn? That were a foul spot.

1ST SHEPHERD. Some knave.
I have sought with my dogs,
All Horbury thickets,
And of fifteen hogs
Found I but one ewe.

3RD SHEPHERD. Now trust me if you will, by Saint Thomas of Kent!
Either Mak or Gill—was at that assent.

1ST SHEPHERD. Peace, man, be still; I saw when he went.
Thou slander'st him ill; thou ought to repent.
Good speed.

2ND SHEPHERD. Now as ever might I thrive,
If I should even here die,
I would say it were he,
That did that same deed.

3RD SHEPHERD. Go we thither I advise, and run on our feet.
May I never eat bread, the truth till I wit.

1ST SHEPHERD. Nor drink in my head, with him till I meet.

2ND SHEPHERD. I will rest in no stead, till that I him greet,
My brother.
One thing I will promise:
Till I see him in sight
Shall I never sleep one night
Where I do another.

3RD SHEPHERD. Will ye hear how they sing! Our Sire! list, how they croon!

1ST SHEPHERD. Heard I never none crack so clear out of tune.
Call on him.

2ND SHEPHERD. Mak! Undo your door soon.

MAK. Who is it that spoke as it were noon?
Loudly?
Who is that I say?
3RD SHEPHERD. Good fellows! were it day?
MAK. As far as ye may,
Good, speak soft!
Over a sick woman's head,—that is at mal-
ease,

I had liefer be dead, or she had any disease.

WIFE. Go to another stead; I may not well breathe;
Each foot that ye tread, goes near make me sneeze
So he!

1ST SHEPHERD. Tell us, Mak, if ye may,
How fare ye, I say?
MAK. But are ye in this town to-day?
Now how fare ye?
Ye have run in the mire, and are yet wet.
I shall make you a fire, if ye will sit.
A horse would I hire; think ye of it.
Well quit is my hire, my dream, this is it:
A season.
I have bairns if ye knew,
Well more than enough,
But we must drink as we brew,
And that is but reason.
I would ye dined e'er ye went: methink that ye sweat.

2ND SHEPHERD. Nay, neither mends our mode, drink nor meat.

MAK. Why, sir, ails you aught but good?

3RD SHEPHERD. Yes, our sheep that we gat,
Are stolen as they went. Our loss is great.

MAK. Sirs, drink!
Had I been there,
Some should have bought it full dear.

1ST SHEPHERD. Marry, some men trow that ye were,
And that makes us repent.

2ND SHEPHERD. Mak, some men trow that it should be ye.

3RD SHEPHERD. Either ye or your spouse; so say we.

MAK. Now if ye have suspicion to Gill or to me,
Come and rip our house, and then may ye see
Who had her.
If I any sheep got,
Either cow or stot,

And Gill, my wife rose not
Here since she laid her.

As I am both true and leal, to God here
I pray,
That this be the first meal, I shall eat
this day.

1ST SHEPHERD. Mak, as I have weal, arise thee, I say!
"He learned timely to steal, that could not say nay."

WIFE. I swelter.
Out, thieves, from my house!
Ye come to rob us for the nonce.

MAK. Hear ye not how she groans?
Your heart should melt.

WIFE. Out thieves, from my bairn!
Nigh him not there.

MAK. Knew ye how she had fared,
your hearts would be sore.
Ye do wrong, I you warn, that thus comes before

To a woman that has fared, but I say
no more.

WIFE. Ah, my middle!
I pray to God so mild,
If ever I you beguiled,
That I eat this child,

That lies in this cradle.

MAK. Peace, woman, for God's pain, and cry not so:
Thou spill'st thy brain, and mak'st me full woe.

2ND SHEPHERD. I know our sheep be slain, what find ye two?

3RD SHEPHERD. All work we in vain:
as well may we go.

But, hatters!
I can find no flesh,
Hard nor soft,
Salt nor fresh,

But two bare platters:
Live cattle but this, tame nor wild,
None, as have I bliss; as loud as he smiled.

WIFE. No, so God me bless, and give me joy of my child.

1ST SHEPHERD. We have marked amiss:
I hold us beguiled.

2ND SHEPHERD. Sir, done!
Sir, our lady him save,
Is your child a boy?

MAK. Any lord might him have
This child to his son.

When he wakens he snatches, that joy is
to see.

3RD SHEPHERD. In good time, be his steps, and happy be they!
But who were his good parents, tell now
to me!

MAK. So fair fall their lips!

1ST SHEPHERD. Hark now, a lie!

MAK. So God them thank,
Parkin, and Gibbon Waller, I say,
And gentle John Horne, in good faith,
He made all the noise,

With the great shank.

2ND SHEPHERD. Mak, friends will we be, for we are all one.

MAK. Why! now I hold for me, for help get I none.
Farewell all three: all glad were ye gone.

3RD SHEPHERD. Fair words may there be, but love there is none.

1ST SHEPHERD. Gave ye the child anything?

2ND SHEPHERD. I trust not one farthing.

3RD SHEPHERD. Fast again will I fling, Abide ye me there. [He returns to MAK's cot.]

Mak, take it to no grief, if I come to thy bairn.

MAK. Nay, thou dost me great reprieve, and foul hast thou fared.

3RD SHEPHERD. The child will it not grieve, that little day-star.

Mak, with your leave, let me give your bairn

But sixpence.

MAK. Nay, go 'way: he sleeps.

3RD SHEPHERD. Methink he peeps.

MAK. When he wakens he weeps.
I pray you go hence.

3RD SHEPHERD. Give me leave him to kiss, and lift up the clout.
What the devil is this? He has a long snout.

1ST SHEPHERD. He is marked amiss. We wait ill about.

2ND SHEPHERD. Ill-spun weft, I-wis, aye
cometh foul out;

Aye so!
He is like to our sheep.

3RD SHEPHERD. How, Gib, may I
peep?

1ST SHEPHERD. I trow, nature will creep,
Where it may not go.

2ND SHEPHERD. This was a quaint trick, and a far cast;
It was a high fraud.

3RD SHEPHERD. Yea, sirs, was't.
Let burn this bawd and bind her fast.
A false scold hangs at the last;
So shall thou.

Will ye see how they swaddle
His four feet in the middle?
Saw I never in a cradle
A hornèd lad ere now.

MAK. Peace, bid I! What! let be your fare;
I am he that him gat, and yon woman
him bare.

1ST SHEPHERD. What devil shall he be called? Lo, God, Mak's heir.

2ND SHEPHERD. Let be all that. Now
God give him care! I say.

WIFE. A pretty child is he,
As sits on a woman's knee;
A dilly-down, perdie!
To make a man laugh.

3RD SHEPHERD. I know him by the earmark—that is a good token.

MAK. I tell you, sirs, hark: his nose was broken.

Since then, told me a clerk, that he was bewitched.

1ST SHEPHERD. This is a false work.—
I would fain be avenged.
Get a weapon!

WIFE. He was taken by an elf;
I saw it myself.

When the clock struck twelve,
Was he mis-shapen.

2ND SHEPHERD. Ye two are right deft, —same in a stead.

3RD SHEPHERD. Since they maintain their theft,—let's do them to
dead.

MAK. If I trespass eft, gird off my
head.
With you will I be left.

1ST SHEPHERD. Sirs, do my advice
For this trespass,
We will neither curse nor flout,
Fight, nor chide,
But seize him tight,
And cast him in canvas. [*They toss
MAK in a sheet.*]

1ST SHEPHERD [as the three return to the fold]. Lord, how I am sore, in point for to burst.

In faith I may no more, therefore will I
rest.

2ND SHEPHERD. As a sheep of seven score, he weighed in my fist.
For to sleep anywhere, methink that I list.

3RD SHEPHERD. Now I pray you,
Lie down on this green.

1ST SHEPHERD. On these thefts yet I consider.

3RD SHEPHERD. Whereto should ye worry?
Do as I say you.

[Enter an ANGEL above, who sings "Gloria in Excelsis," then says:]

ANGEL. Rise, herd-men, gracious, for now is he born
That shall take from the fiend, what Adam had lorn:
That fiend to overthrow, this night is he
born.
God is made your friend: now at this morn,
He behests;
To Bedlem go see,
There lies that Divine One,
In a crib full poorly,
Betwixt two beasts.

1ST SHEPHERD. This was a quaint voice that ever yet I heard.
It is a marvel to relate thus to be scared.

2ND SHEPHERD. Of God's son of heaven, he spoke up word.
All the wood like the lightning, methought that he made Appear.

3RD SHEPHERD. He spake of a bairn
In Bedlem, I you warn.

1ST SHEPHERD. That betokens yonder star.
 Let us seek him there.
 2ND SHEPHERD. Say, what was his song? Heard ye not how he cracked it?
 Three breves to a long.
 3RD SHEPHERD. Yea, marry, he shouted it.
 Was no crochet wrong, nor no thing that lacked it.
 1ST SHEPHERD. For to sing us among, right as he trilled it,
 I can.
 2ND SHEPHERD. Let us see how ye croon
 Can ye bark at the moon?
 3RD SHEPHERD. Hold your tongues, have done.
 1ST SHEPHERD. Hark after, then.
 2ND SHEPHERD. To Bedlem he bade that we should go.
 I am full feared that we tarry too long.
 3RD SHEPHERD. Be merry and not sad: of mirth is our song, Everlasting glad, our road may we take,
 Without noise.
 1ST SHEPHERD. Hie we thither quickly;
 If we be wet and weary,
 To that child and that lady
 We have it not to delay.
 2ND SHEPHERD. We find by the prophecy
 —let be your din—
 Of David and Isaiah, and more than I can mind,
 They prophesied by clergy, that on a virgin
 Should he light and lie, to pardon our sin
 And slake it,
 Our kind from woe;
 For Isaiah said so,
Cite virgo
Conspiciet a child that is naked.
 3RD SHEPHERD. Full glad may we be,
 and abide that day
 That lovely to see, that shall have all power.
 Lord, well for me for once and for aye,
 Might I kneel on my knee some word for to say
 To that child.

But the angel said
 In a crib was he laid;
 He was poorly arrayed,
 Both meek and mild.
 1ST SHEPHERD. Patriarchs that have been, and prophets befor,
 They desired to have seen this child that is born.
 They are gone full clean, that have they lorn.
 We shall see him, I ween, ere it be morn
 By token.
 When I see him and feel,
 Then know I full weel
 It is true as steel
 That prophets have spoken.
 To so poor as we are, that he would appear,
 First find, and declare by his messenger.
 2ND SHEPHERD. Go we now, let us fare: the place is us near.
 3RD SHEPHERD. I am ready and eager:
 go we in fear
 To that light!
 Lord! if thy wills be,
 We are rude all three,
 Thou grant us of thy glee,
 To comfort thy wight.

 [The SHEPHERDS arrive at Bethlehem.]
 1ST SHEPHERD. Hail, comely and clean; hail, young child!
 Hail, maker, as I mean, of a maiden so mild!
 Thou hast banned, I ween, the devil so wild,
 The false guiler of woe, now goes he beguiled.
 Lo, he merry is!
 Lo, he laughs, my sweeting,
 A welcome meeting!
 I have given my greeting
 Have a bob of cherries?
 2ND SHEPHERD. Hail, sovereign Savior, for thou hast us sought!
 Hail freely, leaf and flow'r, that all thing has wrought!
 Hail full of favor, that made all of nought!

Hail! I kneel and I cower. A bird have
 I brought
 To my bairn!
 Hail, little tiny darling,
 Of our creed thou art crop!
 I would drink in thy cup,
 Little day-star.

3RD SHEPHERD. Hail, darling dear, full of godhead!
 I pray thee be near, when that I have need.

Hail! sweet is thy cheer: my heart would bleed

To see thee sit here in so poor weed,
 With no pennies.

Hail! put forth thy hand.
 I bring thee but a ball

Have and play thee with all,
 And go to the tennis.

MARY. The Father of Heaven, God
 omnipotent,
 That set all aright, his son has he sent.
 My name could he say, and laugh as if he knew.

I conceived him full even, through might,
 as God meant;
 And new is he born.

He keep you from woe:

I shall pray him so;

Tell forth as ye go,

And mind on this morn.

1ST SHEPHERD. Farewell, lady, so fair to behold,
 With thy child on thy knee.

2ND SHEPHERD. But he lies full cold,

Lord, well is me: now we go forth, behold!

3RD SHEPHERD. Forsooth, already it seems to be told

Full oft.

1ST SHEPHERD. What grace we have found.

2ND SHEPHERD. Come forth, now are we won.

3RD SHEPHERD. To sing are we bound.
 Let us sing it aloud!

THE FARCE OF THE WORTHY MASTER PIERRE PATELIN

ANONYMOUS

Printed probably about 1469

TRANSLATED BY M. JAGENDORF *

CHARACTERS

THE JUDGE, whom no man dare judge

PATELIN, the Lawyer, a counselor indeed, possessing all those virtues which a good counselor should possess

GUILLEMETTE, his wife, a fit wife for a lawyer

GUILLAUME JOCEAULME, the draper, a successful merchant who has been cheating his customers from the day he began selling

TIRALD LAMBKIN, a shepherd, a fellow who, if his lot in life had been better, might have become a lawyer like PATELIN, or a merchant like JOCEAULME

This happened in a little town in France in the Year of Our Lord, 1400

SCENE I—On either side of the stage is a street scene. In back, a curtain is partly drawn to each side showing the interior of PATELIN'S house. PATELIN sits in bed reading a large folio; on a chair next to the bed GUILLEMETTE sits mending an old dress. On a bench a little to the side are kitchen utensils: a frying pan, a broom, etc. On the bed lies a nightgown and a cap.

GUILLEMETTE. You have nothing to say now, I suppose, have you? . . . While I needs must mend rags a beggar would be ashamed to wear—and you, a member of the learned profession . . . a lawyer . . . !

PATELIN [in bed]. There was a time when my door was crowded with clients . . . when I had plenty of work . . . and fine clothes to wear, too.

GUILLEMETTE. Of what good is that to-day—eh?

PATELIN. Wife, I was too shrewd for them. Men don't like people wiser than themselves.

GUILLEMETTE. Aye, you could always beat them at law. . . . But that was long ago.

PATELIN. It hurts me truly to see you mending rags . . . and wives of men who are thick-skulled asses wearing golden-threaded cloth and fine wool. There is that draper's wife across the way. . . .

GUILLEMETTE. Cease the cackling. [Silently working for a while.] I'd give something rare and costly for a new gown on St. Mary's day. Heaven knows I need it.

PATELIN. So you do and so do I as well. It is not fit to see one of the learned profession walking about like a beggar on the highway. Ah! If I could only get some clients! I know my law well enough yet. There is not many a one can beat me at the finer points.

GUILLEMETTE. A fig for it all. Of what good is it? We are all but starved . . . and as for clothes—look. [Holds up the dress she is mending.]

PATELIN. Silence, good wife! Could I but have some business and put my head with seriousness to it. . . . Who knows but the days of plenty would soon enough return!

GUILLEMETTE. There is not a soul in town but a fool would trust himself to you. They know too well your way of handling cases. They say you are a master . . . at cheating.

[PATELIN rises indignant.]

PATELIN. They mean at law . . . at law, good wife. Ha, I should like to see a lawyer beat me at it . . . and . . . [Suddenly stops, thinks for a moment, then his whole face lights up.] I am going to market. I have just thought of a little business I have there. [Gets out of bed.]

GUILLEMETTE. Going to market? What for? You have no money.

PATELIN. I am going to market . . . on business . . . to the long-nosed donkey, our neighbor . . . the Draper.

GUILLEMETTE. What for?

PATELIN. To buy some cloth. . . .

GUILLEMETTE. Holy Saints! You know well he is more close-fisted than any other merchant in town. He'll never trust you.

PATELIN. Ah, that's just why I am going. The more miserly, the easier to gull; and . . . I have thought of something fine . . . that will get us enough cloth . . . both for you and me.

GUILLEMETTE. You must be mad.

PATELIN [not heeding her]. Let me see. . . . [Measuring her with his arm's length.] Two and one-half for you. . . . [Measuring himself in the same way.] Three for me . . . and . . . What color would you want it? Green or red?

GUILLEMETTE. I'll be pleased with any kind. Beggars can't be choosers. But don't think I believe what you say. I am not a fool. You'll never get any from Master Joceaulme. He'll never trust you, I am certain.

PATELIN. Who knows? Who knows? He might . . . and then really get paid . . . on Doom's-day. . . . Ho, ho. . . .

GUILLEMETTE. Don't you think you had better make haste, lest all the cloth be sold?

PATELIN [offended, walking off]. Wife, I forgive you. You are only a woman. I'll teach you a fine lesson now. If I don't bring home a fine piece of cloth—dark green or blue, such as wives of great lords wear, then never believe another word I say.

GUILLEMETTE. But how will you do it? You haven't a copper in your pocket.

PATELIN. Ah! That's a secret. Just wait and see. So . . . [to himself as he walks slowly away] two and one-half for her and three for me. . . . Look well to the house while I am away, wife.

GUILLEMETTE. What fool of a merchant'll trust him! . . . unless he is blind and deaf!

[The back curtains are closed and now only the street scene is visible.]

SCENE II—PATELIN comes from his door and walks across to THE DRAPER'S table. THE DRAPER is just coming out with a pack of cloth and wools which he throws on the table. He busies himself arranging his goods. PATELIN looks on for a while, then goes right up to him.

PATELIN. Ho, there, worthy Master Guillaume Jouceaulme, permit me the pleasure of shaking your hand. How do you feel?

THE DRAPER. Very fine, the Saints be thanked.

PATELIN. I am truly happy to hear that. And business?

THE DRAPER. You know how . . . one day one way, the other, altogether different. You can never tell when ill luck may blow your way.

PATELIN. May the Saints keep it from your doors! It's the very phrase I often heard your father use. God rest his soul among the Martyrs! What a man he was! Wise! There was not an event in Church, State, or market he did not foretell. No other was more esteemed. And you—they say that you are more and more like him each day.

THE DRAPER. Do seat yourself, good Master Patelin.

PATELIN. Oh, I can well stand.

THE DRAPER. Oh, but you must.

[Forcing him to sit on the bench.]

PATELIN. Ah! I knew him well, your father. You resemble him as one drop of milk another. Lord, what a man he was! Wise! We, among the learned, called him the weather-cock. Well-nigh every piece of clothing I wore came from his shop.

THE DRAPER. He was an honest man, and people liked to buy from him.

PATELIN. A more honest soul there never was. And I have heard often said the apple has fallen nigh the tree.

THE DRAPER. Of a truth, good Master . . .

PATELIN. It's not flattery, either. [Looking intently at him.] Lord, but you do resemble him! No child was ever so like his father. Each marked like the other. This is just his nose, his ears, nay, the very dimple on his chin.

THE DRAPER. Yes, they do say I look much like him.

PATELIN. Like one drop of water another. . . . And kind-hearted! He was ever ready to trust and help, no matter who came along. The Lord knows he was ever the gainer by it. Even the worst scoundrels thought twice before cheating him.

THE DRAPER. A merchant must always take heed, good Master Patelin. You can never know whether a man is honest or not.

PATELIN. Aye, that's true. But he had a way of guessing whether it was an honest man he was dealing with that was a marvel to behold. Many a funny tale he told of it—when we sat over a bottle of wine. [Feeling the cloth on the table.] What a fine piece of cloth! Did you make it from your own wool? Your father always used to weave his cloths from the wool of his own sheep.

THE DRAPER. So do I, Sir. From the wool of my own sheep.

PATELIN. You don't say so! This is business in a manner I like to see it done. The father all over again.

THE DRAPER [seeing the possibility of a sale]. Ah, worthy Master Patelin, it is a great hardship indeed, to which I put myself because of this. And the loss and cost! Here a shepherd kills your sheep, I have a case against one of those scoundrels right now. The weavers ask pay like goldsmiths. But to me this is all of little account. . . . I'd attend to the making of each piece myself were it to cost ten times as much as I get in return. . . . So long as I please those who buy.

PATELIN. I can see this. It would make a fine gown.

THE DRAPER. You could not get a finer piece even in the city of Paris.

PATELIN. I am sorry I am not out to do any buying just now, though I am tempted to.

THE DRAPER. Business bad? Money scarce?

PATELIN. No, indeed not. I have a nice little sum of gold crowns even now, but I am about to invest them in something profitable. . . . It's as strong as iron, this cloth here. [Examining it.]

THE DRAPER. You may take my word for it, Master, there is not a finer or stronger in town. What's more, it can be bought cheap just now. It's a fine investment. Wool is certain to go up.

PATELIN. Aye, it's a fine piece of cloth, Master Joceaulme. . . . But then I shouldn't . . . yet . . .

THE DRAPER. Come, Master Patelin, come. You need the cloth and have the money to buy. Then you'll invest a few crowns less. A man should always have a gown tucked away in the coffer. What would you say if some fine day, comes along the town crier shouting: there has been a new judge appointed and it is Master Pa . . .

PATELIN. You must have your little joke, worthy Sir. Just like your father. I would pass his shop, a friendly chat . . . and then my purse was much the lighter for it. But I never regretted it, never.

THE DRAPER. You wouldn't now, either. It's well worth buying.

PATELIN. It tempts me. . . . It would look well on my good wife, and I could use it well for myself.

THE DRAPER. It needs but your saying. Come, what's the word, Master?

PATELIN. Well. . . .

THE DRAPER. It's yours even though you hadn't a copper.

PATELIN [somewhat absent-minded]. Oh, I know that.

THE DRAPER. What?

PATELIN. I'll take it.

THE DRAPER. That's talking. How much do you want?

PATELIN. How much is it per yard?

THE DRAPER. Which do you like best? The blue?

PATELIN. Yes, that is the one.

THE DRAPER. You want a rock bottom price, no haggling. This is the finest piece in my shop. For you I'll make it twenty-one sous per yard.

PATELIN. Holy Saints! Master! What do you take me for? A fool? It isn't the first time I am buying cloth.

THE DRAPER. It's the price it cost me myself; by all the Saints in Heaven.

PATELIN. That's too much—entirely too much.

THE DRAPER. Wool costs like holy oil now, and these shepherds are forever robbing me.

PATELIN. Well, there is truth in what you say. I'll take it at the price. I like to see every man make his honest penny. Measure it.

THE DRAPER. How much do you want?

PATELIN. Let me see. Two and a half for her, three for me, that makes five and a half.

THE DRAPER. Take hold there, Master, here they are. [Measuring out.] One . . . two . . . three . . . four . . . five. I'll make it six. You'll not mind the few coppers more.

PATELIN. Not when I get something fine in return. Then I need a cap, too.

THE DRAPER. Would you like me to measure it backwards?

PATELIN. Oh, no, I trust your honesty. How much is it?

THE DRAPER. Six yards at twenty-one sous the yard—that's exactly nine francs.

PATELIN. Nine francs . . . [Under his breath.] Here it goes. Nine francs.

THE DRAPER. Yes, and a good bargain you got.

PATELIN [searching his pockets]. No . . . I have but little with me, and I must buy some small things. You'll get your money to-morrow.

THE DRAPER. What!!! . . . No . . . No . . .

PATELIN. Well, good Master Joceaulme, you don't think I carry gold coin with me, do you? You'd have me give thieves a good chance to steal it? Your father trusted me many a time. And you, Master Guillaume, should take after your father.

THE DRAPER. I like my money cash.

PATELIN. It's there waiting for you, good Master Draper. You can come for it, I hope.

THE DRAPER. It's bad custom to sell on credit.

PATELIN. Did I ask you for credit: for a month, a week, a day? Come to my house at noon, and you will find your money ready. Does that satisfy you?

THE DRAPER. I prefer my money cash, right on the purchase. . . .

PATELIN. And then, Master Guillaume, you have not been to my house for I don't know how long. Your father was there many a time—but you don't seem to care for poor folk like myself.

THE DRAPER. It's we merchants who are poor. We have no bags of gold lying idle for investments.

PATELIN. They are there, Master, waiting for you. And my good wife put a fine goose on the spit just when I left. You can have a tender wing. Your father always liked it.

THE DRAPER. Perhaps. . . . It's true. I haven't been to your house for a long time. I'll come at noon, Master Patelin, and bring the cloth with me.

PATELIN [snatching the cloth from him]. Oh, I would never trouble you. I can carry it.

THE DRAPER. But . . .

PATELIN. No, good Sir, not for the wealth of the East. I would not think of asking you to carry it for me.

THE DRAPER. I'd rather . . . well . . . I'll soon be there, Master. I'll come before the noon meal. Don't forget the nine francs.

PATELIN. Aye, I'll not. And there'll be a bottle of red wine . . . and a fine fat goose. Be certain to come. [Exit

PATELIN.]

THE DRAPER. That I will right soon. Ho, ho, ho—ha, ha, ha—the fool! A good bargain he got! Twenty-one sous the yard. It isn't worth one-half that. And on top of it a fine dinner . . . Burgundy wine and a roasted goose! For a customer like that every day! Now I'll take in my cloth. I'll soon to his house.

[Takes up the cloth and leaves.]

SCENE III—The back curtains are drawn aside showing PATELIN'S chamber.

PATELIN [running in]. Wife, wife . . . [GUILLEMETTE enters, the old gown in her hand.] Well, Madam . . . now . . . I've got it . . . right here I have it. What did I tell you?

GUILLEMETTE. What have you?

PATELIN. Something you desire greatly. But what are you doing with this old rag? I think it will do well for a bed for your cat. I did promise you a new gown and get you one I did.

GUILLEMETTE. What's gotten into your head? Did you drink anything on the way?

PATELIN. And it's paid for, Madam. It's paid for, I tell you.

GUILLEMETTE. Are you making sport of me? What are you plapping?

PATELIN. I have it right here.

GUILLEMETTE. What have you?

PATELIN. Cloth fit for the Queen of Sheba. [Displaying the cloth.] Here it is!

GUILLEMETTE. Holy Virgin! Where did you steal it? Who'll pay for it? What kind of a scrape have you gotten into now?

PATELIN. You need not worry, good Dame. It's paid for . . . and a good price at that.

GUILLEMETTE. Why, how much did it cost? You did not have a copper when you left.

PATELIN. It cost nine francs, fair Lady . . . a bottle of red wine . . . and the wing of a roasted goose.

GUILLEMETTE. Are you crazy? You had no money, no goose!!!

PATELIN. Aye, aye, that I did. I paid for it as it behooves one of the learned profession of law; in promissory statements. And the merchant who took them is no fool either, oh, no; not a fool at all; but a very wise man and a shrewd. . . .

GUILLEMETTE. Who was he? How . . .

PATELIN. He is the king of asses, the Pope of Idiots, the chancellor of baboons . . . our worthy neighbor, the long-nosed draper, Master Jouceaulme.

GUILLEMETTE. Will you cease this jabbering and tell me how it happened? How did he come to trust you? There is no worse skinflint in town than he.

PATELIN. Ah, wife! My head! My knowledge of the law! I turned him into a noble and fine lord. I told him what a jewel his father was; I laid on him all the nine virtues thick as wax, and . . . in the end he trusted me most willingly with six yards of his fine cloth.

GUILLEMETTE. Ho, ho, ho, you are a marvel! And when does he expect to get paid?

PATELIN. By noon.

GUILLEMETTE. Holy Lord, what will we do when he comes for the money?

PATELIN. He'll be here for it and soon to boot. He must be dreaming even now of his nine francs, and his wine, and the goose. Oh, we'll give him a goose! Now you get the bed ready and I'll get in.

GUILLEMETTE. What for?

PATELIN. As soon as he comes and asks for me, swear by all the Saints that I've been in bed here for the last two months. Tell it in a sad voice and with tears in your eyes. And if he says anything, shout at him to speak lower. If he cries: "My cloth, my money," tell him he is crazy, that I haven't been from bed for weeks. And if he doesn't go with that, I'll dance him a little tune that'll make him wonder whether he is on earth or in hell.

[PATELIN puts on his nightgown and cap. GUILLEMETTE goes to the door and returns quickly.]

GUILLEMETTE. He is coming, he is coming; what if he arrests you?

PATELIN. Don't worry; just do what I tell you. Quick, hide the cloth under the bedclothes., Don't forget. I've been sick for two months.

GUILLEMETTE. Quick, quick, here he is.

[PATELIN gets into bed and draws the curtains. GUILLEMETTE sits down and begins to mend the old dress. THE DRAPER enters.]

THE DRAPER. Good day, fair Dame.

GUILLEMETTE. Sh . . . for the Saints' sake. Speak lower.

THE DRAPER. Why? What's the matter?

GUILLEMETTE. You don't know!

THE DRAPER. Where is he?

GUILLEMETTE. Alas! Nearer to Paradise than to Earth. [Begins to cry.]

THE DRAPER. Who?

GUILLEMETTE. How can you be so heartless and ask me that, when you know he has been in bed for the last eleven weeks?

THE DRAPER. Who?

GUILLEMETTE. My husband.

THE DRAPER. Who?

GUILLEMETTE. My husband—Master Pierre, once a lawyer . . . and now a sick man . . . on his death-bed.

THE DRAPER. What!!!!

GUILLEMETTE [crying]. You have not heard of it? Alas! And . . .

THE DRAPER. And who was it just took six yards of cloth from my shop?

GUILLEMETTE. Alas! How am I to know? It was surely not he.

THE DRAPER. You must be dreaming, good woman. Are you his wife? The wife of Pierre Patelin, the lawyer?

GUILLEMETTE. That I am, good Sir.

THE DRAPER. Then it was your husband, who was such a good friend of my father, who came to my shop a quarter of an hour ago and bought six yards of cloth for nine francs. And now I am here for my money. Where is he?

GUILLEMETTE. This is no time for jesting, good Sir.

THE DRAPER. Are you crazy? I want my money, that's all.

GUILLEMETTE. Don't scream. It's little sleep he gets as it is, and here you come squealing like a dying pig. He has been in bed for nigh twelve weeks and hardly slept three nights.

THE DRAPER. Who? What are you talking about?

GUILLEMETTE. Who! My poor sick husband. [Weeps.]

THE DRAPER. Come! What's this? Stop that fooling. I want my money, my nine francs.

GUILLEMETTE [screaming]. Don't scream so loud. He is dying.

THE DRAPER. But that's a black lie.

THE FARCE OF THE WORTHY MASTER PIERRE PATELIN 343

He was at my shop, but a quarter of an hour ago.

PATELIN [groaning from behind the curtain]. Au, au, au . . .

GUILLEMETTE. Ah, there he is on his deathbed. He has been there for thirteen weeks yesterday without eating as much as a fly.

THE DRAPER. What are you talking about? He was at my shop just now and bought six yards of cloth . . . blue cloth.

GUILLEMETTE. How can you make sport of me? Good Master Guillaume, don't you see how he is! Do speak lower. Noise puts him in agony.

THE DRAPER. The devil speak lower! It's you who are howling. Give me my money, and I'll not speak at all.

GUILLEMETTE [screaming]. He is deadly sick. This is no time for fooling. Stop screaming. What is it you want?

THE DRAPER. I want my money, or the cloth . . . the cloth he bought from me only a little while ago.

GUILLEMETTE. What are you talking about, my good man? There is something strange in your voice.

THE DRAPER. You see, good lady, your husband, Pierre Patelin, the learned counselor, who was such a good friend of my father, came to my shop but a quarter of an hour ago and chose six yards of blue cloth . . . and then told me to come to his house to get the money and . . .

GUILLEMETTE. Ha, ha, ha, what a fine joke. You seem to be in good humor to-day, Master Draper! To-day? . . . When he has been in bed for fourteen weeks . . . on the point of death! [She screams louder and louder all the time.] To-day, hey! Why do you come to make sport of me? Get out, get out!

THE DRAPER. I will. Give me my money first . . . or give me my cloth. Where is he with it?

GUILLEMETTE. Ah me! He is very sick and refuses to eat a bite.

THE DRAPER. I am speaking about my cloth. If he does not want it, or hasn't the money, I'll gladly take it back. He took it this morning. I'll swear to it.

Ask him yourself. I saw him and spoke to him. A piece of blue cloth.

GUILLEMETTE. Are you cracked or have you been drinking?

THE DRAPER [becoming frantic]. He took six yards of cloth, blue cloth.

GUILLEMETTE. What do I care whether it is green or blue? My husband has not left the house for the last fifteen weeks.

THE DRAPER. May the Lord bless me! But I am sure I saw him. It was he I am sure.

GUILLEMETTE. Have you no heart? I have had enough of your fooling.

THE DRAPER. Damn it all! If you think I am a fool . . .

PATELIN [behind the curtain]. Au, au, au, come and raise my pillow. Stop the braying of that ass! Everything is black and yellow! Drive these black beasts away! Marmara carimari, carimara!

THE DRAPER. It's he!

GUILLEMETTE. Yes, it is; alas!

THE DRAPER. Good Master Patelin, I've come for my nine francs, . . . which you promised me . . .

PATELIN [sitting up and sticks his head out between the curtains]. Ha, you dog . . . come here. Shut the door. Rub the soles of my feet . . . tickle my toes. . . . Drive these devils away! It's a monk; there, up he goes . . .

THE DRAPER. What's this? Are you crazy?

PATELIN [getting out of bed]. Ha . . . do you see him? A black monk flying in the air with the draper hanging on his nose. Catch him . . . quick. [Speaking right in THE DRAPER'S face, who retreats.] The cat! The monk! Up he flies, and there are ten little devils tweaking your long nose! Heigh, ho!

[Goes back to bed, falling on it seemingly exhausted.]

GUILLEMETTE [in loud lamentations]. Now see what you have done.

THE DRAPER. But what does this mean? . . . I don't understand it.

GUILLEMETTE. Don't you see, don't you see!

THE DRAPER. It serves me right; why did I ever sell on credit? But I sold it, I am certain of that, and I would swear 'twas to him this morning. Did he become sick since he returned?

GUILLETTE. Are you beginning that joke all over again?

THE DRAPER. I am sure I sold it to him. Ah, but this may be just a cooked up story. By God! . . . tell me, have you a goose on the spit?

GUILLETTE. A goose on the spit! No-o-o-o, not on the spit! You are the nearest. . . . But I've had enough of this. Get out and leave me in peace.

THE DRAPER. Maybe you are right. I am commencing to doubt it all. Don't cry. I must think this over for a while. But . . . the devil. I am sure I had six yards of cloth . . . and he chose the blue. I gave it to him with my own hands. Yet . . . here he is in bed sick . . . fifteen weeks. But he was at my shop a little while ago. "Come to my house and eat some goose," he said. Never, never, holy Lord, will I trust any one again.

GUILLETTE. Perhaps your memory is getting wobbly with age. I think you had better go and look before you talk. Maybe the cloth is still there.

[Exit THE DRAPER, across the front stage and into his shop.]

PATELIN [getting up cautiously and speaking low]. Is he gone?

GUILLETTE. Take care, he may come back.

PATELIN. I can't stand this any longer. [Jumps out.] We put it to him heavy, didn't we, my pretty one, eh? Ho, ho, ho. [Laughs uproariously.]

THE DRAPER [coming from his shop, looking under the table]. The thief, the liar, the damned liar, he did buy . . . steal it? It isn't there. This was all sham. Ha, I'll get it, though. [Runs toward PATELIN'S house.] What's this I hear . . . laughing! . . . The robbers. [Rushes in.] You thieves. . . . I want my cloth. . . .

[PATELIN finding no time to get back into bed, gets hold of the broom, puts the frying pan on his head and begins to jump around, straddling the broom stick. GUILLETTE can't stop laughing.]

THE DRAPER. Laughing in my very nose, eh! Ah, my money, pay. . . .

GUILLETTE. I am laughing for unhappiness. Look, how the poor man is, it is you who have done this, with your bellowing.

PATELIN. Ha. . . . Where is the Guitar? . . . The lady Guitar I married. . . . She gave birth to twenty little Guitars yesterday. Ho, ho. Come, my children. . . . Light the lanterns. Ho, ho, ha. . . . [Stops, looking intently into the air.]

THE DRAPER. Damn your jabbering. My money! Please, my money . . . for the cloth. . . .

GUILLETTE. Again. . . . Didn't you have enough before? But. . . . Oh. . . . [Looking intently at him.] Now I understand!!! Why, I am sure of it. You are mad . . . else you wouldn't talk this way.

THE DRAPER. Oh, Holy Lord . . . perhaps I am.

PATELIN [begins to jump around as if possessed, playing a thousand and one crazy antics.] Mère de dieu, la coronade . . . que de l'argent il ne me sonne. Hast understood me, gentle Sir?

THE DRAPER. What's this? I want my money. . . .

GUILLETTE. He is speaking in delirium: he once had an uncle in Limoges and it's the language of that country.

[PATELIN gives THE DRAPER a kick and falls down as if exhausted.]

THE DRAPER. Oh! Oh! Where am I? This is the strangest sickness I ever saw.

GUILLETTE [who has run to her husband]. Do you see what you have done?

PATELIN [jumps up and acts still wilder]. Ha! The devil . . . the green cat . . . with the draper. I am happy. . . .

[Chases THE DRAPER and his wife around the room. GUILLETTE seeks protection, clinging to THE DRAPER.]

GUILLEMETTE. Oh, I am afraid, I am afraid. Help me, kind Sir, he may do me some harm.

THE DRAPER [running around the room with GUILLEMETTE clinging to him]. Holy Ghost, what's this? He is bewitching me.

PATELIN [tries to talk in signs to THE DRAPER, who retreats. PATELIN follows him, whacking the floor and furniture and occasionally getting in one on THE DRAPER. Finally THE DRAPER gets on one side of the bed, and PATELIN on the other. In that position he addresses him in a preachy, serious voice]. Et bona dies sit vobis, magister amantissime, pater reverendissime, quomodo brulis? [Falls on the floor near the bed as if dead.]

GUILLEMETTE. Oh, kind Sir. Help me. He is dead. Help me put him to bed. . . . [They both drag him into bed.]

THE DRAPER. It were well for me to go, I think. He might die and I might be blamed for it. It must have been some imps or some devils who took my cloth . . . and I came here for the money, led by an evil spirit. It's passing strange . . . but I think I had better go.

[Exit. THE DRAPER goes to his shop. GUILLEMETTE watches, turning every moment to PATELIN who has sat up in bed, warning him not to get out. When THE DRAPER disappears, she turns around and bursts out laughing.]

PATELIN [jumping out]. Now, wife, what do you think of me, eh? [Takes the cloth.] Oh! Didn't we play a clever game? By Saint Peter, I did not think I could do it so well. He got a hot goose, didn't he? [Spreading the cloth.] This'll do for both and there'll be a goodly piece left.

GUILLEMETTE. You are an angel. Oh, ho! And now let us go and begin to cut it up.

[Both exit, and the curtain is drawn.]

SCENE IV—The street scene. JOCEAULME comes from the shop with a piece of cloth under his arm. He is much upset.

Looks once more under the table for the cloth which PATELIN took.

THE DRAPER. The Devil! These hounds. . . . I'll get them yet. Here's a fine piece of cloth! Only the fiend himself knows who took it—and then that shepherd. To think of it . . . robbing me for years. But him I'll get surely. I'll see him hanged, yet. By the holy Lord I will. [TIBALD LAMBKIN appears from the other side.] Ah, here he comes. . . .

THE SHEPHERD [stutters, thick voice; a typical yokel]. God give you a good day, sweet Sir. I greet you, good Sir. . . . I was not sure it was you, good Sir. . . .

THE DRAPER. You were not, eh? You knave; but you will soon know for certain . . . when your head is on the gallows . . . high up. . . .

THE SHEPHERD. Yes, good Sir . . . no . . . I saw the constable . . . and he spoke to me that you want to see me. . . .

THE DRAPER. Oh, no! Not I, my fine thief . . . but the judge.

THE SHEPHERD. Oh, Lord! Why did you summon me? I don't know why. I never killed your sheep.

THE DRAPER. Oh, no, you are a Saint. It's you, you mangy dog . . . all the while you were robbing me of my sheep. But now you'll pay for it with your head. I'll see you hanged.

THE SHEPHERD. Hang by the neck! Oh, Lord! Good Master, have pity.

THE DRAPER. Pity, eh? And you had pity when you were robbing me of my cloth. . . . I mean my sheep. Thief, scoundrel, you robber . . . where is my cloth . . . my sheep?

THE SHEPHERD. They died of sickness, Sir . . .

THE DRAPER. You lie, you caitiff, you stole them and now . . .

THE SHEPHERD. It is not so, good Master. I swear. On my soul. . . .

THE DRAPER. You have no soul, you thief. By all the Saints, I'll see you dangling this Saturday. . . .

THE SHEPHERD. Good and sweet Master, won't you please make a settlement . . . and not bring me to court.

THE DRAPER. Away, you thief. I'll make you pay for those six yards . . . I mean those sheep. You just wait.

[Walks off in a fury.]

THE SHEPHERD. Oh, Lord! I must quickly find a lawyer. . . . I've heard of Master Patelin . . . they say no man is better at gulling. It's here he lives. [PATELIN comes just then from his house. When he sees LAMBKIN he tries to get back, fearing it may be THE DRAPER, but on hearing his voice he stops.] Ho, there, Master! Is it you who are Master Patelin the lawyer?

PATELIN. What is it you want of him?

THE SHEPHERD. I have a little business for him.

PATELIN. Oh! is it that! Well, I am Master Patelin. Good man, tell me the nature of your business. Is it anything pertaining to the law?

THE SHEPHERD. I'll pay well. . . . I am a shepherd, good Master. A poor man, but I can pay well. I need a lawyer for a little case I have.

PATELIN. Come this way, where we can talk lower. Some one might overhear us . . . I mean disturb us. Now good man, what may your business be?

THE SHEPHERD. Good Master Lawyer, teach me what to say to the judge.

PATELIN. What is it you have done, or has some one done you an injustice?

THE SHEPHERD. Must I tell you everything . . . exactly as it happened?

PATELIN. You can tell me the truth, I am your lawyer. . . . But, good friend, counsel is costly.

THE SHEPHERD. I'll pay all right. It's my Master whose sheep I stole who summoned me to the Judge. He is going to have me hanged because I stole his sheep. You see. . . . He paid like a miser. . . . Must I tell you the truth?

PATELIN. I have told you once. You must tell me how everything really happened.

THE SHEPHERD. Well . . . he paid like a miser . . . so I told him some sheep had the hoof sickness and died from it . . . and I buried them far . . . far . . . away, so that the others shouldn't get it. But I really killed them and ate the meat and used the wool for myself,—and he caught me right so that I cannot deny it. Now I beseech you. . . . I can pay well—though he has the law on his side . . . tell me . . . whether you cannot beat him. If you can, I'll pay you in fine, gold crowns, sweet Master.

PATELIN. Gold crowns!!! H'm, what's your name?

THE SHEPHERD. Tibald Lambkin, a poor shepherd, but I have a few crowns put aside. You just . . .

PATELIN. What do you intend to pay for this case?

THE SHEPHERD. Will five . . . four crowns be enough, sweet Sir?

PATELIN [hardly able to contain himself for excitement]. Ah! . . . Hm . . . well . . . that will be plenty, seeing that you are a poor man. But I get much greater sums, friend, I do. . . . Did you say . . . five?

THE SHEPHERD. Yes, sweet Sir.

PATELIN. You'll have to make it six. I may tell you, though, that your case is a good one, and I am sure to win it. But now tell me, are there any witnesses the plaintiff can produce? Those who saw you killing the sheep?

THE SHEPHERD. Not one. . . .

PATELIN. That's fine.

THE SHEPHERD. . . . But more'n a dozen.

PATELIN. That's bad. Hm, let me see now . . . no. . . . [He seems to hold a deep and learned debate with himself.] No . . . but. . . . The book says otherwise. [Suddenly his face lights up.] By all the Saints, and the nine hundred and ninety-nine Virgins! I've got it . . . aye, what a wonderful idea! Two ideas in one day! You can understand a sly trick, can't you, fellow?

THE SHEPHERD. Can I? Ho, ho, ho, ho. . . .

PATELIN. But you'll pay as you promised.

THE SHEPHERD. Hang me if I don't. But I can't pay if I hang, ho, ho, ho. . . .

PATELIN [gleefully]. Now, first, you have never seen me; nor heard of me. . . .

THE SHEPHERD. Oh, no, not that. . . .

PATELIN. Silent until I have finished. Second, you mustn't talk a single word but "Ba." . . . [Imitating the bleating of a sheep.] Only bleat like your sheep. No matter what they talk to you. Just say Ba. . . . Even if they call you an ass, or an idiot, or villain, or fool, don't answer anything but Ba. . . . Just as if you were a sheep.

THE SHEPHERD. Oh, I can do that.

PATELIN. Even if I talk to you, say nothing but Ba. . . . And if they split roaring at you, just say Ba. . . . The rest you leave to me. I'll get you out for certain.

THE SHEPHERD. I'll surely not say another word. And I will do it right proper.

PATELIN. Your case is as good as won. But don't forget the six gold crowns.

THE SHEPHERD. I'll sure not, wise and sweet Master Patelin.

CRIER [is heard from afar]. "The court, make room." . . .

PATELIN. Ah, here they come. Don't forget Ba. . . . I'll be there to help you. And . . . the money . . . don't forget that.

[Attendants, constables, town clerks and villagers enter. Two clerks carry a seat for THE JUDGE which is placed in the center of the stage. THE JUDGE, fat and grouchy, comes to the front, looks about for a moment, then goes to his seat and sits down.]

THE JUDGE. If there is any business to be done, come to it; the court wants to adjourn.

PATELIN. May heaven bless you and grant you all you desire.

THE JUDGE. Welcome, Sir. May the Saints give you plenty of clients.

[THE DRAPER now comes running in. PATELIN suddenly realizes that it is against him that THE SHEPHERD must be defended and expresses uneasiness. He hides himself behind the crowd.]

THE DRAPER. My lawyer is soon coming, your worship. He has a little business elsewhere which is detaining him.

THE JUDGE. You must think I have nothing to do but to wait for your lawyer. You are the plaintiff, aren't you? Bring your complaint. Where is the defendant?

THE DRAPER. Right there, your worship; that lummock shepherd, who has been hiding behind that good citizen there as if he couldn't say Ba. . . . But your honor, it's in fear of justice.

THE JUDGE. Both being present, I will examine you. [To THE DRAPER.] Tell me all the facts of your case. Was he in your hire?

THE DRAPER. Yes, your lordship. He killed my sheep and after I treated him like a father. . . .

THE JUDGE. Did you pay him a good wage?

PATELIN [edging up sideways, and covering his face with his hand]. Your lordship, I have heard it said that he never paid him a copper for his work.

THE DRAPER [recognizing PATELIN]. By all that's holy. . . . You. . . . !!!!!?? 'Tis he and no other.

THE JUDGE. Why do you cover your face, Master Patelin?

PATELIN. Oh, your lordship, I have a terrible toothache.

THE JUDGE. I am sorry for you, for I had one myself the other day. I'll tell you a fine cure, Master. Hold your feet in cold water wherein are three hoofs of a red cow from Gascoigne. This'll draw the ache into the nails of your toes and you can then rid yourself of it with great ease by cutting them. 'Tis a sovereign remedy. Try it and see, Master. But let us go on. Come, Master Draper, I am in a hurry.

THE DRAPER [not heeding THE JUDGE but still staring at PATELIN]. It's you, isn't it? It's to you I sold six yards of cloth. Where is my money?

THE JUDGE. What is that you are talking about?

PATELIN. His mind is clouded, your lordship. He is not accustomed to speaking clearly. Perhaps the defendant will enlighten us. You . . .

THE DRAPER. I am not speaking clearly!! You thief . . . liar . . .

PATELIN. Your worship, I think I understand him now. It's strange how incoherently those who have no legal training speak. I think he means he could have made six yards of cloth from the sheep the shepherd is supposed to have stolen or killed.

THE JUDGE. Aye, so it would seem. Come, Master Guillaume, finish your tale.

PATELIN. Get to the facts as the judge directs you.

THE DRAPER. And you dare talk to me like that!

THE JUDGE. Master Guillaume, come to your sheep.

[During the rest of the court scene PATELIN works always so as to attract the attention of THE DRAPER every time he tries to talk of his sheep, and so diverts his attention from that and leads him to talk of the cloth. Whenever THE DRAPER talks of his case, PATELIN either sticks his face up to him or places himself in such a position that THE DRAPER must see him.]

THE DRAPER. You see, your lordship . . . he took my six yards of cloth this morning . . . the thief . . .

THE JUDGE. Do you think I am a fool or an ass? Either you come to the point or I'll dismiss the case.

PATELIN. Your worship, let us call the defendant. He, I am sure, will speak clearer than this draper.

THE JUDGE. Yes, that will be wise. Step forward, Shepherd.

THE SHEPHERD. Ba . . . a . . .

THE JUDGE. What's this, am I a goat? THE SHEPHERD. Ba . . . a . . .

PATELIN. Your lordship, it seems this man is half-witted and thinks himself among his sheep.

THE DRAPER. Damn you! He can talk, and he is not half-witted, either . . . but a thief like you. It was you who took my cloth!

THE JUDGE. Cloth! What are you talking about, anyhow? Now, you either get back to your sheep or I'll dismiss the case.

THE DRAPER. I will, your lordship, though the other lies as near to my heart, but I'll leave it for another time. That shepherd there . . . he took six yards of cloth . . . I mean, sheep. Your honor must forgive me. This thief . . . my shepherd, he told me I would get my money . . . for the cloth as soon . . . I mean this shepherd was to watch over my flocks and he played sick when I came to his house. Ah, Master Pierre. . . . He killed my sheep and told me they died from hoof-sickness . . . and I saw him take the cloth . . . I mean he swore he never killed them. And his wife swore he was sick and said he never took the cloth. . . . No, that shepherd there. . . . He took the sheep and made out that he was crazy. . . . Oh, my Lord! I don't know what . . .

THE JUDGE [leaping up]. Keep quiet, you don't know what you are talking about. You are crazy. I have listened to your idiotic talk about sheep, and cloth, and wool, and money. What is it you want here? Either you answer sensibly, or . . . this is your last chance.

PATELIN. There is surely something strange about this poor man's talk, and I would advise that a physician be consulted. At times, though, it seems as if he were talking about some money he owes this poor shepherd.

THE DRAPER. You thief! You robber! You might at least keep quiet. Where is my cloth? You have it. . . . You are not sick.

THE JUDGE. What has he? Who isn't sick? Are you going to talk of your business or not?

THE DRAPER. He has it as certain as there is a God in heaven. But I'll speak of this later. Now, I'll attend to this thief, this shepherd.

PATELIN. This shepherd cannot answer the charges himself, Your Lordship. I will gladly give my services to defend him.

THE JUDGE. You won't get much for your pains.

PATELIN. Ah, but the knowledge that I am doing a kind and honest deed, and then, I may be able to stop this haggling which annoys your lordship so much.

THE JUDGE. I'd be greatly thankful.

THE DRAPER. You'll defend him . . . you thief . . . you . . .

THE JUDGE. Now Master Guillaume, you keep quiet or I'll have you put in the stocks. I have listened long enough to your idiotic gab. Proceed, Master Patelin.

PATELIN. I thank your lordship. Now, come on, my good fellow. It's for your own good. I am working as you heard me say. Just because I would do you a kind deed. Answer everything well and direct.

THE SHEPHERD. Ba . . . a . . .

PATELIN. Come, I am your lawyer, not a lamb.

THE SHEPHERD. Ba . . .

PATELIN. What's Ba . . . ? Are you crazy? Tell me, did this man pay you money for your work?

THE SHEPHERD. Ba . . .

PATELIN [seemingly losing his temper]. You idiot, answer, it's I, your lawyer, who is talking to you. Answer.

THE SHEPHERD. Ba . . .

THE DRAPER [who has listened open-mouthed and bewildered]. But, your lordship, he can talk when he wants to. He spoke to me this morning.

PATELIN [severely]. Everything happened to you this morning, Master Jocaualme. Now it seems to me, it would be far wiser for you to send this shepherd back to his sheep, he is used to their company far more than to that of men.

It does not look as if this fool had sense enough to kill a fly, let alone a sheep.

THE DRAPER. You . . . you . . . robber . . . liar!!!

THE JUDGE. I honestly think they are both crazy.

PATELIN. It seems as if your lordship is right.

THE DRAPER. I am crazy! You scoundrel! You robber! Where is my cloth? They are both thieves. . . .

THE JUDGE. Keep quiet, I say.

THE DRAPER. But, your lordship!

THE JUDGE. All you get is vexation, in dealing with dolts and idiots, be they male or female, so says the law. To finish this wrangling the court is adjourned.

THE DRAPER. And my cloth . . . my money . . . I mean my sheep! Is there no justice? Will you not listen to me?

THE JUDGE. Eh, listen to you, you miser? You dare scoff at justice? You hire half crazy people; and then you don't pay them, then you bellow something about cloth which has nothing to do with the case and expect me to listen to you?

THE DRAPER. But he took my cloth . . . and he killed my sheep. I swear to you. There he stands, the thief.

[Pointing to PATELIN.]

THE JUDGE. Stop your bellowing. I discharge this half-witted shepherd. Get home and don't ever come in my sight again no matter how many bailiffs summon you.

PATELIN [to THE SHEPHERD]. Say thanks to his lordship.

THE SHEPHERD. Ba . . .

THE JUDGE. By all the Saints, never have I come upon such a nest of idiots!

THE DRAPER. My cloth gone . . . my sheep. . . .

THE JUDGE. Huh! You . . . Well, I have business elsewhere. May I never see your like again. The court is adjourned. Good day, Master Patelin.

PATELIN. A joyous day to you.

[All leave except PATELIN, THE DRAPER, and THE SHEPHERD.]

THE DRAPER. You thieves . . . you scoundrels! You. . . You. . . .

PATELIN. Don't shout yourself hoarse, good Master Joceaulme.

THE DRAPER. You stole my cloth and played crazy . . . and now it was because of you, that I lost my sheep. . . .

PATELIN. A fine tale! Do you think any one will believe you?

THE DRAPER. I am not blind. Didn't I see you dancing this morning? I saw you. . . .

PATELIN. Are you so certain? Good Sir, it may have been Jean de Noyon. He resembles me very much.

THE DRAPER. But I know you when I see you. You screamed and acted mad, shouting a tale of dogs and . . .

PATELIN. Perhaps you imagined it all. Go back to my house and see if I am not still there.

THE DRAPER [looks much puzzled]. May the Lord. . . . Perhaps. . . . But I'll go to your house and if I don't find you there, I'll go to the Judge and see to it that he listens to my story. I'll get a lawyer from Paris. [To THE SHEPHERD, who has been standing at a safe distance.] You thief! I'll get you yet. [To PATELIN.] I'll go to your house now.

PATELIN. That's a wise action.

[Exit THE DRAPER.]

PATELIN. Now Tibald, my fellow. What do you think of me? Didn't we do a fine piece of work?

THE SHEPHERD. Ba . . .

PATELIN. Yes. Ho, ho—wasn't it great!

THE SHEPHERD. Ba . . .

PATELIN. No one is near now; your Master is gone. It was a great idea, wasn't it? This legal stroke. You may speak now without fear. . . . I said you could speak without fear, no one is near. Where is the money?

THE SHEPHERD. Ba . . .

PATELIN. I can't stay with you all day. What is this game?

THE SHEPHERD. Ba . . .

PATELIN. How now? Come, I have business elsewhere.

THE SHEPHERD. Ba . . .

PATELIN. What do you mean? You are are not going to pay?

THE SHEPHERD [with a grin]. Ba . . .

PATELIN. Yes, you played your rôle well, good Lambkin. But now it's over. Next time you may count on me again. Now my money; the six crowns.

THE SHEPHERD. Ba . . .

PATELIN [sees the game now, stops. In a somewhat pathetic voice]. Is that all I am going to get for my work?

THE SHEPHERD. Ba . . .

PATELIN [getting furious]. By the Holy Lord, I'll have a bailiff after you, you thief . . . you scoundrel . . . you robber. . . .

THE SHEPHERD. Ho, ho, ho. . . . Ba . . . ! The Judge said I need never come back. And—ho, ho, ho, I never knew you. . . . Ba . . . a . . . ! [Runs out.]

PATELIN [silent for a time, then grinning pathetically]. Alas! 'Tis only paying me in my own coin. . . . Nevertheless 'twas a fine idea. . . . [Exit.]

THE WANDERING SCHOLAR FROM PARADISE

BY HANS SACHS

Published 1550 and probably produced about that time

TRANSLATED FROM THE GERMAN BY SAMUEL A. ELIOT, JR.*

[Before and during the slow rise of the curtain, the voice of the WIFE is heard in simple song.]

THE WIFE [tearfully, with ludicrous breaks and intervals.]

Peasant maiden, love is bright:
He may come to thee to-night!
Peasant maiden, love is sweet:
He may kneel before thy feet!
Peasant wife, put love away!
He cares not for thee to-day.

[The song stops with the suggestion of a sob. THE WIFE appears in the doorway, back center, wipes her eyes, sobs again, leans against the jamb, and sighs deeply, her gaze far away.]

Heigho, how many sighs do I heave,
When-as over times long past I grieve!
Then my first man was still alive.

[Sniffing.]

Our love so strove, nothing else could thrive!

He was a simple and pious wight.
With him died all my sweet delight,
However another man won me o'er!

He is far from like my first: so dour.
So bent on wealth, so scrimping and mean,

By him my mirth and good cheer are but teen!

God bless the old man who was so friendly!

Could I but return it him now—

[Starting a little and crossing herself.]

—reverently!

[THE WANDERING STUDENT comes in from the right, sees her, doffs his cap and bows low.]

THE STUDENT. Ah, kind dame! Prithee, let me commend

Myself to your alms, and for no by-end:
For many an art have I conned in books,

And [with an intimate wink] in Venusberg I have hugged the books

And watched thence many a lusty wooing!

[She smiles down at him. He strikes a pose for her.]

A scholar am I, the wide world viewing;
A stroller—left Paris but three days since—

* Reprinted from Little Theater Classics, IV, copyright, 1922, by Little, Brown & Co., by permission of the translator.

THE WIFE [starting, and stepping down to him excitedly].

What, what? Left Paradise?—Come you thence?

Dear sir! One thing I must ask you at once:

Lately—[wiping her eyes again, and sniffing] within the last twelve months—

My husband died. Did you see him there? So honest and good he was, I could ne'er Misdoubt but he went to Paradise!

THE STUDENT [striking a thoughtful attitude, finger to forehead, and eyeing her under his brows]. I can tell you forthright all he possessed:

A blue hat on, and a winding sheet
Not quite of the best—the grave to cheat—
Nought else, if I must admit the truth.

THE STUDENT [having abashed her by showing surprise at such a niggardly costume, follows up his idea]. Ah, my good dame! He was uncouth!

He goes about there without boots,
Breeches, or smock—or substitutes!
As queer as he was laid in earth!
Cock his hat as he may, or girth

[With a graphic gesture.]

His shroud around him,—when others feast

He stays outside, penniless, fleeced,
Lingering there with longing eyes,
Living on alms the rest despise—
Dirty and wretched beyond expression!

THE WIFE [moved to tears]. Ah, husband! Art in such depression?

Ha! not a penny for a bath?
Now, woe is me for thy stony path!
Alas! Good sir!—But [getting an idea], oblige me twice:

Wend you again to Paradise?

THE STUDENT [nodding reassuringly].

To-morrow I start, and if nought delays

Hither I win in thirteen days.

THE WIFE [beseechingly]. Oh, would you carry me something to him?

My new man's wealth is not so slim.

THE STUDENT [starting and glancing about for the new husband]. Gladly,
Good wife; but haste! make it trim!

THE WIFE. Pardon me, just a minute,
while

I bundle up my little pile!

[She disappears into the cottage.]

THE STUDENT. Good, simple soul! Just right for me!

[Rubbing his hands.]

Money and clothes for the legatee!

[Glancing about again apprehensively.]

But I must toddle before he comes:

He might bequeath me scantier sums!

It's best to be heir to a dead man's crumbs!

[THE WIFE reappears with a bundle in one hand and a moldy leather wallet in the other. She has difficulty telling which is which as she talks.]

THE WIFE. Now be a good messenger, kind sir!

These twelve red goldens I transfer
To him, that I've long kept buried away
In my cowlsh against a troublous day;

[THE STUDENT transfers the coins to his own purse and gives back the old wallet.]

And take this bundle to him too:

Therein are hosen, shirt and shoe,
And a coat of stuff that will suffice

For that far land of Paradise!

His purse I send [giving back the same wallet] and his long knife,

[THE STUDENT cautiously, for fear of the knife, arranges the pack on his shoulder.]

And tell him that next time his fond
wife

Will have laid up more goods and gold
To keep him clear of hunger and cold—

[Wiping her eyes again.]

For he's still the dearest of the twain!

THE STUDENT [cheering her up]. Oh, how will I gladden him—full fain!—

That now on a holiday he too

May drink and game as the others
do!

THE WIFE. How long, Good Sir, must you be away

Before you can bring me word of him, pray!

THE STUDENT [hastily]. Oh, I can't come this way again soon!

[Explaining.]

'Tis a hard road—seldom opportune!

THE WIFE [tearful again]. Alas! then his money may shortly fail!

No bath, no sport, no meat nor ale!

He'll have to beg for it all again!

[Brightening up as she thinks of something.]

But when we are done with threshing, then

I can soon hoard up a little more
And hide it under the cowshed floor
From my near husband, as before.

[To the STUDENT, contentedly, putting a coin in his hand.]

Look: take this taler for your pay,

And greet my husband lovingly, pray!

[Without more delay THE STUDENT bows to her and makes off, left. She sings happily the same song as at the beginning.]

THE FARMER, her husband, enters right, stooped and intent, goes into the house and returns with a stocking heavy with small coins.]

THE FARMER [noticing her, pausing in the door]. Damc, thou art merry.
Prithee tell

What hath so pleased thee. What befell?

THE WIFE [affectionately in her pleasure]. Ah, husband dear, rejoice with me!

Good hap have I to tell to thee!

THE FARMER [with surly kindness]. Who hit the bull's eye this time, eh?

THE WIFE [beginning to realize the miraculous nature of her news]. Oh, how shall I the marvel say?

A strolling scholar, to still my sighs,
Came by here out of Paradise!

There he had seen my former man—

And swears that he is poorer than

The meanest, without shirt or shoes

Or money—nothing he can use

But hat and sheet! Think!—nothing save

What we thrust with him in the grave!

THE FARMER [with a grim smile].

Wouldst thou not send him something fit?

THE WIFE [surprised at the suggestion from him, accepting it eagerly]. Oh, husband dear, I did!

[Her husband starts violently, clutching the stocking like a bludgeon, but controls himself: and she goes on quite unaware.]

To wit,

The old coat, hosen, shirt and shoon,

And a bit of money, as a boon,

I gave the student to take him soon.

THE FARMER [crisply, losing no time in passion]. Right well bethought; but whither went

The man by whom thy gifts were sent?

THE WIFE [pointing left, but also toward the nether regions]. He took the downward road. He hies

With speed thereby to Paradise.

THE FARMER [biting his words out].

Not with so marked a speed, I trust,

But I can catch him, as I must!

[Checking any possible protest on her part with sarcasm she cannot perceive.]

Thou gav'st him far too little money

For thy dead husband's alimony!

He cannot well live long therewith!

Go, have the fast horse saddled forthwith.

[She starts lumberingly off left.]

And I will gallop after him

And give him ten more groschen grim!

[She does not notice the last word, or see the ominous swing of the stocking which accompanies its utterance.]

THE WIFE [turning back to him, vacuously grateful]. Dear husband, thanks that thou tak'st not ill

My love for my former husband still!

For thy goodness to him will I pay thee back:

After thy soul too will I send a pack—

THE FARMER [almost exploding]. Enough of babble and prattle for now!

The stranger may be lost in the slough!

Go get some fellow to saddle my horse!

[THE WIFE scurries out, left. THE FARMER runs in and out of the house, getting his spurs, putting them on, looking for his horse, etc., talking bitterly all the while.]

Ach, Lieber Gott, what a wife I cherish!
Her like is not in all our parish!
In soul, in sense—in body perforce—
Innocent! Idiot!—drinks discourse
From any smart stroller and gives him things

To take to her husband, dead two springs!
I'll ride till I catch him, and beat him well,

And flat to the ground I will him fell,
And get back from him both garb and gold!

Once home again with them, I'll not withhold

Two fists from her face, but blacken her eyes

Till to her folly she testifies!
Else verily she'll be my undoing!
Whatever possessed me to her wooing?
Now I must curse what I then did beg.
I would she had gotten St. Urban's plague!

THE WIFE [returning from left, in high spirits]. The horse is ready! Mount! Away!

And God bested thee through the day!
[He runs off. She resumes her happy ditty, and goes into the house. The curtain with the slough painted on it closes before her.]

THE STUDENT [entering from right]. I' faith, my luck is kind to-day!

Upon good booty still I stray.
[He takes the heavy pack from his shoulder and weighs it in his hand.]

This will last me the winter through These simple goodies are all too few
[With an appreciative backward glance.]

Who commission a man to Paradise!
[Looking off right, he starts, drops the bundle, and peers off under his hand.]

But 'ware the steed that yonder flies
After me fast o'er swamp and slough!
If it be not he, 'tis a fiend, I vow,
He has sent to harry me! Pack, lie there!

[He tucks the pack under the bottom of the curtain.]

He shall not know me by what I bear!
[Peering off again.]

Ah—ha! He is bogged! He must needs dismount.

Now, Mum! and oafish! and he'll account.
Me a poor boor hunting a silly duck.

[He stands staring clownishly all around. THE FARMER, angrier than ever, enters, right, peering intently off left.]

THE FARMER [offhand]. How now, little fellow?

THE STUDENT [stupidly]. Luck!

THE FARMER. Good luck!

Hast thou seen one hereabouts run full tilt

With back bowed under a pack of guilt?
THE STUDENT [vaguely]. Ya—just now—over yonder,—Ran—

[Very graphically, though stupidly.]

Puff, pant, sweat, snort!—like under a ban!
[Nodding.]

You'll catch him in the furze
[Waving vaguely left.]

Over there.

THE FARMER [savagely]. Now on mine oath, it was he for fair! [He crosses and turns.]

Good little fellow, look to my horse.
I must go on foot through yonder gorse.
I'll find the rogue, and give him one
He'll rue as far as he can run—
And he'll never get to confess it either.

THE STUDENT. I have to wait—no short time neither—

For a holy man to pass by here.
I'll watch your mount till you come—no fear!

THE FARMER. I'll give you a kreutzer in return.

Be careful now. [Without a backward glance he goes, stepping warily in the bog.]

THE STUDENT. I'll gladly earn—
[Seeing THE FARMER is out of earshot.]

A horse from thee!
[With a snap of the fingers and a cut up.]

Fair fortune, thanks!
And ease to ye, my weary shanks!
She [Thumb to the right.] let me have warm goods and gold.

He [Thumb to the left.] leaves tired me his horse—to hold!

Seeing that I'm a little man
And fain to help me all he can.
Good sooth, they're a kind-hearted couple!
And faith [peering after him, left], he had best be quick and supple

Now, for he treads a treacherous bog!
The fellow he hunts for, all agog,
May follow him to Paradise
And take a bundle thither twice! [He pulls out the bundle again.]

Well, I must hence. Should he come back,

He'd thwack me black, and sack my pack!
Now on my Pegasus I'll rise
Till I reach the Inn that is Paradise
Where fat roast fowls in the firelight glow—

And [with a jaunty farewell wave to the left] leave him to moil in the muck below!

[He goes off, right. The curtain is drawn again, revealing THE WIFE in the cottage door, perhaps with the yoke on her back for her milk pails.]

THE WIFE [peering off left]. Ach!
How long my husband has been gone!
I fear he lost his way upon
The moor, and my first dear must go
Without the coins he would bestow.
The mist is thick upon the slough.
'Tis time I went to milk my cow.

[She disappears into the house. THE FARMER enters slowly and wearily, left, looking about for his horse.]

THE FARMER [giving up his last hope—that it had run away home]. Odsbodykins! It didn't come home.

He rode it away! [Beating his head.]
O silly coxcomb!

The earth ne'er saw such a simple dunce!
The rogue got money and clothing once
But the second time my fastest horse!
My wife, whom I'd meant without remorse
To beat for her gullibility
Is proved a lesser fool than me!
What shall I say to her now? What can—?

THE WIFE [reappearing]. How? On foot? Didst thou find the man?
Gav'st him the money?

THE FARMER [stumblingly]. He was tired;

The way was long, he said, and mired;
So, that he bring thy husband quick,
In Paradise, what thou didst pick,
I added on the horse thereto,
And he will give that to him too.
Was it well done?

THE WIFE [throwing her arms around his neck]. Oh, treasure mine!

I never guessed thee so benign!
If God should summon thee to-night
Soon wouldst thou see how I'll requite
Thy generous help! I'll send thee there
Whatever thou might'st wish to wear
And keep back nought of all I own—
Cow, goose, or sow! Thou'dst well be shown

What faith was mine, both fore and aft!
THE FARMER [disengaging himself; drily]. Wife, say no more, and watch for craft.

Keep close such sacred things as these.
THE WIFE [judilantly]. Nay, the whole parish knows and agrees!

THE FARMER [much startled]. Eh? Who told them of it so quick?

THE WIFE. Why, before thou hadst reached yon rick [pointing left]

I had told them all from beginning to end:

What to my husband I would send,
With all respect, to Paradise.
And everybody was so nice—
Laughed aloud and made sport with me!

THE FARMER [out of temper]. Of thee, thou devil's devotee!

Dear God, what a wench it is to bilk!

[Recovering himself: kindly.]

Go in and set me a sup of milk

THE WIFE [still gay and affectionate].

Straightway! Come soon, dear husband mine!

[She bounces into the house. Her husband clasps his head.]

THE FARMER. Well can that man at his luck repine

Who is yoked to such a wife!—'Tis for
me

To keep her in harness, to oversee

And set her right when her fool feet trip.

Mine, too, out of the stirrup may slip!

He who lets fall the shuttlecock

May find himself a laughing stock.

[Gradually losing his character and speaking directly to the audience for the author.]

Folly in folly must find excuse

If married folks are to live in truce

And the bonds of wedlock not how cracks—

Which is the warning, and wish, of Hans Sachs.

FATHER CHRISTMAS

SAINT GEORGE

VALIANT SOLDIER

TURKISH KNIGHT

DOCTOR

THE SARACEN

[Enter FATHER CHRISTMAS. He walks round swinging his club and clearing the room.]

FATHER CHRISTMAS. Here come I, old
Father Christmas;
Welcome or welcome not,
I hope old Father Christmas
Will never be forgot:—
Although it's Father Christmas I've a short time to stay,
But I've come to show you pleasure before I pass away!
Make room, make room, my gallants,
room,
And give us space to rhyme;
We've come to show Saint George's play
Upon this Christmas time.

And if you don't believe my words, I straight call out, Walk in, Walk in. O Valiant Soldier, and boldly now begin!

[Enter the VALIANT SOLDIER.]

VALIANT SOLDIER. Here come I, the Valiant Soldier,
Slasher is my name,
With sword and buckler by my side
I hope to win the game.
One of my brethren I've seen wounded,
Another I've seen slain,
So I will fight with any foe
Upon this British plain.
Yes, with my sword and with my spear
To 'fend the right, I'll battle here!

* This version of a traditional folk play was reconstructed from memory by Thomas Hardy, and is reprinted from the text published by Samuel French and copy-right, 1928, by Roger S. Loomis, the editor, and Mrs. Thomas Hardy.

[Enter the TURKISH KNIGHT.]

TURKISH KNIGHT. Here come I, the Turkish Knight,
Come from Turkish land to fight;
I'll fight Saint George and all his crew,
Aye, countryfolk and warriors too.
Who is this man with courage bold?
If his blood's hot, I'll make it cold!

VALIANT SOLDIER [coming forward]. If thou art called the Turkish Knight,
Draw out thy sword, and let us fight!
I am the friend of good Saint George,
I've fought men o'er and o'er,
And for the sake of good Saint George
I'd fight a hundred more.

[They fight. The VALIANT SOLDIER falls.]

To slay this false Knight did I try—
'Tis for the right I have to die! [Dies.]
TURKISH KNIGHT [marching round]. If Saint George but meet me here,
I'll try his mettle without fear!

[Enter SAINT GEORGE.]

SAINT GEORGE. Here come I, Saint
George, the Valiant man,
With glittering sword and spear in
hand,
Who fought the Dragon boldly, and brought him to the slaughter,
By which I won fair Sabra, the King of Egypt's daughter.
So haste away, make no delay,
For I can give some lusty thumps,
And, like a true born Englishman,
Fight on my legs or on my stumps!
What mortal man would dare to stand
Before me with my sword in hand?

TURKISH KNIGHT [advancing]. Make not so bold, Saint George, I pray; Though thou'rt all this, thou'rt one I'll slay!

SAINT GEORGE. My blood is hot as any fire,
So I must say thee Nay,
For with my trusty sword and spear
I'll take thy life away!

TURKISH KNIGHT. Then thou and I will battle try.

SAINT GEORGE. And if I conquer thou shalt die!

So give me leave, I'll give thee battle,
And quickly make thy bones to rattle!

[They fight. The TURKISH KNIGHT is wounded and falls upon one knee.]

TURKISH KNIGHT. Can there a doctor come to me
From anywhere in this countree?
FATHER CHRISTMAS [looking about]. Is there a doctor to be found
To cure this man of his deadly wound?
For whatsoever wrath you feel Toward your foeman, we must heal.

[Enter the DOCTOR, a bottle strapped under his arm.]

DOCTOR. Yes, there's a doctor to be found
To cure this man of his deadly wound.

With this small bottle that you see
I cure all evils there can be;
The phthisic, the palsy and the gout,
If the devil's in I'll blow him out.

FATHER CHRISTMAS. Doctor then, O
what's thy fee,
For doing of this great merc-y?

DOCTOR. Fifty pound is my fee,
But ten pound less I'll take of thee.

FATHER CHRISTMAS. What dost say,
eh? Half a crown?

DOCTOR. No. I tell thee forty poun'—
A small sum that to save a man,
And you've the money in your han'.

FATHER CHRISTMAS. Try thy skill; it must be so,

Wher I pay thy fee or no.

Small money have I, but do thy best,
And trust the victors for the rest.

[The DOCTOR restores the KNIGHT by giving him a draught from the bottle he carries. Exit

DOCTOR. The fight is resumed.
But the TURKISH KNIGHT sinks by degrees, and is at last killed
by SAINT GEORGE.]

SAINT GEORGE. The first one, Father, now is dead:

Call in the second, that Champion whom
I dread.

[FATHER CHRISTMAS looks about, but nobody appears. Pause.]

Where is the Saracen? He doth so long delay,
 That hero of renown, I long to show him
 play!

[Enter the SARACEN with a loud strut.]

SARACEN. The Saracen behold in me:
 I am the man who'll conquer thee!
 My head is cased in iron, my body in
 steel;

I'll fight with thee, Saint George, and make thee feel! [Looks at the dead bodies.]

O see what blood Saint George has spilled in fight;

I'll vanquish him before I sleep this night.

SAINT GEORGE. Since then 'tis not against thy will,

Nor yet against thy might,
 If thou canst battle with Saint George

Draw out thy sword and smite.

[They fight. The SARACEN falls wounded.]

Tremble, thou tyrant, for thy sin that's past,

Tremble to think to-night shall be thy
 last;

My conquering arm shall send thy fire
 and fume

By one more stroke to thy eternal doom;
 Aye, I, despite the steel thou boastest so,
 Dispatch thee now to where the wicked go.

SARACEN. O pardon me, Saint George.
 Thy pardon now I crave,

O pardon me this night, and I will be thy slave!

SAINT GEORGE. I never will pardon thee, thou Saracen,

But rise, and draw, and we will fight
 again!

[*The SARACEN rises. They fight.
 The SARACEN is killed and his head cut off.*]

FATHER CHRISTMAS [advances]. To greet our ears. O what wild moans Throughout this fight, and what deep groans!

Is there a doctor to be found
 That can raise dead men from the ground,
 So as to have them for to stand

And walk again upon this land?

I've heard of a mill that grinds old people young,

But not of a leech to give these dead men
 tongue!

SAINT GEORGE. Yes, that same doctor can be found

To raise these dead men from the ground,
 So as to have them for to stand
 And walk again upon the land.

FATHER CHRISTMAS. Then, Doctor,
 Doctor, prithee come,

And raise these men now dead and
 dumb:

Saint George, thyself hadst better call him here,

To save these corpses from the dreadful
 bier.

SAINT GEORGE. I warrant he'll answer to my call;

[Calls.] Doctor, haste here and save them all!

[Enter DOCTOR slowly.]

FATHER CHRISTMAS. Ha, Doctor, is it in thy skill

To cure dead men as if but ill?

DOCTOR. Being a doctor of great fame
 Who from the ancient countries came,

And knowing Asia, Afric-ay,
 And every mystery out that way.

I've learned to do the best of cures

For all the human frame endures.

I can restore a leg or arm
 From mortification or from harm,

I can repair a sword-slit pate,

A leg cut off—if not too late.

FATHER CHRISTMAS. But, Doctor—

DOCTOR. Yea, more; this little bottle of alicumpane [Touches the bottle.]

Will raise dead men to walk the earth
 again!

FATHER CHRISTMAS. That is, forsooth, a strange refrain!

Try thy skill on these men slain.

DOCTOR. A hundred guineas is my fee
 And nothing less I'll take of thee.

[FATHER CHRISTMAS starts astonished.]

SAINT GEORGE. Such money I will freely give

If that thou mak'st these men to live.

DOCTOR [advancing to the fallen men].
I put a drop to each soldier's heart. [He holds his bottle to the lips and to the heart of each, adding slowly.]

Rise — Champions — and — all — play — your — part!

[They rise inch by inch, FATHER CHRISTMAS, SAINT GEORGE and the DOCTOR singing a slow song or chant as they rise. A lively *song follows from the whole company, walking round. Ex-eunt omnes, except FATHER

CHRISTMAS.*]

FATHER CHRISTMAS. You needs will have confest

That our calling is the best,

But now we won't delay, lest tediousness befall,

And I wish you a Merry Christmas, and God bless you all!

[Exit FATHER CHRISTMAS.]

CHORUS. Not marching now in fields of Thrasymene,

Where Mars did mate the Carthaginians;
Nor sporting in the dalliance of love,
In courts of kings where state is over-turn'd;

Nor in the pomp of proud audacious deeds,
Intends our Muse to vaunt her heavenly
verse:

Only this, gentlemen,—we must perform
The form of Faustus' fortunes, good or bad:

To patient judgments we appeal our
plaud,

And speak for Faustus in his infancy.
Now is he born, his parents base of stock,
In Germany, within a town call'd Rhodes:
Of riper years, to Wertenberg he went,
Whereas his kinsmen chiefly brought him
up.

So soon he profits in divinity,
The fruitful plot of scholarship grac'd,
That shortly he was grac'd with doctor's
name,

Excelling all whose sweet delight disputes
In heavenly matters of theology;
Till swoln with cunning, of a self-conceit,
His waxen wings did mount above his
reach,

And, melting, heavens conspir'd his overthrow:

For, falling to a devilish exercise,
And glutted now with learning's golden
gifts,

He surfeits upon cursed necromancy;
Nothing so sweet as magic is to him,
Which he prefers before his chiefest bliss:
And this the man that in his study sits.

[Exit.]

SCENE I

[FAUSTUS discovered in his study.]

FAUSTUS. Settle thy studies, Faustus, and begin

To sound the depth of that thou wilt profess:

Having commenc'd, be a divine in show,
Yet level at the end of every art,
And live and die in Aristotle's works.

Sweet Analytics, 'tis thou hast ravish'd
me!

Bene disserere est finis logices.

Is, to dispute well, logic's chiefest end?
Affords this art no greater miracle?

Then read no more; thou hast attain'd that end:

A greater subject fitteth Faustus' wit:

Bid Economy farewell, and Galen come,

Seeing, Ubi desinit philosophus, ibi in-cipit medicus:

Be a physician, Faustus; heap up gold,
And be etern's'd for some wondrous cure:

Summum donum medicinae sanitas,

The end of physic is our body's health.

Why, Faustus, hast thou not attain'd that end?

Is not thy common talk found aphorisms?
Are not thy bills hung up as monuments,

Whereby whole cities have escap'd the plague,

And thousand desperate maladies been eas'd?

Yet art thou still but Faustus, and a man.
Couldst thou make men to live eternally,

Or, being dead, raise them to life again,
Then this profession were to be esteem'd.

Physic, farewell! Where is Justinian?

[Reads.]

Si una eademque res legatur duobus, alter rem, alter valorem, rei, etc.

A pretty case of paltry legacies! [Reads.]
Exhereditare filium non potest pater nisi, etc.

Such is the subject of the institute,

And universal body of the law:

This study fits a mercenary drudge,

Who aims at nothing but external trash;

Too servile and illiberal for me.

When all is done, divinity is best:

Jerome's Bible, Faustus; view it well.

[Reads.]

Stipendium peccati mors est. Ha! Stipendium, etc.

The reward of sin is death: that's hard.

[Reads.]

*Si peccasse negamus, fallimur, et nulla
est in nobis veritas;*

If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and there's no truth in us.

Why, then, belike we must sin, and so consequently die:

Ay, we must die an everlasting death.

What doctrine call you this, Che sera, sera,

What will be, shall be? Divinity, adieu! These metaphysics of magicians, And necromantic books are heavenly; Lines, circles, scenes, letters, and characters;

Ay, these are those that Faustus most desires.

O, what a world of profit and delight, Of power, of honour, of omnipotence, Is promis'd to the studious artisan! All things that move between the quiet poles

Shall be at my command: emperors and kings

Are but obeyed in their several provinces, Nor can they raise the wind, or rend the clouds;

But his dominion that exceeds in this, Stretcheth as far as doth the mind of man;

A sound magician is a mighty god: Here, Faustus, tire thy brains to gain a deity.

[Enter WAGNER.]

Wagner, commend me to my dearest friends,

The German Valdes and Cornelius; Request them earnestly to visit me.

WAGNER. I will, sir. [Exit.]

FAUSTUS. Their conference will be a greater help to me

Than all my labours, plod I ne'er so fast.

[Enter GOOD ANGEL and EVIL ANGEL.]

GOOD ANGEL. O, Faustus, lay thy damned book aside,

And gaze not on it, lest it tempt thy soul, And heap God's heavy wrath upon thy head!

Read, read the Scriptures:—that is blasphemy.

EVIL ANGEL. Go forward, Faustus, in that famous art

Wherein all Nature's treasure is contain'd:

Be thou on earth as Jove is in the sky, Lord and commander of these elements.

[Exeunt ANGELS.]

FAUSTUS. How am I glutted with conceit of this!

Shall I make spirits fetch me what I please,

Resolve me of all ambiguities, Perform what desperate enterprise I will? I'll have them fly to India for gold, Ransack the ocean for orient pearl, And search all corners of the new-found world

For pleasant fruits and princely delicates; I'll have them read me strange philosophy.

And tell the secrets of all foreign kings; I'll have them wall all Germany with brass,

And make swift Rhine circle fair Wertemberg;

I'll have them fill the public schools with silk,

Wherewith the students shall be bravely clad;

I'll levy soldiers with the coin they bring, And chase the Prince of Parma from our land,

And reign sole king of all the provinces; Yea, stranger engines for the brunt of war,

Than was the fiery keel at Antwerp's bridge,

I'll make my servile spirits to invent.

[Enter VALDES and CORNELIUS.]

Come, German Valdes and Cornelius, And make me blest with your sage conference.

Valdes, sweet Valdes, and Cornelius, Know that your words have won me at the last

To practise magic and concealed arts: Yet not your words only, but mine own fantasy,

That will receive no object; for my head But ruminates on necromantic skill.

Philosophy is odious and obscure; Both law and physic are for petty wits;

Divinity is basest of the three, Unpleasant, harsh, contemptible, and vile:

'Tis magic, magic, that hath ravish'd me.
Then, gentle friends, aid me in this attempt;

And I, that have with concise syllogisms Gravell'd the pastors of the German church,

And made the flowering pride of Werten-berg

Swarm to my problems, as the infernal spirits

On sweet Musæus when he came to hell,
Will be as cunning as Agrippa was,
Whose shadow made all Europe honour
him.

VALDES. Faustus, these books, thy wit, and our experience.

Shall make all nations to canonise us.
As Indian Moors obey their Spanish lords,
So shall the spirits of every element
Be always serviceable to us three;
Like lions shall they guard us when we
please;

Like Almain rutters with their horsemen's
staves;

Or Lapland giants, trotting by our sides;
Sometimes like women, or unwedded maids,

Shadowing more beauty in their airy
brows

Than have the white breasts of the queen of love:

From Venice shall they drag huge argosies,

And from America the golden fleece
That yearly stuffs old Philip's treasury;
If learned Faustus will be resolute.

FAUSTUS. Valdes, as resolute am I in
this

As thou to live: therefore object it not.
CORNELIUS. The miracles that magic will perform

Will make thee vow to study nothing
else.

He that is grounded in astrology,
Enrich'd with tongues, well seen in minerals,

Hath all the principles magic doth require:

Then doubt not, Faustus, but to be re-
nown'd,

And more frequented for this mystery

Than heretofore the Delphian oracle.

The spirits tell me they can dry the sea,
And fetch the treasure of all foreign wrecks,

Ay, all the wealth that our forefathers hid

Within the massy entrails of the earth:
Then tell me, Faustus, what shall we three want?

FAUSTUS. Nothing, Cornelius. O, this cheers my soul!

Come, show me some demonstrations magical,

That I may conjure in some lusty grove,
And have these joys in full possession.

VALDES. Then haste thee to some solitary grove,

And bear wise Bacon's and Albertus'
works,

The Hebrew Psalter, and New Testament;
And whatsoever else is requisite

We will inform thee ere our conference cease.

CORNELIUS. Valdes, first let him know
the words of art;

And then, all other ceremonies learn'd,
Faustus may try his cunning by himself.

VALDES. First I'll instruct thee in the rudiments,

And then wilt thou be perfecter than I.

FAUSTUS. Then come and dine with me, and, after meat,

We'll canvass every quiddity thereof;

For, ere I sleep, I'll try what I can do:

This night I'll conjure, though I die therefore. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II—Before FAUSTUS'S house.

[Enter two SCHOLARS.]

1ST SCHOLAR. I wonder what's become of Faustus, that was wont to make our schools ring with sic probo.

2ND SCHOLAR. That shall we know, for see, here comes his boy.

[Enter WAGNER.]

1ST SCHOLAR. How now, sirrah! where's thy master?

WAGNER. God in heaven knows.

2ND SCHOLAR. Why, dost not thou know?

WAGNER. Yes, I know; but that follows not.

1ST SCHOLAR. Go to, sirrah! leave your jesting, and tell us where he is.

WAGNER. That follows not necessary by force of argument, that you, being licentiates, should stand upon: therefore acknowledge your error, and be attentive.

2ND SCHOLAR. Well, you will not tell thou knewest?

WAGNER. Have you any witness on't?

1ST SCHOLAR. Yes, sirrah, I heard you.

WAGNER. Ask my fellow if I be a thief.

2ND SCHOLAR. Well, you will not tell us?

WAGNER. Yes, sir, I will tell you; yet, if you were not dunces, you would never ask me such a question, for is not he corpus naturale? and is not that mobile? then wherefore should you ask me such a question? But that I am by nature phlegmatic, slow to wrath, and prone to lechery (to love, I would say), it were not for you to come within forty foot of the place of execution, although I do not doubt to see you both hanged the next sessions. Thus having triumphed over you, I will set my countenance like a precisian, and begin to speak thus:—Truly, my dear brethren, my master is within at dinner, with Valdes and Cornelius, as this wine, if it could speak, would inform your worships: and so, the Lord bless you, preserve you, and keep you, my dear brethren, my dear bretheren!

[Exit.]

1ST SCHOLAR. Nay, then, I fear he has fallen into that damned art for which they two are infamous through the world.

2ND SCHOLAR. Were he a stranger, and not allied to me, yet should I grieve for him. But, come, let us go and inform the Rector, and see if he by his grave counsel can reclaim him.

1ST SCHOLAR. O, but I fear me nothing can reclaim him!

2ND SCHOLAR. You let us try what we can do.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III—A grove.

[Enter FAUSTUS to conjure.]

FAUSTUS. Now that the gloomy shadow of the earth, Longing to view Orion's drizzling look,
Leaps from th' antarctic world unto the sky,
And dims the welkin with her pitchy breath,

Faustus, begin thine incantations,
And try if devils will obey thy hest,
Seeing thou hast pray'd and sacrific'd to
them.

Within this circle is Jehovah's name,
Forward and backward anagrammatis'd,
Th' abbreviated names of holy saints,
Figures of every adjunct to the heavens,
And characters of signs and erring stars,
By which the spirits are enforc'd to
rise:

Then fear not, Faustus, but be resolute,
And try the uttermost magic can perform.—

*Sint mihi dei Acherontis propitii!
Valeat numen triplex Jchoræ! Ignei, aërii, aquatani spiritus, salve! Orientis princeps Belzebub, inferni ardentis monarcha, et Demogorgon, propitiamus vos, ut appareat et surgat Mephistophilis, quod tuneraris: per Jehoram, Gehennam, et consecratam aquam quam nunc spargo, signumque crucis quod nunc facio, et per vota nostra, ipse nunc surgat nobis dicatus Mephistophilis!*

[Enter MEPHISTOPHILIS.]

I charge thee to return, and change thy shape;

Thou art too ugly to attend on me:
Go, and return an old Franciscan friar:
That holy shape becomes a devil best.

[Exit MEPHISTOPHILIS.]

I see there's virtue in my heavenly words:
Who would not be proficient in this art?
How pliant is this Mephistophilis,
Full of obedience and humility!
Such is the force of magic and my spells:

No, Faustus, thou art conjuror laureat,
That canst command great Mephistophilis.

[Reënter MEPHISTOPHILIS like a Franciscan friar.]

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Now, Faustus, what wouldst thou have me do?

FAUSTUS. I charge thee wait upon me whilst I live,
To do whatever Faustus shall command,
Be it to make the moon drop from her sphere,
Or the ocean to overwhelm the world.

MEPHISTOPHILIS. I am a servant to great Lucifer,
And may not follow thee without his leave;
No more than he commands must we perform.

FAUSTUS. Did not he charge thee to appear to me?

MEPHISTOPHILIS. No, I came hither of mine own accord.

FAUSTUS. Did not my conjuring speeches raise thee? speak.

MEPHISTOPHILIS. That was the cause,
but yet per accidens;
For, when we hear one rack the name of God,
Abjure the Scriptures and his Saviour Christ,

We fly, in hope, to get his glorious soul;
Nor will we come, unless he use such means

Whereby he is in danger to be damn'd.
Therefore the shortest cut for conjuring
Is stoutly to abjure the Trinity,
And pray devoutly to the prince of hell.

FAUSTUS. So Faustus hath Already done; and holds this principle,
There is no chief but only Belzebug;
To whom Faustus doth dedicate himself.
This word "damnation" terrifies not him,
For he confounds hell in Elysium:

His ghost be with the old philosophers!
But, leaving these vain trifles of men's souls,

Tell me what is that Lucifer thy lord?

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Arch-regent and commander of all spirits.

FAUSTUS. Was not that Lucifer an angel once?

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Yes, Faustus, and most dearly lov'd of God.

FAUSTUS. How comes it, then, that he is prince of devils?

MEPHISTOPHILIS. O, by aspiring pride and insolence;
For which God threw him from the face of heaven.

FAUSTUS. And what are you that live with Lucifer?

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Unhappy spirits that fell with Lucifer?

Conspir'd against our God with Lucifer,
And are for ever damn'd with Lucifer.

FAUSTUS. Where are you damn'd?

MEPHISTOPHILIS. In hell.

FAUSTUS. How comes it, then, that thou art out of hell?

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Why, this is hell, nor am I out of it.

Think'st thou that I, who saw the face of God,

And tasted the eternal joys of heaven,
Am not tormented with ten thousand hells,

In being depriv'd of everlasting bliss?
O, Faustus, leave these frivolous demands,
Which strike a terror to my fainting soul!

FAUSTUS. What, is great Mephistophilis so passionate

For being deprived of the joys of heaven?
Learn thou of Faustus manly fortitude
And scorn those joys thou never shalt possess.

Go bear these tidings to great Lucifer:
Seeing Faustus hath incurr'd eternal death

By desperate thoughts against Jove's deity,

Say, he surrenders up to him his soul,
So he will spare him four-and-twenty years,

Letting him live in all voluptuousness;
Having thee ever to attend on me,
To give me whatsoever I shall ask,
To tell me whatsoever I demand,
To slay mine enemies, and aid my friends,
And always be obedient to my will.

Go and return to mighty Lucifer,
And meet me in my study at midnight,
And then resolve me of thy master's mind.

MEPHISTOPHILIS. I will, Faustus.

[Exit.]

FAUSTUS. Had I as many souls as there be stars, I'd give them all for Mephistophilis.

By him I'll be great emperor of the world,

And make a bridge through the moving air,

To pass the ocean with a band of men;

I'll join the hills that bind the Afric shore,

And make that country continent to Spain, And both contributory to my crown:

The Emperor shall not live but by my leave,

Nor any potentate of Germany.

Now that I have obtained what I desire'd,

I'll live in speculation of this art,

Till Mephistophilis return again. [Exit.]

SCENE IV—A street.

[Enter WAGNER and CLOWN.]

WAGNER. Sirrah boy, come hither.

CLOWN. How, boy! swowns, boy! I hope you have seen many boys with such pickadevaunts as I have: boy, quotha!

WAGNER. Tell me, sirrah, hast thou any comings in?

CLOWN. Ay, and goings out too; you may see else.

WAGNER. Alas, poor slave! see how poverty jesteth in his nakedness! the villain is bare and out of service, and so hungry, that I know he would give his soul to the devil for a shoulder of mutton, though it were blood-raw.

CLOWN. How! my soul to the devil for a shoulder of mutton, though 'twere blood-raw! not so, good friend: by'r lady, I had need have it well roasted, and good sauce to it, if I pay so dear.

WAGNER. Well, wilt thou serve me, and I'll make thee go like Qui mihi discipulus.

CLOWN. How, in verse?

WAGNER. No, sirrah; in beaten silk and staves-acre.

CLOWN. How, how, knaves-acre! ay, I thought that was all the land his father left him. Do you hear? I would be sorry to rob you of your living.

WAGNER. Sirrah, I say in staves-acre.

CLOWN. Oho, oho, staves-acre! why, then, belike, if I were your man, I should be full of vermin.

WAGNER. So thou shalt, whether thou beest with me or no. But, sirrah, leave your jesting, and bind yourself presently unto me for seven years, or I'll turn all the lice about thee into familiars, and they shall tear thee in pieces.

CLOWN. Do you hear, sir? you may save that labour; they are too familiar with me already: swowns, they are as bold with my flesh as if they had paid for their meat and drink.

WAGNER. Well, do you hear, sirrah? hold, take these guilders. [Gives money.]

CLOWN. Gridirons! what be they?

WAGNER. Why, French crowns.

CLOWN. Mass, but for the name of French crowns, a man were as good have as many English counters. And what should I do with these?

WAGNER. Why, now, sirrah, thou art at an hour's warning, whensoever and wheresoever the devil shall fetch thee.

CLOWN. No, no; here, take your gridirons again.

WAGNER. Truly, I'll none of them.

CLOWN. Truly, but you shall.

WAGNER. Bear witness I gave them him.

CLOWN. Bear witness I give them you again.

WAGNER. Well, I will cause two devils presently to fetch thee away—Baliol and Belcher!

CLOWN. Let your Baliol and your Belcher come here, and I'll knock them, they were never so knocked since they were devils: say I should kill one of them, what would folks say? "Do ye see yonder tall fellow in the round slop? he has killed the devil." So I should be called Kill-devil all the parish over.

[Enter two DEVILS; and the CLOWN runs up and down crying.]

WAGNER. Baliol and Belcher,—spirits, away! [Exeunt DEVILS.]

CLOWN. What, are they gone? a vengeance on them! they have vile long nails. There was a he-devil and a she-devil: I'll tell you how you shall know them; all he-devils has horns, and all she-devils has cloven feet.

WAGNER. Well, sirrah, follow me.

CLOWN. But, do you hear? if I should serve you, would you teach me to raise up Banios and Belcheos?

WAGNER. I will teach thee to turn thyself to anything, to a dog, or a cat, or a mouse, or a rat, or anything.

CLOWN. How! a Christian fellow to a dog, or a cat, a mouse, or a rat! no, no, sir; if you turn me into anything, let it be in the likeness of a little pretty frisking flea, that I may be here and there and everywhere.

WAGNER. Well, sirrah, come.

CLOWN. But, do you hear, Wagner?

WAGNER. How!—Baliol and Belcher!

CLOWN. O Lord! I pray, sir, let Banio and Belcher go sleep.

WAGNER. Villain, call me Master Wagner, and let thy left eye be diametrically fixed upon my right heel, with quasi vestigiis nostris insistere. [Exit.]

CLOWN. God forgive me, he speaks Dutch fustian.

Well, I'll follow him; I'll serve him, that's flat. [Exit.]

SCENE V

[FAUSTUS discovered in his study.]

FAUSTUS. Now, Faustus, must Thou needs be damn'd and canst thou not be sav'd:

What boots it, then, to think of God or heaven?

Away with such vain fancies, and despair; Despair in God, and trust in Belzebub:

Now go not backward; no, Faustus, be resolute:

Why waver'st thou? O, something soundeth in mine ears,

"Abjure this magic. turn to God again!" Ay, and Faustus will turn to God again.

To God? he loves thee not;

The god thou serv'st is thine own appetite,

Wherein is fix'd the love of Belzebub: To him I'll build an altar and a church, And offer lukewarm blood of new-born babes.

[Enter GOOD ANGEL and EVIL ANGEL.]

GOOD ANGEL. Sweet Faustus, leave that execrable art.

FAUSTUS. Contrition, prayer, repentance—what of them?

GOOD ANGEL. O, they are means to bring thee unto heaven!

EVIL ANGEL. Rather illusions, fruits of lunacy, That make men foolish that do trust them most.

GOOD ANGEL. Sweet Faustus, think of heaven and heavenly things.

EVIL ANGEL. No, Faustus; think of honour and of wealth.

[Exit ANGELS.]

FAUSTUS. Of wealth!

Why, the signiory of Embden shall be mine.

When Mephistophilis shall stand by me, What god can hurt thee, Faustus? thou art safe:

Cast no more doubts.—Come, Mephistophilis, And bring glad tidings from great Lucifer;—

Is't not midnight?—come, Mephistophilis, Veni, veni Mephistophile!

[Enter MEPHISTOPHILIS.]

Now tell me what says Lucifer, thy lord?

MEPHISTOPHILIS. That I shall wait on Faustus whilst he lives, So he will buy my service with his soul.

FAUSTUS. Already Faustus hath hazarded that for thee.

MEPHISTOPHILIS. But, Faustus, thou must bequeath it solemnly, And write a deed of gift with thine own blood;

For that security craves great Lucifer.

If thou deny it, I will back to hell.

FAUSTUS. Stay, Mephistophilis, and tell me, what good will my soul do thy lord?

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Enlarge his kingdom.

FAUSTUS. Is that the reason why he tempts us thus?

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Solamen miseris socios habuisse doloris.

FAUSTUS. Why, have you any pain that torture others!

MEPHISTOPHILIS. As great as have the human souls of men.

But, tell me, Faustus, shall I have thy soul?

And I will be thy slave, and wait on thee,

And give thee more than thou hast wit to ask.

FAUSTUS. Ay, Mephistophilis, I give it thee.

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Then, Faustus, stab thy arm courageously,

And bind thy soul, that at some certain day

Great Lucifer may claim it as his own;

And then be thou as great as Lucifer.

FAUSTUS [stabbing his arm]. Lo, Mephistophilis, for love of thee

I cut mine arm, and with my proper blood

Assure my soul to be great Lucifer's, Chief lord and regent of perpetual night!

View here the blood that trickles from mine arm,

And let it be propitious for my wish.

MEPHISTOPHILIS. But, Faustus, thou must Write it in manner of a deed of gift.

FAUSTUS. Ay, so I will. [Writes.]

But, Mephistophilis,

My blood congeals, and I can write no more.

MEPHISTOPHILIS. I'll fetch thee fire to dissolve it straight. [Exit.]

FAUSTUS. Why might the staying of my blood portend?

Is it unwilling I should write this bill? Why streams it not, that I may write afresh?

Faustus gives to thee his soul: ah, there it stay'd!

Why shouldst thou not? is not thy soul thine own?

Then write again, Faustus gives to thee his soul.

[Reënter MEPHISTOPHILIS with a chafer of coals.]

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Here's fire; come, Faustus, set it on.

FAUSTUS. So, now the blood begins to clear again;

Now will I make an end immediately. [Writes.]

MEPHISTOPHILIS [aside]. O, what will not I do to obtain his soul!

FAUSTUS. Consummatum est; this bill is ended,

And Faustus hath bequeathed his soul to Lucifer.

But what is this inscription on mine arm? Homo, fuge: whither should I fly?

If unto God, he'll throw me down to hell. My senses are deceiv'd; here's nothing writ:—

I see it plain; here in this place is writ, Homo, fuge: yet shall not Faustus fly.

MEPHISTOPHILIS [aside]. I'll fetch him somewhat to delight his mind. [Exit.]

[Reënter MEPHISTOPHILIS with DEVILS, who give crowns and rich apparel to FAUSTUS, dance. and then depart.]

FAUSTUS. Speak, Mephistophilis, what means this show?

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Nothing, Faustus, but to delight thy mind withal,

And to show thee what magic can perform.

FAUSTUS. But may I raise up spirits when I please?

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Ay, Faustus, and do greater things than these.

FAUSTUS. Then there's enough for a thousand souls.

Here, Mephistophilis, receive this scroll, A deed of gift of body and of soul:

But yet conditionally that thou perform All articles prescrib'd between us both.

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Faustus, I swear by hell and Lucifer

To effect all promises between us made!

FAUSTUS. Then hear me read them. [Recads.]

On these conditions following. First, that Faustus may be a spirit in form and substance. Secondly, that Mephistophilis shall be his servant, and at his command. Thirdly, that Mephistophilis shall do for him, and bring him whatsoever he desires. Fourthly, that he shall be in his chamber or house invisible. Lastly, that he shall appear to the said John Faustus, at all times, in what form or shape soever he please. I, John Faustus, of Wertenberg, Doctor, by these presents, do give both body and soul to Lucifer prince of the east, and his minister Mephistophilis; and furthermore grant unto them, that, twenty-four years being expired, the articles above-written inviolate, full power to fetch or carry the said John Faustus, body and soul, flesh, blood, or goods, into their habitation wheresoever. By me, John Faustus.

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Speak, Faustus, do you deliver this as your deed?

FAUSTUS. Ay, take it, and the devil give thee good on't!

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Now, Faustus, ask what thou wilt.

FAUSTUS. First will I question with thee about hell.

Tell me, where is the place that men call hell?

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Under the heavens.

FAUSTUS. Ay, but whereabouts?

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Within the bowels of these elements,

Where we are tortur'd and remain for ever:

Hell hath no limits, nor is circumscrib'd
In one self place; for where we are is hell,
And where hell is, there must we ever be:

And, to conclude, when all the world dissolves,

And every creature shall be purified,
All places shall be hell that are not heaven.

FAUSTUS. Come, I think hell's a fable.

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Ay, think so still, till experience change thy mind.

FAUSTUS. Why, think'st thou, then, that Faustus shall be damn'd?

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Ay, of necessity, for here's the scroll

Wherein thou hast given thy soul to Lucifer.

FAUSTUS. Ay, and body too: but what of that?

Think'st thou that Faustus is so fond to imagine

That, after this life, there is any pain?

Tush, these are trifles and mere old wives' tales.

MEPHISTOPHILIS. But, Faustus, I am an instance to prove the contrary

For I am damn'd, and am now in hell.

FAUSTUS. How! now in hell!

Nay, an this be hell, I'll willingly be damn'd here:

What! walking, disputing, etc.

But, leaving off this, let me have a wife,
The fairest maid in Germany.

MEPHISTOPHILIS. How! a wife!

I prithee, Faustus, talk not of a wife.

FAUSTUS. Nay, sweet Mephistophilis, fetch me one, for I will have one.

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Well, thou wilt have one? Sit there till I come: I'll fetch thee a wife in the devil's name. [Exit.]

[Reënter MEPHISTOPHILIS with a DEVIL dressed like a Woman, with fireworks.]

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Tell me, Faustus, how dost thou like thy wife:

FAUSTUS. A plague on her!

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Tut, Faustus, Marriage is but a ceremonial toy;

If thou lovest me, think no more of it.

She whom thine eye shall like, thy heart shall have,

Be she as chaste as was Penelope,

As wise as Saba, or as beautiful

As was bright Lucifer before his fall.

Hold, take this book, peruse it thoroughly: [Gives book.]

The iterating of these lines brings gold;

The framing of this circle on the ground

Brings whirlwinds, tempests, thunder, and lightning;

Pronounce this thrice devoutly to thyself,

And men in armour shall appear to thee,
Ready to execute what thou desir'st.

FAUSTUS. Thanks, Mephistophilis: yet fain would I have a book wherein I might behold all spells and incantations, that I might raise up spirits when I please.

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Here they are in this book. [Turns to them.]

FAUSTUS. Now would I have a book where I might see all characters and planets of the heavens, that I might know their motions and dispositions.

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Here they are too.

[Turns to them.]

FAUSTUS. Nay, let me have one book more,—and then I have done,—wherein I might see all plants, herbs and trees, that grow upon the earth.

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Here they be.

FAUSTUS. O, thou art deceived.

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Tut, I warrant thee.

[Turns to them. Exeunt.]

SCENE VI—A room in FAUSTUS'S house.

FAUSTUS. When I behold the heavens, then I repent,
And curse thee, wicked Mephistophilis,
Because thou hast depriv'd me of those joys.

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Why, Faustus,
Thinkest thou heaven is such a glorious thing?

I tell thee, 'tis not half so fair as thou,
Or any man that breathes on earth.

FAUSTUS. How prov'st thou that?

MEPHISTOPHILIS. 'Twas made for man,
therefore is man more excellent.

FAUSTUS. If it were made for man,
'twas made for me:
I will renounce this magic and repent.

[Enter GOOD ANGEL and EVIL ANGEL.]

GOOD ANGEL. Faustus, repent; yet God will pity thee.

EVIL ANGEL. Thou art a spirit; God cannot pity thee.

FAUSTUS. Who buzzeth in mine ears I am a spirit?

Be I a devil, yet God may pity me;
Ay, God will pity me, if I repent.

EVIL ANGEL. Ay, but Faustus never shall repent. [Exeunt ANGELS.]

FAUSTUS. My heart's so harden'd, I cannot repent:

Scarce can I name salvation, faith, or heaven,

But fearful echoes thunder in mine ears,
"Faustus, thou art damn'd!" then swords,
and knives,

Poison, guns, halters, and evenom'd steel
Are laid before me to despatch myself;
And long ere this I should have slain myself,

Had not sweet pleasure conquer'd deep despair.

Have not I made blind Homer sing to me

Of Alexander's love and Enon's death?
And hath not he, that built the walls of Thebes

With ravishing sound of his melodious harp,

Made music with my Mephistophilis?

Why should I die, then, or basely despair!
I am resolv'd; Faustus shall ne'er repent.—

Come, Mephistophilis, let us dispute again,
And argue of divine astrology.

Tell me, are there many heavens above the moon?

Are all celestial bodies but one globe,
As is the substance of this centric earth?

MEPHISTOPHILIS. As are the elements, such are the spheres,

Mutually folded in each other's orb,

And, Faustus,

All jointly move upon one axletree,
Whose terminus is term'd the world's wide pole;

Nor are the names of Saturn, Mars, or Jupiter

Feign'd, but are erring stars.

FAUSTUS. But, tell me, have they all one motion, both situ et tempore?

MEPHISTOPHILIS. All jointly move from east to west in twenty-four hours upon the poles of the world; but differ in their motion upon the poles of the zodiac.

FAUSTUS. Tush,

These slender trifles Wagner can decide:
Hath Mephistophilis no greater skill?

Who knows not the double motion of the planets?

The first is finish'd in a natural day;

The second thus; as Saturn in thirty years; Jupiter in twelve; Mars in four; the Sun, Venus, and Mercury in a year; the Moon in twenty-eight days. Tush, these are freshmen's suppositions. But, tell me, hath every sphere a dominion or intelligentia?

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Ay.

FAUSTUS. How many heavens or spheres are there?

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Nine; the seven planets, the firmament, and the empyreal heaven.

FAUSTUS. Well resolve me in this question; why have we not conjunctions, oppositions, aspects, eclipses, all at one time, but in some years we have more, in some less?

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Per inæqualem motum respectu totius.

FAUSTUS. Well, I am answered. Tell me who made the world?

MEPHISTOPHILIS. I will not.

FAUSTUS. Sweet Mephistophilis, tell me.

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Move me not, for I will not tell thee.

FAUSTUS. Villain, have I not bound thee to tell me anything?

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Ay, that is not against our kingdom; but this is.

Think thou on hell, Faustus, for thou art damned.

FAUSTUS. Think, Faustus, upon God that made the world.

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Remember this.

[Exit.]

FAUSTUS. Ay, go, accursed spirit, to ugly hell!

'Tis thou hast damn'd distressed Faustus's soul.

Is't not too late?

[Reënter GOOD ANGEL and EVIL ANGEL.]

EVIL ANGEL. Too late.

GOOD ANGEL. Never too late, if Faustus can repent.

EVIL ANGEL. If thou repent, devils shall tear thee in pieces.

GOOD ANGEL. Repent, and they shall never raze thy skin.

[Exeunt ANGELS.]

FAUSTUS. Ah, Christ, my Saviour, Seek to save distressed Faustus' soul!

[Enter LUCIFER, BELZEBUB, and MEPHISTOPHILIS.]

LUCIFER. Christ cannot save thy soul, for he is just:

There's none but I have interest in the same.

FAUSTUS. O, who art thou that look'st so terrible?

LUCIFER. I am Lucifer.

And this is my companion-prince in hell.

FAUSTUS. O, Faustus, they are come to fetch away thy soul!

LUCIFER. We come to tell thee thou dost injure us;

Thou talk'st of Christ, contrary to thy promise:

Thou shouldst not think of God: think of the devil,

And of his dam too.

FAUSTUS. Nor will I henceforth: pardon me in this,

And Faustus vows never to look to heaven,

Never to name God, or to pray to Him,

To burn his Scriptures, slay his ministers, And make my spirits pull his churches down.

LUCIFER. Do so, and we will highly gratify thee.

Faustus, we are come from hell to show thee some pastime: sit down, and thou shalt see all the Seven Deadly Sins appear in their proper shapes.

FAUSTUS. That sight will be as pleasing unto me,

As Paradise was to Adam, the first day Of his creation.

LUCIFER. Talk not of Paradise nor creation; but mark this show: talk of the devil, and nothing else.—Come away!

[Enter the SEVEN DEADLY SINS.]

Now, Faustus, examine them of their several names and dispositions.

FAUSTUS. What art thou, the first?

PRIDE. I am Pride. I disdain to have any parents. But, fie, what a scent is here! I'll not speak another word, except the ground were perfumed, and covered with cloth of arras.

FAUSTUS. What art thou, the second?

COVETOUSNESS. I am Covetousness, begotten of an old churl, in an old leathern bag; and, might I have my wish, I would desire that this house and all the people in it were turned to gold, that I might lock you up in my good chest: O, my sweet gold!

FAUSTUS. What art thou, the third?

WRATH. I am Wrath. I had neither father nor mother: I leapt out of a lion's mouth when I was scarce half an hour old; and ever since I have run up and down the world with this case of rapiers, wounding myself when I had nobody to fight withal. I was born in hell; and look to it, for some of you shall be my father.

FAUSTUS. What art thou, the fourth?

ENVY. I am Envy, begotten of a chimney-sweeper and an oyster-wife. I cannot read, and therefore wish all books were burnt. I am lean with seeing others eat. O, that there would come a famine through all the world, that all might die, and I live alone! then thou shouldst see how fat I would be. But must thou sit, and I stand? come down, with a vengeance!

FAUSTUS. Away, envious rascal!—What art thou, the fifth?

GLUTTONY. Who, I, sir? I am Gluttony. My parents are all dead, and the devil a penny they have left me, but a bare pension, and that is thirty meals a day, and ten bevers,—a small trifle to suffice nature. O, I come of a royal parentage! my grandfather was a Gammon of Bacon, my grandmother a Hogshead of Claret-wine; my godfathers were these, Peter Pickle-herring and Martin Martlemas-beef; O, but my godmother, she was a jolly gentlewoman, and well-beloved in every good town and city; her name was Mistress Margery March-beer. Now, Faustus, thou hast heard all my progeny; wilt thou bid me to supper?

FAUSTUS. No, I'll see thee hanged: thou wilt eat up all my victuals.

GLUTTONY. Then the devil choke thee!

FAUSTUS. Choke thyself, glutton!—What art thou, the sixth?

SLOTH. I am Sloth. I was begotten on a sunny bank, where I have lain ever since; and you have done me great injury to bring me from thence: let me be carried thither again by Gluttony and Lechery. I'll not speak another word for a king's ransom.

FAUSTUS. What are you, Mistress Minx, the seventh and last?

LECHERY. Who, I, sir? I am one that loves an inch of raw mutton better than an ell of fried stock-fish; and the first letter of my name begins with L.

FAUSTUS. Away, to hell, to hell!

[Exeunt the SINS.]

LUCIFER. Now, Faustus, how dost thou like this?

FAUSTUS. O, this feeds my soul!

LUCIFER. Tut, Faustus, in hell is all manner of delight.

FAUSTUS. O, might I see hell, and return again,

How happy were I then!

LUCIFER. Thou shalt; I will send for thee at midnight.

In meantime take this book; peruse it thoroughly,

And thou shalt turn thyself into what shape thou wilt.

FAUSTUS. Great thanks, mighty Lucifer!

This will I keep as chary as my life.

LUCIFER. Farewell, Faustus, and think on the devil.

FAUSTUS. Farewell, great Lucifer.

[Exeunt LUCIFER and BELZEBUB.]

Come, Mephistophilis. [Exeunt.]

[Enter CHORUS.]

CHORUS. Learned Faustus,
To know the secrets of astronomy
Graven in the book of Jove's high firmament,
Did mount himself to scale Olympus' top,
Being seated in a chariot burning bright,
Drawn by the strength of yoky dragons' necks

He now is gone to prove cosmography,
And, as I guess, will first arrive in Rome,

To see the Pope and manner of his court,
And take some part of holy Peter's feast,
That to this day is highly solemnis'd.

[Exit.]

SCENE VII—The POPE's privy-chamber.

[Enter FAUSTUS and MEPHISTOPHILIS.]

FAUSTUS. Having now, my good Mephistophilis,
Pass'd with delight the stately town of Trier,
Environ'd round with airy mountain-tops,
With walls of flint, and deep-entrenched lakes,
Not to be won by any conquering prince;
From Paris next, coasting the realm of France,
We saw the river Maine fall into Rhine,
Whose banks are set with groves of fruitful vines;
Then up to Naples, rich Campania,
Whose buildings fair and gorgeous to the eye,
The streets straight forth, and pav'd with finest brick,
Quarter the town in four equivalents:
There saw we learned Maro's golden tomb,
The way he cut, an English mile in length,
Through a rock of stone, in one night's space;
From thence to Venice, Padua, and the rest,
In one of which a sumptuous temple stands,
That threatens the stars with her aspiring top.
Thus hitherto hath Faustus spent his time:
But tell me now what resting-place is this?
Hast thou, as erst I did command,
Conducted me within the walls of Rome?
MEPHISTOPHILIS. Faustus, I have; and, because we will not be unprovided, I have taken up his Holiness' privy-chamber for our use.
FAUSTUS. I hope his Holiness will bid us welcome.

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Tut, 'tis no matter, man; we'll be bold with his good cheer.
And now, my Faustus, that thou mayst perceive

What Rome containeth to delight thee with,
Know that this city stands upon seven hills

That underprop the groundwork of the same:

Just through the midst runs flowing Tiber's stream

With winding banks that cut it in two parts;

Over the which four stately bridges lean,
That make safe passage to each part of Rome:

Upon the bridge call'd Ponte Angelo
Erected is a castle passing strong,
Within whose walls such store of ordnance are,

And double cannons fram'd of carved brass,

As match the days within one complete year;

Besides the gates, and high pyramids,
Which Julius Caesar brought from Africa.

FAUSTUS. Now, by the kingdoms of infernal rule,

Of Styx, of Acheron, and the fiery lake

Of ever-burning Phlegethon, I swear

That I do long to see the monuments

And situation of bright-splendent Rome:

Come, therefore, let's away.

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Nay, Faustus, stay: I know you'd fain see the Pope

And take some part of holy Peter's feast,

Where thou shalt see a troop of bald-pate friars,

Whose summum bonum is in belly-cheer.

FAUSTUS. Well, I'm content to compass then some sport,

And by their folly make us merriment.

Then charm me, that I

May be invisible, to do what I please,

Unseen of any whilst I stay in Rome.

[MEPHISTOPHILIS charms him.]

MEPHISTOPHILIS. So, Faustus; now
Do what thou wilt, thou shalt not be discern'd.

[Sound a Sonnet. Enter the POPE and the CARDINAL OF LORRAIN to the banquet, with FRIARS attending.]

POPE. My lord of Lorraine, will't please you draw near?

FAUSTUS. Fall to, and the devil choke you, an you spare!

POPE. How now! who's that which spake?—Friars, look about.

1ST FRIAR. Here's nobody, if it like your Holiness.

POPE. My lord, here is a dainty dish was sent me from the Bishop of Milan.

FAUSTUS. I thank you, sir.

[Snatches the dish.]

POPE. How now! who's that which snatched the meat from me? will no man look?—My lord, this dish was sent me from the Cardinal of Florence.

FAUSTUS. You say true: I'll ha't.

[Snatches the dish.]

POPE. What, again!—My lord, I'll drink to your grace.

FAUSTUS. I'll pledge your grace.

[Snatches the cup.]

CARDINAL OF LORRAIN. My lord, it may be some ghost, newly crept out of Purgatory, come to beg a pardon of your Holiness.

POPE. It may be so.—Friars, prepare a dirge to lay the fury of this ghost.—Once again, my lord, fall to.

[The POPE crosses himself.]

FAUSTUS. What, are you crossing of yourself?

Well, use that trick no more, I would advise you.

[The POPE crosses himself again.]

Well, there's the second time. Aware the third;

I give you fair warning.

[The POPE crosses himself again, and FAUSTUS hits him a box on the ear, and they all run away.]

Come on, Mephistophilis; what shall we do?

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Nay, I know not: we shall be cursed with bell, book, and candle.

FAUSTUS. How! bell, book, and candle,—candle, book, and bell,—

Forward and backward, to curse Faustus to hell!

Anon you shall hear a hog grunt, a calf bleat, and an ass bray,
Because it is Saint Peter's holiday.

[Reënter all the FRIARS to sing the Dirge.]
1ST FRIAR. Come, brethren, let's about our business with good devotion.

[They sing.]

Cursed be he that stole away his Holiness' meat from the table! maledicat Dominus!

Cursed be he that struck his Holiness a blow on the face! maledicat Dominus!

Cursed be he that took Friar Sandelo a blow on the pate! maledicat Dominus!

Cursed be he that disturbeth our holy dirge! maledicat Dominus!

Cursed be he that took away his Holiness' wine! maledicat Dominus!

Et omnes Sancti! Amen!

[MEPHISTOPHILIS and FAUSTUS beat the FRIARS, and fling fireworks among them; and so exeunt.]

[Enter CHORUS.]

CHORUS. When Faustus had with pleasure ta'en the view

Of rarest things, and royal courts of kings,

He stay'd his course, and so returned home;

Where such as bear his absence but with grief,

I mean his friends and near'st companions,
Did gratulate his safety with kind words,

And in their conference of what befell,
Touching his journey through the world and air,

They put forth questions of astrology,
Which Faustus answer'd with such learned skill

As they admir'd and wonder'd at his wit.

Now is his fame spread forth in every land:

Amongst the rest the Emperor is one,

Carolus the Fifth, at whose palace now
Faustus is feasted 'mongst his noblemen.
What there he did, in trial of his art,
I leave untold; your eyes shall see ['t]
perform'd. [Exit.]

SCENE VIII—An Inn-Yard.

[Enter ROBIN the Ostler, with a book in his hand.]

ROBIN. O, this is admirable! here I ha' stolen one of Doctor Faustus' conjuring books, and i'faith, I mean to search some circles for my own use. Now will I make all the maidens in our parish dance at my pleasure.

[Enter RALPH, calling ROBIN.]

RALPH. Robin, prithee, come away; there's a gentleman tarries to have his horse, and he would have his things rubbed and made clean: he keeps such a chafing with my mistress about it; and she has set me to look thee out; prithee, come away.

ROBIN. Keep out, keep out, or else you are blown up, you are dismembered.
Ralph: keep out, for I am about a roaring piece of work.

RALPH. Come, what doest thou with that same book? thou canst not read?

ROBIN. Yes, my master and mistress shall find that I can read, or else my art fails.

RALPH. Why, Robin, what book is that?

ROBIN. What book! why, the most intolerable book for conjuring that e'er was invented by any brimstone devil.

RALPH. Canst thou conjure with it?

ROBIN. I can do all these things easily with it; first, I can make thee drunk with ippocras at any tavern in Europe for nothing; that's one of my conjuring
works.

RALPH. Our Master Parson says that's
nothing.

ROBIN. No more, sweet Ralph: let's go and make clean our boots, which lie foul upon our hands, and then to our conjuring in the devil's name. [Exit.]

SCENE IX

[Enter ROBIN and RALPH with a silver goblet.]

ROBIN. Come, Ralph: did not I tell thee, we were for ever made by this Doctor Faustus' book? ecce, signum! here's a simple purchase for horse-keepers: our horses shall eat no hay as long as this lasts.

RALPH. But, Robin, here comes the Vintner.

ROBIN. Hush! I'll gull him super-naturally.

[Enter VINTNER.]

Drawer, I hope all is paid; God be with you!—Come, Ralph.

VINTNER. Soft, sir; a word with you.
I must yet have a goblet paid from you,
ere you go.

ROBIN. I a goblet, Ralph, I a goblet!—
I scorn you; and you are but a—, etc. I a goblet! search me.

VINTNER. I mean so, sir, with your favour. [Searches ROBIN.]

ROBIN. How say you now?

VINTNER. I must say somewhat to your fellow. You, sir!

ROBIN. Me, sir! me, sir! search your fill. [VINTNER searches him.] Now, sir, you may be ashamed to burden honest men with a matter of truth.

VINTNER. Well, one of you hath this goblet about you.

ROBIN. You lie, drawer, 'tis afore me.
[Aside.]—Sirrah you, I'll teach you to impeach honest men;—stand by;—I'll scour you for a goblet;—stand aside you had best, I charge you in the name of Belzebub. [Aside to RALPH.]—Look to the goblet, Ralph.

VINTNER. What mean you, sirrah?

ROBIN. I'll tell you what I mean.
[Reads from a book.] Sanctobulorum Periphrasticon—nay, I'll tickle you, Vintner. [Aside to RALPH.]—Look to the goblet, Ralph.—[Reads.] *Polypragmos
Belseborams framanto pacostiphos tostu, Mephistophilis, etc.*

[Enter MEPHISTOPHILIS, sets squibs at their backs, and then exit. They run about.]

VINTNER. O, nomine Domini! what meanest thou, Robin! thou hast no goblet.

RALPH. Peccatum peccatorum! Here's thy goblet, good Vintner.

[Gives the goblet to VINTNER, who exit.]

ROBIN. Miser cordia pro nobis! what shall I do? Good devil, forgive me now, and I'll never rob thy library more.

[Reënter MEPHISTOPHILIS.]

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Monarch of hell, under whose black survey

Great potentates do kneel with awful fear,
Upon whose altars thousand souls do lie,
How am I vexed with these villains' charms?

From Constantinople am I hither come,
Only for pleasure of these damned slaves.

ROBIN. How, from Constantinople! you have had a great journey: will you take sixpence in your purse to pay for your supper, and be gone?

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Well, villains, for your presumption, I transform thee into an ape, and thee into a dog; and so be gone! [Exit.]

ROBIN. How, into an ape! that's brave: I'll have fine sport with the boys; I'll get nuts and apples enow.

RALPH. And I must be a dog.

ROBIN. I'faith, thy head will never be out of the pottage-pot. [Exeunt.]

SCENE X—An apartment in the EMPEROR'S palace.

[Enter EMPEROR, FAUSTUS, and a KNIGHT, with ATTENDANTS.]

EMPEROR. Master Doctor Faustus, I have heard strange report of thy knowledge in the black art, how that none in my empire nor in the whole world can compare with thee for the rare effects of magic: they say thou hast a familiar spirit, by whom thou canst accomplish what thou list. This, therefore, is my request, that thou let me see some proof of thy skill, that mine eyes may be witnesses to confirm what mine ears have heard reported: and here I swear to thee, by the honour of mine imperial crown, that, whatever thou doest, thou shalt be no ways prejudiced or endamaged.

KNIGHT [aside]. I'faith, he looks much like a conjurer.

FAUSTUS. My gracious sovereign, though I must confess myself far inferior to the report men have published, and nothing answerable to the honour of your imperial majesty, yet, for that love and duty binds me thereunto, I am content to do whatsoever your majesty shall command me.

EMPEROR. Then, Doctor Faustus, mark what I shall say.

As I was sometime solitary set
Within my closet, sundry thoughts arose
About the honour of mine ancestors,
How they had won by prowess such exploits,
Got such riches, subdu'd so many kingdoms,

As we that do succeed, or they that shall Hereafter possess our throne, shall (I fear me) ne'er attain to that degree
Of high renown and great authority:
Amongst which kings is Alexander the Great,

Chief spectacle of the world's pre-eminence,

The bright shining of whose glorious acts
Lightens the world with his reflecting beams,

As when I hear but motion made of him,
It grieves my soul I never saw the man:
If, therefore, thou, by cunning of thine art,

Canst raise this man from hollow vaults below,

Where lies entomb'd this famous conqueror,

And bring with him his beauteous paramour,

Both in their right shapes, gesture, and attire

They us'd to wear during their time of life,

Thou shalt both satisfy my just desire,
And give me cause to praise thee whilst I live.

FAUSTUS. My gracious lord, I am ready to accomplish your request, so far forth as by art and power of my spirit I am able to perform.

KNIGHT [aside]. I'faith, that's just nothing at all.

FAUSTUS. But, if it like your grace, it is not in my ability to present before your eyes the true substantial bodies of those two deceased princes, which long since are consumed to dust.

KNIGHT [aside]. Ay, marry, Master Doctor, now there's a sign of grace in you, when you will confess the truth.

FAUSTUS. But such spirits as can lively resemble Alexander and his paramour shall appear before your grace, in that manner that they both lived in, in their most flourishing estate; which I doubt not shall sufficiently content your imperial majesty.

EMPEROR. Go to, Master Doctor; let me see them presently.

KNIGHT. Do you hear, Master Doctor? you bring Alexander and his paramour before the Emperor!

FAUSTUS. How then, sir?

KNIGHT. I'faith, that's as true as Diana turned me to a stag.

FAUSTUS. Mephistophilis, be gone.

[Exit MEPHISTOPHILIS.]

KNIGHT. Nay, an you go to conjuring, I'll be gone. [Exit.]

FAUSTUS. I'll meet with you anon for interrupting me so.—Here they are, my gracious lord.

[Reënter MEPHISTOPHILIS with SPIRITS in the shapes of ALEXANDER and his PARAMOUR.]

EMPEROR. Master Doctor, I heard this lady, while she lived, had a wart or mole in her neck: how shall I know whether it be so or no?

FAUSTUS. Your highness may boldly go and see.

EMPEROR. Sure, these are no spirits, but the true substantial bodies of those two deceased princes. [Exit SPIRITS.]

FAUSTUS. Will please your highness now to send for the knight that was so pleasant with me here of late?

EMPEROR. One of you call him forth.

[Exit ATTENDANT.]

[Reënter the KNIGHT with a pair of horns on his head.]

How now, sir knight! Feel on thy head.

KNIGHT. Thou damned wretch and execrable dog,

Bred in the concave of some monstrous rock,

How dar'st thou thus abuse a gentleman? Villain, I say, undo what thou hast done!

FAUSTUS. O, not so fast, sir! there's no haste: but, good, are you remembered how you crossed me in my conference with the Emperor? I think I have met with you for it.

EMPEROR. Good Master Doctor, at my entreaty release him: he hath done penance sufficient.

FAUSTUS. My gracious lord, not so much for the injury he offereth me here in your presence, as to delight you with some mirth, hath Faustus worthily requited this injurious knight; which being all I desire, I am content to release him of his horns:—and, sir knight, hereafter speak well of scholars.—Mephistophilis, transform him straight. [MEPHISTOPHILIS removes the horns.—Now, my good lord, having done my duty, I humbly take my leave.

EMPEROR. Farewell, Master Doctor: yet, ere you go,

Expect from me a bounteous reward.

[Exit EMPEROR, KNIGHT, and ATTENDANTS.]

SCENE XI—A fair and pleasant green.

FAUSTUS. Now, Mephistophilis, the restless course

That time doth run with calm and silent foot,

Shortening my days and thread of vital life,

Calls for the payment of my latest years:
Therefore, sweet Mephistophilis, let us
Make haste to Wertenberg.

MEPHISTOPHILIS. What, will you go on horseback or on foot?

FAUSTUS. Nay, till I'm past this fair and pleasant green, I'll walk on foot.

SCENE XII—In or near the home of FAUSTUS.

[Enter a HORSE-COURSER.]

HORSE-COURSER. I have been all this day seeking one Master Fustian: mass, see where he is!—God save you, Master Doctor!

FAUSTUS. What, Horse-Courser! you are well met.

HORSE-COURSER. Do you hear, sir? I have brought you forty dollars for your horse.

FAUSTUS. I cannot sell him so: if thou likest him for fifty, take him.

HORSE-COURSER. Alas, sir, I have no more!—I pray you, speak for me.

MEPHISTOPHILIS. I pray you, let him have him: he is an honest fellow, and he has a great charge, neither wife nor child.

FAUSTUS. Well, come, give me your money [HORSE-COURSER gives FAUSTUS the money.]: my boy will deliver him to you.
But I must tell you one thing before you have him; ride him not into the water, at any hand.

HORSE-COURSER. Why, sir, will he not drink of all waters?

FAUSTUS. O, yes, he will drink of all waters; but ride him not into the water; ride him over hedge or ditch, or where thou wilt, but not into the water.

HORSE-COURSER. Well, sir.—Now am I made man for ever: I'll not leave my horse for forty: if he had but the quality of hey-ding-ding, hey-ding-ding, I'd make a brave living on him: he has a buttock as slick as an eel. [Aside.—Well, God b'wi'ye, sir: your boy will deliver him me:
but, hark you, sir; if my horse be sick or ill at ease, you'll tell me what it is?

FAUSTUS. Away, you villain! what, dost think I am a horse-doctor?

[Exit HORSE-COURSER.]

What art thou, Faustus, but a man condemn'd to die?

Thy fatal time doth draw to final end;
Despair doth drive distrust into my
thoughts:

Confound these passions with a quiet
sleep:

Tush, Christ did call the thief upon the Cross;

Then rest thee, Faustus, quiet in conceit.
[Sleeps in his chair.]

[Reënter HORSE-COURSER, all wet, crying.]

HORSE-COURSER. Alas, alas! Doctor Fustian, quotha? mass, Doctor Lopus was never such a doctor: has given me a purgation, has purged me of forty dollars; I shall never see them more. But yet, like an ass as I was, I would not be ruled by him, for he bade me I should ride him into no water: now I, thinking my horse had had some rare quality that he would not have had me know of, I, like a venturous youth, rid him into the deep pond at the town's end. I was no sooner in the middle of the pond, but my horse vanished away, and I sat upon a bottle of hay, never so near drowning in my life. But I'll seek out my doctor, and have my forty dollars again, or I'll make it the dearest horse!—O, yonder is his snipper-snapper.
Do you hear? you, hey-pass, where's your master?

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Why, sir, what would you? you cannot speak with him.

HORSE-COURSER. But I will speak with
him.

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Why, he's fast asleep:
come some other time.

HORSE-COURSER. I'll speak with him now, or I'll break his glass-windows about his ears.

MEPHISTOPHILIS. I tell thee, he has not slept this eight nights.

HORSE-COURSER. An he have not slept this eight weeks, I'll speak with him.

MEPHISTOPHILIS. See, where he is, fast asleep.

HORSE-COURSEER. Ay, this is he.—God save you, Master Doctor, Master Doctor, Master Doctor, Master Doctor! forty dollars, forty dollars for a bottle of hay!

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Why, thou seest he hears thee not.

HORSE-COURSEER. So-ho, ho! So-ho, ho! [In his ear.] No, will you not wake? I'll make you wake ere I go. [Pulls FAUSTUS by the leg, and pulls it away.] Alas, I am undone! what shall I do?

FAUSTUS. O, my leg, my leg!—Help, Mephistophilis! call the officers.—My leg, my leg!

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Come, villain, to the constable.

HORSE-COURSEER. O Lord, sir, let me go, and I'll give you forty dollars more!

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Where be they?

HORSE-COURSEER. I have none about me: come to my ostry, and I'll give them you.

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Be gone quickly.

[HORSE-COURSEER runs away.]

FAUSTUS. What, is he gone? farewell he! Faustus has his leg again, and the Horse-Courser, I take it, a bottle of hay for his labour: well, this trick shall cost him forty dollars more.

[Enter WAGNER.]

How now, Wagner! what's the news with thee?

WAGNER. Sir, the Duke of Vanholt doth earnestly entreat your company.

FAUSTUS. The Duke of Vanholt! an honourable gentleman, to whom I must be no niggard of my cunning.—Come, Mephistophilis, let's away to him. [Exeunt.]

SCENE XIII—The court of the DUKE OF VANHOLT.

[Enter the DUKE OF VANHOLT, the DUCHESS, and FAUSTUS.]

DUKE. Believe me, Master Doctor, this merriment hath much pleased me.

FAUSTUS. My gracious lord, I am glad it contents you so well.—But it may be, madam, you take no delight in this. I have heard that women do long for some dainties or other: what is it, madam? tell me, and you shall have it.

DUCHESS. Thanks, good Master Doctor: and, for I see your courteous intent to pleasure me, I will not hide from you the thing my heart desires; and, were it now summer, as it is January and the dead time of the winter, I would desire no better meat than a dish of ripe grapes.

FAUSTUS. Alas, madam, that's nothing!—Mephistophilis, be gone. [Exit MEPHISTOPHILIS.] Were it a greater thing than this, so it would content you, you should have it.

[Reënter MEPHISTOPHILIS with grapes.]

Here they be, madam: wilt please you taste on them?

DUKE. Believe me, Master Doctor, this makes me wonder above the rest, that being in the dead time of winter and in the month of January, how you should come by these grapes.

FAUSTUS. If it like your grace, the year is divided into two circles over the whole world, that, when it is here winter with us, in the contrary circle it is summer with them, as in India, Saba, and farther countries in the east; and by means of a swift spirit that I have, I had them brought hither, as you see.—How do you like them, madam? be they good?

DUCHESS. Believe me, Master Doctor, they be the best grapes that e'er I tasted in my life before.

FAUSTUS. I am glad they content you so, madam.

DUKE. Come, madam, let us in, where you must well reward this learned man for the great kindness he hath showed to you.

DUCHESS. And so I will, my lord; and, whilst I live, rest beholding for this courtesy.

FAUSTUS. I humbly thank your grace.

DUKE. Come, Master Doctor, follow us, and receive your reward. [Exeunt.]

SCENE XIV—A room in the house of FAUSTUS.

[Enter WAGNER.]

WAGNER. I think my master means to die shortly,
For he hath given to me all his goods:
And yet, methinks, if that death were near,
He would not banquet, and carouse, and swill
Amongst the students, as even now he doth,
Who are at supper with such belly-cheer
As Wagner ne'er beheld in all his life.
See, where they come! belike the feast is ended. [Exit.]

[Enter FAUSTUS with two or three SCHOLARS, and MEPHISTOPHILIS.]

1ST SCHOLAR. Master Doctor Faustus, since our conference about fair ladies, which was the beautifullest in all the world, we have determined with ourselves that Helen of Greece was the admirablest lady that ever lived: therefore, Master Doctor, if you will do us that favour, as to let us see that peerless dame of Greece, whom all the world admires for majesty, we should think ourselves much beholding unto you.

FAUSTUS. Gentlemen,
For that I know your friendship is unfeign'd,
And Faustus' custom is not to deny
The just requests of those that wish him well,
You shall behold that peerless dame of Greece,
No otherways for pomp and majesty
Than when Sir Paris cross'd the seas with her,
And brought the spoils to rich Dardania.
Be silent, then, for danger is in words.

[Music sounds, and HELEN passeth over the stage.]

2ND SCHOLAR. Too simple is my wit to tell her praise,
Whom all the world admires for majesty.

3RD SCHOLAR. No marvel though the angry Greeks pursu'd
With ten years' war the rape of such a queen,
Whose heavenly beauty passeth all compare.

1ST SCHOLAR. Since we have seen the pride of Nature's works,
And only paragon of excellence,
Let us depart; and for this glorious deed
Happy and blest be Faustus evermore!

FAUSTUS. Gentlemen, farewell: the same I wish to you.

[Exeunt SCHOLARS.]

[Enter an OLD MAN.]

OLD MAN. Ah, Doctor Faustus, that I might prevail

To guide thy steps unto the way of life,
By which sweet path thou mayst attain the goal

That shall conduct thee to celestial rest!
Break heart, drop blood, and mingle it with tears,

Tears falling from repentant heaviness
Of thy most vile and loathsome filthiness,
The stench whereof corrupts the inward soul

With such flagitious crimes of heinous sin
As no commiseration may expel,
But mercy, Faustus, of thy Saviour sweet,
Whose blood alone must wash away thy guilt.

FAUSTUS. Where art thou, Faustus? wretch, what hast thou done?
Damn'd art thou, Faustus, damn'd; despair and die!

Hell calls for right, and with a roaring voice

Says, "Faustus, come; thine hour is almost come;"

And Faustus now will come to do thee right.

[MEPHISTOPHILIS gives him a dagger.]

OLD MAN. Ah, stay, good Faustus, stay thy desperate steps!

I see an angel hovers o'er thy head,
And, with a vial full of precious grace,
Offers to pour the same into thy soul:
Then call for mercy, and avoid despair.

FAUSTUS. Ah, my sweet friend, I feel

Thy words to comfort my distressed soul!
Leave me a while to ponder on my sins.

OLD MAN. I go, sweet Faustus; but with heavy cheer,
Fearing the ruin of thy hopeless soul.

[Exit.]

FAUSTUS. Accursed Faustus, where is mercy now?
I do repent; and yet I do despair:
Hell strives with grace for conquest in my breast:

What shall I do to shun the snares of
death?

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Thou traitor, Faustus, I arrest thy soul
For disobedience to my sovereign lord:
Revolt, or I'll in piece-meal tear thy flesh.

FAUSTUS. Sweet Mephistophilis, entreat thy lord

To pardon my unjust presumption,
And with my blood again I will confirm
My former vow I made to Lucifer.

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Do it, then, quickly, with unfeigned heart,
Lest greater danger do attend thy drift.

FAUSTUS. Torment, sweet friend, that base and crooked age,
That durst dissuade me from thy Lucifer,
With greatest torments that our hell affords.

MEPHISTOPHILIS. His faith is great; I cannot touch his soul;
But what I may afflict his body with
I will attempt, which is but little worth.

FAUSTUS. One thing, good servant, let me crave of thee,

To glut the longing of my heart's desire,
That I might have unto my paramour
That heavenly Helen which I saw of late,
Whose sweet embracings may extinguish clean

Those thoughts that do dissuade me from my vow,
And keep mine oath I made to Lucifer.

MEPHISTOPHILIS. Faustus, this, or what else thou shalt desire.
Shall be perform'd in twinkling of an eye.

[Reënter HELEN.]

FAUSTUS. Was this the face that launch'd a thousand ships,

And burnt the topless towers of Ilium?—
Sweet Helen, make me immortal with a kiss.— [Kisses her.]

Her lips suck forth my soul: see, where it flies!—

Come, Helen, come, give me my soul again.
Here will I dwell, for heaven is in these
lips,

And all is dross that is not Helena.
I will be Paris, and for love of thee, Instead of Troy, shall Wertenberg be sack'd;

And I will combat with weak Menelaus,
And wear thy colours on my plumed
crest;

Yes, I will wound Achilles in the heel,
And then return to Helen for a kiss.
O, thou art fairer than the evening air
Clad in the beauty of a thousand stars;
Brighter art thou than flaming Jupiter
When he appear'd to hapless Semele;
More lovely than the monarch of the sky
In wanton Arethusa's azur'd arms;
And none but thou shalt be my paramour!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE XV—*A room in the OLD MAN'S
house.*

[Enter the OLD MAN.]

OLD MAN. Accursed Faustus, miserable
man,

That from thy soul exclud'st the grace of
heaven,

And fly'st the throne of his tribunal-seat!

[Enter DEVILS.]

Satan begins to sift me with his pride:
As in this furnace God shall try my faith,

My faith, vile hell, shall triumph over
thee,

Ambitious fiends, see how the heavens smile

At your repulse, and laugh your state to scorn!

Hence, hell! for hence I fly unto my God.

[Exeunt—on one side, DEVILS, on the other, OLD MAN.]

SCENE XVI—A room in the house of FAUSTUS.[Enter FAUSTUS, with SCHOLARS.]

FAUSTUS. Ah, gentlemen!

1ST SCHOLAR. What ails Faustus?

FAUSTUS. Ah, my sweet chamber-fellow, had I lived with thee, then had I lived still! but now I die eternally. Look, comes he not? comes he not?

2ND SCHOLAR. What means Faustus?

3RD SCHOLAR. Belike he is grown into some sickness by being over-solitary.

1ST SCHOLAR. If it be so, we'll have physicians to cure him.—'Tis but a surfeit; never fear, man.

FAUSTUS. A surfeit of deadly sin, that hath damned both body and soul.

2ND SCHOLAR. Yet, Faustus, look up to heaven; remember God's mercies are infinite.

FAUSTUS. But Faustus' offence can ne'er be pardoned: the serpent that tempted Eve may be saved, but not Faustus. Ah, gentlemen, hear me with patience, and tremble not at my speeches! Though my heart pants and quivers to remember that I have been a student here these thirty years, O, would I had never seen Wertenberg, never read book! and what wonders I have done, all Germany can witness, yea, all the world; for which Faustus hath lost both Germany and the world, yea, heaven itself, heaven, the seat of God, the throne of the blessed, the kingdom of joy; and must remain in hell for ever, hell, ah, hell, for ever! Sweet friends, what shall become of Faustus, being in hell for ever?

3RD SCHOLAR. Yet, Faustus, call on God.

FAUSTUS. On God, whom Faustus hath abjured! on God, whom Faustus hath blasphemed! Ah, my God, I would weep! but the devil draws in my tears. Gush forth blood, instead of tears! yea, life and soul! O, he stays my tongue! I would lift up my hands; but see, they hold them, they hold them!

ALL. Who, Faustus?

FAUSTUS. Lucifer and Mephistophilis.

Ah, gentlemen, I gave them my soul for my cunning!

ALL. God forbid!

FAUSTUS. God forbade it, indeed; but Faustus hath done it: for vain pleasure of twenty-four years hath Faustus lost eternal joy and felicity. I writ them a bill with mine own blood: the date is expired; the time will come, and he will fetch me.

1ST SCHOLAR. Why did not Faustus tell us of this before, that divines might have prayed for thee?

FAUSTUS. Oft have I thought to have done so; but the devil threatened to tear me in pieces, if I named God, to fetch both body and soul, if I once gave ear to divinity: and now 'tis too late. Gentlemen, away, lest you perish with me.

2ND SCHOLAR. O, what shall we do to save Faustus?

FAUSTUS. Talk not of me, but save yourselves, and depart.

3RD SCHOLAR. God will strengthen me; I will stay with Faustus.

1ST SCHOLAR. Tempt not God, sweet friend; but let us into the next room, and there pray for him.

FAUSTUS. Ay, pray for me, pray for me; and what noise soever ye hear, come not unto me, for nothing can rescue me.

2ND SCHOLAR. Pray thou, and we will pray that God may have mercy upon thee.

FAUSTUS. Gentlemen, farewell: if I live till morning, I'll visit you; if not, Faustus is gone to hell.

ALL. Faustus, farewell.

[Exit SCHOLARS.—The clock strikes eleven.]

FAUSTUS. Ah, Faustus.

Now hast thou but one bare hour to live, And then thou must be damn'd perpetually!

Stand still, you ever-moving spheres of heaven,

That time may cease, and midnight never come;

Fair Nature's eye, rise, rise again, and make

Perpetual day; or let this hour be but
A year, a month, a week, a natural day,

That Faustus may repent and save his soul!

O lente, lente currite, noctis equi!

The stars move still, time runs, the clock will strike,

The devil will come, and Faustus must be damn'd.

O, I'll leap up to my God!—Who pulls me down?—

See, see, where Christ's blood streams in the firmament!

One drop would save my soul, half a drop: ah, my Christ!—

Ah, rend not my heart for naming of my Christ!

Yet will I call on him: O, spare me, Lucifer!—

Where is it now? 'tis gone: and see, where God

Stretcheth out his arm, and bends his ireful brows!

Mountains and hills, come, come, and fall on me,

And hide me from the heavy wrath of God!

No, no!

Then will I headlong run into the earth: Earth, gape! O, no, it will not harbour me!

You stars that reign'd at my nativity, Whose influence hath allotted death and hell,

Now draw up Faustus, like a foggy mist, Into the entrails of yon labouring clouds, That, when you vomit forth into the air,

My limbs may issue from your smoky mouths,

So that my soul may but ascend to heaven!

[The clock strikes the half-hour.]

Ah, half the hour is past! 'twill all be past anon.

O God,

If thou wilt not have mercy on my soul, Yet for Christ's sake, whose blood hath ransom'd me,

Impose some end to my incessant pain;

Let Faustus live in hell a thousand years,

A hundred thousand, and at last be sav'd! O, no end is limited to damned souls!

Why wert thou not a creature wanting soul?

Or why is this immortal that thou hast? Ah, Pythagoras' metempsychosis, were that true,

This soul should fly from me, and I be chang'd

Unto some brutish beast! all beasts are happy,

For, when they die,

Their souls are soon dissolv'd in elements; But mine must live still to be plagu'd in hell.

Curs'd be the parents that engender'd me! No, Faustus, curse thyself, curse Lucifer That hath depriv'd thee of the joys of heaven.

[The clock strikes twelve.]

O, it strikes, it strikes! Now, body, turn to air,

Or Lucifer will bear thee quick to hell!

[Thunder and lightning.]

O soul, be chang'd into little water-drops, And fall into the ocean, ne'er be found!

[Enter DEVILS.]

My God, my God, look not so fierce on me!

Adders and serpents, let me breathe a while!

Ugly hell, gape not! come not, Lucifer! I'll burn my books!—Ah, Mephistophilis!

[Exeunt DEVILS with FAUSTUS.]

[Enter CHORUS.]

CHORUS. Cut is the branch that might have grown full straight, And burn'd is Apollo's laurel-bough, That sometime grew within this learn'd man.

Faustus is gone: regard his hellish fall, Whose fiendful fortune may exhort the wise,

Only to wonder at unlawful things,

Whose deepness doth entice such forward wits

To practise more than heavenly power permits.

[Exit.]

Terminat hora diem; terminat auctor opus.

PROLOGUE

Though need make many poets, and some such
As art and nature have not better'd much;
Yet ours for want hath not so loved the
stage,
As he dare serve the ill customs of the
age,

Or purchase your delight at such a rate,
As, for it, he himself must justly hate:
To make a child now swaddled, to proceed Man, and then shoot up, in one beard and weed,
Past threescore years; or, with three rusty swords,
And help of some few foot and half-foot
words,

Fight over York and Lancaster's long jars,
And in the tiring-house bring wounds to scars.

He rather prays you will be pleas'd to see
One such to-day, as other plays should be;
Where neither chorus waits you o'er the seas,

Nor creaking throne comes down the boys
to please;

Nor nimble squib is seen to make afraid
The gentlewomen; nor roll'd bullet heard
To say, it thunders; nor tempestuous drum

Rumbles, to tell you when the storm doth
come;

But deeds, and language, such as men do
use,

And persons, such as comedy would choose,
When she would shew an image of the times,

And sport with human follies, not with crimes.

Except we make them such, by loving still Our popular errors, when we know they're ill.

I mean such errors as you'll all confess,
By laughing at them, they deserve no
less:

Which when you heartily do, there's hope left then,

You, that have so grac'd monsters, may like men.

ACT I

SCENE I—A street.

[Enter KNOWELL, at the door of his house.]

KNOWELL. A goodly day toward, and a fresh morning.—Brainworm!

[Enter BRAINWORM.]

Call up your young master: bid him rise,
sir.

Tell him, I have some business to employ
him.

BRAINWORM. I will, sir, presently.

KNOWELL. But hear you, sirrah,
If he be at his book, disturb him not.

BRAINWORM. Very good, sir. [Exit.]

KNOWELL. How happy yet should I esteem myself,

Could I, by any practice, wean the boy
From one vain course of study he affects.
He is a scholar, if a man may trust
The liberal voice of fame in her report,
Of good account in both our Universities, Either of which hath favoured him with graces:

But their indulgence must not spring in
me

A fond opinion that he cannot err.

Myself was once a student, and indeed,
Fed with the self-same humour he is now,
Dreaming on nought but idle poetry,
That fruitless and unprofitable art,
Good unto none, but least to the professors;

Which then I thought the mistress of all knowledge:

But since, time and the truth have waked
my judgment,

And reason taught me better to distinguish

The vain from the useful learnings.

[Enter MASTER STEPHEN.]

Cousin Stephen,

What news with you, that you are here
so early?

STEPHEN. Nothing, but e'en come to see how you do, uncle.

KNOWELL. That's kindly done: you are welcome, coz.

STEPHEN. Ay, I know that, sir; I would not have come else. How does my cousin Edward, uncle?

KNOWELL. O, well, coz; go in and see;
I doubt he be scarce stirring yet.

STEPHEN. Uncle, afore I go in, can you tell me, an he have e'er a book of the science of hawking and hunting; I would fain borrow it.

KNOWELL. Why, I hope you will not a hawking now, will you?

STEPHEN. No, wusse; but I'll practise against next year, uncle. I have bought me a hawk, and a hood, and bells, and all;
I lack nothing but a book to keep it by.

KNOWELL. Oh, most ridiculous!

STEPHEN. Nay, look you now, you are angry, uncle:—Why, you know an a man have not skill in the hawking and hunting languages now-a-days, I'll not give a rush for him: they are more studied than the Greek, or the Latin. He is for no gallant's company without them; and by gadslid I scorn it, I, so I do, to be a consort for every humdrum: hang them, scroyles! there's nothing in them i' the world. What do you talk on it? Because I dwell at Hogsden, I shall keep company with none but the archers of Pinsbury, or the citizens that come a ducking to Islington ponds! A fine jest, i' faith! 'Slid, a gentleman mun shew himself like a gentleman. Uncle, I pray you be not angry; I know what I have to do, I trow, I am no novice.

KNOWELL. You are a prodigal, absurd coxcomb, go to!

Nay, never look at me, 'tis I that speak; Take't as you will, sir, I'll not flatter you.

Have you not yet found means enow to waste

That which your friends have left you, but you must Go cast away your money on a buzzard, And know not how to keep it, when you have done?

O, it is comely! this will make you a gentleman!

Well, cousin, well, I see you are e'en past hope

Of all reclaim:—ay, so; now you are told on't,

You look another way.

STEPHEN. What would you ha' me do?

KNOWELL. What would I have you do? I'll tell you, kinsman;

Learn to be wise, and practise how to thrive;

That would I have you do: and not to spend

Your coin on every bauble that you fancy, Or every foolish brain that humours you. I would not have you to invade each place, Nor thrust yourself on all societies, Till men's affections, or your own desert, Should worthily invite you to your rank. He that is so disrespectful in his courses,

Off sells his reputation at cheap market. Nor would I, you should melt away yourself

In flashing bravery, lest, while you affect To make a blaze of gentry to the world, A little puff of scorn extinguish it; And you be left like an unsavoury snuff, Whose property is only to offend.

I'd have you sober, and contain yourself, Not that your sail be bigger than your boat;

But moderate your expenses now, at first, As you may keep the same proportion still:

Nor stand so much on your gentility, Which is an airy and mere borrow'd thing, From dead men's dust and bones; and none of yours,

Except you make, or hold it.

[Enter a SERVANT.]

Who comes here?

SERVANT. Save you, gentlemen!

STEPHEN. Nay, we do not stand much on our gentility, friend; yet you are welcome: and I assure you mine uncle here is a man of a thousand a year, Middlesex land. He has but one son in all the world, I am his next heir, at the common law, master Stephen, as simple as I stand here, if my cousin die, as there's hope he will: I have a pretty living o' mine own too, beside, hard by here.

SERVANT. In good time, sir.

STEPHEN. In good time, sir! why, and in very good time, sir! You do not flout, friend, do you?

SERVANT. Not I, sir.

STEPHEN. Not you, sir! you were best not, sir; an you should, here be them can perceive it, and that quickly too; go to: and they can give it again soundly too, an need be.

SERVANT. Why, sir, let this satisfy you; good faith, I had no such intent.

STEPHEN. Sir, an I thought you had, I would talk with you, and that presently.

SERVANT. Good master Stephen, so you may, sir, at your pleasure.

STEPHEN. And so I would, sir, good my saucy companion! an you were out o' mine uncle's ground, I can tell you; though I do not stand upon my gentility neither, in't.

KNOWELL. Cousin, cousin, will this ne'er be left?

STEPHEN. Whoreson, base fellow! a mechanical serving-man! By this cudgel, an 'twere not for shame, I would—

KNOWELL. What would you do, you peremptory gull?

If you cannot be quiet, get you hence. You see the honest man demeans himself Modestly tow'rds you, giving no reply To your unseason'd, quarrelling, rude fashion;

And still you huff it, with a kind of carriage

As void of wit, as of humanity.

Go, get you in; 'fore heaven, I am ashamed

Thou hast a kinsman's interest in me.

[Exit MASTER STEPHEN.]

SERVANT. I pray, sir, is this master Knowell's house?

KNOWELL. Yes, marry is it, sir.

SERVANT. I should inquire for a gentleman here, one master Edward Knowell; do you know any such, sir, I pray you?

KNOWELL. I should forget myself else, sir.

SERVANT. Are you the gentleman? cry you mercy, sir: I was required by a gentleman in the city, as I rode out at this end o' the town, to deliver you this letter, sir.

KNOWELL. To me, sir! What do you mean? pray you remember your court'sy. [Reads.] To his most selected friend, master Edward Knowell. What might the gentleman's name be, sir, that sent it? Nay, pray you be covered.

SERVANT. One master Wellbred, sir.

KNOWELL. Master Wellbred! a young gentleman, is he not?

SERVANT. The same, sir; master Kitley married his sister; the rich merchant in the Old Jewry.

KNOWELL. You say very true.—Brainworm!

[Enter BRAINWORM.]

BRAINWORM. Sir.

KNOWELL. Make this honest friend drink here: pray you, go in.

[Exit BRAINWORM and SERVANT.]

This letter is directed to my son;

Yet I am Edward Knowell too, and may,

With the safe conscience of good manners, use

The fellow's error to my satisfaction.

Well, I will break it ope (old men are curious),

Be it but for the style's sake and the phrase;

To see if both do answer my son's praises, Who is almost grown the idolater

Of this young Wellbred. What have we here? What's this?

[Reads] Why, Ned, I beseech thee, hast thou forsworn all thy friends in the Old Jewry? or dost thou think us all Jews that inhabit there? yet, if thou dost, come over, and but see our frippery; change an old shirt for a whole smock with us: do not conceive that antipathy between us and Hogsden, as was between Jews and hogs-flesh. Leave thy vigilant father alone, to number over his green apricots, evening and morning, on the north-west wall: an I had been his son, I had saved him the labour long since, if taking in all the young wenches that pass by at the backdoor, and codling every kernel of the fruit for them, would have served. But, pr'ythee, come over to me quickly this morning; I have such a present for thee!—our Turkey company never sent the like to the Grand Signior. One is a rhymer, sir, of your own batch, your own leaven; but doth think himself poet-major of the town, willing to be shewn, and worthy to be seen. The other—I will not venture his description with you, till you come, because I would have you make hither with an appetite. If the worst of 'em be not worth your journey, draw your bill of charges, as unconscionable as any Guildhall verdict will give it you, and you shall be allowed your viaticum. [From the Windmill.]

From the Bordello it might come as well,
The Spittle, or Pict-hatch. Is this the
man

My son hath sung so, for the happiest
wit,

The choicest brain, the times have sent us forth!

I know not what he may be in the arts,
Nor what in schools; but, surely, for his manners,

I judge him a profane and dissolute
wretch;

Worse by possession of such great good
gifts,

Being the master of so loose a spirit.

Why, what unhallowed ruffian would have writ

In such scurrilous manner to a friend!

Why should he think I tell my apricots,
Or play the Hesperian dragon with my fruit,

To watch it? Well, my son, I had thought
you

Had had more judgment to have made election

Of your companions, than t' have ta'en on trust

Such petulant, jeering gamesters, that can spare

No argument or subject from their jest.
But I perceive affection makes a fool
Of any man too much the father.—Brain-worm!

[Enter BRAINWORM.]

BRAINWORM. Sir.

KNOWELL. Is the fellow gone that brought this letter?

BRAINWORM. Yes, sir, a pretty while since.

KNOWELL. And where is your young
master?

BRAINWORM. In his chamber, sir.

KNOWELL. He spake not with the fellow, did he?

BRAINWORM. No, sir, he saw him not.

KNOWELL. Take you this letter, and deliver it my son; but with no notice that I have opened it, on your life.

BRAINWORM. O Lord, sir! that were a jest indeed. [Exit.]

KNOWELL. I am resolved I will not stop his journey,

Nor practise any violent means to stay
The unbridled course of youth in him; for
that

Restrain'd, grows more impatient; and in kind

Like to the eager, but the generous greyhound,

Who ne'er so little from his game withheld,

Turns head, and leaps up at his holder's
throat.

There is a way of winning more by
love,

And urging of the modesty, than fear:

Force works on servile natures, not the free.

He that's compell'd to goodness, may be good,

But 'tis but for that fit; where others, drawn

By softness and example, get a habit.

Then, if they stray, but warn them, and the same

They should for virtue have done, they'll do for shame. [Exit.]

SCENE II—A room in KNOWELL'S house.

[Enter EDWARD KNOWELL, with a letter in his hand, followed by BRAINWORM.]

EDWARD KNOWELL. Did he open it, say'st thou?

BRAINWORM. Yes, o' my word, sir, and read the contents.

EDWARD KNOWELL. That scarce contents me. What countenance, prithee, made he in the reading of it? was he angry, or pleased?

BRAINWORM. Nay, sir, I saw him not read it, nor open it, I assure your worship.

EDWARD KNOWELL. No! how know'st thou then that he did either?

BRAINWORM. Marry, sir, because he charged me, on my life, to tell nobody that he open'd it; which, unless he had done, he would never fear to have it revealed.

EDWARD KNOWELL. That's true: well, I thank thee, Brainworm.

[Enter STEPHEN.]

STEPHEN. O, Brainworm, didst thou not see a fellow here in what-sha-call-him doublet? he brought mine uncle a letter e'en now.

BRAINWORM. Yes, master Stephen; what of him?

STEPHEN. O, I have such a mind to beat him—where is he, canst thou tell?

BRAINWORM. Faith, he is not of that mind: he is gone, master Stephen.

STEPHEN. Gone! which way? when went he? how long since?

BRAINWORM. He is rid hence; he took horse at the street-door.

STEPHEN. And I staid in the fields! Whoreson scanderbag rogue! O that I had but a horse to fetch him back again!

BRAINWORM. Why, you may have my master's gelding, to save your longing, sir.

STEPHEN. But I have no boots, that's the spite on't.

BRAINWORM. Why, a fine wisp of hay, rid'd hard, master Stephen.

STEPHEN. No, faith, it's no boot to follow him now: let him e'en go and hang. Prithee, help to truss me a little: he does so vex me—

BRAINWORM. You'll be worse vexed when you are trussed, master Stephen. Best keep unbraced, and walk yourself till you be cold; your choler may founder you else.

STEPHEN. By my faith, and so I will, now thou tell'st me on't: how dost thou like my leg, Brainworm?

BRAINWORM. A very good leg, master Stephen; but the woollen stocking does not commend it so well.

STEPHEN. Foh! the stockings be good enough, now summer is coming on, for the dust: I'll have a pair of silk against winter, that I go to dwell in the town. I think my leg would shew in a silk hose—

BRAINWORM. Believe me, master Stephen, rarely well.

STEPHEN. In sadness, I think it would: I have a reasonable good leg.

BRAINWORM. You have an excellent good leg, master Stephen; but I cannot stay to praise it longer now, and I am very sorry for it. [Exit.]

STEPHEN. Another time will serve, Brainworm. Gramercy for this.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Ha, ha, ha!

STEPHEN. Slid, I hope he laughs not at me; an he do—

EDWARD KNOWELL. Here was a letter indeed, to be intercepted by a man's father, and do him good with him! He cannot but think most virtuously, both of me, and the sender, sure, that make the careful costermonger of him in our familiar epistles. Well, if he read this with patience I'll be gelt, and troll ballads for master John Trundle yonder, the rest of my mortality. It is true, and likely, my father may have as much patience as another man, for he takes much physic; and oft taking physic makes a man very patient. But would your packet, master Wellbred, had arrived at him in such a minute of his patience! then we had known the end of it, which now is doubtful, and threatens—[Sees MASTER STEPHEN.] What, my wise cousin! nay, then I'll furnish our feast with one gull more toward the mess. He writes to me of a brace, and here's one, that's three: oh, for a fourth, Fortune, if ever thou'lt use thine eyes, I entreat thee—

STEPHEN. Oh, now I see who he laughed at: he laughed at somebody in that letter. By this good light, an he had laughed at me—

EDWARD KNOWELL. How now, cousin Stephen, melancholy?

STEPHEN. Yes, a little: I thought you had laughed at me, cousin.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Why, what an I had, coz? what would you have done?

STEPHEN. By this light, I would have told mine uncle.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Nay, if you would have told your uncle, I did laugh at you, coz.

STEPHEN. Did you, indeed?

EDWARD KNOWELL. Yes, indeed.

STEPHEN. Why then—

EDWARD KNOWELL. What then?

STEPHEN. I am satisfied; it is sufficient.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Why, be so, gentle coz: and, I pray you, let me entreat a courtesy of you. I am sent for this morning by a friend in the Old Jewry, to come to him; it is but crossing over the fields to Moorgate: Will you bear me company? I protest it is not to draw you into bond or any plot against the state, coz.

STEPHEN. Sir, that's all one an it were; you shall command me twice so far as Moorgate, to do you good in such a matter. Do you think I would leave you? I protest—

EDWARD KNOWELL. No, no, you shall not protest, coz.

STEPHEN. By my fackings, but I will, by your leave:—I'll protest more to my friend, than I'll speak of at this time.

EDWARD KNOWELL. You speak very well, coz.

STEPHEN. Nay, not so neither, you shall pardon me: but I speak to serve my turn.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Your turn, coz! do you know what you say? A gentleman of your sorts, parts, carriage, and estimation, to talk of your turn in this company, and to me alone, like a tankard-bearer at a conduit! fie! A wight that, hitherto, his every step hath left the stamp of a great foot behind him, as every word the savour of a strong spirit, and he! this man! so graced, gilded, or, to use a more fit metaphor, so tinfoiled by nature, as not ten housewives' pewter, again a good time, shews more bright to the world than he! and he! (as I said last, so I say again, and still shall say it) this man! to conceal such real ornaments as these, and shadow their glory, as a milliner's wife does her wrought stomacher, with a smoaky lawn, or a black cyprus! O, coz! it cannot be answered; go not about it: Drake's old ship at Deptford may sooner circle the world again. Come, wrong not the quality of your desert, with looking downward, coz; but hold up your head, so; and let the idea of what you are be portrayed in your face, that men may read in your phynomy, here within this place is to be seen the true, rare, and accomplished monster, or miracle of nature, which is all one. What think you of this, coz?

STEPHEN. Why, I do think of it: and I will be more proud, and melancholy, and gentlemanlike, than I have been, I'll insure you.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Why, that's resolute, master Stephen!—Now, if I can but hold him up to his height, as it is happily begun, it will do well for a suburb humour: we may hap have a match with the city, and play him for forty pound.—Come, coz.

STEPHEN. I'll follow you.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Follow me! you must go before.

STEPHEN. Nay, an I must, I will. Pray you shew me, good cousin. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III—The lane before COB's house.

[Enter MASTER MATHEW.]

MATHEW. I think this be the house: what ho!

[Enter COB.]

COB. Who's there? O, master Mathew! give your worship good morrow.

MATHEW. What, Cob! how dost thou, good Cob? dost thou inhabit here, Cob?

COB. Ay, sir, I and my lineage have kept a poor house here, in our days.

MATHEW. Thy lineage, monsieur Cob! what lineage, what lineage?

COB. Why, sir, an ancient lineage, and a princely. Mine ance'try came from a king's belly, no worse man; and yet no man either, by your worship's leave, I did lie in that, but herring, the king of fish (from his belly I proceed), one of the monarchs of the world, I assure you. The first red herring that was broiled in Adam and Eve's kitchen, do I fetch my pedigree from, by the harrot's book. His cob was my great, great, mighty great grandfather.

MATHEW. Why mighty, why mighty, I pray thee?

COB. O, it was a mighty while ago, sir, and a mighty great cob.

MATHEW. How know'st thou that?

COB. How know I! why, I smell his ghost ever and anon.

MATHEW. Smell a ghost! O unsavoury jest! and the ghost of a herring cob?

COB. Ay, sir: With favour of your worship's nose, master Mathew, why not the ghost of a herring cob, as well as the ghost of Rasher Bacon?

MATHEW. Roger Bacon, thou would'st say.

COB. I say Rasher Bacon. They were both broiled on the coals; and a man may smell broiled meat, I hope! you are a scholar, upsolve me that now.

MATHEW. O raw ignorance!—Cob, canst thou shew me of a gentleman, one captain Bobadill, where his lodging is?

COB. O, my guest, sir, you mean.

MATHEW. Thy guest! alas, ha, ha, ha!

COB. Why do you laugh, sir? do you not mean captain Bobadill?

MATHEW. Cob, pray thee advise thyself well; do not wrong the gentleman, and thyself too. I dare be sworn, he scorns thy house; he! he lodge in such a base obscure place as thy house! Tut, I know his disposition so well, he would not lie in thy bed if thou'dst give it him.

COB. I will not give it him though, sir. Mass, I thought somewhat was in it, we could not get him to bed all night: Well, sir, though he lie not on my bed, he lies on my bench: an't please you to go up, sir, you shall find him with two cushions under his head, and his cloak wrapped about him, as though he had neither won nor lost, and yet, I warrant, he ne'er cast better in his life, than he has done to-night.

MATHEW. Why, was he drunk?

COB. Drunk, sir! you hear not me say so: perhaps he swallowed a tavern-token, or some such device, sir, I have nothing to do withal. I deal with water and not with wine—Give me my tankard there, ho!—God be wi' you, sir. It's six o'clock: I should have carried two turns by this. What ho! my stapple! come.

[Enter TIB with a water-tankard.]

MATHEW. Lie in a water-bearer's house! a gentleman of his havings! Well, I'll tell him my mind.

COB. What, Tib; shew this gentleman up to the captain. [Exit TIB with MASTER MATHEW.] Oh, an my house were the Brazen-head now! faith it would e'en speak Moe fools yet. You should have some now would take this master Mathew to be a gentleman, at the least. His father's an honest man, a worshipful fishmonger, and so forth; and now does he creep and wriggle into acquaintance with all the brave gallants about the town, such as my guest is (O, my guest is a fine man!), and they flout him invincibly. He useth every day to a merchant's house where I serve water, one master Kitely's, in the Old Jewry; and here's the jest, he is in love with my master's sister, Mrs. Bridget, and calls her mistress; and there he will sit you a whole afternoon sometimes, reading of these same abominable, vile (a pox on 'em! I cannot abide them), rascally verses, poetrie, poetrie, and speaking of interludes: 'twill make a man burst to hear him. And the wenches, they do so jeer, and ti-he at him—Well, should they do so much to me, I'd forswear them all, by the foot of Pharaoh! There's an oath! How many water-bearers shall you hear swear such an oath? O, I have a guest—he teaches me—he does swear the legiblest of any man christened: By St. George! the foot of Pharaoh! the body of me! as I am a gentleman and a soldier! such dainty oaths! and withal he does take this same filthy roguish tobacco, the finest and cleanliest! it would do a man good to see the fumes come forth at's tonnels.—Well, he owes me forty shillings, my wife lent him out of her purse, by sixpence at a time, besides his lodging: I would I had it! I shall have it, he says, the next action. Helter skelter, hang sorrow, care'll kill a cat, up-tails all, and a louse for the hangman. [Exit.]

SCENE IV—A room in COB's house.

[BOBADILL discovered lying on a bench.]

BOBADILL. Hostess, hostess!

[Enter TIB.]

TIB. What say you, sir?

BOBADILL. A cup of thy small beer, sweet hostess.

TIB. Sir, there's a gentleman below would speak with you.

BOBADILL. A gentleman! 'odso, I am not within.

TIB. My husband told him you were, sir.

BOBADILL. What a plague—what meant he?

MATHEW [below]. Captain Bobadill!

BOBADILL. Who's there!—Take away the bason, good hostess;—Come up, sir.

TIB. He would desire you to come up, sir. You come into a cleanly house, here.

[Enter MATHEW.]

MATHEW. Save you, sir; save you, captain!

BOBADILL. Gentle master Mathew! Is it you, sir? please you to sit down.

MATHEW. Thank you, good captain; you may see I am somewhat audacious.

BOBADILL. Not so, sir. I was requested to supper last night by a sort of gallants, where you were wished for, and drunk to, I assure you.

MATHEW. Vouchsafe me, by whom, good captain?

BOBADILL. Marry, by young Wellbred, and others.—Why, hostess, a stool here for this gentleman.

MATHEW. No haste, sir, 'tis very well.

BOBADILL. Body o' me! it was so late ere we parted last night, I can scarce open my eyes yet; I was but new risen, as you came; how passes the day abroad, sir? you can tell.

MATHEW. Faith, some half hour to seven; now, trust me, you have an exceeding fine lodging here, very neat, and private.

BOBADILL. Ay, sir: sit down, I pray you. Master Mathew, in any case possess no gentlemen of our acquaintance with notice of my lodging.

MATHEW. Who? I, sir; no.

BOBADILL. Not that I need to care who know it, for the cabin is convenient; but in regard I would not be too popular, and generally visited, as some are.

MATHEW. True, captain, I conceive you.

BOBADILL. For, do you see, sir, by the heart of valour in me, except it be to some peculiar and choice spirits, to whom I am extraordinarily engaged, as yourself, or so, I could not extend thus far.

MATHEW. O Lord, sir! I resolve so.

BOBADILL. I confess I love a cleanly and quiet privacy, above all the tumult and roar of fortune. What new book have you there? What! Go by, Hieronymo?

MATHEW. Ay: did you ever see it acted? Is't not well penned?

BOBADILL. Well penned! I would fain see all the poets of these times pen such another play as that was: they'll prate and swagger, and keep a stir of art and devices, when, as I am a gentleman, read 'em, they are the most shallow, pitiful, barren fellows, that live upon the face of the earth again.

[While MASTER MATHEW reads,

BOBADILL makes himself ready.]

MATHEW. Indeed here are a number of fine speeches in this book. O eyes, no eyes, out fountains fraught with tears! there's a conceit! fountains fraught with tears! O life, no life, but lively form of death! another. O world, no world, but mass of public wrongs! a third. Confused and fill'd with murder and misdeeds! a fourth. O, the muses! Is't not excellent? Is't not simply the best that ever you heard, captain? Ha! how do you like it?

BOBADILL. 'Tis good.

MATHEW. To thee, the purest object to my sense,

The most refined essence heaven covers,
Send I these lines, wherein I do commence

The happy state of turtle-billing lovers.
If they prove rough, unpolish'd, harsh, and rude,

Haste made the waste: thus mildly I conclude.

BOBADILL. Nay, proceed, proceed. Where's this?

MATHEW. This, sir! a toy of mine own, in my non-age; the infancy of my muses. But when will you come and see my study? good faith, I can shew you some very good things I have done of late.—That boot becomes your leg passing well, captain, methinks.

BOBADILL. So, so; it's the fashion gentlemen now use.

MATHEW. Troth, captain, and now you speak of the fashion, master Wellbred's elder brother and I are fallen out exceedingly: This other day, I happened to enter into some discourse of a hanger, which, I assure you, both for fashion and workmanship, was most peremptory beautiful and gentlemanlike: yet he condemned, and cried it down for the most pidd and ridiculous that ever he saw.

BOBADILL. Squire Downright, the half-brother, was't not?

MATHEW. Ay, sir, he.

BOBADILL. Hang him, rook! he! why he has no more judgment than a malt-horse: By St. George, I wonder you'd lose a thought upon such an animal; the most peremptory absurd clown of Christendom, this day, he is holden. I protest to you, as I am a gentleman and a soldier, I ne'er changed with his like. By his discourse, he should eat nothing but hay; he was born for the manger, pannier, or pack-saddle. He has not so much as a good phrase in his belly, but all old iron and rusty proverbs: a good commodity for some smith to make hob-nails of.

MATHEW. Ay, and he thinks to carry it away with his manhood still, where he comes; he brags he will give me the bastinado, as I hear.

BOBADILL. How! he the bastinado! how came he by that word, trow?

MATHEW. Nay, indeed, he said cudgel me; I termed it so, for my more grace.

BOBADILL. That may be: for I was sure it was none of his word; but when, when said he so?

MATHEW. Faith, yesterday, they say; a young gallant, a friend of mine, told me so.

BOBADILL. By the foot of Pharaoh, an'twere my case now, I should send him a chartel presently. The bastinado! a most proper and sufficient dependence, warranted by the great Caranza. Come hither, you shall chartel him; I'll shew you a trick or two you shall kill him with at pleasure; the first stoccata, if you will, by this air.

MATHEW. Indeed, you have absolute knowledge in the mystery, I have heard, sir.

BOBADILL. Of whom, of whom, have you heard it, I beseech you?

MATHEW. Troth, I have heard it spoken of divers, that you have very rare, and un-in-one-breath-utterable skill, sir.

BOBADILL. By heaven, no, not I; no skill in the earth; some small rudiments in the science, as to know my time, distance, or so. I have professed it more for noblemen and gentlemen's use, than mine own practice, I assure you.—Hostess, accommodate us with another bed-staff quickly. Lend us another bed-staff—the woman does not understand the words of action.—Look you, sir: exalt not your point above this state, at any hand, and let your poniard maintain your defence, thus:—give it the gentleman, and leave us. [Exit TIB.] So, sir. Come on: O, twine your body more about, that you may fall to a more sweet, comely, gentleman-like guard; so! indifferent: hollow your body more, sir, thus: now, stand fast o' your left leg, note your distance, keep your due proportion of time—oh, you disorder your point most irregularly.

MATHEW. How is the bearing of it now, sir?

BOBADILL. O, out of measure ill: a well-experienced hand would pass upon you at pleasure.

MATHEW. How mean you, sir, pass upon me?

BOBADILL. Why, thus, sir,—make a thrust at me—[MASTER MATHEW pushes at BOBADILL.] come in upon the answer, control your point, and make a full career at the body: The best-practised gallants of the time name it the pasado; a most desperate thrust, believe it.

MATHEW. Well, come, sir.

BOBADILL. Why, you do not manage your weapon with any facility or grace to invite me. I have no spirit to play with you; your dearth of judgment renders you tedious.

MATHEW. But one venue, sir.

BOBADILL. Venue! fie; the most gross denomination as ever I heard: O, the stoccata, while you live, sir; note that.—Come, put on your cloke, and we'll go to some private place where you are acquainted; some tavern, or so—and have a bit. I'll send for one of these fencers, and he shall breathe you, by my direction; and then I will teach you your trick: you shall kill him with it at the first, if you please. Why, I will learn you, by the true judgment of the eye, hand, and foot, to control any enemy's point in the world. Should your adversary confront you with a pistol, 'twere nothing, by this hand! you should, by the same rule, control his bullet, in a line, except it were hail shot, and spread. What money have you about you, master Mathew?

MATHEW. Faith, I have not past a two shilling or so.

BOBADILL. 'Tis somewhat with the least; but come; we will have a bunch of radish and salt to taste our wine, and a pipe of tobacco to close the orifice of the stomach: and then we'll call upon young Wellbred: perhaps we shall meet the Corydon his brother there, and put him to the question.

ACT II

SCENE I—The Old Jewry. A hall in KITELY's house.

[Enter KITELY, CASH, and DOWNRIGHT.]

KITELY. Thomas, come hither.

There lies a note within upon my desk; Here take my key: it is no matter neither.—

Where is the boy?

CASH. Within, sir, in the warehouse.

KITELY. Let him tell over straight that Spanish gold, And weigh it, with the pieces of eight. Do you

See the delivery of those silver stuffs To Master Lucar: tell him, if he will, He shall have the grograms, at the rate I told him,

And I will meet him on the Exchange anon.

CASH. Good sir. [Exit.]

KITELY. Do you see that fellow, brother Downright?

DOWNRIGHT. Ay, what of him?

KITELY. He is a jewel, brother.

I took him of a child up at my door, And christen'd him, gave him mine own name, Thomas:

Since bred him at the Hospital; where proving

A toward imp, I call'd him home, and taught him

So much, as I have made him my cashier, And giv'n him, who had none, a surname, Cash:

And find him in his place so full of faith, That I durst trust my life into his hands.

DOWNRIGHT. So would not I in any bastard's, brother,

As it is like he is, although I knew Myself his father. But you said you had somewhat

To tell me, gentle brother: what is't, what is't?

KITELY. Faith, I am very loath to utter it,

As fearing it may hurt your patience: But that I know your judgment is of strength,

Against the nearness of affection—

DOWNRIGHT. What need this circumstance? pray you, be direct.

KITELY. I will not say how much I do ascribe

Unto your friendship, nor in what regard I hold your love; but let my past behaviour,

And usage of your sister, [both] confirm How well I have been affected to you—

DOWNRIGHT. You are too tedious; come to the matter, the matter.

KITELY. Then, without further ceremony, thus.

My brother Wellbred, sir, I know not how,

Of late is much declined in what he was, And greatly alter'd in his disposition.

When he came first to lodge here in my house,

Ne'er trust me if I were not proud of him:

Methought he bare himself in such a fashion,

So full of man, and sweetness in his carriage,

And what was chief, it shew'd not borrow'd in him,

But all he did became him as his own, And seem'd as perfect, proper, and possess, As breath with life, or colour with the blood.

But now, his course is so irregular, So loose, affected, and deprived of grace, And he himself withal so far fallen off From that first place, as scarce no note remains,

To tell men's judgments where he lately stood.

He's grown a stranger to all due respect, Forgetful of his friends; and not content To stale himself in all societies,

He makes my house here common as a mart,

A theatre, a public receptacle For giddy humour, and deceased riot;

And here, as in a tavern or a stew, He and his wild associates spend their hours,

In repetition of lascivious jests, Swear, leap, drink, dance, and revel night by night,

Control my servants; and, indeed, what not?

DOWNRIGHT. 'Sdeins, I know not what I should say to him, in the whole world! He values me at a crack'd three-farthings, for aught I see. It will never out of the flesh that's bred in the bone. I have told him enough, one would think, if that would serve; but counsel to him is as good as a shoulder of mutton to a sick horse. Well! he knows what to trust to, for George: let him spend, and spend, and domineer, till his heart ake; and he think to be relieved by me, when he is got into one o' your city pounds, the counters, he has the wrong sow by the ear, i'faith; and claps his dish at the wrong man's door: I'll lay my hand on my halfpenny, ere I part with it to fetch him out, I'll assure him.

KITELY. Nay, good brother, let it not trouble you thus.

DOWNRIGHT. 'Sdeath! he mads me; I could eat my very spur-leathers for anger! But, why are you so tame? why do you not speak to him, and tell him how he disquiets your house?

KITELY. O, there are divers reasons to dissuade me.

But, would yourself vouchsafe to travail in it

(Though but with plain and easy circumstance),

It would both come much better to his sense,

And savour less of stomach, or of passion.

You are his elder brother, and that title Both gives and warrants your authority, Which, by your presence seconded, must breed

A kind of duty in him, and regard: Whereas, if I should intimate the least, It would but add contempt to his neglect, Heap worse on ill, make up a pile of hatred,

That in the rearing would come tottering down,

And in the ruin bury all our love.

Nay, more than this, brother; if I should speak,

He would be ready, from his heat of humour,

And overflowing of the vapour in him,
To blow the ears of his familiars
With the false breath of telling what disgraces,

And low disparagements, I had put upon him.

Whilst they, sir, to relieve him in the fable,

Make their loose comments upon every word,

Gesture, or look, I use; mock me all over,
From my flat cap unto my shining shoes;
And, out of their impetuous rioting phant'sies,

Begot some slander that shall dwell with me.

And what would that be, think you? marry, this:

They would give out, because my wife is fair,

Myself but lately married, and my sister

Here sojourning a virgin in my house,
That I were jealous!—nay, as sure as death,

That they would say: and, how that I had quarrell'd

My brother purposely, thereby to find
An apt pretext to banish them my house.

DOWNRIGHT. Mass, perhaps so; they're like enough to do it.

KITELY. Brother, they would, believe it; so should I,

Like one of these penurious quack-salvers,

But set the bills up to mine own disgrace,

And try experiments upon myself;

Lend scorn and envy opportunity

To stab my reputation and good name—

[Enter MASTER MATHEW struggling with BOBADILL.]

MATHEW. I will speak to him.

BOBADILL. Speak to him! away! By the foot of Pharaoh, you shall not! you shall not do him that grace.—The time of day to you, gentleman o' the house. Is master Wellbred stirring?

DOWNRIGHT. How then? what should he do?

BOBADILL. Gentleman of the house, it is to you: is he within, sir?

KITELY. He came not to his lodging to-night, sir, I assure you.

DOWNRIGHT. Why, do you hear? you!

BOBADILL. The gentleman citizen hath satisfied me;

I'll talk to no scavenger. [Exeunt

BOBADILL and MATHEW.]

DOWNRIGHT. How! scavenger! stay, sir, stay!

KITELY. Nay, brother Downright.

DOWNRIGHT. 'Heart! stand you away, an you love me.

KITELY. You shall not follow him now, I pray you, brother, good faith you shall not; I will overrule you.

DOWNRIGHT. Ha! scavenger! well, go to, I say little: but, by this good day (God forgive me I should swear), if I put it up so, say I am the rankest cow that ever pist. 'Sdeins, an I swallow this, I'll ne'er draw my sword in the sight of Fleet-street again while I live; I'll sit in a barn with madge-howlet, and catch mice first. Scavenger! heart!—and I'll go near to fill that huge tumbrel-slop of yours with somewhat, an I have good luck: your Garagantua breech cannot carry it away so.

KITELY. Oh, do not fret yourself thus: never think on't.

DOWNRIGHT. These are my brother's consorts, these! these are his camerades, his walking mates! he's a gallant, a cavaliero too, right hangman cut! Let me not live, an I could not find in my heart to swinge the whole gang of 'em, one after another, and begin with him first. I am grieved it should be said he is my brother, and take these courses: Well, as he brews, so shall he drink, for George, again. Yet he shall hear on't, and that tightly too, an I live, i'faith.

KITELY. But, brother, let your reprehension, then,

Run in an easy current, not o'er high Carried with rashness, or devouring choler;

But rather use the soft persuading way,
Whose powers will work more gently, and compose

The imperfect thoughts you labour to reclaim;

More winning, than enforcing the consent.

DOWNRIGHT. Ay, ay, let me alone for that, I warrant you.

KITELY. How now! [Bell rings.] Oh,
the bell rings to breakfast.

Brother, I pray you go in, and bear my wife company till I come;

I'll but give order for some despatch of business to my servants.

[Exit DOWNRIGHT.]

[Enter COB, with his tankard.]

KITELY. What, Cob! our maids will have you by the back, i'faith, for coming so late this morning.

COB. Perhaps so, sir; take heed somebody have not them by the belly, for walking so late in the evening. [Exit.]

KITELY. Well; yet my troubled spirit's somewhat eased,

Though not reposed in that security
As I could wish: but I must be content,
Howe'er I set a face on't to the world.
Would I had lost this finger at a venture,
So Wellbred had ne'er lodged within my
house.

Why't cannot be, where there is such resort

Of wanton gallants, and young revellers,
That any woman should be honest long.
Is't like, that factious beauty will preserve

The public weal of chastity unshaken,
When such strong motives muster, and make head

Against her single peace? No, no: beware.
When mutual appetite doth meet to treat,
And spirits of one kind and quality
Come once to parley in the pride of blood,
It is no slow conspiracy that follows.
Well, to be plain, if I but thought the
time

Had answer'd their affections, all the world

Should not persuade me but I were a cuckold.

Marry, I hope they have not got that start;

For opportunity hath balk'd them yet,
And shall do still, while I have eyes and ears

To attend the impositions of my heart.

My presence shall be as an iron bar,
'Twixt the conspiring motions of desire:

Yea, every look or glance mine eye ejects Shall check occasion, as one doth his
slave,

When he forgets the limits of prescription.

[Enter DAME KITELY and BRIDGET.]

DAME KITELY. Sister Bridget, pray you fetch down the rose-water, above in the closet. [Exit BRIDGET.]

—Sweet-heart, will you come in to breakfast?

KITELY. An she have overheard me
now!—

DAME KITELY. I pray thee, good muss, we stay for you.

KITELY. By heaven, I would not for a thousand angels.

DAME KITELY. What ail you, sweetheart? are you not well? speak, good muss.

KITELY. Troth my head akes extremely on a sudden.

DAME KITELY [putting her hand to his forehead]. O, the Lord!

KITELY. How now! What?

DAME KITELY. Alas, how it burns!
Muss, keep you warm; good truth it is this new disease, there's a number are troubled withal. For love's sake, sweetheart, come in, out of the air.

KITELY. How simple, and how subtle are her answers!

A new disease, and many troubled with
it?

Why true; she heard me, all the world to
nothing.

DAME KITELY. I pray thee, good sweetheart, come in, the air will do you harm, in troth.

KITELY. The air! she has me in the wind.—Sweet-heart, I'll come to you presently; 'twill away, I hope.

DAME KITELY. Pray Heaven it do.

[Exit.]

KITELY. A new disease! I know not,
new or old,
But it may well be call'd poor mortals'
plague;

For, like a pestilence, it doth infect
The houses of the brain. First it begins
Solely to work upon the phantasy,
Filling her seat with such pestiferous air,
As soon corrupts the judgment; and from thence,

Sends like contagion to the memory:
Still each to other giving the infection.
Which as a subtle vapour spreads itself
Confusedly through every sensitive part,
Till not a thought or motion in the mind
Be free from the black poison of suspect.
Ah! but what misery is it to know this?
Or, knowing it, to want the mind's erection

In such extremes? Well, I will once more strive,

In spite of this black cloud, myself to be,
And shake the fever off that thus shakes
me. [Exit.]

SCENE II—Moorfields.

[Enter BRAINWORM disguised like a maimed Soldier.]

BRAINWORM. 'Slid, I cannot choose but laugh to see myself translated thus, from a poor creature to a creator; for now must I create an intolerable sort of lies,
or my present profession loses the grace:
and yet the lie, to a man of my coat, is as ominous a fruit as the fico. O, sir, it holds for good polity ever, to have that outwardly in vilest estimation, that inwardly is most dear to us: so much for my borrowed shape. Well, the troth is, my old master intends to follow my young master, dry-foot, over Moorfields to London, this morning; now, I knowing of this hunting-match, or rather conspiracy, and to insinuate with my young master (for so must we that are blue waiters, and men of hope and service do, or perhaps we may wear motley at the year's end, and who wears motley, you know), have got me afore in this disguise, determining here to lie in ambuscado, and intercept him in the mid-way. If I can but get his cloke, his purse, and his hat, nay, any thing to cut him off, that is, to stay his journey, Veni, vidi, vici, I may say with captain Cæsar, I am made for ever, i'faith. Well, now I must practise to get the true garb of one of these lance-knights, my arm here, and my—Odsó! my young master, and his cousin, master Stephen, as I am true counterfeit man of war, and no soldier!

[Enter EDWARD KNOWELL and STEPHEN.]

EDWARD KNOWELL. So, sir! and how then, coz?

STEPHEN. 'Sfoot! I have lost my purse, I think.

EDWARD KNOWELL. How! lost your purse? where? when had you it?

STEPHEN. I cannot tell; stay.

BRAINWORM. 'Slid, I am afraid they will know me: would I could get by them!

EDWARD KNOWELL. What, have you it?

STEPHEN. No; I think I was bewitched, I— [Cries.]

EDWARD KNOWELL. Nay, do not weep the loss: hang it, let it go.

STEPHEN. Oh, it's here: No, an it had been lost, I had not cared, but for a jet ring mistress Mary sent me.

EDWARD KNOWELL. A jet ring! O the poesie, the poesie?

STEPHEN. Fine, i'faith.—

Though Fancy sleep,

My love is deep.

Meaning, that though I did not fancy her, yet she loved me dearly.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Most excellent!

STEPHEN. And then I sent her another, and my poesie was,

The deeper the sweeter,

I'll be judg'd by St. Peter.

EDWARD KNOWELL. How, by St. Peter? I do not conceive that.

STEPHEN. Marry, St. Peter, to make up the metre.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Well, there the saint was your good patron, he help'd you at your need; thank him, thank him.

BRAINWORM. I cannot take leave on 'em so; I will venture, come what will. [Comes forward.] Gentlemen, please you change a few crowns for a very excellent blade here? I am a poor gentleman, a soldier, one that, in the better state of my fortunes, scorned so mean a refuge; but now it is the humour of necessity to have it so. You seem to be gentlemen well affected to martial men, else I should rather die with silence, than live with shame: however, vouchsafe to remember it is my want speaks, not myself; this condition agrees not with my spirit—

EDWARD KNOWELL. Where hast thou served?

BRAINWORM. May it please you, sir, in all the late wars of Bohemia, Hungary, Dalmatia, Poland, where not, sir? I have been a poor servitor by sea and land any time this fourteen years, and followed the fortunes of the best commanders in Christendom. I was twice shot at the taking of Aleppo, once at the relief of Vienna; I have been at Marseilles, Naples, and the Adriatic gulf, a gentleman-slave in the galleys, thrice; where I was most dangerously shot in the head, through both the thighs; and yet, being thus maimed, I am void of maintenance, nothing left me but my scars, the noted marks of my resolution.

STEPHEN. How will you sell this rapier, friend?

BRAINWORM. Generous sir, I refer it to your own judgment; you are a gentleman, give me what you please.

STEPHEN. True, I am a gentleman, I know that, friend; but what though! I pray you say, what would you ask?

BRAINWORM. I assure you, the blade may become the side or thigh of the best prince in Europe.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Ay, with a velvet scabbard, I think.

STEPHEN. Nay, an't be mine, it shall have a velvet scabbard, coz, that's flat; I'd not wear it, as it is, an you would give me an angel.

BRAINWORM. At your worship's pleasure, sir; nay, 'tis a most pure Toledo.

STEPHEN. I had rather it were a Spaniard. But tell me, what shall I give you for it? An it had a silver hilt—

EDWARD KNOWELL. Come, come, you shall not buy it: hold, there's a shilling, fellow; take thy rapier.

STEPHEN. Why, but I will buy it now, because you say so; and there's another shilling, fellow; I scorn to be out-bidden. What, shall I walk with a cudgel, like Higginbottom, and may have a rapier for money!

EDWARD KNOWELL. You may buy one in the city.

STEPHEN. Tut! I'll buy this i' the field, so I will: I have a mind to't, because 'tis a field rapier. Tell me your lowest price.

EDWARD KNOWELL. You shall not buy it, I say.

STEPHEN. By this money, but I will, though I give more than 'tis worth.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Come away, you are a fool.

STEPHEN. Friend, I am a fool, that's granted; but I'll have it, for that word's sake. Follow me for your money.

BRAINWORM. At your service, sir.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III—Another part of Moorfields.

[Enter KNOWELL.]

KNOWELL. I cannot lose the thought yet of this letter,

Sent to my son; nor leave t' admire the change

Of manners, and the breeding of our youth

Within the kingdom, since myself was one.—

When I was young, he lived not in the stews

Durst have conceived a scorn, and utter'd it,

On a gray head; age was authority

Against a buffoon, and a man had then

A certain reverence paid unto his years,

That had none due unto his life: so much

The sanctity of some prevail'd for others.

But now we all are fallen; youth, from their fear,
 And age, from that which bred it, good example.
 Nay, would ourselves were not the first,
 even parents,
 That did destroy the hopes in our own children;
 Or they not learn'd our vices in their cradles,
 And suck'd in our ill customs with their milk;
 Ere all their teeth be born, or they can
 speak,
 We make their palates cunning; the first
 words
 We form their tongues with, are licentious
 jests:
 Can it call whore? cry bastard? O, then,
 kiss it!
 A witty child! can't swear? the father's darling!
 Give it two plums. Nay, rather than't
 shall learn
 No bawdy song, the mother herself will teach it!—
 But this is in the infancy, the days
 Of the long coat; when it puts on the breeches,
 It will put off all this: Ay, it is like,
 When it is gone into the bone already!
 No, no; this dye goes deeper than the coat,
 Or shirt, or skin; it stains into the liver,
 And heart, in some: and rather than it should not,
 Note what we fathers do! look how we
 live!
 What mistresses we keep! at what expence,
 In our sons' eyes! where they may handle
 our gifts,
 Hear our lascivious courtships, see our dalliance,
 Taste of the same provoking meats with
 us,
 To ruin of our states! Nay, when our
 own
 Portion is fled, to prey on the remainder,
 We call them into fellowship of vice;

Bait 'em with the young chamber-maid, to seal,
 And teach 'em all bad ways to buy afflic-
 tion.
 This is one path: but there are millions
 more,
 In which we spoil our own, with leading
 them.
 Well, I thank heaven, I never yet was he
 That travell'd with my son, before sixteen,
 To shew him the Venetian courtzezans;
 Nor read the grammar of cheating I had
 made,
 To my sharp boy, at twelve; repeating
 still
 The rule, Get money; still, get money,
boy;
No matter by what means; money will do More, boy, than my lord's letter. Neither have I Drest snails or mushrooms curiously before him,
 Perfumed my sauces, and taught him how to make them;
 Preceding still, with my gray gluttony,
 At all the ord'naries, and only fear'd
 His palate should degenerate, not his manners.
 These are the trade of fathers now; however,
 My son, I hope, hath met within my threshold
 None of these household precedents, which are strong,
 And swift, to rape youth to their precipice.
 But let the house at home be ne'er so
 clean
 Swept, or kept sweet from filth, nay dust and cobwebs,
 If he will live abroad with his companions,
 In dung and leystals, it is worth a fear;
 Nor is the danger of conversing less Than all that I have mention'd of example.

[Enter BRAINWORM, disguised as before.]
 BRAINWORM. My master! nay, faith, have at you; I am flesh'd now, I have sped so well. [Aside.] Worshipful sir,
 I beseech you, respect the estate of a poor soldier; I am ashamed of this base course of life,—God's my comfort—but extremity provokes me to't: what remedy?

KNOWELL. I have not for you, now.

BRAINWORM. By the faith I bear unto truth, gentleman, it is no ordinary custom in me, but only to preserve manhood. I protest to you, a man I have been: a man I may be, by your sweet bounty.

KNOWELL. Pray thee, good friend, be satisfied.

BRAINWORM. Good sir, by that hand, you may do the part of a kind gentleman, in lending a poor soldier the price of two cans of beer, a matter of small value: the king of heaven shall pay you, and I shall rest thankful: Sweet worship—

KNOWELL. Nay, an you be so importunate—

BRAINWORM. Oh, tender sir! need will have its course: I was not made to this vile use. Well, the edge of the enemy could not have abated me so much: it's hard when a man hath served in his prince's cause, and be thus. [Weeps.] Honourable worship, let me derive a small piece of silver from you, it shall not be given in the course of time. By this good ground, I was fain to pawn my rapier last night for a poor supper; I had suck'd the hilts long before, I am a pagan else: Sweet honour—

KNOWELL. Believe me, I am taken with some wonder,

To think a fellow of thy outward presence, Should, in the frame and fashion of his mind,

Be so degenerate, and sordid-base.

Art thou a man? and sham'st thou not to beg,

To practise such a servile kind of life?

Why, were thy education ne'er so mean, Having thy limbs, a thousand fairer courses

Offer themselves to thy election.

Either the wars might still supply thy wants,

Or service of some virtuous gentleman, Or honest labour; nay, what can I name, But would become thee better than to beg:

But men of thy condition feed on sloth,

As doth the beetle on the dung she breeds in:

Nor caring how the metal of your minds Is eaten with the rust of idleness.

Now, afore me, whate'er he be, that should Relieve a person of thy quality, While thou insist'st in this loose desperate course,

I would esteem the sin not thine, but his.

BRAINWORM. Faith, sir, I would gladly find some other course, if so—

KNOWELL. Ay, You'd gladly find it, but you will not seek it.

BRAINWORM. Alas, sir, where should a man seek? in the wars, there's no ascent by desert in these days; but—and for service, would it were as soon purchased, as wished for! the air's my comfort.— [Sighs.]—I know what I would say.

KNOWELL. What's thy name?

BRAINWORM. Please you, Fitz-Sword, sir.

KNOWELL. Fitz-Sword!

Say that a man should entertain thee now,

Wouldst thou be honest, humble, just, and true?

BRAINWORM. Sir, by the place and honour of a soldier—

KNOWELL. Nay, nay, I like not these affected oaths; speak plainly, man, what think'st thou of my words?

BRAINWORM. Nothing, sir, but wish my fortunes were as happy as my service should be honest.

KNOWELL. Well, follow me; I'll prove thee, if thy deeds

Will carry a proportion to thy words.

[Exit.]

BRAINWORM. Yes, sir, straight; I'll but garter my hose. O that my belly were hoop'd now, for I am ready to burst with laughing! never was bottle or bagpipe fuller. 'Slid, was there ever seen a fox in years to betray himself thus! now shall I be possess of all his counsels; and, by that conduit, my young master. Well, he is resolved to prove my honesty; faith, and I'm resolved to prove his patience: Oh, I shall abuse him intolerably. This small piece of service will bring him clean out of love with the soldier for ever. He will never come within the sign of it, the sight of a cassock, or a musket-rest again. He will hate the musters at Mile-end for it, to his dying day. It's no matter, let the world think me a had counterfeited, if I cannot give him the slip at an instant: why, this is better than to have staid his journey: well, I'll follow him. Oh, how I long to be employed!

[Exit BRAINWORM.]

ACT III

SCENE I—The Old Jewry. A room in the Windmill Tavern.

[Enter MASTER MATHEW, WELLBRED, and BOBADILL.]

MATHEW. Yes, faith, sir, we were at your lodging to seek you too.

WELLBRED. Oh, I came not there to-night.

BOBADILL. Your brother delivered us as much.

WELLBRED. Who, my brother Down-right?

BOBADILL. He. Mr. Wellbred, I know not in what kind you hold me; but let me say to you this: as sure as honour, I esteem it so much out of the sunshine of reputation, to throw the least beam of regard upon such a—

WELLBRED. Sir, I must hear no ill words of my brother.

BOBADILL. I protest to you, as I have a thing to be saved about me, I never saw any gentlemanlike part—

WELLBRED. Good captain, faces about to some other discourse.

BOBADILL. With your leave, sir, an there were no more men living upon the face of the earth, I should not fancy him, by St. George!

MATHEW. Troth, nor I; he is of a rustical cut, I know not how: he doth not carry himself like a gentleman of fashion.

WELLBRED. Oh, master Mathew, that's a grace peculiar but to a few, quos æquus amavit Jupiter.

MATHEW. I understand you, sir.

WELLBRED. No question, you do,—or do you not, sir.

[Enter EDWARD KNOWELL and MASTER STEPHEN.]

Ned Knowell! by my soul, welcome: how dost thou, sweet spirit, my genius? 'Slid, I shall love Apollo and the mad Thespian girls the better, while I live, for this, my dear Fury; now, I see there's some love in thee. Sirrah, these be the two I writ to thee of: nay, what a drowsy humour in this now! why dost thou not speak?

EDWARD KNOWELL. Oh, you are a fine gallant; you sent me a rare letter.

WELLBRED. Why, was't not rare?

EDWARD KNOWELL. Yes, I'll be sworn, I was ne'er guilty of reading the like; match it in all Pliny, or Symmachus's epistles, and I'll have my judgment burn'd in the ear for a rogue: make much of thy vein, for it is inimitable. But I marle what camel it was, that had the carriage of it; for, doubtless, he was no ordinary beast that brought it.

WELLBRED. Why?

EDWARD KNOWELL. Why, say'st thou! why, dost thou think that any reasonable creature, especially in the morning, the sober time of the day too, could have mistaken my father for me?

WELLBRED. 'Slid, you jest, I hope.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Indeed, the best use we can turn it to, is to make a jest on't, now: but I'll assure you, my father had the full view of your flourishing style some hour before I saw it.

WELLBRED. What a dull slave was this! but, sirrah, what said he to it, i'faith?

EDWARD KNOWELL. Nay, I know not what he said; but I have a shrewd guess what he thought.

WELLBRED. What, what?

EDWARD KNOWELL. Marry, that thou art some strange, dissolute young fellow, and I—a graine or two better, for keeping thee company.

WELLBRED. Tut! that thought is like the moon in her last quarter, 'twill change shortly: but, sirrah, I pray thee be acquainted with my two hang-by's here; thou wilt take exceeding pleasure in them if thou hear'st 'em once go; my wind-instruments; I'll wind them up—But what strange piece of silence is this, the sign of the Dumb Man?

EDWARD KNOWELL. Oh, sir, a kinsman of mine, one that may make your music the fuller, an he please; he has his humour, sir.

WELLBRED. Oh, what is't, what is't?

EDWARD KNOWELL. Nay, I'll neither do your judgment nor his folly that wrong, as to prepare your apprehension: I'll leave him to the mercy of your search; if you can take him, so!

WELLBRED. Well, captain Bobadill, master Mathew, pray you know this gentleman here; he is a friend of mine, and one that will deserve your affection. I know not your name, sir, [to STEPHEN.] but I shall be glad of any occasion to render me more familiar to you.

STEPHEN. My name is master Stephen, sir; I am this gentleman's own cousin, sir; his father is mine uncle, sir: I am somewhat melancholy, but you shall command me, sir, in whatsoever is incident to a gentleman.

BOBADILL. Sir, I must tell you this, I am no general man; but for master Wellbred's sake, (you may embrace it at what height of favour you please,) I do communicate with you, and conceive you to be a gentleman of some parts; I love few words.

EDWARD KNOWELL. And I fewer, sir; I have scarce enough to thank you.

MATHEW. But are you, indeed, sir, so given to it?

STEPHEN. Ay, truly, sir, I am mightily given to melancholy.

MATHEW. Oh, it's your only fine humour, sir: your true melancholy breeds your perfect fine wit, sir. I am melancholy myself, diver times, sir, and then do I no more but take pen and paper, and overflow you half a score, or a dozen of sonnets at a sitting.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Sure he utters them then by the gross. [Aside.]

STEPHEN. Truly, sir, and I love such things out of measure.

EDWARD KNOWELL. I'faith, better than in measure, I'll undertake.

MATHEW. Why, I pray you, sir, make use of my study, it's at your service.

STEPHEN. I thank you, sir, I shall be bold I warrant you; have you a stool there to be melancholy upon?

MATHEW. That I have, sir, and some papers there of mine own doing, at idle hours, that you'll say there's some sparks of wit in 'em, when you see them.

WELLBRED. Would the sparks would kindle once, and become a fire amongst them! I might see self-love burnt for her heresy. [Aside.]

STEPHEN. Cousin, is it well? am I melancholy enough?

EDWARD KNOWELL. Oh ay, excellent.

WELLBRED. Captain Bobadill, why muse you so?

EDWARD KNOWELL. He is melancholy too.

BOBADILL. Faith, sir, I was thinking of a most honourable piece of service, was performed to-morrow, being St. Mark's day, shall be some ten years now.

EDWARD KNOWELL. In what place, captain?

BOBADILL. Why, at the beleaguering of Strigonium, where, in less than two hours, seven hundred resolute gentlemen, as any were in Europe, lost their lives upon the breach. I'll tell you, gentlemen, it was the first, but the best leaguer that ever I beheld with these eyes, except the taking in of—what do you call it? last year, by the Genoways; but that, of all other, was the most fatal and dangerous exploit that ever I was ranged in, since I first bore arms before the face of the enemy, as I am a gentleman and a soldier!

STEPHEN. So! I had as lief as an angel I could swear as well as that gentleman.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Then, you were a servitor at both, it seems; at Strigonium, and what do you call't?

BOBADILL. O lord, sir! By St. George, I was the first man that entered the breach; and had I not effected it with resolution, I had been slain if I had had a million of lives.

EDWARD KNOWELL. 'Twas pity you had not ten; a cat's and your own, i'faith. But, was it possible?

MATHEW. Pray you mark this discourse, sir.

STEPHEN. So I do.

BOBADILL. I assure you, upon my reputation, 'tis true, and yourself shall confess.

EDWARD KNOWELL. You must bring me to the rack, first.

[Aside.]

BOBADILL. Observe me judicially, sweet sir; they had planted me three demiculverins just in the mouth of the breach; now, sir, as we were to give on, their master-gunner [a man of no mean skill and mark, you must think,] confronts me with his linstock, ready to give fire; I, spying his intendment, discharged my petronel in his bosom, and with these single arms, my poor rapier, ran violently upon the Moors that guarded the ordnance, and put them pell-mell to the sword.

WELLBRED. To the sword! To the rapier, captain.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Oh, it was a good figure observed, sir: but did you all this, captain, without hurting your blade?

BOBADILL. Without any impeach o' the earth: you shall perceive, sir. [Shows his rapier.] It is the most fortunate weapon that ever rid on poor gentleman's thigh. Shall I tell you, sir? You talk of Morglay, Excalibur, Durindana, or so; tut! I lend no credit to that is fabled of 'em: I know the virtue of mine own, and therefore I dare the boddier maintain it.

STEPHEN. I marle whether it be a Toledo or no.

BOBADILL. A most perfect Toledo, I assure you, sir.

STEPHEN. I have a countryman of his here.

MATHEW. Pray you, let's see, sir; yes, faith, it is.

BOBADILL. This a Toledo! Pish!

STEPHEN. Why do you pish, captain?

BOBADILL. A Fleming, by heaven! I'll buy them for a guilder a-piece, an I would have a thousand of them.

EDWARD KNOWELL. How say you, cousin? I told you thus much.

WELLBRED. Where bought you it, master Stephen?

STEPHEN. Of a scurvy rogue soldier: a hundred of lice go with him! He swore it was a Toledo.

BOBADILL. A poor provant rapier, no better.

MATHEW. Mass, I think it be indeed, now I look on't better.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Nay, the longer you look on't, the worse. Put it up, put it up.

STEPHEN. Well, I will put it up; but by—I have forgot the captain's oath, I thought to have sworn by it—an e'er I meet him—

WELLBRED. O, it is past help now, sir; you must have patience.

STEPHEN. Whoreson, coney-hatching rascal! I could eat the very hilts for anger.

EDWARD KNOWELL. A sign of good digestion; you have an ostrich stomach, cousin.

STEPHEN. A stomach! would I had him here, you should see an I had a stomach.

WELLBRED. It's better as it is.—Come, gentlemen, shall we go?

[Enter BRAINWORM, disguised as before.]

EDWARD KNOWELL. A miracle, cousin; look here, look here!

STEPHEN. Oh—'Od's lid. By your leave, do you know me, sir?

BRAINWORM. Ay, sir, I know you by sight.

STEPHEN. You sold me a rapier, did you not?

BRAINWORM. Yes, marry did I, sir.

STEPHEN. You said it was a Toledo, ha?

BRAINWORM. True, I did so.

STEPHEN. But it is none.

BRAINWORM. No, sir, I confess it; it is none.

STEPHEN. Do you confess it? Gentlemen, bear witness, he has confest it:—'Od's will, an you had not confest it—

EDWARD KNOWELL. Oh, cousin, forbear, forbear!

STEPHEN. Nay, I have done, cousin.

WELLBRED. Why, you have done like a gentleman; he has confest it, what would you more?

STEPHEN. Yet, by his leave, he is a rascal, under his favour, do you see.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Ay, by his leave, he is, and under favour: a pretty piece of civility! Sirrah, how dost thou like him?

WELLBRED. Oh, it's a most precious fool, make much on him: I can compare him to nothing more happily than a drum; for every one may play upon him.

EDWARD KNOWELL. No, no, a child's whistle were far the fitter.

BRAINWORM. Shall I intreat a word with you?

EDWARD KNOWELL. With me, sir? you have not another Toledo to sell, have you?

BRAINWORM. You are conceited, sir: Your name is Master Knowell, as I take it?

EDWARD KNOWELL. You are in the right; you mean not to proceed in the catechism, do you?

BRAINWORM. No, sir; I am none of that coat.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Of as bare a coat, though: well, say, sir.

BRAINWORM [taking EDWARD KNOWELL aside]. Faith, sir, I am but servant to the drum extraordinary, and indeed, this smoky varnish being washed off, and three or four patches removed, I appear your worship's in reversion, after the decease of your good father, Brainworm.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Brainworm! 'Slight, what breath of a conjurer hath blown thee hither in this shape?

BRAINWORM. The breath of your letter, sir, this morning; the same that blew you to the Windmill, and your father after you.

EDWARD KNOWELL. My father!

BRAINWORM. Nay, never start, 'tis true; he has followed you over the fields by the foot, as you would do a hare in the snow.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Sirrah Wellbred, what shall we do, sirrah? my father is come over after me.

WELLBRED. Thy father! Where is he?

BRAINWORM. At justice Clement's house, in Coleman-street, where he but stays my return; and then—

WELLBRED. Who's this? Brainworm!

BRAINWORM. The same, sir.

WELLBRED. Why how, in the name of wit, com'st thou transmuted thus?

BRAINWORM. Faith, a device, a device; nay, for the love of reason, gentlemen, and avoiding the danger, stand not here; withdraw, and I'll tell you all.

WELLBRED. But art thou sure he will stay thy return?

BRAINWORM. Do I live, sir? what a question is that!

WELLBRED. We'll prorogue his expectation, then, a little: Brainworm, thou shalt go with us.—Come on, gentlemen.—Nay, I pray thee, sweet Ned, droop not; 'heart, an our wits be so wretchedly dull, that one old plodding brain can outstrip us all, would we were e'en prest to make porters of, and serve out the remnant of our days in Thames-street, or at Custom-house key, in a civil war against the carmen!

BRAINWORM. Amen, amen, amen, say I. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II—The Old Jewry. KITELY'S warehouse.

[Enter KITELY and CASH.]

KITELY. What says he, Thomas? did you speak with him?

CASH. He will expect you, sir, within this half hour.

KITELY. Has he the money ready, can you tell?

CASH. Yes, sir, the money was brought in last night.

KITELY. O, that is well; fetch me my cloak, my cloak!— [Exit CASH.]
Stay, let me see, an hour to go and come; Ay, that will be the least; and then 'twill be

An hour before I can dispatch with him, Or very near; well, I will say two hours. Two hours! ha! things never dreamt of yet,

May be contrived, ay, and effected too, In two hours' absence; well, I will not go. Two hours! No, fleeing Opportunity, I will not give your subtilty that scope. Who will not judge him worthy to be robb'd,

That sets his doors wide open to a thief, And shews the felon where his treasure lies?

Again, what earthly spirit but will attempt

To taste the fruit of beauty's golden tree, When leaden sleep seals up the dragon's eyes?

I will not go. Business, go by for once. No, beauty, no; you are of too good car-act,

To be left so, without a guard, or open. Your lustre, too, 'll inflame at any distance,

Draw courtship to you, as a jet doth straws;

Put motion in a stone, strike fire from ice,

Nay, make a porter leap you with his burden.

You must be then kept up, close, and well watch'd,

For, give you opportunity, no quick-sand Devours or swallows swifter! He that lends

His wife, if she be fair, or time or place, Compels her to be false. I will not go! The dangers are too many;—and then the dressing

Is a most main attractive! Our great heads

Within this city never were in safety
Since our wives wore these little caps:
I'll change 'em;

I'll change 'em straight in mine: mine shall no more

Wear three-piled acorns, to make my horns ake.
Nor will I go; I am resolved for that.

[Reënter CASH with a cloak.]

Carry in my cloak again. Yet stay. Yet do, too:

I will defer going, on all occasions.

CASH. Sir, Snare, your scrivener, will be there with the bonds.

KITELY. That's true: fool on me! I had clean forgot it;

I must go. What's a clock?

CASH. Exchange-time, sir.

KITELY. 'Heart, then will Wellbred presently be here too,

With one or other of his loose consorts.

I am a knave, if I know what to say, What course to take, or which way to resolve.

My brain, methinks, is like an hour-glass, Wherein my imaginations run like sands, Filling up time; but then are turn'd and turn'd:

So that I know not what to stay upon, And less, to put in act.—It shall be so.

Nay, I dare build upon his secrecy, He knows not to deceive me.—Thomas!

CASH. Sir.

KITELY. Yet now I have bethought me too, I will not.—

Thomas, is Cob within?

CASH. I think he be, sir.

KITELY. But he'll prate too, there is no speech of him.

No, there were no man on the earth to Thomas,

If I durst trust him; there is all the doubt.

But should he have a clink in him, I were gone.

Lost in my fame for ever, talk for th' Exchange!

The manner he hath stood with, till this present,

Doth promise no such change: what should I fear then?

Well, come what will, I'll tempt my fortune once.

Thomas—you may deceive me, but, I hope—

Your love to me is more—

CASH. Sir, if a servant's Duty, with faith, may be call'd love, you are

More than in hope, you are possess'd of it.

KITELY. I thank you heartily, Thomas:
give me your hand:

With all my heart, good Thomas. I have,
Thomas,

A secret to impart unto you—but,
When once you have it, I must seal your lips up;

So far I tell you, Thomas.

CASH. Sir, for that—

KITELY. Nay, hear me out. Think I esteem you, Thomas,

When I will let you in thus to my private.

It is a thing sits nearer to my crest,
Than thou art 'ware of, Thomas; if thou should'st

Reveal it, but—

CASH. How, I reveal it?

KITELY. Nay,

I do not think thou would'st; but if thou
should'st,

'Twere a great weakness.

CASH. A great treachery:
Give it no other name.

KITELY. Thou wilt not do't, then?

CASH. Sir, if I do, mankind disclaim me ever!

KITELY. He will not swear, he has some reservation,
Some conceal'd purpose, and close meaning sure;

Else, being urg'd so much, how should he choose

But lend an oath to all this protestation?
He's no precisian, that I'm certain of,
Nor rigid Roman Catholic: he'll play
At fayles, and tick-tack; I have heard him
swear.

What should I think of it? urge him
again,

And by some other way! I will do so.

Well, Thomas, thou hast sworn not to disclose:—

Yes, you did swear?

CASH. Not yet, sir, but I will,
Please you—

KITELY. No, Thomas, I dare take thy
word,

But, if thou wilt swear, do as thou think'st good;

I am resolv'd without it; at thy pleasure.

CASH. By my soul's safety then, sir, I protest,

My tongue shall ne'er take knowledge of a word

Deliver'd me in nature of your trust.

KITELY. It is too much; these ceremonies need not:

I know thy faith to be as firm as rock.

Thomas, come hither, near; we cannot be Too private in this business. So it is,—

Now he has sworn, I dare the safer venture. [Aside.]

I have of late, by divers observations—
But whether his oath can bind him, yea,

or no,
Being not taken lawfully? ha! say you?

I will ask council ere I do proceed:—

[Aside.]

Thomas, it will be now too long to stay,
I'll spy some fitter time soon, or tomorrow.

CASH. Sir, at your pleasure.

KITELY. I will think:—and, Thomas,
I pray you search the books 'gainst my
return,

For the receipts 'twixt me and Traps.

CASH. I will, sir.

KITELY. And hear you, if your mistress's brother, Wellbred,

Chance to bring hither any gentleman,
Ere I come back, let one straight bring me word.

CASH. Very well, sir.

KITELY. To the Exchange, do you hear?
Or here in Coleman-street, to justice
Clement's.

Forget it not, nor be not out of the way.

CASH. I will not, sir.

KITELY. I pray you have a care on't.
Or, whether he come or no, if any other,
Stranger, or else; fail not to send me
word.

CASH. I shall not, sir.

KITELY. Be it your special business
Now to remember it.

CASH. Sir, I warrant you.

KITELY. But, Thomas, this is not the secret, Thomas,

I told you of.

CASH. No, sir: I do suppose it.

KITELY. Believe me, it is not.

CASH. Sir, I do believe you.

KITELY. By heaven it is not, that's enough; but, Thomas,

I would not you should utter it, do you
see,

To any creature living; yet I care not.

Well, I must hence. Thomas, conceive thus much;

It was a trial of you, when I meant

So deep a secret to you, I mean not this,

But that I have to tell you; this is nothing, this.

But, Thomas, keep this from my wife, I charge you,

Lock'd up in silence, midnight, buried here.—

No greater hell than to be slave to fear.

[Exit.]

CASH. Lock'd up in silence, midnight, buried here!

Whence should this flood of passion, trow,
take head? ha!

Best dream no longer of this running humour,

For fear I sink; the violence of the stream
Already hath transported me so far,

That I can feel no ground at all: but soft—

Oh, 'tis our water-bearer: somewhat has crost him now.

[Enter COB, hastily.]

COB. Fasting-days! what tell you me of fasting-days? 'Slid, would they were all on a light fire for me! they say the whole world shall be consumed with fire one day, but would I had these Ember-weeks and villanous Fridays burnt in the mean time,
and then—

CASH. Why, how now, Cob? what moves thee to this cholera, ha?

COB. Collar, master Thomas! I scorn your collar, I, sir; I am none o' your cart-horse, though I carry and draw water.

An you offer to ride me with your collar or halter either, I may hap shew you a jade's trick, sir.

CASH. O, you'll slip your head out of the collar? why, Goodman Cob, you mistake me.

COB. Nay, I have my rheum, and I can be angry as well as another, sir.

CASH. Thy rheum, Cob! thy humour, thy humour—thou mistak'st.

COB. Humour! mack, I think it be so indeed; what is that humour? some rare thing, I warrant.

CASH. Marry I'll tell thee, Cob: it is a gentlemanlike monster, bred in the special gallantry of our time, by affectation; and fed by folly.

COB. How! must it be fed?

CASH. Oh ay, humour is nothing if it be not fed: didst thou never hear that?
it's a common phrase, feed my humour.

COB. I'll none on it: humour, avaunt!
I know you not, be gone! let who will make hungry meals for your monstrosity, it shall not be I. Feed you, quoth he!
'Slid, I have much ado to feed myself;
especially on these lean rascally days too;
an't had been any other day but a fasting-day—a plague on them all for me! By this light, one might have done the commonwealth good service, and have drown'd them all in the flood, two or three hundred thousand years ago. O, I do stomach them hugely. I have a maw now, and 'twere for sir Bevis his horse, against them.

CASH. I pray thee, good Cob, what makes thee so out of love with fasting
days?

COB. Marry, that which will make any man out of love with 'em. I think: their bad conditions, an you will needs know.
First, they are of a Flemish breed, I am sure on't, for they raven up more butter than all the days of the week beside; next,
they stink of fish and leek-porridge miserably; thirdly, they'll keep a man devoutly hungry all day, and at night send him supperless to bed.

CASH. Indeed, these are faults, Cob.

COB. Nay, an this were all, 'twere something; but they are the only known enemies to my generation. A fasting-day no sooner comes, but my lineage goes to wrack; poor cobs! they smook for it, they are made martyrs o' the gridiron, they melt in passion: and your maids to know this, and yet would have me turn Hannibal, and eat my own flesh and blood. My princely coz, [Pulls out a red herring.] fear nothing; I have not the heart to devour you, an I might be made as rich as king Cophetua. O that I had room for my tears, I could weep salt-water enough now to preserve the lives of ten thousand thousand of my kin! But I may curse none but these filthy almanacks; for an't were not for them, these days of persecution would never be known. I'll be hang'd an some fishmonger's son do not make of 'em, and puts in more fasting-days than he should do, because he would utter his father's dried stock-fish and stinking conger.

CASH. 'Slight peace! thou'lt be beaten like a stock-fish else: here's master Mathew.

[Enter WELLBRED, EDWARD KNOWELL, BRAINWORM, MATHEW, BOBADILL, and STEPHEN.]

Now must I look out for a messenger to my master. [Exit with COB.]

WELLBRED. Beshrew me, but it was an absolute good jest, and exceedingly well carried!

EDWARD KNOWELL. Ay, and our ignorance maintain'd it as well, did it not?

WELLBRED. Yes, faith; but was it possible thou shouldst not know him? I forgive master, Stephen, for he is stupidity itself.

EDWARD KNOWELL. 'Fore God, not I, an I might have been join'd patten with one of the seven wise masters for knowing him. He had so writhen himself into the habit of one of your poor infantry, your decayed, ruinous, worm-eaten gentlemen of the round; such as have vowed to sit on the skirts of the city, let your provost and his half-dozen of halberdiers do what they can; and have translated begging out of the old hackney-pace to a fine easy amble, and made it run as smooth off the tongue as a shove-groat shilling. Into the likeness of one of these reformados had he moulded himself so perfectly, observing every trick of their action, as, varying the accent, swearing with an emphasis, indeed, all with so special and exquisite a grace, that, hadst thou seen him, thou wouldst have sworn he might have been serjeant-major, if not lieutenant-colonel to the regiment.

WELLBRED. Why, Brainworm, who would have thought thou hadst been such an artificer?

EDWARD KNOWELL. An artificer! an architect. Except a man had studied begging all his life time, and been a weaver of language from his infancy for the cloathing of it, I never saw his rival.

WELLBRED. Where got'st thou this coat, I marle?

BRAINWORM. Of a Houndsditch man, sir, one of the devil's near kinsmen, a broker.

WELLBRED. That cannot be, if the proverb hold; for A crafty knave needs no broker,

BRAINWORM. True, sir; but I did need a broker, ergo—

WELLBRED. Well put off:—no crafty knave, you'll say.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Tut, he has more of these shifts.

BRAINWORM. And yet, where I have one the broker has ten, sir.

[Reënter CASH.]

CASH. Francis! Martin! ne'er a one to be found now? what a spite's this!

WELLBRED. How now, Thomas? Is my brother Kitley within?

CASH. No, sir, my master went forth e'en now; but master Downright is within.—Cob! what, Cob! Is he gone too?

WELLBRED. Whither went your master, Thomas, canst thou tell?

CASH. I know not: to justice Clement's, I think, sir—Cob! [Exit.]

EDWARD KNOWELL. Justice Clement! what's he?

WELLBRED. Why, dost thou not know him? He is a city-magistrate, a justice here, an excellent good lawyer, and a great scholar; but the only mad, merry old fellow in Europe. I shewed him you the other day.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Oh, is that he? I remember him now. Good faith, and he is a very strange presence methinks; it shews as if he stood out of the rank from other men: I have heard many of his jests in the University. They say he will commit a man for taking the wall of his horse.

WELLBRED. Ay, or wearing his cloak on one shoulder, or serving of God; any thing, indeed, if it come in the way of his humour.

[Reënter CASH.]

CASH. Gasper! Martin! Cob! 'Heart, where should they be, trow?

BOBADILL. Master Kitley's man, pray thee vouchsafe us the lighting of this match.

CASH. Fire on your match! no time but now to vouchsafef—Francis! Cob! [Exit.]

BOBADILL. Body o' me! here's the remainder of seven pound since yesterday was seven-night. 'Tis your right Trinidado: did you never take any, master Stephen?

STEPHEN. No, truly, sir; but I'll learn to take it now, since you commend it so.

BOBADILL. Sir, believe me, upon my relation for what I tell you, the world shall not reprove. I have been in the Indies, where this herb grows, where neither myself, nor a dozen gentlemen more of my knowledge, have received the taste of any other nutriment in the world, for the space of one and twenty weeks, but the fume of this simple only: therefore, it cannot be, but 'tis most divine. Further, take it in the nature, in the true kind; so, it makes an antidote, that, had you taken the most deadly poisonous plant in all Italy, it should expel it, and clarify you, with as much ease as I speak. And for your green wound,—your Balsamum and your St. John's wort, are all mere gulleries and trash to it, especially your Trinidado: your Nicotian is good too. I could say what I know of the virtue of it, for the expulsion of rheums, raw humours, crudities, obstructions, with a thousand of this kind; but I profess myself no quack-salver. Only thus much; by Hercules, I do hold it, and will affirm it before any prince in Europe, to be the most sovereign and precious weed that ever the earth tendered to the use of man.

EDWARD KNOWELL. This speech would have done decently in a tobacco-trader's mouth.

[Reënter CASH with COB.]

CASH. At justice Clement's he is, in the middle of Coleman-street.

COB. Oh, oh!

BOBADILL. Where's the match I gave thee, master Kitley's man?

CASH. Would his match and he, and pipe and all, were at Sancto Domingo! I had forgot it. [Exit.]

COB. 'Od's me, I marle what pleasure or felicity they have in taking this roguish tobacco. It's good for nothing but to choke a man, and fill him full of smoke and embers: there were four died out of one house last week with taking of it, and two more the bell went for yesternight; one of them, they say, will never scape it; he voided a bushel of soot yesterday, upward and downward. By the stocks, an there were no wiser men than I, I'd have it present whipping, man or woman, that should but deal with a tobacco pipe: why, it will stife them all in the end, as many as use it; it's little better than ratsbane or rosaker. [BOBADILL beats him.]

ALL. Oh, good captain. hold, hold!

BOBADILL. You base cullion, you!

[Reënter CASH.]

CASH. Sir, here's your match. Come, thou must needs be talking too, thou'rt well enough served.

COB. Nay, he will not meddle with his match, I warrant you: well, it shall be a dear beating, an I live.

BOBADILL. Do you prate, do you murmur?

EDWARD KNOWELL. Nay, good captain, will you regard the humour of a fool? Away, knave.

WELLBRED. Thomas, get him away.

[Exit CASH with COB.]

BOBADILL. A whoreson filthy slave, a dung-worm, an excrement! Body o' Cæsar, but that I scorn to let forth so mean a spirit, I'd have stabb'd him to the earth.

WELLBRED. Marry, the law forbid, sir!

BOBADILL. By Pharaoh's foot, I would have done it.

STEPHEN. Oh, he swears most admirably! By Pharaoh's foot! Body o' Cæsar!—I shall never do it, sure. Upon mine honour, and by St. George!—No, I have not the right grace.

MATHEW. Master Stephen, will you any? By this air, the most divine tobacco hat ever I drunk.

STEPHEN. None, I thank you, sir. O, this gentleman does it rarely too: but nothing like the other. By this air! [Practises at the post.] As I am a gentleman! By—

[Execunt BOBADILL and MATHEW.]

BRAINWORM [pointing to MASTER STEPHEN]. Master, glance, glance! master Wellbred!

STEPHEN. As I have somewhat to be saved, I protest—

WELLBRED. You are a fool; it needs no affidavit.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Cousin, will you any tobacco?

STEPHEN. I, sir! Upon my reputation—

EDWARD KNOWELL. How now, cousin!

STEPHEN. I protest, as I am a gentleman, but no soldier, indeed—

WELLBRED. No, master Stephen! As I remember, your name is entered in the artillery-garden.

STEPHEN. Ay, sir, that's true. Cousin, may I swear, as I am a soldier, by that?

EDWARD KNOWELL. O yes, that you may; it is all you have for your money.

STEPHEN. Then, as I am a gentleman, and a soldier, it is "divine tobacco!"

WELLBRED. But soft, where's master Mathew? Gone?

BRAINWORM. No, sir; they went in here.

WELLBRED. O let's follow them: master Mathew is gone to salute his mistress in verse; we shall have the happiness to hear some of his poetry now; he never comes unfinished.—Brainworm!

STEPHEN. Brainworm! Where? Is this Brainworm?

EDWARD KNOWELL. Ay, cousin; no words of it, upon your gentility.

STEPHEN. Not I, body of me! By this air! St. George! and the foot of Pharaoh!

WELLBRED. Rare! Your cousin's discourse is simply drawn out with oaths.

EDWARD KNOWELL. 'Tis larded with them; a kind of French dressing, if you love it. [Execunt.]

SCENE III—Coleman-street. A room in JUSTICE CLEMENT'S house.

[Enter KITELY and COB.]

KITELY. Ha! how many are there, say'st thou?

COB. Marry, sir, your brother, master Wellbred—

KITELY. Tut, beside him: what strangers are there, man?

COB. Strangers? let me see, one, two; mass, I know not well, there are so many.

KITELY. How! so many?

COB. Ay, there's some five or six of them at the most.

KITELY. A swarm, a swarm! Spite of the devil, how they sting my head

With forked stings, thus wide and large!

But, Cob,

How long hast thou been coming hither, Cob?

COB. A little while, sir.

KITELY. Didst thou come running?

COB. No, sir.

KITELY. Nay, then I am familiar with thy haste.

Bane to my fortunes! what meant I to marry?

I, that before was rank'd in such content, My mind at rest too, in so soft a peace,

Being free master of mine own free thoughts,

And now become a slave? What! never sigh;

Be of good cheer, man; for thou art a cuckold:

'Tis done, 'tis done! Nay, when such flowing-store,

Plenty itself, falls into my wife's lap, The cornucopiæ will be mine, I know.—

But, Cob,

What entertainment had they? I am sure My sister and my wife would bid them welcome: ha?

Cob. Like enough, sir; yet I heard not a word of it.

KITELY. No;

Their lips were seal'd with kisses, and the voice,

Drown'd in a flood of joy at their arrival, Had lost her motion, state and faculty.— Cob,

Which of them was it that first kiss'd my wife,

My sister, I should say?—My wife, alas! I fear not her: ha! who was it say'st thou?

Cob. By my troth, sir, will you have the truth of it?

KITELY. Oh, ay, good Cob, I pray thee heartily.

Cob. Then I am a vagabond, and fitter for Bridewell than your worship's company, if I saw any body to be kiss'd, unless they would have kiss'd the post in the middle of the warehouse; for there I left them all at their tobacco, with a pox!

KITELY. How! were they not gone in thre ere thou cam'st?

Cob. O no, sir.

KITELY. Spite of the devil! what do I stay here then? Cob, follow me. [Exit.]

Cob. Nay, soft and fair; I have eggs on the spit; I cannot go yet, sir. Now am I, for some five and fifty reasons, hammering, hammering revenge; O for three or four gallons of vinegar, to sharpen my wits! Revenge, vinegar revenge, vinegar and mustard revenge! Nay, an he had not lien in my house, 'twould never have grieved me; but being my guest, one that,

I'll be sworn, my wife has lent him her smock off her back, while his own shirt has been at washing; pawned her neckerchers for clean bands for him; sold almost all my platters, to buy him tobacco; and he to turn monster of ingratitude, and strike his lawful host! Well, I hope to raise up an host of fury for't: here comes justice Clement.

[Enter JUSTICE CLEMENT, KNOWELL, and FORMAL.]

CLEMENT. What's master Kitley gone, Roger?

FORMAL. Ay, sir.

CLEMENT. Heart o' me! what made him leave us so abruptly?—How now, sirrah! what make you here? what would you have, ha?

Cob. An't please your worship, I am a poor neighbour of your worship's—

CLEMENT. A poor neighbour of mine! Why, speak, poor neighbour.

Cob. I dwell, sir, at the sign of the Water-tankard, hard by the Green Lattice: I have paid scot and lot there any time this eighteen years.

CLEMENT. To the Green Lattice?

Cob. No, sir, to the parish: Marry, I have seldom scaped scot-free at the Lattice.

CLEMENT. O, well; what business has my poor neighbour with me?

Cob. An't like your worship, I am come to crave the peace of your worship.

CLEMENT. Of me, knave! Peace of me, knave! Did I ever hurt thee, or threaten thee, or wrong thee, ha?

Cob. No, sir; but your worship's warrant for one that has wrong'd me, sir: his arms are at too much liberty, I would fain have them bound to a treaty of peace, an my credit could compass it with your worship.

CLEMENT. Thou goest far enough about for't, I am sure.

KNOWELL. Why, dost thou go in danger of thy life for him, friend?

Cob. No, sir; but I go in danger of my death every hour, by his means; an I die within a twelve-month and a day, I may swear by the law of the land that he killed me.

CLEMENT. How, how, knave, swear he killed thee, and by the law? What pretence, what colour hast thou for that?

COB. Marry, an't please your worship, both black and blue: colour enough, I warrant you. I have it here to shew your worship.

CLEMENT. What is he that gave you this, sirrah?

COB. A gentleman and a soldier, he says, he is, of the city here.

CLEMENT. A soldier of the city! What call you him?

COB. Captain Bobadill.

CLEMENT. Bobadill! and why did he bob and beat you, sirrah? How began the quarrel betwixt you, ha? speak truly, knave, I advise you.

COB. Marry, indeed, an't please your worship, only because I spake against their vagrant tobacco, as I came by them when they were taking on't; for nothing else.

CLEMENT. Ha! you speak against tobacco? Formal, his name.

FORMAL. What's your name, sirrah?

COB. Oliver, sir, Oliver Cob, sir.

CLEMENT. Tell Oliver Cob he shall go to the jail, Formal.

FORMAL. Oliver Cobb, my master, justice Clement, says you shall go to the jail.

COB. O, I beseech your worship, for God's sake, dear master justice!

CLEMENT. 'Sprecious! an such drunkards and tankards as you are, come to dispute of tobacco once, I have done: away with him!

COB. O, good master justice! Sweet old gentleman!

[To KNOWELL.]

KNOWELL. "Sweet Oliver," would I could do thee any good!—justice Clement, let me intreat you, sir.

CLEMENT. What! a thread-bare rascal, a beggar, a slave that never drunk out of better than piss-pot metal in his life! and he to deprave and abuse the virtue of an herb so generally received in the courts of princes, the chambers of nobles, the bowers of sweet ladies, the cabins of soldiers!—

Roger, away with him! 'Od's precious—I say, go to.

COB. Dear master justice, let me be beaten again, I have deserved it: but not the prison, I beseech you.

KNOWELL. Alas, poor Oliver!

CLEMENT. Roger, make him a warrant—he shall not go, I but fear the knave.

FORMAL. Do not stink, sweet Oliver, you shall not go; my master will give you a warrant.

COB. O, the Lord maintain his worship, his worthy worship!

CLEMENT. Away, dispatch him. [Exeunt FORMAL and COB.] How now, master Knowell, in dumps, in dumps! Come, this becomes not.

KNOWELL. Sir, would I could not feel my cares.

CLEMENT. Your cares are nothing: they are like my cap, soon put on, and as soon put off. What! your son is old enough to govern himself: let him run his course, it's the only way to make him a staid man. If he were an unthrift, a ruffian, a drunkard, or a licentious liver, then you had reason; you had reason to take care: but, being none of these, mirth's my witness, an I had twice so many cares as you have, I'd drown them all in a cup of sack. Come, come, let's try it: I muse your parcel of a soldier returns not all this while. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV

SCENE I—A room in KITELY'S house.

[Enter DOWNRIGHT and DAME KITELY.]

DOWNRIGHT. Well, sister, I tell you true; and you'll find it so in the end.

DAME KITELY. Alas, brother, what would you have me to do? I cannot help it; you see my brother brings them in here; they are his friends.

DOWNRIGHT. His friends! his fiends. 'Slud! they do nothing but haunt him up and down like a sort of unlucky spirits, and tempt him to all manner of villainy that can be thought of. Well, by this light, a little thing would make me play the devil with some of them: an 'twere not more for your husband's sake than any thing else, I'd make the house too hot for the best on 'em; they should say, and swear, hell were broken loose, ere they went hence. But, by God's will, 'tis nobody's fault but yours; for as you had done as you might have done, they should have been parboiled, and baked too, every mother's son, ere they should have come in, e'er a one of them.

DAME KITELY. God's my life! did you ever hear the like? what a strange man is this! Could I keep out all them, think you? I should put myself against half a dozen men, should I? Good faith, you'd mad the patien't body in the world, to hear you talk so, without any sense or reason.

[Enter MISTRESS BRIDGET, MASTER MATHEW, and BOBADILL; followed, at a distance, by WELLBRED, EDWARD KNOWELL, STEPHEN, and BRAINWORM.]

BRIDGET. Servant, in troth you are too prodigal
Of your wit's treasure, thus to pour it forth

Upon so mean a subject as my worth.

MATHEW. You say well, mistress, and I mean as well.

DOWNRIGHT. Hoy-day, here is stuff!

WELLBRED. O, now stand close; pray Heaven, she can get him to read! he should do it of his own natural impudency.

BRIDGET. Servant, what is this same, I pray you?

MATHEW. Marry, an elegy, an elegy, an odd toy—

DOWNRIGHT. To mock an ape withal! O, I could sew up his mouth, now.

DAME KITELY. Sister, I pray you let's hear it.

DOWNRIGHT. Are you rhyme-given too?

MATHEW. Mistress, I'll read it if you please.

BRIDGET. Pray you do, servant.

DOWNRIGHT. O, here's no foppery! Death! I can endure the stocks better.

[Exit.]

EDWARD KNOWELL. What ails thy brother? can he not hold his water at reading of a ballad?

WELLBRED. O, no; a rhyme to him is worse than cheese, or a bag-pipe; but mark; you lose the protestation.

MATHEW. Faith, I did it in a humour; I know not how it is; but please you come near, sir. This gentleman has judgment, he knows how to censure of a— pray you, sir, you can judge?

STEPHEN. Not I, sir; upon my reputation, and by the foot of Pharaoh!

WELLBRED. O, chide your cousin for swearing.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Not I, so long as he does not forswear himself.

BOBADILL. Master Mathew, you abuse the expectation of your dear mistress, and her fair sister: fie! while you live avoid this prolixity.

MATHEW. I shall, sir, well; incipere dulce.

EDWARD KNOWELL. How, insipere dulce! a sweet thing to be a fool, indeed!

WELLBRED. What, do you take incipere in that sense?

EDWARD KNOWELL. You do not, you! This was your villainy, to gull him with a motte.

WELLBRED. O, the benchers' phrase: pauca verba, pauca verba!

MATHEW. Rare creature, let me speak without offence,

Would God my rude words had the influence

To rule thy thoughts, as thy fair looks do mine,

Then shouldst thou be his prisoner, who is thine.

EDWARD KNOWELL. This is Hero and Leander.

WELLBRED. O, ay; peace, we shall have more of this.

MATHEW. Be not unkind and fair: misshapen stuff

Is of behaviour boisterous and rough.

WELLBRED. How like you that, sir?

[Master STEPHEN shakes his head.]

EDWARD KNOWELL. 'Slight, he shakes

his head like a bottle, to feel an there be any brain in it.

MATHEW. But observe the catastrophe, now:

And I in duty will exceed all other,
As you in beauty do excel Love's mother.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Well, I'll have him free of the wit-brokers, for he utters nothing but stolen remnants.

WELLBRED. O, forgive it him.

EDWARD KNOWELL. A filching rogue, hang him!—and from the dead! it's worse than sacrilege.

[WELLBRED, EDWARD KNOWELL, and MASTER STEPHEN, come forward.]

WELLBRED. Sister, what have you here, verses? pray you let's see: who made these verses? they are excellent good.

MATHEW. O, Master Wellbred, 'tis your disposition to say so, sir. They were good in the morning: I made them ex tempore this morning.

WELLBRED. How! ex tempore?

MATHEW. Ay, would I might be hanged else: ask Captain Bobadill: he saw me write them, at the—pox on it!—the Star, yonder.

BRAINWORM. Can he find in his heart to curse the stars so?

EDWARD KNOWELL. Faith, his are even with him; they have curst him enough already.

STEPHEN. Cousin, how do you like this gentleman's verses?

EDWARD KNOWELL. O, admirable! the best that ever I heard, coz.

STEPHEN. Body o' Cæsar, they are admirable! the best that I ever heard, as I am a soldier!

[Reënter DOWNRIGHT.]

DOWNRIGHT. I am vext, I can hold ne'er a bone of me still: 'Heart, I think they mean to build and breed here.

WELLBRED. Sister, you have a simple servant here, that crowns your beauty with such encomiums and devices; you may see what it is to be the mistress of a wit, that can make your perfections so transparent, that every blear eye may look through them, and see him drowned over head and ears in the deep well of desire: Sister Kately, I marvel you get you not a servant that can rhyme, and do tricks too.

DOWNRIGHT. O monster! impudence itself! tricks!

DAME KITELY. Tricks, brother! what tricks?

BRIDGET. Nay, speak, I pray you what tricks?

DAME KITELY. Ay, never spare any body here; but say, what tricks?

BRIDGET. Passion of my heart, do tricks!

WELLBRED. 'Slight, here's a trick vied and revied! Why, you monkeys, you, what a cater-wauling do you keep! has he not given you rhymes and verses and tricks?

DOWNRIGHT. O, the fiend!

WELLBRED. Nay, you lamp of virginity, that take it in snuff so, come, and cherish this tame poetical fury in your servant; you'll be begg'd else shortly for a concealment: go to, reward his muse. You cannot give him less than a shilling in conscience, for the book he had it out of cost him a teston at least. How now, gallants! Master Mathew! Captain! what, all sons of silence, no spirit?

DOWNRIGHT. Come, you might practise your ruffian tricks somewhere else, and not here, I wuss; this is no tavern or drinking-school, to vent your exploits in.

WELLBRED. How now; whose cow has calved?

DOWNRIGHT. Marry, that has mine, sir. Nay, boy, never look askance at me for the matter; I'll tell you of it, I, sir; you and your companions mend yourselves when I have done.

WELLBRED. My companions!

DOWNRIGHT. Yes, sir, your companions, so I say; I am not afraid of you, nor them neither; your hang-byes here. You must have your poets and your potlings, your soldados and foolados to follow you up and down the city; and here they must come to domineer and swagger. Sirrah, you ballad-singer, and slops your fellow there, get you out, get you home; or by this steel, I'll cut off your ears, and that presently.

WELLBRED. 'Slight, stay, let's see what he dare do; cut off his ears! cut a whetstone. You are an ass, do you see; touch any man here, and by this hand I'll run my rapier to the hilts in you.

DOWNRIGHT. Yea, that would I fain see, boy. [They all draw.]

DAME KITELY. O Jesu! murder! Thomas!—Gasper!

BRIDGET. Help, help! Thomas!

[Enter CASH and some of the house to part them.]

EDWARD KNOWELL. Gentlemen, forbear, I pray you.

BOBADILL. Well, sirrah, you Holofernes; by my hand, I will pink your flesh full of holes with my rapier for this; I will, by this good heaven! nay, let him come, let him come, gentlemen; by the body of St. George, I'll not kill him.

[Offer to fight again, and are parted.]

CASH. Hold, hold, good gentlemen.

DOWNRIGHT. You whoreson, bragging coystril!

[Enter KITELY.]

KITELY. Why, how now! what's the matter, what's the stir here? Whence springs the quarrel? Thomas! where is he?

Put up your weapons, and put off this rage:

My wife and sister, they are the cause of this.

What, Thomas! where is the knave?

CASH. Here, sir.

WELLBRED. Come, let's go: this is one of my brother's ancient humours, this.

STEPHEN. I am glad nobody was hurt by his ancient humour.

[Exeunt WELLBRED, STEPHEN, EDWARD KNOWELL, BOBADILL, and BRAINWORM.]

KITELY. Why, how now, brother, who enforced this brawl?

DOWNRIGHT. A sort of lewd rake-hells, that care neither for God nor the devil.

And they must come here to read ballads, and roguery, and trash! I'll mar the knot of 'em ere I sleep, perhaps; especially Bob there, he that's all manner of shapes: and songs and sonnets, his fellow.

BRIDGET. Brother, indeed you are too violent, Too sudden in your humour: and you know

My brother Wellbred's temper will not bear

Any reproof, chiefly in such a presence, Where every slight disgrace he should receive Might wound him in opinion and respect.

DOWNRIGHT. Respect! what talk you of respect among such, as have no spark of manhood, nor good manners? 'Sdeins, I am ashamed to hear you! respect! [Exit.]

BRIDGET. Yes, there was one a civil gentleman, And very worthily demeaned himself.

KITELY. O, that was some love of yours, sister.

BRIDGET. A love of mine! I would it were no worse, brother; You'd pay my portion sooner than you think for.

DAME KITELY. Indeed he seem'd to be a gentleman of a very exceeding fair disposition, and of excellent good parts.

[Exeunt DAME KITELY and BRIDGET.]

KITELY. Her love, by heaven! my wife's minion.

Fair disposition! excellent good parts!

Death! these phrases are intolerable.

Good parts! how should she know his parts?

His parts! Well, well, well, well, well, well;

It is too plain, too clear: Thomas, come hither.

What, are they gone?

CASH. Ay, sir, they went in. My mistress and your sister—

KITELY. Are any of the gallants within?

CASH. No, sir, they are all gone.

KITELY. Art thou sure of it?

CASH. I can assure you, sir.

KITELY. What gentleman was that they praised so, Thomas?

CASH. One, they call him Master Knowell, a handsome young gentleman, sir.

KITELY. Ay, I thought so; my mind gave me as much:

I'll die, but they have hid him in the house,

Somewhere, I'll go and search; go with me, Thomas:

Be true to me, and thou shalt find me a master. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II—The lane before COB's house.

[Enter COB.]

COBS [knocks at the door]. What, Tib! Tib, I say!

TIB [within]. How now, what cuckold is that knocks so hard?

[Enter TIB.]

O, husband! is it you? What's the news?

COB. Nay, you have stunn'd me, i'faith; you have given me a knock o' the forehead will stick by me. Cuckold! 'Slid, cuckold!

TIB. Away, you fool! did I know it was you that knocked? Come, come, you may call me as bad when you list.

COB. May I? Tib, you are a whore.

TIB. You lie in your throat, husband.

COB. How, the lie! and in my throat too! do you long to be stabb'd, ha?

TIB. Why, you are no soldier, I hope.

COB. O, must you be stabbed by a soldier? Mass, that's true! when was Bobadill here, your captain? that rogue, that foist, that fencing Burgullion? I'll tickle him, i'faith.

TIB. Why, what's the matter, trow?

COB. O, he has basted me rarely, sumptuously! but I have it here in black and white, [pulls out the warrant.] for his black and blue shall pay him. O, the justice, the honestest old brave Trojan in London; I do honour the very flea of his dog. A plague on him, though, he put me once in a villanous filthy fear; marry, it vanished away like the smoke of tobacco; but I was smoked soundly first. I think the devil, and his good angel, my guest. Well, wife, or Tib, which you will, get you in, and lock the door; I charge you let nobody in to you, wife; nobody in to you; those are my words: not Captain Bob himself, nor the fiend in his likeness. You are a woman, you have flesh and blood enough in you to be tempted; therefore keep the door shut upon all comers.

TIB. I warrant you, there shall nobody enter here without my consent.

COB. Nor with your consent, sweet Tib; and so I leave you.

TIB. It's more than you know, whether you leave me so.

COB. How?

TIB. Why, sweet.

COB. Tut, sweet or sour, thou art a flower.

Keep close thy door, I ask no more.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III—A room in the Windmill Tavern.

[Enter EDWARD KNOWELL, WELLBRED, STEPHEN, and BRAINWORM, disguised as before.]

EDWARD KNOWELL. Well, Brainworm, perform this business happily, and thou makest a purchase of my love for ever.

WELLBRED. I'faith, now let thy spirits use their best faculties: but, at any hand, remember the message to my brother; for there's no other means to start him.

BRAINWORM. I warrant you, sir: fear nothing; I have a nimble soul has waked all forces of my phant'sie by this time, and put them in true motion. What you have possess me withal, I'll discharge it amply, sir; make it no question. [Exit.]

WELLBRED. Forth, and prosper, Brainworm. Faith, Ned, how dost thou approve of my abilities in this device?

EDWARD KNOWELL. Troth, well, howsoever; but it will come excellent if it take.

WELLBRED. Take, man! why it cannot choose but take, if the circumstances miscarry not: but, tell me ingenuously, dost thou affect my sister Bridget as thou pretend'st?

EDWARD KNOWELL. Friend, am I worth belief?

WELLBRED. Come, do not protest. In faith, she is a maid of good ornament, and much modesty; and, except I conceived very worthy of her, thou should'st not have her.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Nay, that I am afraid, will be a question yet, whether I shall have her, or no.

WELLBRED. 'Slid, thou shalt have her; by this light thou shalt.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Nay, do not swear.

WELLBRED. By this hand thou shalt have her; I'll go fetch her presently. 'Point but where to meet, and as I am an honest man I'll bring her.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Hold, hold, be temperate.

WELLBRED. Why, by—what shall I swear by? thou shalt have her, as I am—

EDWARD KNOWELL. Praythee, be at peace, I am satisfied; and do believe thou wilt omit no offered occasion to make my desires complete.

WELLBRED. Thou shalt see, and know, I will not. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV—The Old Jewry.

[Enter FORMAL and KNOWELL.]

FORMAL. Was your man a soldier, sir?

KNOWELL. Ay, a knave; I took him begging o' the way, this morning, As I came over Moorfields.

[Enter BRAINWORM, disguised as before.]
O, here he is!—you've made fair speed, believe me,
Where, in the name of sloth, could you be thus?

BRAINWORM. Marry, peace be my comfort, where I thought I should have had little comfort of your worship's service.

KNOWELL. How so?

BRAINWORM. O, sir, your coming to the city, your entertainment of me, and your sending me to watch—indeed all the circumstances either of your charge, or my employment, are as open to your son, as to yourself.

KNOWELL. How should that be, unless that villain, Brainworm, Have told him of the letter, and discover'd

All that I strictly charg'd him to conceal? 'Tis so.

BRAINWORM. I am partly o' the faith, 'tis so, indeed.

KNOWELL. But, how should he know thee to be my man?

BRAINWORM. Nay, sir, I cannot tell; unless it be by the black art. Is not your son a scholar, sir?

KNOWELL. Yes, but I hope his soul is not allied

Unto such hellish practice: if it were, I had just cause to weep my part in him, And curse the time of his creation.

But, where didst thou find them, Fitz-Sword?

BRAINWORM. You should rather ask where they found me, sir; for I'll be sworn, I was going along in the street, thinking nothing, when, of a sudden, a voice calls, Mr. Knowell's man! another cries, Soldier! and thus half a dozen of them, till they had call'd me within a house, where I no sooner came, but they seem'd men, and out flew all their rapiers at my bosom, with some three or four score oaths to accompany them; and all to tell me, I was but a dead man, if I did not confess where you were, and how I was employed, and about what; which when they could not get out of me (as, I protest, they must have dissected, and made an anatomy of me first, and so I told them), they lock'd me up into a room in the top of a high house, whence by great miracle (having a light heart) I slid down by a bottom of packthread into the street, and so 'scaped. But, sir, thus much I can assure you, for I heard it while I was lock'd up, there were a great many rich merchants and brave citizens' wives with them at a feast; and your son, master Edward, withdrew with one of them, and has 'pointed to meet her anon at one Cob's house a water-bearer that dwells by the Wall. Now, there your worship shall be sure to take him, for there he preys, and fail he will not.

KNOWELL. Nor will I fail to break his match, I doubt not.

Go thou along with justice Clement's man,

And stay there for me. At one Cob's house, say'st thou?

BRAINWORM. Ay, sir, there you shall have him. [Exit KNOWELL.] Yes—invisible! Much wench, or much son! 'Slight, when he has staid there three or four hours, travailing with the expectation of wonders, and at length be deliver'd of air! O the sport that I should then take to look on him, if I durst! But now, I mean to appear no more afore him in this shape: I have another trick to act yet. O that I were so happy as to light on a nupson now of this justice's novice!—Sir, I make you stay somewhat long.

FORMAL. Not a whit, sir. Pray you what do you mean, sir?

BRAINWORM. I was putting up some papers.

FORMAL. You have been lately in the wars, sir, it seems.

BRAINWORM. Marry have I, sir, to my loss, and expense of all, almost.

FORMAL. Troth, sir, I would be glad to bestow a bottle of wine on you, if it please you to accept it—

BRAINWORM. O, sir—

FORMAL. But to hear the manner of your services, and your devices in the wars; they say they be very strange, and not like those a man reads in the Roman histories, or sees at Mile-end.

BRAINWORM. No, I assure you, sir; why at any time when it please you, I shall be ready to discourse to you all I know;—and more too somewhat. [Aside.]

FORMAL. No better time than now, sir; we'll go to the Windmill: there we shall have a cup of neat grist, we call it. I pray you, sir, let me request you to the Windmill.

BRAINWORM. I'll follow you, sir;—and make grist of you, if I have good luck. [Aside.]

SCENE V—Moorfields.

[Enter MATHEW, EDWARD KNOWELL, BOBADILL, and STEPHEN.]

MATHEW. Sir, did your eyes ever taste the like clown of him where we were to-day, Mr. Wellbred's half-brother? I think the whole earth cannot shew his parallel, by this daylight.

EDWARD KNOWELL. We were now speaking of him: captain Bobadill tells me he is fallen foul of you too.

MATHEW. O, ay, sir, he threatened me with the bastinado.

BOBADILL. Ay, but I think, I taught you prevention this morning, for that: You shall kill him beyond question; if you be so generously minded.

MATHEW. Indeed, it is a most excellent trick.

[Fences.]
BOBADILL. O, you do not give spirit enough to your motion, you are too tardy, too heavy! O, it must be done like lightning, hay!

[Practises at a post with his cudgel.]

MATHEW. Rare, captain!

BOBADILL. Tut! 'tis nothing, an't be not done in a—punto.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Captain, did you ever prove yourself upon any of our masters of defence here?

MATHEW. O good sir! yes, I hope he has.

BOBADILL. I will tell you, sir. Upon my first coming to the city, after my long travel for knowledge, in that mystery only, there came three or four of them to me, at a gentleman's house, where it was my chance to be resident at that time, to in-treat my presence at their schools: and withal so much importuned me, that I protest to you, as I am a gentleman, I was ashamed of their rude demeanour out of all measure: Well, I told them that to come to a public school, they should pardon me, it was opposite, in diameter, to my humour; but if so be they would give their attendance at my lodging, I protested to do them what right or favour I could, as I was a gentleman, and so forth.

EDWARD KNOWELL. So, sir! then you tried their skill?

BOBADILL. Alas, soon tried: you shall hear, sir. Within two or three days after, they came; and, by honesty, fair sir, believe me, I graced them exceedingly, shewed them some two or three tricks of prevention have purchased them since a credit to admiration: they cannot deny this; and yet now they hate me, and why? because I am excellent; and for no other vile reason on the earth.

EDWARD KNOWELL. This is strange and barbarous, as ever I heard.

BOBADILL. Nay, for a more instance of their preposterous natures; but note, sir. They have assaulted me some three, four, five, six of them together, as I have walked alone in divers skirts i' the town, as Turnbull, Whitechapel, Shoreditch, which were then my quarters; and since, upon the Exchange, at my lodging, and at my ordinary: where I have driven them afore me the whole length of a street, in the open view of all our gallants, pitying to hurt them, believe me. Yet all this lenity will not overcome their spleen; they will be doing with the pismire, raising a hill a man may spurn abroad with his foot at pleasure. By myself, I could have slain them all, but I delight not in murder. I am loth to bear any other than this bastinado for them: yet I hold it good polity not to go disarmed, for though I be skilful, I may be oppressed with multitudes.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Ay, believe me, may you, sir: and in my conceit, our whole nation should sustain the loss by it, if it were so.

BOBADILL. Alas, no? what's a peculiar man to a nation? not seen.

EDWARD KNOWELL. O, but your skill, sir.

BOBADILL. Indeed, that might be some loss; but who respects it? I will tell you, sir, by the way of private, and under seal; I am a gentleman, and live here obscure, and to myself; but were I known to her majesty and the lords,—observe me.—I would undertake, upon this poor head and life, for the public benefit of the state, not only to spare the entire lives of her subjects in general; but to save the one half, nay, three parts of her yearly charge in holding war, and against what enemy soever. And how would I do it, think you?

EDWARD KNOWELL. Nay, I know not, nor can I conceive.

BOBADILL. Why thus, sir. I would select nineteen more, to myself, throughout the land; gentlemen they should be of good spirit, strong and able constitution: I would choose them by an instinct, a character that I have: and I would teach these nineteen the special rules, as your punto, your reverso, your stoccata, your imbroccato, your passada, your montanto: till they could all play very near, or altogether as well as myself. This done, say the enemy were forty thousand strong, we twenty would come into the field the tenth of March, or thereabouts; and we would challenge twenty of the enemy; they could not in their honour refuse us: Well, we would kill them: challenge twenty more, kill them: twenty more, kill them: twenty more, kill them too; and thus would we kill every man his twenty a day, that's twenty score: twenty score that's two hundred; two hundred a day, five days a thousand: forty thousand; forty times five, five times forty, two hundred days kills them all up by computation. And this will I venture my poor gentlemanlike carcase to perform, provided there be no treason practised upon us, by fair and discreet manhood: that is, civilly by the sword.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Why, are you so sure of your hand, captain, at all times?

BOBADILL. Tut! never miss thrust, upon my reputation with you.

EDWARD KNOWELL. I would not stand in Downright's state then, an you meet him, for the wealth of any one street in London.

BOBADILL. Why, sir, you mistake me: if he were here now, by this welkin, I would not draw my weapon on him. Let this gentleman do his mind: but I will bastinado him, by the bright sun, wherever I meet him.

MATHEW. Faith, and I'll have a fling at him, at my distance.

EDWARD KNOWELL. 'Ods, so, look where he is! yonder he goes.

[DOWNRIGHT crosses the stage.]

DOWNRIGHT. What peevish luck have I, I cannot meet with these bragging rascals?

BOBADILL. It is not he, is it?

EDWARD KNOWELL. Yes, faith, it is he.

MATHEW. I'll be hang'd then if that were he.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Sir, keep your hanging good for some greater matter, for I assure you that were he.

STEPHEN. Upon my reputation, it was he.

BOBADILL. Had I thought it had been he, he must not have gone so: but I can hardly be induced to believe it was he yet.

EDWARD KNOWELL. That I think, sir.

[Reënter DOWNRIGHT.]

But see, he is come again.

DOWNRIGHT. O, Pharaoh's foot, have I found you? Come, draw to your tools; draw, gipsy, or I'll thrash you.

BOBADILL. Gentleman of valour, I do believe in thee; hear me—

DOWNRIGHT. Draw your weapon then.

BOBADILL. Tall man, I never thought on it till now— Body of me, I had a warrant of the peace served on me, even now as I came along, by a water-bearer; this gentleman saw it, Master Mathew.

DOWNRIGHT. 'Sdeath! you will not draw then? [Disarms and beats him.]

MATHEW runs away.]

BOBADILL. Hold, hold! under thy favour forbear!

DOWNRIGHT. Prate again, as you like this, you whoreson foist you! You'll control the point, you! Your consort is gone; had he staid he had shared with you, sir.

[Exit.]

BOBADILL. Well, gentlemen, bear witness, I was bound to the peace, by this good day.

EDWARD KNOWELL. No, faith, it's an ill day, captain, never reckon it other: but, say you were bound to the peace, the law allows you to defend yourself: that will prove but a poor excuse.

BOBADILL. I cannot tell, sir; I desire good construction in fair sort. I never sustain'd the like disgrace, by heaven! sure I was struck with a planet thence, for I had no power to touch my weapon.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Ay, like enough; I have heard of many that have been beaten under a planet: go, get you to a surgeon. 'Slid! an these be your tricks, your passadoes, and your montantos, I'll none of them. [Exit BOBADILL.] O, manners! that this age should bring forth such creatures! that nature should be at leisure to make them! Come, coz.

STEPHEN. Mass, I'll have this cloak.

EDWARD KNOWELL. 'Od's will, 'tis Downright's.

STEPHEN. Nay, it's mine now, another might have ta'en it up as well as I: I'll wear it, so I will.

EDWARD KNOWELL. How an he see it? he'll challenge it, assure yourself.

STEPHEN. Ay, but he shall not have it: I'll say I bought it.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Take heed you buy it not too dear, coz. [Exit.]

SCENE IV—A room in KITELY's house.

[Enter KITELY, WELLBRED, DAME KITELY, and BRIDGET.]

KITELY. Now, trust me, brother, you were much to blame,

T' incense his anger, and disturb the peace

Of my poor house, where there are sentiments

That every minute watch to give alarms

Of civil war, without adjection

Of your assistance or occasion.

WELLBRED. No harm done, brother, I warrant you: since there is no harm done, anger costs a man nothing; and a tall man is never his own man till he be angry. To keep his valour in obscurity, is to keep himself as it were in a cloak-bag. What's a musician, unless he play? What's a tall man unless he fight? For, indeed, all this my wise brother stands upon absolutely; and that made me fall in with him so resolutely.

DAME KITELY. Ay, but what harm might have come of it, brother?

WELLBRED. Might, sister? so might the good warm clothes your husband wears be poisoned, for any thing he knows: or the wholesome wine he drank, even now at the table.

KITELY. Now, God forbid! O me! now I remember

My wife drank to me last, and changed the cup,

And bade me wear this cursed suit to-day. See, if Heaven suffer murder undiscover'd! I feel me ill; give me some mithridate, Some mithridate and oil, good sister, fetch me:

O, I am sick at heart, I burn, I burn. If you will save my life, go fetch it me.

WELLBRED. O strange humour! my very breath has poison'd him.

BRIDGET. Good brother, be content, what do you mean?

The strength of these extreme conceits will kill you.

DAME KITELY. Beshrew your heart-blood, brother Wellbred, now, For putting such a toy into his head!

WELLBRED. Is a fit simile a toy? will he be poison'd with a simile? Brother Kitely, what a strange and idle imagination is this! For shame, be wiser. O' my soul there's no such matter.

KITELY. Am I not sick? how am I then not poison'd? Am I not poison'd? how am I then so sick?

DAME KITELY. If you be sick, your own thoughts make you sick.

WELLBRED. His jealousy is the poison he has taken.

[Enter BRAINWORM, disguised in FORMAL'S clothes.]

BRAINWORM. Master Kitely, my master, justice Clement, salutes you; and desires to speak with you with all possible speed.

KITELY. No time but now, when I think

I am sick, very sick! well, I will wait upon his worship. Thomas!—Cob!—I must seek them out, and set them sentinels till I return. Thomas!—Cob!—Thomas!

[Exit.]

WELLBRED. This is perfectly rare, Brainworm; [takes him aside.] but how got'st thou this apparel of the justice's man?

BRAINWORM. Marry; sir, my proper fine pen-man would needs bestow the grist on me, at the Windmill, to hear some martial discourse; where I so marshall'd him, that I made him drunk with admiration: and, because too much heat was the cause of his distemper, I stript him stark naked as he lay along asleep, and borrowed his suit to deliver this counterfeit message in, leaving a rusty armour, and an old brown bill to watch him till my return; which shall be, when I have pawn'd his apparell, and spent the better part o' the money, perhaps.

WELLBRED. Well, thou art a successful merry knave, Brainworm: his absence will be a good subject for more mirth. I pray thee return to thy young master, and will him to meet me and my sister Bridget at the Tower instantly; for, here, tell him the house is so stored with jealousy, there is no room for love to stand upright in. We must get our fortunes committed to some larger prison, say; and than the Tower, I know no better air, nor where the liberty of the house may do us more present service. Away.

[Exit BRAINWORM.]

[Reënter KITELY, talking aside to CASH.]

KITELY. Come hither, Thomas. Now my secret's ripe,

And thou shalt have it: lay to both thine ears.

Hark what I say to thee. I must go forth, Thomas;

Be careful of thy promise, keep good watch,

Note every gallant, and observe him well, That enters in my absence to thy mistress: If she would shew him rooms, the jest is stale,

Follow them, Thomas, or else hang on him,
And let him not go after; mark their looks;

Note if she offer but to see his hand,
Or any other amorous toy about him;
But praise his leg, or foot: or if she say
The day is hot, and bid him feel her hand,
How hot it is; O, that's a monstrous thing!

Note me all this, good Thomas, mark their sighs,

And if they do but whisper, break 'em off:
I'll bear thee out in it. Wilt thou do this?

Wilt thou be true, my Thomas?

CASH. As truth's self, sir.

KITELY. Why, I believe thee: Where is Cob, now? Cob! [Exit.]

DAME KITELY. He's ever calling for Cob: I wonder how he employs Cob so.

WELLBRED. Indeed, sister, to ask how he employs Cob, is a necessary question for you that are his wife, and a thing not very easy for you to be satisfied in; but this I'll assure you, Cob's wife is an excellent bawd, sister, and oftentimes your husband haunts her house; marry, to what end? I cannot altogether accuse him; imagine you what you think convenient: but I have known fair hides have foul hearts ere now, sister.

DAME KITELY. Never said you truer than that, brother, so much I can tell you for your learning. Thomas, fetch your cloak and go with me. [Exit CASH.] I'll after him presently: I would to fortune I could take him there, i'faith, I'd return him his own, I warrant him!

[Exit.]

WELLBRED. So, let 'em go; this may make sport anon. Now, my fair sister-in-law, that you knew but how happy a thing it were to be fair and beautiful.

BRIDGET. That touches not me, brother.

WELLBRED. That's true; that's even the fault of it; for indeed, beauty stands a woman in no stead, unless it procure her touching.—But, sister, whether it touch you or no, it touches your beauties; and I am sure they will abide the touch;

an they do not, a plague of all ceruse, say I! and it touches me too in part, though not in the— Well, there's a dear and respected friend of mine, sister, stands very strongly and worthily affected toward you, and hath vowed to inflame whole bonfires of zeal at his heart, in honour of your perfections. I have already engaged my promise to bring you where you shall hear him confirm much more. Ned Knowell is the man, sister: there's no exception against the party. You are ripe for a husband; and a minute's loss to such an occasion, is a great trespass in a wise beauty. What say you, sister? On my soul he loves you; will you give him the meeting?

BRIDGET. Faith, I had very little confidence in mine own constancy, brother, if I durst not meet a man: but this motion of yours savours of an old knight adventurer's servant a little too much, methinks.

WELLBRED. What's that, sister?

BRIDGET. Marry, of the squire.

WELLBRED. No matter if it did, I would be such an one for my friend. But see, who is return'd to hinder us!

[Reënter KITELY.]

KITELY. What villainy is this? call'd out on a false message!

This was some plot; I was not sent for.—
Bridget,

Where is your sister?

BRIDGET. I think she be gone forth, sir.

KITELY. How! is my wife gone forth? whither, for God's sake?

BRIDGET. She's gone abroad with Thomas.

KITELY. Abroad with Thomas! oh, that villain dars me:

Beast that I was, to trust him! whither, I pray you, Went she?

BRIDGET. I know not, sir.

WELLBRED. I'll tell you, brother, Whither I suspect she's gone.

KITELY. Whither, good brother?

WELLBRED. To Cob's house, I believe: but, keep my counsel.

KITELY. I will, I will: to Cob's house!
doth she haunt Cob's?

She's gone a purpose now to cuckold me,
With that lewd rascal, who, to win her
favour,

Hath told her all. [Exit.]

WELLBRED. Come, he is once more gone, Sister, let's lose no time; the affair is worth it. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII—A street.

[Enter MATHEW and BOBADILL.]

MATHEW. I wonder, captain, what they will say of my going away, ha?

BOBADILL. Why, what should they say, but as of a discreet gentleman; quick,
wary, respectful of nature's fair lineaments? and that's all.

MATHEW. Why so! but what can they say of your beating?

BOBADILL. A rude part, a touch with soft wood, a kind of gross battery used, laid on strongly, borne most patiently;
and that's all.

MATHEW. Ay, but would any man have offered it in Venice, as you say?

BOBADILL. Tut! I assure you, no: you shall have there your nobilis, your gen-tilezza, come in bravely upon your reverse, stand you close, stand you firm, stand you fair, save your retricato with his left leg, come to the assalto with the right, thrust with brave steel, defy your base wood!
But wherefore do I awake this remembrance? I was fascinated, by Jupiter; fascinated, but I will be unwitch'd and revenged by law.

MATHEW. Do you hear? is it not best to get a warrant, and have him arrested and brought before justice Clement?

BOBADILL. It were not amiss; would we had it!

[Enter BRAINWORM disguised as FORMAL.]

MATHEW. Why, here comes his man;
let's speak to him.

BOBADILL. Agreed, do you speak.

MATHEW. Save you, sir.

BRAINWORM. With all my heart, sir.

MATHEW. Sir, there is one Downright hath abused this gentleman and myself, and we determine to make our amends by law: now, if you would do us the favour to procure a warrant to bring him afore your master, you shall be well considered,
I assure you, sir.

BRAINWORM. Sir, you know my service is my living; such favours as these gotten of my master is his only preferment, and therefore you must consider me as I may make benefit of my place.

MATHEW. How is that, sir?

BRAINWORM. Faith, sir, the thing is extraordinary, and the gentleman may be of great account; yet, be he what he will,
if you will lay me down a brace of angels in my hand you shall have it, otherwise
not.

MATHEW. How shall we do, captain?
he asks a brace of angels, you have no money?

BOBADILL. Not a cross, by fortune.

MATHEW. Nor I, as I am a gentleman, but twopence left of my two shillings in the morning for wine and radish: let's find him some pawn.

BOBADILL. Pawn! we have none to the value of his demand.

MATHEW. O, yes; I'll pawn this jewel in my ear, and you may pawn your silk stockings, and pull up your boots, they will ne'er be mist: it must be done now.

BOBADILL. Well, an there be no remedy,
I'll step aside and pull them off.

[Withdraws.]

MATHEW. Do you hear, sir? we have no store of money at this time, but you shall have good pawns; look you, sir, this jewel, and that gentleman's silk stockings; because we would have it dispatch'd ere we went to our chambers.

BRAINWORM. I am content, sir; I will get you the warrant presently. What's his name, say you? Downright?

MATHEW. Ay, ay, George Downright.

BRAINWORM. What manner of man is
he?

MATHEW. A tall big man, sir; he goes in a cloak most commonly of silk-russet, laid about with russet lace.

BRAINWORM. 'Tis very good, sir.

MATHEW. Here, sir, here's my jewel.

BOBADILL [returning]. And here are my stockings.

BRAINWORM. Well, gentlemen, I'll procure you this warrant presently; but who will you have to serve it?

MATHEW. That's true, captain: that must be considered.

BOBADILL. Body o' me, I know not; 'tis service of danger.

BRAINWORM. Why, you were best get one o' the varlets of the city, a serjeant: I'll appoint you one, if you please.

MATHEW. Will you, sir? why, we can wish no better.

BOBADILL. We'll leave it to you, sir.

[Exeunt BOBADILL and MATHEW.]

BRAINWORM. This is rare! Now will I go and pawn this cloak of the justice's man's at the broker's, for a varlet's suit, and be the varlet myself; and get either more pawns, or more money of Downright, for the arrest. [Exit.]

SCENE VIII—The lane before COB'S house.

[Enter KNOWELL.]

KNOWELL. Oh, here it is; I am glad I have found it now;

Ho! who is within here?

TIB [within]. I am within, sir; what's your pleasure?

KNOWELL. To know who is within beside yourself.

TIB. Why, sir, you are no constable, I hope?

KNOWELL. O, fear you the constable? then I doubt not,

You have some guests within deserve that fear;

I'll fetch him straight.

[Enter TIB.]

TIB. O' God's name, sir!

KNOWELL. Go to: come tell me, is not young Knowell here?

TIB. Young Knowell! I know none such, sir, o' mine honesty.

KNOWELL. Your honesty, dame! it flies too lightly from you.

There is no way but fetch the constable.

TIB. The constable! the man is mad, I think. [Exit, and claps to the door.]

[Enter DAME KITELY and CASH.]

CASH. Ho! who keeps house here?

KNOWELL. O, this is the female copes-mate of my son:

Now shall I meet him straight.

DAME KITELY. Knock, Thomas, hard.

CASH. Ho, goodwife!

[Reënter TIB.]

TIB. Why, what's the matter with you?

DAME KITELY. Why, woman, grieves it you to ope your door?

Belike you get something to keep it shut.

TIB. What mean these questions, pray ye?

DAME KITELY. So strange you make it! is not my husband here?

KNOWELL. Her husband!

DAME KITELY. My tried husband, master Kately?

TIB. I hope he needs not to be tried here.

DAME KITELY. No, dame, he does it not for need, but pleasure.

TIB. Neither for need nor pleasure is he here.

KNOWELL. This is but a device to balk me withal:

[Enter KITELY, muffled in his cloak.]

Soft, who is this? 'tis not my son disguised?

DAME KITELY [spies her husband, and runs to him]. O, sir, have I forestall'd your honest market,

Found your close walks? You stand amazed now, do you?

I'faith, I am glad I have smok'd you yet at last.

What is your jewel, trow? In, come, let's see her;

Fetch forth your housewife, dame; if she be fairer,

In any honest judgment, than myself,

I'll be content with it: but she is change,

She feeds you fat, she soothes your appetite,

And you are well! Your wife, an honest woman,

Is meat twice sod to you, sir! O, you treachour!

KNOWELL. She cannot counterfeit thus palpably.

KITELY. Out on thy more than strumpet impudence!

Steal'st thou thus to thy haunts? and have I taken

Thy bawd and thee, and thy companion, This hoary-headed lecher, this old goat, Close at your villainy, and would'st thou 'scuse it

With this stale harlot's jest, accusing me?

O, old incontinent [to KNOWELL] dost thou not shame,

When all thy powers in chastity are spent, To have a mind so hot? and to entice, And feed the enticements of a lustful woman?

DAME KITELY. Out, I defy thee, I, dissembling wretch!

KITELY. Defy me, strumpet! Ask thy pander here,

Can he deny it; or that wicked elder?

KNOWELL. Why, hear you, sir.

KITELY. Tut, tut, tut; never speak: Thy guilty conscience will discover thee.

KNOWELL. What lunacy is this, that haunts this man?

KITELY. Well, good wife bawd, Cob's wife, and you,

That make your husband such a hoddoddy;

And you, young apple-squire, and old cuckold-maker;

I'll have you every one before a justice: Nay, you shall answer it, I charge you go.

KNOWELL. Marry, with all my heart, sir, I go willingly;

Though I do taste this as a trick put on me,

To punish my impertinent search, and justly,

And half forgive my son for the device.

KITELY. Come, will you go?

DAME KITELY. Go! to thy shame believe it.

[Enter COB.]

COB. Why, what's the matter here, what's here to do?

KITELY. O, Cob, art thou come? I have been abused, And in thy house; was never man so wrong'd!

COB. 'Slid, in my house, my master Kately! who wrongs you in my house?

KITELY. Marry, young lust in old, and old in young here:

Thy wife's their bawd, here have I taken them.

COB. How, bawd! is my house come to that? Am I prefer'd thither? Did I not charge you to keep your doors shut, Isabel? and—you let them lie open for all comers!

[Beats his wife.]

KNOWELL. Friend, know some cause, before thou beat'st thy wife.

This is madness in thee.

COB. Why, is there no cause?

KITELY. Yes, I'll shew cause before the justice, Cob:

Come, let her go with me.

COB. Nay, she shall go.

TIB. Nay, I will go. I'll see an you may be allowed to make a bundle of hemp of your right and lawful wife thus, at every cuckoldy knave's pleasure. Why do you not go?

KITELY. A bitter quean! Come, we will have you tamed. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IX—A street.

[Enter BRAINWORM, disguised as a city serjeant.]

BRAINWORM. Well, of all my disguises yet, now am I most like myself, being in this serjeant's gown. A man of my present profession never counterfeits, till he lays hold upon a debtor, and says, he rests him; for then he brings him to all manner of unrest. A kind of little kings we are, bearing the diminutive of a mace, made like a young artichoke, that always carries pepper and salt in itself. Well, I know not what danger I undergo by this exploit; pray Heaven I come well off!

[Enter MATHEW and BOBADILL.]

MATHEW. See, I think, yonder is the varlet, by his gown.

BOBADILL. Let's go in quest of him.

MATHEW. 'Save you, friend! are not you here by appointment of justice Clement's man?

BRAINWORM. Yes, an't please you, sir; he told me, two gentlemen had will'd him to procure a warrant from his master, which I have about me, to be served on one Downright.

MATHEW. It is honestly done of you both; and see where the party comes you must arrest; serve it upon him quickly, afore he be aware.

BOBADILL. Bear back, master Mathew.

[Enter STEPHEN in DOWNRIGHT's cloak.]

BRAINWORM. Master Downright, I arrest you in the queen's name, and must carry you afore a justice by virtue of this warrant.

STEPHEN. Me, friend! I am no Downright, I; I am master Stephen: You do not well to arrest me, I tell you, truly; I am in nobody's bonds nor books, I would you should know it. A plague on you heartily, for making me thus afraid afore my time!

BRAINWORM. Why, now you are deceived, gentlemen.

BOBADILL. He wears such a cloak, and that deceived us: but see, here a' comes indeed; this is he, officer.

[Enter DOWNRIGHT.]

DOWNRIGHT. Why how now, signior gull! are you turn'd filcher of late! Come, deliver my cloak.

STEPHEN. Your cloak, sir! I bought it even now, in open market.

BRAINWORM. Master Downright, I have a warrant I must serve upon you, procured by these two gentlemen.

DOWNRIGHT. These gentlemen! these rascals!

[Offers to beat them.]

BRAINWORM. Keep the peace, I charge you in her majesty's name.

DOWNRIGHT. I obey thee. What must I do, officer?

BRAINWORM. Go before master justice Clement, to answer that they can object against you, sir: I will use you kindly, sir.

MATHEW. Come, let's before, and make the justice, captain.

BOBADILL. The varlet's a tall man, afore heaven!

[Exit BOBADILL and MATHEW.]

DOWNRIGHT. Gull, you'll give me my cloak.

STEPHEN. Sir, I bought it, and I'll keep it.

DOWNRIGHT. You will?

STEPHEN. Ay, that I will.

DOWNRIGHT. Officer, there's thy fee, arrest him.

BRAINWORM. Master Stephen, I must arrest you.

STEPHEN. Arrest me! I scorn it. There, take your cloak, I'll none on't.

DOWNRIGHT. Nay, that shall not serve your turn now, sir. Officer, I'll go with thee to the justice's; bring him along.

STEPHEN. Why, is not here your cloak? what would you have?

DOWNRIGHT. I'll have you answer it, sir.

BRAINWORM. Sir, I'll take your word, and this gentleman's too, for his appearance.

DOWNRIGHT. I'll have no words taken: bring him along.

BRAINWORM. Sir, I may choose to do that, I may take bail.

DOWNRIGHT. 'Tis true, you may take bail, and choose at another time; but you shall not now, varlet: bring him along, or I'll swinge you.

BRAINWORM. Sir, I pity the gentleman's case: here's your money again.

DOWNRIGHT. 'Sdeins, tell not me of my money; bring him away, I say.

BRAINWORM. I warrant you he will go with you of himself, sir.

DOWNRIGHT. Yet more ado?

BRAINWORM. I have made a fair mash on't.

STEPHEN. Must I go?

BRAINWORM. I know no remedy, master Stephen.

DOWNRIGHT. Come along afore me here; I do not love your hanging look behind.

STEPHEN. Why, sir, I hope you cannot hang me for it: can he, fellow?

BRAINWORM. I think not, sir; it is but a whipping matter, sure.

STEPHEN. Why then let him do his worst, I am resolute. [Exeunt.]

ACT V

SCENE I—Coleman-street. A hall in JUSTICE CLEMENT'S house.

[Enter CLEMENT, KNOWELL, KITELY, DAME KITELY, TIB, CASH, COB, and SERVANTS.]

CLEMENT. Nay, but stay, give me leave: my chair, sirrah. You, master Knowell, say you went thither to meet your son?

KNOWELL. Ay, sir.

CLEMENT. But who directed you thither?

KNOWELL. That did mine own man, sir.

CLEMENT. Where is he?

KNOWELL. Nay, I know not now; I left him with your clerk, and appointed him to stay here for me.

CLEMENT. My clerk! about what time was this?

KNOWELL. Marry, between one and two, as I take it.

CLEMENT. And what time came my man with the false message to you, master Kately?

KITELY. After two, sir.

CLEMENT. Very good: but, mistress Kately, how chance that you were at Cob's, ha?

DAME KITELY. An't please you, sir, I'll tell you: my brother Wellbred told me, that Cob's house was a suspected place—

CLEMENT. So it appears, methinks: but on.

DAME KITELY. And that my husband used thither daily.

CLEMENT. No matter, so he used himself well, mistress.

DAME KITELY. True, sir: but you know what grows by such haunts oftentimes.

CLEMENT. I see rank fruits of a jealous brain, mistress Kately: but did you find your husband there, in that case as you suspected?

KITELY. I found her there, sir.

CLEMENT. Did you, so! that alters the case. Who gave you knowledge of your wife's being there?

KITELY. Marry, that did my brother Wellbred.

CLEMENT. How, Wellbred first tell her; then tell you after! Where is Wellbred?

KITELY. Gone with my sister, sir, I know not whither.

CLEMENT. Why this is a mere trick, a device; you are gull'd in this most grossly all. Alas, poor wench! wert thou beaten for this?

TIB. Yes, most pitifully, an't please you.

COB. And worthily, I hope, if it shall prove so.

CLEMENT. Ay, that's like, and a piece of a sentence.—

[Enter a SERVANT.]

How now, sir! what's the matter?

SERVANT. Sir, there's a gentleman in the court without, desires to speak with your worship.

CLEMENT. A gentleman! what is he?

SERVANT. A soldier, sir, he says.

CLEMENT. A soldier! take down my armour, my sword quickly. A soldier speak with me! Why, when, knaves? Come on, come on [arms himself]; hold my cap there, so; give me my gorget, my sword: stand by, I will end your matters anon.—Let the soldier enter.

[Exit SERVANT.]

[Enter BOBADILL, followed by MATHEW.]
Now, sir, what have you to say to me?

BOBADILL. By your worship's favour—

CLEMENT. Nay, keep out, sir; I know not your pretence. You send me word, sir, you are a soldier: why, sir, you shall be answer'd here: here be them that have been amongst soldiers. Sir, your pleasure.

BOBADILL. Faith, sir, so it is, this gentleman and myself have been most uncivilly wrong'd and beaten by one Downright, a coarse fellow, about the town here; and for mine own part, I protest, being a man in no sort given to this filthy humour of quarrelling, he hath assaulted me in the way of my peace, despoiled me of mine honour, disarmed me of my weapons, and rudely laid me along in the open streets, when I not so much as once offered to resist him.

CLEMENT. O, God's precious! is this the soldier? Here, take my armour off quickly, 'twill make him swoon, I fear; he is not fit to look on't, that will put up a blow.

MATHEW. An't please your worship, he was bound to the peace.

CLEMENT. Why, an he were, sir, his hands were not bound, were they?

[Reënter SERVANT.]

SERVANT. There's one of the varlets of the city, sir, has brought two gentlemen here; one, upon your worship's warrant.

CLEMENT. My warrant!

SERVANT. Yes, sir; the officer says, procured by these two.

CLEMENT. Bid him come in. [Exit SERVANT.] Set by this picture.

[Enter DOWNRIGHT, STEPHEN, and BRAINWORM, disguised as before.]

What, Master Downright! are you brought in at Mr. Freshwater's suit here?

DOWNRIGHT. I'faith, sir, and here's another brought at my suit.

CLEMENT. What are you, sir?

STEPHEN. A gentleman, sir. O, uncle!

CLEMENT. Uncle! who, Master Knowell?

KNOWELL. Ay, sir; this is a wise kinsman of mine.

STEPHEN. God's my witness, uncle, I am wrong'd here monstrously, he charges me with stealing of his cloak, and would I might never stir, if I did not find it in the street by chance.

DOWNRIGHT. O, did you find it now? You said you bought it erewhile.

STEPHEN. And you said, I stole it: nay, now my uncle is here, I'll do well enough with you.

CLEMENT. Well, let this breathe awhile. You that have cause to complain there, stand forth: Had you my warrant for this gentleman's apprehension?

BOBADILL. Ay, an't please your worship.

CLEMENT. Nay, do not speak in passion so: where had you it?

BOBADILL. Of your clerk, sir.

CLEMENT. That's well! an my clerk can make warrants, and my hand not at them! Where is the warrant—officer, have you it?

BRAINWORM. No, sir; your worship's man, Master Formal, bid me do it for these gentlemen, and he would be my discharge.

CLEMENT. Why, Master Downright, are you such a novice, to be served and never see the warrant?

DOWNRIGHT. Sir, he did not serve it on me.

CLEMENT. No! how then?

DOWNRIGHT. Marry, sir, he came to me, and said he must serve it, and he would use me kindly, and so—

CLEMENT. O, God's pity, was it so, sir? He must serve it! Give me my long sword there, and help me off. So, come on, sir varlet, I must cut off your legs, sirrah; [BRAINWORM kneels.] nay, stand up. I'll use you kindly; I must cut off your legs, I say.

[Flourishes over him with his long sword.]

BRAINWORM. O, good sir, I beseech you; nay, good master justice!

CLEMENT. I must do it, there is no remedy; I must cut off your legs, sirrah, I must cut off your ears, you rascal, I must do it: I must cut off your nose, I must cut off your head.

BRAINWORM. O, good your worship!

CLEMENT. Well, rise; how dost thou do now? dost thou feel thyself well? hast thou no harm?

BRAINWORM. No, I thank your good worship, sir.

CLEMENT. Why so! I said I must cut off thy legs, and I must cut off thy arms, and I must cut off thy head; but I did not do it: so you said you must serve this gentleman with my warrant, but you did not serve him. You knave, you slave, you rogue, do you say you must, sirrah! away with him to the jail; I'll teach you a trick for your must, sir.

BRAINWORM. Good sir, I beseech you, be good to me.

CLEMENT. Tell him he shall to the jail; away with him, I say.

BRAINWORM. Nay, sir, if you will commit me, it shall be for committing more than this: I will not lose by my travail any grain of my fame, certain.

[Throws off his serjeant's gown.]

CLEMENT. How is this?

KNOWELL. My man Brainworm!

STEPHEN. O, yes, uncle; Brainworm has been with my cousin Edward and I all this day.

CLEMENT. I told you all there was some device.

BRAINWORM. Nay, excellent justice, since I have laid myself thus open to you, now stand strong for me; both with your sword and your balance.

CLEMENT. Body o' me, a merry knave! give me a bowl of sack: if he belong to you, Master Knowell, I bespeak your patience.

BRAINWORM. That is it I have most need of; Sir, if you'll pardon me, only, I'll glory in all the rest of my exploits.

KNOWELL. Sir, you know I love not to have my favours come hard from me. You have your pardon, though I suspect you shrewdly for being of counsel with my son against me.

BRAINWORM. Yes, faith, I have, sir, though you retain'd me doubly this morning for yourself: first as Brainworm; after, as Fitz-Sword. I was your reform'd soldier, sir. 'Twas I sent you to Cob's upon the errand without end.

KNOWELL. Is it possible? or that thou should'st disguise thy language so as I should not know thee?

BRAINWORM. O, sir, this has been the day of my metamorphosis. It is not that shape alone that I have run through to-day. I brought this gentleman, master Kitley, a message too, in the form of master Justice's man here, to draw him out o' the way, as well as your worship, while master Wellbred might make a conveyance of mistress Bridget to my young master.

KITELY. How! my sister stolen away?

KNOWELL. My son is not married, I hope.

BRAINWORM. Faith, sir, they are both as sure as love, a priest, and three thousand pound, which is her portion, can make them; and by this time are ready to bespeak their wedding-supper at the Windmill, except some friend here prevent them, and invite them home.

CLEMENT. Marry, that will I; I thank thee for putting me in mind on't. Sirrah, go you and fetch them hither upon my warrant. [Exit SERVANT.] Neither's friends have cause to be sorry, if I know the young couple aright. Here, I drink to thee for thy good news. But I pray thee, what hast thou done with my man, Formal?

BRAINWORM. Faith, sir, after some ceremony past, as making him drunk, first with story, and then with wine, (but all in kindness,) and stripping him to his shirt, I left him in that cool vein; departed, sold your worship's warrant to these two, pawn'd his livery for that varlet's gown, to serve it in; and thus have brought myself by my activity to your worship's consideration.

CLEMENT. And I will consider thee in another cup of sack. Here's to thee, which having drunk off this my sentence: Pledge me. Thou hast done, or assisted to nothing, in my judgment, but deserves to be pardon'd for the wit of the offence. If thy master, or any man here, be angry with thee, I shall suspect his ingine, while

I know him, for't. How now, what noise is that?

[Enter SERVANT.]

SERVANT. Sir, it is Roger is come home.

CLEMENT. Bring him in, bring him in.

[Enter FORMAL in a suit of armour.]

What! drunk? in arms against me? your reason, your reason for this?

FORMAL. I beseech your worship to pardon me; I happened into ill company by chance, that cast me into a sleep, and stript me of all my clothes.

CLEMENT. Well, tell him I am Justice Clement, and do pardon him: but what is this to your armour? what may that signify?

FORMAL. An't please you, sir, it hung up in the room where I was stript; and I borrow'd it of one of the drawers to come home in, because I was loth to do penance through the street in my shirt.

CLEMENT. Well, stand by a while.

[Enter EDWARD KNOWELL, WELLBRED, and BRIDGET.]

Who be these? O, the young company; welcome, welcome! Give you joy. Nay, mistress Bridget, blush not; you are not so fresh a bride, but the news of it is come hither afore you. Master bridegroom, I have made your peace, give me your hand: so will I for all the rest ere you forsake my roof.

EDWARD KNOWELL. We are the more bound to your humanity, sir.

CLEMENT. Only these two have so little of man in them, they are no part of my care.

WELLBRED. Yes, sir, let me pray you for this gentleman, he belongs to my sister the bride.

CLEMENT. In what place, sir?

WELLBRED. Of her delight, sir, below the stairs, and in public: her poet, sir.

CLEMENT. A poet! I will challenge him myself presently at extempore,

Mount up thy Phlegon, Muse, and testify,

How Saturn, sitting in an ebon cloud,
Disrob'd his podex, white as ivory,

And through the welkin thunder'd all aloud.

WELLBRED. He is not for extempore, sir: he is all for the pocket muse; please you command a sight of it.

CLEMENT. Yes, yes, search him for a taste of his vein.

[They search MATHEW'S pockets.]

WELLBRED. You must not deny the queen's justice, sir, under a writ of rebellion.

CLEMENT. What! all this verse? body o' me, he carries a whole realm, a commonwealth of paper in his hose: let us see some of his subjects. [Reads.]

Unto the boundless ocean of thy face,
Runs this poor river, charg'd with streams of eyes.

How! this is stolen.

EDWARD KNOWELL. A parody! a parody! with a kind of miraculous gift, to make it absurder than it was.

CLEMENT. Is all the rest of this batch? bring me a torch; lay it together, and give fire. Cleanse the air. [Sets the papers on fire.] Here was enough to have infected the whole city, if it had not been taken in time. See, see, how our poet's glory shines! brighter and brighter! still it increases! O, now it is at the highest; and now it declines as fast. You may see, sic transit gloria mundi!

KNOWELL. There's an emblem for you, son, and your studies.

CLEMENT. Nay, no speech or act of mine be drawn against such as profess it worthily. They are not born every year, as an alderman. There goes more to the making of a good poet, than a sheriff. Master Kitely, you look upon me! —though I live in the city here, amongst you, I will do more reverence to him, when I meet him, than I will to the mayor out of his year. But these paper-pedlars! these ink-dabblers! they cannot expect reprehension or reproach; they have it with the fact.

EDWARD KNOWELL. Sir, you have saved me the labour of a defence.

CLEMENT. It shall be discourse for supper between your father and me, if he dare undertake me. But to dispatch away these, you sign o' the soldier, and picture of the poet, (but both so false, I will not have you hanged out at my door till midnight,) while we are at supper, you two shall penitently fast it out in my court without; and, if you will, you may pray there that we may be so merry within as to forgive or forget you when we come out. Here's a third, because we tender your safety, shall watch you, he is provided for the purpose. Look to your charge, sir.

STEPHEN. And what shall I do?

CLEMENT. O! I had lost a sheep an he had not bleated: why, sir, you shall give master Downright his cloak; and I will intreat him to take it. A trencher and a napkin you shall have in the buttery, and keep Cob and his wife company here; whom I will intreat first to be reconciled; and you to endeavour with your wit to keep them so.

STEPHEN. I'll do my best.

COB. Why, now I see thou art honest, Tib, I receive thee as my dear and mortal wife again.

TIB. And I you, as my loving and obedient husband.

CLEMENT. Good compliment! It will be their bridal night too. They are married anew. Come, I conjure the rest to put off all discontent. You, master Downright, your anger; you, master Knowell, your cares; Master Kiteley and his wife, their jealousy.

For, I must tell you both, while that is fed,

Horns in the mind are worse than on the head.

KITELEY. Sir, thus they go from me; kiss me, sweetheart.

See what a drove of horns fly in the air,
Wing'd with my cleansed and my credulous breath!

Watch 'em suspicious eyes, watch where they fall.

See, see! on heads that think they have none at all!

O, what a plenteous world of this will come!

When air rains horns, all may be sure of some.

I have learn'd so much verse out of a jealous man's part in a play.

CLEMENT. 'Tis well, 'tis well! This night we'll dedicate to friendship, love, and laughter. Master bridegroom, take your bride and lead; every one a fellow. Here is my mistress, Brainworm! to whom all my addresses of courtship shall have their reference: whose adventures this day, when our grandchildren shall hear to be made a fable, I doubt not but it shall find both spectators and applause.

ACT I

SCENE I—A room in FRANKFORD's house.

[Enter MASTER FRANKFORD, MISTRESS FRANKFORD, SIR FRANCIS ACTON, SIR CHARLES MOUNTFORD, MASTER MALBY, MASTER WENDOLL, and MASTER CRANWELL.]

SIR FRANCIS. Some music there: none lead the bride a dance?

SIR CHARLES. Yes, would she dance "The Shaking of the Sheets";

But that's the dance her husband means to lead her.

WENDOLL. That's not the dance that every man must dance, According to the ballad.

SIR FRANCIS. Music, ho!

By your leave, sister;—by your husband's leave, I should have said: the hand that but this day

Was given you in the church I'll borrow: sound!

This marriage music hoists me from the ground.

FRANKFORD. Ay, you may caper, you are light and free:

Marriage hath yoked my heels; pray then pardon me.

SIR FRANCIS. I'll have you dance too, brother.

SIR CHARLES. Master Frankford, You are a happy man, sir; and much joy Succeed your marriage mirth! you have a wife

So qualified, and with such ornaments Both of the mind and body. First, her birth

Is noble, and her education such As might become the daughter of a prince: Her own tongue speaks all tongues, and her own hand

Can teach all strings to speak in their best grace,

From the shrillest treble to the hoarsest base.

To end her many praises in one word, She's beauty and perfection's eldest daughter,

Only found by yours, though many a heart hath sought her.

FRANKFORD. But that I know your virtues and chaste thoughts, I should be jealous of your praise, Sir Charles.

CRANWELL. He speaks no more than you approve.

MALBY. Nor flatters he that gives to her her due.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. I would your praise could find a fitter theme Than my imperfect beauties to speak on: Such as they be, if they my husband please,

They suffice me now I am married: His sweet content is like a flattering glass, To make my face seem fairer to mine eye;

But the least wrinkle from his stormy brow

Will blast the roses in my cheeks that grow.

SIR FRANCIS. A perfect wife already, meek and patient:

How strangely the word "husband" fits your mouth,

Not married three hours since! Sister, 'tis good;

You, that begin betimes thus, must needs prove

Pliant and duteous in your husband's love.—

Gramercies, brother, wrought her to't already;

Sweet husband, and a curtesy, the first day!

Mark this, mark this, you that are bachelors,

And never took the grace of honest man; Mark this, against you marry, this one phrase:

"In a good time that man both wins and woos, That takes his wife down in her wedding shoes."

FRANKFORD. Your sister takes not after you, Sir Francis;

All his wild blood your father spent on you:

He got her in his age, when he grew civil:

All his mad tricks were to his land entailed,

And you are heir to all; your sister, she hath to her dower her mother's modesty.

SIR CHARLES. Lord, sir, in what a happy state live you!

This morning, which to many seems a burden

Too heavy to bear, is unto you a pleasure. This lady is no clog, as many are:

She doth become you like a well-made suit,

In which the tailor hath used all his art; Not like a thick coat of unseasoned frieze, Forced on your back in summer. She's no chain

To tie your neck, and curb you to the yoke;

But she's a chain of gold to adorn your neck.

You both adorn each other, and your hands,

Methinks, are matches: there's equality In this fair combination; you are both Scholars, both young, both being descended nobly.

There's music in this sympathy; it carries Consort, and expectation of much joy, Which God bestow on you, from this first day

Until your dissolution; that's for aye.

SIR FRANCIS. We keep you here too long, good brother Frankford.

Into the hall; away! go cheer your guests. What, bride and bridegroom both withdrawn at once?

If you be missed, the guests will doubt their welcome,

And charge you with unkindness.

FRANKFORD. To prevent it, I'll leave you here, to see the dance within.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. And so will I.

[Exeunt FRANKFORD and MISTRESS FRANKFORD.]

SIR FRANCIS. To part you, it were sin. Now, gallants, while the town-musicians Finger their frets within; and the mad lads

And country-lasses, every mother's child, With nosegays and bridelaces in their hats,

Dance all their country measures, rounds, and jigs,

What shall we do? Hark, they are all on the hoigh;

They toil like mill-horses, and turn as round,—

Marry, not on the toe. Ay, and they caper,

Not without cutting; you shall see, to-morrow,

The hall-floor pecked and dinted like a mill-stone,

Made with their high shoes; though their skill be small,

Yet they tread heavy where their hob-nails fall.

SIR CHARLES. Well, leave them to their sports. Sir Francis Acton,

I'll make a match with you; meet to-morrow

At Chevy-chase, I'll fly my hawk with yours.

SIR FRANCIS. For what? For what?

SIR CHARLES. Why, for a hundred pound.

SIR FRANCIS. Pawn me some gold of that.

SIR CHARLES. Here are ten angels; I'll make them good a hundred pound to-morrow

Upon my hawk's wing.

SIR FRANCIS. 'Tis a match, 'tis done. Another hundred pound upon your dogs; Dare ye, Sir Charles?

SIR CHARLES. I dare: were I sure to lose,

I durst do more than that: here is my hand,

The first course for a hundred pound.

SIR FRANCIS. A match.

WENDOLL. Ten angels on Sir Francis Acton's hawk;

As much upon his dogs.

CRANWELL. I am for Sir Charles Mountford; I have seen

His hawk and dog both tried. What, clap you hands?

Or is't no bargain?

WENDOLL. Yes, and stake them down: Were they five hundred, they were all my own.

SIR FRANCIS. Be stirring early with the lark to-morrow;
I'll rise into my saddle ere the sun
Rise from his bed.

SIR CHARLES. If there you miss me,
say
I am no gentleman: I'll hold my day.

SIR FRANCIS. It holds on all sides.
Come, to-night let's dance,
Early to-morrow let's prepare to ride;
We had need be three hours up before the bride. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II—A yard.

[Enter NICHOLAS, JENKIN, JACK SLIME, and ROGER BRICKBAT, with COUNTRY
WENCHES, and two or three MUSICIANS.]

JENKIN. Come, Nick, take you Joan Miniver to trace withal; Jack Slime, traverse you with Cicely Milk-pail: I will take Jane Trubkin, and Roger Brick-bat shall have Isabel Motley; and now that they are busy in the parlour, come, strike up; we'll have a crash here in the yard.

NICHOLAS. My humour is not compendious; dancing I possess not, though I can foot it; yet, since I am fallen into the hands of Cicely Milk-pail, I consent.

SLIME. Truly Nick, though we were never brought up like serving courtiers, yet we have been brought up with serving creatures, ay, and God's creatures too; for we have been brought up to serve sheep, oxen, horses, hogs, and such like: and,
though we be but country fellows, it may be in the way of dancing we can do the horse-trick as well as serving-men.

BRICKBAT. Ay, and the cross-point too.

JENKIN. O Slime, O Brickbat, do not you know that comparisons are odious?
now we are odious ourselves too, therefore there are no comparisons to be made betwixt us.

NICHOLAS. I am sudden, and not superfluous;

I am quarrelsome, and not seditious;
I am peaceable, and not contentious;
I am brief, and not compendious.

SLIME. Foot it quickly: if the music overcome not my melancholy, I shall quarrel; and if they do not suddenly strike up,
I shall presently strike them down.

JENKIN. No quarrelling, for God's sake: truly, if you do, I shall set a knave between ye.

SLIME. I come to dance, not to quarrel.
Come, what shall it be? "Roger?"

JENKIN. "Roger!" no; we will dance
"The Beginning of the World."

CICELY. I love no dance so well as
"John come kiss me now."

NICHOLAS. I, that have ere now deserved a cushion, call for the "Cushiondance."

BRICKBAT. For my part, I like nothing so well as "Tom Tyler."

JENKIN. No; we'll have "The Hunting of the Fox."

SLIME. "The Hay," "The Hay"; there's nothing like "The Hay."

NICHOLAS. I have said, I do say, and I will say again—

JENKIN. Every man agree to have it as Nick says.

ALL. Content.

NICHOLAS. It hath been, it now is, and it shall be—

CICELY. What, Master Nicholas, what?

NICHOLAS. "Put on your smock a' Monday."

JENKIN. So the dance will come cleanly off. Come, for God's sake agree of something: if you like not that, put it to the musicians; or let me speak for all, and we'll have "Sellenger's round."

ALL. That, that, that.

NICHOLAS. No, I am resolved, thus it shall be:

First take hands, then take ye to your heels.

JENKIN. Why, would ye have us run
away?

NICHOLAS. No; but I would have you shake your heels.

Music, strike up!

[They dance. NICHOLAS whilst dancing speaks stately and scurvily, the rest after the country fashion.]

JENKIN. Hey! lively, my lasses! here's a turn for thee! [Exeunt.]

SCENE III—The open country.

[Horns wind. Enter SIR CHARLES MOUNTFORD, SIR FRANCIS ACTON, MALBY, CRANWELL, WENDOLL, FALCONERS, and HUNTSMEN.]

SIR CHARLES. So; well cast off: aloft, aloft! well flown!

Oh, now she takes her at the souwse, and strikes her

Down to the earth, like a swift thunder-clap.

WENDOLL. She hath struck ten angels out of my way.

SIR FRANCIS. A hundred pound from
me.

SIR CHARLES. What, falconer!

FALCONER. At hand, sir.

SIR CHARLES. Now she hath seized the fowl, and 'gins to plume her, Rebeck her not: rather stand still and check her.

So, seize her gets, her jesses, and her bells:
Away!

SIR FRANCIS. My hawk killed too.

SIR CHARLES. Ay, but 'twas at the querre,

Not at the mount, like mine.

SIR FRANCIS. Judgment, my masters.

CRANWELL. Yours missed her at the ferre.

WENDOLL. Ay, but our merlin first had plumed the fowl,
And twice renewed her from the river
too;

Her bells, Sir Francis, had not both one
weight,

Nor was one semi-tune above the other:
Methinks these Milan bells do sound too full,

And spoil the mounting of your hawk.

SIR CHARLES. 'Tis lost.

SIR FRANCIS. I grant it not. Mine likewise seized a fowl

Within her talons; and you saw her paws
Full of the feathers: both her petty singles,

And her long singles gripped her more than other;

The terrials of her legs were stained with
blood:

Not of the fowl only, she did discomfit
Some of her feathers: but she brake away.
Come, come, your hawk is but a rifier.

SIR CHARLES. How!

SIR FRANCIS. Ay, and your dogs are trindle-tails and curs.

SIR CHARLES. You stir my blood.
You keep not one good hound in all your kennel,

Nor one good hawk upon your perch.

SIR FRANCIS. How, knight!

SIR CHARLES. So, knight: you will not swagger, sir?

SIR FRANCIS. Why, say I did?

SIR CHARLES. Why, sir,

I say you would gain as much by swag-
gering,

As you have got by wagers on your dogs:
You will come short in all things.

SIR FRANCIS. Not in this:

Now I'll strike home.

SIR CHARLES. Thou shalt to thy long
home,

Or I will want my will.

SIR FRANCIS. All they that love Sir
Francis, follow me.

SIR CHARLES. All that affect Sir
Charles, draw on my part.

CRANWELL. On this side heaves my hand.

WENDOLL. Here goes my heart.

[They divide themselves. SIR CHARLES MOUNTFORD, CRANWELL, FALCONER, and HUNTSMAN, fight against SIR FRANCIS ACTON, WENDOLL, his FALCONER, and HUNTSMAN; and SIR CHARLES's side gets the better, beating the others away, and killing both of SIR FRANCIS's men. Exeunt all except SIR CHARLES.]

SIR CHARLES. My God! what have I done? what have I done?

My rage hath plunged into a sea of blood,
In which my soul lies drowned. Poor innocents,

For whom we are to answer! Well, 'tis done,
 And I remain the victor. A great conquest,
 When I would give this right hand, nay, this head,
 To breathe in them new life whom I have slain!
 Forgive me, God! 'twas in the heat of blood,
 And anger quite removes me from myself:
 It was not I, but rage, did this vile murder;
 Yet I, and not my rage, must answer it.
 Sir Francis Acton he is fled the field;
 With him all those that did partake his quarrel,
 And I am left alone with sorrow dumb,
 And in my height of conquest overcome.

[Enter SUSAN.]

SUSAN. O God! my brother wounded 'mong the dead!
 Unhappy jest, that in such earnest ends:
 The rumour of this fear stretched to my ears,
 And I am come to know if you be wounded.
 SIR CHARLES. Oh! sister, sister, wounded at the heart.
 SUSAN. My God forbid!
 SIR CHARLES. In doing that thing which He forbid,
 I am wounded, sister.

SUSAN. I hope not at the heart.
 SIR CHARLES. Yes, at the heart.
 SUSAN. O God! a surgeon there!
 SIR CHARLES. Call me a surgeon, sister, for my soul;
 The sin of murder it hath pierced my heart,
 And made a wide wound there: but for these scratches,
 They are nothing, nothing.

SUSAN. Charles, what have you done? Sir Francis hath great friends, and will pursue you Unto the utmost danger of the law.

SIR CHARLES. My conscience is become mine enemy,
 And will pursue me more than Acton can.

SUSAN. Oh, fly, sweet brother.
 SIR CHARLES. Shall I fly from thee? Why, Sue, art weary of my company?
 SUSAN. Fly from your foe.
 SIR CHARLES. You, sister, are my friend;
 And, flying you, I shall pursue my end.
 SUSAN. Your company is as my eye-ball dear:
 Being far from you, no comfort can be near;
 Yet fly to save your life: what would I care
 To spend my future age in black despair,
 So you were safe? and yet to live one week
 Without my brother Charles, through every cheek
 My streaming tears would downwards run so rank,
 Till they could set on either side a bank,
 And in the midst a channel; so my face
 For two salt-water brooks shall still find place.

SIR CHARLES. Thou shalt not weep so much, for I will stay
 In spite of danger's teeth; I'll live with thee,
 Or I'll not live at all. I will not sell
 My country and my father's patrimony,
 Nor thy sweet sight, for a vain hope of life.

[Enter SHERIFF, with OFFICERS.]

SHERIFF. Sir Charles, I am made the unwilling instrument
 Of your attack and apprehension:
 I'm sorry that the blood of innocent men
 Should be of you exacted. It was told me
 That you were guarded with a troop of friends,
 And therefore I come thus armed.
 SIR CHARLES. O, Master Sheriff, I came into the field with many friends,
 But see, they all have left me: only one
 Clings to my sad misfortune, my dear sister.

I know you for an honest gentleman;
 I yield my weapons, and submit to you;

Convey me where you please.

SHERIFF. To prison then,
To answer for the lives of these dead
men.

SUSAN. O God! O God!

SIR CHARLES. Sweet sister, every strain
Of sorrow from your heart augments my
pain;
Your grief abounds, and hits against my breast.

SHERIFF. Sir, will you go?

SIR CHARLES. Even where it likes you best. [Exeunt.]

ACT II

SCENE I—FRANKFORD'S study.

[Enter FRANKFORD.]

FRANKFORD. How happy am I amongst other men,
That in my mean estate embrace content!

I am a gentleman, and by my birth,
Companion with a king; a king's no
more.

I am possessed of many fair revenues,
Sufficient to maintain a gentleman.
Touching my mind, I am studied in all arts;

The riches of my thoughts, and of my
time,
Have been a good proficient; but the chief

Of all the sweet felicities on earth,
I have a fair, a chaste, and loving wife;
Perfection all, all truth, all ornament
If man on earth may truly happy be,
Of these at once possessed, sure I am he.

[Enter NICHOLAS.]

NICHOLAS. Sir, there's a gentleman attends without
To speak with you.

FRANKFORD. On horseback?

NICHOLAS. Yes, on horseback.

FRANKFORD. Entreat him to alight, I will attend him.
Know'st thou him, Nick?

NICHOLAS. Know him! yes, his name's
Wendoll:

It seems he comes in haste: his horse is booted

Up to the flank in mire, himself all spotted

And stained with plashing. Sure he rid in fear,

Or for a wager: horse and man both sweat;

I ne'er saw two in such a smoking heat.

FRANKFORD. Entreat him in: about it instantly. [Exit NICHOLAS.]

This Wendoll I have noted, and his carriage

Hath pleased me much: by observation
I have noted many good deserts in him:

He's affable, and seen in many things,
Discourses well, a good companion;

And though of small means, yet a gentleman

Of a good house, though somewhat pressed by want:

I have preferred him to a second place
In my opinion, and my best regard.

[Enter WENDOLL, MISTRESS FRANKFORD, and NICHOLAS.]

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. O Master Frankford, Master Wendoll here

Brings you the strangest news that e'er
you heard.

FRANKFORD. What news, sweet wife?
What news, good Master Wendoll?

WENDOLL. You knew the match made
'twixt Sir Francis Acton

And Sir Charles Mountford.

FRANKFORD. True, with their hounds and hawks.

WENDOLL. The matches were both played.

FRANKFORD. Ha! and which won?
WENDOLL. Sir Francis, your wife's brother, had the worst.

And lost the wager.

FRANKFORD. Why, the worse his chance:

Perhaps the fortune of some other day
Will change his luck.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. Oh, but you hear not all.

Sir Francis lost, and yet was loth to yield:

At length the two knights grew to difference,

From words to blows, and so to banding sides;

Where valorous Sir Charles slew in his spleen

Two of your brother's men; his falconer,
And his good huntsman, whom he loved so well:

More men were wounded, no more slain outright.

FRANKFORD. Now, trust me, I am sorry for the knight;

But is my brother safe?

WENDOLL. All whole and sound,
His body not being blemished with one wound:

But poor Sir Charles is to the prison led,
To answer at the assize for them that's dead.

FRANKFORD. I thank your pains, sir; had the news been better

Your will was to have brought it, Master Wendoll.

Sir Charles will find hard friends; his case is heinous,

And will be most severely censured on:
I'm sorry for him. Sir, a word with you

I know you, sir, to be a gentleman
In all things; your possibilities but mean:
Please you to use my table and my purse,
They are yours.

WENDOLL. O Lord, sir, I shall never deserve it.

FRANKFORD. O sir, disparage not your worth too much:

You are full of quality and fair desert:
Choose of my men which shall attend on you,

And he is yours. I will allow you, sir,
Your man, your gelding, and your table,
all

At my own charge; be my companion.

WENDOLL. Master Frankford, I have oft been bound to you

By many favours; this exceeds them all,
That I shall never merit your least favour:

But, when your last remembrance I forget,

Heaven at my soul exact that weighty debt!

FRANKFORD. There needs no protestation; for I know you

Virtuous, and therefore grateful. Pr'ythee, Nan,

Use him with all thy loving'st courtesy.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. As far as modesty may well extend,

It is my duty to receive your friend.

FRANKFORD. To dinner, come, sir; from this present day,

Welcome to me for ever; come, away.

[Exeunt FRANKFORD, MISTRESS FRANKFORD, and WENDOLL.]

NICHOLAS. I do not like this fellow by no means:

I never see him but my heart still yearns:
Zounds! I could fight with him, yet know not why:

The devil and he are all one in my eye.

[Enter JENKIN.]

JENKIN. O Nick, what gentleman is that comes to lie at our house? my master allows him one to wait on him, and I believe it will fall to thy lot.

NICHOLAS. I love my master; by these hilts I do!

But rather than I'll ever come to serve him,

I'll turn away my master.

[Enter CICELY.]

CICELY. Nich'las, where are you, Nich'las? you must come in, Nich'las, and help the young gentleman off with his boots.

NICHOLAS. If I pluck off his boots, I'll eat the spurs,

And they shall stick fast in my throat like burs.

CICELY. Then, Jenkin, come you.

JENKIN. Nay, 'tis no boot for me to deny it. My master hath given me a coat here, but he takes pains himself to brush it once or twice a day with a hollywand.

CICELY. Come, come, make haste, that you may wash your hands again, and help to serve in dinner.

JENKIN. You may see, my masters, though it be afternoon with you, 'tis but early days with us, for we have not dined yet: stay a little, I'll but go in and help to bear up the first course, and come to you again presently. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II—A room in the gaol.

[Enter MALBY and CRANWELL.]

MALBY. This is the sessions-day; pray can you tell me
How young Sir Charles hath sped? Is he acquit,

Or must he try the law's strict penalty?

CRANWELL. He's cleared of all, spite of his enemies,

Whose earnest labour was to take his life: But in this suit of pardon he hath spent All the revenues that his father left him; And he is now turned a plain country-man,

Reformed in all things. See, sir, here he comes.

[Enter SIR CHARLES and KEEPER.]

KEEPER. Discharge your fees, and you are then at freedom.

SIR CHARLES. Here, Master Keeper, take the poor remainder
Of all the wealth I have: my heavy foes Have made my purse light; but, alas! to me

'Tis wealth enough that you have set me free.

MALBY. God give you joy of your delivery!

I am glad to see you abroad, Sir Charles.

SIR CHARLES. The poorest knight in England, Master Malby:

My life hath cost me all my patrimony
My father left his son: well, God forgive them

That are the authors of my penury.

[Enter SHAFTON.]

SHAFTON. Sir Charles! a hand, a hand! at liberty?

Now, by the faith I owe, I am glad to see it.

What want you? wherein may I pleasure you?

SIR CHARLES. O me! O most unhappy gentleman!

I am not worthy to have friends stirred up,

Whose hands may help me in this plunge of want.

I would I were in Heaven, to inherit there

The immortal birth-right which my Saviour keeps,

And by no unthrift can be bought and sold;

For here on earth what pleasures should we trust?

SHAFTON. To rid you from these contemplations,

Three hundred pounds you shall receive of me;

Nay, five for fail. Come, sir; the sight of gold

Is the most sweet receipt for melancholy, And will revive your spirits: you shall hold law

With your proud adversaries. Tush, let Frank Acton

Wage with his knighthood like expense with me,

And he will sink, he will. Nay, good Sir Charles,

Applaud your fortune, and your fair escape

From all these perils.

SIR CHARLES. O sir, they have undone me.

Two thousand and five hundred pound a year

My father, at his death, possessed me of;

All which the envious Acton made me spend.

And, notwithstanding all this large expense,

I had much ado to gain my liberty: And I have only now a house of pleasure,

With some five hundred pounds, reserved Both to maintain me and my loving sister.

SHAFTON [aside]. That most I have, it lies convenient for me:

If I can fasten but one finger on him,
With my full hand I'll gripe him to the heart.

'Tis not for love I proffered him this coin,
But for my gain and pleasure. [Aloud.]

Come, Sir Charles,
I know you have need of money; take my offer.

SIR CHARLES. Sir, I accept it, and remain indebted
Even to the best of my unable power.
Come, gentlemen, and see it tendered down. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III—A room in FRANKFORD'S house.

[Enter WENDOLL melancholy.]

WENDOLL. I am a villain if I apprehend
But such a thought: then, to attempt the deed,—

Slave, thou art damned without redemption.

I'll drive away this passion with a song.
A song! ha, ha: a song! as if, fond man,
Thy eyes could swim in laughter, when thy soul

Lies drenched and drownèd in red tears of blood.

I'll pray, and see if God within my heart Plant better thoughts. Why, prayers are meditations;

And when I meditate (O God, forgive
me!)

It is on her divine perfections.
I will forget her; I will arm myself
Not to entertain a thought of love to her:
And, when I come by chance into her
presence,

I'll hale these balls until my eye-strings crack,

From being pulled and drawn to look that
way.

[Enter over the stage, FRANKFORD, MISTRESS FRANKFORD, and NICHOLAS.]

O God! O God! with what a violence
I'm hurried to mine own destruction.
There goest thou, the most perfectest man
That ever England bred a gentleman;

And shall I wrong his bed? Thou God of thunder!

Stay in thy thoughts of vengeance and of
wrath,

Thy great, almighty, and all-judging hand
From speedy execution on a villain:

A villain, and a traitor to his friend.

[Enter JENKIN.]

JENKIN. Did your worship call?

WENDOLL. He doth maintain me, he allows me largely

Money to spend—

JENKIN. By my faith, so do not you me; I cannot get a cross of you.

WENDOLL. My gelding, and my man—

JENKIN. That's Sorrell and I.

WENDOLL. This kindness grows of no alliance 'twixt us—

JENKIN. Nor is my service of any great acquaintance.

WENDOLL. I never bound him to me by desert:

Of a mere stranger, a poor gentleman,
A man by whom in no kind he could gain,
He hath placed me in the height of all his thoughts,

Made me companion with the best and chiefest

In Yorkshire. He cannot eat without me,
Nor laugh without me: I am to his body
As necessary as his digestion,

And equally do make him whole or sick:
And shall I wrong this man? Base man!

ingrate

Hast thou the power straight with thy gory hands

To rip thy image from his bleeding heart?
To scratch thy name from out the holy book

Of his remembrance; and to wound his
name

That holds thy name so dear? or rend his heart

To whom thy heart was knit and joined together?

And yet I must: then, Wendoll, be content;

Thus villains, when they would, cannot repent.

JENKIN. What a strange humour is my new master in! pray God he be not mad: if he should be so, I should never have any mind to serve him in Bedlam. It may be he's mad for missing of me.

WENDOLL [seeing JENKIN]. What, Jenkin, where's your mistress?

JENKIN. Is your worship married?

WENDOLL. Why dost thou ask?

JENKIN. Because you are my master; and if I have a mistress, I would be glad, like a good servant, to do my duty to her.

WENDOLL. I mean Mistress Frankford.

JENKIN. Marry, sir, her husband is riding out of town, and she went very lovingly to bring him on his way to horse. Do you see, sir? here she comes, and here I go.

WENDOLL. Vanish. [Exit JENKIN.]

[Reënter MISTRESS FRANKFORD.]

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. You are well met, sir; now, in troth, my husband, Before he took horse, had a great desire To speak with you: we sought about the house,

Hollaed into the fields, sent every way, But could not meet you: therefore he en-joined me

To do unto you his most kind commends. Nay, more; he wills you, as you prize his love,

Or hold in estimation his kind friendship, To make bold in his absence, and command

Even as himself were present in the house:

For you must keep his table, use his servants,

And be a present Frankford in his absence.

WENDOLL. I thank him for his love.— Give me a name, you whose infectious tongues

Are tipped with gall and poison: as you would Think on a man that had your father slain,

Murdered your children, made your wives base strumpets,

So call me, call me so: print in my face

The most stigmatic title of a villain, For hatching treason to so true a friend. [Aside.]

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. Sir, you are much beholding to my husband; You are a man most dear in his regard.

WENDOLL [aside]. I am bound unto your husband, and you too.

I will not speak to wrong a gentleman Of that good estimation, my kind friend: I will not; zounds! I will not. I may choose,

And I will choose. Shall I be so misled? Or shall I purchase to my father's crest The motto of a villain? If I say I will not do it, what thing can enforce me?

What can compel me? What sad destiny Hath such command upon my yielding thoughts?

I will not—Ha! some fury pricks me on, The swift Fates drag me at their chariot-wheel,

And hurry me to mischief. Speak I must; Injure myself, wrong her, deceive his trust.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. Are you not well, sir, that you seem thus troubled?

There is sedition in your countenance.

WENDOLL. And in my heart, fair angel, chaste and wise.

I love you: start not, speak not, answer not.

I love you: nay, let me speak the rest: Bid me to swear, and I will call to record The host of Heaven.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. The host of Heaven forbid Wendoll should hatch such a disloyal thought!

WENDOLL. Such is my fate; to this suit I was born,

To wear rich pleasure's crown, or fortune's scorn.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. My husband loves you.

WENDOLL. I know it.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. He esteems you Even as his brain, his eye-ball, or his heart.

WENDOLL. I have tried it.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. His purse is your exchequer, and his table
Both freely serve you.

WENDOLL. So I have found it.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. O! with what face of brass, what brow of steel,
Can you, unblushing, speak this to the
face

Of the espoused wife of so dear a friend?
It is my husband that maintains your
state;

Will you dishonour him that in your
power

Hath left his whole affairs? I am his wife,
It is to me you speak.

WENDOLL. O speak no more!

For more than this I know, and have recorded

Within the red-leaved table of my heart.
Fair, and of all beloved, I was not fearful

Bluntly to give my life into your hand,
And at one hazard all my earthly means.
Go, tell your husband; he will turn me off,

And I am then undone. I care not, I;
'Twas for your sake. Perchance in rage
he'll kill me:

I care not, 'twas for you. Say I incur
The general name of villain through the
world,

Of traitor to my friend; I care not, I.
Beggary, shame, death, scandal, and reproach,

For you I'll hazard all: why, what care
I?

For you I'll live, and in your love I'll
die.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. You move me,
sir, to passion and to pity.

The love I bear my husband is as precious
As my soul's health.

WENDOLL. I love your husband too,
And for his love I will engage my life:
Mistake me not, the augmentation
Of my sincere affection borne to you
Doth no whit lessen my regard of him.
I will be secret, lady, close as night;
And not the light of one small glorious star

Shall shine here in my forehead, to bewray

That act of night.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. What shall I
say?

My soul is wandering, and ha'th lost her
way.

Oh, Master Wendoll! Oh!

WENDOLL. Sigh not, sweet saint;
For every sigh you breathe draws from
my heart

A drop of blood.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. I ne'er offended
yet:

My fault, I fear, will in my brow be writ.
Women that fall, not quite bereft of
grace,

Have their offences noted in their face.
I blush and am ashamed. Oh, Master
Wendoll,

Pray God I be not born to curse your
tongue,

That hath enchanted me! This maze I am in

I fear will prove the labyrinth of sin.

[Reënter NICHOLAS behind.]

WENDOLL. The path of pleasure, and the gate to bliss,

Which on your lips I knock at with a kiss.

NICHOLAS [aside]. I'll kill the rogue.

WENDOLL. Your husband is from home, your bed's no blab.

Nay, look not down and blush.

[*Exeunt WENDOLL and MISTRESS
FRANKFORD.*]

NICHOLAS. Zounds! I'll stab.

Ay, Nick, was it thy chance to come just in the nick?

I love my master, and I hate that slave:
I love my mistress, but these tricks I like not.

My master shall not pocket up this wrong;
I'll eat my fingers first. What say'st thou, metal?

Does not the rascal Wendoll go on legs
That thou must cut off? Hath he not ham strings

That thou must hough? Nay, metal, thou shalt stand

To all I say. I'll henceforth turn a spy,

And watch them in their close conveyances.

I never looked for better of that rascal, Since he came miching first into our house:

It is that Satan hath corrupted her, For she was fair and chaste. I'll have an eye

In all their gestures. Thus I think of them,

If they proceed as they have done before: Wendoll's a knave, my mistress is a——

[Exit.]

ACT III

SCENE I—A room in SIR CHARLES MOUNTFORD'S house.

[Enter SIR CHARLES MOUNTFORD and SUSAN.]

SIR CHARLES. Sister, you see we are driven to hard shift

To keep this poor house we have left unsold;

I am now enforced to follow husbandry, And you to milk; and do we not live well?

Well, I thank God.

SUSAN. O brother, here's a change. Since old Sir Charles died, in our father's house!

SIR CHARLES. All things on earth thus change, some up, some down; Content's a kingdom. and I wear that crown.

[Enter SHAFTON with a SERJEANT.]

SHAFTON. Good morrow, morrow, Sir Charles: what, with your sister, Plying your husbandry?—Serjeant, stand off.—

You have a pretty house here, and a garden,

And goodly ground about it. Since it lies So near a lordship that I lately bought, I would fain buy it of you. I will give you——

SIR CHARLES. O, pardon me: this house successively

Hath 'longed to me and my progenitors Three hundred years. My great-great-grandfather,

He in whom first our gentle style began, Dwelt here; and in this ground, increased this mole-hill

Unto that mountain which my father left me.

Where he the first of all our house began, I now the last will end, and keep this house,

This virgin title, never yet deflowered By any unthrift of the Mountfords' line.

In brief, I will not sell it for more gold Than you could hide or pave the ground withal.

SHAFTON. Ha, ha! a proud mind and a beggar's purse!

Where's my three hundred pounds, besides the use?

I have brought it to an execution By course of law: what, is my moneys ready?

SIR CHARLES. An execution, sir, and never tell me

You put my bond in suit! you deal extremely.

SHAFTON. Sell me the land, and I'll acquit you straight.

SIR CHARLES. Alas, alas! 'tis all trouble hath left me

To cherish me and my poor sister's life. If this were sold, our names should then be quite

Razed from the bed-roll of gentility. You see what hard shift we have made to keep it

Allied still to our own name. This palm, you see,

Labour hath glowed within: her silver brow,

That never tasted a rough winter's blast Without a mask or fan, doth with a grace Defy cold winter, and his storms out-face.

SUSAN. Sir, we feed sparing, and we labour hard,

We lie uneasy, to reserve to us And our succession this small plot of ground.

SIR CHARLES. I have so bent my thoughts to husbandry,
That I protest I scarcely can remember
What a new fashion is; how silk or satin

Feels in my hand: why, pride is grown to us

A mere, mere stranger. I have quite forgot

The names of all that ever waited on me;
I cannot name ye any of my hounds,
Once from whose echoing mouths I heard all music

That e'er my heart desired. What should I say?

To keep this place I have changed myself away.

SHAFTON [to the SERJEANT]. Arrest him at my suit. Actions and actions
Shall keep thee in perpetual bondage fast:

Nay, more, I'll sue thee by a late appeal,
And call thy former life in question.

The keeper is my friend, thou shalt have irons,

And usage such as I'll deny to dogs:
Away with him!

SIR CHARLES [to SUSAN]. You are too timorous:

But trouble is my master,
And I will serve him truly.—My kind sister,

Thy tears are of no force to mollify
This flinty man. Go to my father's brother,

My kinsmen and allies; entreat them for me,

To ransom me from this injurious man,
That seeks my ruin.

SHAFTON. Come, irons, irons! come away;

I'll see thee lodged far from the sight of day.

[Exit SHAFTON and SERJEANT with SIR CHARLES.]

SUSAN. My heart's so hardened with the frost of grief,
Death cannot pierce it through. Tyrant too fell!

So lead the fiends condemnèd souls to hell.

[Enter SIR FRANCIS ACTON and MALBY.]

SIR FRANCIS. Again to prison! Malby, hast thou seen

A poor slave better tortured? Shall we hear

The music of his voice cry from the grate,
"Meat for the Lord's sake"? No, no, yet I am not Thoroughly revenged. They say he hath a pretty wench

Unto his sister: shall I, in mercy-sake
To him and to his kindred, bribe the fool
To shame herself by lewd dishonest lust?
I'll proffer largely; but, the deed being done,

I'll smile to see her base confusion.

MALBY. Methinks, Sir Francis, you are full revenged

For greater wrongs than he can proffer you.

See where the poor sad gentlewoman stands.

SIR FRANCIS. Ha, ha! now will I flout her poverty,

Deride her fortunes, scoff her base estate;
My very soul the name of Mountford hates.

But stay, my heart! oh, what a look did fly

To strike my soul through with thy piercing eye!

I am enchanted; all my spirits are fled,
And with one glance my envious spleen struck dead.

SUSAN. Acton! that seeks our blood.
[Runs away.]

SIR FRANCIS. O chaste and fair!

MALBY. Sir Francis, why, Sir Francis, zounds! in a trance?

Sir Francis, what cheer, man? Come, come, how is't?

SIR FRANCIS. Was she not fair? Or else this judging eye

Cannot distinguish beauty.

MALBY. She was fair.

SIR FRANCIS. She was an angel in a mortal's shape,

And ne'er descended from old Mountford's line.

But soft, soft, let me call my wits together.

A poor, poor wench, to my great adversary
 Sister, whose very souls denounce stern war,
 One against other. How now, Frank, turned fool
 Or madman, whether? But no; master of My perfect senses and directest wits.
 Then why should I be in this violent humour
 Of passion and of love; and with a person
 So different every way, and so opposed
 In all contractions, and still-warring actions?
 Fie, fie; how I dispute against my soul!
 Come, come; I'll gain her, or in her fair quest
 Purchase my soul free and immortal rest.
 [Exit.]

SCENE II—A sitting-room in FRANKFORD'S house.

[Enter SERVING-MEN, one with a voider and a wooden knife to take away; another with the salt and bread; another with the table-cloth and napkins; another with the carpet: JENKIN follows them with two lights.]

JENKIN. So, march in order, and retire in battle array. My master and the guests have supped already, all's taken away: here, now spread for the serving-men in the hall. Butler, it belongs to your office.

BUTLER. I know it, Jenkin. What d'ye call the gentleman that supped there to-night?

JENKIN. Who, my master?

BUTLER. No, no; Master Wendoll, he's a daily guest: I mean the gentleman that came but this afternoon.

JENKIN. His name's Master Cranwell. God's light, hark, within there, my master calls to lay more billets upon the fire. Come, come! Lord, how we that are in office here in the house are troubled! One spread the carpet in the parlour, and stand ready to snuff the lights; the rest be ready to prepare their stomachs. More lights in the hall there. Come, Nich'las.

 [Exit all but NICHOLAS.]

NICHOLAS. I cannot eat, but had I Wendoll's heart
 I would eat that; the rogue grows impudent.

Oh, I have seen such vile notorious tricks, Ready to make my eyes dart from my head.

I'll tell my master, by this air I will!
 Fall what may fall, I'll tell him. Here he comes.

[Enter FRANKFORD, brushing the crumbs from his clothes with a napkin, as newly risen from supper.]

FRANKFORD. Nicholas, what make you here? why are not you

At supper in the hall among your fellows?
 NICHOLAS. Master, I stayed your rising from the board,

To speak with you.

FRANKFORD. Be brief, then, gentle Nicholas;
 My wife and guests attend me in the parlour.

Why dost thou pause? Now, Nicholas, you want money,
 And, unthrift-like, would eat into your wages

Ere you have earned it: here, sir, 's half a crown;

Play the good husband, and away to supper.

NICHOLAS. By this hand, an honourable gentleman! I will not see him wronged.—Sir, I have served you long; you entertained me seven years before your beard. You knew me, sir, before you knew my mistress.

FRANKFORD. What of this, good Nicholas?

NICHOLAS. I never was a make-bate or a knave;

I have no fault but one: I'm given to quarrel,

But not with women. I will tell you, master,

That which will make your heart leap from your breast,

Your hair to startle from your head, your ears to tingle.

FRANKFORD. What preparation's this to dismal news?

NICHOLAS. 'Sblood, sir! I love you better than your wife; I'll make it good.

FRANKFORD. You are a knave, and I have much ado With wonted patience to contain my rage, And not to break thy pate. Thou art a knave:

I'll turn you, with your base comparisons, Out of my doors.

NICHOLAS. Do, do: there is not room For Wendoll and for me both in one house.

O master, master, that Wendoll is a villain.

FRANKFORD. Ay, saucy!

NICHOLAS. Strike, strike; do, strike; yet hear me: I am no fool, I know a villain, when I see him act Deeds of a villain. Master, master, that base slave Enjoys my mistress, and dishonours you.

FRANKFORD. Thou hast killed me with a weapon whose sharp point Hath pricked quite through and through my shivering heart:

Drops of cold sweat sit dangling on my hairs,

Like morning's dew upon the golden flowers,

And I am plunged into strange agonies. What didst thou say? If any word that touched

His credit or her reputation,

It is as hard to enter my belief

As Dives into heaven.

NICHOLAS. I can gain nothing; They are two that never wronged me. I knew before

'Twas but a thankless office, and perhaps As much as is my service, or my life Is worth. All this I know; but this and more,

More by a thousand dangers, could not hire me

To smother such a heinous wrong from you. I saw, and I have said.

FRANKFORD [aside]. 'Tis probable; though blunt, yet he is honest: Though I durst pawn my life, and on their faith

Hazard the dear salvation of my soul, Yet in my trust I may be too secure. May this be true? O, may it, can it be? Is it by any wonder possible?

Man, woman, what thing mortal may we trust,

When friends and bosom wives prove so unjust?—

[To NICHOLAS.] What instance hast thou of this strange report?

NICHOLAS. Eyes, eyes.

FRANKFORD. Thy eyes may be deceived, I tell thee:

For, should an angel from the heavens drop down,

And preach this to me that thyself hast told,

He should have much ado to win belief; In both their loves I am so confident.

NICHOLAS. Shall I discourse the same by circumstance?

FRANKFORD. No more! to supper, and command your fellows

To attend us and the strangers. Not a word,

I charge thee on thy life: be secret then, For I know nothing.

NICHOLAS. I am dumb; and, now that I have eased my stomach,

I will go fill my stomach.

FRANKFORD. Away; be gone. [Exit NICHOLAS.]

She is well born, descended nobly;

Virtuous her education, her repute

Is in the general voice of all the country

Honest and fair; her carriage, her demeanour,

In all her actions that concern the love To me her husband, modest, chaste, and godly.

Is all this seeming gold plain copper?

But he, that Judas that hath borne my purse,

And sold me for a sin!—O God! O God! Shall I put up these wrongs? No. Shall I trust

The bare report of this suspicious groom,

Before the double-gilt, the well-hatched ore

Of their two hearts? No, I will lose these
thoughts:

Distraction I will banish from my brow,
And from my looks exile sad discontent,
Their wonted favours in my tongue shall
flow;

Till I know all, I'll nothing seem to know.

Lights and a table there! Wife, Master
Wendoll,
And gentle Master Cranwell.

[Enter MISTRESS FRANKFORD, WENDOLL, CRANWELL, NICHOLAS, and JENKIN, with cards, carpets, stools, and other necessaries.]

FRANKFORD. O Master Cranwell, you are a stranger here,
And often baulk my house: faith, y'are
a churl:

Now we have supped, a table, and to cards.

JENKIN. A pair of cards, Nicholas, and a carpet to cover the table. Where's
Cicely with her counters and her box?
Candles and candlesticks there! Fie, we have such a household of serving creatures! unless it be Nick and I, there's not one amongst them all can say ho to a goose. Well said, Nick. [They spread a carpet, set down lights and cards.]

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. Come, Master
Frankford, who shall take my part?

FRANKFORD. Marry, that will I, sweet
wife.

WENDOLL. No, by my faith, sir; when you are together I sit out: it must be Mistress Frankford and I, or else it is no match.

FRANKFORD. I do not like that match.

NICHOLAS [aside]. You have no reason, marry, knowing all.

FRANKFORD. 'Tis no great matter neither. Come, Master Cranwell, shall you and I take them up?

CRANWELL. At your pleasure, sir.

FRANKFORD. I must look to you, Master Wendoll, for you will be playing false;
nay, so will my wife too.

NICHOLAS [aside]. Ay, I will be sworn she will.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. Let them that are taken playing false, forfeit the set.

FRANKFORD. Content; it shall go hard but I'll take you.

CRANWELL. Gentlemen, what shall our game be?

WENDOLL. Master Frankford, you play best at nobby.

FRANKFORD. You shall not find it so;
indeed you shall not.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. I can play at nothing so well as double ruff.

FRANKFORD. If Master Wendoll and my wife be together, there's no playing against them at double hand.

NICHOLAS. I can tell you, sir, the game that Master Wendoll is best at.

WENDOLL. What game is that, Nick?

NICHOLAS. Marry, sir, knave out of doors.

WENDOLL. She and I will take you at lodam.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. Husband, shall we play at saint?

FRANKFORD. My saint's turned devil.

No, we'll none of saint:

You are best at new-cut, wife; you'll play at that.

WENDOLL. If you play at new-cut, I am soonest hiter of any here, for a wager.

FRANKFORD. 'Tis me they play on.

Well, you may draw out.

For all your cunning, 'twill be to your
shame;

I'll teach you, at your new-cut, a new game.

Come, come.

CRANWELL. If you cannot agree upon the game, to post and pair.

WENDOLL. We shall be soonest pairs;
and my good host,

When he comes late home, he must kiss
the post.

FRANKFORD. Whoever wins, it shall be thy cost.

CRANWELL. Faith, let it be vide-ruff, and let's make honours.

FRANKFORD. If you make honours, one thing let me crave:

Honour the king and queen; except the knave.

WENDOLL. Well, as you please for that. Lift who shall deal.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. The least in sight: what are you, Master Wendoll?

WENDOLL. I am a knave.

NICHOLAS [aside]. I'll swear it.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. I a queen.

FRANKFORD [aside]. A quean thou shouldst say. [Aloud.] Well, the cards are mine;

They are the grossest pair that e'er I felt.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. Shuffle, I'll cut: would I had never dealt.

FRANKFORD. I have lost my dealing.

WENDOLL. Sir, the fault's in me:

This queen I have more than mine own, you see.

Give me the stock.

FRANKFORD. My mind's not on my game.

Many a deal I have lost; the more's your shame.

You have served me a bad trick, Master Wendoll.

WENDOLL. Sir, you must take your lot. To end this strife,

I know I have dealt better with your wife.

FRANKFORD. Thou hast dealt falsely, then.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. What's trumps?

WENDOLL. Hearts: partner, I rub.

FRANKFORD [aside]. Thou robb'st me of my soul, of her chaste love;

In thy false dealing thou hast robbed my heart.

[Aloud.] Booty you play; I like a loser stand,

Having no heart, or here or in my hand.

I will give o'er the set; I am not well. Come, who will hold my cards?

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. Not well, sweet Master Frankford!

Alas, what ail you? 'Tis some sudden qualm.

WENDOLL. How long have you been so, Master Frankford?

FRANKFORD. Sir, I was lusty, and I had my health,

But I grew ill when you began to deal. Take hence this table. Gentle Master Cranwell,

You are welcome; see your chamber at your pleasure.

I'm sorry that this meagrim takes me so, I cannot sit and bear you company.

Jenkin, some lights, and show him to his chamber. [Exeunt CRANWELL and JENKIN.]

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. A night-gown for my husband; quickly there: It is some rheum or cold.

WENDOLL. Now, in good faith, this illness you have got

By sitting late without your gown.

FRANKFORD. I know it, Master Wendoll.

Go, go to bed, lest you complain like me. Wife, prythee, wife, into my bed-chamber; The night is raw and cold, and rheumatic: Leave me my gown and light; I'll walk away my fit.

WENDOLL. Sweet sir, good night.

FRANKFORD. Myself, good night.

[Exit WENDOLL.]

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. Shall I attend you, husband?

FRANKFORD. No, gentle wife, thou'lt catch cold in thy head;

Prythee, be gone, sweet; I'll make haste to bed.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. No sleep will fasten on mine eyes, you know, Until you come.

FRANKFORD. Sweet Nan, I prythee go.— [Exit MISTRESS FRANKFORD.]

I have bethought me: get me, by degrees, The keys of all my doors, which I will mould

In wax, and take their fair impression, To have by them new keys. This being compassed,

At a set hour a letter shall be brought me, And, when they think they may securely play,

They nearest are to danger. Nick, I must rely Upon thy trust and faithful secrecy.

NICHOLAS. Build on my faith.

FRANKFORD. To bed then, not to rest:
Care lodges in my brain, grief in my breast. [Exit.]

ACT IV

SCENE I—A room in old MOUNTFORD'S
house.

[Enter SUSAN, OLD MOUNTFORD, SANDY,
RODER, and TIDY.]

OLD MOUNTFORD. You say my nephew is in great distress:
Who brought it to him, but his own lewd
life?

I cannot spare a cross. I must confess
He was my brother's son: why, niece,
what then?

This is no world in which to pity men.

SUSAN. I was not born a beggar, though his extremes

Enforce this language from me: I protest
No fortune of mine own could lead my tongue

To this base key. I do beseech you, uncle,
For the name's sake, for Christianity,
Nay, for God's sake, to pity his distress:
He is denied the freedom of the prison,
And in the hole is laid with men condemned;

Plenty he hath of nothing but of irons,
And it remains in you to free him thence.

OLD MOUNTFORD. Money I cannot spare;
men should take heed;

He lost my kindred when he fell to need. [Exit.]

SUSAN. Gold is but earth, thou earth enough shalt have,

When thou hast once took measure of thy grave.

You know me, Master Sandy, and my suit.

SANDY. I knew you, lady, when the old man lived;

I knew you ere your brother sold his land;
Then you sung well, played sweetly on the lute;

But now I neither know you nor your suit. [Exit.]

SUSAN. You, Master Roder, was my brother's tenant,

Rent-free he placed you in that wealthy farm,

Of which you are possessed.

RODER. True, he did;
And have I not there dwelt still for his sake?

I have some business now; but, without doubt,

They that have hurled him in will help him out. [Exit.]

SUSAN. Cold comfort still: what say you, cousin Tidy?

TIDY. I say this comes of roysting, swaggering.

Call me not cousin: each man for himself.
Some men are born to mirth, and some to sorrow.

I am no cousin unto them that borrow. [Exit.]

SUSAN. O charity! why art thou fled
to heaven,
And left all things upon this earth uneven?

Their scoffing answers I will ne'er return;
But to myself his grief in silence mourn.

[Enter SIR FRANCIS ACTON and MALBY.]

SIR FRANCIS. She is poor, I'll therefore tempt her with this gold.

Go, Malby, in my name deliver it,
And I will stay thy answer.

MALBY. Fair mistress, as I understand, your grief

Doth grow from want, so I have here in store

A means to furnish you, a bag of gold,
Which to your hands I freely tender
you.

SUSAN. I thank you, Heavens! I thank you, gentle sir:

God make me able to requite this favour!

MALBY. This gold Sir Francis Acton sends by me,

And prays you—

SUSAN. Acton! O God! that name I am born to curse:

Hence, bawd! hence, broker! see, I spurn
his gold;

My honour never shall for gain be sold.

SIR FRANCIS. Stay, lady, stay.

SUSAN. From you I'll posting hie,

Even as the doves from feathered eagles
fly. [Exit.]

SIR FRANCIS. She hates my name, my face: how should I woo?

I am disgraced in every thing I do.
The more she hates me, and disdains my
love,

The more I am rapt in admiration
Of her divine and chaste perfections.

Woo her with gifts I cannot, for all gifts
Sent in my name she spurns: with looks
I cannot,

For she abhors my sight; nor yet with letters,

For none she will receive. How then,
how then?

Well, I will fasten such a kindness on her
As shall o'ercome her hate and conquer it.
Sir Charles, her brother, lies in execution
For a great sum of money; and, besides,
The appeal is sued still for my hunts-
man's death,

Which only I have power to reverse:

In her I'll bury all my hate of him.

Go seek the keeper, Malby, bring him to
me:

To save his body, I his debts will pay;

To save his life, I his appeal will stay.
[Exit.]

SCENE II—A prison cell.

[Enter SIR CHARLES MOUNTFORD, with irons, his feet bare, his garments all ragged and torn.]

SIR CHARLES. Of all on the earth's face
most miserable,
Breathe in this hellish dungeon thy laments,
Thus like a slave ragged, like a felon
gyved.

What hurls thee headlong to this base estate?

O unkind uncle! O my friends ingrate!
Unthankful kinsmen! Mountford's all too base,

To let thy name be fettered in disgrace!
A thousand deaths here in this grave I
die;

Fear, hunger, sorrow, cold, all threat my
death,

And join together to deprive my breath.

But that which most torments me, my dear sister

Hath left to visit me, and from my friends
Hath brought no hopeful answer: therefore I

Divine they will not help my misery.

If it be so, shame, scandal, and contempt
Attend their covetous thoughts; need make their graves!

Usurers they live, and may they die like slaves!

[Enter KEEPER.]

KEEPER. Knight, be of comfort, for I bring thee freedom

From all thy troubles.

SIR CHARLES. Then I am doomed to die;

Death is the end of all calamity.

KEEPER. Live: your appeal is stayed;
the execution

Of all your debts discharged; your creditors

Even to the utmost penny satisfied.

In sign whereof, your shackles I knock off;
You are not left so much indebted to us

As for your fees; all is discharged, all paid.

Go freely to your house, or where you
please,

After long miseries, embrace your ease.

SIR CHARLES. Thou grumblest out the sweetest music to me

That ever organ played. Is this a dream
Or do my waking senses apprehend
The pleasing taste of these applausive
news?

Slave that I was, to wrong such honest
friends,

My loving kinsmen, and my near allies.

Tongue, I will bite thee for the scandal breathed

Against such faithful kinsmen: they are all

Composed of pity and compassion,

Of melting charity, and of moving ruth.

That which I spake before was in my rage;

They are my friends, the mirrors of this
age,

Bounteous and free. The noble Mountford's race,
 Ne'er bred a covetous thought, or humour base.

[Enter SUSAN.]

SUSAN. I can no longer stay from visiting

My woful brother: while I could, I kept
 My hapless tidings from his hopeful ear.

SIR CHARLES. Sister, how much am I indebted to thee,
 And to thy travel!

SUSAN. What, at liberty?

SIR CHARLES. Thou seest I am, thanks to thy industry:

Oh! unto which of all my courteous friends

Am I thus bound? My uncle Mountford, he Even of an infant loved me: was it he?

So did my cousin Tidy: was it he?

So Master Roder, Master Sandy too:

Which of all these did this high kindness do?

SUSAN. Charles, can you mock me in your poverty,

Knowing your friends deride your misery? Now, I protest I stand so much amazed To see your bonds free, and your irons knocked off,

That I am rapt into a maze of wonder: The rather for I know not by what means This happiness hath chanced.

SIR CHARLES. Why, by my uncle, My cousins, and my friends: who else, I pray,

Would take upon them all my debts to pay?

SUSAN. O brother, they are men all of flint,

Pictures of marble, and as void of pity As chased bears. I begged, I sued, I kneeled,

Laid open all your griefs and miseries, Which they derided; more than that, denied us

A part in their alliance; but, in pride, Said that our kindred with our plenty died.

SIR CHARLES. Drudges too much—what did they? oh, known evil!

Rich fly the poor, as good men shun the devil.

Whence should my freedom come? of whom alive,

Saving of those, have I deserved so well? Guess, sister, call to mind, remember me:

These I have raised; they follow the world's guise;

Whom rich in honour, they in woe despise.

SUSAN. My wits have lost themselves, let's ask the keeper.

SIR CHARLES. Gaoler!

KEEPER. At hand, sir.

SIR CHARLES. Of courtesy resolve me one demand.

What was he took the burthen of my debts

From off my back, stayed my appeal to death,

Discharged my fees, and brought me liberty?

KEEPER. A courteous knight, one called Sir Francis Acton.

SIR CHARLES. Ha! Acton! O me, more distressed in this

Than all my troubles! hale me back,

Double my irons, and my sparing meals

Put into halves, and lodge me in a dungeon

More deep, more dark, more cold, more comfortless.

By Acton freed! not all thy manacles

Could fetter so my heels as this one word Hath thrall'd my heart; and it must now lie bound

In more strict prison than thy stony gaol. I am not free; I go but under bail.

KEEPER. My charge is done, sir, now I have my fees;

As we get little, we will nothing leese.

[Exit.]

SIR CHARLES. By Acton freed, my dangerous opposite!

Why, to what end? on what occasion? ha! Let me forget the name of enemy,

And with indifference balance this high favour:

Ha!

SUSAN [aside]. His love to me? upon my soul 'tis so:

That is the root from whence these strange things grow.

SIR CHARLES. Had this proceeded from my father, he

That by the law of nature is most bound In offices of love, it had deserved

My best employment to requite that grace: Had it proceeded from my friends or him. From them this action had deserved my life:

And from a stranger more; because from such

There is less expectation of good deeds. But he, nor father, nor ally, nor friend, More than a stranger, both remote in blood

And in his heart opposed my enemy.— That this high bounty should proceed from him,—

Oh, there I lose myself! What should I say,

What think, what do, his bounty to repay?

SUSAN. You wonder, I am sure, whence this strange kindness

Proceeds in Acton. I will tell you, brother:

He dotes on me, and oft hath sent me gifts,

Letters and tokens: I refused them all.

SIR CHARLES. I have enough, though poor; my heart is set,

In one rich gift to pay back all my debt. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III—A room in FRANKFORD'S house.

[Enter FRANKFORD, and NICHOLAS with keys.]

FRANKFORD. This is the night that I must play my part To try two seeming angels. Where's my keys?

NICHOLAS. They are made according to your mould in wax:

I bade the smith be secret, gave him money,

And here they are. The letter, sir.

FRANKFORD. True, take it, there it is: [Gives him letter.]

And when thou seest me in my pleasant 'st vein,

Ready to sit to supper, bring it me.

NICHOLAS. I'll do't, make no more question but I'll do't. [Exit.]

[Enter MISTRESS FRANKFORD, CRANWELL, WENDOLL, and JENKIN.]

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. Sirrah, 'tis six o'clock already struck!

Go bid them spread the cloth and serve in supper.

JENKIN. It shall be done, forsooth, mistress. Where's

Spigot, the butler, to give us our salt and trenchers? [Exit.]

WENDOLL. We that have been a-hunting all the day

Come with preparèd stomachs. Master Frankford,

We wished you at our sport.

FRANKFORD. My heart was with you, and my mind was on you.

Fie, Master Cranwell! you are still thus sad?

A stool, a stool. Where's Jenkin, and where's Nick?

'Tis supper-time at least an hour ago.

What's the best news abroad?

WENDOLL. I know none good.

FRANKFORD. But I know too much bad. [Aside.]

[Enter JENKIN and BUTLER with a table-cloth, bread, trenchers, and salt.]

CRANWELL. Methinks, sir, you might have that interest

In your wife's brother, to be more remiss In his hard dealing against poor Sir Charles,

Who, as I hear, lies in York Castle, needy, And in great want.

[Exeunt JENKIN and BUTLER.]

FRANKFORD. Did not more weighty business of my own

Hold me away, I would have laboured peace

Betwixt them, with all care; indeed I would, sir.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. I'll write unto my brother earnestly
In that behalf.

WENDOLL. A charitable deed,
And will beget the good opinion
Of all your friends that love you, Mistress
Frankford.

FRANKFORD. That's you for one; I know you love Sir Charles,
And my wife too, well.

WENDOLL. He deserves the love
Of all true gentlemen; be yourselves
judge.

FRANKFORD. But supper, ho! Now as thou lov'st me, Wendoll,
Which I am sure thou dost, be merry,
pleasant,
And frolic it to-night. Sweet Master
Cranwell,

Do you the like. Wife, I protest my heart
Was ne'er more bent on sweet alacrity.
Where be those lazy knaves to serve in supper?

[Reënter NICHOLAS.]

NICHOLAS. Here's a letter, sir.

FRANKFORD. Whence comes it? and who brought it?

NICHOLAS. A stripling that below attends your answer,
And, as he tells me, it is sent from York.
FRANKFORD. Have him into the cellar;
let him taste

A cup of our March beer: go, make him drink. [Reads the letter.]

NICHOLAS. I'll make him drunk, if he be a Trojan.

FRANKFORD. My boots and spurs!
where' Jenkin? God forgive me, How I neglect my business! Wife, look
here;

I have a matter to be tried to-morrow
By eight o'clock, and my attorney writes
me,

I must be there betimes with evidence,
Or it will go against me. Where's my boots?

[Reënter JENKIN with boots and spurs.]

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. I hope your business craves no such despatch
That you must ride to-night.

WENDOLL [aside]. I hope it doth.

FRANKFORD. God's me! no such despatch!

Jenkin, my boots. Where's Nick? Saddle
my roan,
And the grey dapple for himself. Content ye,

It much concerns me. Gentle Master
Cranwell,

And Master Wendoll, in my absence use
The very ripest pleasures of my house.

WENDOLL. Lord! Master Frankford, will you ride to-night?

The ways are dangerous.

FRANKFORD. Therefore will I ride Appointed well; and so shall Nick my
man.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. I'll call you up by five o'clock to-morrow.

FRANKFORD. No, by my faith, wife, I'll not trust to that;

'Tis not such easy rising in a morning
From one I love so dearly: no, by my faith,

I shall not leave so sweet a bedfellow,
But with much pain. You have made me a sluggard

Since I first knew you.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. Then, if you needs will go

This dangerous evening, Master Wendoll,
Let me entreat you bear him company.

WENDOLL. With all my heart, sweet mistress. My boots there!

FRANKFORD. Fie, fie, that for my private business

I should disease my friend, and be a trouble

To the whole house! Nick!

NICHOLAS. Anon, sir.

FRANKFORD. Bring forth my gelding.
[Exit NICHOLAS.]

As you love me, sir,

Use no more words: a hand, good Master
Cranwell.

CRANWELL. Sir, God be your good speed!

FRANKFORD. Good night, sweet Nan;
nay, nay, a kiss and part.

[Aside.] Dissembling lips, you suit not with my heart. [Exit.]

WENDOLL. How business, time, and hours, all gracious prove,
And are the furtherers to my new-born love!

I am husband now in Master Frankford's place,
And must command the house. My pleasure is

We will not sup abroad so publicly,
But in your private chamber, Mistress Frankford.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. O, sir, you are too public in your love,
And Master Frankford's wife—

CRANWELL. Might I crave favour,
I would entreat you I might see my chamber;

am on the sudden grown exceeding ill,
And would be spared from supper.

WENDOLL. Light there, ho!
See you want nothing, sir; for, if you do,
You injure that good man, and wrong me too.

CRANWELL. I will make bold: good night. [Exit.]

WENDOLL. How all conspire
To make our bosom sweet, and full entire!

Come, Nan, I pry'thee let us sup within.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. Oh, what a clog unto the soul is sin!

We pale offenders are still full of fear;
Every suspicious eye brings danger near,
When they whose clear hearts from offence are free

Despise report, base scandals do outface,
And stand at mere defiance with disgrace.

WENDOLL. Fie, fie! you talk too like a puritan.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. You have tempted me to mischief, Master Wendoll:

I have done I know not what. Well, you plead custom;

That which for want of wit I granted erst,

I now must yield through fear. Come, come, let's in;

Once o'er shoes, we are straight o'er head in sin.

WENDOLL. My jocund soul is joyful above measure;

I'll be profuse in Frankford's richest treasure. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV—Another part of the house.

[Enter CICELY, JENKIN, and BUTLER.]

JENKIN. My mistress and Master Wendoll, my master, sup in her chamber to-night. Cicely, you are preferred from being the cook to be chambermaid: of all the loves betwixt thee and me, tell me what thou thinkest of this?

CICELY. Mum; there's an old proverb,—“when the cat's away, the mouse may play.”

JENKIN. Now you talk of a cat, Cicely, I smell a rat.

CICELY. Good words, Jenkin, lest you be called to answer them.

JENKIN. Why, God make my mistress an honest woman! are not these good words? Pray God my new master play not the knave with my old master! is there any hurt in this? God send no villainy intended! and, if they do sup together, pray God they do not lie together! God make my mistress chaste, and make us all His servants! what harm is there in all this? Nay, more; here is my hand, thou shalt never have my heart unless thou say Amen.

CICELY. Amen, I pray God, I say.

[Enter SERVING-MAN.]

SERVING-MAN. My mistress sends that you should make less noise, to lock up the doors, and see the household all got to bed: you, Jenkin, for this night are made the porter to see the gates shut in.

JENKIN. Thus, by little and little, I creep into office. Come, to kennel, my masters, to kennel; 'tis eleven o'clock, already.

SERVING-MAN. When you have locked the gates in, you must send up the keys to my mistress.

CICELY. Quickly, for God's sake, Jenkin, for I must carry them. I am neither pillow nor bolster, but I know more than both.

JENKIN. To bed, good Spigot; to bed, good honest serving-creatures; and let us sleep as snug as pigs in pease-straw.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V—Outside FRANKFORD'S house.

[Enter FRANKFORD and NICHOLAS.]

FRANKFORD. Soft, soft; we have tied our geldings to a tree, Two flight-shot off, lest by their thundering hoofs

They blab our coming back. Hear'st thou no noise?

NICHOLAS. Hear! I hear nothing but the owl and you.

FRANKFORD. So; now my watch's hand points upon twelve, And it is dead midnight. Where are my keys?

NICHOLAS. Here, sir.

FRANKFORD. This is the key that opens my outward gate;

This is the hall-door; this the withdrawing chamber;

But this, that door that's bawd unto my shame,

Fountain and spring of all my bleeding thoughts,

Where the most hallowed order and true knot

Of nuptial sanctity hath been profaned; It leads to my polluted bed-chamber,

Once my terrestrial heaven, now my earth's hell,

The place where sins in all their ripeness dwell.

But I forget myself: now to my gate.

NICHOLAS. It must open with far less noise than Cripple-gate, or your plot's dashed.

FRANKFORD. So, reach me my dark lantern to the rest;

Tread softly, softly.

NICHOLAS. I will walk on eggs this pace.

FRANKFORD. A general silence hath surprised the house,

And this is the last door. Astonishment,

Fear, and amazement play against my heart,

Even as a madman beats upon a drum.

Oh, keep my eyes, you Heavens, before I enter,

From any sight that may transfix my soul;

Or, if there be so black a spectacle,

Oh, strike mine eyes stark blind; or, if not so,

Lend me such patience to digest my grief That I may keep this white and virgin hand

From any violent outrage or red murder! And with that prayer I enter. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI—The hall of FRANKFORD'S house.

[NICHOLAS discovered.]

NICHOLAS. Here's a circumstance.

A man be made cuckold in the time That he's about it. An the case were mine,

As 'tis my master's,—'sblood that he makes me swear!—

I would have placed his action, entered there;

I would, I would.

[Enter FRANKFORD.]

FRANKFORD. Oh! oh!

NICHOLAS. Master, 'sblood! master! master!

FRANKFORD. O me unhappy! I have found them lying

Close in each other's arms, and fast asleep.

But that I would not damn two precious souls,

Bought with my Saviour's blood, and send them, laden

With all their scarlet sins upon their backs,

Unto a fearful judgment, their two lives

Had met upon my rapier.

NICHOLAS. 'Sblood, master, what, have you left them sleeping still? let me go wake them.

FRANKFORD. Stay, let me pause a while. O God! O God! that it were possible

To undo things done; to call back yesterday!

That Time could turn up his swift sandy glass,

To untell the days, and to redeem these hours!

Or that the sun

Could, rising from the west, draw his coach backward,

Take from the account of time so many minutes,

Till he had all these seasons called again, Those minutes, and those actions done in them,

Even from her first offence; that I might take her

As spotless as an angel in my arms!

But, oh! I talk of things impossible, And cast beyond the moon. God give me patience!

For I will in and wake them. [Exit.]

NICHOLAS. Here's patience perforce;

He needs must trot afoot that tires his horse.

[Enter WENDOLL, running over the stage in a night-gown, FRANKFORD after him with a sword drawn; a MAID-SERVANT in her smock stays his hand, and clasps hold on him. FRANKFORD pauses for a while.]

FRANKFORD. I thank thee, maid; thou, like the angel's hand, Hast stayed me from a bloody sacrifice.

[Exit MAID-SERVANT.]

Go, villain, and my wrongs sit on thy soul As heavy as this grief doth upon mine!

When thou record'st my many courtesies, And shalt compare them with thy treacherous heart,

Lay them together, weigh them equally, 'Twill be revenge enough. Go, to thy friend

A Judas: pray, lest I live to see Thee, Judas-like, hanged on an elder-tree.

[Enter MISTRESS FRANKFORD in her night attire.]

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. Oh, by what word, what title, or what name, Shall I entreat your pardon? Pardon! oh!

I am as far from hoping such sweet grace As Lucifer from heaven. To call you husband—

O me, most wretched! I have lost that name,

I am no more your wife.

NICHOLAS. 'Sblood, sir, she swoons.

FRANKFORD. Spare thou thy tears, for I will weep for thee:

And keep thy countenance, for I'll blush for thee.

Now, I protest, I think 'tis I am tainted, For I am most ashamed; and 'tis more hard

For me to look upon thy guilty face, Than on the sun's clear brow. What wouldst thou speak?

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. I would I had no tongue, no ears, no eyes,

No apprehension, no capacity.

When do you spurn me like a dog? when tread me

Under your feet? when drag me by the hair?

Though I deserve a thousand thousand fold

More than you can inflict: yet, once my husband,

For womanhood, to which I am a shame, Though once an ornament—even for His sake

That hath redeemed our souls, mark not my face

Nor hack me with your sword; but let me go

Perfect and undeformèd to my tomb.

I am not worthy that I should prevail In the least suit; no, not to speak to you,

Nor look on you, nor to be in your presence.

Yet, as an abject, this one suit I crave;

This granted, I am ready for my grave. [Kneels.]

FRANKFORD. My God, with patience arm me! Rise, nay, rise,

And I'll debate with thee. Was it for want

Thou playedst the strumpet? Wast thou not supplied

With every pleasure, fashion, and new toy Nay, even beyond my calling?

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. I was.

FRANKFORD. Was it then disability in me;

Or in thine eye seemed he a properer man?

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. Oh, no.

FRANKFORD. Did not I lodge thee in my bosom?

Wear thee here in my heart?

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. You did.

FRANKFORD. I did, indeed; witness my tears I did.

Go, bring my infants hither.

[Enter SERVANT with two CHILDREN.]

O Nan! O Nan!

If neither fear of shame, regard of honour,
The blemish of my house, nor my dear love

Could have withheld thee from so lewd a fact,

Yet for these infants, these young harmless souls,

On whose white brows thy shame is characterized,

And grows in greatness as they wax in years,—

Look but on them, and melt away in tears.

Away with them! lest, as her spotted body
Hath stained their names with stripe of bastardy,

So her adulterous breath may blast their spirits

With her infectious thoughts. Away with them.

[Exeunt SERVANT and CHILDREN.]

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. In this one life
I die ten thousand deaths.

FRANKFORD. Stand up, stand up; I will do nothing rashly;

I will retire a while into my study,

And thou shalt hear thy sentence presently. [Exit.]

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. 'Tis welcome, be it death. O me, base strumpet,
That, having such a husband, such sweet children,

Must enjoy neither! Oh, to redeem my honour,

I would have this hand cut off, these my breasts seared,

Be racked, strappadoed, put to any torment:

Nay, to whip but this scandal out, I would hazard

The rich and dear redemption of my soul.

He cannot be so base as to forgive me;

Nor I so shameless to accept his pardon.

O women, women, you that yet have kept

Your holy matrimonial vow unstained,

Make me your instance: when you tread awry,

Your sins, like mine, will on your conscience lie.

[Enter CICELY, JENKIN, and all the SERVING-MEN as newly come out of bed.]

ALL. O mistress, mistress, what have you done, mistress?

NICHOLAS. 'Shlood, what a caterwauling keep you here!

JENKIN. O Lord, mistress, how comes this to pass? My master is run away in his shirt, and never so much as called me to bring his clothes after him.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. See what guilt is! here stand I in this place, Ashamed to look my servants in the face.

[Enter FRANKFORD and CRANWELL, whom seeing she falls on her knees.]

FRANKFORD. My words are registered in Heaven already,

With patience hear me. I'll not martyr thee,

Nor mark thee for a strumpet; but with usage

Of more humility torment thy soul,

And kill thee even with kindness.

CRANWELL. Master Frankford—

FRANKFORD. Good Master Cranwell.

Woman, hear thy judgment.

Go make thee ready in thy best attire;

Take with thee all thy gowns, all thy apparel;

Leave nothing that did ever call thee mistress.

Or by whose sight, being left here in the house,

I may remember such a woman by.

Choose thee a bed and hangings for thy chamber;

Take with thee every thing that hath thy mark,
And get thee to my manor seven mile off,
Where live; 'tis thine; I freely give it thee.

My tenants by shall furnish thee with wains

To carry all thy stuff, within two hours,—
No longer will I limit thee my sight.

Choose which of all my servants thou likest best,

And they are thine to attend thee.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. A mild sentence.

FRANKFORD. But, as thou hopest for Heaven, as thou believest

Thy name's recorded in the book of life,
I charge thee never, after this sad day,
To see me, or to meet me, or to send
By word or writing, gift, or otherwise,
To move me, by thyself, or by thy friends;
Nor challenge any part in my two children.

So, farewell, Nan! for we will henceforth be

As we had never seen, ne'er more shall see.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. How full my heart is, in mine eyes appears;

What wants in words, I will supply in tears.

FRANKFORD. Come, take your coach, your stuff; all must along;

Servants and all, make ready; all be gone.
It was thy hand cut two hearts out of one.

[Exeunt.]

ACT V

SCENE I—The entrance to SIR FRANCIS ACTON'S house.

[Enter SIR CHARLES MOUNTFORD, and SUSAN, both well dressed.]

SUSAN. Brother, why have you tricked me like a bride, Bought me this gay attire, these ornaments?

Forget you our estate, our poverty?

SIR CHARLES. Call me not brother, but imagine me

Some barbarous outlaw, or uncivil kern;
For if thou shutt'st thy eye, and only hearest

The words that I shall utter, thou shalt judge me

Some staring ruffian, not thy brother Charles.

O sister!—

SUSAN. O brother, what doth this strange language mean?

SIR CHARLES. Dost love me, sister? wouldst thou see me live

A bankrupt beggar in the world's disgrace,
And die indebted to my enemies?

Wouldst thou behold me stand like a huge beam

In the world's eye, a bye-word and a scorn?

It lies in thee of these to acquit me free,
And all my debt I may out-strip by thee.

SUSAN. By me! why, I have nothing, nothing left;

I owe even for the clothes upon my back;
I am not worth—

SIR CHARLES. O sister, say not so;

It lies in you my downcast state to raise,
To make me stand on even points with the world.

Come, sister, you are rich; indeed you are;
And in your power you have, without delay,

Acton's five hundred pound back to repay.

SUSAN. Till now I had thought you had loved me. By my honour

(Which I have kept as spotless as the moon),

I ne'er was mistress of that single doit
Which I reserved not to supply your wants;

And do you think that I would hoard from you?

Now, by my hopes in Heaven, knew I the means

To buy you from the slavery of your debts (Especially from Acton, whom I hate),
I would redeem it with my life or blood.

SIR CHARLES. I challenge it; and, kindred set apart,

Thus, ruffian-like, I lay siege to your heart.

What do I owe to Acton?

SUSAN. Why some five hundred pounds; towards which, I swear,

In all the world I have not one denier.

SIR CHARLES. It will not prove so.
Sister, now resolve me:
What do you think (and speak your conscience)
Would Acton give, might he enjoy your bed?
SUSAN. He would not shrink to spend a thousand pound,
To give the Mountfords' name so deep a wound.
SIR CHARLES. A thousand pound! I
but five hundred owe;
Grant him your bed, he's paid with interest so.
SUSAN. O brother!
SIR CHARLES. O sister! only this one
way,
With that rich jewel you my debts may
pay.
In speaking this my cold heart shakes
with shame;
Nor do I woo you in a brother's name,
But in a stranger's. Shall I die in debt
To Acton, my grand foe, and you still wear
The precious jewel that he holds so dear?
SUSAN. My honour I esteem as dear and precious
As my redemption.
SIR CHARLES. I esteem you, sister,
As dear, for so dear prizing it.
SUSAN. Will Charles
Have me cut off my hands, and send them
Acton?
Rip up my breast, and with my bleeding
heart
Present him as a token?
SIR CHARLES. Neither, sister:
But hear me in my strange assertion.
Thy honour and my soul are equal in my regard;
Nor will thy brother Charles survive thy
shame.
His kindness, like a burthen hath surcharged me,
And under his good deeds I stooping go,
Not with an upright soul. Had I remained
In prison still, there doubtless I had died:
Then, unto him that freed me from that prison,

Still do I owe this life. What moved my foe
To enfranchise me? 'Twas, sister, for your love,
With full five hundred pounds he bought
your love,
And shall he not enjoy it? Shall the weight
Of all this heavy burthen lean on me,
And will not you bear part? You did partake
The joy of my release; will you not stand
In joint-bond bound to satisfy the debt?
Shall I be only charged?
SUSAN. But that I know
These arguments come from an honoured
mind.
As in your most extremity of need Scorning to stand in debt to one your hate,—
Nay, rather would engage your unstained
honour
Than to be held ingrate,—I should condemn you.
I see your resolution, and assent;
So Charles will have me, and I am content.
SIR CHARLES. For this I tricked you up.
SUSAN. But here's a knife,
To save mine honour, shall slice out my
life.
SIR CHARLES. Ay! know thou pleasest me a thousand times
More in that resolution than thy grant.—
Observe her love; to soothe it to my suit,
Her honour she will hazard, though not lose:
To bring me out of debt, her rigorous hand Will pierce her heart. O wonder! that will choose,
Rather than stain her blood, her life to lose.—
Come, you sad sister to a woful brother,
This is the gate: I'll bear him such a present,
Such an acquittance for the knight to
seal,
As will amaze his senses, and surprise
With admiration all his fantasies.
SUSAN. Before his unchaste thoughts shall seize on me,

'Tis here shall my imprisoned soul set free.

[Enter SIR FRANCIS ACTON and MALBY.]

SIR FRANCIS. How! Mountford with his sister, hand in hand!
What miracle's afoot?

MALBY. It is a sight
Begets in me much admiration.

SIR CHARLES. Stand not amazed to see me thus attended:

Acton, I owe thee money, and being unable

To bring thee the full sum in ready coin,
Lo! for thy more assurance, here's a pawn,—

My sister, my dear sister, whose chaste honour

I prize above a million: here, nay, take her;

She's worth your money, man; do not forsake her.

SIR FRANCIS. I would he were in earnest!

SUSAN. Impute it not to my immodesty:

My brother being rich in nothing else
But in his interest that he hath in me,
According to his poverty hath brought you
Me, all his store; whom howsoe'er you prize

As forfeit to your hand, he values highly,
And would not sell, but to acquit your debt,

For any emperor's ransom.

SIR FRANCIS. Stern heart, relent;
Thy former cruelty at length repent.
Was ever known, in any former age,
Such honourable wrested courtesy?
Lands, honours, life, and all the world forego,

Rather than stand engaged to such a foe. [Aside.]

SIR CHARLES. Acton, she is too poor to be thy bride,
And I too much opposed to be thy brother.
There, take her to thee: if thou hast the heart

To seize her as a rape, or lustful prey;
To blur our house, that never yet was stained;

To murder her that never meant thee harm;

To kill me now, whom once thou savedst from death,

Do them at once: on her all these rely,
And perish with her spotted chastity.

SIR FRANCIS. You overcome me in your love, Sir Charles;

I cannot be so cruel to a lady
I love so dearly. Since you have not spared

To engage your reputation to the world,
Your sister's honour, which you prize so dear,

Nay, all the comforts which you hold on earth,

To grow out of my debt, being your foe,
Your honoured thoughts, lo! thus I recompense:

Your metamorphosed foe receives your gift
In satisfaction of all former wrongs.

This jewel I will wear here in my heart;
And, where before I thought her for her wants

Too base to be my bride, to end all strife,
I seal you my dear brother, her my wife.

SUSAN. You still exceed us: I will yield to fate,

And learn to love, where I till now did hate.

SIR CHARLES. With that enchantment you have charmed my soul,

And made me rich even in those very words:

I pay no debt, but am indebted more;
Rich in your love, I never can be poor.

SIR FRANCIS. All's mine is yours; we are alike in state,

Let's knit in love what was opposed in hate.

Come! for our nuptials we will straight provide,

Blest only in our brother and fair bride. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II—A room in FRANKFORD'S house.

[Enter CRANWELL, FRANKFORD, and NICHOLAS.]

CRANWELL. Why do you search each room about your house.

Now that you have despatched your wife
away?

FRANKFORD. O sir, to see that nothing may be left

That ever was my wife's. I loved her dearly,

And when I do but think of her unkind-
ness,

My thoughts are all in hell; to avoid which torment,

I would not have a bodkin or a cuff,

A bracelet, necklace, or rebato wire;

Nor any thing that ever was called hers,

Left me, by which I might remember her.

Seek round about.

NICHOLAS. 'Sblood, master! here's her lute flung in a corner.

FRANKFORD. Her lute! O God! upon this instrument

Her fingers have run quick division,

Sweeter than that which now divides our hearts.

These frets have made me pleasant, that have now

Frets of my heart-strings made. O Master
Cranwell,

Oft hath she made this melancholy
wood,

Now mute and dumb for her disastrous
chance,

Speak sweetly many a note, sound many a strain

To her own ravishing voice, which being well strung,

What pleasant strange airs have they jointly rung!

Post with it after her. Now nothing's
left;

Of her and hers, I am at once bereft.

NICHOLAS. I'll ride and overtake her;
do my message,

And come back again. [Exit.]

CRANWELL. Mean time, sir, if you
please,

I'll to Sir Francis Acton, and inform him
Of what hath passed betwixt you and his sister.

FRANKFORD. Do as you please. How ill am I bested,

To be a widower ere my wife be dead!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III—A country road.

[Enter MISTRESS FRANKFOLD, with JENKIN, CICELY, a COACHMAN, and three CARTERS.]

MISTRESS FRANKFOLD. Bid my coach stay: why should I ride in state, Being hurled so low down by the hand of fate?

A seat like to my fortunes let me have;
Earth for my chair, and for my bed a grave.

JENKIN. Comfort, good mistress; you have watered your coach with tears already: you have but two mile now to go to your manor. A man cannot say by my old master Frankford as he may say by me, that he wants manors; for he hath three or four, of which this is one that we are going to now.

CICELY. Good mistress, be of good cheer; sorrow, you see, hurts you, but helps you not: we all mourn to see you so sad.

CARTER. Mistress, I spy one of my landlord's men
Come riding post: 'tis like he brings some news.

MISTRESS FRANKFOLD. Comes he from Master Frankford, he is welcome;
So are his news because they come from
him.

[Enter NICHOLAS.]

NICHOLAS [presenting lute]. There.

MISTRESS FRANKFOLD. I know the lute;
oft have I sung to thee:

We both are out of tune, both out of
time.

NICHOLAS. Would that had been the worst instrument that e'er you played on.
My master commends him to ye; there's all he can find that was ever yours: he hath nothing left that ever you could lay claim to but his own heart, and he could afford you that. All that I have to deliver you is this: he prays you to forget him, and so he bids you farewell.

MISTRESS FRANKFOLD. I thank him:
he is kind, and ever was.

All you that have true feeling of my grief,

That know my loss, and have relenting hearts,
Gird me about, and help me with your tears
To wash my spotted sins: my lute shall groan;
It cannot weep, but shall lament my moan.

[Enter WENDOLL.]

WENDOLL. Pursued with horror of a guilty soul,
And with the sharp scourge of repentance lashed
I fly from my own shadow. O my stars!
What have my parents in their lives deserved,
That you should lay this penance on their son?
When I but think of Master Frankford's love,
And lay it to my treason, or compare
My murdering him for his relieving me,
It strikes a terror like a lightning's flash
To scorch my blood up. Thus I, like the owl,
Ashamed of day, live in these shadowy woods,
Afraid of every leaf or murmuring blast,
Yet longing to receive some perfect knowledge
How he hath dealt with her. [Sees MISTRESS FRANKFORD.] O my sad fate!
Here, and so far from home, and thus attended!
O God! I have divorced the truest turtles
That ever lived together; and, being divided
In several places, make their several moan;
She in the fields laments, and he at home.
So poets write that Orpheus made the trees
And stones to dance to his melodious harp,
Meaning the rustic and the barbarous hinds,
That had no understanding part in them:
So she from these rude carters tears extracts,
Making their flinty hearts with grief to rise,

And draw down rivers from their rocky eyes.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD [to NICHOLAS].

If you return unto your master, say (Though not from me; for I am all unworthy
To blast his name so with a strumpet's tongue)

That you have seen me weep, wish myself dead:

Nay, you may say too, for my vow is passed,

Last night you saw me eat and drink my last.

This to your master you may say and swear;

For it is writ in Heaven, and decreed here.

NICHOLAS. I'll say you wept: I'll swear you made me sad.

Why how now, eyes? what now? what's here to do?

I'm gone, or I shall straight turn baby too.

WENDOLL. I cannot weep, my heart is all on fire:

Curst be the fruits of my unchaste desire!

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. Go, break this lute upon my coach's wheel,
As the last music that I e'er shall make;
Not as my husband's gift, but my farewell
To all earth's joy; and so your master tell.

NICHOLAS. If I can for crying.

WENDOLL. Grief, have done,

Or like a madman I shall frantic run.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. You have beheld the wofullest wretch on earth;

A woman made of tears: would you had words

To express but what you see! My inward grief

No tongue can utter; yet unto your power
You may describe my sorrow, and disclose
To thy sad master my abundant woes.

NICHOLAS. I'll do your commendations.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. O no:

I dare not so presume; nor to my children:

I am disclaimed in both; alas, I am.

Oh, never teach them, when they come to speak,

To name the name of mother; chide their
tongue,
If they by chance light on that hated
word;
Tell them 'tis naught; for, when that word they name,
Poor pretty souls! they harp on their own
shame.

WENDOLL. To recompense her wrongs, what canst thou do?
Thou hast made her husbandless and childless too.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. I have no more to say. Speak not for me;
Yet you may tell your master what you
see.

NICHOLAS. I'll do't. [Exit.]

WENDOLL. I'll speak to her, and comfort her in grief.

Oh! but her wound cannot be cured with
words.

No matter though, I'll do my best good-
will

To work a cure on her whom I did kill.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. So, now unto my coach, then to my home,
So to my death-bed; for from this sad
hour

I never will nor eat, nor drink, nor taste
Of any cates that may preserve my life:
I never will nor smile, nor sleep, nor rest;
But when my tears have washed my black soul white,

Sweet Saviour, to Thy hands I yield my sprite.

WENDOLL. O Mistress Frankford—

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. Oh, for God's sake fly!

The devil doth come to tempt me ere I die.
My coach! this fiend, that with an angel's
face

Conjured mine honour, till he sought my wrack,

In my repentant eyes seems ugly black.

[Exeunt all, except WENDOLL and JENKIN; the CARTERS whistling.]

JENKIN. What, my young master that fled in his shirt! How come you by your clothes again? You have made our house in a sweet pickle, ha' ye not, think you?

What, shall I serve you still, or cleave to the old house?

WENDOLL. Hence, slave! away with thy unseasoned mirth!
Unless thou canst shed tears, and sigh,
and howl,

Curse thy sad fortunes, and exclaim on
fate,

Thou art not for my turn.

JENKIN. Marry, an you will not, another will; farewell, and be hanged!
Would you had never come to have kept this coil within our doors; we shall ha'
you run away like a sprite again.

[Exit.]

WENDOLL. She's gone to death; I live to want and woe;

Her life, her sins, and all upon my head.
And I must now go wander, like a Cain,
In foreign countries and remotest climes,
Where the report of my ingratitude
Cannot be heard. I'll over first to France,
And so to Germany and Italy;

Where when I have recovered, and by travel

Gotten those perfect tongues, and that these rumours

May in their height abate, I will return:

And I divine (however now dejected)

My worth and parts being by some great man praised,

At my return I may in court be raised.

[Exit.]

SCENE IV—Before the manor.

[*Enter SIR FRANCIS ACTON, SUSAN, SIR
CHARLES MOUNTFORD, CRANWELL, and MALBY.*]

SIR FRANCIS. Brother, and now my wife, I think these troubles

Fall on my head by justice of the Heavens,
For being so strict to you in your extremities:

But we are now atoned. I would my sister

Could with like happiness o'ercome her
griefs,

As we have ours.

SUSAN. You tell us, Master Cranwell, wondrous things,

Touching the patience of that gentleman,
With what strange virtue he demean his grief.

CRANWELL. I told you what I was a witness of;

It was my fortune to lodge there that
night.

SIR FRANCIS. O that same villain Wendell! 'twas his tongue

That did corrupt her; she was of herself Chaste, and devoted well. Is this the house?

CRANWELL. Yes, sir, I take it here your sister lies.

SIR FRANCIS. My brother Frankford showed too mild a spirit

In the revenge of such a loathèd crime;
Less than he did, no man of spirit could
do:

I am so far from blaming his revenge,
That I commend it. Had it been my case,
Their souls at once had from their breasts
been freed:

Death to such deeds of shame is the due meed.

[They enter the house.]

SCENE V—A room in the manor.

[*Enter SIR FRANCIS ACTON, SUSAN, SIR
CHARLES MOUNTFORD, CRANWELL, and MALBY; JENKIN and CICELY following them.*]

JENKIN. O my mistress, my mistress, my poor mistress.

CICELY. Alas that ever I was born!
what shall I do for my poor mistress?

SIR CHARLES. Why, what of her?

JENKIN. O Lord, sir, she no sooner heard that her brother and his friends were come to see how she did, but she,
for very shame of her guilty conscience, fell into such a swoon, that we had much ado to get life into her.

SUSAN. Alas that she should bear so hard a fate!

Pity it is repentance comes too late.

SIR FRANCIS. Is she so weak in body?

JENKIN. O sir, I can assure you there's no hope of life in her, for she will take no sustenance: she hath plainly starved herself, and now she is as lean as a lath.

She ever looks for the good hour. Many gentlemen and gentlewomen of the country are come to comfort her. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI—MISTRESS FRANKFORD'S bedchamber.

[*MISTRESS FRANKFORD in bed; enter SIR
CHARLES MOUNTFORD, SIR FRANCIS
ACTON, MALBY, CRANWELL, and SUSAN.*]

MALBY. How fare you, Mistress Frankford?

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. Sick, sick, oh, sick. Give me some air, I pray you.
Tell me, oh, tell me where is Master
Frankford?

Will not he deign to see me ere I die?

MALBY. Yes, Mistress Frankford:
divers gentlemen,

Your loving neighbours, with that just request

Have moved, and told him of your weak
estate:

Who, though with much ado to get belief,
Examining of the general circumstance,
Seeing your sorrow and your penitence,
And hearing therewithal the great desire
You have to see him ere you left the
world,

He gave to us his faith to follow us,
And sure he will be here immediately.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. You have half revived me with those pleasing news:
Raise me a little higher in my bed.

Blush I not, brother Acton? Blush I not,
Sir Charles?

Can you not read my fault writ in my
cheek?

Is not my crime there? tell me, gentle-
men.

SIR CHARLES. Alas! good mistress, sickness hath not left you

Blood in your face enough to make you blush.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. Then sickness, like a friend, my fault would hide.

Is my husband come? My soul but tarries
His arrive, then I am fit for Heaven.

SIR FRANCIS. I came to chide you; but my words of hate
Are turned to pity and compassionate
grief.

I came to rate you; but my brawls, you
see,
Melt into tears, and I must weep by thee.
Here's Master Frankford now.

[Enter FRANKFORD.]

FRANKFORD. Good-morrow, brother;
morrow, gentlemen:
God, that hath laid this cross upon our
heads,
Might (had He pleased) have made our cause of meeting
On a more fair and more contented
ground;
But He that made us, made us to this
woe.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. And is he come?
Methinks that voice I know.

FRANKFORD. How do you, woman?

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. Well, Master
Frankford, well; but shall be better,
I hope, within this hour. Will you vouchsafe,

Out of your grace and your humanity,
To take a spotted strumpet by the hand?

FRANKFORD. This hand once held my heart in faster bonds
Than now 'tis gripped by me. God pardon them

That made us first break hold!

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. Amen, amen.
Out of my zeal to Heaven, whither I'm now bound,

I was so impudent to wish you here;
And once more beg your pardon. O good
man,
And father to my children, pardon me,
Pardon, oh, pardon me! My fault so heinous is,

That if you in this world forgive it not,
Heaven will not clear it in the world to
come.

Faintness hath so usurped upon my knees
That kneel I cannot, but on my heart's knees

My prostrate soul lies thrown down at your feet

To beg your gracious pardon. Pardon, oh, pardon me!

FRANKFORD. As freely, from the low depth of my soul,
As my Redeemer hath forgiven His death,
I pardon thee. I will shed tears for thee,
pray with thee;
And, in mere pity of thy weak estate,
I'll wish to die with thee.

ALL. So do we all.

NICHOLAS. So will not I;
I'll sigh and sob, but, by my faith, not die.

SIR FRANCIS. O Master Frankford, all the near alliance

I lose by her shall be supplied in thee:
You are my brother by the nearest way;
Her kindred hath fallen off, but yours
doth stay.

FRANKFORD. Even as I hope for pardon at that day

When the great Judge of Heaven in scarlet sits,

So be thou pardoned. Though thy rash offence

Divorced our bodies, thy repentant tears
Unite our souls.

SIR CHARLES. Then comfort, Mistress
Frankford;

You see your husband hath forgiven your
fall;

Then rouse your spirits, and cheer your fainting soul.

SUSAN. How is it with you?

SIR FRANCIS. How do ye feel yourself?

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. Not of this world.

FRANKFORD. I see you are not, and I weep to see it.

My wife, the mother to my pretty babes!
Both those lost names I do restore thee
back,

And with this kiss I wed thee once again:
Though thou art wounded in thy honoured
name,

And with that grief upon thy death-bed
liest,

Honest in heart, upon my soul, thou diest.

MISTRESS FRANKFORD. Pardon on earth, soul, thou in Heaven art free Once more: thy wife dies thus embracing thee.

[Dies.]

FRANKFORD. New married, and new widowed. Oh! she's dead, And a cold grave must be her nuptial bed. SIR CHARLES. Sir, be of good comfort; and your heavy sorrow Part equally amongst us: storms divided Abate their force, and with less rage are guided. CRANWELL. Do, Master Frankford: he that hath least part Will find enough to drown one troubled heart. SIR FRANCIS. Peace with thee, Nan. Brothers, and gentlemen, All we that can plead interest in her grief,	Bestow upon her body funeral tears. Brother, had you with threats and usage bad Punished her sin, the grief of her offence Had not with such true sorrow touched her heart. FRANKFORD. I see it had not: therefore on her grave Will I bestow this funeral epitaph, Which on her marble tomb shall be en- graved. In golden letters shall these words be filled, "Here lies she whom her husband's kind- ness killed."

ACT I

SCENE I—An apartment in the palace.

[Enter CLEON, STRATO, LYSIPPUS, and DIPHILUS.]

CLEON. The rest are making ready, sir.

LYSIPPUS. So let them;
There's time enough.

DIPHILUS. You are the brother to the king, my lord;

We'll take your word.

LYSIPPUS. Strato, thou hast some skill in poetry:

What think'st thou of the masque? will it be well?

STRATO. As well as masque can be.

LYSIPPUS. As masque can be?

STRATO. Yes; they must commend their king, and speak in praise Of the assembly; bless the bride and bridegroom

In person of some god. They are tied to rules

Of flattery.

CLEON. See, good my lord, who is return'd!

[Enter MELANTIUS.]

LYSIPPUS. Noble Melantius! the land, by me,

Welcomes thy virtues home to Rhodes.

Thou, that with blood abroad buy'st us our peace!

The breath of kings is like the breath of gods;

My brother wish'd thee here, and thou art here.

He will be too kind, and weary thee With often welcomes. But the time doth give thee

A welcome above his, or all the world's.

MELANTIUS. My lord, my thanks; but these scratch'd limbs of mine

Have spoke my love and truth unto my friends,

More than my tongue e'er could. My mind's the same

It ever was to you: Where I find worth, I love the keeper till he let it go,

And then I follow it.

DIPHILUS. Hail, worthy brother!

He, that rejoices not at your return

In safety, is mine enemy for ever.

MELANTIUS. I thank thee, Diphilus.

But thou art faulty;

I sent for thee to exercise thine arms

With me at Patria: Thou camest not, Diphilus;

'Twas ill.

DIPHILUS. My noble brother, my excuse Is my king's strict command; which you, my lord,

Can witness with me.

LYSIPPUS. 'Tis true, Melantius;

He might not come, till the solemnity

Of this great match was past.

DIPHILUS. Have you heard of it?

MELANTIUS. Yes. I have given cause to those that envy

My deeds abroad, to call me gamesome:

I have no other business here at Rhodes.

LYSIPPUS. We have a masque to-night, and you must tread

A soldier's measure.

MELANTIUS. These soft and silken wars are not for me:

The music must be shrill, and all confused, That stirs my blood; and then I dance with arms.

But is Amintor wed?

DIPHILUS. This day.

MELANTIUS. All joys upon him! for he is my friend.

Wonder not that I call a man so young my friend:

His worth is great; valiant he is, and temperate;

And one that never thinks his life his own,

If his friend need it. When he was a boy. As oft as I returned (as, without boast, I brought home conquests) he would gaze upon me,

And view me round, to find in what one limb

The virtue lay to do those things he heard. Then would he wish to see my sword, and feel

The quickness of the edge, and in his hand

Weigh it: He oft would make me smile at this.

His youth did promise much, and his ripe years

Will see it all perform'd.

[Enter ASPATIA.]

Hail, maid and wife!

Thou fair Aspatia, may the holy knot

That thou hast tied to-day, last till the hand

Of age undo it! may'st thou bring a race Unto Amintor, that may fill the world Successively with soldiers!

ASPATIA. My hard fortunes

Deserve not scorn; for I was never proud When they were good. [Exit.]

MELANTIUS. How's this?

LYSIPPUS. You are mistaken,
For she is not married.

MELANTIUS. You said Amintor was.

DIPHILUS. 'Tis true; but—

MELANTIUS. Pardon me, I did receive Letters at Patria from my Amintor,
That he should marry her.

DIPHILUS. And so it stood
In all opinion long; but your arrival Made me imagine you had heard the change.

MELANTIUS. Who hath he taken then?

LYSIPPUS. A lady, sir,
That bears the light about her, and strikes
dead

With flashes of her eye: the fair Evadne,
Your virtuous sister.

MELANTIUS. Peace of heart betwixt
them!

But this is strange.

LYSIPPUS. The king my brother did it
To honour you; and these solemnities
Are at his charge.

MELANTIUS. 'Tis royal, like himself.

But I am sad

My speech bears so unfortunate a sound
To beautiful Aspatia. There is rage
Hid in her father's breast, Calianax, Bent long against me; and he should not think,

If I could call it back, that I would take

So base revenges, as to scorn the state
Of his neglected daughter. Holds he still His greatness with the king?

LYSIPPUS. Yes. But this lady
Walks discontented, with her watery eyes Bent on the earth. The unfrequented woods

Are her delight; and when she sees a bank Stuck full of flowers, she with a sigh will tell

Her servants what a pretty place it were
To bury lovers in; and make her maids Pluck 'em, and strew her over like a corse.

She carries with her an infectious grief,
That strikes all her beholders; she will sing

The mournful'st things that ever ear
hath heard,

And sigh, and sing again; and when the
rest

Of our young ladies, in their wanton blood, Tell mirthful tales in course, that fill the
room

With laughter, she will, with so sad a
look,

Bring forth a story of the silent death
Of some forsaken virgin, which her grief
Will put in such a phrase, that, ere she
end,

She'll send them weeping, one by one,
away.

MELANTIUS. She has a brother under my command,
Like her; a face as womanish as hers;
But with a spirit that hath much outgrown

The number of his years.

[Enter AMINTOR.]

CLEON. My lord, the bridegroom!

MELANTIUS. I might run fiercely, not more hastily,

Upon my foe. I love thee well, Amintor;
My mouth is much too narrow for my
heart;

I joy to look upon those eyes of thine;
Thou art my friend, but my disorder'd speech

Cuts off my love.

AMINTOR. Thou art Melantius;
All love is spoke in that. A sacrifice,
To thank the gods Melantius is return'd
In safety! Victory sits on his sword,
As she was wont: May she build there and dwell;

And may thy armour be, as it hath been,
Only thy valour and thine innocence!

What endless treasures would our enemies give,

That I might hold thee still thus!

MELANTIUS. I am but poor
In words; but credit me, young man, thy
mother

Could do no more but weep for joy to see
thee

After long absence: All the wounds I have

Fetch'd not so much away, nor all the cries

Of widowed mothers. But this is peace,
And that was war.

AMINTOR. Pardon, thou holy god
Of marriage bed, and frown not, I am
forced,

In answer of such noble tears as those,
To weep upon my wedding-day.

MELANTIUS. I fear thou'rt grown too fickle; for I hear

A lady mourns for thee; men say, to
death;

Forsaken of thee; on what terms I know
not.

AMINTOR. She had my promise; but the king forbade it,

And made me make this worthy change,
thy sister,

Accompanied with graces far above her;
With whom I long to lose my lusty youth,
And grow old in her arms.

MELANTIUS. Be prosperous!

[Enter MESSENGER.]

MESSENGER. My lord, the masquers rage for you.

LYSIPPUS. We are gone. Cleon, Strato,
Diphilus— [Exit LYSIPPUS, CLEON,
STRATO, and DIPHLUS.]

AMINTOR. We'll all attend you.—We shall trouble you

With our solemnities.

MELANTIUS. Not so, Amintor:

But if you laugh at my rude carriage
In peace, I'll do as much for you in war,
When you come thither. Yet I have a
mistress

To bring to your delights; rough though
I am,

I have a mistress, and she has a heart
She says; but, trust me, it is stone, no
better;

There is no place that I can challenge in't.
But you stand still, and here my way lies.

[Exit severally.]

SCENE II—A large hall in the same, with a gallery full of spectators.

[Enter CALIANAX, with DIAGORAS at the door.]

CALIANAX. Diagoras, look to the doors better for shame; you let in all the world, and anon the king will rail at me—why, very well said—by Jove, the king will have the show i' th' court.

DIAGORAS. Why do you swear so, my lord? You know, he'll have it here.

CALIANAX. By this light, if he be wise,
he will not.

DIAGORAS. And if he will not be wise,
you are forsworn.

CALIANAX. One may wear out his heart with swearing, and get thanks on no side.
I'll be gone—look to't who will.

DIAGORAS. My lord, I shall never keep them out. Pray, stay; your looks will terrify them.

CALIANAX. My looks terrify them, you coxcomby ass, you! I'll be judged by all the company whether thou hast not a worse face than I.

DIAGORAS. I mean, because they know you and your office.

CALIANAX. Office! I would I could put it off; I am sure I sweat quite through my office. I might have made room at my daughter's wedding: they have near kill'd her among them; and now I must do service for him that hath forsaken her.
Serve that will. [Exit.]

DIAGORAS. He's so humorous since his daughter was forsaken— Hark, hark!
there, there! so, so! Codes, codes!
[Knock within.] What now?

MELANTIUS [within]. Open the door.

DIAGORAS. Who's there?

MELANTIUS [within]. Melantius.

DIAGORAS. I hope your lordship brings no troop with you; for, if you do, I must return them. [Opens the door. Persons endeavour to rush in.]

[Enter MELANTIUS and a LADY.]

MELANTIUS. None but this lady, sir.

DIAGORAS. The ladies are all placed above, save those that come in the king's troop: The best of Rhodes sit there, and there's room.

MELANTIUS. I thank you, sir.—When I have seen you placed, madam, I must attend the king; but, the masque done, I'll wait on you again.

[Exit with the LADY into the gallery.]

DIAGORAS. Stand back there!—Room for my lord Melantius!—pray, bear back—this is no place for such youths and their trulls—let the doors shut again.—No!—do your heads itch? I'll scratch them for you. [Shuts the door.]—So, now thrust and hang. [Knocking.] Again! who is't now—I cannot blame my lord Calianax for going away: 'Would he were here! he would run raging among them, and break a dozen wiser heads than his own, in the twinkling of an eye.—What's the news now?

[Within.] I pray you, can you help me to the speech of the master-cook?

DIAGORAS. If I open the door, I'll cook some of your calves-heads. Peace, rogues! [Knocking.]—Again! who is't?

MELANTIUS [within]. Melantius.

[Enter CALIANAX.]

CALIANAX. Let him not in.

DIAGORAS. O, my lord, I must.—Make room there for my lord.

[Enter MELANTIUS.]

Is your lady placed? [To MELANTIUS.]

MELANTIUS. Yes, sir.

I thank you.—My Lord Calianax, well met.

Your causeless hate to me, I hope, is buried.

CALIANAX. Yes, I do service for your sister here,

That brings my own poor child to timeless death;

She loves your friend Amintor; such another

False-hearted lord as you.

MELANTIUS. You do me wrong,

A most unmanly one, and I am slow

In taking vengeance! But be well advised.

CALIANAX. It may be so.—Who placed the lady there,

So near the presence of the king?

MELANTIUS. I did.

CALIANAX. My lord, she must not sit there.

MELANTIUS. Why?

CALIANAX. The place is kept for women of more worth.

MELANTIUS. More worth than she? It misbecomes your age,
And place, to be thus womanish. Forbear!

What you have spoke, I am content to think

The palsy shook your tongue to.

CALIANAX. Why, 'tis well

If I stand here to place men's wenches.

MELANTIUS. I shall forget this place, thy age, my safety,

And, through all, cut that poor sickly week,

Thou hast to live, away from thee.

CALIANAX. Nay, I know you can fight for your whore.

MELANTIUS. Bate the king, and be he flesh and blood,

He lies, that says it! Thy mother at fifteen

Was black and sinful to her.

DIAGORAS. Good my lord!

MELANTIUS. Some god pluck threescore years from that fond man,

That I may kill him and not stain mine honour.

It is the curse of soldiers, that in peace They shall be braved by such ignoble men,

As, if the land were troubled, would with tears

And knees beg succour from 'em. 'Would, that blood,

That sea of blood, that I have lost in fight,

Were running in thy veins, that it might make thee

Apt to say less, or able to maintain,

Should'st thou say more! This Rhodes, I see, is nought

But a place privileged to do men wrong.

CALIANAX. Ay, you may say your pleasure.

[Enter AMINTOR.]

AMINTOR. What vile injury

Has stirr'd my worthy friend, who is as slow

To fight with words as he is quick of hand?

MELANTIUS. That heap of age, which I should reverence

If it were temperate: but testy years
Are most contemptible.

AMINTOR. Good sir, forbear.

CALLIANAX. There is just such another as yourself.

AMINTOR. He will wrong you, or me,
or any man,

And talk as if he had no life to lose,
Since this our match. The king is coming in:

I would not for more wealth than I enjoy,
He should perceive you raging. He did
hear

You were at difference now, which hastened him.

CALLIANAX. Make room there!
[Hautboys play within.]

[Enter KING, EVADNE, ASPATIA, LORDS, and LADIES.]

KING. Melantius, thou art welcome, and my love
Is with thee still: But this is not a place
To brabble in. Callianax, join hands.

CALLIANAX. He shall not have my hand.

KING. This is no time
To force you to it. I do love you both:
Callianax, you look well to your office;
And you, Melantius, are welcome home.—
Begin the masque!

MELANTIUS. Sister, I joy to see you, and your choice.

You look'd with my eyes when you took
that man:

Be happy in him! [Recorders play.]

EVADNE. O, my dearest brother!

Your presence is more joyful than this day
Can be unto me.

THE MASQUE.

[NIGHT rises in mists.]

NIGHT. Our reign is come; for in the raging sea

The sun is drown'd, and with him fell the Day.

Bright Cynthia, hear my voice; I am the Night,

For whom thou bear'st about thy borrow'd
light.

Appear; no longer thy pale visage shroud,

But strike thy silver horns quite through a cloud

And send a beam upon my swarthy face;
By which I may discover all the place
And persons, and how many longing eyes
Are come to wait on our solemnities.

[Enter CYNTHIA.]

How dull and black am I! I could not find

This beauty without thee, I am so blind.
Methinks, they show like to those eastern streaks

That warn us hence, before the morning breaks!

Back, my pale servant, for these eyes know how

To shoot far more and quicker rays than thou.

CYNTHIA. Great queen, they be a troop for whom alone

One of my clearest moons I have put on;
A troop, that looks as if thyself and I Had pluck'd our reins in, and our whips laid by,

To gaze upon these mortals, that appear Brighter than we.

NIGHT. Then let us keep 'em here;
And never more our chariots drive away,
But hold our places and outshine the day.

CYNTHIA. Great queen of shadows, you are pleased to speak

Of more than may be done: We may not break

The gods' decrees; but, when our time is
come,

Must drive away, and give the day our
room.

Yet, while our reign lasts, let us stretch
our power

To give our servants one contented hour,
With such unwonted solemn grace and
state,

As may for ever after force them hate
Our brother's glorious beams; and wish
the night

Crown'd with a thousand stars, and our cold light:

For almost all the world their service bend

To Phœbus, and in vain my light I lend;

Gazed on unto my setting from my rise
Almost of none, but of unquiet eyes.

NIGHT. Then shine at full, fair queen, and by thy power
Produce a birth, to crown this happy hour,
Of nymphs and shepherds: Let their songs discover,
Easy and sweet, who is a happy lover.
Or, if thou woo't, then call thine own
Endymion,
From the sweet flowery bed he lies upon,
On Latmus' top, thy pale beams drawn
away,
And of this long night let him make a
day.

CYNTHIA. Thou dream'st, dark queen;
that fair boy was not mine,
Nor went I down to kiss him. Ease and wine Have bred these bold tales: Poets, when they rage,
Turn gods to men, and make an hour an
age.

But I will give a greater state and glory,
And raise to time a noble memory
Of what these lovers are. Rise, rise, I say, Thou power of deeps; thy surges laid
away,
Neptune, great king of waters, and by me
Be proud to be commanded.

[NEPTUNE rises.]

NEPTUNE. Cynthia, sec, Thy word hath fetch'd me hither: Let me know
Why I ascend?

CYNTHIA. Doth this majestic show
Give thee no knowledge yet?

NEPTUNE. Yes, now I see Something intended, Cynthia, worthy
thee.

Go on: I'll be a helper.

CYNTHIA. Hie thee then,
And charge the wind fly from his rocky den.

Let loose thy subjects; only Boreas,
Too foul for our intention, as he was,
Still keep him fast chain'd: we must have none here

But vernal blasts, and gentle winds appear;

Such as blow flowers, and through the glad boughs sing

Many soft welcomes to the lusty spring:
These are our music. Next, thy watery
race

Bring on in couples (we are pleased to
grace

This noble night), each in their richest
things

Your own deeps, or the broken vessel, brings.

Be prodigal, and I shall be as kind,
And shine at full upon you.

NEPTUNE. Ho! the wind-
Commanding Æolus!

[Enter ÆOLUS out of a rock.]

ÆOLUS. Great Neptune?

NEPTUNE. He.

ÆOLUS. What is thy will?

NEPTUNE. We do command thee free
Favonius, and thy milder winds, to wait Upon our Cynthia; but tie Boreas straight;

He's too rebellious.

ÆOLUS. I shall do it.

NEPTUNE. Do.— [Exit ÆOLUS into the rock and reënters.]

ÆOLUS. Great master of the flood, and all below,

Thy full command has taken.—Ho! the Main!

Neptune!

NEPTUNE. Here.

ÆOLUS. Boreas has broke his chain,
And, struggling, with the rest has got
away.

NEPTUNE. Let him alone, I'll take him up at sea;

He will not long be thence. Go once again,
And call out of the bottoms of the main
Blue Proteus, and the rest; charge them put on

Their greatest pearls, and the most sparkling stone

The beaten rock breeds; till this night is done

By me a solemn honour to the moon.

Fly, like a full sail.

ÆOLUS. I am gone.

CYNTHIA. Dark Night,

Strike a full silence; do a thorough right
To this great chorus; that our music may Touch high as Heaven, and make the east break day
At mid-night. [Music.]

SONG

Cynthia, to thy power and thee,
We obey.
Joy to this great company!
And no day
Come to steal this night away,
Till the rites of love are ended;
And the lusty bridegroom say,
Welcome, light, of all befriended.

Face out, you watery powers below;
Let your feet,
Like the gallies when they row,
Even beat.
Let your unknown measures, set
To the still winds, tell to all,
That gods are come, immortal, great,
To honour this great nuptial.
[The Measure by the Sea-gods.]

SECOND SONG

Hold back thy hours, dark Night, till we have done:
The day will come too soon;
Young maids will curse thee if thou
steal'st away,
And leav'st their losses open to the day;
Stay, stay, and hide
The blushes of the bride!
Stay, gentle Night, and with thy darkness cover
The kisses of her lover.
Stay, and confound her tears, and her shrill cryings,
Her weak denials, vows, and often dyings;
Stay, and hide all:
But help not, though she call.

NEPTUNE. Great queen of us and
Heaven,
Hear what I bring to make this hour a full one,
If not o'ermeasure.

CYNTHIA. Speak, sea's king.
NEPTUNE. The tunes my Amphitrite joys to have,
When they will dance upon the rising
wave,
And court me as she sails. My Tritons,
play
Music to lead a storm; I'll lead the way.
[Measure.]

SONG

To bed, to bed; come, Hymen, lead the
bride,
And lay her by her husband's side;
Bring in the virgins every one,
That grieve to lie alone;
That they may kiss while they may say,
a maid;
To-morrow, 'twill be other, kiss'd, and said.
Hesperus be long a-shining,
Whilst these lovers are a-twining.

ÆOLUS. Ho! Neptune!
NEPTUNE. Æolus!
ÆOLUS. The sea goes high,
Boreas hath raised a storm: Go and apply
Thy trident; else, I prophesy, ere day
Many a tall ship will be cast away.
Descend with all the gods, and all their
power,
To strike a calm.
CYNTHIA. A thanks to every one, and to gratulate
So great a service, done at my desire, Ye shall have many floods, fuller and higher
Than you have wished for; no ebb shall dare
To let the day see where your dwellings
are.
Now back unto your government in haste,
Lest your proud charge should swell above
the waste,
And win upon the island.
NEPTUNE. We obey. [NEPTUNE descends, and the Sea-gods.]
CYNTHIA. Hold up thy head, dead
Night; see'st thou not Day?

The east begins to lighten: I must down,
And give my brother place.

NIGHT. Oh, I could frown
To see the Day, the Day that flings his
light
Upon my kingdom, and contemns old
Night!

Let him go on and flame! I hope to see
Another wild-fire in his axletree;
And all fall drench'd. But I forgot;
speak, queen.

The day grows on; I must no more be seen.

CYNTHIA. Heave up thy drowsy head again, and see
A greater light, a greater majesty, Between our set and us! Whip up thy team!

The day-break's here, and yon sun-flaring beam

Shot from the south. Say, which way wilt thou go?

NIGHT. I'll vanish into mists.

CYNTHIA. I into day. [Exeunt.]

THE MASQUE ENDS.

KING. Take lights there!—Ladies, get the bride to bed.—

We will not see you laid. Good-night,
Amintor;

We'll ease you of that tedious ceremony.
Were it my case, I should think time run slow.

If thou be'st noble, youth, get me a boy.
That may defend my kingdom from my foes.

AMINTOR. All happiness to you.

KING. Good night, Melantius.
[Exeunt.]

ACT II

SCENE I—Antechamber to EVADNE'S bedroom in the palace.

[Enter EVADNE, ASPATIA, DULA, and other LADIES.]

DULA. Madam, shall we undress you for this fight?
The wars are nak'd that you must make to-night.

EVADNE. You are very merry, Dula.

DULA. I should be merrier far, if 'twere
With me as 'tis with you.

EVADNE. How's that?

DULA. That I might go to bed with him
With the credit that you do.

EVADNE. Why, how now, wench?

DULA. Come, ladies, will you help?

EVADNE. I am soon undone.

DULA. And as soon done:
Good store of clothes will trouble you at both.

EVADNE. Art thou drunk, Dula?

DULA. Why, here's none but we.

EVADNE. Thou think'st belike, there is no modesty.

When we're alone.

DULA. Ay, by my troth, you hit my thoughts aright.

EVADNE. You prick me, lady.

DULA. 'Tis against my will.

Anon you must endure more, and lie still;
You're best to practise.

EVADNE. Sure, this wench is mad.

DULA. No, 'faith, this is a trick that I have had

Since I was fourteen.

EVADNE. 'Tis high time to leave it.

DULA. Nay, now I'll keep it, till the trick leave me.

A dozen wanton words, put in your head,
Will make you livelier in your husband's
bed.

EVADNE. Nay, 'faith, then take it.

DULA. Take it, madam? where?

We all, I hope, will take it, that are here.

EVADNE. Nay, then, I'll give you o'er.

DULA. So will I make

The ablest man in Rhodes, or his heart ache.

EVADNE. Wilt take my place to-night?

DULA. I'll hold your cards 'gainst any two I know.

EVADNE. What wilt thou do?

DULA. Madam, we'll do't, and make 'em leave play too.

EVADNE. Aspatia, take her part.

DULA. I will refuse it.

She will pluck down a side; she does not use it.

EVADNE. Why, do.

DULA. You will find the play Quickly, because your head lies well that
way.

EVADNE. I thank thee, Dula. 'Would thou could'st instil
Some of thy mirth into Aspatia!
Nothing but sad thoughts in her breast
do dwell:
Methinks, a mean betwixt you would do
well.

DULA. She is in love: Hang me, if I were so,
But I could run my country. I love, too,
To do those things that people in love do.

ASPATIA. It were a timeless smile should prove my cheek:
It were a fitter hour for me to laugh,
When at the altar the religious priest
Were pacifying the offended powers With sacrifice, than now. This should have been

My night: and all your hands have been employed

In giving me a spotless offering
To young Amintor's bed, as we are now
For you. Pardon, Evadne; 'would my worth

Were great as yours, or that the king, or he,

Or both, thought so! Perhaps he found me worthless:

But, till he did so, in these ears of mine,
These credulous ears, he pour'd the sweetest words

That art or love could frame. If he were false,

Pardon it, Heaven! and if I did want
Virtue, you safely may forgive that too;
For I have lost none that I had from you.

EVADNE. Nay, leave this sad talk,
madam.

ASPATIA. Would I could!
Then should I leave the cause.

EVADNE. See, if you have not spoil'd all Dula's mirth.

ASPATIA. Thou think'st thy heart hard: but if thou be'st caught,

Remember me: thou shalt perceive a fire
Shot suddenly into thee.

DULA. That's not so good: let 'em shoot anything

But fire, I fear 'em not.

ASPATIA. Well, wench, thou may'st be taken.

EVADNE. Ladies, good-night: I'll do the rest myself.

DULA. Nay, let your lord do some.

ASPATIA [sings]. Lay a garland on my hearse,

Of the dismal yew.

EVADNE. That's one of your sad songs,
madam.

ASPATIA. Believe me, 'tis a very pretty
one.

EVADNE. How is it, madam?

ASPATIA [sings]. Lay a garland on my hearse,

Of the dismal yew:

Maidens, willow branches bear;

Say I died true:

My love was false, but I was firm

From my hour of birth.

Upon my buried body lie

Lightly, gentle earth!

EVADNE. Fie on't, madam! The words are so strange, they are able to make one dream of hobgoblins. "I could never have the power": Sing that, Dula.

DULA [sings]. I could never have the power

To love one above an hour,

But my heart would prompt mine eye

On some other man to fly;

Venus, fix mine eyes fast,

Of if not, give me all that I shall see at last.

EVADNE. So, leave me now.

DULA. Nay, we must see you laid.

ASPATIA. Madam, good-night. May all the marriage joys

That longing maids imagine in their beds,
Prove so unto you! May no discontent Grow 'twixt your love and you! But, if there do,

Inquire of me, and I will guide your moan;
Teach you an artificial way to grieve,
To keep your sorrow waking. Love your
lord

No worse than I: but if you love so well,
Alas, you may displease him; so did I.

This is the last time you shall look on
me.—

Ladies, farewell. As soon as I am dead, Come all, and watch one night about my
hearse;
Bring each a mournful story, and a
tear,
To offer at it when I go to earth.
With flatt'ring ivy clasp my coffin round;
Write on my brow my fortune; let my
bier
Be borne by virgins that shall sing, by
course,
The truth of maids, and perjuries of men.

[Exit EVADNE.]

EVADNE. Alas, I pity thee.

ALL. Madam, good-night.

1ST LADY. Come, we'll let in the bridegroom.

DULA. Where's my lord?

[Enter AMINTOR.]

1ST LADY. Here, take this light.

DULA. You'll find her in the dark.

1ST LADY. Your lady's scarce a-bed yet;
you must help her.

ASPATIA. Go, and be happy in your lady's love.

May all the wrongs, that you have done to
me,

Be utterly forgotten in my death!

I'll trouble you no more; yet I will take
A parting kiss, and will not be denied.

You'll come, my lord, and see the virgins weep

When I am laid in earth, though you yourself

Can know no pity. Thus I wind myself
Into this willow garland, and am prouder
That I was once your love, though now refused,

Than to have had another true to me.

So with my prayers I leave you, and must try

Some yet-unpractised way to grieve and
die. [Exit.]

DULA. Come, ladies, will you go?

ALL. Good-night, my lord.

AMINTOR. Much happiness unto you all— [Exit LADIES.]

I did that lady wrong: Methinks, I feel Her grief shoot suddenly through all my veins.

Mine eyes run: This is strange at such a
time.

It was the king first moved me to't;—but
he

Has not my will in keeping.—Why do I Perplex myself thus? Something whispers me,

“Go not to bed.” My guilt is not so great
As mine own conscience, too sensible,
Would make me think: I only break a promise,

And 'twas the king that forced me.—
Timorous flesh,

Why shak'st thou so?—Away, my idle fears!

[Enter EVADNE.]

Yonder she is, the lustre of whose eye
Can blot away the sad remembrance
Of all these things.—Oh, my Evadne, spare

That tender body; let it not take cold.
The vapours of the night will not fall
here:

To bed, my love. Hymen will punish us
For being slack performers of his rites.
Cam'st thou to call me?

EVADNE. No.

AMINTOR. Come, come, my love,
And let us lose ourselves to one another.
Why art thou up so long?

EVADNE. I am not well.

AMINTOR. To bed, then; let me wind thee in these arms,

Till I have banish'd sickness.

EVADNE. Good my lord,

I cannot sleep.

AMINTOR. Evadne, we will watch;

I mean no sleeping.

EVADNE. I'll not go to bed.

AMINTOR. I pr'ythee do.

EVADNE. I will not for the world.

AMINTOR. Why, my dear love?

EVADNE. Why? I have sworn I will not.

AMINTOR. Sworn!

EVADNE. Ay.

AMINTOR. How! sworn, Evadne?

EVADNE. Yes, sworn, Amintor; and will swear again,

If you will wish to hear me.

AMINTOR. To whom have you sworn this?
 EVADNE. If I should name him, the matter were not great.
 AMINTOR. Come, this is but the coyness of a bride.
 EVADNE. The coyness of a bride?
 AMINTOR. How prettily that frown becomes thee!
 EVADNE. Do you like it so?
 AMINTOR. Thou canst not dress thy face in such a look,
 But I shall like it.
 EVADNE. What look likes you best?
 AMINTOR. Why do you ask?
 EVADNE. That I may show you one less pleasing to you.
 AMINTOR. How's that?
 EVADNE. That I may show you one less pleasing to you.
 AMINTOR. I pry'thee, put thy jests in milder looks;
 It shows as thou wert angry.
 EVADNE. So, perhaps,
 I am indeed.
 AMINTOR. Why, who has done thee wrong?
 Name me the man, and by thyself I swear,
 Thy yet-unconquer'd self, I will revenge thee.
 EVADNE. Now I shall try thy truth. If thou dost love me,
 Thou weigh'st not anything compared with me:
 Life, honour, joys eternal, all delights
 This world can yield, or hopeful people feign,
 Or in the life to come, are light as air
 To a true lover when his lady frowns,
 And bids him do this. Wilt thou kill this man?
 Swear, my Amintor, and I'll kiss the sin
 Off from thy lips.
 AMINTOR. I will not swear, sweet love,
 Till I do know the cause.
 EVADNE. I would thou would'st.
 Why, it is thou that wrong'st me; I hate thee;
 Thou should'st have kill'd thyself.
 AMINTOR. If I should know that, I should quickly kill
 The man you hated.

EVADNE. Know it then, and do't.
 AMINTOR. Oh, no; what look soe'er thou shalt put on
 To try my faith, I shall not think thee false:
 I cannot find one blemish in thy face,
 Where falsehood should abide. Leave, and to bed.
 If you have sworn to any of the virgins,
 That were your old companions, to preserve
 Your maidenhead a night, it may be done
 Without this means.
 EVADNE. A maidenhead, Amintor,
 At my years?
 AMINTOR. Sure, she raves!—This cannot be Thy natural temper. Shall I call thy maids?
 Either thy healthful sleep hath left thee long,
 Or else some fever rages in thy blood.
 EVADNE. Neither, Amintor: Think you I am mad,
 Because I speak the truth?
 AMINTOR. Will you not lie with me to-night?
 EVADNE. To-night! you talk as if I would hereafter.
 AMINTOR. Hereafter! yes, I do.
 EVADNE. You are deceived.
 Put off amazement, and with patience mark
 What I shall utter; for the oracle
 Knows nothing truer: 'tis not for a night,
 Or two, that I forbear thy bed, but for ever.
 AMINTOR. I dream! Awake, Amintor!
 EVADNE. You hear right.
 I sooner will find out the beds of snakes,
 And with my youthful blood warm their cold flesh,
 Letting them curl themselves about my limbs,
 Than sleep one night with thee. This is not feign'd,
 Nor sounds it like the coyness of a bride.
 AMINTOR. Is flesh so earthly to endure all this?
 Are these the joys of marriage? Hymen, keep

This story (that will make succeeding youth

Neglect thy ceremonies) from all ears;
Let it not rise up, for thy shame and mine,

To after-ages: We will scorn thy laws,
If thou no better bless them. Touch the heart

Of her that thou hast sent me, or the world

Shall know, there's not an altar that will smoke

In praise of thee; we will adopt us sons;
Then virtue shall inherit, and not blood.
If we do lust, we'll take the next we meet,
Serving ourselves as other creatures do;
And never take note of the female more,
Nor of her issue.—I do rage in vain;
She can but jest. O, pardon me, my love!
So dear the thoughts are that I hold of thee,

That I must break forth. Satisfy my fear:

It is a pain, beyond the hand of death,
To be in doubt: Confirm it with an oath,
If this be true.

EVADNE. Do you invent the form:
Let there be in it all the binding words
Devils and conjurers can put together,
And I will take it. I have sworn before,
And here, by all things holy, do again,
Never to be acquainted with thy bed.
Is your doubt over now?

AMINTOR. I know too much. Would I had doubted still!

Was ever such a marriage night as this!
Ye powers above, if you did ever mean Man should be used thus, you have thought a way
How he may bear himself, and save his
honour.

Instruct me in it: for to my dull eyes
There is no mean, no moderate course to run:

I must live scorn'd, or be a murderer.
Is there a third? Why is this night so calm?

Why does not Heaven speak in thunder
to us,

And drown her voice?

EVADNE. This rage will do no good.

AMINTOR. Evadne, hear me: Thou hast ta'en an oath,

But such a rash one, that, to keep it, were Worse than to swear it: Call it back to
thee;

Such vows as those never ascend the Heaven;

A tear or two will wash it quite away.
Have mercy on my youth, my hopeful
youth,

If thou be pitiful; for, without boast,
This land was proud of me. What lady was there,

That men call'd fair and virtuous in this isle,

That would have shunn'd my love? It is in thee

To make me hold this worth. Oh! we vain men,

That trust out all our reputation,
To rest upon the weak and yielding hand
Of feeble woman! But thou art not stone:
Thy flesh is soft, and in thine eyes doth
dwell

The spirit of love; thy heart cannot be hard.

Come, lead me from the bottom of despair,
To all the joys thou hast; I know thou wilt:

And make me careful, lest the sudden change

O'ercome my spirits.

EVADNE. When I call back this oath,
The pains of hell environ me!

AMINTOR. I sleep, and am too temperate! Come to bed!

Or by those hairs, which, if thou hadst
a soul

Like to thy locks, were threads for kings to wear

About their arms—

EVADNE. Why, so, perhaps, they are.

AMINTOR. I'll drag thee to my bed, and make thy tongue

Undo this wicked oath, or on thy flesh
I'll print a thousand wounds to let out
life!

EVADNE. I fear thee not. Do what thou dar'st to me!

Every ill-sounding word, or threat'ning
look,

Thou show'st to me, will be revenged at full.

AMINTOR. It will not, sure, Evadne?

EVADNE. Do not you hazard that.

AMINTOR. Have you your champions?

EVADNE. Alas, Amintor, think'st thou I forbear

To sleep with thee, because I have put on

A maiden's strictness? Look upon these cheeks,

And thou shalt find the hot and rising blood

Unapt for such a vow. No; in this heart There dwells as much desire, and as much will

To put that wish'd act in practice, as ever yet

Was known to woman; and they have been shown,

Both. But it was the folly of thy youth To think this beauty, to what land soe'er It shall be call'd, shall stoop to any second.

I do enjoy the best, and in that height Have sworn to stand or die: You guess the man.

AMINTOR. No: let me know the man that wrongs me so,

That I may cut his body into motes, And scatter it before the northern wind.

EVADNE. You dare not strike him.

AMINTOR. Do not wrong me so.

Yes, if his body were a poisonous plant, That it were death to touch, I have a soul

Will throw me on him.

EVADNE. Why, it is the king.

AMINTOR. The king!

EVADNE. What will you do now?

AMINTOR. 'Tis not the king!

EVADNE. What did he make this match for, dull Amintor?

AMINTOR. Oh, thou hast named a word, that wipes away

All thoughts revengeful! In that sacred name,

"The king," there lies a terror. What frail man

Dares lift his hand against it? Let the gods

Speak to him when they please: till when let us

Suffer, and wait.

EVADNE. Why should you fill yourself so full of heat,

And haste so to my bed? I am no virgin.

AMINTOR. What devil put it in thy fancy, then,

To marry me?

EVADNE. Alas, I must have one To father children, and to bear the name

Of husband to me, that my sin may be More honourable.

AMINTOR. What a strange thing am I!

EVADNE. A miserable one; one that myself

Am sorry for.

AMINTOR. Why, show it then in this:

If thou hast pity, though thy love be none,

Kill me; and all true lovers, that shall live

In after-ages cross'd in their desires, Shall bless thy memory, and call thee

good;

Because such mercy in thy heart was found,

To rid a ling'ring wretch.

EVADNE. I must have one

To fill thy room again, if thou wert dead; Else, by this night, I would: I pity thee.

AMINTOR. These strange and sudden injuries have fallen

So thick upon me, that I lose all sense Of what they are. Methinks I am not wrong'd:

Nor is it aught, if from the censuring world

I can but hide it. Reputation!

Thou art a word, no more.—But thou hast shown

An impudence so high, that to the world, I fear, thou wilt betray or shame thyself.

EVADNE. To cover shame, I took thee; never fear

That I would blaze myself.

AMINTOR. Nor let the king

Know I conceive he wrongs me; then mine honour

Will thrust me into action, though my flesh

Could bear with patience. And it is some ease

To me in these extremes, that I knew this

Before I touch'd thee; else had all the sins

Of mankind stood betwixt me and the king,

I had gone through 'em to his heart and thine.

I have left one desire: 'tis not his crown Shall buy me to thy bed, now I resolve, He has dishonoured thee. Give me thy hand;

Be careful of thy credit, and sin close; 'Tis all I wish. Upon thy chamber-floor

I'll rest to-night, that morning-visitors May think we did as married people use.

And, pr'ythee, smile upon me when they come,

And seem to toy, as if thou hadst been pleased

With what we did.

EVADNE. Fear not; I will do this.

AMINTOR. Come, let us practise: and as wantonly.

As ever loving bride and bridegroom met, Let's laugh and enter here.

EVADNE. I am content.

AMINTOR. Down all the swellings of my troubled heart!

When we walk thus intwined, let all eyes see

If ever lovers better did agree. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II—An apartment in the citadel.

[Enter ASPATIA, ANTIPHILA, and OLYMPIAS.]

ASPATIA. Away, you are not sad; force it no further.

Good Gods, how well you look! Such a full colour

Young bashful brides put on. Sure, you are new married!

ANTIPHILA. Yes, madam, to your grief.

ASPATIA. Alas, poor wenches!

Go learn to love first; learn to lose yourselves;

Learn to be flatter'd, and believe, and bless

The double tongue that did it. Make a faith

Out of the miracles of ancient lovers, Such as speak truth, and died in't; and, like me,

Believe all faithful, and be miserable. Did you ne'er love yet, wenches? Speak,

Olympias;

Thou hast an easy temper, fit for stamp.

OLYMPIAS. Never.

ASPATIA. Nor you, Antiphila?

ANTIPHILA. Nor I.

ASPATIA. Then, my good girls, be more than women, wise:

At least be more than I was; and be sure

You credit anything the light gives light to,

Before a man. Rather believe the sea Weeps for the ruin'd merchant, when he roars;

Rather, the wind courts but the pregnant sails,

When the strong cordage cracks; rather, the sun

Comes but to kiss the fruit in wealthy autumn,

When all falls blasted. If you needs must love,

(Forced by ill fate) take to your maiden bosoms

Two dead-cold aspicks, and of them make lovers:

They cannot flatter, nor forswear; one kiss Makes a long peace for all. But man,

Oh, that beast man! Come, let's be sad, my girls!

That down-cast of thine eye, Olympias, Shows a fine sorrow. Mark, Antiphila;

Just such another was the nymph CEnone, When Paris brought home Helen. Now, a tear;

And then thou art a piece expressing fully The Carthage queen, when, from a cold sea-rock,

Full with her sorrow, she tied fast her eyes

To the fair Trojan ships; and, having lost them,

Just as thine eyes do, down stole a tear. Antiphila,

Antiphila,

What would this wench do, if she were Aspatia?

Here she would stand, till some more pitying god

Turn'd her to marble! 'Tis enough, my wench!

Show me the piece of needlework you
wrought.

ANTIPHILA. Of Ariadne, madam?

ASPATIA. Yes, that piece.—

This should be Theseus; he has a cozening face:

You meant him for a man?

ANTIPHILA. He was so, madam.

ASPATIA. Why, then, 'tis well enough.
Never look back:

You have a full wind, and a false heart,
Theseus!

Does not the story say, his keel was split,

Or his masts spent, or some kind rock or other

Met with his vessel?

ANTIPHILA. Not as I remember.

ASPATIA. It should have been so. Could the gods know this,

And not, of all their number, raise a storm?

But they are all as ill! This false smile
Was well express'd; just such another caught me!

You shall not go [on] so, Antiphila:

In this place work a quicksand,

And over it a shallow smiling water,

And his ship ploughing it; and then a Fear:

Do that Fear to the life, wench.

ANTIPHILA. 'Twill wrong the story.

ASPATIA. 'Twill make the story,
wrong'd by wanton poets,

Live long, and be believed. But where's the lady?

ANTIPHILA. There, madam.

ASPATIA. Fie! you have miss'd it here,
Antiphila;

You are much mistaken, wench:

These colours are not dull and pale
enough

To show a soul so full of misery

As this sad lady's was. Do it by me;

Do it again, by me, the lost Aspatia,

And you shall find all true but the wild island.

Suppose I stand upon the sea-beach now,
Mine arms thus, and mine hair blown with the wind,

Wild as that desert; and let all about me
Be teachers of my story. Do my face
(If thou hadst ever feeling of a sorrow)
Thus, thus, Antiphila: Strive to make me
look

Like Sorrow's monument! And the trees about me,

Let them be dry and leafless; let the rocks

Groan with continual surges; and, behind me,

Make all a desolation. Look, look,
wenches!

A miserable life of this poor picture!

OLYMPIAS. Dear madam!

ASPATIA. I have done. Sit down; and let us

Upon that point fix all our eyes; that point there.

Make a dull silence, till you feel a sudden sadness

Give us new souls.

[Enter CALLANAX.]

CALLANAX. The king may do this, and he may not do it:

My child is wrong'd, disgraced.—Well,
how now, huswives!

What, at your ease? Is this a time to sit still?

Up, you young lazy whores, up, or I'll swinge you!

OLYMPIAS. Nay, good my lord.

CALLANAX. You'll lie down shortly.
Get you in, and work!

What, are you grown so resty you want heats?

We shall have some of the court-boys heat
you shortly.

ANTIPHILA. My lord, we do no more than we are charged.

It is the lady's pleasure we be thus
In grief: she is forsaken.

CALLANAX. There's a rogue too!

A young dissembling slave! Well, get you in!

I'll have a bout with that boy. 'Tis high time

Now to be valiant; I confess my youth Was never prone that way. What, made an ass?

A court-stale? Well, I will be valiant, And beat some dozen of these whelps; I will!

And there's another of 'em, a trim cheating soldier;

I'll maul that rascal; he has out-braved me twice:

But now, I thank the gods, I am valiant.—Go, get you in! I'll take a course with all. [Exeunt.]

ACT III

SCENE I—Antechamber to EVADNE'S bedroom in the palace.

[Enter CLEON, STRATO, and DIPHILUS.]

CLEON. Your sister is not up yet.

DIPHILUS. Oh, brides must take their morning's rest; the night is troublesome.

STRATO. But not tedious.

DIPHILUS. What odds, he has not my sister's maidenhead to-night?

STRATO. No; it's odds, against any bridegroom living, he ne'er gets it while he lives.

DIPHILUS. You're merry with my sister; you'll please to allow me the same freedom with your mother.

STRATO. She's at your service.

DIPHILUS. Then she's merry enough of herself; she needs no tickling. Knock at the door.

STRATO. We shall interrupt them.

DIPHILUS. No matter; they have the year before them.—Good-morrow, sister! Spare yourself to-day; the night will come again.

[Enter AMINTOR.]

AMINTOR. Who's there? my brother! I'm no readier yet.

Your sister is but now up.

DIPHILUS. You look as you had lost your eyes to-night:

I think you have not slept.

AMINTOR. I'faith I have not.

DIPHILUS. You have done better, then.

AMINTOR. We ventured for a boy: When he is twelve,

He shall command against the foes of Rhodes.

Shall we be merry?

STRATO. You cannot; you want sleep.

AMINTOR. 'Tis true.—But she, [Aside.] As if she had drank Lethe, or had made Even with Heaven, did fetch so still a sleep,

So sweet and sound—

DIPHILUS. What's that?

AMINTOR. Your sister frets This morning; and does turn her eyes upon me,

As people on their headsman. She does chafe,

And kiss, and chafe again, and clap my cheeks;

She's in another world.

DIPHILUS. Then I had lost: I was about to lay

You had not got her maidenhead to-night.

AMINTOR. Ha! he does not mock me?

[Aside.]—You had lost, indeed;

I do not use to bungle.

CLEON. You do deserve her.

AMINTOR. I laid my lips to hers, and that wild breath,

That was so rude and rough to me last night,

Was sweet as April.—I'll be guilty too, If these be the effects. [Aside.]

[Enter MELANTIUS.]

MELANTIUS. Good day, Amintor! for, to me, the name

Of brother is too distant: We are friends. And that is nearer.

AMINTOR. Dear Melantius!

Let me behold thee. Is it possible?

MELANTIUS. What sudden gaze is this?

AMINTOR. 'Tis wondrous strange!

MELANTIUS. Why does thine eye desire so strict a view

Of that it knows so well? There's nothing here

That is not thine.

AMINTOR. I wonder, much, Melantius,
To see those noble looks, that make me
think

How virtuous thou art; And, on the sudden,

'Tis strange to me thou shouldst have worth and honour;

Or not be base, and false, and treacherous,

And every ill. But——

MELANTIUS. Stay, stay, my friend;
I fear this sound will not become our loves.

No more; embrace me.

AMINTOR. Oh, mistake me not:
I know thee to be full of all those
deeds

That we frail men call good; but, by the
course

Of nature, thou shouldst be as quickly changed

As are the winds; dissembling as the sea,

That now wears brows as smooth as vir-gins' be,

Tempting the merchant to invade his face,
And in an hour calls his billows up,
And shoots 'em at the sun, destroying
all

He carries on him.—Oh, how near am I
To utter my sick thoughts! [Aside.]

MELANTIUS. But why, my friend, should
I be so by nature?

AMINTOR. I have wed thy sister, who hath virtuous thoughts
Enough for one whole family; and, 'tis strange

That you should feel no want.

MELANTIUS. Believe me, this compliment's too cunning for me.

DIPHILUS. What should I be then, by the course of nature,
They having both robb'd me of so much virtue?

STRATO. Oh, call the bride, my lord
Amintor,

That we may see her blush, and turn her eyes down:

'Tis the prettiest sport!

AMINTOR. Evadne!

EVADNE [within]. My lord!

AMINTOR. Come forth, my love!
Your brothers do attend to wish you
joy.

EVADNE. I am not ready yet.

AMINTOR. Enough, enough.

EVADNE. They'll mock me.

AMINTOR. 'Faith, thou shalt come in.

[Enter EVADNE.]

MELANTIUS. Good morrow, sister! He that understands

Whom you have wed, need not to wish you joy:

You have enough: Take heed you be not proud.

DIPHILUS. Oh, sister, what have you
done?

EVADNE. I done! why, what have I
done?

STRATO. My lord Amintor swears you are no maid now.

EVADNE. Pish!

STRATO. I'faith, he does.

EVADNE. I knew I should be mock'd.

DIPHILUS. With a truth.

EVADNE. If 'twere to do again,

In faith, I would not marry.

AMINTOR. Nor I, by heaven! [Aside.]

DIPHILUS. Sister. Dula swears
She heard you cry two rooms off.

EVADNE. Fie, how you talk!

DIPHILUS. Let's see you walk, Evadne.

By my troth,
You are spoil'd.

MELANTIUS. Amintor!

AMINTOR. Ha?

MELANTIUS. Thou art sad.

AMINTOR. Who, I? I thank you for
that.

Shall Diphilus, thou, and I, sing a catch?

MELANTIUS. How!

AMINTOR. Pr'ythee, let's.

MELANTIUS. Nay, that's too much the other way.

AMINTOR. I am so lightened with my happiness!

How dost thou, love? kiss me.

EVADNE. I cannot love you, you tell tales of me.

AMINTOR. Nothing but what becomes us.—Gentlemen,

'Would you had all such wives, and all the world,
That I might be no wonder! You are all sad:
What, do you envy me? I walk, methinks,
On water, and ne'er sink, I am so light.
MELANTIUS. 'Tis well you are so.
AMINTOR. Well? how can I be other, When she looks thus?—Is there no music there?
Let's dance.
MELANTIUS. Why, this is strange, Amintor!
AMINTOR. I do not know myself; yet I could wish
My joy were less.
DIPHILUS. I'll marry too, if it will make one thus.
EVADNE. Amintor, hark. [Aside.]
AMINTOR. What says my love?—I must obey.
EVADNE. You do it scurvily, 'twill be perceived. [Apart to him.]
CLEON. My lord, the king is here.

[Enter KING and LYSIPPUS.] AMINTOR. Where?
STRATO. And his brother.
KING. Good morrow, all!—
Amintor, joy on joy fall thick upon thee!
And, madam, you are alter'd since I saw you;
I must salute you; you are now another's.
How liked you your night's rest?
EVADNE. Ill, sir.
AMINTOR. Ay, 'deed,
She took but 'little.
LYSIPPUS. You'll let her take more,
And thank her too, shortly.
KING. Amintor, wert
Thou truly honest till thou wert married.
AMINTOR. Yes, sir.
KING. Tell me, then, how shows the sport unto thee?
AMINTOR. Why, well.
KING. What did you do?
AMINTOR. No more, nor less, than other couples use;

You know what 'tis; it has but a coarse name.
KING. But pry'thee, I should think, by her black eye,
And her red cheek, she should be quick and stirring
In this same business: ha?
AMINTOR. I cannot tell;
I ne'er try'd other, sir; but I perceive
She is as quick as you delivered.
KING. Well, you will trust me then, Amintor,
To chuse a wife for you again?
AMINTOR. No, never, sir.
KING. Why? like you this so ill?
AMINTOR. So well I like her.
For this I bow my knee in thanks to you,
And unto heaven will pay my grateful tribute
Hourly; and do hope we shall draw out
A long contented life together here,
And die both, full of grey hairs, in one day:
For which the thanks are yours. But if the powers
That rule us please to call her first away,
Without pride spoke, this world holds not a wife
Worthy to take her room.
KING. I do not like this.—All forbear the room,
But you, Amintor, and your lady.
[Exeunt all but the KING, AMINTOR, and EVADNE.]
I have some speech with you, that may concern
Your after living well.
AMINTOR [aside]. He will not tell me that he lies with her?
If he do, something heavenly stay my heart,
For I shall be apt to thrust this arm of mine
To acts unlawful!
KING. You will suffer me to talk with her,
Amintor, and not have a jealous pang?
AMINTOR. Sir, I dare trust my wife with whom she dares
To talk, and not be jealous. [EVADNE and the KING speak apart.]

KING. How do you like Amintor?

EVADNE. As I did, sir.

KING. How is that?

EVADNE. As one that, to fulfil your will and pleasure,
I have given leave to call me wife and
love.

KING. I see there is no lasting faith in sin;
They, that break word with heaven, will break again

With all the world, and so dost thou with
me.

EVADNE. How, sir?

KING. This subtle woman's ignorance
Will not excuse you: thou hast taken oaths,
So great, methought, they did not well become

A woman's mouth, that thou wouldst ne'er enjoy
A man but me.

EVADNE. I never did swear so;
You do me wrong.

KING. Day and night have heard it.

EVADNE. I swore indeed, that I would never love
A man of lower place; but, if your fortune

Should throw you from this height, I bade you trust

I would forsake you, and would bend to
him

That won your throne: I love with my ambition,

Not with my eyes. But, if I ever yet
Touch'd any other, leprosy light here
Upon my face; which for your royalty
I would not stain!

KING. Why, thou dissemblest, and it is

In me to punish thee.

EVADNE. Why, 'tis in me,
Then, not to love you, which will more afflict

Your body than your punishment can mine.

KING. But thou hast let Amintor lie with thee.

EVADNE. I have not.

KING. Impudence! he says himself so.

EVADNE. He lies.

KING. He does not.

EVADNE. By this light he does,
Strangely and basely! and I'll prove it
so.

I did not shun him for a night; but told
him,

I would never close with him.

KING. Speak lower; 'tis false.

EVADNE. I am no man
To answer with a blow; or, if I were,
You are the king! But urge me not; 'tis most true.

KING. Do not I know the uncontrolled thoughts
That youth brings with him, when his blood is high

With expectation, and desire of that He long hath waited for? Is not his spirit,

Though he be temperate, of a valiant
strain

As this our age hath known? What could he do,

If such a sudden speech had met his blood,
But ruin thee for ever, if he had not kill'd thee?

He could not bear it thus. He is as we,
Or any other wrong'd man.

EVADNE. 'Tis dissembling.

KING. Take him! farewell! henceforth
I am thy foe;

And what disgraces I can blot thee with look for.

EVADNE. Stay, sir!—Amintor!—You shall hear.—Amintor!

AMINTOR [coming forward]. What, my
love?

EVADNE. Amintor, thou hast an ingenuous look,

And shouldst be virtuous: It amazeth me,
That thou canst make such base malicious
lies!

AMINTOR. What, my dear wife!

EVADNE. Dear wife! I do despise thee.
Why, nothing can be baser than to sow
Dissension amongst lovers.

AMINTOR. Lovers! who?

EVADNE. The king and me.

AMINTOR. O, God!

EVADNE. Who should live long, and love without distaste.
Were it not for such pickthanks as thyself.
Did you lie with me? Swear now, and be punish'd
In hell for this!

AMINTOR. The faithless sin I made
To fair Aspatia, is not yet revenged;
It follows me.—I will not lose a word
To this vile woman: But to you, my king,
The anguish of my soul thrusts out this truth,

You are a tyrant! And not so much to wrong
An honest man thus, as to take a pride
In talking with him of it.

EVADNE. Now, sir, see
How loud this fellow lied.

AMINTOR. You that can know to wrong, should know how men Must right themselves: What punishment is due
From me to him that shall abuse my bed?

Is it not death? Nor can that satisfy,
Unless I send your limbs through all the land,

To show how nobly I have freed myself.

KING. Draw not thy sword: thou know'st I cannot fear
A subject's hand; but thou shalt feel the weight

Of this, if thou dost rage.

AMINTOR. The weight of that!
If you have any worth, for Heaven's sake,
think
I fear not swords; for as you are mere man,

I dare as easily kill you for this deed,
As you dare think to do it. But there is Divinity about you, that strikes dead
My rising passions: As you are my king,
I fall before you, and present my sword
To cut mine own flesh, if it be your will.
Alas! I am nothing but a multitude
Of walking griefs! Yet, should I murder you,

I might before the world take the excuse
Of madness: For, compare my injuries,

And they will well appear too sad a weight

For reason to endure! But, fall I first Amongst my sorrows, ere my treacherous hand Touch holy things! But why (I know not what I have to say) why did you chuse out me

To make thus wretched? There were thousand fools

Easy to work on, and of state enough,
Within the island.

EVADNE. I would not have a fool;
It were no credit for me.

AMINTOR. Worse and worse!
Thou, that dar'st talk unto thy husband thus,

Profess thyself a whore, and, more than so,

Resolve to be so still—It is my fate
To bear and bow beneath a thousand griefs,

To keep that little credit with the world!
But there were wise ones too; you might have ta'en

Another.

KING. No; for I believe thee honest,
As thou wert valiant.

AMINTOR. All the happiness
Bestowed upon me turns into disgrace.

Gods, take your honesty again, for I Am loaden with it!—Good my lord the king,
Be private in it.

KING. Thou may'st live, Amintor.
Free as thy king, if thou wilt wink at this,
And be a means that we may meet in secret.

AMINTOR. A bawd! Hold, hold, my breast! A bitter curse

Seize me, if I forget not all respects
That are religious, on another word
Sounded like that; and, through a sea of sins,

Will wade to my revenge, though I should call

Pains here, and after life, upon my soul!
KING. Well, I am resolute you lay not with her;

And so I leave you. [Exit KING.]

EVADNE. You must needs be prating;
And see what follows.

AMINTOR. Prythee, vex me not!
Leave me: I am afraid some sudden start
Will pull a murder on me.

EVADNE. I am gone;
I love my life well. [Exit EVADNE.]

AMINTOR. I hate mine as much.—
This 'tis to break a troth! I should be glad,
If all this tide of grief would make me
mad. [Exit.]

SCENE II—A room in the palace.

[Enter MELANTIUS.]

MELANTIUS. I'll know the cause of all
Amintor's griefs,
Or friendship shall be idle.

[Enter CALIANAX.]

CALIANAX. O Melantius,
My daughter will die.
MELANTIUS. Trust me, I am sorry.
Would thou hadst ta'en her room!

CALIANAX. Thou art a slave,
A cut-throat slave, a bloody treacherous
slave!

MELANTIUS. Take heed, old man; thou wilt be heard to rave,
And lose thine offices.

CALIANAX. I am valiant grown,
At all these years, and thou art but a slave!

MELANTIUS. Leave! Some company will come, and I respect Thy years, not thee, so much, that I could wish
To laugh at thee alone.

CALIANAX. I'll spoil your mirth:
I mean to fight with thee. There lie,
my cloak!
This was my father's sword, and he durst fight.

Are you prepared?

MELANTIUS. Why wilt thou dote thy-
self
Out of thy life? Hence, get thee to bed!

Have careful looking-to, and eat warm
things,

And trouble not me: My head is full of
thoughts,
More weighty than thy life or death can
be.

CALIANAX. You have a name in war, where you stand safe
Amongst a multitude; but I will try
What you dare do unto a weak old man
In single fight. You will give ground,
I fear.

Come, draw.

MELANTIUS. I will not draw, unless thou pull'st thy death

Upon thee with a stroke. There's no one blow,

That thou canst give, hath strength enough to kill me.

Tempt me not so far then: The power of earth

Shall not redeem thee.

CALIANAX [aside]. I must let him alone:

He's stout and able; and, to say the
truth,

However I may set a face, and talk,
I am not valiant. When I was a youth,
I kept my credit with a testy trick
I had, 'mongst cowards, but durst never fight.

MELANTIUS. I will not promise to preserve your life,

If you do stay.

CALIANAX. I would give half my land
That I durst fight with that proud man a little.

If I had men to hold him, I would beat
him

Till he ask'd me mercy.

MELANTIUS. Sir, will you be gone?

CALIANAX. I dare not stay; but I'll go home, and beat

My servants all over for this. [Exit
CALIANAX.]

MELANTIUS. This old fellow haunts
me!

But the distracted carriage of my Amin-
tor

Takes deeply on me: I will find the cause.

I fear his conscience cries, he wrong'd
Aspatia.

[Enter AMINTOR.]

AMINTOR. Men's eyes are not so subtle to perceive
My inward misery: I bear my grief Hid from the world. How art thou wretched then?
For aught I know, all husbands are like
me;
And every one I talk with of his wife,
Is but a well dissembler of his woes,
As I am. 'Would I knew it! for the rareness
Afflicts me now.

MELANTIUS. Amintor, we have not enjoy'd our friendship of late,
For we were wont to change our souls in
talk.

AMINTOR. Melantius, I can tell thee a good jest
Of Strato and a lady the last day.

MELANTIUS. How was't?

AMINTOR. Why, such an odd one!

MELANTIUS. I have long'd to speak with you;
Not of an idle jest, that's forced, but of matter

You are bound to utter to me.

AMINTOR. What is that, my friend?

MELANTIUS. I have observed your
words
Fall from your tongue wildly; and all your carriage
Like one that strove to show his merry mood,
When he were ill disposed: You were not wont
To put such scorn into your speech, or wear
Upon your face ridiculous jollity.

Some sadness sits here, which your cunning would Cover o'er with smiles, and 'twill not be.
What is it?

AMINTOR. A sadness here! what cause
Can fate provide for me, to make me
so?

Am I not loved through all this isle?
The king
Rains greatness on me. Have I not received

A lady to my bed, that in her eye

Keeps mounting fire, and on her tender cheeks

Inevitable colour, in her heart
A prison for all virtue? Are not you,
Which is above all joys, my constant
friend?

What sadness can I have? No; I am
light,

And feel the courses of my blood more warm

And stirring than they were. 'Faith,
marry too:

And you will feel so unexpress'd a joy
In chaste embraces, that you will indeed

Appear another.

MELANTIUS. You may shape, Amintor,
Causes to cozen the whole world withal,
And yourself too: but 'tis not like a
friend,

To hide your soul from me. 'Tis not your nature

To be thus idle: I have seen you stand
As you were blasted, 'midst of all your mirth;

Call thrice aloud, and then start, feigning joy

So coldly!—World, what do I hear? a
friend

Is nothing. Heaven, I would have told that man

My secret sins! I'll search an unknown land,

And there plant friendship; all is wither'd here.

Come with a compliment! I would have fought,

Or told my friend "he lied," ere sooth'd him so.

Out of my bosom!

AMINTOR. But there is nothing—

MELANTIUS. Worse and worse! farewell!

From this time have acquaintance, but no friend.

AMINTOR. Melantius, stay: You shall know what it is.

MELANTIUS. See, how you play'd with friendship! Be advised

How you give cause unto yourself to say,
You have lost a friend.

AMINTOR. Forgive what I have done;
For I am so o'ergone with injuries
Unheard of, that I lose consideration
Of what I ought to do. Oh, oh!

MELANTIUS. Do not weep.
What is it! May I once but know the
man

Hath turn'd my friend thus!

AMINTOR. I had spoke at first,
But that—

MELANTIUS. But what?

AMINTOR. I held it most unfit
For you to know. 'Faith, do not know it yet.

MELANTIUS. Thou see'st my love, that will keep company

With thee in tears! hide nothing, then,
from me:

For when I know the cause of thy distemper,

With mine old armour I'll adorn myself,
My resolution, and cut through my foes,
Unto thy quiet; till I place thy heart
As peaceable as spotless innocence.

What is it?

AMINTOR. Why, 'tis this—It is too big

To get out—Let my tears make way awhile.

MELANTIUS. Punish me strangely,
Heaven, if he 'scape
Of life or fame, that brought this youth to this!

AMINTOR. Your sister—

MELANTIUS. Well said.

AMINTOR. You will wish't unknown,
When you have heard it.

MELANTIUS. No.

AMINTOR. Is much to blame,
And to the king has given her honour up,
And lives in whoredom with him.

MELANTIUS. How is this?
Thou art run mad with injury, indeed;
Thou couldst not utter this else. Speak
again;

For I forgive it freely; tell thy griefs.

AMINTOR. She's wanton: I am loth to say, "a whore,"

Though it be true.

MELANTIUS. Speak yet again, before mine anger grow

Up, beyond throwing down: What are thy griefs?

AMINTOR. By all our friendship, these.

MELANTIUS. What, am I tame?

After mine actions, shall the name of
friend

Blot all our family, and stick the brand
Of whore upon my sister, unrevenged?

My shaking flesh, be thou a witness for
me,

With what unwillingness I go to scourge
This railer, whom my folly hath called
friend!—

I will not take thee basely; thy sword
Hangs near thy hand; draw 'it, that I may whip

Thy rashness to repentance. Draw thy sword!

AMINTOR. Not on thee, did thine anger swell as high

As the wild surges. Thou shouldst do me ease

Here, and eternally, if thy noble hand
Would cut me from my sorrows.

MELANTIUS. This is base
And fearful. They, that use to utter
lies,

Provide not blows, but words, to qualify
The men they wrong'd. Thou hast a guilty cause.

AMINTOR. Thou pleasest me; for so much more like this

Will raise my anger up above my griefs,
(Which is a passion easier to be borne)
And I shall then be happy.

MELANTIUS. Take then more,
To raise thine anger: 'Tis mere cowardice Makes thee not draw; and I will leave thee dead,

However. But if thou art so much press'd

With guilt and fear, as not to dare to
fight,

I'll make thy memory loath'd, and fix a scandal

Upon thy name for ever.

AMINTOR. Then I draw,
As justly as our magistrates their swords
To cut offenders off. I knew before,

'Twould grate your ears; but it was base
in you

To urge a weighty secret from your friend,
And then rage at it. I shall be at ease,
If I be kill'd; and if you fall by me,
I shall not long out-live you.

MELANTIUS. Stay awhile.—

The name of friend is more than family,
Or all the world besides: I was a fool!
Thou searching human nature, that didst
wake

To do me wrong, thou art inquisitive,
And thrust'st me upon questions that will take

My sleep away! 'Would I had died, ere known

This sad dishonour!—Pardon me, my friend!

If thou wilt strike, here is a faithful
heart;

Pierce it, for I will never heave my
hand

To thine. Behold the power thou hast in me!

I do believe my sister is a whore,
A leprous one! Put up thy sword, young
man.

AMINTOR. How shall I bear it then,
she being so?

I fear, my friend, that you will lose me
shortly;

And I shall do a foul act on myself,
Through these disgraces.

MELANTIUS. Better half the land
Were buried quick together. No, Amin-
tor;

Thou shalt have ease. Oh, this adulterous
king,

That drew her to it! Where got he the spirit

To wrong me so?

AMINTOR. What is it then to me,
If it be wrong to you?

MELANTIUS. Why, not so much:
The credit of our house is thrown away.
But from his iron den I'll waken Death,
And hurl him on this king! My honesty Shall steel my sword; and on its horrid point

I'll wear my cause, that shall amaze the
eyes

Of this proud man, and be too glittering
For him to look on.

AMINTOR. I have quite undone my
fame.

MELANTIUS. Dry up thy watery eyes,
And cast a manly look upon my face;
For nothing is so wild as I, thy friend,
Till I have freed thee. Still this swelling
breast!

I go thus from thee, and will never cease
My vengeance, till I find thy heart at peace.

AMINTOR. It must not be so. Stay!—
Mine eyes would tell How loth I am to this; but, love and
tears,

Leave me awhile; for I have hazarded
All that this world calls happy.—Thou hast wrought

A secret from me, under name of friend,
Which art could ne'er have found, nor torture wrung

From out my bosom: Give it me again,
For I will find it, wheresoe'er it lies,
Hid in the mortal'st part! Invent a way
To give it back.

MELANTIUS. Why would you have it
back?

I will to death pursue him with revenge.

AMINTOR. Therefore I call it back from thee; for I know

Thy blood so high, that thou wilt stir in this,

And shame me to posterity.

Take to thy weapon!

MELANTIUS. Hear thy friend, that bears

More years than thou.

AMINTOR. I will not hear! but draw,
Or I—

MELANTIUS. Amintor!

AMINTOR. Draw then; for I am full as resolute

As fame and honour can enforce me be!
I cannot linger. Draw!

MELANTIUS. I do. But is not
My share of credit equal with thine,
If I do stir?

AMINTOR. No; for it will be call'd
Honour in thee to spill thy sister's blood,
If she her birth abuse; and, on the king,
A brave revenge: But on me, that have walk'd

With patience in it, it will fix the name Of fearful cuckold. Oh, that word! Be quick.

MELANTIUS. Then join with me.

AMINTOR. I dare not do a sin, or else
I would.
Be speedy.

MELANTIUS. Then dare not fight with me; for that's a sin.—
His grief distracts him.—Call thy thoughts again,
And to thyself pronounce the name of
friend,
And see what that will work. I will not fight.

AMINTOR. You must.

MELANTIUS. I will be kill'd first.
Though my passions
Offer'd the like to you, 'tis not this earth
Shall buy my reason to it. Think awhile,
For you are (I must weep when I speak
that)
Almost besides yourself.

AMINTOR. Oh, my soft temper!
So many sweet words from thy sister's
mouth,
I am afraid, would make me take her
To embrace, and pardon her. I am mad
indeed,
And know not what I do. Yet, have a care
Of me in what thou dost.

MELANTIUS. Why, thinks my friend
I will forget his honour? or, to save
The bravery of our house, will lose his
fame,
And fear to touch the throne of majesty?

AMINTOR. A curse will follow that; but rather live
And suffer with me.

MELANTIUS. I'll do what worth shall bid me, and no more.

AMINTOR. Faith, I am sick, and desperately I hope;
Yet, leaning thus, I feel a kind of ease.

MELANTIUS. Come, take again your mirth about you.

AMINTOR. I shall never do't.

MELANTIUS. I warrant you: look up;
we'll walk together;

Put thine arm here; all shall be well
again.

AMINTOR. Thy love (oh, wretched!) ay, thy love, Melantius!
Why, I have nothing else.

MELANTIUS. Be merry then. [Exeunt.]

[Reënter MELANTIUS.]

MELANTIUS. This worthy young man may do violence
Upon himself; but I have cherish'd him
To my best power, and sent him smiling
from me,
To counterfeit again. Sword, hold thine
edge;
My heart will never fail me.

[Enter DIPHILUS.]

Diphilus! Thou com'st as sent.

DIPHILUS. Yonder has been such laughing.

MELANTIUS. Betwixt whom?

DIPHILUS. Why, our sister and the
king;
I thought their spleens would break; they laugh'd us all
Out of the room.

MELANTIUS. They must weep, Diphilus.

DIPHILUS. Must they?

MELANTIUS. They must.
Thou art my brother; and if I did believe

Thou hadst a base thought, I would rip
it out,

Lie where it durst.

DIPHILUS. You should not; I would first

Mangle myself and find it.

MELANTIUS. That was spoke According to our strain. Come, join thy hands to mine,

And swear a firmness to what project I Shall lay before thee.

DIPHILUS. You do wrong us both:
People hereafter shall not say, there pass'd

A bond, more than our loves, to tie our lives

And deaths together.

MELANTIUS. It is as nobly said as I would wish.

Anon I'll tell you wonders: We are wrong'd.

DIPHILUS. But I will tell you now, we'll right ourselves.

MELANTIUS. Stay not: Prepare the armour in my house;

And what friends you can draw unto our side,

Not knowing of the cause, make ready too.

Haste, Diphilus, the time requires it, haste!— [Exit DIPHILUS.]

I hope my cause is just; I know my blood

Tells me it is; and I will credit it. To take revenge, and lose myself withal,

Were idle; and to 'scape impossible, Without I had the fort, which (misery!)

Remaining in the hands of my old enemy

Calianax—But I must have it. See,

[Enter CALIANAX.]

Where he comes shaking by me.—Good my lord,

Forget your spleen to me; I never wrong'd you,

But would have peace with every man.

CALIANAX. 'Tis well;

If I durst fight, your tongue would lie at quiet.

MELANTIUS. You are touchy without all cause.

CALIANAX. Do, mock me.

MELANTIUS. By mine honour I speak truth.

CALIANAX. Honour? where is it?

MELANTIUS. See, what starts

You make into your hatred, to my love And freedom to you. I come with resolution

To obtain a suit of you.

CALIANAX. A suit of me!

'Tis very like it should be granted, sir.

MELANTIUS. Nay, go not hence:

'Tis this; you have the keeping of the fort,

And I would wish you, by the love you ought

To bear unto me, to deliver it Into my hands.

CALIANAX. I am in hope thou'rt mad, To talk to me thus.

MELANTIUS. But there is a reason To move you to it: I would kill the king, That wrong'd you and your daughter.

CALIANAX. Out, traitor!

MELANTIUS. Nay,

But stay: I cannot 'scape, the deed once done,

Without I have this fort.

CALIANAX. And should I help thee? Now thy treacherous mind betrays itself.

MELANTIUS. Come, delay me not; Give me a sudden answer, or already Thy last is spoke! refuse not offer'd love, When it comes clad in secrets.

CALIANAX. If I say [Aside.]

I will not, he will kill me; I do see't Writ in his looks; and should I say I

will,

He'll run and tell the king.—I do not shun

Your friendship, dear Melantius, but this cause

Is weighty; give me but an hour to think.

MELANTIUS. Take it.—I know this goes unto the king;

But I am arm'd. [Exit MELANTIUS.]

CALIANAX. Methinks I feel myself

But twenty now again! this fighting fool Wants policy: I shall revenge my girl,

And make her red again. I pray, my legs Will last that pace that I will carry

them:

I shall want breath, before I find the king. [Exit.]

ACT IV

SCENE I—The apartment of EVADNE in the palace.

[Enter MELANTIUS, EVADNE, and LADIES.]

MELANTIUS. Save you!

EVADNE. Save you, sweet brother!

MELANTIUS. In my blunt eye, methinks, you look, Evadne—

EVADNE. Come, you will make me blush.

MELANTIUS. I would, Evadne; I shall displease my ends else.

EVADNE. You shall, if you commend me; I am bashful.
Come, sir, how do I look?
MELANTIUS. I would not have your women hear me
Break into commendation of you; 'tis not seemly.
EVADNE. Go, wait in the gallery.—
Now speak. [Exeunt LADIES.]
MELANTIUS. I'll lock the door first.
EVADNE. Why?
MELANTIUS. I will not have your gilded things, that dance
In visitation with their Milan skins,
Choke up my business.
EVADNE. You are strangely disposed, sir.
MELANTIUS. Good madam, not to make you merry.
EVADNE. No; if you praise me it will make me sad.
MELANTIUS. Such a sad commendation [have for you.
EVADNE. Brother, the court hath made you witty,
And learn to riddle.
MELANTIUS. I praise the court for't: Has it learnt you nothing?
EVADNE. Me?
MELANTIUS. Ay, Evadne; thou art young and handsome,
A lady of a sweet complexion,
And such a flowing carriage, that it cannot Chuse but inflame a kingdom.
EVADNE. Gentle brother!
MELANTIUS. 'Tis yet in thy repentance, foolish woman,
To make me gentle.
EVADNE. How is this?
MELANTIUS. 'Tis base
And I could blush, at these years, thorough all
My honour'd scars, to come to such a parley.
EVADNE. I understand you not.
MELANTIUS. You dare not, fool! They, that commit thy faults, fly the remembrance.
EVADNE. My faults, sir! I would have you know, I care not
If they were written here, here in my forehead.
MELANTIUS. Thy body is too little for the story;
The lusts of which would fill another woman,
Though she had twins within her.
EVADNE. This is saucy:
Look you intrude no more! There lies your way.
MELANTIUS. Thou art my way, and I will tread upon thee,
Till I find truth out.
EVADNE. What truth is that you look for?
MELANTIUS. Thy long-lost honour.
'Would the gods had set me
Rather to grapple with the plague, or stand
One of their loudest bolts! Come, tell me quickly,
Do it without enforcement, and take heed
You swell me not above my temper.
EVADNE. How, sir.
Where got you this report?
MELANTIUS. Where there were people,
In every place.
EVADNE. They, and the seconds of it are base people:
Believe them not, they lied.
MELANTIUS. Do not play with mine anger, do not, wretch! [Seizes her.]
I come to know that desperate fool that drew thee
From thy fair life: Be wise and lay him open.
EVADNE. Unhand me, and learn manners! Such another Forgetfulness forfeits your life.
MELANTIUS. Quench me this mighty humour, and then tell me
Whose whore you are; for you are one, I know it.
Let all mine honours perish, but I'll find him,
Though he lie lock'd up in thy blood! Be sudden;
There is no facing it, and be not flatter'd!
The burnt air, when the Dog reigns, is not fouler

Than thy contagious name, till thy repentance
(If the gods grant thee any) purge thy sickness.

EVADNE. Be gone! you are my brother; that's your safety.

MELANTIUS. I'll be a wolf first! 'Tis, to be thy brother,

An infamy below the sin of coward.

I am as far from being part of thee,
As thou art from thy virtue: Seek a kindred

'Mongst sensual beasts, and make a goat thy brother?

A goat is cooler. Will you tell me yet?

EVADNE. If you stay here and rail thus, I shall tell you,

I'll have you whipp'd! Get you to your command,

And there preach to your sentinels, and tell them

What a brave man you are: I shall laugh at you.

MELANTIUS. You are grown a glorious whore! Where be your fighters?

What mortal fool durst raise thee to this daring,

And I alive! By my just sword, he had safer

Bestride a billow, when the angry North
Plows up the sea, or made Heaven's fire his food!

Work me no higher. Will you discover yet?

EVADNE. The fellow's mad: Sleep and speak sense.

MELANTIUS. Force my swoll'n heart no further: I would save thee.

Your great maintainers are not here, they dare not:

Would they were all, and arm'd! I would speak loud;

Here's one should thunder to 'em! will you tell me?

Thou hast no hope to 'scape: He that dares most,

And damns away his soul to do thee service,

Will sooner snatch meat from a hungry lion,

Than come to rescue thee; thou hast death about thee.

Who has undone thine honour, poison'd thy virtue,

And, of a lovely rose, left thee a canker?

EVADNE. Let me consider.

MELANTIUS. Do, whose child thou wert,

Whose honour thou hast murder'd, whose grave open'd,

And so pull'd on the gods, that in their justice

They must restore him flesh again, and life,

And raise his dry bones to revenge this scandal.

EVADNE. The gods are not of my mind; they had better

Let 'em lie sweet still in the earth; they'll stink here.

MELANTIUS. Do you raise mirth out of my casiness? [Draws.]

Forsake me, then, all weaknesses of nature,

That make men women! Speak, you whore, speak truth!

Or, by the dear soul of thy sleeping father,

This sword shall be thy lover! Tell, or I'll kill thee;

And, when thou hast told all, thou wilt deserve it.

EVADNE. You will not murder me?

MELANTIUS. No; 'tis a justice, and a noble one,

To put the light out of such base offenders.

EVADNE. Help!

MELANTIUS. By thy foul self, no human help shall help thee,

If thou criest! When I have kill'd thee as I

Have vow'd to do if thou confess not, naked,

As thou has left thine honour, will I leave thee;

That on thy branded flesh the world may read

Thy black shame, and my justice. Wilt thou bend yet?

EVADNE. Yes.
 MELANTIUS. Up, and begin your story.
 EVADNE. Oh, I am miserable!
 MELANTIUS. 'Tis true, thou art. Speak truth still.
 EVADNE. I have offended: Noble sir, forgive me.
 MELANTIUS. With what secure slave?
 EVADNE. Do not ask me, sir:
 Mine own remembrance is a misery
 Too mighty for me.
 MELANTIUS. Do not fall back again:
 My sword's unsheathed yet.
 EVADNE. What shall I do?
 MELANTIUS. Be true, and make your fault less.
 EVADNE. I dare not tell.
 MELANTIUS. Tell, or I'll be this day
 a-killing thee.
 EVADNE. Will you forgive me then?
 MELANTIUS. Stay; I must ask mine honour first.—
 I have too much foolish nature in me:
 Speak.
 EVADNE. Is there none else here?
 MELANTIUS. None but a fearful conscience; that's too many.
 Who is't?
 EVADNE. Oh, hear me gently. It was the king.
 MELANTIUS. No more. My worthy father's and my services Are liberally rewarded.—King, I thank
 thee!
 For all my dangers and my wounds, thou hast paid me
 In my own metal: These are soldiers' thanks!—
 How long have you lived thus, Evadne?
 EVADNE. Too long.
 MELANTIUS. Too late you find it. Can you be sorry?
 EVADNE. Would I were half as blameless.
 MELANTIUS. Evadne, thou wilt to thy trade again!
 EVADNE. First to my grave.
 MELANTIUS. 'Would gods thou hadst been so blest.
 Dost thou not hate this king now? pr'ythee hate him.

Couldst thou not curse him? I command thee, curse him.
 Curse till the gods hear, and deliver him
 To thy just wishes! Yet, I fear, Evadne,
 You had rather play your game out.
 EVADNE. No; I feel
 Too many sad confusions here, to let in Any loose flame hereafter.
 MELANTIUS. Dost thou not feel, 'mongst all those, one brave anger
 That breaks out nobly, and directs thine arm
 To kill this base king?
 EVADNE. All the gods forbid it!
 MELANTIUS. No; all the gods require
 it:
 They are dishonour'd in him.
 EVADNE. 'Tis too fearful.
 MELANTIUS. You are valiant in his bed, and bold enough
 To be a stale whore, and have your madam's name
 Discourse for grooms and pages; and,
 hereafter,
 When his cool majesty hath laid you
 by,
 To be at pension with some needy sir,
 For meat and coarser clothes; Thus far you know
 No fear. Come, you shall kill him.
 EVADNE. Good sir!
 MELANTIUS. An 'twere to kiss him dead, thou shouldst smother him.
 Be wise, and kill him. Canst thou live,
 and know
 What noble minds shall make thee, see thyself
 Found out with every finger, made the
 shame
 Of all successions, and in this great ruin
 Thy brother and thy noble husband broken?
 Thou shalt not live thus. Kneel, and swear to help me,
 When I shall call thee to it; or, by all Holy in Heaven and earth, thou shalt not live
 To breathe a full hour longer; not a
 thought!
 Come, 'tis a righteous oath. Give me thy
 hands,

And, both to Heaven held up, swear, by that wealth
This lustful thief stole from thee, when I say it,

To let his foul soul out.

EVADNE. Here I swear it;
And, all you spirits of abused ladies,
Help me in this performance!

MELANTIUS. Enough. This must be known to none

But you and I, Evadne; not to your
lord,

Though he be wise and noble, and a fellow

Dares step as far into a worthy action
As the most daring: ay, as far as justice.

Ask me not why. Farewell. [Exit

MELANTIUS.]

EVADNE. 'Would I could say so to my black disgrace!

Oh, where have I been all this time? how
'friended,

That I should lose myself thus desperately,

And none for pity show me how I wandered?

There is not in the compass of the light
A more unhappy creature: Sure, I am monstrous!

For I have done those follies, those mad
mischiefs,

Would dare a woman. Oh, my loaden soul,
Be not so cruel to me: choke not up

The way to my repentance! Oh, my lord!

[Enter AMINTOR.]

AMINTOR. How now?

EVADNE. My much-abused lord!

[Kneels.]

AMINTOR. This cannot be!

EVADNE. I do not kneel to live; I dare not hope it:

The wrongs I did are greater. Look upon me,

Though I appear with all my faults.

AMINTOR. Stand up.

This is a new way to beget more sorrow:

Heaven knows I have too many! Do not mock me:

Though I am tame, and bred up with my wrongs,

Which are my foster-brothers, I may leap,

Like a hand-wolf, into my natural wild-
ness,

And do an outrage. Pr'ythee, do not mock
me.

EVADNE. My whole life is so leprous, it infects

All my repentance. I would buy your pardon,

Though at the highest set; even with my
life.

That slight contrition, that's no sacrifice
For what I have committed.

AMINTOR. Sure I dazzle:

There cannot be a faith in that foul
woman,

That knows no god more mighty than her mischiefs.

Thou dost still worse, still number on thy faults,

To press my poor heart thus. Can I believe

There's any seed of virtue in that woman Left to shoot up, that dares go on in sin,

Known, and so known as thine is. Oh,
Evadne!

'Would there were any safety in thy sex,
That I might put a thousand sorrows off,

And credit thy repentance! But I must
not:

Thou hast brought me to that dull calamity,

To that strange misbelief of all the world,
And all things that are in it, that I fear

I shall fall like a tree, and find my
grave,

Only remembering that I grieve.

EVADNE. My lord,

Give me your griefs: You are an innocent,

A soul as white as heaven; let not my sins

Perish your noble youth. I do not fall
here

To shadow, by dissembling with my tears,
(As, all say, women can), or to 'make
less,

What my hot will hath done, which Heaven and you Know to be tougher than the hand of
 time
 Can cut from man's remembrance. No,
 I do not:
 I do appear the same, the same Evadne,
 Drest in the shames I lived in: the same monster!
 But these are names of honour, to what
 I am:
 I do present myself the foulest creature,
 Most poisonous, dangerous, and despised
 of men,
 Lerna e'er bred, or Nilus! I am hell,
 Till you, my dear lord, shoot your light into me,
 The beams of your forgiveness. I am soul-
 sick,
 And wither with the fear of one con-
 demn'd,
 Till I have got your pardon.
 AMINTOR. Rise, Evadne.
 Those heavenly powers that put this good into thee,
 Grant a continuance of it! I forgive
 thee:
 Make thyself worthy of it; and take
 heed,
 Take heed, Evadne, this be serious.
 Mock not the powers above, that can and
 dare
 Give thee a great example of their justice
 To all ensuing eyes, if thou playest
 With thy repentance, the best sacrifice.
 EVADNE. I have done nothing good to win belief,
 My life hath been so faithless. All the creatures,
 Made for Heaven's honours, have their ends, and good ones,
 All but the cozening crocodiles, false
 women!
 They reign here like those plagues, those killing sores,
 Men pray against; and when they die,
 like tales
 Ill told and unbeliev'd, they pass away
 And go to dust forgotten! But, my lord, Those short days I shall number to my
 rest

(As many must not see me) shall, though too late,
 Though in my evening, yet perceive a
 will;
 Since I can do no good, because a woman, Reach constantly at something that is near it:
 I will redeem one minute of my age,
 Or, like another Niobe, I'll weep
 Till I am water.
 AMINTOR. I am now dissolved:
 My frozen soul melts. May each sin thou hast
 Find a new mercy! Rise; I am at peace.
 Hadst thou been thus, thus excellently
 good,
 Before that devil king tempted thy frailty,
 Sure thou hadst made a star! Give me
 thy hand.
 From this time I will know thee; and, as far
 As honour gives me leave, be thy Amintor.
 When we meet next, I will salute thee fairly,
 And pray the gods to give thee happy
 days.
 My charity shall go along with thee,
 Though my embraces must be far from
 thee.
 I should have kill'd thee, but this sweet repentance
 Locks up my vengeance; for which thus I kiss thee—
 The last kiss we must take! And 'would
 to Heaven
 The holy priest, that gave our hands together,
 Had given us equal virtues! Go, Evadne;
 The Gods thus part our bodies. Have a
 care
 My honour falls no farther: I am well
 then.
 EVADNE. All the dear joys here, and,
 above, hereafter,
 Crown thy fair soul! Thus I take leave,
 my lord;
 And never shall you see the foul Evadne,
 Till she have tried all honour'd means,
 that may Set her in rest, and wash her stains away. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II—The presence chamber.

[*Banquet—Enter KING and CALLIANAX—
Hautboys play within.*]

KING. I cannot tell how I should credit this

From you, that are his enemy.

CALLIANAX. I am sure

He said it to me; and I'll justify it

What way he dares oppose—but with my sword.

KING. But did he break, without all circumstance,

To you, his foe, that he would have the fort,

To kill me, and then 'scape?

CALLIANAX. If he deny it, I'll make him blush.

KING. It sounds incredibly.

CALLIANAX. Ay, so does everything I say of late.

KING. Not so, Callianax.

CALLIANAX. Yes, I should sit

Mute, whilst a rogue with strong arms cuts your throat.

KING. Well, I will try him; and, if this be true,

I'll pawn my life I'll find it. If't be false,

And that you clothe your hate in such a lie,

You shall hereafter dote in your own house,

Not in the court.

CALLIANAX. Why, if it be a lie,

Mine ears are false; for, I'll be sworn, I heard it.

Old men are good for nothing: You were best

Put me to death for hearing, and free him

For meaning it. You would have trusted me

Once, but the time is alter'd.

KING. And will still,

Where I may do with justice to the world:

You have no witness?

CALLIANAX. Yes, myself.

KING. No more,

I mean, there were that heard it.

CALLIANAX. How! no more?

Would you have more? why, am not I enough

To hang a thousand rogues?

KING. But, so, you may

Hang honest men too, if you please.

CALLIANAX. I may!

'Tis like I will do so: There are a hundred

Will swear it for a need too, if I say it—

KING. Such witnesses we need not.

CALLIANAX. And 'tis hard

If my word cannot hang a boisterous knave.

KING. Enough.—Where's Strato?

[Enter STRATO.]

STRATO. Sir!

KING. Why, where's all the company?

Call Amintor in;

Evadne. Where's my brother, and Melantius?

Bid him come too; and Diphilus. Call all

That are without there. [Exit STRATO.]

If he should desire

The combat of you, 'tis not in the power

Of all our laws to hinder it, unless

We mean to quit 'em.

CALLIANAX. Why, if you do think

'Tis fit an old man, and a counsellor,

Do fight for what he says, then you may grant it.

[Enter AMINTOR, EVADNE, MELANTIUS, DIPHILUS, LYSIPPUS, CLEON, STRATO, DIAGORAS.]

KING. Come, sirs!—Amintor, thou art yet a bridegroom,

And I will use thee so: Thou shalt sit down.—

Evadne, sit; and you, Amintor, too:

This banquet is for you, sir.—Who has brought

A merry tale about him, to raise laughter Amongst our wine? Why, Strato, where art thou?

Thou wilt chop out with them unseasonably,

When I desire them not.

STRATO. 'Tis my ill luck, sir, so to spend them then.

KING. Reach me a bowl of wine.—Melantius, thou Art sad.

MELANTIUS. I should be, sir, the merriest here,
But I have ne'er a story of my own
Worth telling at this time.

KING. Give me the wine.

MELANTIUS, I am now considering
How easy 'twere, for any man we trust,
To poison one of us in such a bowl.

MELANTIUS. I think it were not hard,
sir, for a knave.

CALLANAX. Such as you are. [Aside.]

KING. I'faith, 'twere easy: It becomes us well
To get plain-dealing men about ourselves;
Such as you all are here.—Amintor, to
thee;
And to thy fair Evadne.

MELANTIUS. Have you thought
Of this, Calianax? [Apart to him.]

CALLANAX. Yes, marry, have I.

MELANTIUS. And what's your resolution?

CALLANAX. You shall have it,—
Soundly, I warrant you.

KING. Reach to Amintor, Strato.

AMINTOR. Here, my love.

This wine will do thee wrong, for it will set Blushes upon thy cheeks; and, till thou dost
A fault, 'twere pity.

KING. Yet, I wonder much
At the strange desperation of these men,
That dare attempt such acts here in our
state:
He could not 'scape, that did it.

MELANTIUS. Were he known, Impossible.

KING. It would be known, Melantius.

MELANTIUS. It ought to be: If he got then away,
He must wear all our lives upon his sword.
He need not fly the island; he must leave
No one alive.

KING. No; I should think no man Could kill me, and 'scape clear, but that old man.

CALLANAX. But I! heaven bless me! I! should I, my liege?

KING. I do not think thou would'st;
but yet thou might'st;
For thou hast in thy hands the means to
'scape,
By keeping of the fort.—He has, Melan-
tius,
And he has kept it well.

MELANTIUS. From cobwebs, sir,
'Tis clean swept: I can find no other
art
In keeping of it now: 'Twas ne'er besieged
Since he commanded it.

CALLANAX. I shall be sure
Of your good word: But I have kept it safe
From such as you.

MELANTIUS. Keep your ill temper in:
I speak no malice. Had my brother kept
it,
I should have said as much.

KING. You are not merry.
Brother, drink wine. Sit you all still:—
Calianax, [Apart to him.]
I cannot trust thus: I have thrown out
words,
That would have fetch'd warm blood upon the cheeks
Of guilty men, and he is never moved:
He knows no such thing.

CALLANAX. Impudence may 'scape,
When feeble virtue is accused.

KING. He must,
If he were guilty, feel an alteration
At this our whisper, whilst we point at
him:
You see he does not.

CALLANAX. Let him hang himself:
What care I what he does? This he did
say.

KING. Melantius, you can easily conceive
What I have meant; for men that are in fault
Can subtly apprehend, when others aim
At what they do amiss: But I forgive

Freely, before this man. Heaven do so too!

I will not touch thee, so much as with shame

Of telling it. Let it be so no more.

CALIANAX. Why, this is very fine.

MELANTIUS. I cannot tell

What 'tis you mean; but I am apt enough Rudely to thrust into an ignorant fault.

But let me know it: Happily, 'tis nought But misconstruction; and, where I am clear,

I will not take forgiveness of the gods, Much less of you.

KING. Nay, if you stand so stiff, I shall call back my mercy.

MELANTIUS. I want smoothness To thank a man for pardoning of a crime I never knew.

KING. Not to instruct your knowledge, but to show you

My ears are everywhere, you meant to kill me,

And get the fort to 'scape.

MELANTIUS. Pardon me, sir; My bluntness will be pardoned: You preserve

A race of idle people here about you, Faces and talkers, to defame the worth Of those that do things worthy. The man that utter'd this

Had perish'd without food, be't who it will,

But for this arm, that fenced him from the foe.

And if I thought you gave a faith to this, The plainness of my nature would speak more.

Give me a pardon (for you ought to do't) To kill him that spake this.

CALIANAX. Ay, that will be The end of all: Then I am fairly paid For all my care and service.

MELANTIUS. That old man, Who calls me enemy, and of whom I (Though I will never match my hate so low)

Have no good thought, would yet, I think, excuse me,

And swear he thought me wrong'd in this.

CALIANAX. Who—I?

Thou shameless fellow! Didst thou not speak to me Of it thyself?

MELANTIUS. Oh, then it came from him?

CALIANAX. From me! who should it come from, but from me?

MELANTIUS. Nay, I believe your malice is enough:

But I have lost my anger.—Sir, I hope You are well satisfied.

KING. Lysippus, cheer Amintor and his lady; there's no sound Comes from you; I will come and do't myself.

AMINTOR. You have done already, sir, I thank you. [Apart.]

KING. Melantius, I do credit this from him,

How slight soe'er you make't.

MELANTIUS. 'Tis strange you should.

CALIANAX. 'Tis strange he should believe an old man's word That never lied in's life.

MELANTIUS. I talk not to thee!— Shall the wild words of this distemper'd man,

Frantic with age and sorrow, make a breach

Betwixt your majesty and me? 'Twas wrong

To hearken to him; but to credit him, As much, at least, as I have power to bear.

But pardon me—whilst I speak only truth

I may commend myself—I have bestow'd My careless blood with you, and should be loth

To think an action that would make me lose

That, and my thanks too. When I was a boy,

I thrust myself into my country's cause, And did a deed that pluck'd five years from time,

And styled me man then. And for you, my king,

Your subjects all have fed by virtue of My arm. This sword of mine hath plough'd the ground,

And reapt the fruit in peace;
And you yourself have lived at home in
ease.

So terrible I grew, that, without swords,
My name hath fetch'd you conquest: And
my heart

And limbs are still the same: my will as great

To do you service. Let me not be paid
With such a strange distrust.

KING. Melantius,
I held it great injustice to believe
Thine enemy, and did not; if I did,
I do not; let that satisfy.—What, struck
With sadness all? More wine!

CALIANAX. A few fine words Have overthrown my truth. Ah, thou'rt a villain!

MELANTIUS. Why, thou wert better let me have the fort. [Apart to him.] Dotard! I will disgrace thee thus for ever:

There shall no credit lie upon thy words.
Think better, and deliver it.

CALIANAX. My liege,
He's at me now again to do it.—Speak;
Deny it, if thou canst.—Examine him
While he is hot; for if he cool again,
He will forswear it.

KING. This is lunacy,
I hope, Melantius.

MELANTIUS. He hath lost himself Much, since his daughter miss'd the happiness
My sister gain'd; and, though he call me
foe,

I pity him.

CALIANAX. Pity? a pox upon you!

MELANTIUS. Mark his disordered words! And, at the masque, Diagoras knows, he raged, and rail'd at
me,

And call'd a lady whore, so innocent
She understood him not. But it becomes Both you and me too to forgive distraction:

Pardon him, as I do.

CALIANAX. I'll not speak for thee,
For all thy cunning.—If you will be safe,

Chop off his head! for there was never known

So impudent a rascal.

KING. Some, that love him,
Get him to bed. Why, pity should not let Age make itself contemptible; we must be
All old; have him away.

MELANTIUS. Calianax, [Apart to him.]
The king believes you; come, you shall go
home,

And rest; you have done well. You'll give it up

When I have used you thus a month, I hope.

CALIANAX. Now, now, 'tis plain, sir; he does move me still.

He says, he knows I'll give him up the fort,

When he has used me thus a month. I am mad,

Am I not, still?

ALL. Ha, ha, ha!

CALIANAX. I shall be mad indeed, if you do thus!

Why should you trust a sturdy fellow
there

(That has no virtue in him; all's in his sword)

Before me? Do but take his weapons from him,

And he's an ass; and I'm a very fool,
Both with him, and without him, as you use me.

ALL. Ha, ha, ha!

KING. 'Tis well, Calianax. But if you use

This once again, I shall entreat some other
To see your offices be well discharged.
Be merry, gentlemen; it grows somewhat late.—

Amintor, thou wouldst be a-bed again.

AMINTOR. Yes, sir.

KING. And you, Evadne.—Let me take Thee in my arms, Melantius, and believe Thou art, as thou deserv'st to be, my friend

Still, and for ever.—Good Calianax, Sleep soundly; it will bring thee to thy-
self.

[Exeunt all but MELANTIUS and CALIANAX.]

CALLIANAX. Sleep soundly! I sleep soundly now, I hope;
I could not be thus else.—How darest thou stay
Alone with me, knowing how thou hast used me?

MELANTIUS. You cannot blast me with your tongue, and that's
The strongest part you have about you.

CALLIANAX. I
Do look for some great punishment for this;

For I begin to forget all my hate,
And take't unkindly that mine enemy
Should use me so extraordinarily scurvily.

MELANTIUS. I shall melt too, if you begin to take Unkindnesses: I never meant you hurt.

CALLIANAX. Thou'lt anger me again.
Thou wretched rogue,
Meant me no hurt! Disgrace me, with the king;

Lose all my offices! This is no hurt,
Is it? I pr'ythee, what dost thou call hurt?

MELANTIUS. To poison men, because they love me not;
To call the credit of men's wives in question;

To murder children betwixt me and land;
This is all hurt.

CALLIANAX. All this thou think'st is sport;

For mine is worse: But use thy will with me;

For, betwixt grief and anger, I could cry.

MELANTIUS. Be wise then, and be safe; thou may'st revenge.

CALLIANAX. Ay, o' the king? I would revenge o' thee.

MELANTIUS. That you must plot yourself.

CALLIANAX. I'm a fine plotter.

MELANTIUS. The short is, I will hold thee with the king

In this perplexity, till peevishness
And thy disgrace have laid thee in thy grave.

But if thou wilt deliver up the fort,
I'll take thy trembling body in my arms,

And bear thee over dangers: Thou shalt hold

Thy wanted state.

CALLIANAX. If I should tell the king,
Canst thou deny't again?

MELANTIUS. Try, and believe.

CALLIANAX. Nay, then, thou canst bring anything about.

Thou shalt have the fort.

MELANTIUS. Why, well;

Here let our hate be buried; and this hand
Shall right us both. Give me thy aged breast

To compass.

CALLIANAX. Nay, I do not love thee yet;
I cannot well endure to look on thee:

And, if I thought it were a courtesy,
Thou should'st not have it. But I am disgraced;

My offices are to be ta'en away;

And, if I did but hold this fort a day,
I do believe, the king would take it from me,

And give it thee, things are so strangely carried.

Ne'er thank me for't; but yet the king shall know

There was some such thing in't I told him of;

And that I was an honest man.

MELANTIUS. He'll buy
That knowledge very dearly.—Diphilus,

[Enter DIPHILUS.]

What news with thee?

DIPHILUS. This were a night indeed
To do it in: The king hath sent for her.

MELANTIUS. She shall perform it then.

—Go, Diphilus,
And take from this good man, my worthy friend,

The fort; he'll give it thee.

DIPHILUS. Have you got that?

CALLIANAX. Art thou of the same breed?
Canst thou deny

This to the king too?

DIPHILUS. With a confidence
As great as his.

CALLIANAX. Faith, like enough.

MELANTIUS. Away, and use him kindly.

CALIANAX. Touch not me;
I hate the whole strain. If thou follow
me,

A great way off, I'll give thee up the fort;
And hang yourselves.

MELANTIUS. Be gone.

DIPHILUS. He's finely wrought.

[Exeunt CALIANAX and DIPHILUS.]

MELANTIUS. This is a night, 'spite of astronomers,

To do the deed in. I will wash the stain,
That rests upon our house, off with his blood.

[Enter AMINTOR.]

AMINTOR. Melantius, now assist me: If thou be'st

That which thou say'st, assist me. I have lost

All my distempers, and have found a rage
So pleasing! Help me.

MELANTIUS. Who can see him thus,
And not swear vengeance?—What's the matter, friend?

AMINTOR. Out with thy sword; and,
hand in hand with me,
Rush to the chamber of this hated king:
And sink him, with the weight of all his sins,
To hell for ever.

MELANTIUS. 'Twere a rash attempt,
Not to be done with safety. Let your reason

Plot your revenge, and not your passion.

AMINTOR. If thou refuseth me in these extremes,

Thou art no friend: He sent for her to
me;

By Heaven, to me, myself! And, I must tell you,

I love her, as a stranger; there is worth
In that vile woman, worthy things, Mel-antius;

And she repents. I'll do't myself alone,
Though I be slain. Farewell.

MELANTIUS. He'll overthrow

My whole design with madness.—Amintor, Think what thou dost: I dare as much as Valour;

But 'tis the king, the king, the king.
Amintor,

With whom thou fightest!—I know he's honest,

And this will work with him. [Aside.]

AMINTOR. I cannot tell

What thou hast said; but thou hast
charm'd my sword

Out of my hand, and left me shaking here, Defenceless.

MELANTIUS. I will take it up for thee.

AMINTOR. What a wild beast is uncollected man!

The thing, that we call honour, bears us
all

Headlong to sin, and yet itself is nothing.

MELANTIUS. Alas, how variable are thy thoughts!

AMINTOR. Just like my fortunes: I was run to that

I purposed to have chid thee for. Some plot,

I did distrust, thou hadst against the
king,

By that old fellow's carriage. But take heed;

There's not the least limb growing to a
king,

But carries thunder in it.

MELANTIUS. I have none
Against him.

AMINTOR. Why, come then; and still remember,

We may not think revenge.

MELANTIUS. I will remember. [Exeunt.]

ACT V

SCENE I—A room in the palace.

[Enter EVADNE and a GENTLEMAN.]

EVADNE. Sir, is the king a-bed?

GENTLEMAN. Madam, an hour ago.

EVADNE. Give me the key then, and let none be near;

'Tis the king's pleasure.

GENTLEMAN. I understand you, madam;
'would 'twere mine.

I must not wish good rest unto your ladyship.

EVADNE. You talk, you talk.

GENTLEMAN. 'Tis all I dare do, madam;
but the king

Will wake, and then—

EVADNE. Saving your imagination, pray, good night, sir.

GENTLEMAN. A good night be it then,
and a long one, madam.

I am gone. [Exit.]

SCENE II—The bedchamber.

[The KING discovered in bed, sleeping.

Enter EVADNE.]

EVADNE. The night grows horrible; and all about me

Like my black purpose. Oh, the conscience
Of a lost virgin! whither wilt thou pull
me?

To what things, dismal as the depth of
hell,

Wilt thou provoke me? Let no woman
dare

From this hour be disloyal, if her heart
be flesh,

If she have blood, and can fear: 'Tis a daring

Above that desperate fool's that left his peace,

And went to sea to fight. 'Tis so many
sins,

An age cannot repent 'em; and so great,
The gods want mercy for! Yet I must through 'em.

I have begun a slaughter on my honour,
And I must end it there.—He sleeps.

Good Heavens!

Why give you peace to this untemperate beast,

That hath so long transgress'd you; I must kill him,

And I will do it bravely: The mere joy
Tells me, I merit in it. Yet I must not Thus tamely do it, as he sleeps; that were

To rock him to another world: My vengeance

Shall take him waking, and then lay before him

The number of his wrongs and punishments.

I'll shake his sins like furies, till I waken
His evil angel, his sick conscience;

And then I'll strike him dead. King, by your leave:

[Ties his arms to the bed.]

I dare not trust your strength. Your grace and I

Must grapple upon even terms no more.
So. If he rail me not from my resolution,
I shall be strong enough.—My lord the
king!!

My lord!—He sleeps, as if he meant to wake

No more.—My lord!—Is he not dead already?

Sir! My lord!

KING. Who's that?

EVADNE. Oh, you sleep soundly, sir!

KING. My dear Evadne,

I have been dreaming of thee. Come to bed.

EVADNE. I am come at length, sir; but how welcome?

KING. What pretty new device is this,
Evadne?

What, do you tie me to you? By my love,
This is a quaint one. Come, my dear, and kiss me.

I'll be thy Mars; to bed, my queen of
love:

Let us be caught together, that the gods
May see, and envy our embraces.

EVADNE. Stay, sir, stay:

You are too hot, and I have brought you physic

To temper your high veins.

KING. Pr'ythee, to bed then; let me take it warm;

There thou shalt know the state of my body better.

EVADNE. I know you have a surfeited foul body;

And you must bleed.

KING. Bleed!

EVADNE. Ay, you shall bleed! Lie still;
and, if the devil,

Your lust, will give you leave, repent.
This steel

Comes to redeem the honour that you stole,

King, my fair name; which nothing but thy death

Can answer to the world.

KING. How's this, Evadne?

EVADNE. I am not she; nor bear I in this breast

So much cold spirit to be call'd a woman. I am a tiger; I am anything That knows not pity. Stir not! If thou dost,

I'll take thee unprepared; thy fears upon thee,

That make thy sins look double; and so send thee

(By my revenge, I will) to look those torments

Prepared for such black souls.

KING. Thou dost not mean this; 'tis impossible:

Thou art too sweet and gentle.

EVADNE. No, I am not.

I am as foul as thou art, and can number As many such hells here. I was once fair, Once I was lovely; not a blowing rose More chastely sweet, till thou, thou, thou foul canker, (Stir not) didst poison me. I was a world of virtue,

Till your curst court and you (Hell bless you for't!)

With your temptations on temptations, Made me give up mine honour; for which, king,

I'm come to kill thee.

KING. No!

EVADNE. I am.

KING. Thou art not!

I pry'thee speak not these things: Thou art gentle,

And wert not meant thus rugged.

EVADNE. Peace, and hear me.

Stir nothing but your tongue, and that for mercy

To those above us; by whose lights I vow,

Those blessed fires that shot to see our sin,

If thy hot soul had substance with thy blood,

I would kill that too; which, being past my steel,

My tongue shall reach. Thou art a shameless villain!

A thing out of the overcharge of nature;

Sent, like a thick cloud, to disperse a plague

Upon weak catching women! such a tyrant,

That for his lust would sell away his subjects!

Ay, all his Heaven hereafter!

KING. Hear, Evadne,

Thou soul of sweetness, hear! I am thy king.

EVADNE. Thou art my shame! Lie still, there's none about you, Within your cries: All promises of safety Are but deluding dreams. Thus, thus, thou foul man,

Thus I begin my vengeance! [Stabs him.]

KING. Hold, Evadne!

I do command thee, hold.

EVADNE. I do not mean, sir, To part so fairly with you; we must change

More of these love-tricks yet.

KING. What bloody villain

Provoked thee to this murder?

EVADNE. Thou, thou monster.

KING. Oh!

EVADNE. Thou kept'st me brave at court, and whor'd'st me, king:

Then married me to a young noble gentleman,

And whor'd'st me still.

KING. Evadne, pity me.

EVADNE. He'll take me then! This for my lord Amintor!

This for my noble brother! and this stroke For the most wrong'd of women!

[Kills him.]

KING. Oh! I die.

EVADNE. Die all our faults together!

I forgive thee. [Exit.]

[Enter two GENTLEMEN of the bed-chamber.]

1ST GENTLEMAN. Come, now she's gone, let's enter; the king expects it, and will be angry.

2ND GENTLEMAN. 'Tis a fine wench; we'll have a snap at her one of these nights, as she goes from him.

1ST GENTLEMAN. Content. How quickly he had done with her! I see, kings can do no more that way than other mortal people.

2ND GENTLEMAN. How fast he is! I cannot hear him breathe.

1ST GENTLEMAN. Either the tapers give a feeble light,
Or he looks very pale.

2ND GENTLEMAN. And so he does:
Pray Heaven he be well; let's look.—Alas!
He's stiff, wounded and dead: Treason, treason!

1ST GENTLEMAN. Run forth and call.

2ND GENTLEMAN. Treason, treason!

[Exit.]

1ST GENTLEMAN. This will be laid on us:
Who can believe a woman could do this?

[Enter CLEON and LYSIPPUS.]

CLEON. How now! Where's the traitor?

1ST GENTLEMAN. Fled, fled, away; but there her woful act lies still.

CLEON. Her act! a woman!

LYSIPPUS. Where's the body?

1ST GENTLEMAN. There.

LYSIPPUS. Farewell, thou worthy man!

There were two bonds
That tied our loves, a brother and a king;
The least of which might fetch a flood of tears:

But such the misery of greatness is,
They have no time to mourn; then pardon
me!—

[Enter STRATO.]

Sirs, which way went she?

STRATO. Never follow her;
For she, alas! was but the instrument.
News is now brought in, that Melantius
Has got the fort, and stands upon the wall;
And with a loud voice calls those few, that
pass

At this dead time of night, delivering
The innocence of this act.

LYSIPPUS. Gentlemen,
I am your king.

STRATO. We do acknowledge it.

LYSIPPUS. I would I were not! Follow, all; for this
Must have a sudden stop. [Exit.]

SCENE III—Before the citadel.

[Enter MELANTIUS, DIPHILUS, and CALLIANAX, on the walls.]

MELANTIUS. If the dull people can believe I am arm'd,

(Be constant, Diphilus!) now we have
time,

Either to bring our banish'd honours
home,

Or create new ones in our ends.

DIPHILUS. I fear not;

My spirit lies not that way.—Courage,
Callianax.

CALLIANAX. 'Would I had any! you should quickly know it.

MELANTIUS. Speak to the people: Thou art eloquent.

CALLIANAX. 'Tis a fine eloquence to come to the gallows!

You were born to be my end. The devil take you!

Now must I hang for company. 'Tis
strange,

I should be old, and neither wise nor valiant.

[Enter below, LYSIPPUS, DIAGORAS, CLEON, STRATO, and GUARD.]

LYSIPPUS. See where he stands, as boldly confident

As if he had his full command about
him.

STRATO. He looks as if he had the better cause, sir;

Under your gracious pardon, let me speak
it!

Though he be mighty-spirited, and forward

To all great things; to all things of that danger

Worse men shake at the telling of; yet, certainly,

I do believe him noble; and this action
Rather pull'd on, than sought: his mind was ever

As worthy as his hand.

LYSIPPUS. 'Tis my fear, too.

Heaven forgive all! Summon him, lord
Cleon.

CLEON. Ho, from the walls there!

MELANTIUS. Worthy Cleon, welcome.
We could have wish'd you here, lord. You are honest.

CALLIANAX. Well, thou art as flattering a knave, though
I dare not tell thee so—— [Aside.]

LYSIPPUS. Melantius!

MELANTIUS. Sir?

LYSIPPUS. I am sorry that we meet thus; our old love

Never required such distance. Pray
Heaven,

You have not left yourself, and sought
this safety

More out of fear than honour! You have lost

A noble master; which your faith, Melan-
tius,

Some think, might have preserved: Yet
you know best.

CALLIANAX. When time was, I was mad;
some, that dares fight,
I hope will pay this rascal.

MELANTIUS. Royal young man, whose tears look lovely on thee;
Had they been shed for a deserving one,
They had been lasting monuments! Thy
brother,

While he was good, I call'd him king; and served him

With that strong faith, that most unwearied valour,

Pull'd people from the farthest sun to seek him,

And beg his friendship. I was then his soldier.

But since his hot pride drew him to disgrace me,

And brand my noble actions with his lust

(That never-cured dishonour of my sister, Base stain of whore! and, which is
worse,

The joy to make it still so) like myself,
Thus I have flung him off with my allegiance;

And stand here mine own justice, to revenge

What I have suffered in him; and this old
man,

Wronged almost to lunacy.

CALLIANAX. Who—I?

You would draw me in. I have had no
wrong,

I do disclaim ye all.

MELANTIUS. The short is this:

'Tis no ambition to lift up myself

Urgeth me thus; I do desire again

To be a subject, so I may be free.

If not, I know my strength, and will unbuild

This goodly town. Be speedy and be wise,
In a reply.

STRATO. Be sudden, sir, to tie
All up again: What's done is past recall,

And past you to revenge: and there are thousands,

That wait for such a troubled hour as this.

Throw him the blank.

LYSIPPUS. Melantius, write in that

Thy choice: My seal is at it.

[Throws him a paper.]

MELANTIUS. It was our honours drew us to this act,

Not gain; and we will only work our pardons.

CALLIANAX. Put my name in too.

DIPHILUS. You disclaim'd us all

But now, Callianax.

CALLIANAX. That is all one:

I'll not be hang'd hereafter by a trick:

I'll have it in.

MELANTIUS. You shall, you shall.—

Come to the back gate, and we'll call you
king,

And give you up the fort.

LYSIPPUS. Away, away. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV—Antechamber to EVADNE'S apartments in the palace.

[Enter ASPATIA, in man's apparel.]

ASPATIA. This is my fatal hour. Heaven may forgive

My rash attempt, that causelessly hath laid

Griefs on me that will never let me rest;

And put a woman's heart into my breast.

It is more honour for you, that I die;

For she, that can endure the misery

That I have on me, and be patient too,
May live and laugh at all that you can do.

[Enter SERVANT.]

God save you, sir!

SERVANT. And you, sir. What's your business?

ASPATIA. With you, sir, now; to do me the fair office

To help me to your lord.

SERVANT. What, would you serve him?

ASPATIA. I'll do him any service; but to haste,

For my affairs are earnest, I desire

To speak with him.

SERVANT. Sir, because you're in such haste, I would be loth

Delay you any longer: You cannot.

ASPATIA. It shall become you, though, to tell your lord.

SERVANT. Sir, he will speak with nobody; but, in particular,

I have in charge, about no weighty matters.

ASPATIA. This is most strange. Art thou gold-proof?

There's for thee; help me to him.

SERVANT. Pray be not angry, sir. I'll do my best. [Exit.]

ASPATIA. How stubbornly this fellow answered me!

There is a vile dishonest trick in man,
More than in woman: All the men I meet
Appear thus to me, are all harsh and rude;

And have a subtilty in everything,

Which love could never know. But we fond women

Harbour the easiest and the smoothest thoughts,

And think, all shall go so! It is unjust,
That men and women should be match'd together.

[Enter AMINTOR and his man.]

AMINTOR. Where is he?

SERVANT. There, my lord.

AMINTOR. What would you, sir?

ASPATIA. Please it your lordship to command your man

Out of the room, I shall deliver things

Worthy your hearing.

AMINTOR. Leave us. [Exit SERVANT.]

ASPATIA. Oh, that that shape
Should bury falsehood in it! [Aside.]

AMINTOR. Now your will, sir.

ASPATIA. When you know me, my lord, you needs must guess

My business; and I am not hard to know;
For till the chance of war mark'd this smooth face

With these few blenishes, people would call me

My sister's picture, and her mine. In short,

I am the brother to the wrong'd Aspatia.

AMINTOR. The wrong'd Aspatia! 'Would thou wert so too

Unto the wrong'd Amintor! Let me kiss
That hand of thine, in honour that I bear

Unto the wrong'd Aspatia. Here I stand,
That did it. 'Would he could not! Gentle youth,

Leave me; for there is something in thy looks,

That calls my sins, in a most hideous form,

Into my mind; and I have grief enough
Without thy help.

ASPATIA. I would I could with credit.
Since I was twelve years old, I had not seen

My sister till this hour; I now arrived:

She sent for me to see her marriage;

A woful one! But they, that are above,

Have ends in everything. She used few words,

But yet enough to make me understand

The baseness of the injuries you did her.

That little training I have had, is war:

I may behave myself rudely in peace;

I would not, though. I shall not need to tell you,

I am but young, and would be loth to lose

Honour, that is not easily gained again.

Fairly I mean to deal: The age is strict

For single combats; and we shall be stopp'd,

If it be publish'd. If you like your sword,

Use it; if mine appear a better to you,

Change: for the ground is this, and this the time,

To end our difference.

AMINTOR. Charitable youth, (If thou be'st such) think not I will maintain

So strange a wrong: And, for thy sister's sake,

Know, that I could not think that desperate thing

I durst not do; yet, to enjoy this world,
I would not see her; for, beholding thee,
I am I know not what. If I have aught,
That may content thee, take it, and be-
gone;

For death is not so terrible as thou.
Thine eyes shoot guilt into me.

ASPATIA. Thus, she swore,
Thou wouldst behave thyself; and give me
words

That would fetch tears into mine eyes;
and so

Thou dost indeed. But yet she bade me
watch,

Lest I were cozen'd; and be sure to fight
Ere I return'd.

AMINTOR. That must not be with me.
For her I'll die directly; but against her
Will never hazard it.

ASPATIA. You must be urged.
I do not deal uncivilly with those
That dare to fight; but such a one as you Must be used thus. [She strikes him.]

AMINTOR. I pr'ythee, youth, take heed.
Thy sister is a thing to me so much
Above mine honour, that I can endure
All this. Good gods! a blow I can endure!

But stay not, let thou draw a timeless
death

Upon thyself.

ASPATIA. Thou art some prating fellow;

One, that hath studied out a trick to talk,
And move soft-hearted people; to be kicked. [She kicks him.]

Thus, to be kick'd!—Why should he be so slow

In giving me my death? [Aside.]

AMINTOR. A man can bear
No more, and keep his flesh. Forgive me,
then!

I would endure yet, if I could. Now show [Draws.]

The spirit thou pretend'st, and understand,
Thou hast no hour to live.—

[They fight; ASPATIA is wounded.]
What dost thou mean?

Thou canst not fight: the blows thou mak'st at me

Are quite besides; and those I offer at
thee,

Thou spread'st thine arms, and tak'st upon thy breast,

Alas, defenceless!

ASPATIA. I have got enough,
And my desire. There is no place so fit
For me to die as here.

[Enter EVADNE, her hands bloody, with a knife.]

EVADNE. Amintor, I am loaden with events,

That fly to make thee happy. I have joys,

That in a moment can call back thy wrongs,

And settle thee in thy free state again.

It is Evadne still that follows thee,
But not her mischiefs.

AMINTOR. Thou canst not fool me to believe again;

But thou hast looks and things so full of news,

That I am stay'd.

EVADNE. Noble Amintor, put off thy amaze,

Let thine eyes loose, and speak: Am I not
fair?

Looks not Evadne beauteous, with these rites now

Were those hours half so lovely in thine
eyes,

When our hands met before the holy man?
I was too foul within to look fair then:

Since I knew ill, I was not free till now.

AMINTOR. There is presage of some important thing

About thee, which, it seems, thy tongue hath lost.

Thy hands are bloody, and thou hast a knife!

EVADNE. In this consists thy happiness and mine.

Joy to Amintor! for the king is dead.

AMINTOR. Those have most power to hurt us, that we love;
We lay our sleeping lives within their arms!
Why, thou hast raised up Mischief to his height,
And found out one, to out-name thy other faults.

Thou hast no intermission of thy sins,
But all thy life is a continued ill.
Black is thy colour now, disease thy nature.

Joy to Amintor! Thou hast touch'd a life,
The very name of which had power to chain

Up all my rage, and calm my wildest wrongs.

EVADNE. 'Tis done; and since I could not find a way
To meet thy love so clear as through his life,
I cannot now repent it.

AMINTOR. Couldst thou procure the gods to speak to me,
To bid me love this woman, and forgive,
I think I should fall out with them. Behold,

Here lies a youth whose wounds bleed in my breast,

Sent by his violent fate, to fetch his death

From my slow hand: And, to augment my woe,

You now are present, stain'd with a king's blood,

Violently shed. This keeps night here,
And throws an unknown wilderness about me.

ASPATIA. Oh, oh, oh!

AMINTOR. No more; pursue me not.

EVADNE. Forgive me then,
And take me to thy bed. We may not part. [Kneels.]

AMINTOR. Forbear! Be wise, and let my rage go this way.

EVADNE. 'Tis you that I would stay, not it.

AMINTOR. Take heed;
It will return with me.

EVADNE. If it must be,
I shall not fear to meet it: take me home.

AMINTOR. Thou monster of cruelty, forbear!

EVADNE. For heaven's sake, look more calm: thine eyes are sharper Than thou canst make thy sword.

AMINTOR. Away, away!
Thy knees are more to me than violence.
I am worse than sick to see knees follow me,

For that I must not grant. For heaven's sake stand.

EVADNE. Receive me, then.

AMINTOR. I dare not stay thy language;

In midst of all my anger and my grief
Thou dost awake something that troubles me,

And says, "I loved thee once." I dare not stay;

There is no end of woman's reasoning. [Leaves her.]

EVADNE. Amintor, thou shalt love me now again:

Go; I am calm. Farewell, and peace for ever!

Evadne, whom thou hat'st, will die for thee! [Kills herself.]

AMINTOR. I have a little human nature yet,

That's left for thee, that bids me stay thy hand. [Returns.]

EVADNE. Thy hand was welcome, but it came too late.

Oh, I am lost! the heavy sleep makes haste. [She dies.]

ASPATIA. Oh, oh, oh!

AMINTOR. This earth of mine doth tremble, and I feel

A stark affrighted motion in my blood:

My soul grows weary of her house, and I
All over am a trouble to myself.

There is some hidden power in these dead things,

That calls my flesh unto 'em: I am cold!

Be resolute, and bear 'em company.

There's something, yet, which I am loth to leave.

There's man enough in me to meet the fears

That death can bring; and yet, 'would it were done!

I can find nothing in the whole discourse
Of death, I durst not meet the boldest
way;

Yet still, betwixt the reason and the act,
The wrong I to Aspatia did stands up:
I have not such another fault to answer.
Though she may justly arm herself with scorn

And hate of me, my soul will part less troubled,

When I have paid to her in tears my sorrow.

I will not leave this act unsatisfied,
If all that's left in me can answer it.

ASPATIA. Was it a dream? There stands Amintor still;

Or I dream still.

AMINTOR. How dost thou? Speak! receive my love and help.

Thy blood climbs up to his old place
again:

There's hope of thy recovery.

ASPATIA. Did you not name Aspatia?

AMINTOR. I did.

ASPATIA. And talk'd of tears and sorrow unto her?

AMINTOR. 'Tis true; and till these happy signs in thee

Did stay my course, 'twas thither I was going.

ASPATIA. Thou art there already, and these wounds are hers:

Those threats I brought with me sought not revenge;

But came to fetch this blessing from thy
hand.

I am Aspatia yet.

AMINTOR. Dare my soul ever look abroad again?

ASPATIA. I shall surely live, Amintor;
I am well:

A kind of healthful joy wanders within me.

AMINTOR. The world wants lives to excuse thy loss!

Come, let me bear thee to some place of help.

ASPATIA. Amintor, thou must stay; I must rest here;

My strength begins to disobey my will.

How dost thou, my best soul? I would fain live

Now, if I could: Wouldst thou have loved me then?

AMINTOR. Alas!

All that I am's not worth a hair from
thee.

ASPATIA. Give me thy hand; my hands
grope up and down,

And cannot find thee: I am wondrous
sick:

Have I thy hand, Amintor?

AMINTOR. Thou greatest blessing of the world, thou hast.

ASPATIA. I do believe thee better than my sense.

Oh! I must go. Farewell! [Dies.]

AMINTOR. She swoons! Aspatia!—
Help! for Heaven's sake, water!

Such as may chain life ever to this frame.—

Aspatia, speak!—What, no help yet? I fool!

I'll chafe her temples: Yet there's nothing
stirs;

Some hidden power tell her, Amintor calls,
And let her answer me!—Aspatia, speak!

I have heard, if there be any life, but bow
The body thus, and it will show itself.

Oh, she is gone! I will not leave her yet.
Since out of justice we must challenge

nothing,

I'll call it mercy, if you'll pity me,

Ye heavenly powers! and lend, for some few years,

The blessed soul to this fair seat again.

No comfort comes; the gods deny me too!

I'll bow the body once again.—Aspatia!—

The soul is fled for ever; and I wrong

Myself, so long to lose her company.

Must I talk now? Here's to be with thee.
love! [Stabs himself.]

[Enter SERVANT.]

SERVANT. This is a great grace to my lord, to have the new king come to him:

I must tell him he is entering.—Oh, God!
Help! help!

[*Enter LYSIPPUS, MELANTIUS, CALIANAX,
CLEON, DIPHILUS, and STRATO.*]

LYSIPPUS. Where's Amintor?

SERVANT. Oh, there, there.

LYSIPPUS. How strange is this!

CALLANAX. What should we do here?

MELANTIUS. These deaths are such acquainted things with me,
That yet my heart dissolves not. May I stand

Stiff here for ever! Eyes, call up your tears!

This is Amintor: Heart! he was my friend;

Melt; now it flows.—Amintor, give a word To call me to thee.

AMINTOR. Oh!

MELANTIUS. Melantius calls his friend Amintor. Oh!

Thy arms are kinder to me than thy tongue!

Speak, speak!

AMINTOR. What?

MELANTIUS. That little word was worth all the sounds

That ever I shall hear again.

DIPHILUS. Oh, brother!

Here lies your sister slain; you lose yourself

In sorrow there.

MELANTIUS. Why, Diphilus, it is A thing to laugh at, in respect of this: Here was my sister, father, brother, son; All that I had!—Speak once again:

What youth

Lies slain there by thee?

AMINTOR. 'Tis Aspatia.

My last is said. Let me give up my soul Into thy bosom. [Dies.]

CALLANAX. What's that? what's that? Aspatia!

MELANTIUS. I never did

Repent the greatness of my heart till now;

It will not burst at need.

CALLANAX. My daughter dead here too! And you have all fine new tricks to grieve; but I ne'er knew any but direct crying.

MELANTIUS. I am a prattler; but no more. [Offers to kill himself.]

DIPHILUS. Hold, brother.

LYSIPPUS. Stop him.

DIPHILUS. Fie! how unmanly was this offer in you;

Does this become our strain?

CALLANAX. I know not what the matter is, but I am grown very kind, and am friends with you. You have given me that among you will kill me quickly; but I'll go home, and live as long as I can.

MELANTIUS. His spirit is but poor that can be kept

From death for want of weapons.

Is not my hand a weapon sharp enough To stop my breath? or, if you tie down those,

I vow, Amintor, I will never eat, Or drink, or sleep, or have to do with that That may preserve life! This I swear to keep.

LYSIPPUS. Look to him though, and bear those bodies in.

May this a fair example be to me, To rule with temper: For, on lustful kings,

Unlook'd-for, sudden deaths from heaven are sent;

But curst is he that is their instrument. [Exeunt.]

ACT I

SCENE I—A room in BONIFACE's inn.

[Enter BONIFACE running.]

BONIFACE. Chamberlain! maid! Cherry! daughter Cherry! all asleep! all dead?

[Enter CHERRY running.]

CHERRY. Here, here! why d'ye bawl so, father? d'ye think we have no ears?

BONIFACE. You deserve to have none, you young minx! The company of the Warrington coach has stood in the hall this hour, and nobody to show them to their chambers.

CHERRY. And let 'em wait farther; there's neither red-coat in the coach, nor footman behind it.

BONIFACE. But they threaten to go to another inn to-night.

CHERRY. That they dare not, for fear the coachman should overturn them to-morrow.—Coming! coming!—Here's the London coach arrived.

[Enter several people with trunks, band-boxes, and other luggage, and cross the stage.]

BONIFACE. Welcome, ladies!

CHERRY. Very welcome, gentlemen!—Chamberlain, show the Lion and the Rose.
[Exit with the company.]

[Enter AIMWELL in a riding-habit, and ARCHER as footman, carrying a portmanteau.]

BONIFACE. This way, this way, gentlemen!

AIMWELL [to ARCHER]. Set down the things; go to the stable, and see my horses well rubbed

ARCHER. I shall, sir. [Exit.]

AIMWELL. You're my landlord, I suppose?

BONIFACE. Yes, sir, I'm old Will Boniface, pretty well known upon this road, as the saying is.

AIMWELL. O Mr. Boniface, your servant!

BONIFACE. O sir!—What will your honour please to drink, as the saying is?

AIMWELL. I have heard your town of Lichfield much famed for ale; I think I'll taste that.

BONIFACE. Sir, I have now in my cellar ten tun of the best ale in Staffordshire; 'tis smooth as oil, sweet as milk, clear as amber, and strong as brandy; and will be just fourteen year old the fifth day of next March, old style.

AIMWELL. You're very exact, I find, in the age of your ale.

BONIFACE. As punctual, sir, as I am in the age of my children. I'll show you such ale!—Here, tapster [enter TAPSTER], broach number 1706, as the saying is.—Sir, you shall taste my Anno Domini.—I have lived in Lichfield, man and boy, above eight-and-fifty years, and, I believe, have not consumed eight-and-fifty ounces of meat.

AIMWELL. At a meal, you mean, if one may guess your sense by your bulk.

BONIFACE. Not in my life, sir: I have fed purely upon ale; I have eat my ale, drank my ale, and I always sleep upon ale.

[Enter TAPSTER with a bottle and glass, and exit.]

Now, sir, you shall see!—[Filling out a glass.] Your worship's health.—[Drinks.] Ha! delicious, delicious! fancy it burgundy, only fancy it, and 'tis worth ten shillings a quart.

AIMWELL [drinks]. 'Tis confounded strong!

BONIFACE. Strong! it must be so, or how should we be strong that drink it?

AIMWELL. And have you lived so long upon this ale, landlord?

BONIFACE. Eight-and-fifty years, upon my credit, sir—but it killed my wife, poor woman, as the saying is.

AIMWELL. How came that to pass?

BONIFACE. I don't know how, sir; she would not let the ale take its natural course, sir; she was for qualifying it every now and then with a dram, as the saying is; and an honest gentleman that came this way from Ireland, made her a present of a dozen bottles of usquebaugh—but the poor woman was never well after: but, how'er, I was obliged to the gentleman, you know.

AIMWELL. Why, was it the usquebaugh that killed her?

BONIFACE. My Lady Bountiful said so. She, good lady, did what could be done; she cured her of three tympanies, but the fourth carried her off. But she's happy, and I'm contented, as the saying is.

AIMWELL. Who's that Lady Bountiful you mentioned?

BONIFACE. Ods my life, sir, we'll drink her health.—[Drinks.] My Lady Bountiful is one of the best of women. Her last husband, Sir Charles Bountiful, left her worth a thousand pound a year; and, I believe, she lays out one-half on't in charitable uses for the good of her neighbours. She cures rheumatisms, ruptures, and broken shins in men; green-sickness, obstructions, and fits of the mother, in women; the king's evil, chincough, and chilblains, in children: in short, she has cured more people in and about Lichfield within ten years than the doctors have killed in twenty; and that's a bold word.

AIMWELL. Has the lady been any other way useful in her generation?

BONIFACE. Yes, sir; she has a daughter by Sir Charles, the finest woman in all our country, and the greatest fortune. She has a son too, by her first husband, Squire Sullen, who married a fine lady from London t'other day; if you please, sir, we'll drink his health.

AIMWELL. What sort of a man is he?

BONIFACE. Why, sir, the man's well enough; says little, thinks less, and does—nothing at all, faith. But he's a man of a great estate, and values nobody.

AIMWELL. A sportsman, I suppose?

BONIFACE. Yes, sir, he's a man of pleasure; he plays at whisk and smokes his pipe eight-and-forty hours together sometimes.

AIMWELL. And married, you say?

BONIFACE. Ay, and to a curious woman, sir. But he's a—he wants it here, sir.

[Pointing to his forehead.]

AIMWELL. He has it there, you mean?

BONIFACE. That's none of my business; he's my landlord, and so a man, you know, would not—But—ecod, he's no better than—Sir, my humble service to you.—[Drinks.] Though I value not a farthing what he can do to me; I pay him his rent at quarterday; I have a good running-trade; I have but one daughter, and I can give her—but no matter for that.

AIMWELL. You're very happy, Mr. Boniface. Pray, what other company have you in town?

BONIFACE. A power of fine ladies; and then we have the French officers.

AIMWELL. Oh, that's right, you have a good many of those gentlemen: pray, how do you like their company?

BONIFACE. So well, as the saying is, that I could wish we had as many more of 'em: they're full of money, and pay double for everything they have. They know, sir, that we paid good round taxes for the taking of 'em, and so they are willing to reimburse us a little. One of 'em lodges in my house.

[Reënter ARCHER.]

ARCHER. Landlord, there are some French gentlemen below that ask for you.

BONIFACE. I'll wait on 'em.—[Aside to ARCHER.] Does your master stay long in town, as the saying is?

ARCHER. I can't tell, as the saying is.

BONIFACE. Come from London?

ARCHER. No.

BONIFACE. Going to London, mayhap?

ARCHER. No.

BONIFACE [aside]. An odd fellow this.—[To AIMWELL.] I beg your worship's pardon, I'll wait on you in half a minute.

[Exit.]

AIMWELL. The coast's clear, I see.—Now, my dear Archer, welcome to Lichfield!

ARCHER. I thank thee, my dear brother in iniquity.

AIMWELL. Iniquity! prithee, leave canting; you need not change your style with your dress.

ARCHER. Don't mistake me, Aimwell, for 'tis still my maxim, that there is no scandal like rags, nor any crime so shameful as poverty.

AIMWELL. The world confesses it every day in its practice though men won't own it for their opinion. Who did that worthy lord, my brother, single out of the side-box to sup with him t'other night?

ARCHER. Jack Handicraft, a handsome, well-dressed, mannerly, sharpening rogue, who keeps the best company in town.

AIMWELL. Right! And, pray, who married my lady Manslaughter t'other day, the great fortune?

ARCHER. Why, Nick Marrabone, a professed pickpocket, and a good bowler; but he makes a handsome figure, and rides in his coach, that he formerly used to ride behind.

AIMWELL. But did you observe poor Jack Generous in the Park last week?

ARCHER. Yes, with his autumnal periwig, shading his melancholy face, his coat older than anything but its fashion, with one hand idle in his pocket, and with the other picking his useless teeth; and, though the Mall was crowded with company, yet was poor Jack as single and solitary as a lion in a desert.

AIMWELL. And as much avoided, for no crime upon earth but the want of money.

ARCHER. And that's enough. Men must not be poor; idleness is the root of all evil; the world's wide enough, let 'em bustle. Fortune has taken the weak under her protection, but men of sense are left to their industry.

AIMWELL. Upon which topic we proceed, and, I think, luckily hitherto. Would not any man swear now, that I am a man of quality, and you my servant, when if our intrinsic value were known—

ARCHER. Come, come, we are the men of intrinsic value who can strike our fortunes out of ourselves, whose worth is independent of accidents in life, or revolutions in government: we have heads to get money and hearts to spend it.

AIMWELL. As to our hearts, I grant ye, they are as willing tits as any within twenty degrees: but I can have no great opinion of our heads from the service they have done us hitherto, unless it be that they have brought us from London hither to Lichfield, made me a lord and you my servant.

ARCHER. That's more than you could expect already. But what money have we left?

AIMWELL. But two hundred pound.

ARCHER. And our horses, clothes, rings, etc.—Why, we have very good fortunes now for moderate people; and, let me tell you, that this two hundred pound, with the experience that we are now masters of, is a better estate than the ten we have spent.—Our friends, indeed, began to suspect that our pockets were low, but we came off with flying colours, showed no signs of want either in word or deed.

AIMWELL. Ay, and our going to Brussels was a good pretence enough for our sudden disappearing; and, I warrant you, our friends imagine that we are gone a-volunteering.

ARCHER. Why, faith, if this prospect fails, it must e'en come to that. I am for venturing one of the hundreds, if you will, upon this knight-errantry; but, in case it should fail, we'll reserve t'other to carry us to some counterscarp, where we may die, as we lived, in a blaze.

AIMWELL. With all my heart; and we have lived justly, Archer; we can't say that we have spent our fortunes, but that we have enjoyed 'em.

ARCHER. Right! so much pleasure for so much money. We have had our penny-worths; and, had I millions, I would go to the same market again.—O London! London!—Well, we have had our share, and let us be thankful: past pleasures, for aught I know, are best, such as we are sure of; those to come may disappoint us.

AIMWELL. It has often grieved the heart of me to see how some inhuman wretches murder their kind fortunes; those that, by sacrificing all to one appetite, shall starve all the rest. You shall have some that live only in their palates, and in their sense of tasting shall drown the other four: others are only epicures in appearances, such who shall starve their nights to make a figure a days, and famish their own to feed the eyes of others: a contrary sort confine their pleasures to the dark, and contract their specious acres to the circuit of a muff-string.

ARCHER. Right! But they find the Indies in that spot where they consume 'em, and I think your kind keepers have much the best on't: for they indulge the most senses by one expense, there's the seeing, hearing, and feeling, amply gratified; and, some philosophers will tell you, that from such a commerce there arises a sixth sense, that gives infinitely more pleasure than the other five put together.

AIMWELL. And to pass to the other extremity, of all keepers I think those the worst that keep their money.

ARCHER. Those are the most miserable wights in being, they destroy the rights of nature, and disappoint the blessings of Providence. Give me a man that keeps his five senses keen and bright as his sword, that has 'em always drawn out in their just order and strength, with his reason as commander at the head of 'em, that detaches 'em by turns upon whatever party of pleasure agreeably offers, and commands 'em to retreat upon the least appearance of disadvantage or danger! For my part, I can stick to my bottle while my wine, my company, and my reason, hold good; I can be charmed with Sappho's singing without falling in love with her face: I love hunting, but would not, like Actæon, be eaten up by my own dogs; I love a fine house, but let another keep it; and just so I love a fine woman.

AIMWELL. In that last particular you have the better of me.

ARCHER. Ay, you're such an amorous puppy, that I'm afraid you'll spoil our sport; you can't counterfeit the passion without feeling it.

AIMWELL. Though the whining part be out of doors in town, 'tis still in force with the country ladies: and let me tell you, Frank, the fool in that passion shall outdo the knave at any time.

ARCHER. Well, I won't dispute it now; you command for the day, and so I submit: at Nottingham, you know, I am to be master.

AIMWELL. And at Lincoln, I again.

ARCHER. Then, at Norwich I mount, which, I think, shall be our last stage; for, if we fail there, we'll embark for Holland, bid adieu to Venus, and welcome Mars.

AIMWELL. A match!—Mum!

[Reënter BONIFACE.]

BONIFACE. What will your worship please to have for supper?

AIMWELL. What have you got?

BONIFACE. Sir, we have a delicate piece of beef in the pot, and a pig at the fire.

AIMWELL. Good supper-meat, I must confess. I can't eat beef, landlord.

ARCHER. And I hate pig.

AIMWELL. Hold your prating, sirrah! do you know who you are?

BONIFACE. Please to bespeak something else; I have everything in the house.

AIMWELL. Have you any veal?

BONIFACE. Veal! sir, we had a delicate loin of veal on Wednesday last.

AIMWELL. Have you got any fish or wildfowl?

BONIFACE. As for fish, truly, sir, we are an inland town, and indifferently provided with fish, that's the truth on't; and then for wildfowl—we have a delicate couple of rabbits.

AIMWELL. Get me the rabbits fricasseed.

BONIFACE. Fricasseed! Lard, sir, they'll eat much better smothered with onions.

ARCHER. Psha! Damn your onions!

AIMWELL. Again, sirrah!—Well, landlord, what you please. But hold, I have a small charge of money, and your house is so full of strangers, that I believe it may be safer in your custody than mine; for when this fellow of mine gets drunk he minds nothing.—Here, sirrah, reach me the strong-box.

ARCHER. Yes, sir.—[Aside.] This will give us a reputation.

[Brings AIMWELL the box.]

AIMWELL. Here, landlord; the locks are sealed down both for your security and mine; it holds somewhat above two hundred pound: if you doubt it, I'll count it to you after supper; but be sure you lay it where I may have it at a minute's warning; for my affairs are a little dubious at present; perhaps I may be gone in half an hour, perhaps I may be your guest till the best part of that be spent;

and pray order your ostler to keep my horses always saddled. But one thing above the rest I must beg, that you would let this fellow have none of your Anno Domini, as you call it; for he's the most insufferable sot.—Here, sirrah, light me to my chamber.

[Exit, lighted by ARCHER.]

BONIFACE. Cherry! daughter Cherry!

[Reënter CHERRY.]

CHERRY. D'ye call, father?

BONIFACE. Ay, child, you must lay by this box for the gentleman: 'tis full of money.

CHERRY. Money! all that money! why, sure, father, the gentleman comes to be chosen parliament-man. Who is he?

BONIFACE. I don't know what to make of him; he talks of keeping his horses ready saddled, and of going perhaps at a minute's warning, or of staying perhaps till the best part of this be spent.

CHERRY. Ay, ten to one, father, he's a highwayman.

BONIFACE. A highwayman! upon my life, girl, you have hit it, and this box is some new-purchased booty. Now, could we find him out, the money were ours.

CHERRY. He don't belong to our gang.

BONIFACE. What horses have they?

CHERRY. The master rides upon a black.

BONIFACE. A black! ten to one the man upon the black mare; and since he don't belong to our fraternity, we may betray him with a safe conscience: I don't think it lawful to harbour any rogues but my own. Look'ee, child, as the saying is, we must go cunningly to work, proofs we must have; the gentleman's servant loves drink, I'll ply him that way, and ten to one loves a wench: you must work him t'other way.

CHERRY. Father, would you have me give my secret for his?

BONIFACE. Consider, child, there's two hundred pound to boot.—[Ringing without.] Coming! coming!—Child, mind your business. [Exit.]

CHERRY. What a rogue is my father! My father! I deny it. My mother was a good, generous, free-hearted woman, and I can't tell how far her good nature might have extended for the good of her children. This landlord of mine, for I think I can call him no more, would betray his guest, and debauch his daughter into the bargain—by a footman too!

[Reënter ARCHER.]

ARCHER. What footman, pray, mistress, is so happy as to be the subject of your contemplation?

CHERRY. Whoever he is, friend, he'll be but little the better for't.

ARCHER. I hope so, for, I'm sure, you did not think of me.

CHERRY. Suppose I had?

ARCHER. Why, then, you're but even with me; for the minute I came in, I was a-considering in what manner I should make love to you.

CHERRY. Love to me, friend!

ARCHER. Yes, child.

CHERRY. Child! manners!—If you kept a little more distance, friend, it would become you much better.

ARCHER. Distance! good-night, saucy-box. [Going.]

CHERRY [aside]. A pretty fellow! I like his pride.—[Aloud.] Sir, pray, sir, you see, sir [ARCHER returns], I have the credit to be entrusted with your master's fortune here, which sets me a degree above his footman; I hope, sir, you an't affronted?

ARCHER. Let me look you full in the face, and I'll tell you whether you can affront me or no. 'Sdeath, child, you have a pair of delicate eyes, and you don't know what to do with 'em!

CHERRY. Why, sir, don't I see everybody?

ARCHER. Ay, but if some women had 'em, they would kill everybody. Prithee, instruct me, I would fain make love to you, but I don't know what to say.

CHERRY. Why, did you never make love to anybody before?

ARCHER. Never to a person of your figure, I can assure you, madam: my addresses have been always confined to people within my own sphere, I never aspired

so high before. [Sings.]

But you look so bright,
And are dress'd so tight,
That a man would swear you're right,
As arm was e'er laid over.
Such an air
You freely wear
To ensnare,
As makes each guest a lover!

Since then, my dear, I'm your guest,
Prithee give me of the best
Of what is ready drest:
Since then, my dear, etc.

CERRY [aside]. What can I think of this man?—[Aloud.] Will you give me that song, sir?

ARCHER. Ay, my dear, take it while
'tis warm.—[Kisses her.] Death and fire!
her lips are honeycombs.

CERRY. And I wish there had been bees too, to have stung you for your impudence.

ARCHER. There's a swarm of Cupids, my little Venus, that has done the business much better.

CERRY [aside]. This fellow is misbegotten as well as I.—[Aloud.] What's your name, sir?

ARCHER [aside]. Name! egad, I have forgot it.—[Aloud.] Oh! Martin.

CERRY. Where were you born?

ARCHER. In St. Martin's parish.

CERRY. What was your father?

ARCHER. St. Martin's parish.

CERRY. Then, friend, good-night.

ARCHER. I hope not.

CERRY. You may depend upon't.

ARCHER. Upon what?

CERRY. That you're very impudent.

ARCHER. That you're very handsome.

CERRY. That you're a footman.

ARCHER. That you're an angel.

CERRY. I shall be rude.

ARCHER. So shall I.

CERRY. Let go my hand.

ARCHER. Give me a kiss. [Kisses her.]

[Call without.] Cherry! Cherry!

CERRY. I'm—my father calls; you plaguy devil, how durst you stop my breath so? Offer to follow me one step, if you dare. [Exit.]

ARCHER. A fair challenge, by this light! this is a pretty fair opening of an adventure; but we are knight-errants, and so Fortune be our guide. [Exit.]

ACT II

SCENE I—A gallery in LADY BOUNTIFUL'S
house.

[Enter MRS. SULLEN and DORINDA, meeting.]

DORINDA. Morrow, my dear sister; are you for church this morning?

MRS. SULLEN. Anywhere to pray; for Heaven alone can help me. But I think, Dorinda, there's no form of prayer in the liturgy against bad husbands.

DORINDA. But there's a form of law in Doctors-Commons; and I swear, sister
Sullen, rather than see you thus continually discontented, I would advise you to apply to that: for besides the part that I hear in your vexatious broils, as being sister to the husband, and friend to the wife, your example gives me such an impression of matrimony, that I shall be apt to condemn my person to a long vacation all its life. But supposing, madam, that you brought it to a case of separation, what can you urge against your husband? My brother is, first, the most constant man alive.

MRS. SULLEN. The most constant husband, I grant ye.

DORINDA. He never sleeps from you.

MRS. SULLEN. No, he always sleeps
with me.

DORINDA. He allows you a maintenance suitable to your quality.

MRS. SULLEN. A maintenance! do you take me, madam, for an hospital child, that I must sit down, and bless my benefactors for meat, drink, and clothes? As I take it, madam, I brought your brother ten thousand pounds, out of which I might expect some pretty things, called pleasures.

DORINDA. You share in all the pleasures that the country affords.

MRS. SULLEN. Country pleasures! racks and torments! Dost think, child, that my limbs were made for leaping of ditches, and clambering over stiles? or that my parents, wisely foreseeing my future happiness in country pleasures, had early instructed me in rural accomplishments of drinking fat ale, playing at whisk, and smoking tobacco with my husband? or of spreading of plasters, brewing of dict-drinks, and stilling rosemary-water, with the good old gentlewoman my mother-in-law?

DORINDA. I'm sorry, madam, that it is not more in our power to divert you; I could wish, indeed, that our entertainments were a little more polite, or your taste a little less refined. But, pray, madam, how came the poets and philosophers, that laboured so much in hunting after pleasure, to place it at last in a country life?

MRS. SULLEN. Because they wanted money, child, to find out the pleasures of the town. Did you ever see a poet or philosopher worth ten thousand pounds? if you can show me such a man, I'll lay you fifty pounds you'll find him somewhere within the weekly bills. Not that I disapprove rural pleasures, as the poets have painted them; in their landscape, every Phillis has her Corydon, every murmuring stream, and every flowery mead, gives fresh alarms to love. Besides, you'll find, that their couples were never married:—but yonder I see my Corydon, and a sweet swain it is, Heaven knows! Come, Dorinda, don't be angry, he's my husband, and your brother; and, between both, is he not a sad brute?

DORINDA. I have nothing to say to your part of him, you're the best judge.

MRS. SULLEN. O sister, sister! if ever you marry, beware of a sullen, silent sot, one that's always musing, but never thinks. There's some diversion in a talking blockhead; and since a woman must wear chains, I would have the pleasure of hearing 'em rattle a little. Now you shall see, but take this by the way. He came home this morning at his usual hour of four, wakened me out of a sweet dream of something else, by tumbling over the tea-table, which he broke all to pieces; after his man and he had rolled about the room, like sick passengers in a storm, he comes slounce into bed, dead as a salmon into a fishmonger's basket; his feet cold as ice, his breath hot as a furnace, and his hands and his face as greasy as his flannel night-cap. O matrimony! He tosses up the clothes with a barbarous swing over his shoulders, disorders the whole economy of my bed, leaves me half naked, and my whole night's comfort is the tuncable serenade of that wakeful nightingale, his nose! Oh, the pleasure of counting the melancholy clock by a snoring husband! But now, sister, you shall see how handsomely, being a well-bred man, he will beg my pardon.

[Enter SQUIRE SULLEN.]

SQUIRE SULLEN. My head aches consumedly.

MRS. SULLEN. Will you be pleased, my dear, to drink tea with us this morning? it may do your head good.

SQUIRE SULLEN. No.

DORINDA. Coffee, brother?

SQUIRE SULLEN. Psha!

MRS. SULLEN. Will you please to dress, and go to church with me? the air may help you.

SQUIRE SULLEN. Scrub! [Calls.]

[Enter SCRUB.]

SCRUB. Sir!

SQUIRE SULLEN. What day o' th' week is this?

SCRUB. Sunday, an't please your worship.

SQUIRE SULLEN. Sunday! bring me a drain; and d'ye hear, set out the venison-pasty and a tankard of strong beer upon the hall-table, I'll go to breakfast.

[Going.]

DORINDA. Stay, stay, brother, you shan't get off so; you were very naughty last night, and must make your wife reparation; come, come, brother, won't you ask pardon?

SQUIRE SULLEN. For what?

DORINDA. For being drunk last night.

SQUIRE SULLEN. I can afford it, can't I?

MRS. SULLEN. But I can't, sir.

SQUIRE SULLEN. Then you may let it alone.

MRS. SULLEN. But I must tell you, sir, that this is not to be borne.

SQUIRE SULLEN. I'm glad on't.

MRS. SULLEN. What is the reason, sir, that you use me thus inhumanly?

SQUIRE SULLEN. Scrub!

SCRUB. Sir!

SQUIRE SULLEN. Get things ready to shave my head. [Exit.]

MRS. SULLEN. Have a care of coming near his temples, Scrub, for fear you meet something there that may turn the edge of your razor.—[Exit SCRUB.] Inveterate stupidity! did you ever know so hard, so obstinate a spleen as his? O sister, sister! I shall never ha' good of the beast till I get him to town; London, dear London, is the place for managing and breaking a husband.

DORINDA. And has not a husband the same opportunities there for humbling a wife?

MRS. SULLEN. No, no, child, 'tis a standing maxim in conjugal discipline, that when a man would enslave his wife, he hurries her into the country; and when a lady would be arbitrary with her husband, she wheedles her booby up to town. A man dare not play the tyrant in London, because there are so many examples to encourage the subject to rebel. O Dorinda! Dorinda! a fine woman may do anything in London: o' my conscience, she may raise an army of forty thousand men.

DORINDA. I fancy, sister, you have a mind to be trying your power that way here in Lichfield; you have drawn the French count to your colours already.

MRS. SULLEN. The French are a people that can't live without their gallantries.

DORINDA. And some English that I know, sister, are not averse to such amusements.

MRS. SULLEN. Well, sister, since the truth must out, it may do as well now as hereafter; I think, one way to rouse my lethargic, sottish husband, is to give him a rival: security begets negligence in all people, and men must be alarmed to make 'em alert in their duty. Women are like pictures, of no value in the hands of a fool, till he hears men of sense bid high for the purchase.

DORINDA. This might do, sister, if my brother's understanding were to be convinced into a passion for you; but, I fancy, there's a natural aversion on his side; and I fancy, sister, that you don't come much behind him, if you dealt fairly.

MRS. SULLEN. I own it, we are united contradictions, fire and water: but I could be contented, with a great many other wives, to humour the censorious mob, and give the world an appearance of living well with my husband, could I bring him but to dissemble a little kindness to keep me in countenance.

DORINDA. But how do you know, sister, but that, instead of rousing your husband by this artifice to a counterfeit kindness, he should awake in a real fury?

MRS. SULLEN. Let him: if I can't entice him to the one, I would provoke him to the other.

DORINDA. But how must I behave myself between ye?

MRS. SULLEN. You must assist me.

DORINDA. What, against my own brother?

MRS. SULLEN. He's but half a brother, and I'm your entire friend. If I go a step beyond the bounds of honour, leave me; till then, I expect you should go along with me in everything; while I trust my honour in your hands, you may trust your brother's in mine. The count is to dine here to-day.

DORINDA. 'Tis a strange thing, sister, that I can't like that man.

MRS. SULLEN. You like nothing; your time is not come; Love and Death have their fatalities, and strike home one time or other: you'll pay for all one day, I warrant ye. But come, my lady's tea is ready, and 'tis almost church time.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II—A room in BONIFACE'S inn.

[Enter AIMWELL dressed, and ARCHER.]

AIMWELL. And was she the daughter of the house?

ARCHER. The landlord is so blind as to think so; but I dare swear she has bet-ter blood in her veins.

AIMWELL. Why dost think so?

ARCHER. Because the baggage has a pert je ne sais quoi; she reads plays, keeps a monkey, and is troubled with vapours.

AIMWELL. By which discoveries I guess that you know more of her.

ARCHER. Not yet, faith; the lady gives herself airs; forsooth, nothing under a gentleman!

AIMWELL. Let me take her in hand.

ARCHER. Say one word more o' that, and I'll declare myself, spoil your sport there, and everywhere else; look ye, Aim-well, every man in his own sphere.

AIMWELL. Right; and therefore you must pimp for your master.

ARCHER. In the usual forms, good sir, after I have served myself.—But to our business. You are so well dressed, Tom, and make so handsome a figure, that I fancy you may do execution in a country church; the exterior part strikes first, and you're in the right to make that impres-sion favourable.

AIMWELL. There's something in that which may turn to advantage. The ap-pearance of a stranger in a country church draws as many gazers as a blazing-star; no sooner he comes into the cathedral, but a train of whispers runs buzzing round the congregation in a moment: Who is he? Whence comes he? Do you know him? Then I, sir, tips me the verger with half-a-crown; he pockets the simony, and inducts me into the best pew in the church; I pull out my snuff-box, turn myself round, bow to the bishop, or the dean, if he be the commanding officer; single out a beauty, rivet both my eyes to hers, set my nose a-bleeding by the strength of imagination, and show the whole church my concern, by my endeav-ouring to hide it; after the sermon, the whole town gives me to her for a lover, and by persuading the lady that I am a-dying for her, the tables are turned, and she in good earnest falls in love with me.

ARCHER. There's nothing in this, Tom, without a precedent; but instead of rivet-ting your eyes to a beauty, try to fix 'em upon a fortune; that's our business at present.

AIMWELL. Psha! no woman can be a beauty without a fortune. Let me alone, for I am a marksman.

ARCHER. Tom!

AIMWELL. Ay.

ARCHER. When were you at church be-fore, pray?

AIMWELL. Um—I was there at the coronation.

ARCHER. And how can you expect a blessing by going to church now?

AIMWELL. Blessing! nay, Frank, I ask but for a wife. [Exit.]

ARCHER. Truly, the man is not very unreasonable in his demands.

[Exit at the opposite door.]

[Enter BONIFACE and CHERRY.]

BONIFACE. Well, daughter, as the say-ing is, have you brought Martin to con-fess?

CHERRY. Pray, father, don't put me upon getting anything out of a man; I'm but young, you know, father, and I don't understand wheedling.

BONIFACE. Young! why, you jade, as the saying is, can any woman wheedle that is not young? your mother was use-less at five-and-twenty. Not wheedle! would you make your mother a whore, and me a cuckold, as the saying is? I tell you, his silence confesses it, and his mas-ter spends his money so freely, and is so much a gentleman every manner of way, that he must be a highwayman.

[Enter GIBBET, in a cloak.]

GIBBET. Landlord, landlord, is the coast clear?

BONIFACE. O Mr. Gibbet, what's the news?

GIBBET. No matter, ask no questions, all fair and honourable.—Here, my dear Cherry.—[Gives her a bag.] Two hundred sterling pounds, as good as any that ever hanged or saved a rogue; lay 'em by with the rest; and here—three wedding or mourning rings, 'tis much the same, you know—here, two silver-hilted swords; I took those from fellows that never show any part of their swords but the hilts—here is a diamond necklace which the lady hid in the privatest place in the coach, but I found it out—this gold watch I took from a pawnbroker's wife; it was left in her hands by a person of quality: there's the arms upon the case.

CHERRY. But who had you the money from?

GIBBET. Ah! poor woman! I pitied her:—from a poor lady just eloped from her husband. She had made up her cargo, and was bound for Ireland, as hard as she could drive; she told me of her husband's barbarous usage, and so I left her half-a-crown. But I had almost forgot, my dear Cherry, I have a present for you.

CHERRY. What is't?

GIBBET. A pot of ceruse, my child, that I took out of a lady's under-pocket.

CHERRY. What, Mr. Gibbet, do you think that I paint?

GIBBET. Why, you jade, your betters do; I'm sure the lady that I took it from had a coronet upon her handkerchief. Here, take my cloak, and go, secure the premises.

CHERRY. I will secure 'em. [Exit.]

BONIFACE. But, hark'ee, where's Hounslow and Bagshot?

GIBBET. They'll be here to-night.

BONIFACE. D'ye know of any other gentlemen o' the pad on this road?

GIBBET. No.

BONIFACE. I fancy that I have two that lodge in the house just now.

GIBBET. The devil! how d'ye smoke 'em?

BONIFACE. Why, the one is gone to church.

GIBBET. That's suspicious, I must confess.

BONIFACE. And the other is now in his master's chamber; he pretends to be servant to the other; we'll call him out and pump him a little.

GIBBET. With all my heart.

BONIFACE. Mr. Martin! Mr. Martin!

[Calls.]

[Enter ARCHER, combing a periwig and singing.]

GIBBET. The roads are consumed deep, I'm as dirty as Old Brentford at Christmas.—A good pretty fellow that; whose servant are you, friend?

ARCHER. My master's.

GIBBET. Really!

ARCHER. Really.

GIBBET. That's much.—The fellow has been at the bar by his evasions.—But pray, sir, what is your master's name?

ARCHER. Tall, all, dall!—[Sings and combs the periwig.] This is the most obstinate curl—

GIBBET. I ask you his name?

ARCHER. Name, sir—tall, all, dall!—I never asked him his name in my life.—Tall, all, dall!

BONIFACE. What think you now?

[Aside to GIBBET.]

GIBBET [aside to BONIFACE]. Plain, plain, he talks now as if he were before a judge.—[To ARCHER.] But pray, friend, which way does your master travel?

ARCHER. A-horseback.

GIBBET [aside]. Very well again, an old offender, right.—[To ARCHER.] But, I mean, does he go upwards or downwards?

ARCHER. Downwards, I fear, sir.—Tall, all!

GIBBET. I'm afraid my fate will be a contrary way.

BONIFACE. Ha! ha! ha! Mr. Martin, you're very arch. This gentleman is only travelling towards Chester, and would be glad of your company, that's all.—Come, captain, you'll stay to-night, I suppose? I'll show you a chamber—come, captain.

GIBBET. Farewell, friend!

ARCHER. Captain, your servant.—
[Ereunt BONIFACE and GIBBET.] Captain! a pretty fellow! 'Sdeath, I wonder that the officers of the army don't conspire to beat all scoundrels in red but their own.

[Reënter CHERRY.]

CHERRY [aside]. Gone, and Martin here! I hope he did not listen; I would have the merit of the discovery all my own, because I would oblige him to love me.—[Aloud.] Mr. Martin, who was that man with my father?

ARCHER. Some recruiting serjeant, or whipped-out trooper, I suppose.

CHERRY. All's safe, I find. [Aside.]

ARCHER. Come, my dear, have you conned over the catechise I taught you last night?

CHERRY. Come, question me.

ARCHER. What is love?

CHERRY. Love is I know not what, it comes I know not how, and goes I know not when.

ARCHER. Very well, an apt scholar.—
[Chucks her under the chin.] Where does love enter?

CHERRY. Into the eyes.

ARCHER. And where go out?

CHERRY. I won't tell ye.

ARCHER. What are the objects of that passion?

CHERRY. Youth, beauty, and clean linen.

ARCHER. The reason?

CHERRY. The two first are fashionable in nature, and the third at court.

ARCHER. That's my dear.—What are the signs and tokens of that passion?

CHERRY. A stealing look, a stammering tongue, words improbable, designs impossible, and actions impracticable.

ARCHER. That's my good child, kiss me.—What must a lover do to obtain his mistress?

CHERRY. He must adore the person that disdains him, he must bribe the chambermaid that betrays him, and court the footman that laughs at him. He must—he must—

ARCHER. Nay, child, I must whip you if you don't mind your lesson; he must treat his—

CHERRY. Oh, ay!—he must treat his enemies with respect, his friends with indifference, and all the world with contempt; he must suffer much, and fear more; he must desire much, and hope little; in short, he must embrace his ruin, and throw himself away.

ARCHER. Had ever man so hopeful a pupil as mine!—Come, my dear, why is love called a riddle?

CHERRY. Because, being blind, he leads those that see, and, though a child, he governs a man.

ARCHER. Mighty well!—And why is Love pictured blind?

CHERRY. Because the painters out of the weakness or privilege of their art chose to hide those eyes that they could not draw.

ARCHER. That's my dear little scholar, kiss me again.—And why should Love, that's a child, govern a man?

CHERRY. Because that a child is the end of love.

ARCHER. And so ends Love's catechism.—And now, my dear, we'll go in and make my master's bed.

CHERRY. Hold, hold, Mr. Martin! You have taken a great deal of pains to instruct me, and what d'ye think I have learned by it?

ARCHER. What?

CHERRY. That your discourse and your habit are contradictions, and it would be nonsense in me to believe you a footman any longer.

ARCHER. 'Oons, what a witch it is!

CHERRY. Depend upon this, sir, nothing in this garb shall ever tempt me; for, though I was born to servitude, I hate it. Own your condition, swear you love me, and then—

ARCHER. And then we shall go make my master's bed?

CHERRY. Yes.

ARCHER. You must know, then, that I am born a gentleman, my education was liberal; but I went to London a younger brother, fell into the hands of sharpers, who stripped me of my money, my friends disowned me, and now my necessity brings me to what you see.

CHERRY. Then take my hand—promise to marry me before you sleep, and I'll make you master of two thousand pounds.

ARCHER. How?

CHERRY. Two thousand pounds that I have this minute in my own custody; so, throw off your livery this instant, and I'll go find a parson.

ARCHER. What said you? a parson!

CHERRY. What! do you scruple?

ARCHER. Scruple! no, no, but—Two thousand pounds, you say?

CHERRY. And better.

ARCHER [aside]. 'Sdeath, what shall I do?—[Aloud.] But hark'ee, child, what need you make me master of yourself and money, when you may have the same pleasure out of me, and still keep your fortune in your hands?

CHERRY. Then you won't marry me?

ARCHER. I would marry you, but—

CHERRY. O sweet sir, I'm your humble servant, you're fairly caught! Would you persuade me that any gentleman who could bear the scandal of wearing a livery would refuse two thousand pounds, let the condition be what it would? no, no, sir. But I hope you'll pardon the freedom I have taken, since it was only to inform myself of the respect that I ought to pay you. [Going.]

ARCHER [aside]. Fairly bit, by Jupiter!—[Aloud.] Hold! hold!—And have you actually two thousand pounds?

CHERRY. Sir, I have my secrets as well as you; when you please to be more open I shall be more free, and be assured that I have discoveries that will match yours, be what they will. In the meanwhile, be satisfied that no discovery I make shall ever hurt you, but beware of my father!

[Exit.]

ARCHER. So! we're like to have as many adventures in our inn as Don Quixote had in his. Let me see—two thousand pounds—if the wench would promise to die when the money were spent, egad, one would marry her; but the fortune may go off in a year or two, and the wife may live—Lord knows how long. Then an inn-keeper's daughter! ay, that's the devil—there my pride brings me off.

For whatso'er the sages charge on pride,
The angels' fall, and twenty faults beside,
On earth, I'm sure, 'mong us of mortal calling,

Pride saves man off, and woman too, from falling. [Exit.]

ACT III

SCENE I—The gallery in LADY BOUNTIFUL's house.

[Enter MRS. SULLEN and DORINDA.]

MRS. SULLEN. Ha! ha! ha! my dear sister, let me embrace thee! now we are friends indeed; for I shall have a secret of yours as a pledge for mine—now you'll be good for something, I shall have you conversable in the subjects of the sex.

DORINDA. But do you think that I am so weak as to fall in love with a fellow at first sight?

MRS. SULLEN. Psha! now you spoil all; why should not we be as free in our friendships as the men? I warrant you, the gentleman has got to his confidant already, has avowed his passion, toasted your health, called you ten thousand angels, has run over your lips, eyes, neck, shape, air, and everything, in a description that warms their mirth to a second enjoyment.

DORINDA. Your hand, sister, I an't well.

MRS. SULLEN. So—she's breeding already—come, child, up with it—hem a little—so—now tell me, don't you like the gentleman that we saw at church just now?

DORINDA. The man's well enough.

MRS. SULLEN. Well enough! is he not a demigod, a Narcissus, a star, the man i' the moon?

DORINDA. O sister, I'm extremely ill!

MRS. SULLEN. Shall I send to your mother, child, for a little of her cephalic plaster to put to the soles of your feet, or shall I send to the gentleman for something for you? Come, unlace your stays, unbosom yourself. The man is perfectly a pretty fellow; I saw him when he first came into church.

DORINDA. I saw him too, sister, and with an air that shone, methought, like rays about his person.

MRS. SULLEN. Well said, up with it!

DORINDA. No forward coquette behaviour, no airs to set him off, no studied looks nor artful posture—but Nature did it all—

MRS. SULLEN. Better and better!—one touch more—come!

DORINDA. But then his looks—did you observe his eyes?

MRS. SULLEN. Yes, yes, I did.—His eyes, well, what of his eyes?

DORINDA. Sprightly, but not wandering; they seemed to view, but never gazed on anything but me.—And then his looks so humble were, and yet so noble, that they aimed to tell me that he could with pride die at my feet, though he scorned slavery anywhere else.

MRS. SULLEN. The physic works purely!—How d'ye find yourself now, my dear?

DORINDA. Hem! much better, my dear.—Oh, here comes our Mercury!

[Enter SCRUB.]

Well, Scrub, what news of the gentleman?
SCRUB. Madam, I have brought you a packet of news.

DORINDA. Open it quickly, come.

SCRUB. In the first place I inquired who the gentleman was; they told me he was a stranger. Secondly, I asked what the gentleman was; they answered and said, that they never saw him before. Thirdly, I inquired what countryman he was; they replied, 'twas more than they knew. Fourthly, I demanded whence he came; their answer was, they could not tell. And, fifthly, I asked whither he went; and they replied, they knew nothing of the matter,—and this is all I could learn.

MRS. SULLEN. But what do the people say? can't they guess?

SCRUB. Why, some think he's a spy, some guess he's a mountebank, some say one thing, some another: but, for my own part, I believe he's a Jesuit.

DORINDA. A Jesuit! why a Jesuit?

SCRUB. Because he keeps his horses always ready saddled, and his footman talks French.

MRS. SULLEN. His footman!

SCRUB. Ay, he and the count's footman were jabbering French like two intriguing ducks in a mill-pond; and I believe they talked of me, for they laughed consumedly.

DORINDA. What sort of livery has the footman?

SCRUB. Livery! Lord, madam, I took him for a captain, he's so bedizened with lace! And then he has tops to his shoes, up to his mid leg, a silver-headed cane dangling at his knuckles; he carries his hands in his pockets just so—[Walks in the French air.]—and has a fine long periwig tied up in a bag—Lord, madam, he's clear another sort of man than I!

MRS. SULLEN. That may easily be.—But what shall we do now, sister?

DORINDA. I have it—this fellow has a world of simplicity, and some cunning, the first hides the latter by abundance.—Scrub!

SCRUB. Madam!

DORINDA. We have a great mind to know who this gentleman is, only for our satisfaction.

SCRUB. Yes, madam, it would be a satisfaction, no doubt.

DORINDA. You must go and get acquainted with his footman, and invite him hither to drink a bottle of your ale because you're butler to-day.

SCRUB. Yes, madam, I am butler every Sunday.

MRS. SULLEN. O brave! sister, o' my conscience, you understand the mathematics already. 'Tis the best plot in the world: your mother, you know, will be gone to church, my spouse will be got to the ale-house with his scoundrels, and the house will be our own—so we drop in by accident, and ask the fellow some questions ourselves. In the country, you know, any stranger is company, and we're glad to take up with the butler in a country-dance, and happy if he'll do us the favour.

SCRUB. O madam, you wrong me! I never refused your ladyship the favour in my life.

[Enter GIPSY.]

GIPSY. Ladies, dinner's upon table.

DORINDA. Scrub, we'll excuse your waiting—go where we ordered you.

SCRUB. I shall. [Exit.]

SCENE II—A room in BONIFACE'S inn.

[Enter AIMWELL and ARCHER.]

ARCHER. Well, Tom, I find you're a marksman.

AIMWELL. A marksman! who so blind could be, as not discern a swan among the ravens?

ARCHER. Well, but hark'ee, Aimwell!

AIMWELL. Aimwell! call me Oroondates, Cesario, Amadis, all that romance can in a lover paint, and then I'll answer. O Archer! I read her thousands in her looks, she looked like Ceres in her harvest: corn, wine and oil, milk and honey, gardens, groves, and purling streams played on her plenteous face.

ARCHER. Her face! her pocket, you mean; the corn, wine, and oil lies there. In short, she has ten thousand pounds, that's the English on't.

AIMWELL. Her eyes—

ARCHER. Are demi-cannons, to be sure; so I won't stand their battery. [Going.]

AIMWELL. Pray excuse me, my passion must have vent.

ARCHER. Passion! what a plague, d'ye think these romantic airs will do our business? Were my temper as extravagant as yours, my adventures have something more romantic by half.

AIMWELL. Your adventures!

ARCHER. Yes,
The nymph that with her twice ten hundred pounds,
With brazen engine hot, and quoif clear-starched,
Can fire the guest in warming of the bed—

There's a touch of sublime Milton for you, and the subject but an innkeeper's daughter! I can play with a girl as an angler does with his fish; he keeps it at the end of his line, runs it up the stream, and down the stream, till at last he brings it to hand, tickles the trout, and so whips it into his basket.

[Enter BONIFACE.]

BONIFACE. Mr. Martin, as the saying is—yonder's an honest fellow below, my Lady Bountiful's butler, who begs the honour that you would go home with him and see his cellar.

ARCHER. Do my baise-mains to the gentleman, and tell him I will do myself the honour to wait on him immediately.

[Exit BONIFACE.]

AIMWELL. What do I hear?
Soft Orpheus play, and fair Toftida sing!

ARCHER. Psha! damn your raptures; I tell you, here's a pump going to be put into the vessel, and the ship will get into harbour, my life on't. You say, there's another lady very handsome there?

AIMWELL. Yes, faith.

ARCHER. I'm in love with her already.

AIMWELL. Can't you give me a bill upon Cherry in the meantime?

ARCHER. No, no, friend, all her corn, wine, and oil is ingrossed to my market. And once more I warn you, to keep your anchorage clear of mine: for if you fall foul of me, by this light you shall go to the bottom! What! make prize of my little frigate, while I am upon the cruise for you!—

AIMWELL. Well, well, I won't.

[Exit ARCHER.]

[Reënter BONIFACE.]

Landlord, have you any tolerable company in the house, I don't care for dining alone?

BONIFACE. Yes, sir, there's a captain below, as the saying is, that arrived about an hour ago.

AIMWELL. Gentlemen of his coat are welcome everywhere; will you make him a compliment from me and tell him I should be glad of his company?

BONIFACE. Who shall I tell him, sir, would—

AIMWELL [aside]. Ha! that stroke was well thrown in!—[Aloud.] I'm only a traveller, like himself, and would be glad of his company, that's all.

BONIFACE. I obey your commands, as the saying is. [Exit.]

[Reënter ARCHER.]

ARCHER. 'Sdeath! I had forgot; what title will you give yourself?

AIMWELL. My brother's, to be sure; he would never give me anything else, so I'll make bold with his honour this bout:—you know the rest of your cue.

ARCHER. Ay, ay. [Exit.]

[Enter GIBBET.]

GIBBET. Sir, I'm yours.

AIMWELL. 'Tis more than I deserve, sir, for I don't know you.

GIBBET. I don't wonder at that, sir, for you never saw me before—[Aside.] I hope.

AIMWELL. And pray, sir, how came I by the honour of seeing you now?

GIBBET. Sir, I scorn to intrude upon any gentleman—but my landlord—

AIMWELL. O sir, I ask your pardon, you're the captain he told me of?

GIBBET. At your service, sir.

AIMWELL. What regiment, may I be so bold?

GIBBET. A marching regiment, sir, an old corps.

AIMWELL [aside]. Very old, if your coat be regimental.—[Aloud.] You have served abroad, sir?

GIBBET. Yes, sir—in the plantations, 'twas my lot to be sent into the worst service; I would have quitted it indeed, but a man of honour, you know—Besides, 'twas for the good of my country that I should be abroad:—anything for the good of one's country—I'm a Roman for that.

AIMWELL [aside]. One of the first; I'll lay my life.—[Aloud.] You found the West Indies very hot, sir?

GIBBET. Ay, sir, too hot for me.

AIMWELL. Pray, sir, han't I seen your face at Will's coffee-house?

GIBBET. Yes, sir, and at White's too.

AIMWELL. And where is your company now, captain?

GIBBET. They an't come yet.

AIMWELL. Why, d'ye expect 'em here?

GIBBET. They'll be here to-night, sir.

AIMWELL. Which way do they march?

GIBBET. Across the country.—[Aside.] The devil's in't, if I han't said enough to encourage him to declare! But I'm afraid he's not right; I must tack about.

AIMWELL. Is your company to quarter in Lichfield?

GIBBET. In this house, sir.

AIMWELL. What! all?

GIBBET. My company's but thin, ha! ha! ha! we are but three, ha! ha! ha!

AIMWELL. You're merry, sir.

GIBBET. Ay, sir, you must excuse me, sir; I understand the world, especially the art of travelling: I don't care, sir, for answering questions directly upon the road—for I generally ride with a charge about me.

AIMWELL. Three or four, I believe.

[Aside.]

GIBBET. I am credibly informed that there are highwaymen upon this quarter; not, sir, that I could suspect a gentleman of your figure—but truly, sir, I have got such a way of evasion upon the road, that I don't care for speaking truth to any man.

AIMWELL [aside]. Your caution may be necessary.—[Aloud.] Then I presume you're no captain?

GIBBET. Not I, sir; captain is a good travelling name, and so I take it; it stops a great many foolish inquiries that are generally made about gentlemen that travel, it gives a man an air of something, and makes the drawers obedient:

—and thus far I am a captain, and no farther.

AIMWELL. And pray, sir, what is your true profession?

GIBBET. O sir, you must excuse me!—upon my word, sir, I don't think it safe to tell ye.

AIMWELL. Ha! ha! ha! upon my word I commend you.

[Reënter BONIFACE.]

Well, Mr. Boniface, what's the news?

BONIFACE. There's another gentleman below, as the saying is, that hearing you were but two, would be glad to make the third man, if you would give him leave.

AIMWELL. What is he?

BONIFACE. A clergyman, as the saying is.

AIMWELL. A clergyman! is he really a clergyman? or is it only his travelling name, as my friend the captain has it?

BONIFACE. O sir, he's a priest, and chaplain to the French officers in town.

AIMWELL. Is he a Frenchman?

BONIFACE. Yes, sir, born at Brussels.

GIBBET. A Frenchman, and a priest! I won't be seen in his company, sir; I have a value for my reputation, sir.

AIMWELL. Nay, but, captain, since we are by ourselves—can he speak English, landlord?

BONIFACE. Very well, sir; you may know him, as the saying is, to be a foreigner by his accent, and that's all.

AIMWELL. Then he has been in England before?

BONIFACE. Never, sir; but he's a master of languages, as the saying is; he talks Latin—it does me good to hear him talk Latin.

AIMWELL. Then you understand Latin, Mr. Boniface?

BONIFACE. Not I, sir, as the saying is; but he talks it so very fast, that I'm sure it must be good.

AIMWELL. Pray, desire him to walk up.

BONIFACE. Here he is, as the saying is.

[Enter FOIGARD.]

FOIGARD. Save you, gentlemens, bote.

AIMWELL [aside]. A Frenchman!—[To FOIGARD.] Sir, your most humble servant.

FOIGARD. Och, dear joy, I am your most faithful shervant, and yours alsho.

GIBBET. Dóctor, you talk very good English, but you have a mighty twang of the foreigner.

FOIGARD. My English is very vell for the vords, but we foreigners, you know, cannot bring our tongues about the pronunciation so soon.

AIMWELL [aside]. A foreigner! a downright Teague, by this light!—[Aloud.] Were you born in France, doctor?

FOIGARD. I was educated in France, but I was borned at Brussels; I am a subject of the King of Spain, joy.

GIBBET. What King of Spain, sir? speak;

FOIGARD. Upon my shoul, joy, I cannot tell you as yet.

AIMWELL. Nay, captain, that was too hard upon the doctor; he's a stranger.

FOIGARD. Oh, let him alone, dear joy; I am of a nation that is not easily put out of countenance.

AIMWELL. Come, gentlemen, I'll end the dispute.—Here, landlord, is dinner ready?

BONIFACE. Upon the table, as the saying is.

AIMWELL. Gentlemen—pray—that door

FOIGARD. No, no, fait, the captain must lead.

AIMWELL. No, doctor, the church is our guide.

GIBBET. Ay, ay, so it is.

[Exit FOIGARD foremost, the others following.]

SCENE III—The gallery in LADY BOUNTIFUL'S house.

[Enter ARCHER and SCRUB singing, and hugging one another, the latter with a tankard in his hand. GIPSY listening at a distance.]

SCRUB. Tall, all, dall!—Come, my dear boy, let's have that song once more.

ARCHER. No, no, we shall disturb the family.—But will you be sure to keep the secret?

SCRUB. Pho! upon my honour, as I'm a gentleman.

ARCHER. 'Tis enough. You must know, then, that my master is the Lord Viscount Aimwell; he fought a duel t'other day in London, wounded his man so dangerously that he thinks fit to withdraw till he hears whether the gentleman's wounds be mortal or not. He never was in this part of England before, so he chose to retire to this place, that's all.

GIPSY. And that's enough for me.

[Exit.]

SCRUB. And where were you when your master fought?

ARCHER. We never know of our masters' quarrels.

SCRUB. No! if our masters in the country here receive a challenge, the first thing they do is to tell their wives; the wife tells the servants, the servants alarm the tenants, and in half an hour you shall have the whole county in arms.

ARCHER. To hinder two men from doing what they have no mind for.—But if you should chance to talk now of my business?

SCRUB. Talk! ay, sir, had I not learned the knack of holding my tongue, I had never lived so long in a great family.

ARCHER. Ay, ay, to be sure there are secrets in all families.

SCRUB. Secrets! ay;—but I'll say no more. Come, sit down, we'll make an end of our tankard: here—

[Gives ARCHER the tankard.]

ARCHER. With all my heart; who knows but you and I may come to be better acquainted, eh? Here's your ladies' healths; you have three, I think, and to be sure there must be secrets among 'em.

[Drinks.]

SCRUB. Secrets! ay, friend.—I wish I had a friend!

ARCHER. Am not I your friend? come, you and I will be sworn brothers.

SCRUB. Shall we?

ARCHER. From this minute. Give me a kiss:—and now, brother Scrub—

SCRUB. And now, brother Martin, I will tell you a secret that will make your hair stand on end. You must know that I am consumedly in love.

ARCHER. That's a terrible secret, that's the truth on't.

SCRUB. That jade, Gipsy, that was with us just now in the cellar, is the arrantest whore that ever wore a petticoat; and I'm dying for love of her.

ARCHER. Ha! ha! ha!—Are you in love with her person or her virtue, brother Scrub?

SCRUB. I should like virtue best, because it is more durable than beauty: for virtue holds good with some women long, and many a day after they have lost it.

ARCHER. In the country, I grant ye, where no woman's virtue is lost, till a bastard be found.

SCRUB. Ay, could I bring her to a bastard, I should have her all to myself; but I dare not put it upon that lay, for fear of being sent for a soldier. Pray, brother, how do you gentlemen in London like that same Pressing Act?

ARCHER. Very ill, brother Scrub; 'tis the worst that ever was made for us. Formerly I remember the good days, when we could dun our masters for our wages, and if they refused to pay us, we could have a warrant to carry 'em before a Justice: but now if we talk of eating, they have a warrant for us, and carry us before three Justices.

SCRUB. And to be sure we go, if we talk of eating; for the Justices won't give their own servants a bad example. Now this is my misfortune—I dare not speak in the house, while that jade Gipsy dings about like a fury.—Once I had the better end of the staff.

ARCHER. And how comes the change now?

SCRUB. Why, the mother of all this mischief is a priest.

ARCHER. A priest!

SCRUB. Ay, a damned son of a whore of Babylon, that came over hither to say grace to the French officers, and eat up our provisions. There's not a day goes over his head without a dinner or supper in this house.

ARCHER. How came he so familiar in the family?

SCRUB. Because he speaks English as if he had lived here all his life, and tells lies as if he had been a traveller from his cradle.

ARCHER. And this priest, I'm afraid, has converted the affections of your Gipsy?

SCRUB. Converted! ay, and perverted, my dear friend: for, I'm afraid, he has made her a whore and a papist! But this is not all; there's the French count and Mrs. Sullen, they're in the confederacy, and for some private ends of their own, to be sure.

ARCHER. A very hopeful family yours, brother Scrub! I suppose the maiden lady has her lover too?

SCRUB. Not that I know: she's the best on 'em, that's the truth on't: but they take care to prevent my curiosity, by giving me so much business, that I'm a perfect slave. What d'ye think is my place in this family?

ARCHER. Butler, I suppose.

SCRUB. Ah, Lord help you! I'll tell you. Of a Monday I drive the coach, of a Tuesday I drive the plough, on Wednesday I follow the hounds, a Thursday I dun the tenants, on Friday I go to market, on Saturday I draw warrants, and a Sunday I draw beer.

ARCHER. Ha! ha! ha! if variety be a pleasure in life, you have enough on't. my dear brother. But what ladies are those?

SCRUB. Ours, ours; that upon the right hand is Mrs. Sullen, and the other is Mrs. Dorinda. Don't mind 'em; sit still, man.

[Enter Mrs. SULLEN and DORINDA.]

MRS. SULLEN. I have heard my brother talk of my Lord Aimwell; but they say that his brother is the finer gentleman.

DORINDA. That's impossible, sister.

MRS. SULLEN. He's vastly rich, but very close, they say.

DORINDA. No matter for that; if I can creep into his heart, I'll open his breast, I warrant him: I have heard say, that people may be guessed at by the behaviour of their servants: I could wish we might talk to that fellow.

MRS. SULLEN. So do I; for I think he's a very pretty fellow. Come this way, I'll throw out a lure for him presently.

[DORINDA and Mrs. SULLEN walk a turn towards the opposite side of the stage.]

ARCHER [aside]. Corn, wine, and oil indeed!—But, I think, the wife has the greatest plenty of flesh and blood; she should be my choice.—Ay, ay, say you so!—[Mrs. SULLEN drops her glove. ARCHER runs, takes it up and gives to her.] Madam—your ladyship's glove.

MRS. SULLEN. O sir, I thank you!—[To DORINDA.] What a handsome bow the fellow has!

DORINDA. Bow! why, I have known several footmen come down from London set up here for dancing-masters, and carry off the best fortunes in the country.

ARCHER [aside]. That project, for aught I know, had been better than ours.—[To SCRUB.] Brother Scrub, why don't you introduce me?

SCRUB. Ladies, this is the strange gentleman's servant that you saw at church to-day; I understood he came from London, and so I invited him to the cellar, that he might show me the newest flourish in whetting my knives.

DORINDA. And I hope you have made much of him?

ARCHER. Oh yes, madam, but the strength of your ladyship's liquor is a little too potent for the constitution of your humble servant.

MRS. SULLEN. What, then you don't usually drink ale?

ARCHER. No, madam; my constant drink is tea, or a little wine and water.

'Tis prescribed me by the physician for a remedy against the spleen.

SCRUB. Oh la! Oh la! a footman have the spleen!

MRS. SULLEN. I thought that distemper had been only proper to people of quality?

ARCHER. Madam, like all other fashions it wears out, and so descends to their servants; though in a great many of us, I believe, it proceeds from some melancholy particles in the blood, occasioned by the stagnation of wages.

DORINDA [aside to MRS. SULLEN]. How affectedly the fellow talks!—[To ARCHER.] How long, pray, have you served your present master?

ARCHER. Not long; my life has been mostly spent in the service of the ladies.

MRS. SULLEN. And pray, which service do you like best?

ARCHER. Madam, the ladies pay best; the honour of serving them is sufficient wages; there is a charm in their looks that delivers a pleasure with their commands, and gives our duty the wings of inclination.

MRS. SULLEN [aside]. That flight was above the pitch of a livery.—[Aloud.] And, sir, would not you be satisfied to serve a lady again?

ARCHER. As a groom of the chamber, madam, but not as a footman.

MRS. SULLEN. I suppose you served as footman before?

ARCHER. For that reason I would not serve in that post again; for my memory is too weak for the load of messages that the ladies lay upon their servants in London. My Lady Howd'ye, the last mistress I served, called me up one morning, and told me, "Martin, go to my Lady Allnight with my humble service; tell her I was to wait on her ladyship yesterday, and left word with Mrs. Rebecca, that the preliminaries of the affair she knows of are stopped till we know the concurrence of the person that I know of, for which there are circumstances wanting which we shall accommodate at the old place; but that in the meantime there is a person about her ladyship, that from several hints and surmises, was accessory at a certain time to the disappointments that naturally attend things, that to her knowledge are of more importance—"

MRS. SULLEN. Dorinda. Ha! ha! ha! where are you going, sir?

ARCHER. Why, I han't half done!—The whole howd'ye was about half an hour long; so I happened to misplace two syllables, and was turned off, and rendered incapable.

DORINDA [aside to MRS. SULLEN]. The pleasantest fellow, sister, I ever saw!—[To ARCHER.] But, friend, if your master be married, I presume you still serve a lady?

ARCHER. No, madam, I take care never to come into a married family! the commands of the master and mistress are always so contrary, that 'tis impossible to please both.

DORINDA. There's a main point gained: my lord is not married, I find. [Aside.]

MRS. SULLEN. But I wonder, friend, that in so many good services, you had not a better provision made for you.

ARCHER. I don't know how, madam. I had a lieutenancy offered me three or four times; but that is not bread, madam—I live much better as I do.

SCRUB. Madam, he sings rarely! I was thought to do pretty well here in the country till he came; but alack a day, I'm nothing to my brother Martin!

DORINDA. Does he?—Pray, sir, will you oblige us with a song?

ARCHER. Are you for passion or humour?

SCRUB. Oh le! he has the purest ballad about a trifle—

MRS. SULLEN. A trifle! pray, sir, let's have it.

ARCHER. I'm ashamed to offer you a trifle, madam; but since you command me—

[Sings to the tune of "Sir Simon the King."]

A trifling song you shall hear,
Begun with a trifle and ended:

All trifling people draw near,
And I shall be nobly attended.

Were it not for trifles, a few
That lately have come into play;
The men would want something to do,
And the women want something to say.

What makes men trifle in dressing?
Because the ladies (they know)
Admire, by often possessing,
That eminent trifle, a beau.

When the lover his moments has trifled,
The trifle of trifles to gain:
No sooner the virgin is rifled,
But a trifle shall part 'em again.

What mortal man would be able
At White's half an hour to sit?
Or who could bear a tea-table,
Without talking of trifles for wit?

The court is from trifles secure,
Gold keys are no trifles, we see:
White rods are no trifles, I'm sure,
Whatever their bearers may be.

But if you will go to the place,
Where trifles abundantly breed,
The levee will show you His Grace
Makes promises trifles indeed.

A coach with six footmen behind,
I count neither trifle nor sin:
But, ye gods! how oft do we find
A scandalous trifle within.

A flask of champagne, people think it
A trifle, or something as bad:
But if you'll contrive how to drink it,
You'll find it no trifle, egad!

A parson's a trifle at sea,
A widow's a trifle in sorrow:
A peace is a trifle to-day,
Who knows what may happen to-morrow?

A black coat a trifle may cloke,
Or to hide it, the red may endeavour:
But if once the army is broke,
We shall have more trifles than ever.

The stage is a trifle, they say,
The reason, pray carry along,
Because at every new play,
The house they with trifles so throng.

But with people's malice to trifle,
And to set us all on a foot:
The author of this is a trifle,
And his song is a trifle to boot.

MRS. SULLEN. Very well, sir, we're obliged to you.—Something for a pair of gloves. [Offering him money.]

ARCHER. I humbly beg leave to be excused: my master, madam, pays me;
nor dare I take money from any other hand, without injuring his honour, and disobeying his commands. [Exit

ARCHER and SCRUB.]

DORINDA. This is surprising! Did you ever see so pretty a well-bred fellow?

MRS. SULLEN. The devil take him for wearing that livery!

DORINDA. I fancy, sister, he may be some gentleman, a friend of my lord's, that his lordship has pitched upon for his courage, fidelity, and discretion, to bear him company in this dress, and who ten to one was his second too.

MRS. SULLEN. It is so, it must be so,
and it shall be so!—for I like him.

DORINDA. What! better than the Count?

MRS. SULLEN. The Count happened to be the most agreeable man upon the place; and so I chose him to serve me in my design upon my husband. But I should like this fellow better in a design upon myself.

DORINDA. But now, sister, for an interview with this lord and this gentleman;
how shall we bring that about?

MRS. SULLEN. Patience! you country ladies give no quarter if once you be entered. Would you prevent their desires, and give the fellows no wishing-time? Look'ee, Dorinda, if my Lord Aimwell loves you or deserves you, he'll find a way to see you, and there we must leave it. My business comes now upon the tapis. Have you prepared your brother?

DORINDA. Yes, yes.

Mrs. SULLEN. And how did he relish it?

DORINDA. He said little, mumbled something to himself, promised to be guided by me—but here he comes.

[Enter SQUIRE SULLEN.]

SQUIRE SULLEN. What singing was that I heard just now?

Mrs. SULLEN. The singing in your head, my dear; you complained of it all day.

SQUIRE SULLEN. You're impertinent.

Mrs. SULLEN. I was ever so, since I became one flesh with you.

SQUIRE SULLEN. One flesh! rather two carcasses joined unnaturally together.

Mrs. SULLEN. Or rather a living soul coupled to a dead body.

DORINDA. So, this is fine encouragement for me!

SQUIRE SULLEN. Yes, my wife shows you what you must do.

Mrs. SULLEN. And my husband shows you what you must suffer.

SQUIRE SULLEN. 'Sdeath, why can't you be silent?

Mrs. SULLEN. 'Sdeath, why can't you talk?

SQUIRE SULLEN. Do you talk to any purpose?

Mrs. SULLEN. Do you think to any purpose?

SQUIRE SULLEN. Sister, hark'ee!—
[Whispers.] I shan't be home till it be late.

[Exit.]

Mrs. SULLEN. What did he whisper to ye?

DORINDA. That he would go round the back way, come into the closet, and listen as I directed him. But let me beg you once more, dear sister, to drop this project; for as I told you before, instead of awaking him to kindness, you may provoke him to a rage; and then who knows how far his brutality may carry him?

Mrs. SULLEN. I'm provided to receive him, I warrant you. But here comes the Count: vanish!

[Exit DORINDA.]

[Enter COUNT BELLAIR.]

Don't you wonder, Monsieur le Count, that I was not at church this afternoon?

COUNT BELLAIR. I more wonder, madam, that you go dere at all, or how you dare to lift those eyes to heaven that are guilty of so much killing.

Mrs. SULLEN. If Heaven, sir, has given to my eyes with the power of killing the virtue of making a cure, I hope the one may atone for the other.

COUNT BELLAIR. Oh, largely, madam, would your ladyship be as ready to apply the remedy as to give the wound. Consider, madam, I am doubly a prisoner; first to the arms of your general, then to your more conquering eyes. My first chains are easy—there a ransom may redeem me; but from your fetters I never shall get free.

Mrs. SULLEN. Alas, sir! why should you complain to me of your captivity, who am in chains myself? You know, sir, that I am bound, nay, must be tied up in that particular that might give you ease: I am like you, a prisoner of war—of war, indeed—I have given my parole of honour! would you break yours to gain your liberty?

COUNT BELLAIR. Most certainly I would, were I a prisoner among the Turks; dis is your case, you're a slave, madam, slave to the worst of Turks, a husband.

Mrs. SULLEN. There lies my foible, I confess; no fortifications, no courage, conduct, nor vigilancy, can pretend to defend a place where the cruelty of the governor forces the garrison to mutiny.

COUNT BELLAIR. And where de besieger is resolved to die before de place.—Here will I fix [Kneels.];—with tears, vows, and prayers assault your heart and never rise till you surrender; or if I must storm—Love and St. Michael!—And so I begin the attack.

Mrs. SULLEN. Stand off!—[Aside.] Sure he hears me not!—And I could almost wish he did not!—The fellow makes love very prettily.—[Aloud.] But, sir, why should you put such a value upon my person, when you see it despised by one that knows it so much better?

COUNT BELLAIR. He knows it not, though he possesses it; if he but knew the value of the jewel he is master of he would always wear it next his heart, and sleep with it in his arms.

MRS. SULLEN. But since he throws me unregarded from him—

COUNT BELLAIR. And one that knows your value well comes by and takes you up, is it not justice? [Goes to lay hold of her.]

[Enter SQUIRE SULLEN with his sword drawn.]

SQUIRE SULLEN. Hold, villain, hold!

MRS. SULLEN [presenting a pistol]. Do you hold!

SQUIRE SULLEN. What! murder your husband, to defend your bully!

MRS. SULLEN. Bully! for shame, Mr. Sullen, bullies wear long swords, the gentleman has none; he's a prisoner, you know. I was aware of your outrage, and prepared this to receive your violence; and, if occasion were, to preserve myself against the force of this other gentleman.

COUNT BELLAIR. O madam, your eyes be better firearms than your pistol; they never miss.

SQUIRE SULLEN. What! court my wife to my face!

MRS. SULLEN. Pray, Mr. Sullen, put up; suspend your fury for a minute.

SQUIRE SULLEN. To give you time to invent an excuse!

MRS. SULLEN. I need none.

SQUIRE SULLEN. No, for I heard every syllable of your discourse.

COUNT BELLAIR. Ah! and begar, I t'ink the dialogue was vera pretty.

MRS. SULLEN. Then I suppose, sir, you heard something of your own barbarity?

SQUIRE SULLEN. Barbarity! 'oons, what does the woman call barbarity? Do I ever meddle with you?

MRS. SULLEN. No.

SQUIRE SULLEN. As for you, sir, I shall take another time.

COUNT BELLAIR. Ah, begar, and so must I.

SQUIRE SULLEN. Look'ee, madam, don't think that my anger proceeds from any concern I have for your honour, but for my own, and if you can contrive any way of being a whore without making me a cuckold, do it and welcome.

MRS. SULLEN. Sir, I thank you kindly, you would allow me the sin but rob me of the pleasure. No, no, I'm resolved never to venture upon the crime without the satisfaction of seeing you punished for't.

SQUIRE SULLEN. Then will you grant me this, my dear? Let anybody else do you the favour but that Frenchman, for I mortally hate his whole generation.

[Exit.]

COUNT BELLAIR. Ah, sir, that be ungrateful, for begar, I love some of yours.—Madam— [Approaching her.]

MRS. SULLEN. No, sir.

COUNT BELLAIR. No, sir! garzoon, madam, I am not your husband.

MRS. SULLEN. 'Tis time to undeceive you, sir. I believed your addresses to me were no more than an amusement, and I hope you will think the same of my complaisance; and to convince you that you ought, you must know that I brought you hither only to make you instrumental in setting me right with my husband, for he was planted to listen by my appointment.

COUNT BELLAIR. By your appointment?

MRS. SULLEN. Certainly.

COUNT BELLAIR. And so, madam, while I was telling twenty stories to part you from your husband, begar, I was bringing you together all the while!

MRS. SULLEN. I ask your pardon, sir, but I hope this will give you a taste of the virtue of the English ladies.

COUNT BELLAIR. Begar, madam, your virtue be vera great, but garzoon, your honeste be vera little.

[Reënter DORINDA.]

MRS. SULLEN. Nay, now, you're angry, sir.

COUNT BELLAIR. Angry!—Fair Dorinda [Sings "Fair Dorinda," the opera tune, and addresses DORINDA.] Madam, when your ladyship want a fool, send for me. Fair Dorinda, Revenge, etc.

[Exit singing.]

MRS. SULLEN. There goes the true humour of his nation—resentment with good manners, and the height of anger in a song! Well, sister, you must be judge, for you have heard the trial.

DORINDA. And I bring in my brother guilty.

MRS. SULLEN. But I must bear the punishment. 'Tis hard, sister.

DORINDA. I own it; but you must have patience.

MRS. SULLEN. Patience! the cant of custom—Providence sends no evil without a remedy. Should I lie groaning under a yoke I can shake off, I were accessory to my ruin, and my patience were no better than self-murder.

DORINDA. But how can you shake off the yoke? your divisions don't come within the reach of the law for a divorce.

MRS. SULLEN. Law! what law can search into the remote abyss of nature? what evidence can prove the unaccountable disaffections of wedlock? Can a jury sum up the endless aversions that are rooted in our souls, or can a bench give judgment upon antipathies?

DORINDA. They never pretended, sister; they never meddle, but in case of uncleanness.

MRS. SULLEN. Uncleanness! O sister! casual violation is a transient injury, and may possibly be repaired, but can radical hatreds be ever reconciled? No, no, sister, nature is the first lawgiver, and when she has set tempers opposite, not all the golden links of wedlock nor iron manacles of law can keep 'em fast.

Wedlock we own ordain'd by Heaven's decree,

But such as Heaven ordain'd it first to be;—

Concurring tempers in the man and wife
As mutual helps to draw the load of life.

View all the works of Providence above,
The stars with harmony and concord move;

View all the works of Providence below,
The fire, the water, earth, and air, we know,

All in one plant agree to make it grow.
Must man, the chiefest work of art divine,
Be doom'd in endless discord to repine?
No, we should injure Heaven by that surmise,

Omnipotence is just, were man but wise.
[Exeunt.]

ACT IV

SCENE I—The gallery in LADY BOUNTIFUL'S house.

[Mrs. SULLEN discovered alone.]

MRS. SULLEN. Were I born an humble Turk, where women have no soul nor property, there I must sit contented. But in England, a country whose women are its glory, must women be abused? where women rule, must women be enslaved? Nay, cheated into slavery, mocked by a promise of comfortable society into a wilderness of solitude! I dare not keep the thought about me. Oh, here comes something to divert me.

[Enter a COUNTRYWOMAN.]

WOMAN. I come, an't please your ladyship—you're my Lady Bountiful, an't ye?

MRS. SULLEN. Well, good woman, go on.

WOMAN. I have come seventeen long mail to have a cure for my husband's sore leg.

MRS. SULLEN. Your husband! what, woman, cure your husband!

WOMAN. Ay, poor man, for his sore leg won't let him stir from home.

MRS. SULLEN. There, I confess, you have given me a reason. Well, good woman, I'll tell you what you must do. You must lay your husband's leg upon a table, and with a chopping-knife you must lay it open as broad as you can, then you must take out the bone, and beat the flesh soundly with a rolling-pin, then take salt, pepper, cloves, mace, and ginger, some sweet-herbs, and season it very well, then roll it up like brawn, and put it into the oven for two hours.

WOMAN. Heavens reward your ladyship!—I have two little babies too that are pitcous bad with the graips, an't please ye.

MRS. SULLEN. Put a little pepper and salt in their bellies, good woman.

[Enter LADY BOUNTIFUL.]

I beg your ladyship's pardon for taking your business out of your hands; I have been a-tampering here a little with one of your patients.

LADY BOUNTIFUL. Come, good woman, don't mind this mad creature; I am the person that you want, I suppose. What would you have, woman?

MRS. SULLEN. She wants something for her husband's sore leg.

LADY BOUNTIFUL. What's the matter with his leg, goody?

WOMAN. It come first, as one might say, with a sort of dizziness in his foot, then he had a kind of laziness in his joints, and then his leg broke out, and then it swelled, and then it closed again, and then it broke out again, and then it festered, and then it grew better, and then it grew worse again.

MRS. SULLEN. Ha! ha! ha!

LADY BOUNTIFUL. How can you be merry with the misfortunes of other people?

MRS. SULLEN. Because my own make me sad, madam.

LADY BOUNTIFUL. The worst reason in the world, daughter; your own misfortunes should teach you to pity others.

MRS. SULLEN. But the woman's misfortunes and mine are nothing alike; her husband is sick, and mine, alas! is in health.

LADY BOUNTIFUL. What! would you wish your husband sick?

MRS. SULLEN. Not of a sore leg, of all things.

LADY BOUNTIFUL. Well, good woman, go to the pantry, get your bellyful of victuals, then I'll give you a receipt of diet-drink for your husband. But d'ye hear, goody, you must not let your husband move too much?

WOMAN. No, no, madam, the poor man's inclinable enough to lie still.

[Exit.]

LADY BOUNTIFUL. Well, daughter Sullen, though you laugh, I have done miracles about the country here with my receipts.

MRS. SULLEN. Miracles indeed, if they have cured anybody; but I believe, madam, the patient's faith goes farther toward the miracle than your prescription.

LADY BOUNTIFUL. Fancy helps in some cases; but there's your husband, who has as little fancy as anybody, I brought him from death's door.

MRS. SULLEN. I suppose, madam, you made him drink plentifully of ass's milk.

[Enter DORINDA, who runs to MRS.

SULLEN.]

DORINDA. News, dear sister! news! news!

[Enter ARCHER, running.]

ARCHER. Where, where is my Lady Bountiful?—Pray, which is the old lady of you three?

LADY BOUNTIFUL. I am.

ARCHER. O madam, the fame of your ladyship's charity, goodness, benevolence, skill and ability, have drawn me hither to implore your ladyship's help in behalf of my unfortunate master, who is this moment breathing his last.

LADY BOUNTIFUL. Your master! where is he?

ARCHER. At your gate, madam. Drawn by the appearance of your handsome house to view it nearer, and walking up the avenue within five paces of the courtyard, he was taken ill of a sudden with a sort of I know not what, but down he fell, and there he lies.

LADY BOUNTIFUL. Here, Scrub! Gipsy! all run, get my easy-chair down stairs, put the gentleman in it, and bring him in quickly! quickly!

ARCHER. Heaven will reward your ladyship for this charitable act.

LADY BOUNTIFUL. Is your master used to these fits?

ARCHER. O yes, madam, frequently: I have known him have five or six of a night.

LADY BOUNTIFUL. What's his name?

ARCHER. Lord, madam, he's a-dying! a minute's care or neglect may save or destroy his life.

LADY BOUNTIFUL. Ah, poor gentleman!—Come, friend, show me the way; I'll see him brought in myself. [Exit with ARCHER.]

DORINDA. O sister, my heart flutters about strangely! I can hardly forbear running to his assistance.

MRS. SULLEN. And I'll lay my life he deserves your assistance more than he wants it. Did not I tell you that my lord would find a way to come at you? Love's his distemper, and you must be the physician; put on all your charms, summon all your fire into your eyes, plant the whole artillery of your looks against his breast, and down with him.

DORINDA. O sister! I'm but a young gunner; I shall be afraid to shoot, for fear the piece should recoil, and hurt myself.

MRS. SULLEN. Never fear, you shall see me shoot before you, if you will.

DORINDA. No, no, dear sister; you have missed your mark so unfortunately, that I shan't care for being instructed by you.

[Enter AIMWELL in a chair carried by ARCHER and SCRUB, and counterfeiting a swoon; LADY BOUNTIFUL and GIPSY following.]

LADY BOUNTIFUL. Here, here, let's see the hartshorn drops.—Gipsy, a glass of fair water! His fit's very strong.—Bless me, how his hands are clinched!

ARCHER. For shame, ladies, what d'ye do? why don't you help us?—[To DORINDA.] Pray, madam, take his hand, and open it, if you can, whilst I hold his head.

[DORINDA takes his hand.]

DORINDA. Poor gentleman!—Oh!—he has got my hand within his, and squeezes it unmercifully—

LADY BOUNTIFUL. 'Tis the violence of his convulsion, child.

ARCHER. Oh, madam, he's perfectly possessed in these cases—he'll bite if you don't have a care.

DORINDA. Oh, my hand! my hand!

LADY BOUNTIFUL. What's the matter with the foolish girl? I have got his hand open, you see, with a great deal of ease.

ARCHER. Ay, but, madam, your daughter's hand is somewhat warmer than your ladyship's, and the heat of it draws the force of the spirits that way.

MRS. SULLEN. I find, friend, you're very learned in these sorts of fits.

ARCHER. 'Tis no wonder, madam, for I'm often troubled with them myself; I find myself extremely ill at this minute.

[Looking hard at Mrs. SULLEN.]

MRS. SULLEN. I fancy I could find a way to cure you. [Aside.]

LADY BOUNTIFUL. His fit holds him very long.

ARCHER. Longer than usual, madam.—Pray, young lady, open his breast and give him air.

LADY BOUNTIFUL. Where did his illness take him first, pray?

ARCHER. To-day at church, madam.

LADY BOUNTIFUL. In what manner was he taken?

ARCHER. Very strangely, my lady. He was of a sudden touched with something in his eyes, which, at the first, he only felt, but could not tell whether 'twas pain or pleasure.

LADY BOUNTIFUL. Wind, nothing but wind!

ARCHER. By soft degrees it grew and mounted to his brain, there his fancy caught it; there formed it so beautiful, and dressed it up in such gay, pleasing colours, that his transported appetite seized the fair idea, and straight conveyed it to his heart. That hospitable seat of life sent all its sanguine spirits forth to meet, and opened all its sluicy gates to take the stranger in.

LADY BOUNTIFUL. Your master should never go without a bottle to smell to.—Oh—he recovers! The lavender-water—some feathers to burn under his nose—Hungary water to rub his temples.—Oh, he comes to himself!—Hem a little, sir, hem.—Gipsy! bring the cordial-water.

[AIMWELL seems to awake in amaze.]

DORINDA. How d'ye, sir?

AIMWELL. Where am I? [Rising.]
Sure I have pass'd the gulf of silent death,

And now I land on the Elysian shore!—Behold the goddess of those happy plains, Fair Proserpine—let me adore thy bright divinity.

[Kneels to DORINDA, and kisses her hand.]

MRS. SULLEN. So, so, so! I knew where the fit would end!

AIMWELL. Eurydice perhaps—
How could thy Orpheus keep his word,
And not look back upon thee?
No treasure but thyself could sure have bribed him

To look one minute of thee.

LADY BOUNTIFUL. Delirious, poor gentleman!

ARCHER. Very delirious, madam, very delirious.

AIMWELL. Martin's voice, I think.

ARCHER. Yes, my lord.—How does your lordship?

LADY BOUNTIFUL. Lord! did you mind that, girls? [Aside to MRS. SULLEN and DORINDA.]

AIMWELL. Where am I?

ARCHER. In very good hands, sir. You were taken just now with one of your old fits, under the trees, just by this good lady's house; her ladyship had you taken in, and has miraculously brought you to yourself, as you see.

AIMWELL. I am so confounded with shame, madam, that I can now only beg pardon; and refer my acknowledgments for your ladyship's care till an opportunity offers of making some amends. I dare be no longer troublesome.—Martin! give two guineas to the servants. [Going.]

DORINDA. Sir, you may catch cold by going so soon into the air; you don't look, sir, as if you were perfectly recovered.

[Here ARCHER talks to LADY BOUNTIFUL in dumb show.]

AIMWELL. That I shall never be, madam; my present illness is so rooted that I must expect to carry it to my grave.

MRS. SULLEN. Don't despair, sir; I have known several in your distemper shake it off with a fortnight's physic.

LADY BOUNTIFUL. Come, sir, your servant has been telling me that you're apt to relapse if you go into the air: your good manners shan't get the better of ours—you shall sit down again, sir. Come, sir, we don't mind ceremonies in the country—here, sir, my service t'ye.—You shall taste my water; 'tis a cordial I can assure you, and of my own making—drink it off, sir.—[AIMWELL drinks.] And how d'ye find yourself now, sir?

AIMWELL. Somewhat better—though very faint still.

LADY BOUNTIFUL. Ay, ay, people are always faint after these fits.—Come, girls, you shall show the gentleman the house.—'Tis but an old family building, sir; but you had better walk about, and cool by degrees, than venture immediately into the air. You'll find some tolerable pictures.—Dorinda, show the gentleman the way. I must go to the poor woman below. [Exit.]

DORINDA. This way, sir.

AIMWELL. Ladies, shall I beg leave for my servant to wait on you, for he understands pictures very well?

MRS. SULLEN. Sir, we understand originals as well as he does pictures, so he may come along. [Exit all but SCRUB, AIMWELL leading DORINDA.]

[Enter FOIGARD.]

FOIGARD. Save you, Master Scrub!

SCRUB. Sir, I won't be saved your way—I hate a priest, I abhor the French, and I defy the devil. Sir, I'm a bold Briton, and will spill the last drop of my blood to keep out popery and slavery.

FOIGARD. Master Scrub, you would put me down in politics, and so I would be speaking with Mrs. Shipsy.

SCRUB. Good Mr. Priest, you can't speak with her; she's sick, sir, she's gone abroad, sir, she's—dead two months ago, sir.

[Reënter GIPSY.]

GIPSY. How now, impudence! how dare you talk so saucily to the doctor?—Pray, sir, don't take it ill; for the common people of England are not so civil to strangers, as—

SCRUB. You lie! you lie! 'tis the common people that are civilest to strangers.

GIPSY. Sirrah, I have a good mind to—get you out, I say!

SCRUB. I won't.

GIPSY. You won't, sauce-box!—Pray, doctor, what is the captain's name that came to your inn last night?

SCRUB [aside]. The captain! ah, the devil, there she hampers me again; the captain has me on one side and the priest on t'other: so between the gown and the sword, I have a fine time on't.—But, Cedunt arma togæ. [Going.]

GIPSY. What, sirrah, won't you march?

SCRUB. No, my dear, I won't march—but I'll walk.—[Aside.] And I'll make bold to listen a little too. [Goes behind the side-scene and listens.]

GIPSY. Indeed, doctor, the Count has been barbarously treated, that's the truth on't.

FOIGARD. Ah, Mrs. Gipsy, upon my shoul, now, gra, his complainings would mollify the marrow in your bones, and move the bowels of your commiseration! He weeps, and he dances, and he fistles, and he swears, and he laughs, and he stamps, and he sings; in conclusion, joy, he's afflicted à-la-Française, and a stranger would not know whider to cry or to laugh with him.

GIPSY. What would you have me do, doctor?

FOIGARD. Not'ing, joy, but only hide the Count in Mrs. Sullen's closet when it is dark.

GIPSY. Nothing! is that nothing? it would be both a sin and a shame, doctor.

FOIGARD. Here is twenty louis-d'ors, joy, for your shame; and I will give you an absolution for the shin.

GIPSY. But won't that money look like a bribe?

FOIGARD. Dat is according as you shall tauk it. If you receive the money beforehand, 'twill be logicè, a bribe; but if you stay till afterwards, 'twill be only a gratification.

GIPSY. Well, doctor, I'll take it logicè. But what must I do with my conscience, sir?

FOIGARD. Leave dat wid me, joy; I am your priest, gra; and your conscience is under my hands.

GIPSY. But should I put the Count into the closet—

FOIGARD. Vel, is dere any shin for a man's being in a closhet? one may go to prayers in a closhet.

GIPSY. But if the lady should come into her chamber, and go to bed?

FOIGARD. Vel, and is dere any shin in going to bed, joy?

GIPSY. Ay, but if the parties should meet, doctor?

FOIGARD. Vel den—the parties must be responsible. Do you be gone after putting the Count into the closet; and leave the shins wid themselves. I will come with the Count to instruct you in your chamber.

GIPSY. Well, doctor, your religion is so pure! Methinks I'm so easy after an absolution, and can sin afresh with so much security, that I'm resolved to die a martyr to't. Here's the key of the garden door, come in the back way when 'tis late, I'll be ready to receive you; but don't so much as whisper, only take hold of my hand; I'll lead you, and do you lead the Count, and follow me. [Exeunt.]

SCRUB [coming forward]. What witchcraft now have these two imps of the devil been a-hatching here? "There's twenty louis-d'ors"; I heard that, and saw the purse.—But I must give room to my betters. [Exit.]

[Reënter AIMWELL, leading DORINDA, and making love in dumb show; MRS. SULLEN and ARCHER following.]

MRS. SULLEN [to ARCHER]. Pray, sir, how d'ye like that piece?

ARCHER. Oh, 'tis Leda! You find, madam, how Jupiter comes disguised to make love—

MRS. SULLEN. But what think you there of Alexander's battles?

ARCHER. We only want a Le Brun, madam, to draw greater battles, and a greater general of our own. The Danube, madam, would make a greater figure in a picture than the Granicus; and we have our Ramillies to match their Arbela.

MRS. SULLEN. Pray, sir, what head is that in the corner there?

ARCHER. O madam, 'tis poor Ovid in his exile.

MRS. SULLEN. What was he banished for?

ARCHER. His ambitious love, madam. —[Bowling.] His misfortune touches me.

MRS. SULLEN. Was he successful in his amours?

ARCHER. There he has left us in the dark. He was too much a gentleman to tell.

MRS. SULLEN. If he were secret, I pity him.

ARCHER. And if he were successful, I envy him.

MRS. SULLEN. How d'ye like that Venus over the chimney?

ARCHER. Venus! I protest, madam, I took it for your picture; but now I look again, 'tis not handsome enough.

MRS. SULLEN. Oh, what a charm is flattery! If you would see my picture, there it is over that cabinet. How d'ye like it? .

ARCHER. I must admire anything, madam, that has the least resemblance of you. But, methinks, madam—[He looks at the picture and MRS. SULLEN three or four times, by turns.] Pray, madam, who drew it?

MRS. SULLEN. A famous hand, sir.

[Here AIMWELL and DORINDA go off.]

ARCHER. A famous hand, madam!—Your eyes, indeed, are featured there; but where's the sparking moisture, shining fluid, in which they swim? The picture, indeed, has your dimples; but where's the swarm of killing Cupids that should ambush there? The lips too are figured out; but where's the carnation dew, the pouting ripeness that tempts the taste in the original?

MRS. SULLEN. Had it been my lot to have matched with such a man! [Aside.]

ARCHER. Your breasts too—presumptuous man! what, paint Heaven!—Apropos, madam, in the very next picture is Salmoneus, that was struck dead with lightning, for offering to imitate Jove's thunder; I hope you served the painter so, madam?

MRS. SULLEN. Had my eyes the power of thunder, they should employ their lightning better.

ARCHER. There's the finest bed in that room, madam! I suppose 'tis your ladyship's bedchamber.

MRS. SULLEN. And what then, sir?

ARCHER. I think the quilt is the richest that ever I saw. I can't at this distance, madam, distinguish the figures of the embroidery; will you give me leave, madam?

MRS. SULLEN [aside]. The devil take his impudence!—Sure, if I gave him an opportunity, he durst not offer it!—I have a great mind to try.—[Going: returns.] 'Sdeath, what am I doing?—And alone, too!—Sister! sister! [Runs out.]

ARCHER. I'll follow her close—

For where a Frenchman durst attempt to storm,
A Briton sure may well the work perform. [Going.]

[Reënter SCRUB.]

SCRUB. Martin! brother Martin!

ARCHER. O brother Scrub, I beg your pardon, I was not a-going: here's a guinea my master ordered you.

SCRUB. A guinea! hi! hi! hi! a guinea! eh—by this light it is a guinea! But I suppose you expect one-and-twenty shillings in change?

ARCHER. Not at all; I have another for Gipsy.

SCRUB. A guinea for her! faggot and fire for the witch? Sir, give me that guinea, and I'll discover a plot.

ARCHER. A plot!

SCRUB. Ay, sir, a plot, and a horrid plot! First, it must be a plot, because there's a woman in't: secondly, it must be a plot, because there's a priest in't: thirdly, it must be a plot, because there's French gold in't: and fourthly, it must be a plot, because I don't know what to make on't.

ARCHER. Nor anybody else, I'm afraid, brother Scrub.

SCRUB. Truly, I'm afraid so too; for where there's a priest and a woman, there's always a mystery and a riddle. This I know, that here has been the doctor with a temptation in one hand and an absolution in the other, and Gipsy has sold herself to the devil; I saw the price paid down, my eyes shall take their oath on't.

ARCHER. And is all this bustle about Gipsy?

SCRUB. That's not all; I could hear but a word here and there; but I remember they mentioned a Count, a closet, a back-door, and a key.

ARCHER. The Count!—Did you hear nothing of Mrs. Sullen?

SCRUB. I did hear some word that sounded that way: but whether it was Sullen or Dorinda, I could not distinguish.

ARCHER. You have told this matter to nobody, brother?

SCRUB. Told! no, sir, I thank you for that; I'm resolved never to speak one word pro nor con, till we have a peace.

ARCHER. You're i' the right, brother Scrub. Here's a treaty afoot between the Count and the lady: the priest and the chambermaid are the plenipotentiaries. It shall go hard but I find a way to be included in the treaty.—Where's the doctor now?

SCRUB. He and Gipsy are this moment devouring my lady's marmalade in the closet.

AIMWELL [from without]. Martin! Martin!

ARCHER. I come, sir, I come.

SCRUB. But you forget the other guinea, brother Martin.

ARCHER. Here, I give it with all my heart.

SCRUB. And I take it with all my soul.—[Exit ARCHER.] Ecod, I'll spoil your plotting, Mrs. Gipsy! and if you should set the captain upon me, these two guineas will buy me off. [Exit.]

[Reënter MRS. SULLEN and DORINDA, meeting.]

MRS. SULLEN. Well, sister!

DORINDA. And well, sister!

MRS. SULLEN. What's become of my lord?

DORINDA. What's become of his servant?

MRS. SULLEN. Servant! he's a prettier fellow, and a finer gentleman by fifty degrees, than his master.

DORINDA. O' my conscience, I fancy you could beg that fellow at the gallows-foot!

MRS. SULLEN. O' my conscience I could, provided I could put a friend of yours in his room.

DORINDA. You desired me, sister, to leave you, when you transgressed the bounds of honour.

MRS. SULLEN. Thou dear censorious country girl! what dost mean? You can't think of the man without the bedfellow, I find.

DORINDA. I don't find anything unnatural in that thought: while the mind is conversant with flesh and blood, it must conform to the humours of the company.

MRS. SULLEN. How a little love and good company improves a woman! Why, child, you begin to live—you never spoke before.

DORINDA. Because I was never spoke to.—My lord has told me that I have more wit and beauty than any of my sex; and truly I begin to think the man is sincere.

MRS. SULLEN. You're in the right, Dorinda; pride is the life of a woman, and flattery is our daily bread; and she's a fool that won't believe a man there, as much as she that believes him in anything else. But I'll lay you a guinea that I had finer things said to me than you had.

DORINDA. Done! What did your fellow say to ye?

MRS. SULLEN. My fellow took the picture of Venus for mine.

DORINDA. But my lover took me for Venus herself.

MRS. SULLEN. Common cant! Had my spark called me a Venus directly, I should have believed him a footman in good earnest.

DORINDA. But my lover was upon his knees to me.

MRS. SULLEN. And mine was upon his tiptoes to me.

DORINDA. Mine vowed to die for me.

MRS. SULLEN. Mine swore to die with me.

DORINDA. Mine spoke the softest moving things.

MRS. SULLEN. Mine had his moving things too.

DORINDA. Mine kissed my hand ten thousand times.

MRS. SULLEN. Mine has all that pleasure to come.

DORINDA. Mine offered marriage.

MRS. SULLEN. O Lard! d'ye call that a moving thing?

DORINDA. The sharpest arrow in his quiver, my dear sister! Why, my ten thousand pounds may lie brooding here this seven years, and hatch nothing at last but some ill-natured clown like yours. Whereas, if I marry my Lord Aimwell, there will be title, place, and precedence, the Park, the play, and the drawing-room, splendour, equipage, noise, and flambeaux.—Hey, my Lady Aimwell's servants there!—Lights, lights to the stairs!—My Lady Aimwell's coach put forward!—Stand by, make room for her ladyship!—Are not these things moving?—What! melancholy of a sudden?

MRS. SULLEN. Happy, happy sister! your angel has been watchful for your happiness, whilst mine has slept regardless of his charge. Long smiling years of circling joys for you, but not one hour for me! [Weeps.]

DORINDA. Come, my dear, we'll talk of something else.

MRS. SULLEN. O Dorinda! I own myself a woman, full of my sex, a gentle, generous soul, easy and yielding to soft desires; a spacious heart, where love and all his train might lodge. And must the fair apartment of my breast be made a stable for a brute to lie in?

DORINDA. Meaning your husband, I suppose?

MRS. SULLEN. Husband! no; even husband is too soft a name for him.—But, come, I expect my brother here to-night or to-morrow; he was abroad when my father married me; perhaps he'll find a way to make me easy.

DORINDA. Will you promise not to make yourself easy in the meantime with my lord's friend?

MRS. SULLEN. You mistake me, sister. It happens with us as among the men, the greatest talkers are the greatest cowards? and there's a reason for it; those spirits evaporate in prattle, which might do more mischief if they took another course.—Though, to confess the truth, I do love that fellow;—and if I met him dressed as he should be, and I undressed as I should be—look'ee, sister, I have no supernatural gifts—I can't swear I could resist the temptation; though I can safely promise to avoid it; and that's as much as the best of us can do. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II—A room in BONIFACE'S inn.

[Enter AIMWELL and ARCHER laughing.]

ARCHER. And the awkward kindness of the good motherly old gentlewoman—AIMWELL. And the coming easiness of the young one—'Sdeath, 'tis pity to deceive her!

ARCHER. Nay, if you adhere to these principles, stop where you are.

AIMWELL. I can't stop; for I love her to distraction.

ARCHER. 'Sdeath, if you love her a hair's-breadth beyond discretion, you must go no further.

AIMWELL. Well, well, anything to deliver us from sauntering away our idle evenings at White's, Tom's, or Will's, and be stinted to bare looking at our old acquaintance, the cards; because our impotent pockets can't afford us a guinea for the mercenary drabs.

ARCHER. Or be obliged to some purse-proud coxcomb for a scandalous bottle, where we must not pretend to our share of the discourse, because we can't pay our club o' th' reckoning.—Damn it, I had rather sponge upon Morris, and sup upon a dish of bohea scored behind the door!

AIMWELL. And there expose our want of sense by talking criticisms, as we should our want of money by railing at the government.

ARCHER. Or be obliged to sneak into the side-box, and between both houses steal two acts of a play, and because we han't money to see the other three, we come away discontented, and damn the whole five.

AIMWELL. And ten thousand such rascally tricks—had we outlived our fortunes among our acquaintance.—But now—

ARCHER. Ay, now is the time to prevent all this:—strike while the iron is hot.—This priest is the luckiest part of our adventure; he shall marry you, and pimp for me.

AIMWELL. But I should not like a woman that can be so fond of a Frenchman.

ARCHER. Alas, sir! Necessity has no law. The lady may be in distress; perhaps she has a confounded husband, and her revenge may carry her farther than her love. Egad, I have so good an opinion of her, and of myself, that I begin to fancy strange things: and we must say this for the honour of our women, and indeed of ourselves, that they do stick to their men as they do to their Magna Charta. If the plot lies as I suspect, I must put on the gentleman.—But here comes the doctor—I shall be ready. [Exit.]

[Enter FOIGARD.]

FOIGARD. Sauve you, noble friend.

AIMWELL. O sir, your servant! Pray, doctor, may I crave your name?

FOIGARD. Fat naam is upon me? My naam is Foigard, joy.

AIMWELL. Foigard! a very good name for a clergyman. Pray, Doctor Foigard, were you ever in Ireland?

FOIGARD. Ireland! no, joy. Fat sort of plaace is dat saam Ireland? Dey say de people are catched dere when dey are young.

AIMWELL. And some of 'em when they are old:—as for example.—[Takes FOIGARD by the shoulder.] Sir, I arrest you as a traitor against the government; you're a subject of England, and this morning showed me a commission, by which you served as chaplain in the French army. This is death by our law, and your reverence must hang for it.

FOIGARD. Upon my shoul, noble friend, dis is strange news you tell me! Fader Foigard a subject of England! de son of a burgomaster of Brussels, a subject of England! ubooboo—

AIMWELL. The son of a bog-trotter in Ireland! Sir, your tongue will condemn you before any bench in the kingdom.

FOIGARD. And is my tongue all your evidensh, joy?

AIMWELL. That's enough.

FOIGARD. No, no, joy, for I vill never spake English no more.

AIMWELL. Sir, I have other evidence.—Here, Martin!

[Reënter ARCHER.]

You know this fellow?

ARCHER [in a brogue]. Saave you, my dear cussen, how does your health?

FOIGARD [aside]. Ah! upon my shoul dere is my countryman, and his brogue will hang mine.—[To ARCHER.] Mynheer, Ick wet neat walt hey zacht, Ick universton ewe neat, sacramant!

AIMWELL. Altering your language won't do, sir; this fellow knows your person, and will swear to your face.

FOIGARD. Faash! fey, is dere a brogue upon my faash too?

ARCHER. Upon my soulvation dere ish, joy!—But cussen Mackshane, vil you not put a remembrance upon me?

FOIGARD. Mackshane! by St. Paatrick, dat ish my naam shure enough! [Aside.]

AIMWELL. I fancy, Archer, you have it. [Aside to ARCHER.]

FOIGARD. The devil hang you, joy! by fat acquaintance are you my cussen?

ARCHER. Oh, de devil hang yourshelf, joy! you know we were little boys together upon de school, and your foster-moder's son was married upon my nurse's chister, joy, and so we are Irish cussens.

FOIGARD. De devil taake de relation! vel, joy, and fat school was it?

ARCHER. I tinks it vas—aay—'twas Tipperary.

FOIGARD. No, no, joy; it vas Kilkenny.

AIMWELL. That's enough for us—self-confession,—come, sir, we must deliver you into the hands of the next magistrate.

ARCHER. He sends you to jail, you're tried next assizes, and away you go swing into purgatory.

FOIGARD. And is it so wid you, cussen?

ARCHER. It vil be sho wid you, cussen, if you don't immediately confess the secret between you and Mrs. Gipsy. Look'ee, sir, the gallows or the secret, take your choice.

FOIGARD. The gallows! upon my shoul I hate that saam gallow, for it is a disease dat is fatal to our family. Vel, den, dere is nothing, shentlemens, but Mrs. Shullen would spaak wid the Count in her chamber at midnight, and dere is no haarm, joy, for I am to conduct the Count to the plash, myshelf.

ARCHER. As I guessed.—Have you communicated the matter to the Count?

FOIGARD. I have not sheen him since.

ARCHER. Right again! Why then, doctor—you shall conduct me to the lady instead of the Count.

FOIGARD. Fat, my cussen to the lady! upon my shoul, gra, dat is too much upon the brogue.

ARCHER. Come, come, doctor; consider we have got a rope about your neck, and if you offer to squeak, we'll stop your windpipe, most certainly: we shall have another job for you in a day or two, I hope.

AIMWELL. Here's company coming this way; let's into my chamber and there concert our affairs farther.

ARCHER. Come, my dear cussen, come along. [Exeunt.]

[Enter BONIFACE, HOUNSLOW, and BAGSHOT at one door, GIBBET at the opposite.]

GIBBET. Well, gentlemen, 'tis a fine night for our enterprise.

HOUNSLOW. Dark as hell.

BAGSHOT. And blows like the devil; our landlord here has showed us the window where we must break in, and tells us the plate stands in the wainscot cupboard in the parlour.

BONIFACE. Ay, ay, Mr. Bagshot, as the saying is, knives and forks, and cups and cans, and tumblers and tankards. There's one tankard, as the saying is, that's near upon as big as me: it was a present to the squire from his godmother, and smells of nutmeg and toast like an East-India ship.

HOUNSLOW. Then you say we must divide at the stairhead?

BONIFACE. Yes, Mr. Hounslow, as the saying is. At one end of that gallery lies my Lady Bountiful and her daughter, and at the other Mrs. Sullen. As for the squire—GIBBET. He's safe enough, I have fairly entered him, and he's more than half seas over already. But such a parcel of scoundrels are got about him now, that, egad, I was ashamed to be seen in their company.

BONIFACE. 'Tis now twelve, as the saying is—gentlemen, you must set out at one.

GIBBET. Hounslow, do you and Bagshot see our arms fixed, and I'll come to you presently.

HOUNSLOW. We will.

BAGSHOT. We will. [Exit.]

GIBBET. Well, my dear Bonny, you assure me that Scrub is a coward?

BONIFACE. A chicken, as the saying is. You'll have no creature to deal with but the ladies.

GIBBET. And I can assure you, friend, there's a great deal of address and good manners in robbing a lady; I am the most a gentleman that way that ever travelled the road.—But, my dear Bonny, this prize will be a galleon, a Vigo business.—I warrant you we shall bring off three or four thousand pounds.

BONIFACE. In plate, jewels, and money, as the saying is, you may.

GIBBET. Why then, Tyburn, I defy thee! I'll get up to town, sell off my horse and arms, buy myself some pretty employment in the household, and be as snug and as honest as any courtier of 'em all.

BONIFACE. And what think you then of my daughter Cherry for a wife?

GIBBET. Look'ee, my dear Bonny—Cherry is the Goddess I adore, as the song goes; but it is a maxim, that man and wife should never have it in their power to hang one another; for if they should, the Lord have mercy on 'em both!

[Exit.]

ACT V

SCENE I—A room in BONIFACE'S inn.

[Knocking without, enter BONIFACE.]

BONIFACE. Coming! Coming!—A coach and six foaming horses at this time o' night! some great man, as the saying is, for he scorns to travel with other people.

[Enter SIR CHARLES FREEMAN.]

SIR CHARLES. What, fellow! a public house, and abed when other people sleep?

BONIFACE. Sir, I an't abed, as the saying is.

SIR CHARLES. Is Mr. Sullen's family abed, think'ee?

BONIFACE. All but the squire himself, sir, as the saying is; he's in the house.

SIR CHARLES. What company has he?

BONIFACE. Why, sir, there's the constable, Mr. Gage the exciseman, the hunch-backed barber, and two or three other gentlemen.

SIR CHARLES. I find my sister's letters gave me the true picture of her spouse.

[Aside.]

[Enter SQUIRE SULLEN, drunk.]

BONIFACE. Sir, here's the squire.

SQUIRE SULLEN. The puppies left me asleep—Sir!

SIR CHARLES. Well, sir.

SQUIRE SULLEN. Sir, I am an unfortunate man—I have three thousand pounds a year, and I can't get a man to drink a cup of ale with me.

SIR CHARLES. That's very hard.

SQUIRE SULLEN. Ay, sir; and unless you have pity upon me, and smoke one pipe with me, I must e'en go home to my wife, and I had rather go to the devil by half.

SIR CHARLES. But I presume, sir, you won't see your wife to-night; she'll be gone to bed. You don't use to lie with your wife in that pickle?

SQUIRE SULLEN. What! not lie with my wife! why, sir, do you take me for an atheist or a rake?

SIR CHARLES. If you hate her, sir, I think you had better lie from her.

SQUIRE SULLEN. I think so too, friend. But I'm a justice of peace, and must do nothing against the law.

SIR CHARLES. Law! as I take it, Mr. Justice, nobody observes law for law's sake, only for the good of those for whom it was made.

SQUIRE SULLEN. But, if the law orders me to send you to jail, you must lie there, my friend.

SIR CHARLES. Not unless I commit a crime to deserve it.

SQUIRE SULLEN. A crime? 'oons, an't I married?

SIR CHARLES. Nay, sir, if you call a marriage a crime, you must disown it for a law.

SQUIRE SULLEN. Eh! I must be acquainted with you, sir.—But, sir, I should be very glad to know the truth of this matter.

SIR CHARLES. Truth, sir, is a profound sea, and few there be that dare wade deep enough to find out the bottom on't. Besides, sir, I'm afraid the line of your understanding mayn't be long enough.

SQUIRE SULLEN. Look'ee, sir, I have nothing to say to your sea of truth, but, if a good parcel of land can entitle a man to a little truth, I have as much as any He in the country.

BONIFACE. I never heard your worship, as the saying is, talk so much before.

SQUIRE SULLEN. Because I never met with a man that I liked before.

BONIFACE. Pray, sir, as the saying is, let me ask you one question: are not man and wife one flesh?

SIR CHARLES. You and your wife, Mr. Guts, may be one flesh, because ye are nothing else; but rational creatures have minds that must be united.

SQUIRE SULLEN. Minds!

SIR CHARLES. Ay, minds, sir; don't you think that the mind takes place of the body?

SQUIRE SULLEN. In some people.

SIR CHARLES. Then the interest of the master must be consulted before that of his servant.

SQUIRE SULLEN. Sir, you shall dine with me to-morrow!—'Oons, I always thought that we were naturally one.

SIR CHARLES. Sir, I know that my two hands are naturally one, because they love one another, kiss one another, help one another in all the actions of life; but I could not say so much if they were always at cuffs.

SQUIRE SULLEN. Then 'tis plain that we are two.

SIR CHARLES. Why don't you part with her, sir?

SQUIRE SULLEN. Will you take her, sir?

SIR CHARLES. With all my heart.

SQUIRE SULLEN. You shall have her to-morrow morning, and a venison-pasty into the bargain.

SIR CHARLES. You'll let me have her fortune too?

SQUIRE SULLEN. Fortune! why, sir, I have no quarrel at her fortune: I only hate the woman, sir, and none but the woman shall go.

SIR CHARLES. But her fortune, sir—

SQUIRE SULLEN. Can you play at whisk, sir?

SIR CHARLES. No, truly, sir.

SQUIRE SULLEN. Nor at all-fours?

SIR CHARLES. Neither.

SQUIRE SULLEN [aside]. 'Oons! where was this man bred?—[Aloud.] Burn me, sir! I can't go home, 'tis but two o'clock.

SIR CHARLES. For half an hour, sir, if you please; but you must consider 'tis late.

SQUIRE SULLEN. Late! that's the reason I can't go to bed.—Come, sir!

[Exeunt.]

[Enter CHERRY, runs across the stage, and knocks at AIMWELL'S chamber door. Enter AIMWELL in his nightcap and gown.]

AIMWELL. What's the matter? you tremble, child; you're frightened.

CHERRY. No wonder, sir—But, in short, sir, this very minute a gang of rogues are gone to rob my Lady Bountiful's house.

AIMWELL. How!

CHERRY. I dogged 'em to the very door, and left 'em breaking in.

AIMWELL. Have you alarmed anybody else with the news?

CHERRY. No, no, sir, I wanted to have discovered the whole plot, and twenty other things, to your man Martin; but I have searched the whole house, and can't find him: where is he?

AIMWELL. No matter, child; will you guide me immediately to the house?

CHERRY. With all my heart, sir; my Lady Bountiful is my godmother, and I love Mrs. Dorinda so well—

AIMWELL. Dorinda! the name inspires me, the glory and the danger shall be all my own.—Come, my life, let me but get my sword. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II—A bedchamber in LADY BOUNTIFUL'S house.

[MRS. SULLEN and DORINDA discovered undressed; a table and lights.]

DORINDA. 'Tis very late, sister, no news of your spouse yet?

MRS. SULLEN. No, I'm condemned to be alone till towards four, and then perhaps I may be executed with his company.

DORINDA. Well, my dear, I'll leave you to your rest; you'll go directly to bed, I suppose?

MRS. SULLEN. I don't know what to do.—Heigh-ho!

DORINDA. That's a desiring sigh, sister.

MRS. SULLEN. This is a languishing hour, sister.

DORINDA. And might prove a critical minute if the pretty fellow were here.

MRS. SULLEN. Here! what, in my bedchamber at two o'clock o' th' morning, I undressed, the family asleep, my hated husband abroad, and my lovely fellow at my feet!—O 'gad, sister!

DORINDA. Thoughts are free, sister, and them I allow you.—So, my dear, good night.

MRS. SULLEN. A good rest to my dear Dorinda!—[Exit DORINDA.] Thoughts free! are they so? Why, then suppose him here, dressed like a youthful, gay, and burning bridegroom, [Here ARCHER steals out of a closet behind.] with tongue enchanting, eyes bewitching, knees imploring.—[Turns a little on one side and sees ARCHER in the posture she describes.]—Ah!—[Shricks, and runs to the other side of the stage.] Have my thoughts raised a spirit?—What are you, sir, a man or a devil?

ARCHER. A man, a man, madam.

[Rising.]
MRS. SULLEN. How shall I be sure of it?

ARCHER. Madam, I'll give you demonstration this minute. [Takes her hand.]

MRS. SULLEN. What, sir! do you intend to be rude?

ARCHER. Yes, madam, if you please.

MRS. SULLEN. In the name of wonder, whence came ye?

ARCHER. From the skies, madam—I'm a Jupiter in love, and you shall be my Alcmena.

MRS. SULLEN. How came you in?

ARCHER. I flew in at the window, madam; your cousin Cupid lent me his wings, and your sister Venus opened the casement.

MRS. SULLEN. I'm struck dumb with wonder!

ARCHER. And I—with admiration!

[Looks passionately at her.]

MRS. SULLEN. What will become of me?

ARCHER. How beautiful she looks!—The teeming jolly Spring smiles in her blooming face, and, when she was conceived, her mother smelt to roses, looked on lilies—

Lilies unfold their white, their fragrant charms,

When the warm sun thus darts into their arms. [Runs to her.]

MRS. SULLEN. Ah! [Shricks.]

ARCHER. 'Oons, madam, what d'ye mean? you'll raise the house.

MRS. SULLEN. Sir, I'll wake the dead before I bear this!—What! approach me with the freedom of a keeper! I'm glad on't, your impudence has cured me.

ARCHER. If this be impudence—[Kneels.] I leave to your partial self; no panting pilgrim, after a tedious, painful voyage, e'er bowed before his saint with more devotion.

MRS. SULLEN [aside]. Now, now, I'm ruined if he kneels!—[Aloud.] Rise, thou prostrate engineer, not all thy undermining skill shall reach my heart.—Rise, and know I am a woman without my sex; I can love to all the tenderness of wishes, sighs, and tears—but go no farther.—Still, to convince you that I'm more than woman, I can speak my frailty, confess my weakness even for you, but—

ARCHER. For me!

[Going to lay hold on her.]

MRS. SULLEN. Hold, sir! build not upon that; for my most mortal hatred follows if you disobey what I command you now.—Leave me this minute.—[Aside.] If he denies I'm lost.

ARCHER. Then you'll promise—

MRS. SULLEN. Anything another time.

ARCHER. When shall I come?

MRS. SULLEN. To-morrow—when you will.

ARCHER. Your lips must seal the promise.

MRS. SULLEN. Psha!

ARCHER. They must! they must!—[Kisses her.] Raptures and paradise!—And why not now, my angel? the time, the place, silence, and secrecy, all conspire. And the now conscious stars have preordained this moment for my happiness. [Takes her in his arms.]

MRS. SULLEN. You will not! cannot, sure!

ARCHER. If the sun rides fast, and disappoints not mortals of to-morrow's dawn, this night shall crown my joys.

MRS. SULLEN. My sex's pride assist me!

ARCHER. My sex's strength help me!

MRS. SULLEN. You shall kill me first!

ARCHER. I'll die with you.

[Carrying her off.]

MRS. SULLEN. Thieves! thieves! murder!

[Enter SCRUB in his breeches, and one shoe.]

SCRUB. Thieves! thieves! murder! popery!

ARCHER. Ha! the very timorous stag will kill in rutting time.

[Draws, and offers to stab SCRUB.]

SCRUB [kneeling]. O pray, sir, spare all I have, and take my life!

MRS. SULLEN [holding ARCHER's hand]. What does the fellow mean?

SCRUB. O madam, down upon your knees, your marrow-bones!—he's one of 'em.

ARCHER. Of whom?

SCRUB. One of the rogues—I beg your pardon, one of the honest gentlemen that just now are broke into the house.

ARCHER. How!

MRS. SULLEN. I hope you did not come to rob me?

ARCHER. Indeed I did, madam, but I would have taken nothing but what you might ha' spared; but your crying "Thieves" has waked this dreaming fool, and so he takes 'em for granted.

SCRUB. Granted! 'tis granted, sir; take all we have.

MRS. SULLEN. The fellow looks as if he were broke out of Bedlam.

SCRUB. 'Oons, madam, they're broke into the house with fire and sword! I saw them, heard them; they'll be here this minute.

ARCHER. What, thieves!

SCRUB. Under favour, sir, I think so.

MRS. SULLEN. What shall we do, sir?

ARCHER. Madam, I wish your ladyship a good night.

MRS. SULLEN. Will you leave me?

ARCHER. Leave you! Lord, madam, did not you command me to be gone just now, upon pain of your immortal hatred?

MRS. SULLEN. Nay, but pray, sir—

[Takes hold of him.]

ARCHER. Ha! ha! ha! now comes my turn to be ravished.—You see now, madam, you must use men one way or other; but take this by the way, good madam, that none but a fool will give you the benefit of his courage, unless you'll take his love along with it.—How are they armed, friend?

SCRUB. With sword and pistol, sir.

ARCHER. Hush!—I see a dark lantern coming through the gallery.—Madam, be assured I will protect you, or lose my life.

MRS. SULLEN. Your life! no, sir, they can rob me of nothing that I value half so much; therefore now, sir, let me entreat you to be gone.

ARCHER. No, madam, I'll consult my own safety for the sake of yours; I'll work by stratagem. Have you courage enough to stand the appearance of 'em?

MRS. SULLEN. Yes, yes, since I have 'scaped your hands, I can face anything.

ARCHER. Come hither, brother Scrub! don't you know me?

SCRUB. Eh, my dear brother, let me kiss thee. [Kisses ARCHER.]

ARCHER. This way—here—

[ARCHER and SCRUB hide behind the bed.]

[Enter GIBBET, with a dark lantern in one hand, and a pistol in the other.]

GIBBET. Ay, ay, this is the chamber, and the lady alone.

MRS. SULLEN. Who are you, sir? what would you have? d'ye come to rob me?

GIBBET. Rob you! alack a day, madam, I'm only a younger brother, madam; and so, madam, if you make a noise, I'll shoot you through the head; but don't be afraid, madam.—[Laying his lantern and pistol upon the table.] These rings, madam; don't be concerned, madam, I have a profound respect for you, madam; your keys, madam; don't be frightened, madam, I'm the most of a gentleman.—[Searching her pockets.] This necklace, madam; I never was rude to any lady;—I have a veneration—for this necklace—

[Here ARCHER having come round, and seized the pistol, takes GIBBET by the collar, trips up his heels, and claps the pistol to his breast.]

ARCHER. Hold, profane villain, and take the reward of thy sacrilege!

GIBBET. Oh! pray, sir, don't kill me; I an't prepared.

ARCHER. How many is there of 'em, Scrub?

SCRUB. Five-and-forty, sir.

ARCHER. Then I must kill the villain, to have him out of the way.

GIBBET. Hold, hold, sir, we are but three, upon my honour.

ARCHER. Scrub, will you undertake to secure him?

SCRUB. Not I, sir; kill him, kill him!

ARCHER. Run to Gipsy's chamber, there you'll find the doctor; bring him hither presently.—[Exit SCRUB, running.] Come, rogue, if you have a short prayer, say it.

GIBBET. Sir, I have no prayer at all; the government has provided a chaplain to say prayers for us on these occasions.

MRS. SULLEN. Pray, sir, don't kill him: you fright me as much as him.

ARCHER. The dog shall die, madam, for being the occasion of my disappointment.—Sirrah, this moment is your last.

GIBBET. Sir, I'll give you two hundred pounds to spare my life.

ARCHER. Have you no more, rascal?

GIBBET. Yes, sir, I can command four hundred, but I must reserve two of 'em to save my life at the sessions.

[Reënter SCRUB and FOIGARD.]

ARCHER. Here, doctor, I suppose Scrub and you between you may manage him. Lay hold of him, doctor.

[FOIGARD lays hold of GIBBET.]

GIBBET. What! turned over to the priest already!—Look'ee, doctor, you come before your time; I an't condemned yet. I thank ye.

FOIGARD. Come, my dear joy, I will secure your body and your soul too; I will make you a good Catholic, and give you an absolution.

GIBBET. Absolution! can you procure me a pardon, doctor?

FOIGARD. No, joy.

GIBBET. Then you and your absolution may go to the devil.

ARCHER. Convey him into the cellar, there bind him:—take the pistol, and if he offers to resist, shoot him through the head—and come back to us with all the speed you can.

SCRUB. Ay, ay, come, doctor, do you hold him fast, and I'll guard him.

[Exit FOIGARD with GIBBET, SCRUB following.]

MRS. SULLEN. But how came the doctor—

ARCHER. In short, madam—[Shrieking without.] 'Sdeath! the rogues are at work with the other ladies—I'm vexed I parted with the pistol; but I must fly to their assistance.—Will you stay here, madam, or venture yourself with me?

MRS. SULLEN [taking him by the arm]. Oh, with you, dear sir, with you.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III—Another bedchamber in the same.

[Enter HOUNSLOW and BAGSHOT, with swords drawn, halting in LADY BOUNTIFUL and DORINDA.]

HOUNSLOW. Come, come, your jewels, mistress!

BAGSHOT. Your keys, your keys, old gentlewoman!

[Enter AIMWELL and CHERRY.]

AIMWELL. Turn this way, villains! I durst engage an army in such a cause.

[He engages them both.]

DORINDA. O madam, had I but a sword to help the brave man!

LADY BOUNTIFUL. There's three or four hanging up in the hall; but they won't draw. I'll go fetch one, however. [Exit.]

[Enter ARCHER and MRS. SULLEN.]

ARCHER. Hold, hold, my lord! every man his bird. pray.

[They engage man to man; HOUNSLOW and BAGSHOT are thrown and disarmed.]

CHERRY [aside]. What! the rogues taken! then they'll impeach my father: I must give him timely notice. [Runs out.]

ARCHER. Shall we kill the rogues?

AIMWELL. No, no, we'll bind them.

ARCHER. Ay, ay.—[To MRS. SULLEN, who stands by him.] Here, madam, lend me your garter.

MRS. SULLEN [aside]. The devil's in this fellow! he fights, loves, and banters, all in a breath.—[Aloud.] Here's a cord that the rogues brought with 'em, I suppose.

ARCHER. Right, right, the rogue's destiny, a rope to hang himself.—Come, my lord—this is but a scandalous sort of an office [binding the highwaymen together], if our adventures should end in this sort of hangman-work; but I hope there is something in prospect, that—

[Enter SCRUB.]

ARCHER. Well, Scrub, have you secured your Tartar?

SCRUB. Yes, sir, I left the priest and him disputing about religion.

AIMWELL. And pray carry these gentlemen to read the benefit of the controversy.

[Delivers the prisoners to SCRUB, who leads them out.]

MRS. SULLEN. Pray, sister, how came my lord here?

DORINDA. And pray, how came the gentleman here?

MRS. SULLEN. I'll tell you the greatest piece of villainy—

[They talk in dumb show.]

AIMWELL. I fancy, Archer, you have been more successful in your adventures than the housebreakers.

ARCHER. No matter for my adventure, yours is the principal.—Press her this minute to marry you—now while she's hurried between the palpitation of her fear and the joy of her deliverance, now while the tide of her spirits is at high-flood—throw yourself at her feet, speak some romantic nonsense or other—address her, like Alexander in the height of his victory, confound her senses, bear down her reason, and away with her.—The priest is now in the cellar, and dare not refuse to do the work.

[Reënter LADY BOUNTIFUL.]

AIMWELL. But how shall I get off without being observed?

ARCHER. You a lover, and not find a way to get off!—Let me see—

AIMWELL. You bleed, Archer.

ARCHER. 'Sdeath, I'm glad on't; this wound will do the business. I'll amuse the old lady and Mrs. Sullen about dressing my wound, while you carry off Dorinda.

LADY BOUNTIFUL. Gentlemen, could we understand how you would be gratified for the services—

ARCHER. Come, come, my lady, this is no time for compliments; I'm wounded, madam.

LADY BOUNTIFUL, MRS. SULLEN. How! wounded!

DORINDA. I hope, sir, you have received no hurt?

AIMWELL. None but what you may cure— [Makes love in dumb show.]

LADY BOUNTIFUL. Let me see your arm, sir—I must have some powder-sugar to stop the blood.—O me! an ugly gash; upon my word, sir, you must go into bed.

ARCHER. Ay, my lady, a bed would do very well.—[To MRS. SULLEN.] Madam, will you do me the favour to conduct me to a chamber.

LADY BOUNTIFUL. Do, do, daughter—while I get the lint and the probe and the plaster ready.

[Runs out one way, AIMWELL carries off DORINDA another.]

ARCHER. Come, madam, why don't you obey your mother's commands?

MRS. SULLEN. How can you, after what is passed, have the confidence to ask me?

ARCHER. And if you go to that, how can you, after what is passed, have the confidence to deny me? Was not this blood shed in your defence, and my life exposed for your protection. Look'ee, madam, I'm none of your romantic fools, that fight giants and monsters for nothing; my valour is downright Swiss; I'm a soldier of fortune, and must be paid.

MRS. SULLEN. 'Tis ungenerous in you, sir, to upbraid me with your services!

ARCHER. 'Tis ungenerous in you, madam, not to reward 'em.

MRS. SULLEN. How! at the expense of my honour?

ARCHER. Honour! can honour consist with ingratitude? If you would deal like a woman of honour, do like a man of honour. D'ye think I would deny you in such a case?

[Enter a SERVANT.]

SERVANT. Madam, my lady ordered me to tell you, that your brother is below at the gate. [Exit.]

MRS. SULLEN. My brother! Heavens be praised!—Sir, he shall thank you for your services; he has it in his power.

ARCHER. Who is your brother, madam?

MRS. SULLEN. Sir Charles Freeman.—You'll excuse me, sir; I must go and receive him. [Exit.]

ARCHER. Sir Charles Freeman! 'sdeath and hell! my old acquaintance. Now unless Aimwell has made good use of his time, all our fair machine goes souze into the sea like the Eddystone. [Exit.]

SCENE IV—The gallery in the same house.

[Enter AIMWELL and DORINDA.]

DORINDA. Well, well, my lord, you have conquered; your late generous action will, I hope, plead for my easy yielding; though I must own, your lordship had a friend in the fort before.

AIMWELL. The sweets of Hybla dwell upon her tongue!—Here, doctor—

[Enter FOIGARD, with a book.]

FOIGARD. Are you prepared boat?

DORINDA. I'm ready. But first, my lord, one word.—I have a frightful example of a hasty marriage in my own family; when I reflect upon't it shocks me. Pray, my lord, consider a little—

AIMWELL. Consider! do you doubt my honour or my love?

DORINDA. Neither: I do believe you equally just as brave: and were your whole sex drawn out for me to choose, I should not cast a look upon the multitude if you were absent. But, my lord, I'm a woman; colours, concealments may hide a thousand faults in me, therefore know me better first; I hardly dare affirm I know myself in anything except my love.

AIMWELL [aside]. Such goodness who could injure! I find myself unequal to the task of villain; she has gained my soul, and made it honest like her own.—I cannot, cannot hurt her.—[Aloud.] Doctor, retire.—[Exit FOIGARD.] Madam, behold your lover and your proselyte, and judge of my passion by my conversion!—I'm all a lie, nor dare I give a fiction to your arms; I'm all counterfeit, except my passion.

DORINDA. Forbid it, Heaven! a counterfeit!

AIMWELL. I am no lord, but a poor needy man, come with a mean, a scandalous design to prey upon your fortune; but the beauties of your mind and person have so won me from myself that, like a trusty servant, I prefer the interest of my mistress to my own.

DORINDA. Sure I have had the dream of some poor mariner, a sleepy image of a welcome port, and wake involved in storms!—Pray, sir, who are you?

AIMWELL. Brother to the man whose title I usurped, but stranger to his honour or his fortune.

DORINDA. Matchless honesty!—Once I was proud, sir, of your wealth and title, but now am prouder that you want it: now I can show my love was justly levelled, and had no aim but love.—Doctor, come in.

[Enter FOIGARD at one door, GIPSY at another, who whispers DORINDA.]

[To FOIGARD.] Your pardon, sir, we shan't want you now.—[To AIMWELL.] Sir, you must excuse me—I'll wait on you presently. [Exit with GIPSY.]

FOIGARD. Upon my shoul, now, dis is foolsh. [Exit.]

AIMWELL. Gone! and bid the priest depart!—It has an ominous look.

[Enter ARCHER.]

ARCHER. Courage, Tom!—Shall I wish you joy?

AIMWELL. No.

ARCHER. 'Oons, man, what ha' you been doing?

AIMWELL. O Archer! my honesty, I fear, has ruined me.

ARCHER. How?

AIMWELL. I have discovered myself.

ARCHER. Discovered! and without my consent? What! have I embarked my small remains in the same bottom with yours, and you dispose of all without my partnership?

AIMWELL. O Archer! I own my fault.

ARCHER. After conviction—'tis then too late for pardon.—You may remember, Mr. Aimwell, that you proposed this folly: as you begun, so end it. Henceforth I'll hunt my fortune single—so farewell!

AIMWELL. Stay, my dear Archer, but a minute.

ARCHER. Stay! what, to be despised, exposed, and laughed at! No, I would sooner change conditions with the worst of the rogues we just now bound, than bear one scornful smile from the proud knight that once I treated as my equal.

AIMWELL. What knight?

ARCHER. Sir Charles Freeman, brother to the lady that I had almost—but no matter for that, 'tis a cursed night's work, and so I leave you to make the best on't.

[Going.]

AIMWELL. Freeman!—One word, Archer. Still I have hopes; methought she received my confession with pleasure.

ARCHER. 'Sdeath, who doubts it?

AIMWELL. She consented after to the match; and still I dare believe she will be just.

ARCHER. To herself, I warrant her, as you should have been.

AIMWELL. By all my hopes she comes, and smiling comes!

[Reënter DORINDA, mighty gay.]

DORINDA. Come, my dear lord—I fly with impatience to your arms—the minutes of my absence were a tedious year. Where's this priest?

[Reënter FOIGARD.]

ARCHER. 'Oons, a brave girl!

DORINDA. I suppose, my lord, this gentleman is privy to our affairs?

ARCHER. Yes, yes, madam, I'm to be your father.

DORINDA. Come, priest, do your office.

ARCHER. Make haste, make haste, couple 'em any way.—[Takes AIMWELL'S hand.] Come, madam, I'm to give you—

DORINDA. My mind's altered; I won't.

ARCHER. Eh!

AIMWELL. I'm confounded!

FOIGARD. Upon my shoul, and sho is myself.

ARCHER. What's the matter now, madam?

DORINDA. Look'ee, sir, one generous action deserves another.—This gentleman's honour obliged him to hide nothing from me; my justice engages me to conceal nothing from him. In short, sir, you are the person that you thought you counterfeited; you are the true Lord Viscount Aimwell, and I wish your Lordship joy.—Now, priest, you may be gone; if my Lord is pleased now with the match, let his Lordship marry me in the face of the world.

AIMWELL, ARCHER. What does she mean?

DORINDA. Here's a witness for my truth.

[Enter SIR CHARLES FREEMAN and MRS. SULLEN.]

SIR CHARLES. My dear Lord Aimwell, I wish you joy.

AIMWELL. Of what?

SIR CHARLES. Of your honour and estate. Your brother died the day before I left London; and all your friends have writ after you to Brussels;—among the rest I did myself the honour.

ARCHER. Hark'ee, sir knight, don't you banter now?

SIR CHARLES. 'Tis truth, upon my honour.

AIMWELL. Thanks to the pregnant stars that formed this accident.

ARCHER. Thanks to the womb of time that brought it forth!—away with it!

AIMWELL. Thanks to my guardian angel that led me to the prize!

[Taking DORINDA's hand.]

ARCHER. And double thanks to the noble Sir Charles Freeman.—My Lord, I wish you joy.—My Lady, I wish you joy.—Egad, Sir Freeman, you're the honestest fellow living!—'Sdeath, I'm grown strange airy upon this matter!—My Lord, how d'ye?—A word, my Lord; don't you remember something of a previous agreement, that entitles me to the moiety of this lady's fortune, which I think will amount to five thousand pounds?

AIMWELL. Not a penny, Archer; you would ha' cut my throat just now, because I would not deceive this lady.

ARCHER. Ay, and I'll cut your throat again, if you should deceive her now.

AIMWELL. That's what I expected; and to end the dispute, the lady's fortune is ten thousand pounds, we'll divide stakes: take the ten thousand pounds or the lady.

DORINDA. How! is your Lordship so indifferent?

ARCHER. No, no, no, madam! his Lordship knows very well that I'll take the money; I leave you to his Lordship, and so we're both provided for.

[Enter COUNT BELLAIR.]

COUNT BELLAIR. Mesdames et Messieurs, I am your servant trice humble! I hear you be rob here.

AIMWELL. The ladies have been in some danger, sir.

COUNT BELLAIR. And, begar, our inn be rob too!

AIMWELL. Our inn! by whom?

COUNT BELLAIR. By the landlord, begar!—Garzoon, he has rob himself, and run away!

ARCHER. Robbed himself!

COUNT BELLAIR. Ay, begar, and me too of a hundre pound.

ARCHER. A hundred pounds?

COUNT BELLAIR. Yes, that I owed him.

AIMWELL. Our money's gone, Frank.

ARCHER. Rot the money! my wench is gone.—[To COUNT BELLAIR.] Savez-vous quelquechose de Mademoiselle Cherry?

[Enter a COUNTRYMAN with a strong-box and a letter.]

COUNTRYMAN. Is there one Martin here?

ARCHER. Ay, ay—who wants him?

COUNTRYMAN. I have a box here, and letter for him.

ARCHER [taking the box]. Ha! ha! ha!

what's here? Legerdemain!—By this light, my lord, our money again!—But this unfolds the riddle.—[Opening the letter.] Hum, hum, hum!—Oh, 'tis for the public good, and must be communicated to the company. [Reads.]

“MR. MARTIN.—My father being afraid of an impeachment by the rogues that are taken to-night, is gone off; but if you can procure him a pardon, he'll make great discoveries that may be useful to the country. Could I have met you instead of your master to-night, I would have delivered myself into your hands, with a sum that much exceeds that in your strong-box, which I have sent you, with an assurance to my dear Martin that I shall ever be his most faithful friend till death.—CHERRY BONIFACE.”

There's a billet-doux for you! As for the father, I think he ought to be encouraged; and for the daughter—pray, my Lord, persuade your bride to take her into her service instead of Gipsy.

AIMWELL. I can assure you, madam, your deliverance was owing to her discovery.

DORINDA. Your command, my Lord, will do without the obligation. I'll take care of her.

SIR CHARLES. This good company meets opportunely in favour of a design I have in behalf of my unfortunate sister. I intend to part her from her husband—gentlemen, will you assist me?

ARCHER. Assist you! 'sdeath, who would not?

COUNT BELLAIR. Assist! garzoon, we all assist!

[Enter SQUIRE SULLEN.]

SQUIRE SULLEN. What's all this? They tell me, spouse, that you had like to have been robbed.

MRS. SULLEN. Truly, spouse, I was pretty near it, had not these two gentlemen interposed.

SQUIRE SULLEN. How came these gentlemen here?

MRS. SULLEN. That's his way of returning thanks, you must know.

COUNT BELLAIR. Garzoon, the question be apropos for all dat.

SIR CHARLES. You promised last night, sir, that you would deliver your lady to me this morning.

SQUIRE SULLEN. Humph!

ARCHER. Humph! what do you mean by humph? Sir, you shall deliver her—in short, sir, we have saved you and your family; and if you are not civil, we'll unbind the rogues, join with 'em, and set fire to your house. What does the man mean? not part with his wife!

COUNT BELLAIR. Ay, garzoon, de man no understand common justice.

MRS. SULLEN. Hold, gentlemen, all things here must move by consent, compulsion would spoil us; let my dear and I talk the matter over, and you shall judge it between us.

SQUIRE SULLEN. Let me know first who are to be our judges. Pray, sir, who are you?

SIR CHARLES. I am Sir Charles Freeman, come to take away your wife.

SQUIRE SULLEN. And you, good sir?

AIMWELL. Thomas, Viscount Aimwell, come to take away your sister.

SQUIRE SULLEN. And you, pray, sir?

ARCHER. Francis Archer, esquire, come—

SQUIRE SULLEN. To take away my mother, I hope. Gentlemen, you're heartily welcome; I never met with three more obliging people since I was born!—And now, my dear, if you please, you shall have the first word.

ARCHER. And the last, for five pounds!

MRS. SULLEN. Spouse!

SQUIRE SULLEN. Rib!

MRS. SULLEN. How long have we been married?

SQUIRE SULLEN. By the almanac, fourteen months; but by my account, fourteen years.

MRS. SULLEN. 'Tis thereabout by my reckoning.

COUNT BELLAIR. Garzoon, their account will agree.

MRS. SULLEN. Pray, spouse, what did you marry for?

SQUIRE SULLEN. To get an heir to my estate.

SIR CHARLES. And have you succeeded?

SQUIRE SULLEN. No.

ARCHER. The condition fails of his side.—Pray, madam, what did you marry for?

MRS. SULLEN. To support the weakness of my sex by the strength of his, and to enjoy the pleasures of an agreeable society.

SIR CHARLES. Are your expectations answered?

MRS. SULLEN. No.

COUNT BELLAIR. A clear case! a clear case!

SIR CHARLES. What are the bars to your mutual contentment?

MRS. SULLEN. In the first place, I can't drink ale with him.

SQUIRE SULLEN. Nor can I drink tea with her.

MRS. SULLEN. I can't hunt with you.

SQUIRE SULLEN. Nor can I dance with you.

MRS. SULLEN. I hate cocking and racing.

SQUIRE SULLEN. And I abhor ombre and piquet.

MRS. SULLEN. Your silence is intolerable.

SQUIRE SULLEN. Your prating is worse.

MRS. SULLEN. Have we not been a perpetual offence to each other? a gnawing vulture at the heart?

SQUIRE SULLEN. A frightful goblin to the sight?

MRS. SULLEN. A porcupine to the feeling?

SQUIRE SULLEN. Perpetual wormwood to the taste?

MRS. SULLEN. Is there on earth a thing we could agree in.

SQUIRE SULLEN. Yes—to part.

MRS. SULLEN. With all my heart.

SQUIRE SULLEN. Your hand.

MRS. SULLEN. Here.

SQUIRE SULLEN. These hands joined us, these shall part us.—Away!

MRS. SULLEN. North.

SQUIRE SULLEN. South.

MRS. SULLEN. East.

SQUIRE SULLEN. West—far as the poles asunder.

COUNT BELLAIR. Begar, the ceremony be vera pretty!

SIR CHARLES. Now, Mr. Sullen, there wants only my sister's fortune to make us easy.

SQUIRE SULLEN. Sir Charles, you love your sister, and I love her fortune; every one to his fancy.

ARCHER. Then you won't refund?

SQUIRE SULLEN. Not a stiver.

ARCHER. Then I find, madam, you must e'en go to your prison again.

COUNT BELLAIR. What is the portion?

SIR CHARLES. Ten thousand pounds, sir.

COUNT BELLAIR. Garzoon, I'll pay it, and she shall go home wid me.

ARCHER. Ha! ha! ha! French all over.—Do you know, sir, what ten thousand pounds English is?

COUNT BELLAIR. No, begar, not justement.

ARCHER. Why, sir, 'tis a hundred thousand livres.

COUNT BELLAIR. A hundre tousand livres! Ah! garzoon, me canno' do't, your beauties and their fortunes are both too much for me.

ARCHER. Then I will.—This night's adventure has proved strangely lucky to us all—for Captain Gibbet in his walk had made bold, Mr. Sullen, with your study and escriptoir, and had taken out all the writings of your estate, all the articles of marriage with this lady, bills, bonds, leases, receipts to an infinite value: I took 'em from him, and I deliver 'em to Sir Charles.

[Gives SIR CHARLES FREEMAN a parcel of papers and parchments.]

SQUIRE SULLEN. How, my writings!—my head aches consumedly.—Well, gentlemen, you shall have her fortune, but I can't talk. If you have a mind, Sir Charles, to be merry, and celebrate my sister's wedding and my divorce, you may command my house—but my head aches consumedly.—Scrub, bring me a dram.

ARCHER [to MRS. SULLEN]. Madam, there's a country dance to the trifle that I sung to-day; your hand, and we'll lead it up.

[Here a dance.]

'Twould be hard to guess which of these parties is the better pleased, the couple joined, or the couple parted; the one rejoicing in hopes of an untasted happiness, and the other in their deliverance from an experienced misery.

Both happy in their several states we find, Those parted by consent, and those conjoined.

Consent, if mutual, saves the lawyer's fee.

Consent is law enough to set you free.

PROLOGUE

BY DAVID GARRICK, ESQ.

[Enter Mr. WOODWARD, dressed in black and holding a handkerchief to his eyes.]

PROLOGUE. Excuse me, sirs, I pray—I can't yet speak—
I'm crying now—and have been all the week.
"Tis not alone this mourning suit," good masters;
"I've that within," for which there are no plasters!

Pray, would you know the reason why I'm crying?
The Comic Muse, long sick, is now a-dying!
And if she goes, my tears will never stop;
For, as a player, I can't squeeze out one drop:
I am undone, that's all—shall lose my bread—
I'd rather, but that's nothing—lose my head.
When the sweet maid is laid upon the bier,
Shuter and I shall be chief mourners here.
To her a mawkish drab of spurious breed,

Who deals in sentimentals, will succeed!
 Poor Ned and I are dead to all intents;
 We can as soon speak Greek as sentiments!

Both nervous grown, to keep our spirits
 up,

We now and then take down a hearty cup.
 What shall we do? If Comedy forsake us, They'll turn us out, and no one else will take us.

But why can't I be moral?—Let me try—
 My heart thus pressing—fix'd my face and eye—

With a sententious look, that nothing means

(Faces are blocks in sentimental scenes), Thus I begin: "All is not gold that glitters,

Pleasures seem sweet, but prove a glass of bitters.

When ign'rance enters, folly is at hand:
 Learning is better far than house and
 land.

Let not your virtue trip; who trips may
 stumble,

And virtue is not virtue, if she tumble."
 I give it up—morals won't do for me;
 To make you laugh, I must play tragedy.
 One hope remains—hearing the maid was
 ill,

A Doctor comes this night to show his skill;

To cheer her heart, and give your muscles motion,

He, in Five Draughts prepar'd, presents
 a potion:

A kind of magic charm—for, be assur'd,
 If you will swallow it, the maid is cur'd:
 But desperatè the Doctor. and her case
 is.

If you reject the dose, and make wry faces!

This truth he boasts, will boast it while he lives,

No pois'nous drugs are mix'd in what he gives,

Should he succeed, you'll give him his degree;

If not, within he will receive no fee!
 The College you, must his pretensions
 back,

Pronounce him Regular, or dub him
 Quack.

ACT I

SCENE I—*A chamber in an old-fashioned
 house.*

[Enter MRS. HARDCASTLE and MR. HARDCASTLE.]

MRS. HARDCASTLE. I vow, Mr. Harcastle, you're very particular. Is there a creature in the whole country but ourselves, that does not take a trip to town now and then, to rub off the rust a little?
 There's the two Miss Hoggs, and our neighbour Mrs. Grigsby, go to take a month's polishing every winter.

HARDCASTLE. Ay, and bring back vanity and affectation to last them the whole year. I wonder why London cannot keep its own fools at home. In my time, the follies of the town crept slowly among us, but now they travel faster than a stage coach. Its fopperies come down not only as inside passengers, but in the very basket.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Ay, your times were fine times indeed; you have been telling us of them for many a long year. Here we live in an old rumbling mansion, that looks for all the world like an inn, but that we never see company. Our best visitors are old Mrs. Oddfish, the curate's wife, and little Cripple-gate, the lame dancing master; and all our entertainment your old stories of Prince Eugene and the Duke of Marlborough. I hate such old-fashioned trumpery.

HARDCASTLE. And I love it. I love everything that's old: old friends, old times, old manners, old books, old wine;
 and, I believe, Dorothy [Taking her hand], you'll own, I've been pretty fond of an old wife.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Lord, Mr. Harde-castle, you're for ever at your Dorothys, and your old wives. You may be a Darby, but I'll be no Joan, I promise you. I'm not so old as you'd make me, by more than one good year. Add twenty to twenty, and make money of that.

HARDCASTLE. Let me see; twenty added to twenty—makes just fifty and seven.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. It's false, Mr. Hardcastle; I was but twenty when I was brought to bed of Tony, that I had by Mr. Lumpkin, my first husband; and he's not come to years of discretion yet.

HARDCASTLE. Nor ever will, I dare answer for him. Ay, you have taught him finely.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. No matter. Tony Lumpkin has a good fortune. My son is not to live by his learning. I don't think a boy wants much learning to spend fifteen hundred a year.

HARDCASTLE. Learning, quotha! a mere composition of tricks and mischief.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Humour, my dear; nothing but humour. Come, Mr. Hardcastle, you must allow the boy a little humour.

HARDCASTLE. I'd sooner allow him a horsepond. If burning the footmen's shoes, frightening the maids, and worrying the kittens, be humour, he has it. It was but yesterday he fastened my wig to the back of my chair, and when I went to make a bow, I popt my bald head in Mrs. Frizzle's face.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. And am I to blame? The poor boy was always too sickly to do any good. A school would be his death. When he comes to be a little stronger, who knows what a year or two's Latin may do for him?

HARDCASTLE. Latin for him! A cat and fiddle. No, no; the alehouse and the stable are the only schools he'll ever go to.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Well, we must not snub the poor boy now, for I believe we shan't have him long among us. Anybody that looks in his face may see he's consumptive.

HARDCASTLE. Ay, if growing too fat be one of the symptoms.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. He coughs sometimes.

HARDCASTLE. Yes, when his liquor goes the wrong way.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. I'm actually afraid of his lungs.

HARDCASTLE. And truly, so am I; for he sometimes whoops like a speaking trumpet—[TONY hallooing behind the scenes.]—Oh, there he goes—a very sumptive figure, truly!

[Enter TONY crossing the stage.]

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Tony, where are you going, my charmer? Won't you give papa and I a little of your company, lovee?

TONY. I'm in haste, mother; I cannot stay.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. You shan't venture out this raw evening, my dear; you look most shockingly.

TONY. I can't stay, I tell you. The Three Pigeons expects me down every moment. There's some fun going forward.

HARDCASTLE. Ay; the alehouse, the old place; I thought so.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. A low, paltry set of fellows.

TONY. Not so low, neither. There's Dick Muggins, the exciseman; Jack Slang, the horse-doctor; little Aminadab, that grinds the music-box; and Tom Twist, that spins the pewter platter.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Pray, my dear, disappoint them for one night, at least.

TONY. As for disappointing them, I should not so much mind; but I can't abide to disappoint myself.

MRS. HARDCASTLE [detaining him]. You shan't go.

TONY. I will, I tell you.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. I say you shan't.

TONY. We'll see which is strongest, you or I. [Exit, hauling her out.]

HARDCASTLE [alone]. Ay, there goes a pair that only spoil each other. But is not the whole age in combination to drive sense and discretion out of doors? There's my pretty darling, Kate! the fashions of the times have almost infected her too. By living a year or two in town, she is as fond of gauze and French frippery as the best of them.

[Enter MISS HARDCASTLE.]

HARDCASTLE. Blessings on my pretty innocence! drest out as usual, my Kate. Goodness! What a quantity of superfluous silk hast thou got about thee, girl! I could never teach the fools of this age, that the indigent world could be clothed out of the trimmings of the vain.

MISS HARDCASTLE. You know our agreement, sir. You allow me the morning to receive and pay visits, and to dress in my own manner; and in the evening, I put on my housewife's dress, to please you.

HARDCASTLE. Well, remember, I insist on the terms of our agreement; and, by the bye, I believe I shall have occasion to try your obedience this very evening.

MISS HARDCASTLE. I protest, sir, I don't comprehend your meaning.

HARDCASTLE. Then, to be plain with you, Kate, I expect the young gentleman I have chosen to be your husband from town this very day. I have his father's letter, in which he informs me his son is set out, and that he intends to follow himself shortly after.

MISS HARDCASTLE. Indeed! I wish I had known something of this before. Bless me, how shall I behave? It's a thousand to one I shan't like him; our meeting will be so formal, and so like a thing of business, that I shall find no room for friendship or esteem.

HARDCASTLE. Depend upon it, child, I'll never control your choice; but Mr. Marlow, whom I have pitched upon, is the son of my old friend, Sir Charles Marlow, of whom you have heard me talk so often. The young gentleman has been bred a scholar, and is designed for an employment in the service of his country. I am told he's a man of an excellent understanding.

MISS HARDCASTLE. Is he?

HARDCASTLE. Very generous.

MISS HARDCASTLE. I believe I shall like him.

HARDCASTLE. Young and brave.

MISS HARDCASTLE. I'm sure I shall like him.

HARDCASTLE. And very handsome.

MISS HARDCASTLE. My dear papa, say no more [kissing his hand], he's mine—I'll have him.

HARDCASTLE. And, to crown all, Kate, he's one of the most bashful and reserved young fellows in all the world.

MISS HARDCASTLE. Eh! You have frozen me to death again. That word reserved has undone all the rest of his accomplishments. A reserved lover, it is said, always makes a suspicious husband.

HARDCASTLE. On the contrary, modesty seldom resides in a breast that is not enriched with nobler virtues. It was the very feature in his character that first struck me.

MISS HARDCASTLE. He must have more striking features to catch me, I promise you. However, if he be so young, so handsome, and so everything, as you mention, I believe he'll do still. I think I'll have him.

HARDCASTLE. Ay, Kate, but there is still an obstacle. It's more than an even wager he may not have you.

MISS HARDCASTLE. My dear papa, why will you mortify one so?—Well, if he refuses, instead of breaking my heart at his indifference, I'll only break my glass for its flattery, set my cap to some newer fashion, and look out for some less difficult admirer.

HARDCASTLE. Bravely resolved! In the mean time, I'll go prepare the servants for his reception: as we seldom see company, they want as much training as a company of recruits the first day's muster. [Exit.]

MISS HARDCASTLE [alone]. Lud, this news of papa's puts me all in a flutter. Young, handsome; these he put last; but I put them foremost. Sensible, good-natured; I like all that. But then, reserved and sheepish; that's much against him. Yet, can't he be cured of his timidity by being taught to be proud of his wife? Yes, and can't I—But I vow I'm disposing of the husband before I have secured the lover.

[Enter Miss NEVILLE.]

MISS HARDCASTLE. I'm glad you're come, Neville, my dear. Tell me, Constance, how do I look this evening? Is there anything whimsical about me? Is it one of my well-looking days, child? Am I in face to-day?

MISS NEVILLE. Perfectly, my dear. Yet now I look again—bless me!—surely no accident has happened among the canary birds or the gold fishes? Has your brother or the cat been meddling? Or has the last novel been too moving?

MISS HARDCASTLE. No; nothing of all this. I have been threatened—I can scarce get it out—I have been threatened with a lover.

MISS NEVILLE. And his name—

MISS HARDCASTLE. Is Marlow.

MISS NEVILLE. Indeed!

MISS HARDCASTLE. The son of Sir Charles Marlow.

MISS NEVILLE. As I live, the most intimate friend of Mr. Hastings, my admirer. They are never asunder. I believe you must have seen him when we lived in town.

MISS HARDCASTLE. Never.

MISS NEVILLE. He's a very singular character, I assure you. Among women of reputation and virtue, he is the modestest man alive; but his acquaintance gives him a very different character among creatures of another stamp: you understand me.

MISS HARDCASTLE. An odd character, indeed. I shall never be able to manage him. What shall I do? Pshaw, think no more of him, but trust to occurrences for success. But how goes on your own affair, my dear? Has my mother been courting you for my brother Tony, as usual?

MISS NEVILLE. I have just come from one of our agreeable tête-à-têtes. She has been saying a hundred tender things, and setting off her pretty monster as the very pink of perfection.

MISS HARDCASTLE. And her partiality is such, that she actually thinks him so. A fortune like yours is no small temptation. Besides, as she has the sole management of it, I'm not surprised to see her unwilling to let it go out of the family.

MISS NEVILLE. A fortune like mine, which chiefly consists in jewels, is no such mighty temptation. But, at any rate, if my dear Hastings be but constant, I make no doubt to be too hard for her at last. However, I let her suppose that I am in love with her son; and she never once dreams that my affections are fixed upon another.

MISS HARDCASTLE. My good brother holds out stoutly. I could almost love him for hating you so.

MISS NEVILLE. It is a good-natured creature at bottom, and I'm sure would wish to see me married to anybody but himself. But my aunt's bell rings for our afternoon's walk round the improvements. Allons! Courage is necessary, as our affairs are critical.

MISS HARDCASTLE. Would it were bedtime, and all were well. [Exit.]

SCENE II—An alehouse room.

[Several shabby fellows with punch and tobacco. TONY, at the head of the table, a little higher than the rest, a mallet in his hand.]

OMNES. Hurree! hurree! hurree! bravo!

1ST FELLOW. Now, gentlemen, silence for a song. The 'Squire is going to knock himself down for a song.

OMNES. Ay, a song, a song!

TONY. Then I'll sing you, gentlemen, a song I made upon this alehouse, The Three Pigeons.

SONG

Let schoolmasters puzzle their brain
With grammar, and nonsense, and learning;
Good liquor, I stoutly maintain,
Gives genus a better discerning.
Let them brag of their heathenish gods,
Their Lethes, their Styxes, and Stygians,

Their Quis, and their Quæs, and their Quods,

They're all but a parcel of Pigeons.

Toroddle, toroddle, toroll.

When methodist preachers come down,
A-preaching that drinking is sinful,
I'll wager the rascals a crown,

They always preach best with a skin-
ful.

But when you come down with your pence,
For a slice of their scurvy religion,
I'll leave it to all men of sense,

But you, my good friend, are the Pigeon.

Toroddle, toroddle, toroll.

Then come, put the jorum about,
And let us be merry and clever,
Our hearts and our liquors are stout,
Here's the Three Jolly Pigeons for ever.

Let some cry up woodcock or hare,
Your bustards, your ducks, and your widgeons;

But of all the birds in the air,
Here's a health to the Three Jolly Pigeons.

Toroddle, toroddle, toroll.

OMNES. Bravo, bravo!

1ST FELLOW. The 'Squire has got some spunk in him.

2ND FELLOW. I loves to hear him sing, bekeays he never gives us nothing that's
low.

3RD FELLOW. O! damn anything that's low, I cannot bear it.

4TH FELLOW. The genteel thing is the genteel thing any time: if so be that a gentleman bees in a concatenation accordingly.

3RD FELLOW. I like the maxum of it,
Master Muggins. What, though I am obligated to dance a bear, a man may be a gentleman for all that. May this be my poison, if my bear ever dances but to the very genteelest of tunes: "Water Parted," or "The minuet in Ariadne."

2ND FELLOW. What a pity it is the 'Squire is not come to his own. It would be well for all the publicans within ten miles round of him.

TONY. Ecod, and so it would, Master Slang. I'd then show what it was to keep choice of company.

2ND FELLOW. O, he takes after his own father for that. To be sure, old 'Squire Lumpkin was the finest gentleman I ever set my eyes on. For winding the straight horn, or beating a thicket for a hare, or a wench, he never had his fellow. It was a saying in the place, that he kept the best horses, dogs, and girls, in the whole county.

TONY. Ecod, and when I'm of age I'll be no bastard, I promise you. I have been thinking of Bet Bouncer and the miller's gray mare to begin with. But come, my boys, drink about and be merry, for you pay no reckoning. Well, Stingo, what's the matter?

[Enter LANDLORD.]

LANDLORD. There be two gentlemen in a post-chaise at the door. They have lost their way upo' the forest; and they are talking something about Mr. Hardcastle.

TONY. As sure as can be, one of them must be the gentleman that's coming down to court my sister. Do they seem to be Londoners?

LANDLORD. I believe they may. They look woundily like Frenchmen.

TONY. Then desire them to step this way, and I'll set them right in a twinkling. [Exit LANDLORD.] Gentlemen, as they mayn't be good enough company for you, step down for a moment, and I'll be with you in the squeezing of a lemon.

[Execunt MOB.]

TONY [alone]. Father-in-law has been calling me whelp and hound this half year. Now, if I pleased, I could be so revengeed upon the old grumbletonian.
But then I'm afraid,—afraid of what?
I shall soon be worth fifteen hundred a year, and let him frighten me out of that if he can.

[Enter LANDLORD, conducting MARLOW and HASTINGS.]

MARLOW. What a tedious, uncomfortable day have we had of it! We were told it was but forty miles across the country, and we have come above three-score!

HASTINGS. And all, Marlow, from that unaccountable reserve of yours, that would not let us inquire more frequently on the way.

MARLOW. I own, Hastings, I am unwilling to lay myself under an obligation to every one I meet; and often stand the chance of an unmannerly answer.

HASTINGS. At present, however, we are not likely to receive any answer.

TONY. No offence, gentlemen. But I'm told you have been inquiring for one Mr. Hardcastle, in these parts. Do you know what part of the country you are in?

HASTINGS. Not in the least, sir, but should thank you for information.

TONY. Nor the way you came?

HASTINGS. No, sir; but if you can inform us—

TONY. Why, gentlemen, if you know neither the road you are going, nor where you are, nor the road you came, the first thing I have to inform you is, that—you have lost your way.

MARLOW. We wanted no ghost to tell us that.

TONY. Pray, gentlemen, may I be so bold as to ask the place from whence you came?

MARLOW. That's not necessary towards directing us where we are to go.

TONY. No offence; but question for question is all fair, you know. Pray, gentlemen, is not this same Hardcastle a cross-grained, old-fashioned, whimsical fellow, with an ugly face: a daughter, and a pretty son?

HASTINGS. We have not seen the gentleman; but he has the family you mention.

TONY. The daughter, a tall, trapesing, troloping, talkative maypole; the son, a pretty, well-bred, agreeable youth, that every body is fond of!

MARLOW. Our information differs in this. The daughter is said to be well-bred, and beautiful; the son, an awkward booby, reared up and spoiled at his mother's apron-string.

TONY. He-he-hem!—Then, gentlemen, all I have to tell you is, that you won't reach Mr. Hardcastle's house this night, I believe.

HASTINGS. Unfortunate!

TONY. It's a damn'd long, dark, boggy, dirty, dangerous way. Stingo, tell the gentlemen the way to Mr. Hardcastle's;—[Winking upon the LANDLORD.], Mr. Hardcastle's of Quagmire Marsh, you understand me?

LANDLORD. Master Hardcastle's! Lack-a-daisy, my masters, you're come a deadly deal wrong. When you came to the bottom of the hill, you should have crossed down Squash Lane.

MARLOW. Cross down Squash Lane!

LANDLORD. Then you were to keep straight forward, till you came to four roads.

MARLOW. Come to where four roads meet?

TONY. Ay; but you must be sure to take only one of them

MARLOW. O, sir, you're facetious.

TONY. Then, keeping to the right, you are to go sideways till you come upon Crack-skull Common; there you must look sharp for the track of the wheel, and go forward till you come to Farmer Murrain's barn. Coming to the farmer's barn, you are to turn to the right, and then to the left, and then to the right about again, till you find out the old mill—

MARLOW. Zounds, man! we could as soon find out the longitude.

HASTINGS. What's to be done, Marlow?

MARLOW. This house promises but a poor reception; though, perhaps, the landlord can accommodate us.

LANDLORD. Alack, master, we have but one spare bed in the whole house.

TONY. And to my knowledge, that's taken up by three lodgers already. [After a pause in which the rest seem disconcerted.] I have hit it. Don't you think, Stingo, our landlady could accommodate the gentlemen by the fireside, with—three chairs and a bolster?

HASTINGS. I hate sleeping by the fire-side.

MARLOW. And I detest your three chairs and a bolster.

TONY. You do, do you?—then, let me see—what if you go on a mile further, to the Buck's Head; the old Buck's Head on the hill, one of the best inns in the whole country?

HASTINGS. O ho! so we have escaped an adventure for this night, however.

LANDLORD [apart to TONY]. Sure, you ben't sending them to your father's as an inn, be you?

TONY. Mum, you fool, you. Let them find that out. [To them.] You have only to keep on straight forward, till you come to a large old house by the road side. You'll see a pair of large horns over the door. That's the sign. Drive up the yard, and call stoutly about you.

HASTINGS. Sir, we are obliged to you. The servants can't miss the way?

TONY. No, no; but I tell you, though, the landlord is rich, and going to leave off business; so he wants to be thought a gentleman, saving your presence,—he! he! he! He'll be for giving you his company; and, ecod, if you mind him, he'll persuade you that his mother was an alderman, and his aunt a justice of peace.

LANDLORD. A troublesome old blade, to be sure; but a keeps as good wines and beds as any in the whole country.

MARLOW. Well, if he supplies us with these, we shall want no further connexion. We are to turn to the right, did you say?

TONY. No, no, straight forward. I'll just step myself, and show you a piece of the way. [To the LANDLORD.] Mum!

LANDLORD. Ah, bless your heart, for a sweet, pleasant, mischievous son.

[Exeunt.]

ACT II

SCENE I—An old-fashioned house.

[Enter HARDCASTLE, followed by three or four awkward SEEVANTS.]

HARDCASTLE. Well, I hope you are perfect in the table exercise I have been teaching you these three days. You all know your posts and your places, and can show that you have been used to good company, without ever stirring from home.

OMNES. Ay, ay.

HARDCASTLE. When company comes, you are not to pop out and stare, and then run in again, like frightened rabbits in a warren.

OMNES. No, no.

HARDCASTLE. You, Diggory, whom I have taken from the barn, are to make a show at the side table; and you, Roger, whom I have advanced from the plough, are to place yourself behind my chair. But you're not to stand so, with your hands in your pockets. Take your hands from your pockets, Roger; and from your head, you blockhead, you. See how Diggory carries his hands. They're a little too stiff, indeed, but that's no great matter.

DIGGORY. Ay, mind how I hold them. I learned to hold my hands this way, when I was upon drill for the militia. And so being upon drill—

HARDCASTLE. You must not be so talkative, Diggory. You must be all attention to the guests. You must hear us talk, and not think of talking; you must see us drink, and not think of drinking; you must see us eat, and not think of eating.

DIGGORY. By the laws, your worship, that's perfectly unpossible. Whenever Diggory sees yeating going forward, ecod, he's always wishing for a mouthful himself.

HARDCASTLE. Blockhead! Is not a belly-full in the kitchen as good as a belly-full in the parlour? Stay your stomach with that reflection.

DIGGORY. Ecod, I thank your worship, I'll make a shift to stay my stomach with a slice of cold beef in the pantry.

HARDCASTLE. Diggory, you are too talkative. Then, if I happen to say a good thing, or tell a good story at table, you must not all burst out a-laughing, as if you made part of the company.

DIGGORY. Then, ecod, your worship must not tell the story of the Ould Grouse in the gun-room: I can't help laughing at that—he! he! he!—for the soul of me! We have laughed at that these twenty years—ha! ha! ha!

HARDCASTLE. Ha! ha! ha! The story is a good one. Well, honest Diggory, you may laugh at that—but still remember to be attentive. Suppose one of the company should call for a glass of wine, how will you behave? A glass of wine, sir, if you please, [To DIGGORY.].—Eh, why don't you move?

DIGGORY. Ecod, your worship, I never have courage till I see the eatables and drinkables brought upo' the table, and then I'm as bauld as a lion.

HARDCASTLE. What, will nobody move?

1ST SERVANT. I'm not to leave this pleace.

2ND SERVANT. I'm sure it's no pleace of mine.

3RD SERVANT. Nor mine, for sartain.

DIGGORY. Wauns, and I'm sure it canna mine.

HARDCASTLE. You numskulls! and so, while, like your betters, you are quarrelling for places, the guests must be starved. O you dunces! I find I must begin all over again—But don't I hear a coach drive into the yard? To your posts, you blockheads! I'll go in the meantime and give my old friend's son a hearty reception at the gate. [Exit HARDCASTLE.]

DIGGORY. By the elevens, my pleace is quite gone out of my head.

ROGER. I know that my pleace is to be every where.

1ST SERVANT. Where the devil is mine?

2ND SERVANT. My pleace is to be no where at all; and so Ize go about my business.

[Exeunt SERVANTS, running about as if frightened, several ways.]

[Enter SERVANT, with candles, showing in MARLOW and HASTINGS.]

SERVANT. Welcome, gentlemen, very welcome! This way.

HASTINGS. After the disappointments of the day, welcome once more, Charles, to the comforts of a clean room and a good fire. Upon my word, a very well-looking house; antique but creditable.

MARLOW. The usual fate of a large mansion. Having first ruined the master by good house-keeping, it at last comes to levy contributions as an inn.

HASTINGS. As you say, we passengers are to be taxed to pay all these fineries. I have often seen a good side-board, or a marble chimney-piece, though not actually put in the bill, inflame a reckoning confoundedly.

MARLOW. Travellers, George, must pay in all places; the only difference is, that in good inns you pay dearly for luxuries; in bad inns you are fleeced and starved.

HASTINGS. You have lived pretty much among them. In truth, I have been often surprised, that you who have seen so much of the world, with your natural good sense, and your many opportunities, could never yet acquire a requisite share of assurance.

MARLOW. The Englishman's malady. But tell me, George, where could I have learned that assurance you talk of? My life has been chiefly spent in a college, or an inn, in seclusion from that lovely part of the creation that chiefly teach men confidence. I don't know that I was ever familiarly acquainted with a single modest woman—except my mother—But among females of another class, you know—

HASTINGS. Ay, among them you are impudent enough, of all conscience!

MARLOW. They are of us, you know.

HASTINGS. But in the company of women of reputation I never saw such an idiot, such a trembler; you look for all the world as if you wanted an opportunity of stealing out of the room.

MARLOW. Why, man, that's because I do want to steal out of the room. Faith, I have often formed a resolution to break the ice, and rattle away at any rate. But I don't know how, a single glance from a pair of fine eyes has totally upset my resolution. An impudent fellow may counterfeit modesty, but I'll be hanged if a modest man can ever counterfeit impudence.

HASTINGS. If you could but say half the fine things to them that I have heard you lavish upon the barmaid of an inn, or even a college bed-maker—

MARLOW. Why, George, I can't say fine things to them; they freeze, they petrify me. They may talk of a comet, or a burning mountain, or some such bagatelle; but to me a modest woman, drest out in all her finery, is the most tremendous object of the whole creation.

HASTINGS. Ha! ha! ha! At this rate, man, how can you ever expect to marry?

MARLOW. Never; unless, as among kings and princes, my bride were to be courted by proxy. If, indeed, like an Eastern bridegroom, one were to be introduced to a wife he never saw before, it might be endured. But to go through all the terrors of a formal courtship, together with the episode of aunts, grandmothers, and cousins, and at last to blurt out the broad staring question of, "Madam, will you marry me?" No, no, that's a strain much above me, I assure you.

HASTINGS. I pity you. But how do you intend behaving to the lady you are come down to visit at the request of your father?

MARLOW. As I behave to all other ladies. Bow very low, answer yes or no to all her demands—But for the rest, I don't think I shall venture to look in her face till I see my father's again.

HASTINGS. I'm surprised that one who is so warm a friend can be so cool a lover.

MARLOW. To be explicit, my dear Hastings, my chief inducement down was to be instrumental in forwarding your happiness, not my own. Miss Neville loves you, the family don't know you; as my friend you are sure of a reception, and let honour do the rest.

HASTINGS. My dear Marlow! But I'll suppress the emotion. Were I a wretch, meanly seeking to carry off a fortune, you should be the last man in the world I would apply to for assistance. But Miss Neville's person is all I ask, and that is mine, both from her deceased father's consent, and her own inclination.

MARLOW. Happy man! You have talents and art to captivate any woman. I'm doomed to adore the sex, and yet to converse with the only part of it I despise. This stammer in my address, and this awkward, prepossessing visage of mine can never permit me to soar above the reach of a milliner's 'prentice, or one of the duchesses of Drury Lane. Pshaw! this fellow here to interrupt us.

[Enter HARDCASTLE.]

HARDCASTLE. Gentlemen, once more you are heartily welcome. Which is Mr. Marlow? Sir, you are heartily welcome. It's not my way, you see, to receive my friends with my back to the fire. I like to give them a hearty reception in the old style at my gate. I like to see their horses and trunks taken care of.

MARLOW [aside]. He has got our names from the servants already. [To him.] We approve your caution and hospitality, sir. [To HASTINGS.] I have been thinking, George, of changing our travelling dresses in the morning. I am grown confidently ashamed of mine.

HARDCASTLE. I beg, Mr. Marlow, you'll use no ceremony in this house.

HASTINGS. I fancy. George, you're right; the first blow is half the battle. I intend opening the campaign with the white and gold.

HARDCASTLE. Mr. Marlow—Mr. Hastings—gentlemen—pray be under no restraint in this house. This is Liberty-hall, gentlemen. You may do just as you please here.

MARLOW. Yet, George, if we open the campaign too fiercely at first, we may want ammunition before it is over. I think to reserve the embroidery to secure a retreat.

HARDCASTLE. Your talking of a retreat, Mr. Marlow, puts me in mind of the Duke of Marlborough, when we went to besiege

Denain. He first summoned the garrison—

MARLOW. Don't you think the ventre d'or waistcoat will do with the plain brown?

HARDCASTLE. He first summoned the garrison, which might consist of about five thousand men—

HASTINGS. I think not: brown and yellow mix but very poorly.

HARDCASTLE. I say, gentlemen, as I was telling you, he summoned the garrison, which might consist of about five thousand men—

MARLOW. The girls like finery.

HARDCASTLE. Which might consist of about five thousand men, well appointed with stores, ammunition, and other implements of war. "Now," says the Duke of Marlborough to George Brooks, that stood next to him—you must have heard of George Brooks—"I'll pawn my dukedom," says he, "but I take that garrison without spilling a drop of blood." So—

MARLOW. What, my good friend, if you gave us a glass of punch in the meantime; it would help us to carry on the siege with vigour.

HARDCASTLE. Punch, sir! [Aside.] This is the most unaccountable kind of modesty I ever met with.

MARLOW. Yes, sir, punch! A glass of warm punch, after our journey, will be comfortable. This is Liberty-hall, you know.

HARDCASTLE. Here's a cup, sir.

MARLOW [aside]. So this fellow, in his Liberty-hall, will only let us have just what he pleases.

HARDCASTLE [taking the cup]. I hope you'll find it to your mind. I have prepared it with my own hands, and I believe you'll own the ingredients are tolerable. Will you be so good as to pledge me, sir? Here, Mr. Marlow, here is to our better acquaintance! [Drinks.]

MARLOW [aside]. A very impudent fellow this. But he's a character, and I'll humour him a little. Sir, my service to you. [Drinks.]

HASTINGS [aside]. I see this fellow wants to give us his company, and forgets that he's an innkeeper, before he has learned to be a gentleman.

MARLOW. From the excellence of your cup, my old friend, I suppose you have a good deal of business in this part of the country. Warm work, now and then, at elections, I suppose?

HARDCASTLE. No, sir, I have long given that work over. Since our betters have hit upon the expedient of electing each other, there is no business "for us that sell ale."

HASTINGS. So, then, you have no turn for politics, I find.

HARDCASTLE. Not in the least. There was a time, indeed, I fretted myself about the mistakes of government, like other people; but, finding myself every day grow more angry, and the government growing no better, I left it to mend itself. Since that, I no more trouble my head about Hyder Ally, or Ally Cawn, than about Ally Croaker. Sir, my service to you.

HASTINGS. So that, with eating above stairs, and drinking below, with receiving your friends within, and amusing them without, you lead a good, pleasant, bustling life of it.

HARDCASTLE. I do stir about a great deal, that's certain. Half the differences of the parish are adjusted in this very parlour.

MARLOW [after drinking]. And you have an argument in your cup, old gentleman, better than any in Westminster-hall.

HARDCASTLE. Ay, young gentleman, that, and a little philosophy.

MARLOW [aside]. Well, this is the first time I ever heard of an innkeeper's philosophy.

HASTINGS. So then, like an experienced general, you attack them on every quarter. If you find their reason manageable, you attack it with your philosophy; if you find they have no reason, you attack them with this. Here's your health, my philosopher. [Drinks.]

HARDCASTLE. Good, very good, thank you; ha! ha! Your generalship puts me in mind of Prince Eugene, when he fought the Turks at the battle of Belgrade. You shall hear.

MARLOW. Instead of the battle of Belgrade, I believe it's almost time to talk about supper. What has your philosophy got in the house for supper?

HARDCASTLE. For supper, sir!—[Aside]. Was ever such a request to a man in his own house!

MARLOW. Yes, sir, supper, sir; I begin to feel an appetite. I shall make devilish work to-night in the larder, I promise you.

HARDCASTLE [aside]. Such a brazen dog, sure, never my eyes beheld. [To him.] Why, really, sir, as for supper I can't well tell. My Dorothy and the cook-maid settle these things between them. I leave these kind of things entirely to them.

MARLOW. You do, do you?

HARDCASTLE. Entirely. By the bye, I believe they are in actual consultation upon what's for supper this moment in the kitchen.

MARLOW. Then I beg they'll admit me as one of their privy-council. It's a way I have got. When I travel I always choose to regulate my own supper. Let the cook be called. No offence, I hope, sir.

HARDCASTLE. O, no, sir, none in the least; yet I don't know how: our Bridget, the cook-maid, is not very communicative upon these occasions. Should we send for her, she might scold us all out of the house.

HASTINGS. Let's see your list of the larder, then. I ask it as a favour. I always match my appetite to my bill of fare.

MARLOW [to HARDCASTLE, who looks at them with surprise]. Sir, he's very right, and it's my way, too.

HARDCASTLE. Sir, you have a right to command here. Here, Roger, bring us the bill of fare for to-night's supper: I believe it's drawn out. [Exit ROGER.] Your manner, Mr. Hastings, puts me in mind of my uncle, Colonel Wallop. It was a saying of his, that no man was sure of his supper till he had eaten it.

HASTINGS [aside]. All upon the high ropes! His uncle a colonel! We shall soon hear of his mother being a justice of the peace. [Reënter ROGER.] But let's hear the bill of fare.

MARLOW [perusing]. What's here? For the first course; for the second course; for the dessert. The devil, sir, do you think we have brought down the whole Joiners' Company, or the Corporation of Bedford, to eat up such a supper? Two or three little things, clean and comfortable, will do.

HASTINGS. 'But let's hear it.

MARLOW [reading]. For the first course, at the top, a pig, and pruin sauce.

HASTINGS. Damn your pig, I say!

MARLOW. And damn your pruin sauce, say I!

HARDCASTLE. And yet, gentlemen, to men that are hungry, pig with pruin sauce is very good eating.

MARLOW. At the bottom, a calf's tongue and brains.

HASTINGS. Let your brains be knocked out, my good sir, I don't like them.

MARLOW. Or you may clap them on a plate by themselves. I do.

HARDCASTLE [aside]. Their impudence confounds me. [To them.] Gentlemen, you are my guests, make what alterations you please. Is there anything else you wish to retrench or alter, gentlemen?

MARLOW. Item: A pork pie, a boiled rabbit and sausages, a Florentine, a shaking pudding, and a dish of tiff—taff—taffety cream!

HASTINGS. Confound your made dishes! I shall be as much at a loss in this house as at a green and yellow dinner at the French ambassador's table. I'm for plain eating.

HARDCASTLE. I'm sorry, gentlemen, that I have nothing you like, but if there be any thing you have a particular fancy to—

MARLOW. Why, really, sir, your bill of fare is so exquisite, that any one part of it is full as good as another. Send us what you please. So much for supper.

And now to see that our beds are aired, and properly taken care of.

HARDCASTLE. I entreat you'll leave all that to me. You shall not stir a step.

MARLOW. Leave that to you! I protest, sir, you must excuse me, I always look to these things myself.

HARDCASTLE. I must insist, sir, you'll make yourself easy on that head.

MARLOW. You see I'm resolved on it.—
[Aside.] A very troublesome fellow this, as ever I met with.

HARDCASTLE. Well, sir, I'm resolved at least to attend you. [Aside.] This may be modern modesty, but I never saw any thing look so like old-fashioned impudence.

[Exeunt MARLOW and HARDCASTLE.]

HASTINGS [alone]. So I find this fellow's civilities begin to grow troublesome. But who can be angry at those assiduities which are meant to please him? Ha! what do I see? Miss Neville, by all that's happy!

[Enter MISS NEVILLE.]

MISS NEVILLE. My dear Hastings! To what unexpected good fortune, to what accident, am I to ascribe this happy meeting?

HASTINGS. Rather let me ask the same question, as I could never have hoped to meet my dearest Constance at an inn.

MISS NEVILLE. An inn! sure you mistake: my aunt, my guardian, lives here. What could induce you to think this house an inn.

HASTINGS. My friend, Mr. Marlow, with whom I came down, and I, have been sent here as to an inn, I assure you. A young fellow, whom we accidentally met at a house hard by, directed us hither.

MISS NEVILLE. Certainly it must be one of my hopeful cousin's tricks, of whom you have heard me talk so often; ha! ha! ha!

HASTINGS. He whom your aunt intends for you? he of whom I have such just apprehensions?

MISS NEVILLE. You have nothing to fear from him, I assure you. You'd adore him if you knew how heartily he despises me. My aunt knows it too, and has undertaken to court me for him, and actually begins to think she has made a conquest.

HASTINGS. Thou dear dissembler! You must know, my Constance, I have just seized this happy opportunity of my friend's visit here to get admittance into the family. The horses that carried us down are now fatigued with their journey, but they'll soon be refreshed; and, then, if my dearest girl will trust in her faithful Hastings, we shall soon be landed in France, where even among the slaves the laws of marriage are respected.

MISS NEVILLE. I have often told you, that though ready to obey you, I yet should leave my little fortune behind with reluctance. The greatest part of it was left me by my uncle, the India director, and chiefly consists in jewels. I have been for some time persuading my aunt to let me wear them. I fancy I'm very near succeeding. The instant they are put into my possession, you shall find me ready to make them and myself yours.

HASTINGS. Perish the baubles! Your person is all I desire. In the meantime, my friend Marlow must not be let into his mistake. I know the strange reserve of his temper is such, that if abruptly informed of it, he would instantly quit the house before our plan was ripe for execution.

MISS NEVILLE. But how shall we keep him in the deception? Miss Hardcastle is just returned from walking; what if we still continue to deceive him?—This, this way—
[They confer.]

[Enter MARLOW.]

MARLOW. The assiduities of these good people tease me beyond bearing. My host seems to think it ill manners to leave me alone, and so he claps not only himself but his old-fashioned wife on my back. They talk of coming to sup with us, too; and then, I suppose, we are to run the gauntlet through all the rest of the family.—What have we got here?

HASTINGS. My dear Charles! Let me congratulate you!—The most fortunate accident!—Who do you think is just alighted?

MARLOW. Cannot guess.

HASTINGS. Our mistresses, boy, Miss Hardcastle and Miss Neville. Give me leave to introduce Miss Constance Neville to your acquaintance. Happening to dine in the neighborhood, they called on their return to take fresh horses here. Miss Hardcastle has just stepped into the next room, and will be back in an instant. Wasn't it lucky? eh!

MARLOW [aside]. I have just been mortified enough of all conscience, and here comes something to complete my embarrassment.

HASTINGS. Well, but wasn't it the most fortunate thing in the world?

MARLOW. Oh, yes! Very fortunate—a most joyful encounter—But our dresses, George, you know, are in disorder—What if we should postpone the happiness till to-morrow?—To-morrow, at her own house—It will be every bit as convenient—and rather more respectful—To-morrow let it be. [Offering to go.]

MISS NEVILLE. By no means, sir. Your ceremony will displease her. The disorder of your dress will show the ardour of your impatience. Besides, she knows you are in the house, and will permit you to see her.

MARLOW. Oh, the devil! How shall I support it? Hem! hem! Hastings, you must not go. You are to assist me, you know. I shall be confoundedly ridiculous. Yet, hang it! I'll take courage. Hem!

HASTINGS. Pshaw, man! it's but the first plunge, and all's over. She's but a woman, you know.

MARLOW. And, of all women, she that I dread most to encounter.

[Enter MISS HARDCASTLE, as returned from walking, a bonnet, etc.]

HASTINGS [introducing them]. Miss Hardcastle, Mr. Marlow; I'm proud of bringing two persons of such merit together, that only want to know, to esteem each other.

MISS HARDCASTLE [aside]. Now for meeting my modest gentleman with a demure face, and quite in his own manner. [After a pause, in which he appears very uneasy and disconcerted.] I'm glad of your safe arrival, sir—I'm told you had some accidents by the way.

MARLOW. Only a few, madam. Yes, we had some. Yes, madam, a good many accidents, but should be sorry—madam—or rather glad of any accidents—that are so agreeably concluded. Hem!

HASTINGS [to him]. You never spoke better in your whole life. Keep it up, and I'll insure you the victory.

MISS HARDCASTLE. I'm afraid you flatter, sir. You that have seen so much of the finest company can find little entertainment in an obscure corner of the country.

MARLOW [gathering courage]. I have lived, indeed, in the world, madam; but I have kept very little company. I have been but an observer upon life, madam, while others were enjoying it.

MISS NEVILLE. But that, I am told, is the way to enjoy it at last.

HASTINGS [to him]. Cicero never spoke better. Once more, and you are confirmed in assurance for ever.

MARLOW [to him]. Hem! Stand by me then, and when I'm down, throw in a word or two to set me up again.

MISS HARDCASTLE. An observer, like you, upon life, were, I fear, disagreeably employed, since you must have had much more to censure than to approve.

MARLOW. Pardon me, madam. I was always willing to be amused. The folly of most people is rather an object of mirth than uneasiness.

HASTINGS [to him]. Bravo, bravo. Never spoke so well in your whole life. Well, Miss Hardcastle, I see that you and Mr. Marlow are going to be very good company. I believe our being here will but embarrass the interview.

MARLOW. Not in the least, Mr. Hastings. We like your company of all things.

[To him.] Zounds, George, sure you won't go? how can you leave us?

HASTINGS. Our presence will but spoil conversation, so we'll retire to the next room. [To him.] You don't consider, man, that we are to manage a little tête-à-tête of our own. [Exeunt.]

MISS HARDCASTLE [after a pause]. But you have not been wholly an observer, I presume, sir: the ladies, I should hope, have employed some part of your addresses.

MARLOW [relapsing into timidity]. Pardon me, madam, I—I—I—as yet have studied—only—to—deserve them.

MISS HARDCASTLE. And that, some say, is the very worst way to obtain them.

MARLOW. Perhaps so, madam. But I love to converse only with the more grave and sensible part of the sex.—But I'm afraid I grow tiresome.

MISS HARDCASTLE. Not at all, sir; there is nothing I like so much as grave conversation myself; I could hear it for ever. Indeed, I have often been surprised how a man of sentiment could ever admire those light, airy pleasures, where nothing reaches the heart.

MARLOW. It's—a disease—of the mind, madam. In the variety of tastes there must be some who, wanting a relish—for um—a—um—

MISS HARDCASTLE. I understand you, sir. There must be some, who, wanting a relish for refined pleasures, pretend to despise what they are incapable of tasting.

MARLOW. My meaning, madam, but infinitely better expressed. And I can't help observing—a—

MISS HARDCASTLE [aside]. Who could ever suppose this fellow impudent upon some occasions! [To him.] You were going to observe, sir—

MARLOW. I was observing, madam—I protest, madam, I forget what I was going to observe.

MISS HARDCASTLE [aside]. I vow and so do I. [To him.] You were observing, sir, that in this age of hypocrisy—something about hypocrisy, sir.

MARLOW. Yes, madam. In this age of hypocrisy there are few who upon strict inquiry do not—a—a—a—

MISS HARDCASTLE. I understand you perfectly, sir.

MARLOW [aside]. Egad! and that's more than I do myself.

MISS HARDCASTLE. You mean that, in this hypocritical age, there are a few who do not condemn in public what they practise in private, and think they pay every debt to virtue when they praise it.

MARLOW. True, madam; those who have most virtue in their mouths have least of it in their bosoms. But I'm sure I tire you, madam.

MISS HARDCASTLE. Not in the least, sir; there's something so agreeable and spirited in your manner, such life and force—pray, sir, go on.

MARLOW. Yes, madam, I was saying—that there are some occasions—when a total want of courage, madam, destroys all the—and puts us—upon—a—a—a—

MISS HARDCASTLE. I agree with you entirely; a want of courage upon some occasions assumes the appearance of ignorance, and betrays us when we most want to excel. I beg you'll proceed.

MARLOW. Yes, madam. Morally speaking, madam—but I see Miss Neville expecting us in the next room. I would not intrude for the world.

MISS HARDCASTLE. I protest, sir, I never was more agreeably entertained in all my life. Pray, go on.

MARLOW. Yes, madam, I was—But she beckons us to join her. Madam, shall I do myself the honour to attend you?

MISS HARDCASTLE. Well, then, I'll follow.

MARLOW [aside]. This pretty smooth dialogue has done for me. [Exit.]

MISS HARDCASTLE [alone]. Ha! ha! ha! Was there ever such a sober, sentimental interview? I'm certain he scarce looked in my face the whole time. Yet the fellow, but for his unaccountable bashfulness, is pretty well too. He has good sense, but then so buried in his fears, that it fatigues one more than ignorance.

If I could teach him a little confidence, it would be doing somebody that I know of a piece of service. But who is that somebody?—That, faith, is a question I can scarce answer. [Exit.]

[Enter TONY and MISS NEVILLE, followed by MRS. HARDCASTLE and HASTINGS.]

TONY. What do you follow me for, cousin Con? I wonder you're not ashamed to be so very engaging.

MISS NEVILLE. I hope, cousin, one may speak to one's own relations, and not be to blame.

TONY. Ay, but I know what sort of a relation you want to make me, though; but it won't do. I tell you, cousin Con, it won't do; so I beg you'll keep your distance. I want no nearer relationship. [She follows, coquetting him, to the back scene.]

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Well! I vow, Mr. Hastings, you are very entertaining. There's nothing in the world I love to talk of so much as London, and the fashions, though I was never there myself.

HASTINGS. Never there! You amaze me! From your air and manner, I concluded you had been bred all your life either at Ranelagh, St. James's, or Tower Wharf.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. O, sir! you're only pleased to say so. We country persons can have no manner at all. I'm in love with the town, and that serves to raise me above some of our neighbouring rustics; but who can have a manner that has never seen the Pantheon, the Grotto Gardens, the Borough, and such places where the nobility chiefly resort? All I can do is to enjoy London at second-hand. I take care to know every tête-à-tête from the Scandalous Magazine, and have all the fashions, as they come out, in a letter from the two Miss Ricketts of Crooked Lane. Pray, how do you like this head, Mr. Hastings?

HASTINGS. Extremely elegant and depaycé, upon my word, madam. Your friseur is a Frenchman. I suppose?

MRS. HARDCASTLE. I protest, I dressed it myself from a print in the Ladies' Memorandum-book for the last year.

HASTINGS. Indeed! Such a head in a side-box, at the play-house, would draw as many gazers as my Lady Mayoress at a City Ball.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. I vow, since inoculation began, there is no such thing to be seen as a plain woman; so one must dress a little particular, or one may escape in the crowd.

HASTINGS. But that can never be your case, madam, in any dress. [Bowing.]

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Yet, what signifies my dressing, when I have such a piece of antiquity by my side as Mr. Hardcastle: all I can say will never argue down a single button from his clothes. I have often wanted him to throw off his great flaxen wig, and where he was bald, to plaster it over, like my Lord Pately, with powder.

HASTINGS. You are right, madam; for, as among the ladies there are none ugly, so among the men there are none old.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. But what do you think his answer was? Why, with his usual Gothic vivacity, he said I only wanted him to throw off his wig to convert it into a tête for my own wearing!

HASTINGS. Intolerable! At your age you may wear what you please, and it must become you.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Pray, Mr. Hastings, what do you take to be the most fashionable age about town?

HASTINGS. Some time ago, forty was all the mode; but I'm told the ladies intend to bring up fifty for the ensuing winter.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Seriously? Then I shall be too young for the fashion!

HASTINGS. No lady begins now to put on jewels till she's past forty. For instance, miss there, in a polite circle, would be considered as a child, a mere maker of samplers.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. And yet Mrs. Niece thinks herself as much a woman, and is as fond of jewels, as the oldest of us all.

HASTINGS. Your niece, is she? And that young gentleman,—a brother of yours, I should presume?

MRS. HARDCASTLE. My son, sir. They are contracted to each other. Observe their little sports. They fall in and out ten times a-day, as if they were man and wife already. [To them.] Well, Tony, child, what soft things are you saying to your cousin Constance, this evening?

TONY. I have been saying no soft things; but that it's very hard to be followed about so. Ecod! I've not a place in the house now that's left to myself, but the stable.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Never mind him, Con, my dear. He's in another story behind your back.

MISS NEVILLE. There's something generous in my cousin's manner. He falls out before faces to be forgiven in private.

TONY. That's a damned confounded—crack.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Ah! he's a sly one. Don't you think they're like each other about the mouth, Mr. Hastings? The Blenkinsop mouth to a T. They're of a size too. Back to back, my pretties, that Mr. Hastings may see you. Come, Tony.

TONY. You had as good not make me, I tell you. [Measuring.]

MISS NEVILLE. O lud! he has almost cracked my head.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. O, the monster! For shame, Tony. You a man, and behave so!

TONY. If I'm a man, let me have my fortin. Ecod! I'll not be made a fool of no longer.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Is this, ungrateful boy, all that I'm to get for the pains I have taken in your education? I that have rocked you in your cradle, and fed that pretty mouth with a spoon! Did not I work that waistcoat to make you genteel? Did not I prescribe for you every day, and weep while the receipt was operating?

TONY. Ecod! you had reason to weep, for you have been dosing me ever since I was born. I have gone through every receipt in the Complete Huswife ten times over; and you have thoughts of coursing me through Quincy next spring. But, ecod! I tell you, I'll not be made a fool of no longer.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Wasn't it all for your good, viper? Wasn't it all for your good?

TONY. I wish you'd let me and my good alone, then. Snubbing this way when I'm in spirits! If I'm to have any good, let it come of itself; not to keep dinging it, dinging it into one so.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. That's false; I never see you when you're in spirits. No, Tony, you then go to the ale-house or kennel. I'm never to be delighted with your agreeable wild notes, unfeeling monster!

TONY. Ecod! mamma, your own notes are the wildest of the two.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Was ever the like? But I see he wants to break my heart, I see he does.

HASTINGS. Dear madam, permit me to lecture the young gentleman a little. I'm certain I can persuade him to his duty.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Well! I must retire. Come, Constance, my love. You see, Mr. Hastings, the wretchedness of my situation: was ever poor woman so plagued with a dear, sweet, pretty, provoking, undutiful boy.

[Exeunt Mrs. HARDCASTLE and MISS NEVILLE.]

[HASTINGS, TONY.]

TONY [singing]. "There was a young man riding by, and fain would have his will. Rang do didlo dee." Don't mind her. Let her cry. It's the comfort of her heart. I have seen her and sister cry over a book for an hour together, and they said they liked the book the better the more it made them cry.

HASTINGS. Then you're no friend to the ladies, I find, my pretty young gentleman?

TONY. That's as I find 'um.

HASTINGS. Not to her of your mother's choosing, I dare answer? And yet she appears to me a pretty well-tempered girl.

TONY. That's because you don't know her as well as I. Ecod! I know every inch about her; and there's not a more bitter cantankerous toad in all Christendom!

HASTINGS [aside]. Pretty encouragement this for a lover!

TONY. I have seen her since the height of that. She has as many tricks as a hare in a thicket, or a colt the first day's breaking.

HASTINGS. To me she appears sensible and silent!

TONY. Ay, before company. But when she's with her playmates, she's as loud as a hog in a gate.

HASTINGS. But there is a meek modesty about her that charms me.

TONY. Yes, but curb her never so little, she kicks up, and you're flung in a ditch.

HASTINGS. Well, but you must allow her a little beauty.—Yes, you must allow her some beauty.

TONY. Bandbox! She's all a made-up thing, mun. Ah! could you but see Bet Bouncer of these parts, you might then talk of beauty. Ecod! she has two eyes as black as sloes, and cheeks as broad and red as a pulpit cushion. She'd make two of she.

HASTINGS. Well, what say you to a friend that would take this bitter bargain off your hands?

TONY. Anon!

HASTINGS. Would you thank him that would take Miss Neville, and leave you to happiness and your dear Betsy?

TONY. Ay; but where is there such a friend, for who would take her?

HASTINGS. I am he. If you but assist me, I'll engage to whip her off to France, and you shall never hear more of her.

TONY. Assist you! Ecod, I will, to the last drop of my blood. I'll clap a pair of horses to your chaise that shall trundle you off in a twinkling, and may be get you a part of her fortin besides, in jewels, that you little dream of.

HASTINGS. My dear 'Squire, this looks like a lad of spirit.

TONY. Come along, then, and you shall see more of my spirit before you have done with me. [Singing.]

"We are the boys

That fears no noise,

Where the thundering cannons roar."

[Exeunt.]

ACT III

SCENE I—The house.

[Enter HARDCASTLE, alone.]

HARDCASTLE. What could my old friend Sir Charles mean by recommending his son as the modestest young man in town? To me he appears the most impudent piece of brass that ever spoke with a tongue. He has taken possession of the easy chair by the fire-side already. He took his boots off in the parlour, and desired me to see them taken care of. I'm desirous to know how his impudence affects my daughter.—She will certainly be shocked at it.

[Enter MISS HARDCASTLE, plainly dressed.]

HARDCASTLE. Well, my Kate, I see you have changed your dress, as I bid you; and yet, I believe, there was no great occasion.

MISS HARDCASTLE. I find such a pleasure, sir, in obeying your commands, that I take care to observe them without ever debating their propriety.

HARDCASTLE. And yet, Kate, I sometimes give you some cause, particularly when I recommended my modest gentleman to you as a lover to-day.

MISS HARDCASTLE. You taught me to expect something extraordinary, and I find the original exceeds the description.

HARDCASTLE. I was never so surprised in my life! He has quite confounded all my faculties!

MISS HARDCASTLE. I never saw anything like it; and a man of the world, too!

HARDCASTLE. Ay, he learned it all abroad,—what a fool was I, to think a young man could learn modesty by traveling. He might as soon learn wit at a masquerade.

MISS HARDCASTLE. It seems all natural to him.

HARDCASTLE. A good deal assisted by bad company and a French dancing-master.

MISS HARDCASTLE. Sure, you mistake, papa! A French dancing-master could never have taught him that timid look,—that awkward address,—that bashful manner—

HARDCASTLE. Whose look? whose manner, child?

MISS HARDCASTLE. Mr. Marlow's: his mauvaise honte, his timidity, struck me at the first sight.

HARDCASTLE. Then your first sight deceived you; for I think him one of the most brazen first sights that ever astonished my senses.

MISS HARDCASTLE. Sure, sir, you rally! I never saw any one so modest.

HARDCASTLE. And can you be serious! I never saw such a bouncing, swaggering puppy since I was born. Bully Dawson was but a fool to him.

MISS HARDCASTLE. Surprising! He met me with a respectful bow, a stammering voice, and a look fixed on the ground.

HARDCASTLE. He met me with a loud voice, a lordly air, and a familiarity that made my blood freeze again.

MISS HARDCASTLE. He treated me with diffidence and respect; censured the manners of the age; admired the prudence of girls that never laughed; tired me with apologies for being tiresome; then left the room with a bow, and "Madam, I would not for the world detain you."

HARDCASTLE. He spoke to me as if he knew me all his life before; asked twenty questions, and never waited for an answer; interrupted my best remarks with some silly pun; and when I was in my best story of the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene, he asked if I had not a good hand at making punch. Yes, Kate, he asked your father if he was a maker of punch.

MISS HARDCASTLE. One of us must certainly be mistaken.

HARDCASTLE. If he be what he has shown himself, I'm determined he shall never have my consent.

MISS HARDCASTLE. And if he be the sullen thing I take him, he shall never have mine.

HARDCASTLE. In one thing, then, we are agreed—to reject him.

MISS HARDCASTLE. Yes—but upon conditions. For if you should find him less impudent, and I more presuming; if you find him more respectful, and I more importunate—I don't know—the fellow is well enough for a man—Certainly we don't meet many such at a horse-race in the country.

HARDCASTLE. If we should find him so—But that's impossible. The first appearance has done my business. I'm seldom deceived in that.

MISS HARDCASTLE. And yet there may be many good qualities under that first appearance.

HARDCASTLE. Ay, when a girl finds a fellow's outside to her taste, she then sets about guessing the rest of his furniture. With her, a smooth face stands for good sense, and a genteel figure for every virtue.

MISS HARDCASTLE. I hope, sir, a conversation begun with a compliment to my good sense won't end with a sneer at my understanding?

HARDCASTLE. Pardon me, Kate. But if young Mr. Brazen can find the art of reconciling contradictions, he may please us both, perhaps.

MISS HARDCASTLE. And as one of us must be mistaken, what if we go to make further discoveries?

HARDCASTLE. Agreed. But depend on't, I'm in the right.

MISS HARDCASTLE. And, depend on't, I'm not much in the wrong. [Exeunt.]

[Enter TONY, running in with a casket.]

TONY. Ecod! I have got them. Here they are. My cousin Con's necklaces, bobs and all. My mother shan't cheat the poor souls out of their fortin neither. O, my genus! is that you?

[Enter HASTINGS.]

HASTINGS. My dear friend, how have you managed with your mother? I hope you have amused her with pretending love for your cousin, and that you are willing to be reconciled at last? Our horses will be refreshed in a short time, and we shall soon be ready to set off.

TONY. And here's something to bear your charges by the way,—[giving the casket] your sweetheart's jewels. Keep them; and hang those, I say, that would rob you of one of them!

HASTINGS. But how have you procured them from your mother?

TONY. Ask me no questions, and I'll tell you no fibs. I procured them by the rule of thumb. If I had not a key to every drawer in mother's bureau, how could I go to the alehouse so often as I do? An honest man may rob himself of his own at any time.

HASTINGS. Thousands do it every day. But to be plain with you; Miss Neville is endeavouring to procure them from her aunt this very instant. If she succeeds, it will be the most delicate way at least of obtaining them.

TONY. Well, keep them, until you know how it will be. But I know how it will be well enough; she'd as soon part with the only sound tooth in her head.

HASTINGS. But I dread the effects of her resentment when she finds she has lost them.

TONY. Never you mind her resentment, leave me to manage that. I don't value her resentment the bounce of a cracker. Zounds! here they are! Morrice! Prance!

[Exit HASTINGS.]

[TONY, MRS. HARDCASTLE, MISS NEVILLE.]

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Indeed, Constance, you amaze me. Such a girl as you want jewels? It will be time enough for jewels, my dear, twenty years hence, when your beauty begins to want repairs.

MISS NEVILLE. But what will repair beauty at forty will certainly improve it at twenty, madam.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Yours, my dear, can admit of none. That natural blush is beyond a thousand ornaments. Besides, child, jewels are quite out at present. Don't you see half the ladies of our acquaintance, my Lady Kill-day-light, and Mrs. Crump, and the rest of them, carry their jewels to town, and bring nothing but paste and marcasites back?

MISS NEVILLE. But who knows, madam, but somebody that shall be nameless would like me best with all my little finery about me?

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Consult your glass, my dear, and then see if, with such a pair of eyes, you want any better sparklers. What do you think, Tony, my dear? Does your cousin Con want any jewels, in your eyes, to set off her beauty?

TONY. That's as thereafter may be.

MISS NEVILLE. My dear aunt, if you knew how it would oblige me.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. A parcel of old-fashioned rose and table-cut things. They would make you look like the court of King Solomon at a puppet-show. Besides, I believe I can't readily come at them. They may be missing, for aught I know to the contrary.

TONY [apart to MRS. HARDCASTLE]. Then why don't you tell her so at once, as she's so longing for them? Tell her they're lost. It's the only way to quiet her. Say they're lost, and call me to bear witness.

MRS. HARDCASTLE [apart to TONY]. You know, my dear, I'm only keeping them for you. So if I say they're gone, you'll bear me witness, will you? He! he! he!

TONY [apart to MRS. HARDCASTLE]. Never fear me. Ecod! I'll say I saw them taken out with my own eyes.

MISS NEVILLE. I desire them but for a day, madam. Just to be permitted to show them as relics, and then they may be locked up again.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. To be plain with you, my dear Constance, if I could find them, you should have them. They're missing, I assure you. Lost, for aught I know; but we must have patience wherever they are.

MISS NEVILLE. I'll not believe it; this is but a shallow pretence to deny me. I know they are too valuable to be so slightly kept, and as you are to answer for the loss—

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Don't be alarmed, Constance. If they be lost, I must restore an equivalent. But my son knows they are missing, and not to be found.

TONY. That I can bear witness to. They are missing, and not to be found; I'll take my oath on't.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. You must learn resignation, my dear; for though we lose our fortune, yet we should not lose our patience. See me, how calm I am.

MISS NEVILLE. Ay, people are generally calm at the misfortunes of others.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Now, I wonder a girl of your good sense should waste a thought upon such trumpery. We shall soon find them; and, in the mean time, you shall make use of my garnets till your jewels be found.

MISS NEVILLE. I detest garnets!

MRS. HARDCASTLE. The most becoming things in the world to set off a clear complexion. You have often seen how well they look upon me. You shall have them.

[Exit.]

MISS NEVILLE. I dislike them of all things. You shan't stir.—Was ever any thing so provoking, to mislay my own jewels, and force me to wear her trumpery?

TONY. Don't be a fool. If she gives you the garnets, take what you can get. The jewels are your own already. I have stolen them out of her bureau, and she does not know it. Fly to your spark; he'll tell you more of the matter. Leave me to manage her.

MISS NEVILLE. My dear cousin!

TONY. Vanish. She's here, and has missed them already. [Exit MISS NEVILLE.] Zounds! how she fidgets and spits about like a Catherine wheel.

[Enter MRS. HARDCASTLE.]

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Confusion! thieves! robbers! we are cheated, plundered, broke open, undone.

TONY. What's the matter, what's the matter, mamma? I hope nothing has happened to any of the good family!

MRS. HARDCASTLE. We are robbed. My bureau has been broke open, the jewels taken out, and I'm undone.

TONY. Oh! is that all? Ha! ha! ha! By the laws I never saw it better acted in my life. Ecod, I thought you was ruined in earnest, ha! ha! ha!

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Why, boy, I am ruined in earnest. My bureau has been broke open, and all taken away.

TONY. Stick to that; ha! ha! ha! stick to that. I'll bear witness, you know; call me to bear witness.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. I tell you, Tony, by all that's precious, the jewels are gone, and I shall be ruined forever.

TONY. Sure I know they're gone, and I am to say so.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. My dearest Tony, but hear me. They're gone, I say.

TONY. By the laws, mamma, you make me for to laugh, ha! ha! I know who took them well enough, ha! ha! ha!

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Was there ever such a blockhead, that can't tell the difference between jest and earnest! I can tell you I'm not in jest, booby!

TONY. That's right, that's right; you must be in a bitter passion, and then nobody will suspect either of us. I'll bear witness that they are gone.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Was there ever such a cross-grained brute, that won't hear me! Can you bear witness that you're no better than a fool? Was ever poor woman so beset with fools on one hand, and thieves on the other!

TONY. I can bear witness to that.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Bear witness again, you blockhead, you, and I'll turn you out of the room directly. My poor niece, what will become of her? Do you laugh, you unfeeling brute, as if you enjoyed my distress?

TONY. I can bear witness to that.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Do you insult me, monster? I'll teach you to vex your mother, I will!

TONY. I can bear witness to that.

[He runs off; she follows him.]

[Enter MISS HARDCASTLE and MAID.]

MISS HARDCASTLE. What an unaccountable creature is that brother of mine, to send them to the house as an inn, ha! ha! I don't wonder at his impudence.

MAID. But what is more, madam, the young gentleman, as you passed by in your present dress, asked me if you were the bar-maid. He mistook you for the bar-maid, madam!

MISS HARDCASTLE. Did he? Then, as I live, I'm resolved to keep up the delusion. Tell me, Pimple, how do you like my present dress? Don't you think I look something like Cherry in the Beaux' Stratagem?

MAID. It's the dress, madam, that every lady wears in the country, but when she visits or receives company.

MISS HARDCASTLE. And are you sure he does not remember my face or person?

MAID. Certain of it!

MISS HARDCASTLE. I vow, I thought so; for though we spoke for some time together, yet his fears were such that he never once looked up during the interview. Indeed, if he had, my bonnet would have kept him from seeing me.

MAID. But what do you hope from keeping him in his mistake?

MISS HARDCASTLE. In the first place, I shall be seen, and that is no small advantage to a girl who brings her face to market. Then I shall perhaps make an acquaintance, and that's no small victory gained over one who never addresses any but the wildest of her sex. But my chief aim is to take my gentleman off his guard, and, like an invisible champion of romance, examine the giant's force before I offer to combat.

MAID. But are you sure you can act your part, and disguise your voice, so that he may mistake that, as he has already mistaken your person?

MISS HARDCASTLE. Never fear me. I think I have got the true bar cant.—Did your honour call?—Attend the Lion there.—Pipes and tobacco for the Angel.—The Lamb has been outrageous this half hour.

MAID. It will do, madam. But he's here. [Exit MAID.]

[Enter MARLOW.]

MARLOW. What a bawling in every part of the house; I have scarce a moment's repose. If I go to the best room, there I find my host and his story; if I fly to the gallery, there we have my hostess with her curtesy down to the ground. I have at last got a moment to myself, and now for recollection. [Walks and muses.]

MISS HARDCASTLE. Did you call, sir? Did your honour call?

MARLOW [musings]. As for Miss Hardcastle, she's too grave and sentimental for me.

MISS HARDCASTLE. Did your honour call? [She still places herself before him, he turning away.]

MARLOW No, child! [Musing.] Besides, from the glimpse I had of her, I think she squints.

MISS HARDCASTLE. I'm sure, sir, I heard the bell ring.

MARLOW. No, no! [Musing.] I have pleased my father, however, by coming down, and I'll to-morrow please myself by returning.

[Taking out his tablets and perusing.]

MISS HARDCASTLE. Perhaps the other gentleman called, sir?

MARLOW. I tell you no.

MISS HARDCASTLE. I should be glad to know, sir. We have such a parcel of servants.

MARLOW. No, no, I tell you. [Looks full in her face.] Yes, child, I think I did call. I wanted—I wanted—I vow, child, you are vastly handsome!

MISS HARDCASTLE. O la, sir, you'll make one ashamed.

MARLOW. Never saw a more sprightly, malicious eye. Yes, yes, my dear, I did call. Have you got any of your—a— what d'ye call it in the house?

MISS HARDCASTLE. No, sir, we have been out of that these ten days.

MARLOW. One may call in this house, I find, to very little purpose. Suppose I should call for a taste, just by way of trial, of the nectar of your lips; perhaps I might be disappointed in that too?

MISS HARDCASTLE. Nectar? nectar? That's a liquor there's no call for in these parts. French, I suppose. We keep no French wines here, sir.

MARLOW. Of true English growth, I assure you.

MISS HARDCASTLE. Then it's odd I should not know it. We brew all sorts of wines in this house, and I have lived here these eighteen years.

MARLOW. Eighteen years! Why, one would think, child, you kept the bar before you were born. How old are you?

MISS HARDCASTLE. O! sir, I must not tell my age. They say women and music should never be dated.

MARLOW. To guess at this distance, you can't be much above forty. [Approaching.] Yet nearer, I don't think so much. [Approaching.] By coming close to some women, they look younger still; but when we come very close indeed—

[Attempting to kiss her.]

MISS HARDCASTLE. Pray, sir, keep your distance. One would think you wanted to know one's age as they do horses, by mark of mouth.

MARLOW. I protest, child, you use me extremely ill. If you keep me at this distance, how is it possible you and I can be ever acquainted?

MISS HARDCASTLE. And who wants to be acquainted with you? I want no such acquaintance, not I. I'm sure you did not treat Miss Hardcastle, that was here a while ago, in this obstreperous manner. I'll warrant me, before her you looked dashed, and kept bowing to the ground, and talked, for all the world, as if you were before a justice of peace.

MARLOW [aside]. Egad, she has hit it, sure enough! [To her.] In awe of her, child? Ha! ha! ha! A mere awkward squinting thing! No, no! I find you don't know me. I laughed and rallied her a little; but I was unwilling to be too severe. No, I could not be too severe, curse me!

MISS HARDCASTLE. Oh, then, sir, you are a favourite, I find, among the ladies?

MARLOW. Yes, my dear, a great favourite. And yet, hang me, I don't see what they find in me to follow. At the Ladies' Club in town I'm called their agreeable Rattle. Rattle, child, is not my real name, but one I'm known by. My name is Solomons; Mr. Solomons, my dear, at your service. [Offering to salute her.]

MISS HARDCASTLE. Hold, sir; you are introducing me to your club, not to yourself. And you're so great a favourite there, you say?

MARLOW. Yes, my dear. There's Mrs. Mantrap, Lady Betty Blackleg, the Countess of Sligo, Mrs. Longhorns, old Miss Biddy Buckskin, and your humble servant, keep up the spirit of the place.

MISS HARDCASTLE. Then it's a very merry place, I suppose?

MARLOW. Yes, as merry as cards, suppers, wine, and old women can make us.

MISS HARDCASTLE. And their agreeable Rattle, ha! ha! ha!

MARLOW [aside]. Egad! I don't quite like this chit. She looks knowing, methinks. You laugh, child?

MISS HARDCASTLE. I can't but laugh to think what time they all have for minding their work or their family.

MARLOW [aside]. All's well; she don't laugh at me. [To her.] Do you ever work, child?

MISS HARDCASTLE. Ay, sure. There's not a screen or a quilt in the whole house but what can bear witness to that.

MARLOW. Odsó! Then you must show me your embroidery. I embroider and draw patterns myself a little. If you want a judge of your work, you must apply to me. [Seizing her hand.]

[Enter HARDCASTLE, who stands in surprise.]

MISS HARDCASTLE. Ay, but the colours don't look well by candlelight. You shall see all in the morning. [Struggling.]

MARLOW. And why not now, my angel! Such beauty fires beyond the power of resistance.—Pshaw! the father here! My old luck: I never nicked seven that I did not throw ames-ace three times following. [Exit MARLOW.]

HARDCASTLE. So, madam! So I find this is your modest lover. This is your humble admirer, that kept his eyes fixed on the ground, and only adored at humble distance. Kate, Kate, art thou not ashamed to deceive your father so?

MISS HARDCASTLE. Never trust me, dear papa, but he's still the modest man I first took him for; you'll be convinced of it as well as I.

HARDCASTLE. By the hand of my body, I believe his impudence is infectious! Didn't I see him seize your hand? Didn't I see him haul you about like a milk-maid? And now you talk of his respect and his modesty, forsooth!

MISS HARDCASTLE. But if I shortly convince you of his modesty, that he has only the faults that will pass off with time, and the virtues that will improve with age, I hope you'll forgive him.

HARDCASTLE. The girl would actually make one run mad! I tell you I'll not be convinced. I am convinced. He has scarcely been three hours in the house, and he has already encroached on all my prerogatives. You may like his impudence, and call it modesty; but my son-in-law, madam, must have very different qualifications.

MISS HARDCASTLE. Sir, I ask but this night to convince you.

HARDCASTLE. You shall not have half the time, for I have thoughts of turning him out this very hour.

MISS HARDCASTLE. Give me that hour, then, and I hope to satisfy you.

HARDCASTLE. Well, an hour let it be then. But I'll have no trifling with your father. All fair and open, do you mind me?

MISS HARDCASTLE. I hope, sir, you have ever found that I considered your commands as my pride; for your kindness is such that my duty as yet has been inclination. [Exit.]

ACT IV

SCENE I—The house.

[Enter HASTINGS and MISS NEVILLE.]

HASTINGS. You surprise me; Sir Charles Marlow expected here this night! Where have you had your information?

MISS NEVILLE. You may depend upon it. I just saw his letter to Mr. Hardcastle, in which he tells him he intends setting out in a few hours after his son.

HASTINGS. Then, my Constance, all must be complete before he arrives. He knows me; and should he find me here, would discover my name, and perhaps, my designs, to the rest of the family.

MISS NEVILLE. The jewels, I hope, are safe?

HASTINGS. Yes, yes. I have sent them to Marlow, who keeps the keys of our baggage. In the mean time, I'll go to prepare matters for our elopement. I have had the 'Squire's promise of a fresh pair of horses; and, if I should not see him again, will write him further directions.

[Exit.]

MISS NEVILLE. Well, success attend you! In the mean time, I'll go amuse my aunt with the old pretence of a violent passion for my cousin. [Exit.]

[Enter MARLOW, followed by a SERVANT.]

MARLOW. I wonder what Hastings could mean by sending me so valuable a thing as a casket to keep for him, when he knows the only place I have is the seat of a post-coach at an inn-door. Have you deposited the casket with the landlady, as I ordered you? Have you put it into her own hands?

SERVANT. Yes, your honour,

MARLOW. She said she'd keep it safe, did she?

SERVANT. Yes; she said she'd keep it safe enough; she asked me how I came by it; and she said she had a great mind to make me give an account of myself.

[Exit SERVANT.]

MARLOW. Ha! ha! ha! They're safe, however. What an unaccountable set of beings have we got amongst! This little bar-maid, though, runs in my head most strangely, and drives out the absurdities of all the rest of the family. She's mine, she must be mine, or I'm greatly mistaken.

[Enter HASTINGS.]

HASTINGS. Bless me! I quite forgot to tell her that I intended to prepare at the bottom of the garden. Marlow here, and in spirits too!

MARLOW. Give me joy, George! Crown me, shadow me with laurels! Well, George, after all, we modest fellows don't want for success among the women.

HASTINGS. Some women, you mean. But what success has your honour's modesty been crowned with now that it grows so insolent upon us?

MARLOW. Didn't you see the tempting, brisk, lovely, little thing, that runs about the house with a bunch of keys to its girdle?

HASTINGS. Well, and what then?

MARLOW. She's mine, you rogue, you. Such fire, such motion, such eyes, such lips—but, egad! she would not let me kiss them though.

HASTINGS. But are you sure, so very sure of her?

MARLOW. Why, man, she talked of showing me her work above stairs, and I am to approve the pattern.

HASTINGS. But how can you, Charles, go about to rob a woman of her honour?

MARLOW. Pshaw! pshaw! We all know the honour of the bar-maid of an inn. I don't intend to rob her, take my word for it.

HASTINGS. I believe the girl has virtue.

MARLOW. And if she has, I should be the last man in the world that would attempt to corrupt it.

HASTINGS. You have taken care, I hope, of the casket I sent you to lock up? It's in safety?

MARLOW. Yes, yes. It's safe enough. I have taken care of it. But how could you think the seat of a post-coach at an inn-door a place of safety? Ah! numskull! I have taken better precautions for you than you did for yourself—I have—

HASTINGS. What?

MARLOW. I have sent it to the landlady to keep for you.

HASTINGS. To the landlady!

MARLOW. The landlady.

HASTINGS. You did!

MARLOW. I did. She's to be answerable for its forthcoming, you know.

HASTINGS. Yes, she'll bring it forth with a witness.

MARLOW. Wasn't I right? I believe you'll allow that I acted prudently upon this occasion.

HASTINGS [aside]. He must not see my uneasiness.

MARLOW. You seem a little disconcerted though, methinks. Sure, nothing has happened?

HASTINGS. No, nothing. Never was in better spirits in all my life. And so you left it with the landlady, who, no doubt, very readily undertook the charge?

MARLOW. Rather too readily. For she not only kept the casket, but, through her great precaution, was going to keep the messenger too. Ha! ha! ha!

HASTINGS. He! he! he! They're safe, however.

MARLOW. As a guinea in a miser's purse.

HASTINGS [aside]. So now all hopes of fortune are at an end, and we must set off without it. [To him.] Well, Charles, I'll leave you to your meditations on the pretty bar-maid, and, he! he! he! may you be as successful for yourself as you have been for me. [Exit.]

MARLOW. Thank ye, George: I ask no more. Ha! ha! ha!

[Enter HARDCASTLE.]

HARDCASTLE. I no longer know my own house. It's turned all topsey-turvey. His servants have got drunk already. I'll bear it no longer; and yet, from my respect for his father, I'll be calm. [To him.] Mr. Marlow, your servant. I'm your very humble servant. [Bowing low.]

MARLOW. Sir, your humble servant. [Aside.] What is to be the wonder now?

HARDCASTLE. I believe, sir, you must be sensible, sir, that no man alive ought to be more welcome than your father's son, sir. I hope you think so?

MARLOW. I do from my soul, sir. I don't want much entreaty. I generally make my father's son welcome wherever he goes.

HARDCASTLE. I believe you do, from my soul, sir. But though I say nothing to your own conduct, that of your servants is insufferable. Their manner of drinking is setting a very bad example in this house, I assure you.

MARLOW. I protest, my very good sir, that is no fault of mine. If they don't drink as they ought, they are to blame. I ordered them not to spare the cellar. I did, I assure you. [To the side-scene.] Here, let one of my servants come up. [To him.] My positive directions were, that as I did not drink myself, they should make up for my deficiencies below.

HARDCASTLE. Then they had your orders for what they do? I'm satisfied!

MARLOW. They had, I assure you. You shall hear it from one of themselves.

[Enter SERVANT, drunk.]

MARLOW. You, Jeremy! Come forward, sirrah! What were my orders? Were you not told to drink freely, and call for what you thought fit, for the good of the house?

HARDCASTLE [aside]. I begin to lose my patience.

JEREMY. Please your honour, liberty and Fleet Street forever! Though I'm but a servant, I'm as good as another man. I'll drink for no man before supper, sir, damme! Good liquor will sit upon a good supper, but a good supper will not sit upon—hiccup—upon my conscience, sir. [Exit.]

MARLOW. You see, my old friend, the fellow is as drunk as he can possibly be. I don't know what you'd have more, unless you'd have the poor devil soused in a beer-barrel.

HARDCASTLE. Zounds! he'll drive me distracted, if I contain myself any longer. Mr. Marlow. Sir, I have submitted to your insolence for more than four hours, and I see no likelihood of its coming to an end. I'm now resolved to be master here, sir, and I desire that you and your drunken pack may leave my house directly.

MARLOW. Leave your house!—Sure, you jest, my good friend! What, when I am doing what I can to please you!

HARDCASTLE. I tell you, sir, you don't please me; so I desire you'll leave my house.

MARLOW. Sure, you cannot be serious? At this time of night, and such a night? You only mean to banter me.

HARDCASTLE. I tell you, sir, I'm serious! and, now that my passions are roused, I say this house is mine, sir; this house is mine, and I command you to leave it directly.

MARLOW. Ha! ha! ha! A puddle in a storm. I shan't stir a step, I assure you. [In a serious tone.] This your house, fellow! It's my house. This is my house. Mine, while I choose to stay. What right have you to bid me leave this house, sir? I never met with such impudence, curse me; never in my whole life before.

HARDCASTLE. Nor I, confound me if ever I did! To come to my house, to call for what he likes, to turn me out of my own chair, to insult the family, to order his servants to get drunk, and then to tell me, "This house is mine, sir." By all that's impudent, it makes me laugh. Ha! ha! ha! Pray, sir, [bantering] as you take the house, what think you to taking the rest of the furniture? There's a pair of silver candlesticks, and there's a fire-screen, and here's a pair of brazen-nosed bellows; perhaps you may take a fancy to them?

MARLOW. Bring me your bill, sir; bring me your bill, and let's make no more words about it.

HARDCASTLE. There are a set of prints, too. What think you of the Rake's Progress for your own apartment?

MARLOW. Bring me your bill, I say; and I'll leave you and your infernal house directly.

HARDCASTLE. Then there's a mahogany table that you may see your face in.

MARLOW. My bill, I say.

HARDCASTLE. I had forgot the great chair for your own particular slumbers, after a hearty meal.

MARLOW. Zounds! bring me my bill, I say, and let's hear no more on't.

HARDCASTLE. Young man, young man, from your father's letter to me, I was taught to expect a well-bred, modest man as a visitor here, but now I find him no better than a coxcomb and a bully; but he will be down here presently, and shall hear more of it. [Exit.]

MARLOW. How's this! Sure, I have not mistaken the house? Everything looks like an inn. The servants cry "Coming." The attendance is awkward; the bar-maid, too, to attend us. But she's here, and will further inform me. Whither so fast, child? A word with you.

[Enter MISS HARDCASTLE.]

MISS HARDCASTLE. Let it be short, then. I'm in a hurry.—[Aside.] I believe he begins to find out his mistake. But it's too soon quite to undeceive him.

MARLOW. Pray, child, answer me one question. What are you, and what may your business in this house be?

MISS HARDCASTLE. A relation of the family, sir.

MARLOW. What, a poor relation?

MISS HARDCASTLE. Yes, sir. A poor relation, appointed to keep the keys and to see that the guests want nothing in my power to give them.

MARLOW. That is, you act as the bar-maid of this inn.

MISS HARDCASTLE. Inn! O law—What brought that into your head? One of the first families in the county keep an inn!—Ha! ha! ha! old Mr. Hardcastle's house an inn!

MARLOW. Mr. Hardcastle's house! Is this Mr. Hardcastle's house, child?

MISS HARDCASTLE. Ay, sure. Whose else should it be?

MARLOW. So, then, all's out, and I have been damnably imposed on. O, confound my stupid head, I shall be laughed at over the whole town. I shall be stuck up in caricature in all the print-shops. The Dullissimo Macaroni. To mistake this house of all others for an inn, and my father's old friend for an innkeeper! What a swaggering puppy must he take me for! What a silly puppy do I find myself! There again, may I be hanged, my dear, but I mistook you for the bar-maid.

MISS HARDCASTLE. Dear me! dear me! I'm sure there's nothing in my behaviour to put me upon a level with one of that stamp.

MARLOW. Nothing, my dear, nothing. But I was in for a list of blunders, and could not help making you a subscriber. My stupidity saw everything the wrong way. I mistook your assiduity for assurance, and your simplicity for allurements. But it's over—this house I no more show my face in.

MISS HARDCASTLE. I hope, sir, I have done nothing to disoblige you. I'm sure I should be sorry to affront any gentleman who has been so polite, and said so many civil things to me. I'm sure I should be sorry [pretending to cry] if he left the family on my account. I'm sure I should be sorry people said anything amiss, since I have no fortune but my character.

MARLOW [aside]. By Heaven! she weeps. This is the first mark of tenderness I ever had from a modest woman, and it touches me. [To her.] Excuse me, my lovely girl; you are the only part of the family I leave with reluctance. But to be plain with you, the difference of our birth, fortune, and education, make an honourable connexion impossible; and I can never harbour a thought of seducing simplicity that trusted in my honour, or bringing ruin upon one whose only fault was being too lovely.

MISS HARDCASTLE [aside]. Generous man! I now begin to admire him. [To him.] But I am sure my family is as good as Miss Harcastle's; and though I'm poor, that's no great misfortune to a contented mind; and, until this moment, I never thought that it was bad to want fortune.

MARLOW. And why now, my pretty simplicity?

MISS HARDCASTLE. Because it puts me at a distance from one that if I had a thousand pounds I would give it all to.

MARLOW [aside]. This simplicity bewitches me so that if I stay I'm undone. I must make one bold effort, and leave her. [To her.] Your partiality in my favour, my dear, touches me most sensibly, and were I to live for myself alone, I could easily fix my choice. But I owe too much to the opinion of the world, too much to the authority of a father; so that—I can scarcely speak it—it affects me. Farewell! [Exit.]

MISS HARDCASTLE. I never knew half his merit till now. He shall not go if I have power or art to detain him. I'll still preserve the character in which I stooped to conquer, but I will undeceive my papa, who, perhaps, may laugh him out of his resolution. [Exit.]

[Enter TONY and MISS NEVILLE.]

TONY. Ay, you may steal for yourselves the next time. I have done my duty. She has got the jewels again, that's a sure thing; but she believes it was all a mistake of the servants.

MISS NEVILLE. But, my dear cousin, sure you won't forsake us in this distress? If she in the least suspects that I am going off, I shall certainly be locked up, or sent to my aunt Pedigree's, which is ten times worse.

TONY. To be sure, aunts of all kinds are damned bad things. But what can I do? I have got you a pair of horses that will fly like Whistle-jacket; and I'm sure you can't say but I have courted you nicely before her face. Here she comes; we must court a bit or two more, for fear she should suspect us. [They retire and seem to fondle.]

[Enter MRS. HARDCASTLE.]

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Well, I was greatly fluttered, to be sure. But my son tells me it was all a mistake of the servants. I shan't be easy, however, till they are fairly married, and then let her keep her own fortune. But what do I see? fondling together, as I'm alive. I never saw Tony so sprightly before. Ah! have I caught you, my pretty doves? What, billing, exchanging glances, and broken murmurs? Ah!

TONY. As for murmurs, mother, we grumble a little now and then, to be sure. But there's no love lost between us.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. A mere sprinkling, Tony, upon the flame, only to make it burn brighter.

MISS NEVILLE. Cousin Tony promises to give us more of his company at home. Indeed, he shan't leave us any more. It won't leave us, cousin Tony, will it?

TONY. O, it's a pretty creature! No, I'd sooner leave my horse in a pound, than leave you when you smile upon one so. Your laugh makes you so becoming.

MISS NEVILLE. Agreeable cousin! Who can help admiring that natural humour, that pleasant, broad, red, thoughtless [Patting his cheek.—ah! it's a bold face!

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Pretty innocence!

TONY. I'm sure I always loved cousin Con's hazel eyes, and her pretty long fingers, that she twists this way and that over haspicholls, like a parcel of bobbins.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Ah! he would charm the bird from the tree. I was never so happy before. My boy takes after his father, poor Mr. Lumpkin, exactly. The jewels, my dear Con, shall be yours incontinently. You shall have them. Isn't he a sweet boy, my dear? You shall be married to-morrow, and we'll put off the rest of his education, like Dr. Drowsy's sermons, to a fitter opportunity.

[Enter DIGGORY.]

DIGGORY. Where's the 'Squire? I have got a letter for your worship.

TONY. Give it to my mamma. She reads all my letters first.

DIGGORY. I had orders to deliver it into your own hands.

TONY. Who does it come from?

DIGGORY. Your worship mun ask that o' the letter itself. [Exit DIGGORY.]

TONY. I could wish to know, though.

[Turning the letter, and gazing on it.]

MISS NEVILLE [aside]. Undone! undone! A letter to him from Hastings. I know the hand. If my aunt sees it, we are ruined forever. I'll keep her employed a little, if I can. [To MRS. HARDCASTLE.] But I have not told you, madam, of my cousin's smart answer just now to Mr. Marlow. We so laughed—You must know, madam.—This way a little, for he must not hear us. [They confer.]

TONY [still gazing]. A damned cramp piece of penmanship as ever I saw in my life. I can read your print-hand very well. But here there are such handles, and shanks, and dashes that one can scarce tell the head from the tail. "To Anthony Lumpkin, Esquire." It's very odd, I can read the outside of my letters where my own name is, well enough. But when I come to open it, it's all—buzz. That's hard—very hard; for the inside of the letter is always the cream of the correspondence.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Ha! ha! ha! Very well, very well. And so my son was too hard for the philosopher.

MISS NEVILLE. Yes, madam; but you must hear the rest, madam. A little more this way, or he may hear us. You'll hear how he puzzled him again.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. He seems strangely puzzled now himself, methinks.

TONY [still gazing]. A damned up and down hand, as if it was disguised in liquor. [Reading.] "Dear Sir,"—Ay, that's that. Then there's an M, and a T, and an S, but whether the next be an izzard or an R, confound me, I cannot tell!

MRS. HARDCASTLE. What's that, my dear? Can I give you any assistance?

MISS NEVILLE. Pray, aunt, let me read it. Nobody reads a cramp hand better than I. [Twisting the letter from her.] Do you know who it is from?

TONY. Can't tell, except from Dick Ginger, the feeder.

MISS NEVILLE. Ay, so it is. [Pretending to read.] Dear 'Squire, hoping that you're in health, as I am at this present. The gentlemen of the Shake-hag club has cut the gentlemen of the Goose-green quite out of feather. The odds—um—odd battle—um—long fighting—um—here, here, it's all about cocks and fighting; it's of no consequence; here, put it up, put it up. [Thrusting the crumpled letter upon him.]

TONY. But I tell you, miss, it's of all the consequence in the world! I would not lose the rest of it for a guinea! Here, mother, do you make it out. Of no consequence! [Giving Mrs. HARDCASTLE the letter.]

MRS. HARDCASTLE. How's this? [Reads.] "Dear 'Squire, I'm now waiting for Miss Neville, with a post-chaise and pair, at the bottom of the garden, but I find my horses yet unable to perform the journey. I expect you'll assist us with a pair of fresh horses, as you promised. Dispatch is necessary, as the hag (ay, the hag) your mother, will otherwise suspect us. Yours, Hastings." Grant me patience. I shall run distracted! My rage chokes me!

MISS NEVILLE. I hope, madam, you'll suspend your resentment for a few moments, and not impute to me any impertinence, or sinister design, that belongs to another.

MRS. HARDCASTLE [curtesying very low]. Fine spoken, madam; you are most miraculously polite and engaging, and quite the very pink of curtesy and circumspection, madam. [Changing her tone.] And you, you great ill-fashioned oaf, with scarce sense enough to keep your mouth shut: were you, too, joined against me? But I'll defeat all your plots in a moment. As for you, madam, since you have got a pair of fresh horses ready, it would be cruel to disappoint them. So, if you please, instead of running away with your spark, prepare this very moment to run off with me. Your old aunt Pedigree will keep you secure, I'll warrant me. You too, sir, may mount your horse, and guard us upon the way. Here, Thomas, Roger, Diggory! I'll show you that I wish you better than you do yourselves.

[Exit.]

MISS NEVILLE. So, now I'm completely ruined.

TONY. Ay, that's a sure thing.

MISS NEVILLE. What better could be expected from being connected with such a stupid fool,—and after all the nods and signs I made him!

TONY. By the laws, miss, it was your own cleverness, and not my stupidity, that did your business. You were so nice and so busy with your Shake-bags and Goose-greens that I thought you could never be making believe.

[Enter HASTINGS.]

HASTINGS. So, sir, I find by my servant that you have shown my letter, and betrayed us. Was this well done, young gentleman?

TONY. Here's another. Ask miss, there, who betrayed you. Ecod, it was her doing, not mine.

[Enter MARLOW.]

MARLOW. So I have been finely used here among you. Rendered contemptible, driven into ill-manners, despised, insulted, laughed at.

TONY. Here's another. We shall have old Bedlam broke loose presently.

MISS NEVILLE. And there, sir, is the gentleman to whom we all owe every obligation.

MARLOW. What can I say to him, a mere boy, an idiot, whose ignorance and age are a protection.

HASTINGS. A poor, contemptible booby, that would but disgrace correction.

MISS NEVILLE. Yet with cunning and malice enough to make himself merry with all our embarrassments.

HASTINGS. An insensible cub.

MARLOW. Replete with tricks and mischief.

TONY. Baw! damme, but I'll fight you both, one after the other—with baskets.

MARLOW. As for him, he's below resentment. But your conduct, Mr. Hastings, requires an explanation. You knew of my mistakes, yet would not undeceive me.

HASTINGS. Tortured as I am with my own disappointments, is this a time for explanations? It is not friendly, Mr. Marlow.

MARLOW. But sir—

MISS NEVILLE. Mr. Marlow, we never kept on your mistake, till it was too late to undeceive you. Be pacified.

[Enter SERVANT.]

SERVANT. My mistress desires you'll get ready immediately, madam. The horses are putting to. Your hat and things are in the next room. We are to go thirty miles before morning.

[Exit SERVANT.]

MISS NEVILLE. Well, well; I'll come presently.

MARLOW [to HASTINGS]. Was it well done, sir, to assist in rendering me ridiculous? To hang me out for the scorn of all my acquaintance? Depend upon it, sir, I shall expect an explanation.

HASTINGS. Was it well done, sir, if you're upon that subject, to deliver what I entrusted to yourself, to the care of another, sir?

MISS NEVILLE. Mr. Hastings! Mr. Marlow! Why will you increase my distress by this groundless dispute? I implore, I entreat you—

[Enter SERVANT.]

SERVANT. Your cloak, madam. My mistress is impatient.

MISS NEVILLE. I come. [Exit SERVANT.] Pray, be pacified. If I leave you thus, I shall die with apprehension!

[Enter SERVANT.]

SERVANT. Your fan, muff, and gloves, madam. The horses are waiting.

MISS NEVILLE. O, Mr. Marlow! if you knew what a scene of constraint and ill-nature lies before me. I'm sure it would convert your resentment into pity.

MARLOW. I'm so distracted with a variety of passions that I don't know what I do. Forgive me, madam. George, forgive me. You know my hasty temper, and should not exasperate it.

HASTINGS. The torture of my situation is my only excuse.

MISS NEVILLE. Well, my dear Hastings, if you have that esteem for me that I think, that I am sure you have, your constancy for three years will but increase the happiness of our future connexion. If—

MRS. HARDCASTLE [within]. Miss Neville. Constance, why, Constance, I say.

MISS NEVILLE. I'm coming. Well, constancy, remember, constancy is the word.

[Exit followed by the SERVANT.]

HASTINGS. My heart! how can I support this! To be so near happiness, and such happiness!

MARLOW [to TONY]. You see now, young gentleman, the effects of your folly. What might be amusement to you is here disappointment, and even distress.

TONY [from a reverie]. Ecod, I have hit it. It's here. Your hands. Yours, and yours, my poor Sulky. My boots there, ho!—Meet me, two hours hence at the bottom of the garden; and if you don't find Tony Lumpkin a more good-natured fellow than you thought for, I'll give you leave to take my best horse, and Bet Bouncer into the bargain. Come along. My boots, ho! [Exit.]

ACT V

SCENE I—Continues.

[Enter HASTINGS and SERVANT.]

HASTINGS. You saw the old lady and Miss Neville drive off, you say?

SERVANT. Yes, your honour. They went off in a post-coach, and the young 'Squire went on horseback. They're thirty miles off by this time.

HASTINGS. Then all my hopes are over.

SERVANT. Yes, sir. Old Sir Charles is arrived. He and the old gentleman of the house have been laughing at Mr. Marlow's mistake this half hour. They are coming this way.

HASTINGS. Then I must not be seen. So now to my fruitless appointment at the bottom of the garden. This is about the time. [Exit.]

[Enter SIR CHARLES and HARDCASTLE.]

HARDCASTLE. Ha! ha! ha! The peremptory tone in which he sent forth his sublime commands!

SIR CHARLES. And the reserve with which I suppose he treated all your advances.

HARDCASTLE. And yet he might have seen something in me above a common innkeeper, too.

SIR CHARLES. Yes, Dick, but he mistook you for an uncommon innkeeper; ha! ha! ha!

HARDCASTLE. Well, I'm in too good spirits to think of anything but joy. Yes, my dear friend, this union of our families will make our personal friendships hereditary; and though my daughter's fortune is but small—

SIR CHARLES. Why, Dick, will you talk of fortune to me? My son is possessed of more than a competence already, and can want nothing but a good and virtuous girl to share his happiness and increase it. If they like each other, as you say they do—

HARDCASTLE. If, man! I tell you they do like each other. My daughter as good as told me so.

SIR CHARLES. But girls are apt to flatter themselves, you know.

HARDCASTLE. I saw him grasp her hand in the warmest manner myself; and here he comes to put you out of your ifs, I warrant him.

[Enter MARLOW.]

MARLOW. I come, sir, once more, to ask pardon for my strange conduct. I can scarce reflect on my insolence without confusion.

HARDCASTLE. Tut, boy, a trifle. You take it too gravely. An hour or two's laughing with my daughter will set all to rights again. She'll never like you the worse for it.

MARLOW. Sir, I shall be always proud of her approbation.

HARDCASTLE. Approbation is but a cold word, Mr. Marlow; if I am not deceived, you have something more than approbation thereabouts. You take me!

MARLOW. Really, sir, I have not that happiness.

HARDCASTLE. Come, boy, I'm an old fellow, and know what's what as well as you that are younger. I know what has past between you; but mum.

MARLOW. Sure, sir, nothing has past between us but the most profound respect on my side, and the most distant reserve on hers. You don't think, sir, that my impudence has been past upon all the rest of the family?

HARDCASTLE. Impudence! No, I don't say that—not quite impudence—though girls like to be played with, and rumped a little, too, sometimes. But she has told no tales, I assure you.

MARLOW. I never gave her the slightest cause.

HARDCASTLE. Well, well, I like modesty in its place well enough. But this is over-acting, young gentleman. You may be open. Your father and I will like you the better for it.

MARLOW. May I die, sir, if I ever—

HARDCASTLE. I tell you she don't dislike you; and as I'm sure you like her—

MARLOW. Dear sir—I protest, sir—

HARDCASTLE. I see no reason why you should not be joined as fast as the parson can tie you.

MARLOW. But hear me, sir—

HARDCASTLE. Your father approves the match, I admire it; every moment's delay will be doing mischief, so—

MARLOW. But why won't you hear me? By all that's just and true, I never gave Miss Hardcastle the slightest mark of my attachment, or even the most distant hint to suspect me of affection. We had but one interview, and that was formal, modest, and uninteresting.

HARDCASTLE [aside]. This fellow's formal, modest impudence is beyond bearing.

SIR CHARLES. And you never grasped her hand, or made any protestations?

MARLOW. As Heaven is my witness, I came down in obedience to your commands. I saw the lady without emotion, and parted without reluctance. I hope you'll exact no further proofs of my duty, nor prevent me from leaving a house in which I suffer so many mortifications.

[Exit.]

SIR CHARLES. I'm astonished at the air of sincerity with which he parted.

HARDCASTLE. And I'm astonished at the deliberate intrepidity of his assurance.

SIR CHARLES. I dare pledge my life and honour upon his truth.

HARDCASTLE. Here comes my daughter, and I would stake my happiness upon her veracity.

[Enter MISS HARDCASTLE.]

HARDCASTLE. Kate, come hither, child. Answer us sincerely, and without reserve: has Mr. Marlow made you any professions of love and affection?

MISS HARDCASTLE. The question is very abrupt, sir! But since you require unreserved sincerity, I think he has.

HARDCASTLE [to SIR CHARLES]. You see.

SIR CHARLES. And pray, madam, have you and my son had more than one interview?

MISS HARDCASTLE. Yes, sir, several.

HARDCASTLE [to SIR CHARLES]. You see.

SIR CHARLES. But did he profess any attachment?

MISS HARDCASTLE. A lasting one.

SIR CHARLES. Did he talk of love?

MISS HARDCASTLE. Much, sir.

SIR CHARLES. Amazing! And all this formally?

MISS HARDCASTLE. Formally.

HARDCASTLE. Now, my friend, I hope you are satisfied.

SIR CHARLES. And how did he behave, madam?

MISS HARDCASTLE. As most professed admirers do: said some civil things of my face, talked much of his want of merit, and the greatness of mine; mentioned his heart, gave a short tragedy speech, and ended with pretended rapture.

SIR CHARLES. Now I'm perfectly convinced, indeed. I know his conversation among women to be modest and submissive. This forward, canting, ranting manner by no means describes him; and, I am confident, he never sat for the picture.

MISS HARDCASTLE. Then what, sir, if I should convince you to your face of my sincerity? If you and my papa, in about half an hour, will place yourselves behind that screen, you shall hear him declare his passion to me in person.

SIR CHARLES. Agreed. And if I find him what you describe, all my happiness in him must have an end. [Exit.]

MISS HARDCASTLE. And if you don't find him what I describe—I fear my happiness must never have a beginning.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II—The back of the garden.

[Enter HASTINGS.]

HASTINGS. What an idiot am I, to wait here for a fellow who probably takes a delight in mortifying me. He never intended to be punctual, and I'll wait no longer. What do I see? It is he! and perhaps with news of my Constance.

[Enter TONY, booted and spattered.]

HASTINGS. My honest 'Squire! I now find you a man of your word. This looks like friendship.

TONY. Ay, I'm your friend, and the best friend you have in the world, if you knew but all. This riding by night, by the bye, is cursedly tiresome. It has shook me worse than the basket of a stage-coach.

HASTINGS. But how? Where did you leave your fellow-travellers? Are they in safety? Are they housed?

TONY. Five-and-twenty miles in two hours and a half is no such bad driving. The poor beasts have smoked for it: rabbit me, but I'd rather ride forty miles after a fox, than ten with such varment.

HASTINGS. Well, but where have you left the ladies? I die with impatience.

TONY. Left them? Why, where should I leave them but where I found them?

HASTINGS. This is a riddle.

TONY. Riddle me this, then. What's that goes round the house, and round the house, and never touches the house?

HASTINGS. I'm still astray.

TONY. Why, that's it, mon. I have led them astray. By jingo, there's not a pond or a slough within five miles of the place but they can tell the taste of.

HASTINGS. Ha! ha! ha! I understand: you took them in a round while they supposed themselves going forward, and so you have at last brought them home again.

TONY. You shall hear. I first took them down Feather-bed Lane, where we stuck fast in the mud. I then rattled them crack over the stones of Up-and-down Hill. I then introduced them to the gibbet on Heavy-tree Heath; and from that, with a circumbendibus, I fairly lodged them in the horse-pond at the bottom of the garden.

HASTINGS. But no accident, I hope?

TONY. No, no. Only mother is confidently frightened. She thinks herself forty miles off. She's sick of the journey; and the cattle can scarce crawl. So, if your own horses be ready, you may whip off with cousin, and I'll be bound that no soul here can budge a foot to follow you.

HASTINGS. My dear friend, how can I be grateful?

TONY. Ay, now it's "dear friend," "noble 'Squire." Just now, it was all "idiot," "cub," and run me through the guts. Damn your way of fighting, I say. After we take a knock in this part of the country, we kiss and be friends. But if you had run me through the guts, then I should be dead, and you might go kiss the hangman.

HASTINGS. The rebuke is just. But I must hasten to relieve Miss Neville: if you keep the old lady employed, I promise to take care of the young one.

TONY. Never fear me. Here she comes; vanish. [Exit HASTINGS.] She's got from the pond, and dragged up to the waist like a mermaid.

[Enter Mrs. HARDCASTLE.]

Mrs. HARDCASTLE. Oh, Tony, I'm killed. Shook! Battered to death! I shall never survive it. That last jolt, that laid us against the quickset-hedge, has done my business.

TONY. Alack, mamma, it was all your own fault. You would be for running away by night, without knowing one inch of the way.

Mrs. HARDCASTLE. I wish we were at home again. I never met so many accidents in so short a journey. Drenched in the mud, overturned in a ditch, stuck fast in a slough, jolted to a jelly, and at last to lose our way! Whereabouts do you think we are, Tony?

TONY. By my guess, we should be upon Crack-skull Common, about forty miles from home.

Mrs. HARDCASTLE. O lud! O lud! The most notorious spot in all the country. We only want a robbery to make a complete night on't.

TONY. Don't be afraid, mamma, don't be afraid. Two of the five that kept here are hanged, and the other three may not find us. Don't be afraid.—Is that a man that's galloping behind us? No; it's only a tree.—Don't be afraid.

Mrs. HARDCASTLE. The fright will certainly kill me.

TONY. Do you see anything like a black hat moving behind the thicket?

Mrs. HARDCASTLE. Oh, death!

TONY. No; it's only a cow. Don't be afraid, mamma, don't be afraid.

Mrs. HARDCASTLE. As I'm alive, Tony, I see a man coming toward us. Ah, I am sure on't. If he perceives us, we are undone.

TONY [aside]. Father-in-law, by all that's unlucky, come to take one of his night walks. [To her.] Ah, it's a highwayman, with pistols as long as my arm. A damned ill-looking fellow!

Mrs. HARDCASTLE. Good Heaven, defend us! He approaches.

TONY. Do you hide yourself in that thicket, and leave me to manage him. If there be any danger, I'll cough, and cry hem. When I cough, be sure to keep close. [Mrs. HARDCASTLE hides behind a tree in the back scene.]

[Enter HARDCASTLE.]

HARDCASTLE. I'm mistaken, or I heard voices of people in want of help. Oh, Tony, is that you? I did not expect you so soon back. Are your mother and her charge in safety?

TONY. Very safe, sir, at my aunt Pedigree's. Hem.

Mrs. HARDCASTLE [from behind]. Ah, death! I find there's danger.

HARDCASTLE. Forty miles in three hours; sure that's too much, my youngster.

TONY. Stout horses and willing minds make short journeys, as they say. Hem.

Mrs. HARDCASTLE [from behind]. Sure, he'll do the dear boy no harm.

HARDCASTLE. But I heard a voice here; I should be glad to know from whence it came.

TONY. It was I, sir, talking to myself, sir. I was saying that forty miles in four hours was very good going. Hem. As to be sure it was. Hem. I have got a sort of cold by being out in the air. We'll go in, if you please. Hem.

HARDCASTLE. But if you talked to yourself, you did not answer yourself. I'm certain I heard two voices, and am resolved [Raising his voice.] to find the other out.

MRS. HARDCASTLE [from behind]. Oh! he's coming to find me out. Oh!

TONY. What need you go, sir, if I tell you? Hem. I'll lay down my life for the truth—hem—I'll tell you all, sir.

[Detaining him.]

HARDCASTLE. I tell you I will not be detained. I insist on seeing. It's in vain to expect I'll believe you.

MRS. HARDCASTLE [running forward from behind]. O lud! he'll murder my poor boy, my darling! Here, good gentleman, whet your rage upon me. Take my money, my life, but spare that young gentleman; spare my child, if you have any mercy.

HARDCASTLE. My wife, as I'm a Christian. From whence can she come? or what does she mean?

MRS. HARDCASTLE [knelling]. Take compassion on us, good Mr. Highwayman. Take our money, our watches, all we have, but spare our lives. We will never bring you to justice; indeed we won't, good Mr. Highwayman.

HARDCASTLE. I believe the woman's out of her senses. What, Dorothy, don't you know me?

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Mr. Hardcastle, as I'm alive! My fears blinded me. But who, my dear, could have expected to meet you here, in this frightful place, so far from home? What has brought you to follow us?

HARDCASTLE. Sure, Dorothy, you have not lost your wits? So far from home, when you are within forty yards of your own door! [To him.] This is one of your old tricks, you graceless rogue, you!

[To her.] Don't you know the gate and the mulberry tree; and don't you remember the horse-pond, my dear?

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Yes, I shall remember the horse-pond as long as I live; I have caught my death in it. [To TONY.] And is it to you, you graceless varlet, I owe all this? I'll teach you to abuse your mother, I will.

TONY. Ecod, mother, all the parish says you have spoiled me, and so you may take the fruits on't.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. I'll spoil you, I will.

[Follows him off the stage.]

HARDCASTLE. There's morality, however, in his reply. [Exit.]

[Enter HASTINGS and MISS NEVILLE.]

HASTINGS. My dear Constance, why will you deliberate thus? If we delay a moment, all is lost forever. Pluck up a little resolution, and we shall soon be out of the reach of her malignity.

MISS NEVILLE. I find it impossible. My spirits are so sunk with the agitations I have suffered, that I am unable to face any new danger. Two or three years' patience will at last crown us with happiness.

HASTINGS. Such a tedious delay is worse than inconstancy. Let us fly, my charmer. Let us date our happiness from this very moment. Perish fortune. Love and content will increase what we possess beyond a monarch's revenue. Let me prevail!

MISS NEVILLE. No, Mr. Hastings, no. Prudence once more comes to my relief, and I will obey its dictates. In the moment of passion, fortune may be despised, but it ever produces a lasting repentance. I'm resolved to apply to Mr. Hardcastle's compassion and justice for redress.

HASTINGS. But though he had the will, he has not the power to relieve you.

MISS NEVILLE. But he has influence, and upon that I am resolved to rely.

HASTINGS. I have no hopes. But, since you persist, I must reluctantly obey you.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III—Room at Mr. HARDCASTLE'S.

[Enter SIR CHARLES MARLOW and MISS HARDCASTLE.]

SIR CHARLES. What a situation am I in! If what you say appears, I shall then find a guilty son. If what he says be true, I shall then lose one that, of all others, I most wished for a daughter.

MISS HARDCASTLE. I am proud of your approbation; and to show I merit it, if you place yourselves as I directed, you shall hear his explicit declaration. But he comes.

SIR CHARLES. I'll to your father, and keep him to the appointment. [Exit SIR CHARLES.]

[Enter MARLOW.]

MARLOW. Though prepared for setting out, I come once more to take leave; nor did I, till this moment, know the pain I feel in the separation.

MISS HARDCASTLE [in her own natural manner]. I believe these sufferings cannot be very great, sir, which you can so easily remove. A day or two longer, perhaps, might lessen your uneasiness, by showing the little value of what you now think proper to regret.

MARLOW [aside]. This girl every moment improves upon me. [To her.] It must not be, madam; I have already trifled too long with my heart. My very pride begins to submit to my passion. The disparity of education and fortune, the anger of a parent, and the contempt of my equals begin to lose their weight; and nothing can restore me to myself but this painful effort of resolution.

MISS HARDCASTLE. Then go, sir: I'll urge nothing more to detain you. Though my family be as good as hers you came down to visit, and my education, I hope, not inferior, what are these advantages without equal affluence? I must remain contented with the slight approbation of imputed merit; I must have only the mockery of your addresses, while all your serious aims are fixed on fortune.

[Enter HARDCASTLE and SIR CHARLES MARLOW from behind.]

SIR CHARLES. Here, behind this screen.

HARDCASTLE. Ay, ay; make no noise. I'll engage my Kate covers him with confusion at last.

MARLOW. By heavens, madam, fortune was ever my smallest consideration. Your beauty at first caught my eye; for who could see that without emotion? But every moment that I converse with you steals in some new grace, heightens the picture, and gives it stronger expression. What at first seemed rustic plainness, now appears refined simplicity. What seemed forward assurance, now strikes me as the result of courageous innocence and conscious virtue.

SIR CHARLES. What can it mean? He amazes me!

HARDCASTLE. I told you how it would be. Hush!

MARLOW. I am now determined to stay, madam, and I have too good an opinion of my father's discernment, when he sees you, to doubt his approbation.

MISS HARDCASTLE. No, Mr. Marlow, I will not, cannot detain you. Do you think I could suffer a connexion in which there is the smallest room for repentance? Do you think I would take the mean advantage of a transient passion to load you with confusion? Do you think I could ever relish that happiness which was acquired by lessening yours?

MARLOW. By all that's good, I can have no happiness but what's in your power to grant me! Nor shall I ever feel repentance but in not having seen your merits before. I will stay even contrary to your wishes; and though you should persist to shun me, I will make my respectful assiduities atone for the levity of my past conduct.

MISS HARDCASTLE. Sir, I must entreat you'll desist. As our acquaintance began, so let it end, in indifference. I might have given an hour or two to levity; but seriously, Mr. Marlow, do you think I could ever submit to a connexion where I must appear mercenary, and you imprudent.

Do you think I could ever catch at the confident addresses of a secure admirer?

MARLOW [kneeling]. Does this look like security? Does this look like confidence? No, madam, every moment that shows me your merit, only serves to increase my diffidence and confusion. Here let me continue—

SIR CHARLES. I can hold it no longer. Charles, Charles, how hast thou deceived me! Is this your indifference, your uninteresting conversation?

HARDCASTLE. Your cold contempt: your formal interview! What have you to say now?

MARLOW. That I'm all amazement! What can it mean?

HARDCASTLE. It means that you can say and unsay things at pleasure; that you can address a lady in private, and deny it in public; that you have one story for us, and another for my daughter.

MARLOW. Daughter!—This lady your daughter?

HARDCASTLE. Yes, sir, my only daughter; my Kate: whose else should she be?

MARLOW. Oh, the devil!

MISS HARDCASTLE. Yes, sir, that very identical tall, squinting lady you were pleased to take me for [curtesying]; she that you addressed as the mild, modest, sentimental man of gravity, and the bold, forward, agreeable Rattle of the Ladies Club. Ha! ha! ha!

MARLOW. Zounds, there's no bearing this; it's worse than death!

MISS HARDCASTLE. In which of your characters, sir, will you give us leave to address you? As the faltering gentleman, with looks on the ground, that speaks just to be heard, and hates hypocrisy; or the loud, confident creature, that keeps it up with Mrs. Mantrap, and old Miss Biddy Buckskin, till three in the morning!—Ha! ha! ha!

MARLOW. O, curse on my noisy head. I never attempted to be impudent yet that I was not taken down. I must be gone.

HARDCASTLE. By the hand of my body, but you shall not. I see it was all a mistake, and I am rejoiced to find it. You shall not, sir, I tell you. I know she'll forgive you. Won't you forgive him, Kate? We'll all forgive you. Take courage, man. [They retire, she tormenting him, to the back scene.]

[Enter MRS. HARDCASTLE and TONY.]

MRS. HARDCASTLE. So, so they're gone off. Let them go, I care not.

HARDCASTLE. Who gone?

MRS. HARDCASTLE. My dutiful niece and her gentleman, Mr. Hastings, from town. He who came down with our modest visitor here.

SIR CHARLES. Who, my honest George Hastings? As worthy a fellow as lives, and the girl could not have made a more prudent choice.

HARDCASTLE. Then, by the hand of my body, I'm proud of the connexion.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Well, if he has taken away the lady, he has not taken her fortune; that remains in this family to console us for her loss.

HARDCASTLE. Sure, Dorothy, you would not be so mercenary?

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Ay, that's my affair, not yours.

HARDCASTLE. But, you know, if your son, when of age, refuses to marry his cousin, her whole fortune is then at her own disposal.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Ay, but he's not of age, and she has not thought proper to wait for his refusal.

[Enter HASTINGS and MISS NEVILLE.]

MRS. HARDCASTLE [aside]. What, returned so soon! I begin not to like it.

HASTINGS [to HARDCASTLE]. For my late attempt to fly off with your niece, let my present confusion be my punishment. We are now come back, to appeal from your justice to your humanity. By her father's consent, I first paid her my addresses, and our passions were first founded in duty.

MISS NEVILLE. Since his death, I have been obliged to stoop to dissimulation to avoid oppression. In an hour of levity, I was ready even to give up my fortune to secure my choice. But I am now recovered from the delusion, and hope from your tenderness what is denied me from a nearer connexion.

MRS. HARDCASTLE. Pshaw, pshaw, this is all but the whining end of a modern novel!

HARDCASTLE. Be it what it will, I'm glad they're come back to reclaim their due. Come hither, Tony, boy. Do you refuse this lady's hand whom I now offer you?

TONY. What signifies my refusing? You know I can't refuse her till I'm of age, father.

HARDCASTLE. While I thought concealing your age, boy, was likely to conduce to your improvement, I concurred with your mother's desire to keep it secret. But since I find she turns it to a wrong use, I must now declare you have been of age these three months.

TONY. Of age! Am I of age, father?

HARDCASTLE. Above three months.

TONY. Then you'll see the first use I'll make of my liberty. [Taking Miss NEVILLE'S hand.] Witness all men, by these presents, that I, Anthony Lumpkin, Esquire, of BLANK place, refuse you, Constantia Neville, spinster, of no place at all, for my true and lawful wife. So Constance Neville may marry whom she pleases, and Tony Lumpkin is his own man again.

SIR CHARLES. O brave 'Squire!

HASTINGS. My worthy friend!

MRS. HARDCASTLE. My undutiful offspring!

MARLOW. Joy, my dear George, I give you joy sincerely. And could I prevail upon my little tyrant here to be less arbitrary, I should be the happiest man alive, if you would return me the favour.

HASTINGS [to Miss HARDCASTLE]. Come, madam, you are now driven to the very last scene of all your contrivances.

I know you like him, I'm sure he loves you, and you must and shall have him.

HARDCASTLE [joining their hands]. And I say so too. And, Mr. Marlow, if she makes as good a wife as she has a daughter, I don't believe you'll ever repent your bargain. So now to supper. To-morrow we shall gather all the poor of the parish about us, and the mistakes of the night shall be crowned with a merry morning. So, boy, take her; and as you have been mistaken in the mistress, my wish is, that you may never be mistaken in the wife.

[Exeunt OMNES.]

EPILOGUE

BY DR. GOLDSMITH, SPOKEN BY MRS. BULKLEY IN THE CHARACTER OF MISS HARDCASTLE.

Well, having stoop'd to conquer with success,

And gain'd a husband without aid from dress,

Still as a bar-maid, I could wish it too,
As I have conquer'd him to conquer you:
And let me say, for all your resolution,
That pretty bar-maids have done execution.

Our life is all a play, composed to please;
"We have our exits and our entrances."

The first act shows the simple country maid,

Harmless and young, of everything afraid;

Blushes when hired, and with unmeaning action,

"I hopes as how to give you satisfaction."
Her second act displays a livelier scene,—

Th' unblushing bar-maid of a country inn,

Who whisks about the house, at market caters,

Talks loud, coquets the guests, and scolds the waiters.

Next the scene shifts to town, and there she soars,

The chop-house toast of ogling connoisseurs;

On 'squires and cits she there displays her arts, And on the gridiron broils her lovers' hearts; And, as she smiles, her triumphs to com- plete, E'en common-councilmen forget to eat. The fourth act shows her wedded to the 'squire, And madam now begins to hold it higher; Pretends to taste, at operas cries caro, And quits her Nancy Dawson for Che Faro: Doats upon dancing, and in all her pride,	Swims round the room, the Heinel of Cheapside: Ogles and leers with artificial skill, Till having lost in age the power to kill, She sits all night at cards, and ogles at spadille. Such, through our lives, th' eventful his- tory— The fifth and last act still remains for me. The bar-maid now for your protection prays, Turns female barrister, and pleads for Bayes.

ACT I

SCENE I—LADY SNEERWELL'S dressing-room.

[LADY SNEERWELL discovered at her toilet; SNAKE drinking chocolate.]

LADY SNEERWELL. The paragraphs, you say, Mr. Snake, were all inserted?

SNAKE. They were, madam; and, as I copied them myself in a feigned hand, there can be no suspicion whence they came.

LADY SNEERWELL. Did you circulate the report of Lady Brittle's intrigue with Captain Boastall?

SNAKE. That's in as fine a train as your ladyship could wish. In the common course of things, I think it must reach Mrs. Clackitt's ears within four-and-twenty hours; and then, you know, the business is as good as done.

LADY SNEERWELL. Why, truly, Mrs. Clackitt has a very pretty talent, and a great deal of industry.

SNAKE. True, madam, and has been tolerably successful in her day. To my knowledge, she has been the cause of six matches being broken off, and three sons being disinherited; of four forced elopements, nine separate maintenances, and two divorces. Nay, I have more than once traced her causing a tête-à-tête in the "Town and Country Magazine," when the parties, perhaps, had never seen each other's face before in the course of their lives.

LADY SNEERWELL. She certainly has talents, but her manner is gross.

SNAKE. 'Tis very true. She generally designs well, has a free tongue and a bold invention; but her colouring is too dark, and her outlines often extravagant. She wants that delicacy of tint, and mellowness of sneer, which distinguish your ladyship's scandal.

LADY SNEERWELL. You are partial, Snake.

SNAKE. Not in the least; every body allows that Lady Sneerwell can do more with a word or look than many can with the most laboured detail, even when they happen to have a little truth on their side to support it.

LADY SNEERWELL. Yes, my dear Snake; and I am no hypocrite to deny the satisfaction I reap from the success of my efforts. Wounded myself, in the early part of my life, by the envenomed tongue of slander, I confess I have since known no pleasure equal to the reducing others to the level of my own reputation.

SNAKE. Nothing can be more natural. But, Lady Sneerwell, there is one affair in which you have lately employed me, wherein, I confess, I am at a loss to guess your motives.

LADY SNEERWELL. I conceive you mean with respect to my neighbour, Sir Peter Teazle, and his family?

SNAKE. I do. Here are two young men, to whom Sir Peter has acted as a kind of guardian since their father's death; the eldest possessing the most amiable character, and universally well spoken of;—the youngest, the most dissipated and extravagant young fellow in the kingdom, without friends or character: the former an avowed admirer of your ladyship, and apparently your favourite; the latter attached to Maria, Sir Peter's ward, and confessedly beloved by her. Now, on the face of these circumstances, it is utterly unaccountable to me, why you, the widow of a city knight, with a good jointure, should not close with the passion of a man of such character and expectations as Mr. Surface; and more so why you should be so uncommonly earnest to destroy the mutual attachment subsisting between his brother Charles and Maria.

LADY SNEERWELL. Then, at once to unravel this mystery I must inform you that love has no share whatever in the intercourse between Mr. Surface and me.

SNAKE. No!

LADY SNEERWELL. His real attachment is to Maria, or her fortune; but, finding in his brother a favoured rival, he has been obliged to mask his pretensions, and profit by my assistance.

SNAKE. Yet still I am more puzzled why you should interest yourself in his success.

LADY SNEERWELL. Heavens! how dull you are! Cannot you surmise the weakness which I hitherto, through shame, have concealed even from you? Must I confess that Charles—that extravagant, that bankrupt in fortune and reputation—that he it is for whom I am thus anxious and malicious, and to gain whom I would sacrifice every thing?

SNAKE. Now, indeed, your conduct appears consistent: but how came you and Mr. Surface so confidential?

LADY SNEERWELL. For our mutual interest, I have found him out a long time since. I know him to be artful, selfish, and malicious—in short, a sentimental knave; while with Sir Peter, and indeed with all his acquaintance, he passes for a youthful miracle of prudence, good sense, and benevolence.

SNAKE. Yes; yet Sir Peter vows he has not his equal in England; and, above all, he praises him as a man of sentiment.

LADY SNEERWELL. True; and with the assistance of his sentiment and hypocrisy he has brought Sir Peter entirely into his interest with regard to Maria; while poor Charles has no friend in the house—though, I fear, he has a powerful one in Maria's heart, against whom we must direct our schemes.

[Enter SERVANT.]

SERVANT. Mr. Surface.

LADY SNEERWELL. Show him up. [Exit SERVANT.] He generally calls about this time. I don't wonder at people giving him to me for a lover.

[Enter JOSEPH SURFACE.]

JOSEPH SURFACE. My dear Lady Sneerwell, how do you do to-day? Mr. Snake, your most obedient.

LADY SNEERWELL. Snake has just been rallying me on our mutual attachment, but I have informed him of our real views. You know how useful he has been to us; and, believe me, the confidence is not ill-placed.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Madam, it is impossible for me to suspect a man of Mr. Snake's sensibility and discernment.

LADY SNEERWELL. Well, well, no compliments now; but tell me when you saw your mistress, Maria—or, what is more material to me, your brother.

JOSEPH SURFACE. I have not seen either since I left you; but I can inform you that they never meet. Some of your stories have taken a good effect on Maria.

LADY SNEERWELL. Ah, my dear Snake! the merit of this belongs to you. But do your brother's distresses increase?

JOSEPH SURFACE. Every hour. I am told he has had another execution in the house yesterday. In short, his dissipation and extravagance exceed any thing I have ever heard of.

LADY SNEERWELL. Poor Charles!

JOSEPH SURFACE. True, madam; notwithstanding his vices, one can't help feeling for him. Poor Charles! I'm sure I wish it were in my power to be of any essential service to him; for the man who does not share in the distresses of a brother, even though merited by his own misconduct, deserves—

LADY SNEERWELL. O Lud! you are going to be moral, and forget that you are among friends.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Egad, that's true! I'll keep that sentiment till I see Sir Peter. However, it is certainly a charity to rescue Maria from such a libertine, who if he is to be reclaimed, can be so only by a person of your ladyship's superior accomplishments and understanding.

SNAKE. I believe, Lady Sneerwell, here's company coming: I'll go and copy the letter I mentioned to you. Mr. Surface, your most obedient.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Sir, your very devoted.—[Exit SNAKE.] Lady Sneerwell, I am very sorry you have put any farther confidence in that fellow.

LADY SNEERWELL. Why so?

JOSEPH SURFACE. I have lately detected him in frequent conference with old Rowley, who was formerly my father's steward, and has never, you know, been a friend of mine.

LADY SNEERWELL. And do you think he would betray us?

JOSEPH SURFACE. Nothing more likely: take my word for't, Lady Sneerwell, that fellow hasn't virtue enough to be faithful even to his own villany. Ah, Maria!

[Enter MARIA.]

LADY SNEERWELL. Maria, my dear, how do you do? What's the matter?

MARIA. Oh! there's that disagreeable lover of mine, Sir Benjamin Backbite, has just called at my guardian's, with his odious uncle, Crabtree; so I slipped out, and ran hither to avoid them.

LADY SNEERWELL. Is that all?

JOSEPH SURFACE. If my brother Charles had been of the party, madam, perhaps you would not have been so much alarmed.

LADY SNEERWELL. Nay, now you are severe; for I dare swear the truth of the matter is, Maria heard you were here. But, my dear, what has Sir Benjamin done, that you should avoid him so?

MARIA. Oh, he has done nothing—but 'tis for what he has said: his conversation is a perpetual libel on all his acquaintance.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Ay, and the worst of it is, there is no advantage in not knowing him; for he'll abuse a stranger just as soon as his best friend: and his uncle's as bad.

LADY SNEERWELL. Nay, but we should make allowance; Sir Benjamin is a wit and a poet.

MARIA. For my part, I own, madam, wit loses its respect with me, when I see it in company with malice. What do you think, Mr. Surface?

JOSEPH SURFACE. Certainly, madam; to smile at the jest which plants a thorn in another's breast is to become a principal in the mischief.

LADY SNEERWELL. Pshaw! there's no possibility of being witty without a little ill nature: the malice of a good thing is the barb that makes it stick. What's your opinion, Mr. Surface?

JOSEPH SURFACE. To be sure, madam; that conversation, where the spirit of railery is suppressed, will ever appear tedious and insipid.

MARIA. Well, I'll not debate how far scandal may be allowable; but in a man, I am sure, it is always contemptible. We have pride, envy, rivalry, and a thousand motives to depreciate each other; but the male slanderer must have the cowardice of a woman before he can tra-duce one.

[Reënter SERVANT.]

SERVANT. Madam, Mrs. Candour is below, and, if your ladyship's at leisure, will leave her carriage.

LADY SNEERWELL. Beg her to walk in.—
[Exit SERVANT.] Now, Maria, here is a character to your taste; for, though Mrs. Candour is a little talkative, every body allows her to be the best natured and best sort of woman.

MARIA. Yes, with a very gross affectation of good nature and benevolence, she does more mischief than the direct malice of old Crabtree.

JOSEPH SURFACE. I' faith that's true, Lady Sneerwell: whenever I hear the current running against the characters of my friends, I never think them in such danger as when Candour undertakes their defence.

LADY SNEERWELL. Hush—here she is!

[Enter MRS. CANDOUR.]

MRS. CANDOUR. My dear Lady Sneerwell, how have you been this century?—Mr. Surface, what news do you hear?—though indeed it is no matter, for I think one hears nothing else but scandal.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Just so, indeed, ma'am.

MRS. CANDOUR. Oh, Maria! child,—what, is the whole affair off between you and Charles? His extravagance, I presume—the town talks of nothing else.

MARIA. I am very sorry, ma'am, the town has so little to do.

MRS. CANDOUR. True, true, child: but there's no stopping people's tongues. I own I was hurt to hear it, as I indeed was to learn, from the same quarter, that your guardian, Sir Peter, and Lady Teazle have not agreed lately as well as could be wished.

MARIA. 'Tis strangely impertinent for people to busy themselves so.

MRS. CANDOUR. Very true, child: but what's to be done? People will talk—there's no preventing it. Why, it was but yesterday I was told that Miss Gadabout had eloped with Sir Filigree Flirt. But, Lord! there's no minding what one hears; though, to be sure, I had this from very good authority.

MARIA. Such reports are highly scandalous.

MRS. CANDOUR. So they are, child—shameful, shameful! But the world is so censorious, no character escapes. Lord, now who would have suspected your friend, Miss Prim, of an indiscretion? Yet such is the ill nature of people, that they say her uncle stopped her last week, just as she was stepping into the York Mail with her dancing-master.

MARIA. I'll answer for't there are no grounds for that report.

MRS. CANDOUR. Ah, no foundation in the world, I dare swear; no more, probably, than for the story circulated last month, of Mrs. Festino's affair with Colonel Cassino—though, to be sure, that matter was never rightly cleared up.

JOSEPH SURFACE. The licence of invention some people take is monstrous indeed.

MARIA. 'Tis so; but, in my opinion, those who report such things are equally culpable.

MRS. CANDOUR. To be sure they are; tale-bearers are as bad as the tale-makers—'tis an old observation, and a very true one: but what's to be done, as I said before? how will you prevent people from talking? To-day, Mrs. Clackitt assured me, Mr. and Mrs. Honeymoon were at last become mere man and wife, like the rest of their acquaintance. And at the same time Miss Tattle, who was by, affirmed that Lord Buffalo had discovered his lady at a house of no extraordinary fame; and that Sir Harry Bouquet and Tom Saunter were to measure swords on a similar provocation. But, Lord, do you think I would report these things! No, no! tale-bearers, as I said before, are just as bad as the tale-makers.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Ah! Mrs. Candour, if every body had your forbearance and good nature!

MRS. CANDOUR. I confess, Mr. Surface, I cannot bear to hear people attacked behind their backs; and when ugly circumstances come out against our acquaintance, I own I always love to think the best. By the by, I hope 'tis not true that your brother is absolutely ruined?

JOSEPH SURFACE. I am afraid his circumstances are very bad indeed, ma'am.

MRS. CANDOUR. Ah! I heard so—but you must tell him to keep up his spirits; every body almost is in the same way: Lord Spindle, Sir Thomas Splint, Captain Quinze, and Mr. Nickit—all up, I hear, within this week; so, if Charles is undone, he'll find half his acquaintance ruined too, and that, you know, is a consolation.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Doubtless, ma'am—a very great one.

[Reënter SERVANT.]

SERVANT. Mr. Crabtree and Sir Benjamin Backbite. [Exit.]

LADY SNEERWELL. So, Maria, you see your lover pursues you; positively you sha'n't escape.

[Enter CRABTREE and SIR BENJAMIN BACKBITE.]

CRABTREE. Lady Sneerwell, I kiss your hand. Mrs. Candour, I don't believe you are acquainted with my nephew, Sir Benjamin Backbite? Egad, ma'am, he has a pretty wit, and is a pretty poet too. Isn't he, Lady Sneerwell?

SIR BENJAMIN. Oh, fie, uncle!

CRABTREE. Nay, egad it's true; I back him at a rebus or a charade against the best rhymers in the kingdom. Has your ladyship heard the epigram he wrote last week on Lady Frizzle's feather catching fire?—Do, Benjamin, repeat it, or the charade you made last night extempore at Mrs. Drowzie's conversazione. Come now; your first is the name of a fish, your second a great naval commander, and—

SIR BENJAMIN. Uncle, now—pr'thee—

CRABTREE. I' faith, ma'am, 'twould surprise you to hear how ready he is at all these sort of things.

LADY SNEERWELL. I wonder, Sir Benjamin, you never publish any thing.

SIR BENJAMIN. To say truth, ma'am, 'tis very vulgar to print; and as my little productions are mostly satires and lampoons on particular people, I find they circulate more by giving copies in confidence to the friends of the parties. However, I have some love elegies, which, when favoured with this lady's smiles, I mean to give the public.

[Pointing to MARIA.]

CRABTREE [to MARIA]. 'Fore heaven, ma'am, they'll immortalize you!—you will be handed down to posterity, like Petrarch's Laura, or Waller's Sacharissa.

SIR BENJAMIN [to MARIA]. Yes, madam, I think you will like them, when you shall see them on a beautiful quarto page, where a neat rivulet of text shall meander through a meadow of margin. 'Fore Gad, they will be the most elegant things of their kind!

CRABTREE. But, ladies, that's true—have you heard the news?

MRS. CANDOUR. What, sir, do you mean the report of—

CRABTREE. No, ma'am, that's not it.—Miss Nicely is going to be married to her own footman.

MRS. CANDOUR. Impossible!

CRABTREE. Ask Sir Benjamin.

SIR BENJAMIN. 'Tis very true, ma'am: every thing is fixed, and the wedding liveries bespoken.

CRABTREE. Yes—and they do say there were pressing reasons for it.

LADY SNEERWELL. Why, I have heard something of this before.

MRS. CANDOUR. It can't be—and I wonder any one should believe such a story of so prudent a lady as Miss Nicely.

SIR BENJAMIN. O Lud! ma'am, that's the very reason 'twas believed at once. She has always been so cautious and so reserved, that every body was sure there was some reason for it at bottom.

MRS. CANDOUR. Why, to be sure, a tale of scandal is as fatal to the credit of a prudent lady of her stamp as a fever is generally to those of the strongest constitutions. But there is a sort of puny sickly reputation, that is always ailing, yet will outlive the robust characters of a hundred prudes.

SIR BENJAMIN. True, madam, there are valetudinarians in reputation as well as constitution, who, being conscious of their weak part, avoid the least breath of air, and supply their want of stamina by care and circumspection.

MRS. CANDOUR. Well, but this may be all a mistake. You know, Sir Benjamin, very trifling circumstances often give rise to the most injurious tales.

CRABTREE. That they do, I'll be sworn, ma'am. O Lud! Mr. Surface, pray is it true that your uncle, Sir Oliver, is coming home?

JOSEPH SURFACE. Not that I know of, indeed, sir.

CRABTREE. He has been in the East Indies a long time. You can scarcely remember him, I believe? Sad comfort, whenever he returns, to hear how your brother has gone on!

JOSEPH SURFACE. Charles has been imprudent, sir, to be sure; but I hope no busy people have already prejudiced Sir Oliver against him. He may reform.

SIR BENJAMIN. To be sure he may: for my part, I never believed him to be so utterly void of principle as people say; and, though he has lost all his friends, I am told nobody is better spoken of by the Jews.

CRABTREE. That's true, egad, nephew. If the Old Jewry was a ward, I believe Charles would be an alderman: no man more popular there, 'fore Gad! I hear he pays as many annuities as the Irish tontine; and that, whenever he is sick, they have prayers for the recovery of his health in all the synagogues.

SIR BENJAMIN. Yet no man lives in greater splendour. They tell me, when he entertains his friends he will sit down to dinner with a dozen of his own securities; have a score of tradesmen waiting in the antechamber, and an officer behind every guest's chair.

JOSEPH SURFACE. This may be entertainment to you, gentlemen, but you pay very little regard to the feelings of a brother.

MARIA [aside]. Their malice is intolerable!—[Aloud.] Lady Sneerwell, I must wish you a good morning: I'm not very well. [Exit.]

Mrs. CANDOUR. O dear! she changes colour very much.

LADY SNEERWELL. Do, Mrs. Candour, follow her: she may want your assistance.

Mrs. CANDOUR. That I will, with all my soul, ma'am.—Poor dear girl, who knows what her situation may be! [Exit.]

LADY SNEERWELL. 'Twas nothing but that she could not bear to hear Charles reflected on, notwithstanding their difference.

SIR BENJAMIN. The young lady's penchant is obvious.

CRABTREE. But, Benjamin, you must not give up the pursuit for that: follow her, and put her into good humour. Repeat her some of your own verses. Come, I'll assist you.

SIR BENJAMIN. Mr. Surface, I did not mean to hurt you; but depend on't your brother is utterly undone.

CRABTREE. O Lud, ay! undone as ever man was—can't raise a guinea!

SIR BENJAMIN. And every thing sold, I'm told, that was movable.

CRABTREE. I have seen one that was at his house. Not a thing left but some empty bottles that were overlooked, and the family pictures, which I believe are framed in the wainscots.

SIR BENJAMIN. And I'm very sorry also to hear some bad stories against him.

[Going.]

CRABTREE. Oh, he has done many mean things, that's certain.

SIR BENJAMIN. But, however, as he's your brother—

[Going.]

CRABTREE. We'll tell you all another opportunity.

[Exit CRABTREE and SIR BENJAMIN.]

LADY SNEERWELL. Ha! ha! 'tis very hard for them to leave a subject they have not quite run down.

JOSEPH SURFACE. And I believe the abuse was no more acceptable to your ladyship than Maria.

LADY SNEERWELL. I doubt her affections are farther engaged than we imagine. But the family are to be here this evening, so you may as well dine where you are, and we shall have an opportunity of observing farther; in the meantime, I'll go and plot mischief, and you shall study sentiment. [Exit.]

SCENE II—A room in SIR PETER TEAZLE'S house.

[Enter SIR PETER TEAZLE.]

SIR PETER. When an old bachelor marries a young wife, what is he to expect? 'Tis now six months since Lady Teazle made me the happiest of men—and I have been the most miserable dog ever since! We tiffed a little going to church, and fairly quarrelled before the bells had done ringing. I was more than once nearly choked with gall during the honeymoon, and had lost all comfort in life before my friends had done wishing me joy. Yet I chose with caution—a girl bred wholly in the country, who never knew luxury beyond one silk gown, nor dissipation above the annual gala of a race ball. Yet she now plays her part in all the extravagant fopperies of fashion and the town, with as ready a grace as if she never had seen a bush or a grass-plot out of Grosvenor Square! I am sneered at by all my acquaintance, and paragraphed in the newspapers. She dissipates my fortune, and contradicts all my humours; yet the worst of it is, I doubt I love her, or I should never bear all this. However, I'll never be weak enough to own it.

[Enter ROWLEY.]

ROWLEY. Oh! Sir Peter, your servant: how is it with you, sir?

SIR PETER. Very bad, Master Rowley, very bad. I meet with nothing but crosses and vexations.

ROWLEY. What can have happened since yesterday?

SIR PETER. A good question to a married man!

ROWLEY. Nay, I'm sure, Sir Peter, your lady can't be the cause of your uneasiness.

SIR PETER. Why, has any body told you she was dead?

ROWLEY. Come, come, Sir Peter, you love her, notwithstanding your tempers don't exactly agree.

SIR PETER. But the fault is entirely hers, Master Rowley. I am, myself, the sweetest-tempered man alive, and hate a teasing temper; and so I tell her a hundred times a day.

ROWLEY. Indeed!

SIR PETER. Ay; and what is very extraordinary, in all our disputes she is always in the wrong! But Lady Sneerwell, and the set she meets at her house, encourage the perverseness of her disposition. Then, to complete my vexation, Maria, my ward, whom I ought to have the power of a father over, is determined to turn rebel too, and absolutely refuses the man whom I have long resolved on for her husband; meaning, I suppose, to bestow herself on his profligate brother.

ROWLEY. You know, Sir Peter, I have always taken the liberty to differ with you on the subject of these two young gentlemen. I only wish you may not be deceived in your opinion of the elder. For Charles, my life on't! he will retrieve his errors yet. Their worthy father, once my honoured master, was, at his years, nearly as wild a spark; yet, when he died, he did not leave a more benevolent heart to lament his loss.

SIR PETER. You are wrong, Master Rowley. On their father's death, you know, I acted as a kind of guardian to them both, till their uncle Sir Oliver's liberality gave them an early independence: of course, no person could have more opportunities of judging of their hearts, and I was never mistaken in my life. Joseph is indeed a model for the young men of his age. He is a man of sentiment, and acts up to the sentiments he professes; but, for the other, take my word for't, if he had any grain of virtue by descent, he has dissipated it with the rest of his inheritance. Ah! my old friend, Sir Oliver, will be deeply mortified when he finds how part of his bounty has been misapplied.

ROWLEY. I am sorry to find you so violent against the young man, because this may be the most critical period of his fortune. I came hither with news that will surprise you.

SIR PETER. What! let me hear.

ROWLEY. Sir Oliver is arrived, and at this moment in town.

SIR PETER. How! you astonish me! I thought you did not expect him this month.

ROWLEY. I did not; but his passage has been remarkably quick.

SIR PETER. Egad, I shall rejoice to see my old friend. 'Tis sixteen years since we met. We have had many a day together:—but does he still enjoin us not to inform his nephews of his arrival?

ROWLEY. Most strictly. He means, before it is known, to make some trial of their dispositions.

SIR PETER. Ah! there needs no art to discover their merits—however, he shall have his way; but, pray, does he know I am married?

ROWLEY. Yes, and will soon wish you joy.

SIR PETER. What, as we drink health to a friend in a consumption! Ah! Oliver will laugh at me. We used to rail at matrimony together, but he has been steady to his text. Well, he must be soon at my house, though—I'll instantly give orders for his reception. But, Master Rowley, don't drop a word that Lady Teazle and I ever disagree.

ROWLEY. By no means.

SIR PETER. For I should never be able to stand Noll's jokes; so I'll have him think, Lord forgive me! that we are a very happy couple.

ROWLEY. I understand you:—but then you must be very careful not to differ while he is in the house with you.

SIR PETER. Egad, and so we must—and that's impossible. Ah! Master Rowley, when an old bachelor marries a young wife, he deserves—no—the crime carries its punishment along with it.

[Exeunt.]

ACT II

SCENE I—A room in SIR PETER TEAZLE'S house.

SIR PETER. Lady Teazle, Lady Teazle, I'll not bear it!

LADY TEAZLE. Sir Peter, Sir Peter, you may bear it or not, as you please; but I ought to have my own way in every thing, and, what's more, I will too. What! though I was educated in the country, I know very well that women of fashion in London are accountable to nobody after they are married.

SIR PETER. Very well, ma'am, very well; so a husband is to have no influence, no authority?

LADY TEAZLE. Authority! No, to be sure: if you wanted authority over me, you should have adopted me, and not married me: I am sure you were old enough.

SIR PETER. Old enough!—ay, there it is. Well, well, Lady Teazle, though my life may be made unhappy by your temper, I'll not be ruined by your extravagance!

LADY TEAZLE. My extravagance! I'm sure I'm not more extravagant than a woman of fashion ought to be.

SIR PETER. No, no, madam, you shall throw away no more sums on such unmeaning luxury. 'Slife! to spend as much to furnish your dressing-room with flowers in winter as would suffice to turn the Pantheon into a greenhouse, and give a fête champêtre at Christmas.

LADY TEAZLE. And am I to blame, Sir Peter, because flowers are dear in cold weather? You should find fault with the climate, and not with me. For my part, I'm sure I wish it was spring all the year round, and that roses grew under our feet!

SIR PETER. 'Oons! madam—if you had been born to this, I shouldn't wonder at you talking thus; but you forget what your situation was when I married you.

LADY TEAZLE. No, no, I don't; 'twas a very disagreeable one, or I should never have married you.

SIR PETER. Yes, yes, madam, you were then in somewhat a humbler style—the daughter of a plain country squire. Recollect, Lady Teazle, when I saw you first sitting at your tambour, in a pretty figured linen gown, with a bunch of keys at your side, your hair combed smooth over a roll, and your apartment hung round with fruits in worsted, of your own working.

LADY TEAZLE. Oh, yes! I remember it very well, and a curious life I led. My daily occupation to inspect the dairy, superintend the poultry, make extracts from the family receipt-book, and comb my aunt Deborah's lap-dog.

SIR PETER. Yes, yes, ma'am, 'twas so indeed.

LADY TEAZLE. And then you know, my evening amusements! To draw patterns for ruffles, which I had not materials to make up; to play Pope Joan with the curate; to read a sermon to my aunt; or to be stuck down to an old spinet to strum my father to sleep after a fox-chase.

SIR PETER. I am glad you have so good a memory. Yes, madam, these were the recreations I took you from; but now you must have your coach—vis-à-vis—and three powdered footmen before your chair; and, in the summer, a pair of white cats to draw you to Kensington Gardens. No recollection, I suppose, when you were content to ride double, behind the butler, on a docked coach-horse.

LADY TEAZLE. No—I swear I never did that: I deny the butler and the coach-horse.

SIR PETER. This, madam, was your situation; and what have I done for you? I have made you a woman of fashion, of fortune, of rank—in short, I have made you my wife.

LADY TEAZLE. Well, then, and there is but one thing more you can make me to add to the obligations, that is—

SIR PETER. My widow, I suppose?

LADY TEAZLE. Hem! hem!

SIR PETER. I thank you, madam—but don't flatter yourself, for, though your ill conduct may disturb my peace of mind, it shall never break my heart, I promise you: however, I am equally obliged to you for the hint.

LADY TEAZLE. Then why will you endeavour to make yourself so disagreeable to me, and thwart me in every little elegant expense?

SIR PETER. 'Slife, madam, I say, had you any of these little elegant expenses when you married me?

LADY TEAZLE. Lud, Sir Peter! would you have me be out of the fashion?

SIR PETER. The fashion, indeed! what had you to do with the fashion before you married me?

LADY TEAZLE. For my part, I should think you would like to have your wife thought a woman of taste.

SIR PETER. Ay—there again—taste! Zounds! madam, you had no taste when you married me!

LADY TEAZLE. That's very true, indeed, Sir Peter! and after having married you, I should never pretend to taste again, I allow. But now, Sir Peter, since we have finished our daily jangle, I presume I may go to my engagement at Lady Sneerwell's.

SIR PETER. Ay, there's another precious circumstance—a charming set of acquaintance you have made there!

LADY TEAZLE. Nay, Sir Peter, they are all people of rank and fortune, and remarkably tenacious of reputation.

SIR PETER. Yes, egad, they are tenacious of reputation with a vengeance; for they don't choose any body should have a character but themselves! Such a crew! Ah! many a wretch has rid on a hurdle who has done less mischief than these utterers of forged tales, coiners of scandal, and clippers of reputation.

LADY TEAZLE. What, would you restrain the freedom of speech?

SIR PETER. Ah! they have made you just as bad as any one of the society.

LADY TEAZLE. Why, I believe I do bear a part with a tolerable grace.

SIR PETER. Grace indeed!

LADY TEAZLE. But I vow I bear no malice against the people I abuse: when I say an ill-natured thing, 'tis out of pure good humour; and I take it for granted they deal exactly in the same manner with me. But, Sir Peter, you know you promised to come to Lady Sneerwell's too.

SIR PETER. Well, well, I'll call in, just to look after my own character.

LADY TEAZLE. Then, indeed, you must make haste after me, or you'll be too late. So good-bye to ye. [Exit.]

SIR PETER. So—I have gained much by my intended expostulation! Yet with what a charming air she contradicts every thing I say, and how pleasantly she shows her contempt for my authority! Well, though I can't make her love me, there is great satisfaction in quarrelling with her; and I think she never appears to such advantage as when she is doing every thing in her power to plague me. [Exit.]

SCENE II—A room in LADY SNEERWELL'S house.

[LADY SNEERWELL, MRS. CANDOUR, CRABTREE, SIR BENJAMIN BACKBITE, and JOSEPH SURFACE, discovered.]

LADY SNEERWELL. Nay, positively, we will hear it.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Yes, yes, the epigram, by all means.

SIR BENJAMIN. O plague on't, uncle! 'tis mere nonsense.

CRABTREE. No, no; 'fore Gad, very clever for an extempore!

SIR BENJAMIN. But, ladies, you should be acquainted with the circumstance. You must know, that one day last week, as Lady Betty Curricle was taking the dust in Hyde Park, in a sort of duodecimo phaeton she desired me to write some verses on her ponies; upon which, I took out my pocket-book, and in one moment produced the following:—

Sure never were seen two such beautiful ponies:
Other horses are clowns, but these macaronies:
To give them this title I'm sure can't be wrong,
Their legs are so slim, and their tails are so long.

CRABTREE. There, ladies, done in the smack of a whip, and on horseback too.

JOSEPH SURFACE. A very Phœbus, mounted—indeed, Sir Benjamin!

SIR BENJAMIN. Oh dear, sir! trifles—trifles.

[Enter LADY TEAZLE and MARIA.]

MRS. CANDOUR. I must have a copy.

LADY SNEERWELL. Lady Teazle, I hope we shall see Sir Peter?

LADY TEAZLE. I believe he'll wait on your ladyship presently.

LADY SNEERWELL. Maria, my love, you look grave. Come, you shall sit down to piquet with Mr. Surface.

MARIA. I take very little pleasure in cards—however, I'll do as your ladyship pleases.

LADY TEAZLE [aside]. I am surprised Mr. Surface should sit down with her; I thought he would have embraced this opportunity of speaking to me before Sir Peter came.

MRS. CANDOUR. Now, I'll die, but you are so scandalous, I'll forswear your society.

LADY TEAZLE. What's the matter, Mrs. Candour?

MRS. CANDOUR. They'll not allow our friend Miss Vermilion to be handsome.

LADY SNEERWELL. Oh, surely she is a pretty woman.

CRABTREE. I am very glad you think so, ma'am.

MRS. CANDOUR. She has a charming fresh colour.

LADY TEAZLE. Yes, when it is fresh put on.

MRS. CANDOUR. Oh, fie! I'll swear her colour is natural: I have seen it come and go!

LADY TEAZLE. I dare swear you have, ma'am: it goes off at night, and comes again in the morning.

SIR BENJAMIN. True, ma'am, it not only comes and goes; but, what's more, egad, her maid can fetch and carry it!

MRS. CANDOUR. Ha! ha! ha! how I hate to hear you talk so! But surely, now, her sister is, or was, very handsome.

CRABTREE. Who? Mrs. Evergreen? O Lord! she's six-and-fifty if she's an hour!

MRS. CANDOUR. Now positively you wrong her; fifty-two or fifty-three is the utmost—and I don't think she looks more.

SIR BENJAMIN. Ah! there's no judging by her looks, unless one could see her face.

LADY SNEERWELL. Well, well, if Mrs. Evergreen does take some pains to repair the ravages of time, you must allow she effects it with great ingenuity; and surely that's better than the careless manner in which the widow Ochre caulks her wrinkles.

SIR BENJAMIN. Nay, now, Lady Sneerwell, you are severe upon the widow. Come, come, 'tis not that she paints so ill—but, when she has finished her face, she joins it on so badly to her neck, that she looks like a mended statue, in which the connoisseur may see at once that the head is modern, though the trunk's antique.

CRABTREE. Ha! ha! ha! Well said, nephew!

MRS. CANDOUR. Ha! ha! ha! Well, you make me laugh; but I vow I hate you for it. What do you think of Miss Simper?

SIR BENJAMIN. Why, she has very pretty teeth.

LADY TEAZLE. Yea; and on that account, when she is neither speaking nor laughing (which very seldom happens), she never absolutely shuts her mouth, but leaves it always a-jar, as it were—thus.

[Shows her teeth.]

MRS. CANDOUR. How can you be so ill-natured?

LADY TEAZLE. Nay, I allow even that's better than the pains Mrs. Prim takes to conceal her losses in front. She draws her mouth till it positively resembles the aperture of a poor's-box, and all her words appear to slide out edgewise, as it were—thus: [Mimics.] How do you do, madam? Yes, madam.

LADY SNEERWELL. Very well, Lady Teazle; I see you can be a little severe.

LADY TEAZLE. In defence of a friend it is but justice. But here comes Sir Peter to spoil our pleasantry.

[Enter SIR PETER TEAZLE.]

SIR PETER. Ladies, your most obedient.—[Aside.] Mercy on me, here is the whole set! a character dead at every word, I suppose.

MRS. CANDOUR. I am rejoiced you are come, Sir Peter. They have been so censorious—and Lady Teazle as bad as any one.

SIR PETER. That must be very distressing to you, indeed, Mrs. Candour.

MRS. CANDOUR. Oh, they will allow good qualities to nobody; not even good nature to our friend Mrs. Popsy.

LADY TEAZLE. What, the fat dowager who was at Mrs. Quadrille's last night?

MRS. CANDOUR. Nay, her bulk is her misfortune; and, when she takes so much pains to get rid of it, you ought not to reflect on her.

LADY SNEERWELL. That's very true, indeed.

LADY TEAZLE. Yes, I know she almost lives on acids and small whey; laces herself by pulleys; and often, in the hottest noon in summer, you may see her on a little squat pony, with her hair plaited up behind like a drummer's and puffing round the Ring on a full trot.

MRS. CANDOUR. I thank you, Lady Teazle, for defending her.

SIR PETER. Yes, a good defence, truly.

MRS. CANDOUR. Truly, Lady Teazle is as censorious as Miss Sallow.

CRABTREE. Yes, and she is a curious being to pretend to be censorious—an awkward gawky, without any one good point under heaven.

MRS. CANDOUR. Positively you shall not be so very severe. Miss Sallow is a near relation of mine by marriage, and, as for her person, great allowance is to be made; for, let me tell you, a woman labours under many disadvantages who tries to pass for a girl of six-and-thirty.

LADY SNEERWELL. Though, surely, she is handsome still—and for the weakness in her eyes, considering how much she reads by candlelight, it is not to be wondered at.

MRS. CANDOUR. True, and then as to her manner; upon my word I think it is particularly graceful, considering she never had the least education; for you know her mother was a Welsh milliner, and her father a sugar-baker at Bristol.

SIR BENJAMIN. Ah! you are both of you too good-natured!

SIR PETER [aside]. Yes, damned good-natured! This their own relation! mercy on me!

MRS. CANDOUR. For my part, I own I cannot bear to hear a friend ill-spoken of.

SIR PETER. No, to be sure!

SIR BENJAMIN. Oh! you are of a moral turn. Mrs. Candour and I can sit for an hour and hear Lady Stucco talk sentiment.

LADY TEAZLE. Nay, I vow Lady Stucco is very well with the dessert after dinner; for she's just like the French fruit one cracks for mottoes—made up of paint and proverb.

MRS. CANDOUR. Well, I will never join in ridiculing a friend; and so I constantly tell my cousin Ogle, and you all know what pretensions she has to be critical on beauty.

CRABTREE. Oh, to be sure! she has herself the oddest countenance that ever was seen; 'tis a collection of features from all the different countries of the globe.

SIR BENJAMIN. So she has, indeed—an Irish front—

CRABTREE. Caledonian locks—

SIR BENJAMIN. Dutch nose—

CRABTREE. Austrian lips—

SIR BENJAMIN. Complexion of a Spaniard—

CRABTREE. And teeth à la Chinoise—

SIR BENJAMIN. In short, her face resembles a table d'hôte at Spa—where no two guests are of a nation—

CRABTREE. Or a congress at the close of a general war—wherein all the members, even to her eyes, appear to have a different interest, and her nose and chin are the only parties likely to join issue.

MRS. CANDOUR. Ha! ha! ha!

SIR PETER [aside]. Mercy on my life!—a person they dine with twice a week!

MRS. CANDOUR. Nay, but I vow you shall not carry the laugh off so—for give me leave to say, that Mrs. Ogle—

SIR PETER. Madam, madam, I beg your pardon—there's no stopping these good gentlemen's tongues. But when I tell you, Mrs. Candour, that the lady they are abusing is a particular friend of mine, I hope you'll not take her part.

LADY SNEERWELL. Ha! ha! ha! well said, Sir Peter! but you are a cruel creature—too phlegmatic yourself for a jest, and too peevish to allow wit in others.

SIR PETER. Ah, madam, true wit is more nearly allied to good nature than your ladyship is aware of.

LADY TEAZLE. True, Sir Peter: I believe they are so near akin that they can never be united.

SIR BENJAMIN. Or rather, suppose them man and wife, because one seldom sees them together.

LADY TEAZLE. But Sir Peter is such an enemy to scandal, I believe he would have it put down by parliament.

SIR PETER. 'Fore heaven, madam, if they were to consider the sporting with reputation of as much importance as poaching on manors, and pass an act for the preservation of fame, as well as game, I believe many would thank them for the bill.

LADY SNEERWELL. O Lud! Sir Peter; would you deprive us of our privileges?

SIR PETER. Ay, madam; and then no person should be permitted to kill characters and run down reputations, but qualified old maids and disappointed widows.

LADY SNEERWELL. Go, you monster!

MRS. CANDOUR. But, surely, you would not be quite so severe on those who only report what they hear?

SIR PETER. Yes, madam, I would have law merchant for them too; and in all cases of slander currency, whenever the drawer of the lie was not to be found, the injured parties should have a right to come on any of the indorsers.

CRABTREE. Well, for my part, I believe there never was a scandalous tale without some foundation.

LADY SNEERWELL. Come, ladies, shall we sit down to cards in the next room?

[Enter SERVANT, who whispers

SIR PETER.]

SIR PETER. I'll be with them directly.—[Exit SERVANT.] [Aside.] I'll get away unperceived.

LADY SNEERWELL. Sir Peter, you are not going to leave us?

SIR PETER. Your ladyship must excuse me; I'm called away by particular business. But I leave my character behind me. [Exit.]

SIR BENJAMIN. Well—certainly, Lady Teazle, that lord of yours is a strange being: I could tell you some stories of him would make you laugh heartily if he were not your husband.

LADY TEAZLE. Oh, pray don't mind that; come, do let's hear them.

[Exeunt all but JOSEPH SURFACE and MARIA.]

JOSEPH SURFACE. Maria, I see you have no satisfaction in this society.

MARIA. How is it possible I should? If to raise malicious smiles at the infirmities or misfortunes of those who have never injured us be the province of wit or humour, Heaven grant me a double portion of dulness!

JOSEPH SURFACE. Yet they appear more ill-natured than they are; they have no malice at heart.

MARIA. Then is their conduct still more contemptible; for, in my opinion, nothing could excuse the intemperance of their tongues but a natural and uncontrollable bitterness of mind.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Undoubtedly, madam; and it has always been a sentiment of mine, that to propagate a malicious truth wantonly is more despicable than to falsify from revenge. But can you, Maria, feel thus for others, and be unkind to me alone? Is hope to be denied the tenderest passion?

MARIA. Why will you distress me by renewing this subject?

JOSEPH SURFACE. Ah, Maria! you would not treat me thus, and oppose your guardian, Sir Peter's will, but that I see that profligate Charles is still a favoured rival.

MARIA. Ungenerously urged! But, whatever my sentiments are for that unfortunate young man, be assured I shall not feel more bound to give him up, because his distresses have lost him the regard even of a brother.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Nay, but, Maria, do not leave me with a frown: by all that's honest, I swear. [Kneels.]

[Reënter LADY TEAZLE behind.]

[Aside.] Gad's life, here's Lady Teazle.—[Aloud to MARIA.] You must not—no, you shall not—for, though I have the greatest regard for Lady Teazle—

MARIA. Lady Teazle!

JOSEPH SURFACE. Yet were Sir Peter to suspect—

LADY TEAZLE [coming forward]. What is this, pray? Does he take her for me?—Child, you are wanted in the next room.—[Exit MARIA.] What is all this, pray?

JOSEPH SURFACE. Oh, the most unlucky circumstance in nature! Maria has somehow suspected the tender concern I have for your happiness, and threatened to acquaint Sir Peter with her suspicions, and I was just endeavouring to reason with her when you came in.

LADY TEAZLE. Indeed! but you seemed to adopt a very tender mode of reasoning—do you usually argue on your knees?

JOSEPH SURFACE. Oh, she's a child, and I thought a little bombast—But, Lady Teazle, when are you to give me your judgment on my library, as you promised?

LADY TEAZLE. No, no; I begin to think it would be imprudent, and you know I admit you as a lover no farther than fashion requires.

JOSEPH SURFACE. True—a mere Platonic cicisbeo, what every wife is entitled to.

LADY TEAZLE. Certainly, one must not be out of the fashion. However, I have so many of my country prejudices left, that, though Sir Peter's ill humour may vex me ever so, it never shall provoke me to—

JOSEPH SURFACE. The only revenge in your power. Well, I applaud your moderation.

LADY TEAZLE. Go—you are an insinuating wretch! But we shall be missed—let us join the company.

JOSEPH SURFACE. But we had best not return together.

LADY TEAZLE. Well, don't stay; for Maria sha'n't come to hear any more of your reasoning, I promise you. [Exit.]

JOSEPH SURFACE. A curious dilemma, truly, my politics have run me into! I wanted, at first, only to ingratiate myself with Lady Teazle, that she might not be my enemy with Maria; and I have, I don't know how, become her serious lover. Sincerely I begin to wish I had never made such a point of gaining so very good a character, for it has led me into so many cursed rogueries that I doubt I shall be exposed at last. [Exit.]

SCENE III—A room in SIR PETER TEAZLE'S house.

[Enter SIR OLIVER SURFACE and ROWLEY.]

SIR OLIVER. Ha! ha! ha! so my old friend is married, hey?—a young wife out of the country. Ha! ha! ha! that he should have stood bluff to old bachelor so long, and sink into a husband at last!

ROWLEY. But you must not rally him on the subject, Sir Oliver; 'tis a tender point, I assure you, though he has been married only seven months.

SIR OLIVER. Then he has been just half a year on the stool of repentance!—Poor

Peter! But you say he has entirely given up Charles—never sees him, hey?

ROWLEY. His prejudice against him is astonishing, and I am sure greatly increased by a jealousy of him with Lady Teazle, which he has industriously been led into by a scandalous society in the neighbourhood, who have contributed not a little to Charles's ill name. Whereas the truth is, I believe, if the lady is partial to either of them, his brother is the favourite.

SIR OLIVER. Ay, I know there are a set of malicious, prating, prudent gossips, both male and female, who murder characters to kill time, and will rob a young fellow of his good name before he has years to know the value of it. But I am not to be prejudiced against my nephew by such, I promise you! No, no: if Charles has done nothing false or mean, I shall compound for his extravagance.

ROWLEY. Then, my life on't, you will reclaim him. Ah, sir, it gives me new life to find that your heart is not turned against him, and that the son of my good old master has one friend, however, left.

SIR OLIVER. What! shall I forget, Master Rowley, when I was at his years myself? Egad, my brother and I were neither of us very prudent youths; and yet, I believe, you have not seen many better men than your old master was?

ROWLEY. Sir, 'tis this reflection gives me assurance that Charles may yet be a credit to his family. But here comes Sir Peter.

SIR OLIVER. Egad, so he does! Mercy on me! he's greatly altered, and seems to have a settled married look! One may read husband in his face at this distance.

[Enter SIR PETER TEAZLE.]

SIR PETER. Ha! Sir Oliver—my old friend! Welcome to England a thousand times!

SIR OLIVER. Thank you, thank you, Sir Peter! and i' faith I am glad to find you well, believe me!

SIR PETER. Oh! 'tis a long time since we met—fifteen years, I doubt, Sir Oliver, and many a cross accident in the time.

SIR OLIVER. Ay, I have had my share. But, what! I find you are married, hey, my old boy? Well, well, it can't be helped; and so—I wish you joy with all my heart?

SIR PETER. Thank you, thank you, Sir Oliver.—Yes, I have entered into—the happy state; but we'll not talk of that now.

SIR OLIVER. True, true, Sir Peter; old friends should not begin on grievances at first meeting. No, no, no.

ROWLEY [aside to SIR OLIVER]. Take care, pray, sir.

SIR OLIVER. Well, so one of my nephews is a wild rogue, hey?

SIR PETER. Wild! Ah! my old friend, I grieve for your disappointment there; he's a lost young man, indeed. However, his brother will make you amends; Joseph is, indeed, what a youth should be—every body in the world speaks well of him.

SIR OLIVER. I am sorry to hear it; he has too good a character to be an honest fellow. Every body speaks well of him! Pshaw! then he has bowed as low to knaves and fools as to the honest dignity of genius and virtue.

SIR PETER. What, Sir Oliver! do you blame him for not making enemies?

SIR OLIVER. Yes, if he has merit enough to deserve them.

SIR PETER. Well, well—you'll be convinced when you know him. 'Tis edification to hear him converse; he professes the noblest sentiments.

SIR OLIVER. Oh, plague of his sentiments! If he salutes me with a scrap of morality in his mouth, I shall be sick directly. But, however, don't mistake me, Sir Peter; I don't mean to defend Charles's errors: but, before I form my judgment of either of them, I intend to make a trial of their hearts; and my friend Rowley and I have planned something for the purpose.

ROWLEY. And Sir Peter shall own for once he has been mistaken.

SIR PETER. Oh, my life on Joseph's honour!

SIR OLIVER. Well—come, give us a bottle of good wine, and we'll drink the lads' health, and tell you our scheme.

SIR PETER. Allons, then!

SIR OLIVER. And don't, Sir Peter, be so severe against your old friend's son. Odds my life! I am not sorry that he has run out of the course a little: for my part, I hate to see prudence clinging to the green suckers of youth; 'tis like ivy round a sapling, and spoils the growth of the tree. [Exeunt.]

ACT III

SCENE I—A room in SIR PETER TEAZLE'S house.

[Enter SIR PETER TEAZLE, SIR OLIVER SURFACE, and ROWLEY.]

SIR PETER. Well, then, we will see this fellow first, and have our wine afterwards. But how is this, Master Rowley? I don't see the jest of your scheme.

ROWLEY. Why, sir, this Mr. Stanley, whom I was speaking of, is nearly related to them by their mother. He was once a merchant in Dublin, but has been ruined by a series of undeserved misfortunes. He has applied, by letter, since his confinement, both to Mr. Surface and Charles: from the former he has received nothing but evasive promises of future service, while Charles has done all that his extravagance has left him power to do; and he is, at this time, endeavouring to raise a sum of money, part of which, in the midst of his own distresses, I know he intends for the service of poor Stanley.

SIR OLIVER. Ah! he is my brother's son.

SIR PETER. Well, but how is Sir Oliver personally to—

ROWLEY. Why, sir, I will inform Charles and his brother that Stanley has obtained permission to apply personally to his friends; and, as they have neither of them ever seen him, let Sir Oliver assume his character, and he will have a fair opportunity of judging, at least, of the benevolence of their dispositions: and believe me, sir, you will find in the youngest brother one who, in the midst of folly and dissipation, has still, as our immortal bard expresses it,—

“a heart to pity, and a hand,
Open as day, for melting charity.”

SIR PETER. Pshaw! What signifies his having an open hand or purse either, when he has nothing left to give? Well, well, make the trial, if you please. But where is the fellow whom you brought for Sir Oliver to examine, relative to Charles's affairs?

ROWLEY. Below, waiting his commands and no one can give him better intelligence.—This, Sir Oliver, is a friendly Jew, who, to do him justice, has done every thing in his power to bring your nephew to a proper sense of his extravagance.

SIR PETER. Pray let us have him in.

ROWLEY [calls to SERVANT]. Desire Mr. Moses to walk upstairs.

SIR PETER. But, pray, why should you suppose he will speak the truth?

ROWLEY. Oh, I have convinced him that he has no chance of recovering certain sums advanced to Charles but through the bounty of Sir Oliver, who he knows is arrived; so that you may depend on his fidelity to his own interests. I have also another evidence in my power, one Snake, whom I have detected in a matter little short of forgery, and shall shortly produce to remove some of your prejudices, Sir Peter, relative to Charles and Lady Teazle.

SIR PETER. I have heard too much on that subject.

ROWLEY. Here comes the honest Israelite.

[Enter MOSES.]

—This is Sir Oliver.

SIR OLIVER. Sir, I understand you have lately had great dealings with my nephew Charles.

MOSES. Yes, Sir Oliver, I have done all I could for him; but he was ruined before he came to me for assistance.

SIR OLIVER. That was unlucky, truly; for you have had no opportunity of showing your talents.

MOSES. None at all; I hadn't the pleasure of knowing his distresses till he was some thousands worse than nothing.

SIR OLIVER. Unfortunate, indeed! But I suppose you have done all in your power for him, honest Moses?

MOSES. Yes, he knows that. This very evening I was to have brought him a gentleman from the city, who does not know him, and will, I believe, advance him some money.

SIR PETER. What, one Charles has never had money from before?

MOSES. Yes, Mr. Premium, of Crutched Friars, formerly a broker.

SIR PETER. Egad, Sir Oliver, a thought strikes me!—Charles, you say, does not know Mr. Premium?

MOSES. Not at all.

SIR PETER. Now then, Sir Oliver, you may have a better opportunity of satisfying yourself than by an old romancing tale of a poor relation; go with my friend Moses, and represent Premium, and then, I'll answer for it, you'll see your nephew in all his glory.

SIR OLIVER. Egad, I like this idea better than the other, and I may visit Joseph afterwards as old Stanley.

SIR PETER. True—so you may.

ROWLEY. Well, this is taking Charles rather at a disadvantage, to be sure. However, Moses, you understand Sir Peter, and will be faithful?

MOSES. You may depend upon me.—[Looks at his watch.] This is near the time I was to have gone.

SIR OLIVER. I'll accompany you as soon as you please, Moses—But hold! I have forgot one thing—how the plague shall I be able to pass for a Jew?

MOSES. There's no need—the principal is Christian.

SIR OLIVER. Is he? I'm very sorry to hear it. But, then again, an't I rather too smartly dressed to look like a money lender?

SIR PETER. Not at all; 'twould not be out of character, if you went in your own carriage—would it, Moses?

MOSES. Not in the least.

SIR OLIVER. Well, but how must I talk; there's certainly some cant of usury and mode of treating that I ought to know.

SIR PETER. Oh, there's not much to learn. The great point, as I take it, is to be exorbitant enough in your demands. Hey, Moses?

MOSES. Yes, that's a very great point.

SIR OLIVER. I'll answer for't I'll not be wanting in that. I'll ask him eight or ten per cent. on the loan, at least.

MOSES. If you ask him no more than that, you'll be discovered immediately.

SIR OLIVER. Hey! what, the plague! how much then?

MOSES. That depends upon the circumstances. If he appears not very anxious for the supply, you should require only forty or fifty per cent.; but if you find him in great distress, and want the moneys very bad, you may ask double.

SIR PETER. A good honest trade you're learning, Sir Oliver.

SIR OLIVER. Truly, I think so—and not unprofitable.

MOSES. Then, you know, you haven't the moneys yourself, but are forced to borrow them for him of a friend.

SIR OLIVER. Oh! I borrow it of a friend, do I?

MOSES. And your friend is an unconscionable dog: but you can't help that.

SIR OLIVER. My friend an unconscionable dog, is he?

MOSES. Yes, and he himself has not the moneys by him, but is forced to sell stock at a great loss.

SIR OLIVER. He is forced to sell stock at a great loss, is he? Well, that's very kind of him.

SIR PETER. I' faith, Sir Oliver—Mr. Premium, I mean—you'll soon be master of the trade. But, Moses! would not you have him run out a little against the Annuity Bill? That would be in character, I should think.

MOSES. Very much.

ROWLEY. And lament that a young man now must be at years of discretion before he is suffered to ruin himself?

MOSES. Ay, great pity!

SIR PETER. And abuse the public for allowing merit to an act whose only object is to snatch misfortune and imprudence from the rapacious gripe of usury, and give the minor a chance of inheriting his estate without being undone by coming into possession.

SIR OLIVER. So, so—Moses shall give me farther instructions as we go together.

SIR PETER. You will not have much time, for your nephew lives hard by.

SIR OLIVER. Oh, never fear! my tutor appears so able, that though Charles lived in the next street, it must be my own fault if I am not a complete rogue before I turn the corner.

[Exit with MOSES.]

SIR PETER. So, now, I think Sir Oliver will be convinced: you are partial, Rowley, and would have prepared Charles for the other plot.

ROWLEY. No, upon my word, Sir Peter.

SIR PETER. Well, go bring me this Snake, and I'll hear what he has to say presently. I see Maria, and want to speak with her.—[Exit ROWLEY.] I should be glad to be convinced my suspicions of Lady Teazle and Charles were unjust. I have never yet opened my mind on this subject to my friend Joseph—I am determined I will do it—he will give me his opinion sincerely.

[Enter MARIA.]

So, child, has Mr. Surface returned with you?

MARIA. No, sir; he was engaged.

SIR PETER. Well, Maria, do you not reflect, the more you converse with that amiable young man, what return his partiality for you deserves?

MARIA. Indeed, Sir Peter, your frequent importunity on this subject distresses me extremely—you compel me to declare, that I know no man who has ever paid me a particular attention whom I would not prefer to Mr. Surface.

SIR PETER. So—here's perverseness! No, no, Maria, 'tis Charles only whom you would prefer. 'Tis evident his vices and follies have won your heart.

MARIA. This is unkind, sir. You know I have obeyed you in neither seeing nor corresponding with him: I have heard enough to convince me that he is unworthy my regard. Yet I cannot think it culpable, if, while my understanding severely condemns his vices, my heart suggests some pity for his distresses.

SIR PETER. Well, well, pity him as much as you please; but give your heart and hand to a worthier object.

MARIA. Never to his brother!

SIR PETER. Go, perverse and obstinate! But take care, madam; you have never yet known what the authority of a guardian is: don't compel me to inform you of it.

MARIA. I can only say, you shall not have just reason. 'Tis true, by my father's will, I am for a short period bound to regard you as his substitute; but must cease to think you so, when you would compel me to be miserable.

[Exit.]

SIR PETER. Was ever man so crossed as I am, every thing conspiring to fret me! I had not been involved in matrimony a fortnight, before her father, a hale and hearty man, died, on purpose, I believe, for the pleasure of plaguing me with the care of his daughter.—[LADY TEAZLE sings without.] But here comes my helpmate! She appears in great good humour. How happy I should be if I could tease her into loving me, though but a little!

[Enter LADY TEAZLE.]

LADY TEAZLE. Lud! Sir Peter, I hope you haven't been quarrelling with Maria? It is not using me well to be ill-humoured when I am not by.

SIR PETER. Ah, Lady Teazle, you might have the power to make me good-humoured at all times.

LADY TEAZLE. I am sure I wish I had; for I want you to be in a charming sweet temper at this moment. Do be good-humoured now, and let me have two hundred pounds, will you?

SIR PETER. Two hundred pounds; what, an't I to be in a good humour without paying for it! But speak to me thus, and i' faith there's nothing I could refuse you. You shall have it; but seal me a bond for the repayment.

LADY TEAZLE. Oh, no—there—my note of hand will do as well. [Offering her hand.]

SIR PETER. And you shall no longer reproach me with not giving you an independent settlement. I mean shortly to surprise you: but shall we always live thus, hey?

LADY TEAZLE. If you please. I'm sure I don't care how soon we leave off quarrelling, provided you'll own you were tired first.

SIR PETER. Well—then let our future contest be, who shall be most obliging.

LADY TEAZLE. I assure you, Sir Peter, good nature becomes you. You look now as you did before we were married, when you used to walk with me under the elms, and tell me stories of what a gallant you were in your youth, and chuck me under the chin, you would; and asked me if I thought I could love an old fellow, who would deny me nothing—didn't you?

SIR PETER. Yes, yes, and you were as kind and attentive—

LADY TEAZLE. Ay, so I was, and would always take your part, when my acquaintance used to abuse you, and turn you into ridicule.

SIR PETER. Indeed!

LADY TEAZLE. Ay, and when my cousin Sophy has called you a stiff, peevish old bachelor, and laughed at me for thinking of marrying one who might be my father, I have always defended you, and said, I didn't think you so ugly by any means.

SIR PETER. Thank you.

LADY TEAZLE. And I dared say you'd make a very good sort of a husband.

SIR PETER. And you prophesied right; and we shall now be the happiest couple—

LADY TEAZLE. And never differ again?

SIR PETER. No, never!—though at the same time, indeed, my dear Lady Teazle, you must watch your temper very seriously; for in all our little quarrels, my dear, if you recollect, my love, you always began first.

LADY TEAZLE. I beg your pardon, my dear Sir Peter: indeed, you always gave the provocation.

SIR PETER. Now see, my angel! take care—contradicting isn't the way to keep friends.

LADY TEAZLE. Then don't you begin it, my love!

SIR PETER. There, now! you—you are going on. You don't perceive, my life, that you are just doing the very thing which you know always makes me angry.

LADY TEAZLE. Nay, you know, if you will be angry without any reason, my dear—

SIR PETER. There! now you want to quarrel again.

LADY TEAZLE. No, I'm sure I don't: but, if you will be so peevish—

SIR PETER. There now! who begins first?

LADY TEAZLE. Why, you, to be sure. I said nothing—but there's no bearing your temper.

SIR PETER. No, no, madam: the fault's in your own temper.

LADY TEAZLE. Ay, you are just what my cousin Sophy said you would be.

SIR PETER. Your cousin Sophy is a forward, impertinent gipsy.

LADY TEAZLE. You are a great bear, I'm sure, to abuse my relations.

SIR PETER. Now may all the plagues of marriage be doubled on me, if ever I try to be friends with you any more!

LADY TEAZLE. So much the better.

SIR PETER. No, no, madam: 'tis evident you never cared a pin for me, and I was a madman to marry you—a pert, rural coquette, that had refused half the honest squires in the neighbourhood!

LADY TEAZLE. And I am sure I was a fool to marry you—an old dangling bachelor, who was single at fifty, only because he never could meet with any one who would have him.

SIR PETER. Ay, ay, madam; but you were pleased enough to listen to me: you never had such an offer before.

LADY TEAZLE. No! didn't I refuse Sir Tivy Terrier, who every body said would have been a better match? for his estate is just as good as yours, and he has broke his neck since we have been married.

SIR PETER. I have done with you, madam! You are an unfeeling, ungrateful—but there's an end of everything. I believe you capable of everything that is bad. Yes, madam, I now believe the reports relative to you and Charles, madam. Yes, madam, you and Charles are, not without grounds—

LADY TEAZLE. Take care, Sir Peter! you had better not insinuate any such thing! I'll not be suspected without cause, I promise you.

SIR PETER. Very well, madam! very well! A separate maintenance as soon as you please. Yes, madam, or a divorce! I'll make an example of myself for the benefit of all old bachelors. Let us separate, madam.

LADY TEAZLE. Agreed! agreed! And now, my dear Sir Peter, we are of a mind once more, we may be the happiest couple, and never differ again, you know: ha! ha! ha! Well, you are going to be in a passion, I see, and I shall only interrupt you—so, bye! bye! [Exit.]

SIR PETER. Plagues and tortures! can't I make her angry either! Oh, I am the most miserable fellow! But I'll not bear her presuming to keep her temper: no! she may break my heart, but she sha'n't keep her temper. [Exit.]

SCENE II—A room in CHARLES SURFACE'S house.

[Enter TRIP, MOSES, and SIR OLIVER SURFACE.]

TRIP. Here, Master Moses! if you'll stay a moment I'll try whether—what's the gentleman's name?

SIR OLIVER [aside to MOSES]. Mr. Moses, what is my name?

MOSES. Mr. Premium.

TRIP. Premium—very well. [Exit, taking snuff.]

SIR OLIVER. To judge by the servants, one wouldn't believe the master was ruined. But what!—sure, this was my brother's house?

MOSES. Yes, sir; Mr. Charles bought it of Mr. Joseph, with the furniture, pictures, etc., just as the old gentleman left it. Sir Peter thought it a piece of extravagance in him.

SIR OLIVER. In my mind, the other's economy in selling it to him was more reprehensible by half.

[Reënter TRIP.]

TRIP. My master says you must wait, gentlemen: he has company, and can't speak with you yet.

SIR OLIVER. If he knew who it was wanted to see him, perhaps he would not send such a message.

TRIP. Yes, yes, sir; he knows you are here—I did not forget little Premium: no, no, no.

SIR OLIVER. Very well; and I pray, sir, what may be your name?

TRIP. Trip, sir; my name is Trip, at your service.

SIR OLIVER. Well, then, Mr. Trip, you have a pleasant sort of place here, I guess?

TRIP. Why, yes—here are three or four of us pass our time agreeably enough; but then our wages are sometimes a little in arrear—and not very great either—but fifty pounds a year, and find our own bags and bouquets.

SIR OLIVER [aside]. Bags and bouquets! halters and bastinadoes!

TRIP. And à propos, Moses, have you been able to get me that little bill discounted?

SIR OLIVER [aside]. Wants to raise money too!—mercy on me! Has his distresses too, I warrant, like a lord, and affects creditors and duns.

MOSES. 'Twas not to be done, indeed, Mr. Trip.

TRIP. Good lack, you surprise me! My friend Brush has indorsed it, and I thought when he put his name at the back of a bill 'twas the same as cash.

MOSES. No, 'twouldn't do.

TRIP. A small sum—but twenty pounds. Hark'ee, Moses, do you think you couldn't get it me by way of annuity?

SIR OLIVER [aside]. An annuity! ha! ha! a footman raise money by way of annuity! Well done, luxury, egad!

MOSES. Well, but you must insure your place.

TRIP. Oh, with all my heart! I'll insure my place, and my life too, if you please.

SIR OLIVER [aside]. It's more than I would your neck.

MOSES. But is there nothing you could deposit?

TRIP. Why, nothing capital of my master's wardrobe has dropped lately; but I could give you a mortgage on some of his winter clothes, with equity of redemption before November—or you shall have the reversion of the French velvet, or a post-obit on the blue and silver;—these, I should think, Moses, with a few pair of point ruffles, as a collateral security—hey, my little fellow?

MOSES. Well, well.

[Bell rings.]

TRIP. Egad, I heard the bell! I believe, gentlemen, I can now introduce you. Don't forget the annuity, little Moses! This way, gentlemen, I'll insure my place, you know.

SIR OLIVER [aside]. If the man be a shadow of the master, this is the temple of dissipation indeed! [Exeunt.]

SCENE III—Another room in the same.

[CHARLES SURFACE, SIR HARRY BUMPER, CARELESS, and GENTLEMEN, discovered drinking.]

CHARLES SURFACE. 'Fore heaven, 'tis true!—there's the great degeneracy of the age. Many of our acquaintance have taste, spirit, and politeness; but, plague on't, they won't drink.

CARELESS. It is so, indeed, Charles! they give in to all the substantial luxuries of the table, and abstain from nothing but wine and wit. Oh, certainly society suffers by it intolerably! for now, instead of the social spirit of raillery that used to mantle over a glass of bright Burgundy, their conversation is become just like the Spa-water they drink, which has all the pertness and flatulency of champagne, without its spirit or flavour.

1ST GENTLEMAN. But what are they to do who love play better than wine?

CARELESS. True! there's Sir Harry diets himself for gaming, and is now under a hazard regimen.

CHARLES SURFACE. Then he'll have the worst of it. What! you wouldn't train a horse for the course by keeping him from corn? For my part, egad, I am never so successful as when I am a little merry: let me throw on a bottle of champagne, and I never lose.

ALL. Hey, what?

CHARLES SURFACE. At least I never feel my losses, which is exactly the same thing.

2ND GENTLEMAN. Ay, that I believe.

CHARLES SURFACE. And then, what man can pretend to be a believer in love, who is an abjurer of wine? 'Tis the test by which the lover knows his own heart. Fill a dozen bumpers to a dozen beauties, and she that floats at the top is the maid that has bewitched you.

CARELESS. Now then, Charles, be honest, and give us your real favourite.

CHARLES SURFACE. Why, I have withheld her only in compassion to you. If I toast her, you must give a round of her peers, which is impossible—on earth.

CARELESS. Oh! then we'll find some canonised vestals or heathen goddesses that will do, I warrant!

CHARLES SURFACE. Here then, bumpers, you rogues! bumpers! Maria! Maria!—

SIR HARRY. Maria who?

CHARLES SURFACE. Oh, damn the surname!—'tis too formal to be registered in Love's calendar—Maria!

ALL. Maria!

CHARLES SURFACE. But now, Sir Harry, beware, we must have beauty superlative.

CARELESS. Nay, never study, Sir Harry: we'll stand to the toast, though your mistress should want an eye, and you know you have a song will excuse you.

SIR HARRY. Egad, so I have! and I'll give him the song instead of the lady.

[Sings.]

Here's to the maiden of bashful fifteen;

Here's to the widow of fifty;

Here's to the flaunting extravagant quean,
And here's to the housewife that's thrifty

CHORUS. Let the toast pass,—

Drink to the lass,

I'll warrant she'll prove an excuse for the glass.

Here's to the charmer whose dimples we prize;

Now to the maid who has none, sir:

Here's to the girl with a pair of blue eyes,
And here's to the nymph with but one,
sir.

CHORUS. Let the toast pass, etc.

Here's to the maid with a bosom of snow:

Now to her that's as brown as a berry:

Here's to the wife with a face full of woe.
And now to the damsel that's merry.

CHORUS. Let the toast pass, etc.

For let 'em be clumsy, or let 'em be slim,
Young or ancient, I care not a feather;

So fill a pint bumper quite up to the brim,
So fill up your glasses, nay, fill to the brim,

And let us e'en toast them together.

CHORUS. Let the toast pass, etc.

ALL. Bravo! bravo!

[Enter TRIP, and whispers CHARLES SURFACE.]

CHARLES SURFACE. Gentlemen, you must excuse me a little.—Careless, take the chair, will you?

CARELESS. Nay, pr'ythee, Charles, what now? This is one of your peerless beauties, I suppose, has dropped in by chance?

CHARLES SURFACE. No, faith! To tell you the truth, 'tis a Jew and a broker, who are come by appointment.

CARELESS. Oh! let's have the Jew in.

1ST GENTLEMAN. Ay, and the broker too, by all means.

2ND GENTLEMAN. Yes, yes, the Jew and the broker.

CHARLES SURFACE. Egad, with all my heart!—Trip, bid the gentlemen walk in.—[Exit TRIP.] Though there's one of them a stranger, I can tell you.

CARELESS. Charles, let us give them some generous Burgundy, and perhaps they'll grow conscientious.

CHARLES SURFACE. Oh, hang 'em, no! wine does but draw forth a man's natural qualities; and to make them drink would only be to whet their knavery.

[Reënter TRIP, with SIR OLIVER SURFACE and MOSES.]

CHARLES SURFACE. So, honest Moses; walk in, pray, Mr. Premium—that's the gentleman's name, isn't it, Moses?

MOSES. Yes, sir.

CHARLES SURFACE. Set chairs, Trip.—Sit down, Mr. Premium.—Glasses, Trip.—[TRIP gives chairs and glasses, and exits.] Sit down, Moses.—Come, Mr. Premium, I'll give you a sentiment; here's Success to usury!—Moses, fill the gentleman a bumper.

MOSES. Success to usury! [Drinks.]

CARELESS. Right, Moses—usury is prudence and industry, and deserves to succeed.

SIR OLIVER. Then here's—All the success it deserves! [Drinks.]

CARELESS. No, no, that won't do! Mr. Premium, you have demurred at the toast, and must drink it in a pint bumper.

1ST GENTLEMAN. A pint bumper, at least.

MOSES. Oh, pray, sir, consider—Mr. Premium's a gentleman.

CARELESS. And therefore loves good wine.

2ND GENTLEMAN. Give Moses a quart glass—this is mutiny, and a high contempt for the chair.

CARELESS. Here, now for't! I'll see justice done to the last drop of my bottle.

SIR OLIVER. Nay, pray, gentlemen—I did not expect this usage.

CHARLES SURFACE. No, hang it, you shan't; Mr. Premium's a stranger.

SIR OLIVER [aside]. Odd! I wish I was well out of their company.

CARELESS. Plague on 'em then! if they won't drink, we'll not sit down with them. Come, Harry, the dice are in the next room.—Charles, you'll join us when you have finished your business with the gentlemen?

CHARLES SURFACE. I will! I will!—
[Exit SIR HARRY BUMPER and GENTLEMEN; CARELESS following.] Careless!

CARELESS [returning]. Well!

CHARLES SURFACE. Perhaps I may want you.

CARELESS. Oh, you know I am always ready: word, note, or bond, 'tis all the same to me. [Exit.]

MOSES. Sir, this is Mr. Premium, a gentleman of the strictest honour and secrecy; and always performs what he undertakes. Mr. Premium, this is—

CHARLES SURFACE. Pshaw! have done. Sir, my friend Moses is a very honest fellow, but a little slow at expression: he'll be an hour giving us our titles. Mr. Premium, the plain state of the matter is this: I am an extravagant young fellow who wants to borrow money; you I take to be a prudent old fellow, who have got money to lend. I am blockhead enough to give fifty per cent sooner than not have it; and you, I presume, are rogue enough to take a hundred if you can get it. Now, sir, you see we are acquainted at once, and may proceed to business without farther ceremony.

SIR OLIVER. Exceeding frank, upon my word. I see, sir, you are not a man of many compliments.

CHARLES SURFACE. Oh, no, sir! plain dealing in business I always think best.

SIR OLIVER. Sir, I like you the better for it. However, you are mistaken in one thing; I have no money to lend, but I believe I could procure some of a friend; but then he's an unconscionable dog. Isn't he, Moses? And must sell stock to accommodate you. Mustn't he, Moses?

MOSES. Yes, indeed! You know I always speak the truth, and scorn to tell a lie!

CHARLES SURFACE. Right. People that speak truth generally do. But these are trifles, Mr. Premium. What! I know money isn't to be bought without paying for't!

SIR OLIVER. Well, but what security could you give? You have no land, I suppose?

CHARLES SURFACE. Not a mole-hill, nor a twig, but what's in the bough-pots out of the window!

SIR OLIVER. Nor any stock, I presume?

CHARLES SURFACE. Nothing but live stock—and that's only a few pointers and ponies. But pray, Mr. Premium, are you acquainted at all with any of my connections?

SIR OLIVER. Why, to say truth, I am.

CHARLES SURFACE. Then you must know that I have a devilish rich uncle in the East Indies, Sir Oliver Surface, from whom I have the greatest expectations?

SIR OLIVER. That you have a wealthy uncle, I have heard; but how your expectations will turn out is more, I believe, than you can tell.

CHARLES SURFACE. Oh, no!—there can be no doubt. They tell me I'm a prodigious favourite, and that he talks of leaving me every thing.

SIR OLIVER. Indeed! this is the first I've heard of it.

CHARLES SURFACE. Yes, yes, 'tis just so. Moses knows 'tis true; don't you, Moses?

MOSES. Oh, yes! I'll swear to't.

SIR OLIVER [aside]. Egad, they'll persuade me presently I'm at Bengal.

CHARLES SURFACE. Now I propose, Mr. Premium, if it's agreeable to you, a post-obit on Sir Oliver's life: though at the same time the old fellow has been so liberal to me, that I give you my word, I should be very sorry to hear that anything had happened to him.

SIR OLIVER. Not more than I should, I assure you. But the bond you mention happens to be just the worst security you could offer me—for I might live to a hundred and never see the principal.

CHARLES SURFACE. Oh, yes, you would! the moment Sir Oliver dies, you know, you would come on me for the money.

SIR OLIVER. Then I believe I should be the most unwelcome dun you ever had in your life.

CHARLES SURFACE. What! I suppose you're afraid that Sir Oliver is too good a life?

SIR OLIVER. No, indeed I am not; though I have heard he is as hale and healthy as any man of his years in Christendom.

CHARLES SURFACE. There again, now, you are misinformed. No, no, the climate has hurt him considerably, poor uncle Oliver. Yes, yes; he breaks apace, I'm told—and is so much altered lately that his nearest relations would not know him.

SIR OLIVER. No! Ha! ha! ha! so much altered lately that his nearest relations would not know him! Ha! ha! ha! egad—ha! ha! ha!

CHARLES SURFACE. Ha! ha!—you're glad to hear that, little Premium?

SIR OLIVER. No, no, I'm not.

CHARLES SURFACE. Yes, yes, you are—ha! ha! ha!—you know that mends your chance.

SIR OLIVER. But I'm told Sir Oliver is coming over; nay, some say he is actually arrived.

CHARLES SURFACE. Pshaw! sure I must know better than you whether he's come or not. No, no, rely on't he's at this moment at Calcutta. Isn't he, Moses?

MOSES. Oh, yes, certainly.

SIR OLIVER. Very true, as you say, you must know better than I, though I have it from pretty good authority. Haven't I, Moses?

MOSES. Yes, most undoubted!

SIR OLIVER. But, sir, as I understand you want a few hundreds immediately, is there nothing you could dispose of?

CHARLES SURFACE. How do you mean?

SIR OLIVER. For instance, now, I have heard that your father left behind him a great quantity of massy old plate.

CHARLES SURFACE. O Lud! that's gone long ago. Moses can tell you how better than I can.

SIR OLIVER [aside]. Good lack! all the family race-cups and corporation-bowls!—[Aloud.] Then it was also supposed that his library was one of the most valuable and compact.

CHARLES SURFACE. Yes, yes, so it was—vastly too much so for a private gentleman. For my part, I was always of a communicative disposition, so I thought it a shame to keep so much knowledge to myself.

SIR OLIVER [aside]. Mercy upon me! learning that had run in the family like an heir-loom!—[Aloud.] Pray, what are become of the books?

CHARLES SURFACE. You must inquire of the auctioneer, Master Premium, for I don't believe even Moses can direct you.

MOSES. I know nothing of books.

SIR OLIVER. So, so, nothing of the family property left, I suppose?

CHARLES SURFACE. Not much, indeed; unless you have a mind to the family pictures. I have got a room full of ancestors above; and if you have a taste for old paintings, egad, you shall have 'em a bargain!

SIR OLIVER. Hey! what the devil! sure, you wouldn't sell your forefathers, would you?

CHARLES SURFACE. Every man of them, to the best bidder.

SIR OLIVER. What! your great-uncles and aunts?

CHARLES SURFACE. Ay, and my great-grandfathers and grandmothers too.

SIR OLIVER [aside]. Now I give him up!—[Aloud.] What the plague, have you no bowels for your own kindred? Odds life! do you take me for Shylock in the play, that you would raise money of me on your own flesh and blood?

CHARLES SURFACE. Nay, my little broker, don't be angry: what need you care, if you have your money's worth?

SIR OLIVER. Well, I'll be the purchaser: I think I can dispose of the family canvases.—[Aside.] Oh, I'll never forgive him this! never!

[Reënter CARELESS.]

CARELESS. Come, Charles, what keeps you?

CHARLES SURFACE. I can't come yet. I' faith, we are going to have a sale above stairs; here's little Premium will buy all my ancestors!

CARELESS. Oh, burn your ancestors!

CHARLES SURFACE. No, he may do that afterwards, if he pleases. Stay, Careless, we want you: egad, you shall be auctioneer—so come along with us.

CARELESS. Oh, have with you, if that's the case. I can handle a hammer as well as a dice-box! Going! going!

SIR OLIVER [aside]. Oh, the profligates!

CHARLES SURFACE. Come, Moses, you shall be appraiser, if we want one. Gad's life, little Premium, you don't seem to like the business?

SIR OLIVER. Oh, yes, I do, vastly! Ha! ha! ha! yes, yes, I think it a rare joke to sell one's family by auction—ha! ha! —[Aside.] Oh, the prodigal!

CHARLES SURFACE. To be sure! when a man wants money, where the plague should he get assistance, if he can't make free with his own relations! [Exeunt.]

SIR OLIVER. I'll never forgive him; never! never!

ACT IV

SCENE I—A picture room in CHARLES SURFACE'S house.

[Enter CHARLES SURFACE, SIR OLIVER SURFACE, MOSES, and CARELESS.]

CHARLES SURFACE. Walk in, gentlemen, pray walk in;—here they are, the family of the Surfaces, up to the Conquest.

SIR OLIVER. And, in my opinion, a goodly collection.

CHARLES SURFACE. Ay, ay, these are done in the true spirit of portrait-painting; no volontière grace or expression. Not like the works of your modern Raphaels, who give you the strongest resemblance, yet contrive to make your portrait independent of you; so that you may sink the original and not hurt the picture. No, no; the merit of these is the inveterate likeness—all stiff and awkward as the originals, and like nothing in human nature besides.

SIR OLIVER. Ah! we shall never see such figures of men again.

CHARLES SURFACE. I hope not. Well, you see, Master Premium, what a domestic character I am; here I sit of an evening surrounded by my family. But come, get to your pulpit, Mr. Auctioneer; here's an old gouty chair of my grandfather's will answer the purpose.

CARELESS. Ay, ay, this will do. But, Charles, I haven't a hammer; and what's an auctioneer without his hammer?

CHARLES SURFACE. Egad, that's true. What parchment have we here? Oh, our genealogy in full. [Taking pedigree down.] Here, Careless, you shall have no common bit of mahogany, here's the family tree for you, you rogue! This shall be your hammer, and now you may knock down my ancestors with their own pedigree.

SIR OLIVER [aside]. What an unnatural rogue!—an ex post facto parricide!

CARELESS. Yes, yes, here's a list of your generation indeed;—faith, Charles, this is the most convenient thing you could have found for the business, for 'twill not only serve as a hammer, but a catalogue into the bargain. Come, begin—A-going, a-going, a-going!

CHARLES SURFACE. Bravo, Careless! Well, here's my great-uncle, Sir Richard Raveline, a marvellous good general in his day, I assure you. He served in all the Duke of Marlborough's wars, and got that cut over his eye at the battle of Malplaquet. What say you, Mr. Premium? look at him—there's a hero! not cut out of his feathers, as your modern clipped captains are, but enveloped in wig and regimentals, as a general should be. What do you bid?

SIR OLIVER [aside to Moses]. Bid him speak.

MOSES. Mr. Premium would have you speak.

CHARLES SURFACE. Why, then, he shall have him for ten pounds, and I'm sure that's not dear for a staff-officer.

SIR OLIVER [aside]. Heaven deliver me! his famous uncle Richard for ten pounds! —[Aloud.] Very well, sir, I take him at that.

CHARLES SURFACE. Careless, knock down my uncle Richard.—Here, now, is a maiden sister of his, my great-aunt Deborah, done by Kneller, in his best manner, and esteemed a very formidable likeness. There she is, you see, a shepherdess feeding her flock. You shall have her for five pounds ten—the sheep are worth the money.

SIR OLIVER [aside]. Ah! poor Deborah! a woman who set such a value on herself! —[Aloud.] Five pounds ten—she's mine.

CHARLES SURFACE. Knock down my aunt Deborah! Here, now, are two that were a sort of cousins of theirs.—You see, Moses, these pictures were done some time ago, when beaux wore wigs, and the ladies their own hair.

SIR OLIVER. Yes, truly, head-dresses appear to have been a little lower in those days.

CHARLES SURFACE. Well, take that couple for the same.

MOSES. 'Tis a good bargain.

CHARLES SURFACE. Careless!—This, now, is a grandfather of my mother's, a learned judge, well known on the western circuit. —What do you rate him at, Moses?

MOSES. Four guineas.

CHARLES SURFACE. Four guineas! Gad's life, you don't bid me the price of his wig.—Mr. Premium, you have more respect for the woolsack; do let us knock his lordship down at fifteen.

SIR OLIVER. By all means.

CARELESS. Gone!

CHARLES SURFACE. And there are two brothers of his, William and Walter Blunt, Esquires, both members of parliament, and noted speakers; and, what's very extraordinary, I believe, this is the first time they were ever bought or sold.

SIR OLIVER. That is very extraordinary, indeed! I'll take them at your own price, for the honour of parliament.

CARELESS. Well said, little Premium! I'll knock them down at forty.

CHARLES SURFACE. Here's a jolly fellow—I don't know what relation, but he was mayor of Norwich: take him at eight pounds.

SIR OLIVER. No, no; six will do for the mayor.

CHARLES SURFACE. Come, make it guineas, and I'll throw you the two aldermen there into the bargain.

SIR OLIVER. They're mine.

CHARLES SURFACE. Careless, knock down the mayor and aldermen. But, plague on't! we shall be all day retailing in this manner; do let us deal wholesale: what say you, little Premium? Give me three hundred pounds for the rest of the family in the lump.

CARELESS. Ay, ay, that will be the best way.

SIR OLIVER. Well, well, any thing to accommodate you; they are mine. But there is one portrait which you have always passed over.

CARELESS. What, that ill-looking little fellow over the settee.

SIR OLIVER. Yes, sir, I mean that; though I don't think him so ill-looking a little fellow, by any means.

CHARLES SURFACE. What, that? Oh; that's my uncle Oliver! 'twas done before he went to India.

CARELESS. Your uncle Oliver! Gad, then you'll never be friends, Charles. That, now, to me, is as stern a looking rogue as ever I saw; an unforgiving eye, and a disinheriting countenance! an inveterate knave, depend on't. Don't you think so, little Premium?

SIR OLIVER. Upon my soul, sir, I do not; I think it is as honest a looking face as any in the room, dead or alive. But I suppose uncle Oliver goes with the rest of the lumber?

CHARLES SURFACE. No; hang it! I'll not part with poor Noll. The old fellow has been very good to me, and, egad, I'll keep his picture while I've a room to put it in.

SIR OLIVER [aside]. The rogue's my nephew after all!—[Aloud.] But, sir, I have somehow taken a fancy to that picture.

CHARLES SURFACE. I'm sorry for't, for you certainly will not have it. Oons, haven't you got enough of them?

SIR OLIVER [aside]. I forgive him every thing!—[Aloud.] But, sir, when I take a whim in my head, I don't value money. I'll give you as much for that as for all the rest.

CHARLES SURFACE. Don't tease me, master broker; I tell you I'll not part with it, and there's an end of it.

SIR OLIVER [aside]. How like his father the dog is!—[Aloud.] Well, well, I have done.—[Aside.] I did not perceive it before, but I think I never saw such a striking resemblance.—[Aloud.] Here is a draft for your sum.

CHARLES SURFACE. Why, 'tis for eight hundred pounds!

SIR OLIVER. You will not let Sir Oliver go?

CHARLES SURFACE. Zounds! no! I tell you, once more.

SIR OLIVER. Then never mind the difference, we'll balance that another time. But give me your hand on the bargain; you are an honest fellow, Charles—I beg pardon, sir, for being so free.—Come, Moses.

CHARLES SURFACE. Egad, this is a whimsical old fellow!—But hark'ee, Premium, you'll prepare lodgings for these gentlemen.

SIR OLIVER. Yes, yes, I'll send for them in a day or two.

CHARLES SURFACE. But hold; do now send a genteel conveyance for them, for, I assure you, they were most of them used to ride in their own carriages.

SIR OLIVER. I will, I will—for all but Oliver.

CHARLES SURFACE. Ay, all but the little nabob.

SIR OLIVER. You're fixed on that?

CHARLES SURFACE. Peremptorily.

SIR OLIVER [aside]. A dear extravagant rogue!—[Aloud.] Good day!—Come, Moses.—[Aside.] Let me hear now who dares call him profligate.

[Exit with MOSES.]

CARELESS. Why, this is the oddest genius of the sort I ever met with!

CHARLES SURFACE. Egad, he's the prince of brokers, I think. I wonder how the devil Moses got acquainted with so honest a fellow.—Ha! here's Rowley.—Do, Careless, say I'll join the company in a few moments.

CARELESS. I will—but don't let that old blockhead persuade you to squander any of that money on old musty debts, or any such nonsense; for tradesmen, Charles, are the most exorbitant fellows.

CHARLES SURFACE. Very true, and paying them is only encouraging them.

CARELESS. Nothing else.

CHARLES SURFACE. Ay, ay, never fear.—[Exit CARELESS.] So! this was an odd old fellow, indeed. Let me see, two-thirds of these five hundred and thirty odd pounds are mine by right. 'Fore heaven! I find one's ancestors are more valuable relations than I took them for!—Ladies and gentlemen, your most obedient and very grateful servant. [Bows ceremoniously to the pictures.]

[Enter ROWLEY.]

Ha! old Rowley! egad, you are just come in time to take leave of your old acquaintance.

ROWLEY. Yes, I heard they were a-going. But I wonder you can have such spirits under so many distresses.

CHARLES SURFACE. Why, there's the point! my distresses are so many, that I can't afford to part with my spirits; but I shall be rich and splenetic, all in good time. However, I suppose you are surprised that I am not more sorrowful at parting with so many near relations; to be sure, 'tis very affecting, but you see they never move a muscle, so why should I?

ROWLEY. There's no making you serious a moment.

CHARLES SURFACE. Yes, faith, I am so now. Here, my honest Rowley, here, get me this changed directly, and take a hundred pounds of it immediately to old Stanley.

ROWLEY. A hundred pounds! Consider only—

CHARLES SURFACE. Gad's life, don't talk about it! poor Stanley's wants are pressing, and, if you don't make haste, we shall have some one call that has a better right to the money.

ROWLEY. Ah! there's the point! I never will cease dunning you with the old proverb—

CHARLES SURFACE. Be just before you're generous.—Why, so I would if I could; but Justice is an old hobbling beldame, and I can't get her to keep pace with Generosity, for the soul of me.

ROWLEY. Yet, Charles, believe me, one hour's reflection—

CHARLES SURFACE. Ay, ay, it's very true; but, hark'ee Rowley, while I have, by Heaven I'll give; and now for hazard. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II—Another room in the same.

[Enter SIR OLIVER SURFACE and MOSES.]

MOSES. Well, sir, I think, as Sir Peter said, you have seen Mr. Charles in high glory; 'tis great pity he's so extravagant.

SIR OLIVER. True, but he would not sell my picture.

MOSES. And loves wine and women so much.

SIR OLIVER. But he would not sell my picture.

MOSES. And games so deep.

SIR OLIVER. But he would not sell my picture. Oh, here's Rowley.

[Enter ROWLEY.]

ROWLEY. So, Sir Oliver, I find you have made a purchase—

SIR OLIVER. Yes, yes, our young rake has parted with his ancestors like old tapestry.

ROWLEY. And here has he commissioned me to redeliver you part of the purchase money—I mean, though, in your necessitous character of old Stanley.

MOSES. Ah! there is the pity of all; he is so charitable.

ROWLEY. And I left a hosier and two tailors in the hall, who, I'm sure, won't be paid, and this hundred would satisfy them.

SIR OLIVER. Well, well, I'll pay his debts, and his benevolence too. But now I am no more a broker, and you shall introduce me to the elder brother as old Stanley.

ROWLEY. Not yet awhile; Sir Peter, I know, means to call there about this time.

[Enter TRIP.]

TRIP. Oh, gentlemen, I beg pardon for not showing you out; this way—Moses, a word. [Exit with MOSES.]

SIR OLIVER. There's a fellow for you! Would you believe it, that puppy intercepted the Jew on our coming, and wanted to raise money before he got to his master!

ROWLEY. Indeed!

SIR OLIVER. Yes, they are now planning an annuity business. Ah, Master Rowley, in my days servants were content with the follies of their masters, when they were worn a little threadbare; but now they have their vices, like their birthday clothes, with the gloss on. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III—A library in JOSEPH SURFACE'S house.

[Enter JOSEPH SURFACE and SERVANT.]

JOSEPH SURFACE. No letter from Lady Teazle?

SERVANT. No, sir.

JOSEPH SURFACE [aside]. I am surprised she has not sent, if she is prevented from coming. Sir Peter certainly does not suspect me. Yet I wish I may not lose the heiress, through the scrape I have drawn myself into with the wife; however, Charles's imprudence and bad character are great points in my favour.

[Knocking without.]

SERVANT. Sir, I believe that must be Lady Teazle.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Hold! See whether it is or not, before you go to the door: I have a particular message for you if it should be my brother.

SERVANT. 'Tis her ladyship, sir; she always leaves her chair at the milliner's in the next street.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Stay, stay; draw that screen before the window—that will do;—my opposite neighbour is a maiden lady of so curious a temper.—[SERVANT draws the screen, and exits.] I have a difficult hand to play in this affair. Lady Teazle has lately suspected my views on Maria; but she must by no means be let into that secret,—at least, till I have her more in my power.

[Enter LADY TEAZLE.]

LADY TEAZLE. What, sentiment in soliloquy now? Have you been very impatient? O Lud! don't pretend to look grave. I vow I couldn't come before.

JOSEPH SURFACE. O madam, punctuality is a species of constancy very unfashionable in a lady of quality. [Places chairs, and sits after LADY TEAZLE is seated.]

LADY TEAZLE. Upon my word, you ought to pity me. Do you know Sir Peter is grown so ill-natured to me of late, and so jealous of Charles too—that's the best of the story, isn't it?

JOSEPH SURFACE [aside]. I am glad my scandalous friends keep that up.

LADY TEAZLE. I am sure I wish he would let Maria marry him, and then perhaps he would be convinced; don't you, Mr. Surface?

JOSEPH SURFACE [aside]. Indeed I do not.—[Aloud.] Oh, certainly I do! for then my dear Lady Teazle would also be convinced how wrong her suspicions were of my having any design on the silly girl.

LADY TEAZLE. Well, well, I'm inclined to believe you. But isn't it provoking, to have the most ill-natured things said of one? And there's my friend Lady Sneerwell has circulated I don't know how many scandalous tales of me, and all without any foundation too; that's what vexes me.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Ay, madam, to be sure, that is the provoking circumstance—without foundation; yes, yes, there's the mortification, indeed; for when a scandalous story is believed against one, there certainly is no comfort like the consciousness of having deserved it.

LADY TEAZLE. No, to be sure, then I'd forgive their malice; but to attack me, who am really so innocent, and who never say an ill-natured thing of any body—that is, of any friend; and then Sir Peter, too, to have him so peevish, and so suspicious, when I know the integrity of my own heart—indeed 'tis monstrous!

JOSEPH SURFACE. But, my dear Lady Teazle, 'tis your own fault if you suffer it. When a husband entertains a groundless suspicion of his wife, and withdraws his confidence from her, the original compact is broken, and she owes it to the honour of her sex to endeavour to outwit him.

LADY TEAZLE. Indeed! So that, if he suspects me without cause, it follows, that the best way of curing his jealousy is to give him reason for't?

JOSEPH SURFACE. Undoubtedly—for your husband should never be deceived in you; and in that case it becomes you to be frail in compliment to his discernment.

LADY TEAZLE. To be sure, what you say is very reasonable, and when the consciousness of my innocence—

JOSEPH SURFACE. Ah, my dear madam, there is the great mistake! 'tis this very conscious innocence that is of the greatest prejudice to you. What is it makes you negligent of forms, and careless of the world's opinion? why, the consciousness of your own innocence. What makes you thoughtless in your conduct, and apt to run into a thousand little imprudences? Why, the consciousness of your own innocence. What makes you impatient of Sir Peter's temper, and outrageous at his suspicions? why, the consciousness of your innocence.

LADY TEAZLE. 'Tis very true!

JOSEPH SURFACE. Now, my dear Lady Teazle, if you would but once make a trifling faux pas, you can't conceive how cautious you would grow, and how ready to humour and agree with your husband.

LADY TEAZLE. Do you think so?

JOSEPH SURFACE. Oh, I am sure on't; and then you would find all scandal would cease at once, for—in short, your character at present is like a person in a plethora, absolutely dying from too much health.

LADY TEAZLE. So, so; then I perceive your prescription is, that I must sin in my own defence, and part with my virtue to preserve my reputation?

JOSEPH SURFACE. Exactly so, upon my credit, ma'am.

LADY TEAZLE. Well, certainly this is the oddest doctrine, and the newest receipt for avoiding calumny!

JOSEPH SURFACE. An infallible one, believe me. Prudence, like experience, must be paid for.

LADY TEAZLE. Why, if my understanding were once convinced—

JOSEPH SURFACE. Oh, certainly, madam, your understanding should be convinced. Yes, yes—Heaven forbid I should persuade you to do any thing you thought wrong. No, no, I have too much honour to desire it.

LADY TEAZLE. Don't you think we may as well leave honour out of the argument?

[Rises.]

JOSEPH SURFACE. Ah, the ill effects of your country education, I see, still remain with you.

LADY TEAZLE. I doubt they do indeed; and I will fairly own to you, that if I could be persuaded to do wrong, it would be by Sir Peter's ill usage sooner than your honourable logic, after all.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Then, by this hand, which he is unworthy of—[Taking her hand.]

[Reënter SERVANT.]

'Sdeath, you blockhead—what do you want?

SERVANT. I beg your pardon, sir, but I thought you would not choose Sir Peter to come up without announcing him.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Sir Peter!—Oons—the devil!

LADY TEAZLE. Sir Peter! O Lud! I'm ruined! I'm ruined!

SERVANT. Sir, 'twasn't I let him in.

LADY TEAZLE. Oh! I'm quite undone! What will become of me? Now, Mr. Logg—Oh! mercy, sir, he's on the stairs—I'll get behind here—and if ever I'm so imprudent again—

[Goes behind the screen.]

JOSEPH SURFACE. Give me that book. [Sits down. SERVANT pretends to adjust his chair.]

[Enter SIR PETER TEAZLE.]

SIR PETER. Ay, ever improving himself—Mr. Surface, Mr. Surface—

[Pats JOSEPH on the shoulder.]

JOSEPH SURFACE. Oh, my dear Sir Peter, I beg your pardon.—[Gaping, throws away the book.] I have been dozing over a stupid book. Well, I am much obliged to you for this call. You haven't been here, I believe, since I fitted up this room. Books, you know, are the only things I am a coxcomb in.

SIR PETER. 'Tis very neat indeed. Well, well, that's proper; and you can make even your screen a source of knowledge.—hung, I perceive, with maps.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Oh, yes, I find great use in that screen.

SIR PETER. I dare say you must, certainly, when you want to find anything in a hurry.

JOSEPH SURFACE [aside]. Ay, or to hide any thing in a hurry either.

SIR PETER. Well, I have a little private business—

JOSEPH SURFACE [to SERVANT.] You need not stay.

SERVANT. No, sir.

[Exit.]

JOSEPH SURFACE. Here's a chair, Sir Peter—I beg—

SIR PETER. Well, now we are alone, there is a subject, my dear friend, on which I wish to unburden my mind to you—a point of the greatest moment to my peace; in short, my good friend, Lady Teazle's conduct of late has made me very unhappy.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Indeed! I am very sorry to hear it.

SIR PETER. 'Tis but too plain she has not the least regard for me; but, what's worse, I have pretty good authority to suppose she has formed an attachment to another.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Indeed! you astonish me!

SIR PETER. Yes! and, between ourselves, I think I've discovered the person.

JOSEPH SURFACE. How! you alarm me exceedingly.

SIR PETER. Ay, my dear friend, I knew you would sympathise with me!

JOSEPH SURFACE. Yes, believe me, Sir Peter, such a discovery would hurt me just as much as it would you.

SIR PETER. I am convinced of it. Ah! it is a happiness to have a friend whom we can trust even with one's family secrets. But have you no guess who I mean?

JOSEPH SURFACE. I haven't the most distant idea. It can't be Sir Benjamin Backbite!

SIR PETER. Oh, no! What say you to Charles?

JOSEPH SURFACE. My brother! impossible!

SIR PETER. Oh, my dear friend, the goodness of your own heart misleads you. You judge of others by yourself.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Certainly, Sir Peter, the heart that is conscious of its own integrity is ever slow to credit another's treachery.

SIR PETER. True; but your brother has no sentiment—you never hear him talk so.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Yet I can't but think Lady Teazle herself has too much principle.

SIR PETER. Ay; but what is principle against the flattery of a handsome, lively young fellow?

JOSEPH SURFACE. That's very true.

SIR PETER. And then, you know, the difference of our ages makes it very improbable that she should have any great affection for me; and if she were to be frail, and I were to make it public, why the town would only laugh at me, the foolish old bachelor, who had married a girl.

JOSEPH SURFACE. That's true, to be sure—they would laugh.

SIR PETER. Laugh! ay, and make ballads, and paragraphs, and the devil knows what of me.

JOSEPH SURFACE. No, you must never make it public.

SIR PETER. But then again—that the nephew of my old friend, Sir Oliver, should be the person to attempt such a wrong, hurts me more nearly.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Ay, there's the point. When ingratitude bars the dart of injury, the wound has double danger in it.

SIR PETER. Ay—I, that was, in a manner, left his guardian; in whose house he had been so often entertained; who never in my life denied him—my advice!

JOSEPH SURFACE. Oh, 'tis not to be credited! There may be a man capable of such baseness, to be sure; but, for my part, till you can give me positive proofs, I cannot but doubt it. However, if it should be proved on him, he is no longer a brother of mine—I disclaim kindred with him: for the man who can break the laws of hospitality, and tempt the wife of his friend, deserves to be branded as the pest of society.

SIR PETER. What a difference there is between you! What noble sentiments!

JOSEPH SURFACE. Yet I cannot suspect Lady Teazle's honour.

SIR PETER. I am sure I wish to think well of her, and to remove all ground of quarrel between us. She has lately reproached me more than once with having made no settlement on her; and in our last quarrel, she almost hinted that she should not break her heart if I was dead. Now, as we seem to differ in our ideas of expense, I have resolved she shall have her own way, and be her own mistress in that respect for the future; and, if I were to die, she will find I have not been inattentive to her interest while living. Here, my friend, are the drafts of two deeds, which I wish to have your opinion on. By one, she will enjoy eight hundred a year independent while I live and, by the other, the bulk of my fortune at my death.

JOSEPH SURFACE. This conduct, Sir Peter, is indeed truly generous.—[Aside.] I wish it may not corrupt my pupil.

SIR PETER. Yes, I am determined she shall have no cause to complain, though I would not have her acquainted with the latter instance of my affection yet awhile.

JOSEPH SURFACE [aside]. Nor I, if I could help it.

SIR PETER. And now, my dear friend, if you please, we will talk over the situation of your hopes with Maria.

JOSEPH SURFACE [softly]. Oh, no, Sir Peter; another time, if you please.

SIR PETER. I am sensibly chagrined at the little progress you seem to make in her affections.

JOSEPH SURFACE [softly]. I beg you will not mention it. What are my disappointments when your happiness is in debate!—[Aside.] 'Sdeath, I shall be ruined every way!

SIR PETER. And though you are averse to my acquainting Lady Teazle with your passion, I'm sure she's not your enemy in the affair.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Pray, Sir Peter, now oblige me. I am really too much affected by the subject we have been speaking of to bestow a thought on my own concerns. The man who is entrusted with his friend's distresses can never—

[Reënter SERVANT.]

Well, sir?

SERVANT. Your brother, sir, is speaking to a gentleman in the street, and says he knows you are within.

JOSEPH SURFACE. 'Sdeath, blockhead, I'm not within—I'm out for the day.

SIR PETER. Stay—hold—a thought has struck me:—you shall be at home.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Well, well, let him come up.—[Exit SERVANT.] [Aside.] He'll interrupt Sir Peter, however.

SIR PETER. Now, my good friend, oblige me, I entreat you. Before Charles comes let me conceal myself somewhere, then do you tax him on the point we have been talking, and his answer may satisfy me at once.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Oh, fie, Sir Peter! would you have me join in so mean a trick?—to trepan my brother too?

SIR PETER. Nay, you tell me you are sure he is innocent; if so, you do him the greatest service by giving him an opportunity to clear himself, and you will set my heart at rest. Come, you shall not refuse me: [Going up.] here, behind the screen will be—Hey! what the devil! there seems to be one listener here already—I'll swear I saw a petticoat!

JOSEPH SURFACE. Ha! ha! ha! Well, this is ridiculous enough. I'll tell you, Sir Peter, though I hold a man of intrigue to be a most despicable character, yet, you know, it does not follow that one is to be an absolute Joseph either! Hark'ee, 'tis a little French milliner, a silly rogue that plagues me; and having some character to lose, on your coming, sir, she ran behind the screen.

SIR PETER. Ah, Joseph! Joseph! Did I ever think that you—But, egad, she has overheard all I have been saying of my wife.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Oh, 'twill never go any farther, you may depend upon it!

SIR PETER. No! then, faith, let her hear it out.—Here's a closet will do as well.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Well, go in there.

SIR PETER. Sly rogue! sly rogue!

[Goes into the closet.]

JOSEPH SURFACE. A narrow escape, indeed! and a curious situation I'm in, to part man and wife in this manner.

LADY TEAZLE [peeping]. Couldn't I steal off?

JOSEPH SURFACE. Keep close, my angel!

SIR PETER [peeping]. Joseph, tax him home.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Back, my dear friend!

LADY TEAZLE [peeping]. Couldn't you lock Sir Peter in?

JOSEPH SURFACE. Be still, my life!

SIR PETER [peeping]. You're sure the little milliner won't blab?

JOSEPH SURFACE. In, in, my dear Sir Peter!—'Fore Gad, I wish I had a key to the door.

[Enter CHARLES SURFACE.]

CHARLES SURFACE. Holla! brother, what has been the matter? Your fellow would not let me up at first. What! have you had a Jew with you?

JOSEPH SURFACE. No, brother, I assure you.

CHARLES SURFACE. But what has made Sir Peter steal off? I thought he had been with you.

JOSEPH SURFACE. He was, brother; but, hearing you were coming, he did not choose to stay.

CHARLES SURFACE. What! was the old gentleman afraid I wanted to borrow money of him?

JOSEPH SURFACE. No, sir; but I am sorry to find, Charles, you have lately given that worthy man grounds for great uneasiness.

CHARLES SURFACE. Yes, they tell me I do that to a great many worthy men. But how so, pray?

JOSEPH SURFACE. To be plain with you, brother, he thinks you are endeavouring to gain Lady Teazle's affections from him.

CHARLES SURFACE. Who, I? O Lud! not I, upon my word.—Ha! ha! ha! ha! so the old fellow has found out that he has got a young wife, has he?—or, what is worse, Lady Teazle has found out she has an old husband?

JOSEPH SURFACE. This is no subject to jest on, brother. He who can laugh—

CHARLES SURFACE. True, true, as you were going to say—then, seriously, I never had the least idea of what you charge me with, upon my honour.

JOSEPH SURFACE [raising his voice]. Well, it will give Sir Peter great satisfaction to hear this.

CHARLES SURFACE. To be sure, I once thought the lady seemed to have taken a fancy to me; but, upon my soul, I never gave her the least encouragement. Besides, you know my attachment to Maria.

JOSEPH SURFACE. But sure, brother, even if Lady Teazle had betrayed the fondest partiality for you—

CHARLES SURFACE. Why, look'ee, Joseph, I hope I shall never deliberately do a dishonourable action; but if a pretty woman was purposely to throw herself in my way—and that pretty woman married to a man old enough to be her father—

JOSEPH SURFACE. Well!

CHARLES SURFACE. Why, I believe I should be obliged to—

JOSEPH SURFACE. What?

CHARLES SURFACE. To borrow a little of your morality, that's all. But, brother, do you know now that you surprise me exceedingly, by naming me with Lady Teazle; for, i' faith, I always understood you were her favourite.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Oh, for shame, Charles! This retort is foolish.

CHARLES SURFACE. Nay, I swear I have seen you exchange such significant glances—

JOSEPH SURFACE. Nay, nay, sir, this is no jest.

CHARLES SURFACE. Egad, I'm serious! Don't you remember one day, when I called here—

JOSEPH SURFACE. Nay, pr'ythee, Charles—

CHARLES SURFACE. And found you together—

JOSEPH SURFACE. Zounds, sir, I insist—

CHARLES SURFACE. And another time when your servant—

JOSEPH SURFACE. Brother, brother, a word with you!—[Aside.] Gad, I must stop him.

CHARLES SURFACE. Informed, I say that—

JOSEPH SURFACE. Hush! I beg your pardon, but Sir Peter has overheard all we have been saying. I knew you would clear yourself, or I should not have consented.

CHARLES SURFACE. How, Sir Peter! Where is he?

JOSEPH SURFACE. Softly, there!
[Points to the closet.]

CHARLES SURFACE. Oh, 'fore Heaven, I'll have him out. Sir Peter, come forth!

JOSEPH SURFACE. No, no—

CHARLES SURFACE. I say, Sir Peter, come into court.—[Pulls in SIR PETER.] What! my old guardian!—What! turn inquisitor, and take evidence incog? Oh, fie! Oh, fie!

SIR PETER. Give me your hand, Charles—I believe I have suspected you wrongfully; but you mustn't be angry with Joseph—'twas my plan!

CHARLES SURFACE. Indeed!

SIR PETER. But I acquit you. I promise you I don't think near so ill of you as I did; what I have heard has given me great satisfaction.

CHARLES SURFACE. Egad, then, 'twas lucky you didn't hear any more. Wasn't it, Joseph?

SIR PETER. Ah! you would have retorted on him.

CHARLES SURFACE. Ah, ay, that was a joke.

SIR PETER. Yes, yes, I know his honour too well.

CHARLES SURFACE. But you might as well have suspected him as me in this matter, for all that. Mightn't he, Joseph?

SIR PETER. Well, well, I believe you.

JOSEPH SURFACE [aside]. Would they were both out of the room!

SIR PETER. And in future, perhaps, we may not be such strangers.

[Reënter SERVANT, and whispers JOSEPH SURFACE.]

SERVANT. Lady Sneerwell is below, and says she will come up.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Lady Sneerwell! Gad's life! she must not come here. [Exit SERVANT.] Gentlemen, I beg pardon—I must wait on you down stairs: here is a person come on particular business.

CHARLES SURFACE. Well, you can see him in another room. Sir Peter and I have not met in a long time, and I have something to say to him.

JOSEPH SURFACE [aside]. They must not be left together.—[Aloud.] I'll send Lady Sneerwell away, and return directly.—[Aside to SIR PETER.] Sir Peter, not a word of the French milliner.

SIR PETER [aside to JOSEPH SURFACE]. I! not for the world!—[Exit JOSEPH SURFACE.] Ah, Charles, if you associated more with your brother, one might indeed hope for your reformation. He is a man of sentiment. Well, there is nothing in the world so noble as a man of sentiment.

CHARLES SURFACE. Pshaw! he is too moral by half; and so apprehensive of his good name, as he calls it.

SIR PETER. No, no,—come, come,—you wrong him. No, no! Joseph is no rake, but he is no such saint either, in that respect.—[Aside.] I have a great mind to tell him—we should have such a laugh at Joseph.

CHARLES SURFACE. Oh, hang him! he's a very anchorite, a young hermit!

SIR PETER. Hark'ee—you must not abuse him: he may chance to hear of it again, I promise you.

CHARLES SURFACE. Why, you won't tell him?

SIR PETER. No—but—this way.—[Aside.] Egad, I'll tell him.—[Aloud.] Hark'ee—have you a mind to have a good laugh at Joseph?

CHARLES SURFACE. I should like it of all things.

SIR PETER. Then, i' faith, we will!

I'll be quit with him for discovering me. [Whispers.] He had a girl with him when I called.

CHARLES SURFACE. What! Joseph! you jest.

SIR PETER. Hush!—a little French milliner—and the best of the jest is—she's in the room now.

CHARLES SURFACE. The devil she is!

SIR PETER. Hush! I tell you. [Points to the screen.]

CHARLES SURFACE. Behind the screen! 'Slife, let's unveil her!

SIR PETER. No, no, he's coming:—you sha'n't, indeed!

CHARLES SURFACE. Oh, egad, we'll have a peep at the little milliner!

SIR PETER. Not for the world!—Joseph will never forgive me.

CHARLES SURFACE. I'll stand by you—

SIR PETER. Odds, here he is!

[CHARLES SURFACE throws down the screen.]

[Reënter JOSEPH SURFACE.]

CHARLES SURFACE. Lady Teazle, by all that's wonderful.

SIR PETER. Lady Teazle, by all that's damnable!

CHARLES SURFACE. Sir Peter, this is one of the smartest French milliners I ever saw. Egad, you seem all to have been diverting yourselves here at hide and seek, and I don't see who is out of the secret. Shall I beg your ladyship to inform me? Not a word!—Brother, will you be pleased to explain this matter? What! is Morality dumb too?—Sir Peter, though I found you in the dark, perhaps you are not so now! All mute!—Well—though I can make nothing of the affair, I suppose you perfectly understand one another; so I'll leave you to yourselves.—[Going.] Brother, I'm sorry to find you have given that worthy man grounds for so much uneasiness.—Sir Peter! there's nothing in the world so noble as a man of sentiment! [Exit.]

JOSEPH SURFACE. Sir Peter—notwithstanding—I confess—that appearances are against me—if you will afford me your patience—I make no doubt—but I shall explain every thing to your satisfaction.

SIR PETER. If you please, sir.

JOSEPH SURFACE. The fact is, sir, that Lady Teazle, knowing my pretensions to your ward Maria—I say, sir, Lady Teazle, being apprehensive of the jealousy of your temper—and knowing my friendship to the family—she, sir, I say—called here—in order that—I might explain these pretensions—but on your coming—being apprehensive—as I said—of your jealousy—she withdrew—and this, you may depend on it, is the whole truth of the matter.

SIR PETER. A very clear account, upon my word; and I dare swear the lady will vouch for every article of it.

LADY TEAZLE. For not one word of it. Sir Peter!

SIR PETER. How! don't you think it worth while to agree in the lie?

LADY TEAZLE. There is not one syllable of truth in what that gentleman has told you.

SIR PETER. I believe you, upon my soul, ma'am!

JOSEPH SURFACE [aside to LADY TEAZLE.] 'Sdeath, madam, will you betray me?

LADY TEAZLE. Good Mr. Hypocrite, by your leave, I'll speak for myself.

SIR PETER. Ay, let her alone, sir; you'll find she'll make out a better story than you, without prompting.

LADY TEAZLE. Hear me, Sir Peter!—I came here on no matter relating to your ward, and even ignorant of this gentleman's pretensions to her. But I came, seduced by his insidious arguments, at least to listen to his pretended passion, if not to sacrifice your honour to his baseness.

SIR PETER. Now, I believe, the truth is coming, indeed!

JOSEPH SURFACE. The woman's mad!

LADY TEAZLE. No, sir; she has recovered her senses, and your own arts have furnished her with the means.—Sir Peter,

I do not expect you to credit me—but the tenderness you expressed for me, when I am sure you could not think I was a witness to it, has so penetrated to my heart, that had I left the place without the shame of this discovery, my future life should have spoken the sincerity of my gratitude. As for that smooth-tongued hypocrite, who would have seduced the wife of his too credulous friend, while he affected honourable addresses to his ward—I behold him now in a light so truly despicable, that I shall never again respect myself for having listened to him. [Exit.]

JOSEPH SURFACE. Notwithstanding all this, Sir Peter, Heaven knows—

SIR PETER. That you are a villain! and so I leave you to your conscience.

JOSEPH SURFACE. You are too rash, Sir Peter; you shall hear me. The man who shuts out conviction by refusing to—

SIR PETER. Oh, damn your sentiments! [Exit SIR PETER and JOSEPH SURFACE, talking.]

ACT V

SCENE I—The library in JOSEPH SURFACE'S house.

[Enter JOSEPH SURFACE and SERVANT.]

JOSEPH SURFACE. Mr. Stanley! and why should you think I would see him? you must know he comes to ask something.

SERVANT. Sir, I should not have let him in, but that Mr. Rowley came to the door with him.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Pahaw! blockhead! to suppose that I should now be in a temper to receive visits from poor relations!—Well, why don't you show the fellow up?

SERVANT. I will, sir.—Why, sir, it was not my fault that Sir Peter discovered my lady—

JOSEPH SURFACE. Go, fool!—[Exit SERVANT.] Sure Fortune never played a man of my policy such a trick before! My character with Sir Peter, my hopes with Maria, destroyed in a moment! I'm in a rare humour to listen to other people's distresses! I sha'n't be able to bestow even a benevolent sentiment on Stanley.—So! here he comes, and Rowley with him. I must try to recover myself, and put a little charity into my face, however. [Exit.]

[Enter SIR OLIVER SURFACE and ROWLEY.]

SIR OLIVER. What! does he avoid us? That was he, was it not?

ROWLEY. It was, sir. But I doubt you are come a little too abruptly. His nerves are so weak, that the sight of a poor relation may be too much for him. I should have gone first to break it to him.

SIR OLIVER. Oh, plague of his nerves! Yet this is he whom Sir Peter extols as a man of the most benevolent way of thinking!

ROWLEY. As to his way of thinking, I cannot pretend to decide; for, to do him justice, he appears to have as much speculative benevolence as any private gentleman in the kingdom, though he is seldom so sensual as to indulge himself in the exercise of it.

SIR OLIVER. Yet he has a string of charitable sentiments at his fingers' ends.

ROWLEY. Or, rather, at his tongue's end, Sir Oliver; for I believe there is no sentiment he has such faith in as that Charity begins at home.

SIR OLIVER. And his, I presume, is of that domestic sort which never stirs abroad at all.

ROWLEY. I doubt you'll find it so; but he's coming. I mustn't seem to interrupt you; and you know, immediately as you leave him, I come in to announce your arrival in your real character.

SIR OLIVER. True; and afterwards you'll meet me at Sir Peter's.

ROWLEY. Without losing a moment. [Exit.]

SIR OLIVER. I don't like the complaisance of his features.

[Reënter JOSEPH SURFACE.]

JOSEPH SURFACE. Sir, I beg you ten thousand pardons for keeping you a moment waiting.—Mr. Stanley, I presume.

SIR OLIVER. At your service.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Sir, I beg you will do me the honour to sit down—I entreat you, sir.

SIR OLIVER. Dear sir—there's no occasion.—[Aside.] Too civil by half!

JOSEPH SURFACE. I have not the pleasure of knowing you, Mr. Stanley; but I am extremely happy to see you look so well. You were nearly related to my mother, I think, Mr. Stanley?

SIR OLIVER. I was, sir; so nearly that my present poverty, I fear, may do discredit to her wealthy children, else I should not have presumed to trouble you.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Dear sir, there needs no apology;—he that is in distress, though a stranger, has a right to claim kindred with the wealthy. I am sure I wish I was one of that class, and had it in my power to offer you even a small relief.

SIR OLIVER. If your uncle, Sir Oliver, were here, I should have a friend.

JOSEPH SURFACE. I wish he was, sir, with all my heart: you should not want an advocate with him, believe me, sir.

SIR OLIVER. I should not need one—my distresses would recommend me. But I imagined his bounty would enable you to become the agent of his charity.

JOSEPH SURFACE. My dear sir, you were strangely misinformed. Sir Oliver is a worthy man, a very worthy man; but avarice, Mr. Stanley, is the vice of age. I will tell you, my good sir, in confidence, what he has done for me has been a mere nothing; though people, I know, have thought otherwise, and for my part, I never chose to contradict the report.

SIR OLIVER. What! has he never transmitted you bullion—rupees—pagodas?

JOSEPH SURFACE. Oh, dear sir, nothing of the kind. No, no; a few presents now and then—china, shawls, congo tea, avadavats and Indian crackers—little more, believe me.

SIR OLIVER [aside]. Here's gratitude for twelve thousand pounds!—Avadavats and Indian crackers!

JOSEPH SURFACE. Then, my dear sir, you have heard, I doubt not, of the extravagance of my brother: there are very few would credit what I have done for that unfortunate young man.

SIR OLIVER [aside]. Not I, for one!

JOSEPH SURFACE. The sums I have lent him! Indeed I have been exceedingly to blame; it was an amiable weakness; however, I don't pretend to defend it—and now I feel it doubly culpable, since it has deprived me of the pleasure of serving you, Mr. Stanley, as my heart dictates.

SIR OLIVER [aside]. Dissembler—[Aloud.] Then, sir, you can't assist me?

JOSEPH SURFACE. At present, it grieves me to say, I cannot; but, whenever I have the ability, you may depend upon hearing from me.

SIR OLIVER. I am extremely sorry—

JOSEPH SURFACE. Not more than I, believe me; to pity, without the power to relieve, is still more painful than to ask and be denied.

SIR OLIVER. Kind sir, your most obedient humble servant.

JOSEPH SURFACE. You leave me deeply affected, Mr. Stanley.—[Calls to SERVANT.] William, be ready to open the door.

SIR OLIVER. Oh, dear sir, no ceremony.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Your very obedient.

SIR OLIVER. Your most obsequious.

JOSEPH SURFACE. You may depend upon hearing from me whenever I can be of service.

SIR OLIVER. Sweet sir, you are too good!

JOSEPH SURFACE. In the meantime I wish you health and spirits.

SIR OLIVER. Your ever grateful and perpetual humble servant.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Sir, yours as sincerely.

SIR OLIVER [aside]. Now I am satisfied. [Exit.]

JOSEPH SURFACE. This is one bad effect of a good character; it invites application from the unfortunate, and there needs no small degree of address to gain the reputation of benevolence without incurring the expense. The silver ore of pure charity is an expensive article in the catalogue of a man's good qualities; whereas the sentimental French plate I use instead of it makes just as good a show, and pays no tax.

[Reënter ROWLEY.]

ROWLEY. Mr. Surface, your servant: I was apprehensive of interrupting you, though my business demands immediate attention, as this note will inform you.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Always happy to see Mr. Rowley,—[Aside.] a rascal.—[Reads the letter.] Sir Oliver Surface!—My uncle arrived!

ROWLEY. He is, indeed: we have just parted—quite well, after a speedy voyage, and impatient to embrace his worthy nephew.

JOSEPH SURFACE. I am astonished!—[Calls to SERVANT.] William! stop Mr. Stanley, if he's not gone.

ROWLEY. Oh! he's out of reach, I believe.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Why did you not let me know this when you came in together?

ROWLEY. I thought you had particular business. But I must be gone to inform your brother, and appoint him here to meet your uncle. He will be with you in a quarter of an hour.

JOSEPH SURFACE. So he says. Well, I am strangely overjoyed at his coming.—[Aside.] Never, to be sure, was any thing so unlucky!

ROWLEY. You will be delighted to see how well he looks.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Oh! I'm overjoyed to hear it.—[Aside.] Just at this time!

ROWLEY. I'll tell him how impatiently you expect him.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Do, do; pray give my best duty and affection. Indeed, I cannot express the sensations I feel at the thought of seeing him.—[Exit ROWLEY.] Certainly his coming just at this time is the cruellest piece of ill fortune.

[Exit.]

SCENE II—A room in SIR PETER TEAZLE'S house.

[Enter MRS. CANDOUR and MAID.]

MAID. Indeed, ma'am, my lady will see nobody at present.

MRS. CANDOUR. Did you tell her it was her friend Mrs. Candour?

MAID. Yes, ma'am; but she begs you will excuse her.

MRS. CANDOUR. Do go again; I shall be glad to see her, if it be only for a moment, for I am sure she must be in great distress.—[Exit MAID.] Dear heart, how provoking! I'm not mistress of half the circumstances! We shall have the whole affair in the newspapers, with the names of the parties at length, before I have dropped the story at a dozen houses.

[Enter SIR BENJAMIN BACKBITE.]

Oh, dear Sir Benjamin! you have heard, I suppose—

SIR BENJAMIN. Of Lady Teazle and Mr. Surface—

MRS. CANDOUR. And Sir Peter's discovery—

SIR BENJAMIN. Oh, the strangest piece of business, to be sure!

MRS. CANDOUR. Well, I never was so surprised in my life. I am so sorry for all parties, indeed.

SIR BENJAMIN. Now, I don't pity Sir Peter at all: he was so extravagantly partial to Mr. Surface.

MRS. CANDOUR. Mr. Surface! Why, 'twas with Charles Lady Teazle was detected.

SIR BENJAMIN. No, no, I tell you: Mr. Surface is the gallant.

MRS. CANDOUR. No such thing! Charles is the man. 'Twas Mr. Surface brought Sir Peter on purpose to discover them.

SIR BENJAMIN. I tell you I had it from one—

MRS. CANDOUR. And I have it from one—

SIR BENJAMIN. Who had it from one, who had it—

MRS. CANDOUR. From one immediately.

But here comes Lady Sneerwell; perhaps she knows the whole affair.

[Enter LADY SNEERWELL.]

LADY SNEERWELL. So, my dear Mrs. Candour, here's a sad affair of our friend Lady Teazle!

MRS. CANDOUR. Ay, my dear friend, who would have thought—

LADY SNEERWELL. Well, there is no trusting appearances; though, indeed, she was always too lively for me.

MRS. CANDOUR. To be sure, her manners were a little too free; but then she was so young!

LADY SNEERWELL. And had, indeed, some good qualities.

MRS. CANDOUR. So she had, indeed. But have you heard the particulars?

LADY SNEERWELL. No; but everybody says that Mr. Surface—

SIR BENJAMIN. Ay, there; I told you Mr. Surface was the man.

MRS. CANDOUR. No, no: indeed it was Charles.

LADY SNEERWELL. Charles! You alarm me, Mrs. Candour!

MRS. CANDOUR. Yes, yes; he was the lover. Mr. Surface, to do him justice, was only the informer.

SIR BENJAMIN. Well, I'll not dispute with you, Mrs. Candour; but, be it which it may, I hope that Sir Peter's wound will 'not—

MRS. CANDOUR. Sir Peter's wound! Oh, mercy! I didn't hear a word of their fighting.

LADY SNEERWELL. Not I, a syllable.

SIR BENJAMIN. No! what, no mention of the duel?

MRS. CANDOUR. Not a word.

SIR BENJAMIN. Oh, yes: they fought before they left the room.

LADY SNEERWELL. Pray, let us hear.

MRS. CANDOUR. Ay, do oblige us with the duel.

SIR BENJAMIN. Sir, says Sir Peter, immediately after the discovery, you are a most ungrateful fellow.

MRS. CANDOUR. Ay, to Charles—

SIR BENJAMIN. No, no—to Mr. Surface—a most ungrateful fellow; and old as I am, sir, says he, I insist on immediate satisfaction.

MRS. CANDOUR. Ay, that must have been to Charles; for 'tis very unlikely Mr. Surface should fight in his own house.

SIR BENJAMIN. Gad's life, ma'am, not at all—giving me immediate satisfaction.

—On this, ma'am, Lady Teazle, seeing Sir Peter in such danger, ran out of the room in strong hysterics, and Charles after her, calling out for hartshorn and water; then, madam, they began to fight with swords—

[Enter CRABTREE.]

CRABTREE. With pistols, nephew, pistols! I have it from undoubted authority.

MRS. CANDOUR. Oh, Mr. Crabtree, then it is all true!

CRABTREE. Too true, indeed, madam, and Sir Peter is dangerously wounded—

SIR BENJAMIN. By a thrust in seagoon quite through his left side—

CRABTREE. By a bullet lodged in the throat.

MRS. CANDOUR. Mercy on me! Poor Sir Peter!

CRABTREE. Yes, madam; though Charles would have avoided the matter, if he could.

MRS. CANDOUR. I told you who it was; I knew Charles was the person.

SIR BENJAMIN. My uncle, I see, knows nothing of the matter.

CRABTREE. But Sir Peter taxed him with the basest ingratitude—

SIR BENJAMIN. That I told you, you know—

CRABTREE. Do, nephew, let me speak!—and insisted on immediate—

SIR BENJAMIN. Just as I said—

CRABTREE. Odds life, nephew, allow others to know something too! A pair of pistols lay on the bureau (for Mr. Surface, it seems, had come home the night before late from Salthill, where he had been to see the Montem with a friend, who has a son at Eton), so, unluckily, the pistols were left charged.

SIR BENJAMIN. I heard nothing of this.

CRABTREE. Sir Peter forced Charles to take one, and they fired, it seems, pretty nearly together. Charles's shot took effect, as I tell you, and Sir Peter's missed; but, what is very extraordinary, the ball struck against a little bronze Shakespeare that stood over the fireplace, grazed out of the window at a right angle, and wounded the postman, who was just coming to the door with a double letter from Northamptonshire.

SIR BENJAMIN. My uncle's account is more circumstantial, I confess; but I believe mine is the true one, for all that.

LADY SNEERWELL [aside]. I am more interested in this affair than they imagine, and must have better information. [Exit.]

SIR BENJAMIN. Ah! Lady Sneerwell's alarm is very easily accounted for.

CRABTREE. Yes, yes, they certainly do say—but that's neither here nor there.

MRS. CANDOUR. But, pray, where is Sir Peter at present?

CRABTREE. Oh! they brought him home, and he is now in the house, though the servants are ordered to deny him.

MRS. CANDOUR. I believe so, and Lady Teazle, I suppose, attending him.

CRABTREE. Yes, yes; and I saw one of the faculty enter just before me.

SIR BENJAMIN. Hey! who comes here?

CRABTREE. Oh, this is he: the physician, depend on't.

MRS. CANDOUR. Oh, certainly! it must be the physician; and now we shall know.

[Enter SIR OLIVER SURFACE.]

CRABTREE. Well, doctor, what hopes?

MRS. CANDOUR. Ay, doctor, how's your patient?

SIR BENJAMIN. Now, doctor, isn't it a wound with a small sword?

CRABTREE. A bullet lodged in the thorax, for a hundred!

SIR OLIVER. Doctor! a wound with a small sword and a bullet in the thorax!—Oons! are you mad, good people?

SIR BENJAMIN. Perhaps, sir, you are not a doctor?

SIR OLIVER. Truly, I am to thank you for my degree if I am.

CRABTREE. Only a friend of Sir Peter's, then, I presume. But, sir, you must have heard of his accident?

SIR OLIVER. Not a word!

CRABTREE. Not of his being dangerously wounded?

SIR OLIVER. The devil he is!

SIR BENJAMIN. Run through the body—

CRABTREE. Shot in the breast—

SIR BENJAMIN. By one Mr. Surface—

CRABTREE. Ay, the younger.

SIR OLIVER. Hey! what the plague! you seem to differ strangely in your accounts: however, you agree that Sir Peter is dangerously wounded.

SIR BENJAMIN. Oh, yes, we agree in that.

CRABTREE. Yes, yes, I believe there can be no doubt of that.

SIR OLIVER. Then, upon my word, for a person in that situation, he is the most imprudent man alive; for here he comes, walking as if nothing at all was the matter.

[Enter SIR PETER TEAZLE.]

Odds heart, Sir Peter! you are come in good time, I promise you; for we had just given you over!

SIR BENJAMIN [aside to CRABTREE]. Egad, uncle, this is the most sudden recovery!

SIR OLIVER. Why, man! what do you out of bed with a small sword through your body, and a bullet lodged in your thorax?

SIR PETER. A small sword and a bullet!

SIR OLIVER. Ay; these gentlemen would have killed you without law or physic, and wanted to dub me a doctor, to make me an accomplice.

SIR PETER. Why, what is all this?

SIR BENJAMIN. We rejoice, Sir Peter, that the story of the duel is not true, and are sincerely sorry for your other misfortune.

SIR PETER [aside]. So, so; all over the town already!

CRABTREE. Though, Sir Peter, you were certainly vastly to blame to marry at your years.

SIR PETER. Sir, what business is that of yours?

MRS. CANDOUR. Though, indeed, as Sir Peter made so good a husband, he's very much to be pitied.

SIR PETER. Plague on your pity, ma'am! I desire none of it.

SIR BENJAMIN. However, Sir Peter, you must not mind the laughing and jests you will meet with on the occasion.

SIR PETER. Sir, sir! I desire to be master in my own house.

CRABTREE. 'Tis no uncommon case, that's one comfort.

SIR PETER. I insist on being left to myself: without ceremony, I insist on your leaving my house directly!

MRS. CANDOUR. Well, well, we are going; and depend on't, we'll make the best report of it we can. [Exit.]

SIR PETER. Leave my house!

CRABTREE. And tell how hardly you've been treated. [Exit.]

SIR PETER. Leave my house!

SIR BENJAMIN. And how patiently you bear it. [Exit.]

SIR PETER. Fiends! vipers! furies! Oh! that their own venom would choke them.

SIR OLIVER. They are very provoking indeed, Sir Peter.

[Enter ROWLEY.]

ROWLEY. I heard high words: what has ruffled you, sir?

SIR PETER. Pshaw! what signifies asking? Do I ever pass a day without my vexations?

ROWLEY. Well, I'm not inquisitive.

SIR OLIVER. Well, Sir Peter, I have seen both my nephews in the manner we proposed.

SIR PETER. A precious couple they are!

ROWLEY. Yes, and Sir Oliver is convinced that your judgment was right, Sir Peter.

SIR OLIVER. Yes, I find Joseph is indeed the man, after all.

ROWLEY. Ay, as Sir Peter says, he is a man of sentiment.

SIR OLIVER. And acts up to the sentiments he professes.

ROWLEY. It certainly is edification to hear him talk.

SIR OLIVER. Oh, he's a model for the young men of the age!—but how's this, Sir Peter? you don't join us in your friend Joseph's praise, as I expected.

SIR PETER. Sir Oliver, we live in a wicked world, and the fewer we praise the better.

ROWLEY. What! do you say so, Sir Peter, who were never mistaken in your life?

SIR PETER. Pshaw! plague on you both! I see by your sneering you have heard the whole affair. I shall go mad among you!

ROWLEY. Then, to fret you no longer, Sir Peter, we are indeed acquainted with it all. I met Lady Teazle coming from Mr. Surface's so humbled that she deigned to request me to be her advocate with you.

SIR PETER. And does Sir Oliver know all this?

SIR OLIVER. Every circumstance.

SIR PETER. What, of the closet and the screen, hey?

SIR OLIVER. Yes, yes, and the little French milliner. Oh, I have been vastly diverted with the story! ha! ha! ha!

SIR PETER. 'Twas very pleasant.

SIR OLIVER. I never laughed more in my life, I assure you: ah! ah! ah!

SIR PETER. Oh, vastly diverting! ha! ha! ha!

ROWLEY. To be sure, Joseph with his sentiments! ha! ha! ha!

SIR PETER. Yes, yes, his sentiments! ha! ha! ha! Hypocritical villain!

SIR OLIVER. Ay, and that rogue Charles to pull Sir Peter out of the closet: ha! ha! ha!

SIR PETER. Ha! ha! 'twas devilish entertaining, to be sure!

SIR OLIVER. Ha! ha! ha! Egad, Sir Peter, I should like to have seen your face when the screen was thrown down: ha! ha!

SIR PETER. Yes, yes, my face when the screen was thrown down: ha! ha! ha! Oh, I must never show my head again!

SIR OLIVER. But come, come, it isn't fair to laugh at you neither, my old friend; though, upon my soul, I can't help it.

SIR PETER. Oh, pray don't restrain your mirth on my account: it does not hurt me at all! I laugh at the whole affair myself. Yes, yes, I think being a standing jest for all one's acquaintance a very happy situation. Oh, yes, and then of a morning to read the paragraphs about Mr. S—, Lady T—, and Sir P—, will be so entertaining!

ROWLEY. Without affectation, Sir Peter, you may despise the ridicule of fools. But I see Lady Teazle going towards the next room; I am sure you must desire a reconciliation as earnestly as she does.

SIR OLIVER. Perhaps my being here prevents her coming to you. Well, I'll leave honest Rowley to mediate between you; but he must bring you all presently to Mr. Surface's, where I am now returning, if not to reclaim a libertine, at least to expose hypocrisy.

SIR PETER. Ah, I'll be present at your discovering yourself there with all my heart; though 'tis a vile unlucky place for discoveries.

ROWLEY. We'll follow.

[Exit SIR OLIVER SURFACE.]

SIR PETER. She is not coming here, you see, Rowley.

ROWLEY. No, but she has left the door of that room open, you perceive. See, she is in tears.

SIR PETER. Certainly a little mortification appears very becoming in a wife. Don't you think it will do her good to let her pine a little?

ROWLEY. Oh, this is ungenerous in you!

SIR PETER. Well, I know not what to think. You remember the letter I found of hers evidently intended for Charles?

ROWLEY. A mere forgery, Sir Peter! laid in your way on purpose. This is one of the points which I intend Snake shall give you conviction of.

SIR PETER. I wish I were once satisfied of that. She looks this way. What a remarkably elegant turn of the head she has! Rowley, I'll go to her.

ROWLEY. Certainly.

SIR PETER. Though, when it is known that we are reconciled, people will laugh at me ten times more.

ROWLEY. Let them laugh, and retort their malice only by showing them you are happy in spite of it.

SIR PETER. I' faith, so I will! and, if I'm not mistaken, we may yet be the happiest couple in the country.

ROWLEY. Nay, Sir Peter, he who once lays aside suspicion—

SIR PETER. Hold, Master Rowley! if you have any regard for me, never let me hear you utter anything like a sentiment: I have had enough of them to serve me the rest of my life. [Exit.]

SCENE III—The library in JOSEPH SURFACE'S house.

[Enter JOSEPH SURFACE and LADY SNEERWELL.]

LADY SNEERWELL. Impossible! Will not Sir Peter immediately be reconciled to Charles, and of course no longer oppose his union with Maria? The thought is distraction to me.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Can passion furnish a remedy?

LADY SNEERWELL. No, nor cunning either. Oh, I was a fool, an idiot, to league with such a blunderer!

JOSEPH SURFACE. Sure, Lady Sneerwell, I am the greatest sufferer; yet you see I bear the accident with calmness.

LADY SNEERWELL. Because the disappointment doesn't reach your heart; your interest only attached you to Maria. Had you felt for her what I have for that ungrateful libertine, neither your temper nor hypocrisy could prevent your showing the sharpness of your vexation.

JOSEPH SURFACE. But why should your reproaches fall on me for this disappointment?

LADY SNEERWELL. Are you not the cause of it? Had you not a sufficient field for your roguery in imposing upon Sir Peter, and supplanting your brother, but you must endeavour to seduce his wife? I hate such an avarice of crimes; 'tis an unfair monopoly and never prospers.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Well, I admit I have been to blame. I confess I deviated from the direct road of wrong, but I don't think we're so totally defeated neither.

LADY SNEERWELL. No!

JOSEPH SURFACE. You tell me you have made a trial of Snake since we met, and that you still believe him faithful to us?

LADY SNEERWELL. I do believe so.

JOSEPH SURFACE. And that he has undertaken, should it be necessary, to swear and prove, that Charles is at this time contracted by vows and honour to your ladyship, which some of his former letters to you will serve to support?

LADY SNEERWELL. This, indeed, might have assisted.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Come, come; it is not too late yet.—[Knocking at the door.] But hark! this is probably my uncle, Sir Oliver: retire to that room; we'll consult farther when he is gone.

LADY SNEERWELL. Well, but if he should find you out too?

JOSEPH SURFACE. Oh, I have no fear of that. Sir Peter will hold his tongue for his own credit's sake—and you may depend on it I shall soon discover Sir Oliver's weak side!

LADY SNEERWELL. I have no diffidence of your abilities: only be constant to one roguery at a time.

JOSEPH SURFACE. I will, I will!—[Exit LADY SNEERWELL.] So! 'tis confounded hard, after such bad fortune, to be baited by one's confederate in evil. Well, at all events, my character is so much better than Charles's, that I certainly—hey!—what—this is not Sir Oliver, but old Stanley again. Plague on't that he should return to tease me just now! I shall have Sir Oliver come and find him here—and—

[Enter SIR OLIVER SURFACE.]

Gad's life, Mr. Stanley, why have you come back to plague me at this time? You must not stay now, upon my word.

SIR OLIVER. Sir, I hear your uncle Oliver is expected here, and though he has been so penurious to you, I'll try what he'll do for me.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Sir, 'tis impossible for you to stay now, so I must beg—Come any other time, and I promise you, you shall be assisted.

SIR OLIVER. No: Sir Oliver and I must be acquainted.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Zounds, sir! then I insist on your quitting the room directly.

SIR OLIVER. Nay, sir—

JOSEPH SURFACE. Sir, I insist on't!—Here, William! show this gentleman out. Since you compel me, sir, not one moment—this is such insolence. [Going to push him out.]

[Enter CHARLES SURFACE.]

CHARLES SURFACE. Heyday! what's the matter now? What the devil, have you got hold of my little broker here? Zounds, brother, don't hurt little Premium. What's the matter, my little fellow?

JOSEPH SURFACE. So! he has been with you too, has he?

CHARLES SURFACE. To be sure, he has. Why, he's as honest a little—But sure, Joseph, you have not been borrowing money too, have you?

JOSEPH SURFACE. Borrowing! no! But, brother, you know we expect Sir Oliver here every—

CHARLES SURFACE. O Gad, that's true! Noll mustn't find the little broker here, to be sure.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Yet Mr. Stanley insists—

CHARLES SURFACE. Stanley! why his name's Premium.

JOSEPH SURFACE. No, sir, Stanley.

CHARLES SURFACE. No, no, Premium.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Well, no matter which—but—

CHARLES SURFACE. Ay, ay, Stanley or Premium, 'tis the same thing, as you say; for I suppose he goes by half a hundred names, besides A. B. at the coffee-house. [Knocking.]

JOSEPH SURFACE. 'Sdeath! here's Sir Oliver at the door.—Now I beg, Mr. Stanley—

CHARLES SURFACE. Ay, ay, and I beg, Mr. Premium—

SIR OLIVER. Gentlemen—

JOSEPH SURFACE. Sir, by Heaven you shall go.

CHARLES SURFACE. Ay, out with him, certainly!

SIR OLIVER. This violence—

JOSEPH SURFACE. Sir, 'tis your own fault.

CHARLES SURFACE. Out with him, to be sure. [Both forcing SIR OLIVER out.]

[Enter SIR PETER and LADY TEAZLE, MARIA, and ROWLEY.]

SIR PETER. My old friend, Sir Oliver—hey! What in the name of wonder—here are dutiful nephews—assault their uncle at a first visit!

LADY TEAZLE. Indeed, Sir Oliver, 'twas well we came in to rescue you.

ROWLEY. Truly it was; for I perceive, Sir Oliver, the character of old Stanley was no protection to you.

SIR OLIVER. Nor of Premium either: the necessities of the former could not extort a shilling from that benevolent gentleman; and with the other I stood a chance of faring worse than my ancestors, and being knocked down without being bid for.

JOSEPH SURFACE. Charles!

CHARLES SURFACE. Joseph!

JOSEPH SURFACE. 'Tis now complete!

CHARLES SURFACE. Very.

SIR OLIVER. Sir Peter, my friend, and Rowley too—look on that elder nephew of mine. You know what he has already received from my bounty; and you also know how gladly I would have regarded half my fortune as held in trust for him: judge then my disappointment in discovering him to be destitute of truth, charity, and gratitude!

SIR PETER. Sir Oliver, I should be more surprised at this declaration, if I had not myself found him to be mean, treacherous, and hypocritical.

LADY TEAZLE. And if the gentleman pleads not guilty to these, pray let him call me to his character.

SIR PETER. Then, I believe, we need add no more: if he knows himself, he will consider it as the most perfect punishment, that he is known to the world.

CHARLES SURFACE [aside]. If they talk this way to Honesty, what will they say to me, by and by?

[SIR PETER, LADY TEAZLE, and MARIA retire.]

SIR OLIVER. As for that prodigal, his brother, there—

CHARLES SURFACE [aside]. Ay, now comes my turn: the family pictures will ruin me!

JOSEPH SURFACE. Sir Oliver—uncle, will you honour me with a hearing?

CHARLES SURFACE [aside]. Now, if Joseph would make one of his long speeches, I might recollect myself a little.

SIR OLIVER [to JOSEPH SURFACE]. I suppose you would undertake to justify yourself?

JOSEPH SURFACE. I trust I could.

SIR OLIVER [to CHARLES SURFACE]. Well, sir!—and you could justify yourself too, I suppose?

CHARLES SURFACE. Not that I know of, Sir Oliver.

SIR OLIVER. What!—Little Premium has been let too much into the secret, I suppose?

CHARLES SURFACE. True, sir; but they were family secrets, and should not be mentioned again, you know.

ROWLEY. Come, Sir Oliver, I know you cannot speak of Charles's follies with anger.

SIR OLIVER. Odds heart, no more I can; nor with gravity either. Sir Peter, do you know the rogue bargained with me for all his ancestors; sold me judges and generals by the foot, and maiden aunts as cheap as broken china.

CHARLES SURFACE. To be sure, Sir Oliver, I did make a little free with the family canvas, that's the truth on't. My ancestors may rise in judgment against me, there's no denying it; but believe me sincere when I tell you—and upon my soul I would not say so if I was not—that if I do not appear mortified at the exposure of my follies, it is because I feel at this moment the warmest satisfaction in seeing you, my liberal benefactor.

SIR OLIVER. Charles, I believe you. Give me your hand again: the ill-looking little fellow over the settee has made your peace.

CHARLES SURFACE. Then, sir, my gratitude to the original is still increased.

LADY TEAZLE [advancing]. Yet, I believe, Sir Oliver, here is one whom Charles is still more anxious to be reconciled to. [Pointing to MARIA.]

SIR OLIVER. Oh, I have heard of his attachment there; and, with the young lady's pardon, if I construe right—that blush—

SIR PETER. Well, child, speak your sentiments!

MARIA. Sir, I have little to say, but that I shall rejoice to hear that he is happy; for me, whatever claim I had to his attention, I willingly resign to one who has a better title.

CHARLES SURFACE. How, Maria!

SIR PETER. Heyday! what's the mystery now? While he appeared an incorrigible rake, you would give your hand to no one else; and now that he is likely to reform I'll warrant you won't have him!

MARIA. His own heart and Lady Sneerwell know the cause.

CHARLES SURFACE. Lady Sneerwell!

JOSEPH SURFACE. Brother, it is with great concern I am obliged to speak on this point, but my regard to justice compels me, and Lady Sneerwell's injuries can no longer be concealed. [Opens the door.]

[Enter LADY SNEERWELL.]

SIR PETER. So! another French milliner! Egad, he has one in every room in the house, I suppose!

LADY SNEERWELL. Ungrateful Charles! Well may you be surprised, and feel for the indelicate situation your perfidy has forced me into.

CHARLES SURFACE. Pray, uncle, is this another plot of yours? For, as I have life, I don't understand it.

JOSEPH SURFACE. I believe, sir, there is but the evidence of one person more necessary to make it extremely clear.

SIR PETER. And that person, I imagine, is Mr. Snake.—Rowley, you were perfectly right to bring him with us, and pray let him appear.

ROWLEY. Walk in, Mr. Snake.

[Enter SNAKE.]

I thought his testimony might be wanted: however, it happens unluckily, that he comes to confront Lady Sneerwell, not to support her.

LADY SNEERWELL. A villain! Treacherous to me at last! Speak, fellow, have you too conspired against me!

SNAKE. I beg your ladyship ten thousand pardons: you paid me extremely liberally for the lie in question; but I unfortunately have been offered double to speak the truth.

SIR PETER. Plot and counter-plot, egad!

LADY SNEERWELL. The torments of shame and disappointment on you all! [Going.]

LADY TEAZLE. Hold, Lady Sneerwell—before you go, let me thank you for the trouble you and that gentleman have taken, in writing letters from me to Charles, and answering them yourself; and let me also request you to make my respects to the scandalous college, of which you are president, and inform them, that Lady Teazle, licentiate, begs leave to return the diploma they granted her, as she leaves off practice, and kills characters no longer.

LADY SNEERWELL. You too, madam!—provoking—insolent! May your husband live these fifty years! [Exit.]

SIR PETER. Oons! what a fury!

LADY TEAZLE. A malicious creature, indeed!

SIR PETER. What! not for her last wish?

LADY TEAZLE. Oh, no!

SIR OLIVER. Well, sir, and what have you to say now?

JOSEPH SURFACE. Sir, I am so confounded, to find that Lady Sneerwell could be guilty of suborning Mr. Snake in this manner, to impose on us all, that I know not what to say: however, lest her revengeful spirit should prompt her to injure my brother, I had certainly better follow her directly. For the man who attempts to— [Exit.]

SIR PETER. Moral to the last!

SIR OLIVER. Ay, and marry her, Joseph, if you can. Oil and vinegar!—egad you'll do very well together.

ROWLEY. I believe we have no more occasion for Mr. Snake at present!

SNAKE. Before I go, I beg pardon once for all, for whatever uneasiness I have been the humble instrument of causing to the parties present.

SIR PETER. Well, well, you have made atonement by a good deed at last.

SNAKE. But I must request of the company, that it shall never be known.

SIR PETER. Hey! what the plague! are you ashamed of having done a right thing once in your life?

SNAKE. Ah, sir, consider—I live by the badness of my character; and, if it were once known that I had been betrayed into an honest action, I should lose every friend I have in the world.

SIR OLIVER. Well, well—we'll not traduce you by saying any thing in your praise, never fear. [Exit SNAKE.]

SIR PETER. There's a precious rogue!

LADY TEAZLE. See, Sir Oliver, there needs no persuasion now to reconcile your nephew and Maria.

SIR OLIVER. Ay, ay, that's as it should be, and, egad, we'll have the wedding to-morrow morning.

CHARLES SURFACE. Thank you, dear uncle.

SIR PETER. What, you rogue! don't you ask the girl's consent first?

CHARLES SURFACE. Oh, I have done that a long time—a minute ago—and she has looked yes.

MARIA. For shame, Charles!—I protest, Sir Peter, there has not been a word—

SIR OLIVER. Well, then, the fewer the better; may your love for each other never know abatement.

SIR PETER. And may you live as happily together as Lady Teazle and I intend to do!

CHARLES SURFACE. Rowley, my old friend, I am sure you congratulate me; and I suspect that I owe you much.

SIR OLIVER. You do, indeed, Charles.

SIR PETER. Ay, honest Rowley always said you would reform.

CHARLES SURFACE. Why, as to reforming, Sir Peter, I'll make no promises, and that I take to be a proof that I intend to set about it. But here shall be my monitor—my gentle guide.—Ah! can I leave the virtuous path those eyes illumine?

Though thou, dear maid, shouldst waive thy beauty's sway,

Thou still must rule, because I will obey: A humble fugitive from Folly view,

No sanctuary near but Love and you: [To the audience.]

You can, indeed, each anxious fear remove,

For even Scandal dies, if you approve.

[Exeunt omnes.]

READING LIST

GENERAL

There is nothing in English on the whole subject of drama as full and authentic as the monumental works of Klein, Proelss, and Creizenach. However, the latest edition of the Encyclopædia Britannica is useful and dependable, so far as it goes. See the article on Drama.

Readable outlines are:

- Sheldon Cheney, The Theater (New York, 1929)
- Ashley Dukes, Drama (New York, 1926)
